SCHOOL NOTES

High School

"Bigger and Better Than Ever" is the slogan adopted for the annual School Carnival to be held at the high school building Friday evening, March 21. The committee in charge is working hard and is doing everything in its power to make this carnival a success.

Included in the list of attractions for this event are: Parcel Post Sale, Dancing, park style, Fortune Telling, Play, Fish Pond, Beauty Parlor, Mystery Room, Picture Gallery, Guessing Contest, Lunch, Keeno Game, Side Shows, Stunts, and the World's Greatest Curiosity. Tickets for the carnival are on sale now. Admission 10c.

The Senior class has secured Dr. George E. Carrothers, director of high school inspection for the University of Michigan, for the commencement address Thursday evening, June 12.

A set of Webster-Hazen-Knowlton World History Series of maps has recently been secured for the work in world history. This set contains thirty-two maps, and fills a long-felt need for work in this subject.

The Bi-County Athletic Association will not schedule baseball games this spring, and so it is necessary for each high school to make up its own schedule. We trust that we are able to secure a good line-up of games.

School was closed Thursday of this week to permit the teachers to attend the County Institute at East Tawas.

A spelling test was given to all of the students of the high school one day this week. The result was that the ninth grade obtained an average per cent of 72; tenth grade, 83; eleventh grade, 87; twelfth grade, 90. This data again tends to show that students learn to spell even when spelling is not pursued as a formal subject.

Seventh and Eighth Grades

The eighth grade history class has begun the study of the events leading to the World War.

The seventh grade history class is studying the development of the Constitution.

Fifth and Sixth Grades

Willard Wright, who has been absent since February 10, has returned to school.

The sixth grade won by 5% over the fifth grade in spelling last week.

Primary

The first grade has been perfect in attendance for two weeks.

June Hill and Harlan Fowler have been neither absent nor tardy all year.

LEOPOLD MARKS

Leopold Marks, age 69 years, died Saturday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. William Kobs, at Carrollton.

He was born September 20, 1860 in Germany and was married there in 1880 to Miss Marie Pick. Shortly after marriage they came to America, coming to Tawas City. Mrs. Marks died there in 1924.

Since 1925 he has made his home with his daughter.

Surviving are six children: Mrs. William Trommer, Mrs. Herbert Catterfeld of Saginaw, Mrs. William Kobs of Carrollton, Ewald Marks of Flint, Albert Marks of Milwaukee, Wis., and Fred Marks of Detroit; also one half-brother, Otto Peck of Detroit, and nine grandchildren.

The funeral took place Tuesday afternoon at the home of his daughter, Mrs. William Kobs, in Carrollton. Rev. Otto Eckert of Saginaw officiated, with burial in the Forest Lawn cemetery at Carrollton.

Edward Krumm, Mrs. William Ulman, Mr. and Mrs. John Kobs of this city, and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Krueger of Wilber attended the funeral.

The conviction of William G. Andrews, Detroit real estate operator, was affirmed by the supreme court. The case came before the court on January 23. Prosecuting Attorney John A. Stewart in behalf of the people of the state and attorneys for Andrews appeared and briefs were filed. Word that the conviction was sustained was received here last week.

GRIPPING ACTION, ENORMOUS SPECTACLE IN ZIEGFELD FILM

How do girls make good under the blazing banner of the great glorifier of American womanhood, Florenz Ziegfeld?

That question will be answered to the complete satisfaction of all patrons at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, when "Glorifying the American Girl" is shown Sunday and Monday, March 16 and 17.

Produced under the personal supervision of none other than the great Ziegfeld himself, this spectacular extravaganza of girls, music, dancing, comedy and drama fulfills every promise made for it.

Based on a story that might have been, and probably has been an actuality in real life, this gorgeous production moves rapidly and furnishes ample occupation for the eyes and the heart.

Mary Eaton, herself a glorified Ziegfeld show girl who rose to the position of premier dancer for Flo Ziegfeld, plays the leading role, that of a tank-town girl who makes good in the big Ziegfeld spectacles. Her ascendance of the ladder of success is attended by numerous sacrifices and heart-breaks. Excellent support is rendered by Edward Crandall, Olive Shea, Dan Healy and Kaye Renard.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH (Whittemore Circuit)

We had fine congregations all day last Sunday who manifested great interest in the second of the series of sermons the pastor is preaching during the Lenten season. The subject for the coming Sunday is "Our Father," the first that will be given on the Lord's Prayer—or the Lord taught His disciples when He said—"When ye pray, say, 'Our Father, etc.'" You are especially invited to come yourself and bring your friends to listen to the truth as it is found in the Bible.

1650 ATTEND BASKETBALL TOURNAMENT

Over 1650 people, including players and officials, attended the Class B District Basketball Tournament for class D and C schools held at East Tawas last Thursday, Friday and Saturday, stated H. T. Swanson of East Tawas, manager of the tournament.

Mr. Swanson also stated that receipts of the tournament totaled $488.20. After deducting $121.69 for trophies, basketballs and officials, the remaining $366.51 was divided according to the following plan: 20% to the entertaining school, East Tawas; 70% to competing schools; 10% to the State Association, 100% on meals and lodging and 76% of transportation for visiting teams were also paid.

Besides being financially successful, the display of basketball exhibited at the tournament was excellent. Lovers of this popular sport in boosting their favorite teams made the Community Building literally shake with cheers. Much credit is due the referees, Harlan Maaske and George Weingarten, for the splendid manner in which they officiated.

OSCODA WINS CLASS D CHAMPIONSHIP

Oscoda high school was an easy winner of the Class D championship. With its machine-like action, calm shooting and accurate pass-work, this group of boys found little trouble in defeating its opponents, by overwhelming scores.

With practically the same squad on the floor that went to the state semi-finals last year, Oscoda is considered to be one of the biggest contenders for the State Class D championship. With perhaps the strongest five in its history, Oscoda may well feel proud of its basketball team. No doubt, the activities of this quintet in the regional tournament will be watched the state over with much interest.

EAST TAWAS HIGH-FIVE CLASS C CHAMPS

After defeating Standish twice earlier in the season, East Tawas again demonstrated its supremacy over the Arenac county boys by handing them a 19 to 13 defeat. This game was the final contest of the tournament, with the Class C championship for this district at stake.

The East Tawas high school quintet has a wonderful record for the past season. Under Coach John Hogan, it has won ten games, lost five, and tied one. However, local fans are hoping that the winning of the Class C championship for this district will not be the climax of the team's basketball activities.

That the team will make a splendid showing in the regional tournament at Mt. Pleasant this week end is assured. East Tawas will see its first action in this tournament Friday night, when it meets the winner of the Ithaca-Clare game of Thursday night.

The complete line-ups for the elimination and championship contests follow:

EAST TAWAS SENIORS TO PRESENT ANNUAL PLAY ON APRIL 4th

The East Tawas high school seniors have selected "Captain Applejack" as the annual senior play which will be presented April 4th at the Community House.

Captain Applejack is an Arabian Night's adventure in three acts, written by Walter Hackett. A young man is so bored by his existence that he advertises his house for sale and determines to go off in search of adventure. He gets his wish—but without leaving the house. Among other things, he has his eye out for the "flash" of love at first sight, and he imagines he sees it in the gorgeous lady who rushes into his quiet life with the thrilling tale that she is a celebrated Russian dancer who has escaped from Moscow with the priceless jewels of an awfully grand duchess, and is being pursued by a terrible Bolshevik. Will not the brave gentleman save her and show her a hiding place for the jewels? Will he? In a minute! Thus she learns of a secret cabinet in which is a supposed hidden treasure, and this is what she is after. The parchment states that an ancestor of Ambrose Applejohn was a notorious pirate.

To guard against burglars who are prowling about, Ambrose sits up all night, only to fall asleep and dream he is a pirate. The pirate scene is then enacted, but after it comes a real scene quite as exciting.

Cast of Characters—Ambrose Applejohn, Forest Butler; Poppy Faire, his ward, Geraldine Nielsen; Mrs. Agatha Whatcombe, his aunt, Jennie Burgess; Lush, the butler, Frederick Lincoln; Anna Valeska, a Russian dancer, Lucille Klump; Ivan Bolorsky, a Bolshevik spy, Lloyd Bowman; Dennet, his accomplice, Myrton Curry; Horace Pengard, an Oriental seer, Deloise Durant; Mrs. Pengard, Grace Hill; Johnny Jason, a real estate agent, Gerald Mallon; Maid, Ruth Merschel; Crew: Howard Evans, Harold Timreck, Anne Piper, Ida Carter, Esther Osgerby, Inez Larson.

SUCH IS LIFE — Sure Enough!

By Charles Sughroe

SMART FOR STREET

MONARCH GETS SHOCK

Visitors Filch Relics of Crimes

New York.—Just across the way from police headquarters is the annex housing the police college, where detectives and patrolmen are trained. The college is for veterans, as well as novices. In small groups uniformed and plain clothes men are being taken off duty and put through a Hawkshaw course in the annex. They are taught, for instance, the importance of examining every detail of the scene of a crime. Relics of famous crimes are kept there, not as curios but as practical examples.

There is, for instance, a torn pullman ticket issued from New York to Syracuse. It was that ticket, more than any one thing, that convicted Judd Gray and Mrs. Snyder of the murder of Mrs. Snyder's husband. After the killing Gray was suspected, and traced to Syracuse. It was found that he had an iron-clad alibi. Evidence pointed strongly to his presence in that city at the time that the murder was committed on Long Island. A detective wasn't satisfied. He poked here and there through Gray's room, and found many scraps of paper in a waste basket. One of them was the pullman ticket. Confronted with this evidence, Gray admitted the falsity of his alibi. But visitors may no longer go to the police annex. Outsiders have been stealing the exhibits from the Hawkshaw school!

OLD THINGS

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

We called on Kate, Nancy and I, when we were in Pasadena. She had gone out there shortly after she had graduated from college, to live with an aunt of her mother's, and she was liv-

pletely and distressingly new. It was as if two people without a stick of anything to which they could claim ownership had suddenly fallen heir to a fortune, and had decided to build a house and set up housekeeping.

The house itself had just been built, and it simply shone and smelled inside and out of varnish and fresh paint. Now fresh paint has a very healthy smell, I am told. Everything inside the house was new—the china, the silver, the furniture, the pictures, the rugs, the linen. There wasn't even an old knife or a cracked or a broken dish in the kitchen. Nothing about the place had any pleasant memories. I felt lonesome all the time I was there.

As for me, I like old things. There is a softness of coloring in old mahogany, a certain romance about an old chair or an old piece of china. The little oak armchair in my bedroom father cut out with a saw and fashioned with a spoke shave more than eighty years ago. It was the first chair he and mother had after they came to America. It has stood the wear and tear of hard usage and of frequent moving, and is still as solid as when father put it together. The old mahogany clock which ticks away on our mantelpiece was waiting to welcome Nancy's mother, when as a bride of sixteen, she was taken to the log cabin which her husband had proudly prepared for her. It is still doing a good job of keeping time in spite of its eighty-five years of service. It seems so much more companionable than a shiny brand-new clock would seem.

The little mirror over my dresser mother brought from England, and the chest of drawers in Nancy's bedroom came across the mountains in a lumber wagon from New England, when Nancy's great grandmother started on a pioneering journey to the ill Illinois country. They traveled slowly in those days, and the old dresser is none the worse for its begonia of a thousand miles.

There is an oak chest standing in our hallway as a sort of catch-all for the things which have to be put away somewhere. Its rope handles and old

By GRANT DIXON

Be It Never So Humble

You know the old saying about what half of the world doesn't know about the other half. For better understanding, then, let's look into how a few millionaires live.

Mr. E. F. Hutton's little flat is a mere triplex. According to report, neither Mr. Hutton, the chief housekeeper nor the architect knows exactly how many rooms there are, but the estimate is 65. The rent is reported to be $75,000 a year.

Arthur Brisbane's triplex apartment was to have had 63 rooms, but Mr. Brisbane wanted larger chambers. So there are only 40. The living room is two stories high, 60 feet long, and has a log burning fireplace in either end.

One of the new buildings going up is a large affair of fourteen stories—yet it will contain only seven apartments. But what apartments! Many of the new developments along the East river feature private yacht landings, gymnasiums and swimming pools. J. H. Carpenter has one with gold doorknobs.

Sky Dwellers

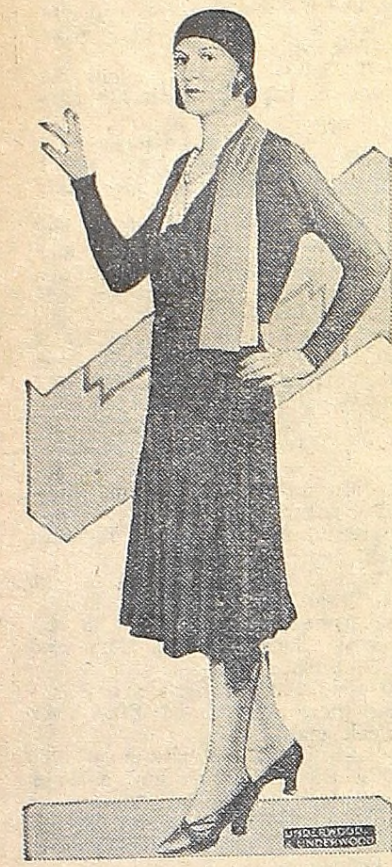

And, speaking of buildings, it might be interesting to inquire into what persons or establishments occupy the top floors of some of the skyscrapers. In the early days of the skyscrapers, when thirteen stories was a dizzying

Warships No Good as Power Plants

Washington.—A new peace-time use for warships and other fighting navy craft, their utilization as power plants for seaboard cities in emergencies, has been tested by the navy and found impracticable.

When the airplane carrier Lexington, largest ship in the navy, was lent to Tacoma, Wash., as a power plant, because of a breakdown of the municipal unit, some far-sighted persons had visions of warships steaming up to city piers and furnishing cheap electricity.

"Nothing doing," is the unanimous opinion of naval experts. Navy ships are primarily for national defense and not public utilities, it was pointed out.

The generation of electric power for municipalities by navy ships is both impracticable and uneconomical. The Lexington had more than 2,000 officers and men aboard while she was docked at Tacoma, to whom the government pays a salary and furnishes subsistence costing more than $1,000,000 a year. Navy officials estimated that a steam power plant for the city could be operated by fewer than 100 employees.

In return for the power Tacoma is to pay the navy about $5,000 a day, or 2.5 cents per kilowatt hour.

Officers pointed out that, except for great emergencies, the navy has no authority to lend vessels to municipalities, but that the department has authority to lend ships to states for sea scout work and naval militia operations.

"We considered every phase of the situation before the Lexington was lent to Tacoma," one high official said. "It was even pointed out that if the power break had been in the Mississippi valley, where a ship was unable to operate, the people would have used candles and lamps."

"Finally the ship was lent, and now we are waiting for howls from congress against use of a great ship like the Lexington for a power plant, because of the expense."

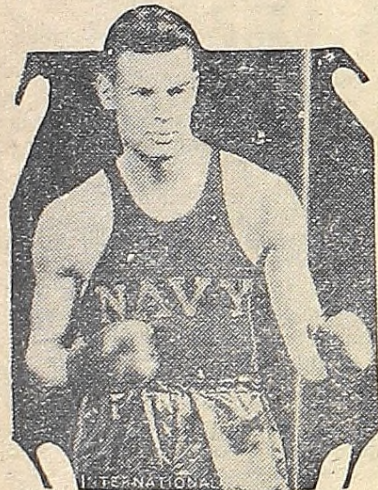

The Lexington did not furnish its full power possibilities to Tacoma, for the vessel's great turbine engines generate more than 192,000 horse power, or enough electricity to supply a city as large as Philadelphia.

Another drawback to using war craft for power plants is that the Lexington is 888 feet long, 106 feet wide, and draws 29 feet of water. Few ports have dockage facilities for this ship or even a warship like the West Virginia, which is 624 feet long, 97 feet wide, and draws 31 feet of water.

The Lexington left Tacoma on January 16, after furnishing power to the city for ten days because there was insufficient water available there to operate the city plant and the available steam plant facilities were inadequate.

Little Hand Work in

Nail-Making Industry

The manufacture of nails dates back three centuries to Birmingham, England, where the work was carried on by hand for many years. At one time as many as 60,000 men, women and children were engaged in the manufacture of hand-made nails. Gradually, with the perfecting of machinery, the hand-made nail was eliminated, and with the invention of the wire-nail machinery, passed out completely, except for the horseshoe nail, which is a cut nail.

Hundreds of thousands of tons of wire are now used annually in the United States in the manufacture of nails. The wire is fed into the machine from a reel, after which it is cut, headed and pointed and finally rolled out straight. The nail-making machines can turn out as many as 500 nails a minute, depending upon their size.—Washington Star.

WORMY CHERRIES BANE OF CANNERS

Burden of Trouble Finally Comes Home to Grower.

"Wormy cherries are the bane of the cherry canner and a most serious plague of the cherry grower," said Prof. G. W. Herrick, in an address before fruit growers at Cornell university.

"If a housewife should open a can of cherries and find in it a white maggot she demands from her grocer the credit due on the worthless fruit. The grocer, in turn, complains to the wholesaler and the wholesaler to the canner, and the canner makes good, but refuses to take cherries of the grower the following year for fear of maggots. Thus it is that the burden of the whole trouble finally comes home to the grower.

"The cherry maggot comes from an egg laid by the cherry fruit fly. Each spring the fly usually appears during the first part of June and feeds by sucking up minute particles from the surfaces of the cherry leaves. This habit of the flies gives opportunity for poisoning them before they lay their eggs in the fruit.

"After the flies have fed on the fruit for a week or so, they begin to thrust their tiny white eggs just under the skin of the cherry. Here the eggs hatch and the white maggots burrow through the fruit causing it eventually to decay.

"Treatment to control the maggot," said Professor Herrick, "consists in spraying the fruit during the first days of June as the Early Richmond variety begins to redden and again ten to fourteen days later, with the following mixture: lime sulphur two and one-half gallons, arsenate of lead two and one-half pounds, and enough water to make one hundred gallons.

"Where dust is used, ninety pounds dust sulphur and ten pounds arsenate of lead should be employed and about ten days should be allowed between the two applications."

Honest Fruit Marketing Always Most Profitable

Not all the dishonesty in the fruit business is confined to the dealer and commission merchant. Some few growers are so crooked that they have to change marketing agencies every year because they can't find one that will deal with them two years in succession.

Some growers will agree to let one dealer handle their fruit. If another buyer comes along and the offer he makes seems attractive they never think of the agreement they have made for the marketing of their crop. Some growers will resort to dishonest practices for five cents a bushel.

There are some growers who simply cannot resist the temptation to put a few poor apples in the middle of the bushel.

The elimination of these growers will aid in profitable fruit growing.

Prune to Control Blotch

Without Doing an Injury

Since the blotch fungus is carried over the winter on the twigs, spurs, and branches, all parts showing infection should be removed, where possible, without doing injury, during the regular pruning work. Where cankers are found on branches which it is not desirable to remove, the affected bark should be shaved off with a sharp knife. The cuts may be made deep enough to remove all the affected area or discolored bark tissue without doing injury to the cambium, or growing layer beneath. Disinfectants or wound dressings are not generally needed. The work of pruning and shaving of cankers should be done every year, because some may be overlooked and new ones may develop each year.

Spraying for San Jose Scale in Winter Season

Fruit trees having San Jose scale should be sprayed as soon as possible for the buds will soon begin to open. There are many shade trees infested with the European scale. These trees should be sprayed before the warm weather begins. The fruit trees may be sprayed with the dormant strength lime-sulphur solution, but the shade trees situated near a house should be sprayed with one of the oil emulsions at dormant strength. Apply the spray during the warm days when there is not much danger of freezing at night. It is best to be very careful that the oil emulsion is newly made and that it mixes well with the water. Avoid the so-called hard waters.

To Prune Grapes

The method of pruning grapes depends upon the purpose of the planting. If shade is desired as in the case of arbors and pergolas, fruit must, to some extent, be sacrificed. Canes are selected, long enough to reach and fill open spaces, and tied in place. All other parts of the vine are removed. This must be done every year to prevent an accumulation of old wood and to insure a sufficient amount of new wood to produce foliage.

CAPED FROCKS OF PRINTED CREPE; TAFFETA OR SATIN FOR EARLY WEAR

YOU can tell the moment you glimpse a frock of gay printed crepe made with a cape, that it is distinctly advance. There's nothing smarter on the boards than these caped prints.

The spring costume in the picture flaunts a cape of circular cut, the neckline finished with a soft tie of self-print. The quest for these new printed costumes will reveal many plaited cape versions as well, the plaits falling from a fitted round model pictured first in this group, made either of black satin or taffeta, color-matched to the costume, makes an admirable "first hat."

In its back-bow treatment this model conveys a very important style message. Even the hats with brims display their bow trimmings across the back. The bow may be very tiny or it may be a huge arrangement of loops and ends extended so as to show from the front.

Speaking of bows, surely this may yoke. Frequently the skirt is plaited to match the cape.

To emphasize its modishness, the really and truly up-to-the-moment gown of piquant print worn with a matching cape, instead of going utterly sleeveless as one might suppose, takes upon itself quaint little puffs or cap sleeves. Thus with the cape removed, the gown gives further evidence of its smart styling, for tiny novelty sleeves are the latest whim of fashion.

It is interesting to note how most every gown has its matching wrap, or should have. If not a cape then a bolero jacket is made of the same materials as the dress or skirt and if neither of these then a hip-length or finger-tip coat.

The leaf design of the print pictured bespeaks that which is among the newest in patterned silks. Fruit motifs are also very new.

One would be inclined to think that polka dots had outlived their popularity. On the contrary there is a veritable stampede of dots in the fabric realm. Not only are large bold be aptly called a "bow season." The new frocks and blouses are animated with white flocks of bows and milady's hat follows suit in this matter of bow trimmings.

The motif on the shapely hat to the right at the top is in line with the season's trend which combines felt with both straw and fabric in the fashioning of the new chapeaux. The mode decrees that hats must frame the face to a flattering degree, and the long, side drape given to this hat carries out these instructions.

In fashion circles we are hearing much in regard to transparent effects. Dresses are of the filmiest sort, fashioned as they are of thin laces, nets, chiffon and sheerest of woolsens. Even things knitted are running to lacy openwork patternings. What is true in regard to frocks and blouses concerning transparency, pertains also to hats for spring and the ensuing summer. Wherefore the revival of old-time horsehair braid as a medium for chic millinery is to be expected.

Two fetching models of horsehair are herewith illustrated. In the indotted effects good, but the very latest silks are pin-dotted. The latter in black or navy with white dots so tiny they look like pin pricks, are conspicuously featured for immediate wear. Frocks made of these neat silks are cuffed and collared very effectively with rows of white organdie petals.

Even newer than dots are the attractive star-patterned silks which are included in every display of spring prints.

Early Spring Hats.

Providing it is a soft unlined affair, that is to say, without stiffness, a hat of taffeta or satin is very smart for spring. A little cap like the

"First Aid—Home

Remedy Week" Coming

The Good Samaritan is pictured as "The First First Aid" in the national reminder which has been sent to druggists all over America, announcing the 9th anniversary of "First Aid—Home Remedy Week," fixed for March 16-23.

The idea of an advertising-merchandising one-year drive timed with spring house cleaning was given to the drug world by Sterling Products, Incorporated, in 1922. Preparedness for meeting accident or sudden illness is emphasized as a sensible and seasonable sales plan which serves to alleviate needless suffering and undoubtedly save life.

The National Association of Retail Druggists sponsored this ad-sales plan and later added Pharmacy Week as an autumn festival for intensive advertising and salesmanship in the drug world.

The National Wholesale Druggists Association and the National Association of Drug Clerks have joined the N. A. R. D. in establishing these festivals of selling as Spring and Autumn fixtures for the welfare of humanity. "Fill That Medicine Chest Now" is the slogan of "First Aid—Home Remedy Week," and has been from the beginning. It was Dr. William E. Weiss, himself a graduate from the ranks of retail druggists, who first saw the value of "First Aid—Home Remedy Week," and wherever live-wire druggists have co-operated by showing a window filled with suggestive first aids for both accident or illness, and using their home newspaper advertising space, they have added cheerfully to their March business.

To Link Europe and Asia

Spain wishes to be permanently joined with the land of her traditional enemies, the Moors, by the longest tunnel in the world—20 miles from end to end and 1,500 feet below water surface at the midpoint. Spanish engineers have discussed in their societies this proposed bond between Europe and Africa, and a preliminary shaft has already been sunk. Although the straits are only eight miles wide at their narrowest point, it is impossible to build a tunnel there because of the great depth of the channel and the presence of rock too hard to bore. Further explorations of the consistency of the rock are to be made from the shaft by means of sound waves.

Lone Wolf Is a Genuine American Artist

Here is a native American artist, Lone Wolf, with one of his paintings of a scene on the plains, and a piece of sculpture he is working on. Lone Wolf is from Montana, the grandson of Chief Yellow Wolf, a Blackfeet leader. He has forsaken his beloved plains to work in his studio in New York. As a boy Lone Wolf mixed his own colors from bark, berries and other natural sources. He has never taken a drawing or painting lesson in his life.

WORLD'S CHAMPION

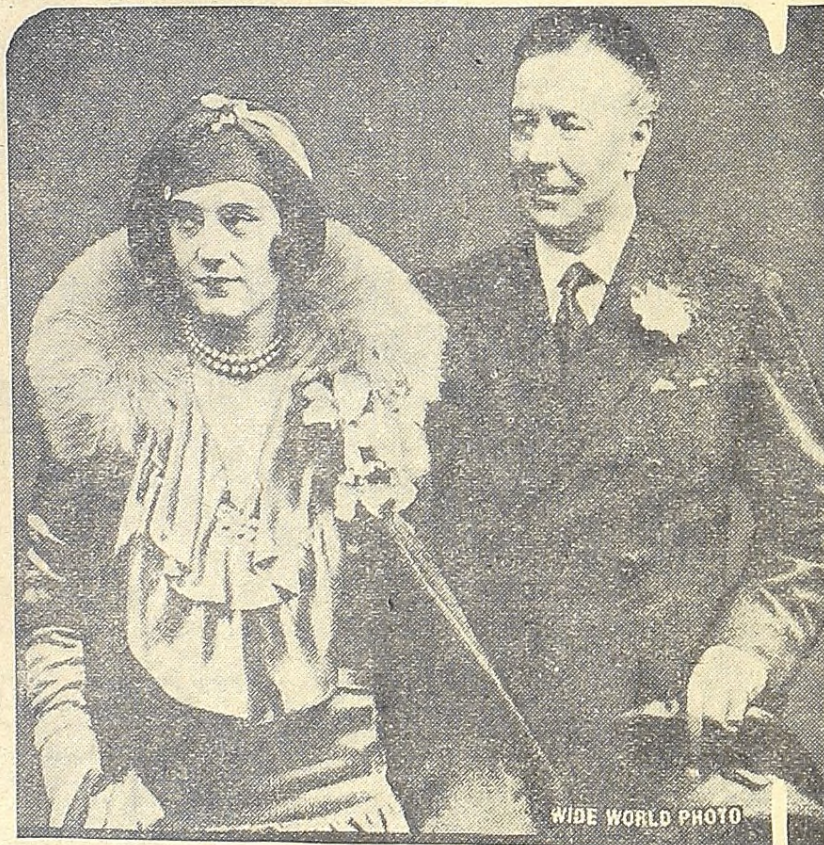

Little three-year-old Marjorie Best smiles demurely as she drags her precious championship cup out upon the diving board at Belleair, Fla. Marjorie has just been acclaimed world's champion swimmer for her age. When but twenty-three months old, she won this Barnes Newbery cup by swimming 25 feet. The cup is competed for annually. The little daughter of Neptune evidently believes in signs, for she has decorated her swimming suit with both a swan and a fish. And she doesn't believe in bobbed hair.

MAPS STRICT CODE FOR CIVIL AVIATION

Major Young Formulating New Requirements.

Washington.—To meet the increasing activity in the air and to maintain the highest standard of safety possible with the expansion of aviation transportation on scheduled operation, the bureau of aeronautics of the Department of Commerce is preparing a new standard of minimum requirements for civil aviation.

The project has been undertaken by Maj. Clarence M. Young, assistant secretary of commerce for aeronautics, as one of the most important works of federal control of civil aviation at the present time.

"This contemplated action by the department," says Major Young, "is another step in the orderly progress and development of air transportation and air commerce."

Two-Way Radio Required.

The code, it is understood, will seek for the first time to achieve the full co-operation of the two new sciences of radio and aviation, and will insist on passenger carrying planes being equipped with two-way radio.

The new requirements are being prepared with the co-operation of air transport organizations. They include rules based on the use of complete radio equipment to insure two-way radio communication between aircraft in flight and stations on the ground and adequate facilities for the proper handling, maintenance and operation of aircraft.

In explanation of the assumption of authority for the promulgation of this new code, it is pointed out by Major Young that under the provisions of the Air Commerce Act of 1926 the aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce has established two fundamental requirements to insure the maximum degree of safety and reliability in air transportation.

Three Requirements Listed.

These are:

First, airworthy craft operated and maintained by competent airman.

Second, development of airways equipped with aids to air navigation for both day and night operations, including boundary-lighted intermediate fields, beacon lights, weather service, frequent radio broadcasts of complete weather information; two-way radio communication with planes in flight and radio range beacons for guiding aircraft through fog, storm or other conditions of poor visibility.

The third requirement, as defined by Major Young, is "the specification that all aircraft engaged in the transportation of passengers for hire on schedule interstate service shall be operated over fixed routes provided with these aids to air navigation and that the aircraft engaged in such operations shall be equipped to take full advantage of these aids."

In insisting on the two-way radio equipment, it is the intention of the bureau that planes shall be in a position to receive frequent broadcasts of weather information, emergency messages and for the reception of signals from radio range beacons, which are designed to keep a plane on its course at all times.

In explaining the purpose of the third phase of government control, Major Young says:

"Experience has shown us that our objectives can best be accomplished through the promulgation of suitable regulations, which, through their flexibility, may be readily kept abreast with the rapid progress of aeronautics, rather than by legislation which requires action by congress to meet conditions as they arise."

"Acoustic Altimeter" for Airplanes Sought

Los Angeles.—Search for the source of a sound which will filter through noises aboard an airplane is being conducted by Leo P. Delsasso, of the physics department of the University of California, in an effort to perfect a precision altimeter.

Delsasso, working with funds made available by the Guggenheim Fund for the Promotion of Aeronautics, hopes to develop an "acoustic altimeter" which will measure height by the time it takes a sound to travel to the ground and echo back to the airplane.

One of the chief difficulties, Delsasso found, was the multiplicity of sounds aboard aircraft. He was faced with the necessity of finding a tone entirely different than any of those of aircraft.

This has been accomplished, and now the task is to find the source of such a sound which will be of sufficient pitch and intensity to actuate the recording device.

An "acoustic altimeter" would be of inestimable value to aircraft because it would permit pilots caught in fogs over unfamiliar territory to know exactly how high they were.

Rainbow Round in Air

Los Angeles.—There seems always to be a catch to that proverb about the rainbow's end. Pilots are discouraged because in the air a rainbow is entirely round! Air pilots who occasionally pass through a squall in New Mexico or Arizona on the East-West flight to Kansas City report that a rainbow makes a perfect circle in the air. They have to ascend when the sun is near the horizon if they wish to view the ends of the myriad-colored phenomenon of the skies, they say. And then it disappears before they can land and search for the gold.

Campaign to Curb the Careless Plane Smoker

The campaign to eliminate fire hazard incident to the throwing of lighted cigarette and cigar stubs from airplanes, initiated by the forest service of the Department of Agriculture, has been given the support of the air travel division of the American Automobile association.

The aid of the association was requested by Arthur M. Hyde, secretary of agriculture.

Thomas P. Henry, president of the A. A. A., promised that steps would be taken to educate the traveling public in the importance of protecting natural resources. "The tremendous increase in the number of planes," Mr. Henry said, "has made the fire hazard from lighted cigars and cigarettes a problem affecting not only the forests, but structures along the airways as well."

BAY STATE WOMEN FORM FLYING CLUB

"Wing and Prop" Members to Make Spring Flights.

Boston.—If a fleet of trim biplanes piloted by beautiful young girls drops in at your airport next spring they'll be the Women's Wing and Prop club, organized in December at East Boston airport with fourteen charter members and nine privately owned planes.

The organization, headed by President Lorraine Defren of Newton, Mass., the first woman to learn to fly at East Boston airport, now has more than a score of members, each of whom is required to spend at least three hours per week at the controls of an airplane. The nine privately owned planes in the club soon will be augmented.

The club is planning an extensive program of cross-country flying to start in the spring.

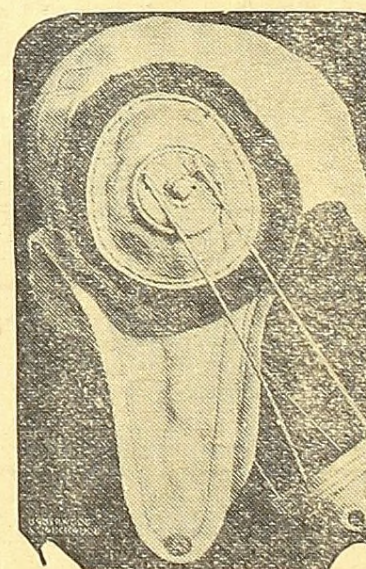

The vice president, Mrs. Bartlett Bacon of Brookline, Mass., is mother of three children, all of whom are taking flights with her. She intends that they shall learn to fly as soon as they reach the necessary ages.

Olivia Mattheus of Dedham, Mass., secretary-treasurer of the club, claims the distinction of being the first woman student to make her first solo flight in a plane equipped with skis.

The membership also includes Miss Eleanor Spear, daughter of the Maine senator, and Mrs. Joan Shankle of Wood Hole, Mass., who already has made a cross-continent flight.

Two students of Radcliffe school are members, Betsy Kelley of Fort Smith, Ark., who intends to enter commercial aviation as soon as possible and whose ambition is to pilot a plane across the Atlantic, and Agnes Wilcox of Colon, Panama, who aspires to be the first woman from Central America to obtain a pilot's license.

HELMET AND HEADSET

This combination receiving and sending headset and helmet used by air mail express and passenger pilots on a western route weighs one pound and enables pilots to talk to ground stations 200 miles away or to planes in flight. A tightly fitting piece of sponge rubber in the ear connects with two wires which are plugged in the cockpit. Each ten minutes the pilot receives a weather report of conditions just ahead.

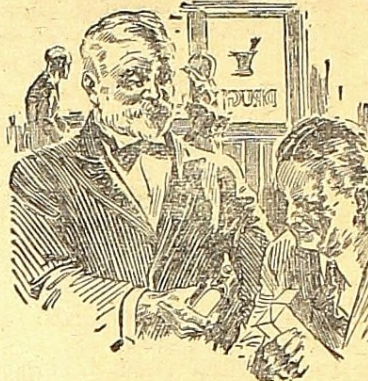

Air Race Over Ocean Probable This Year

Paris.—Another air race from Paris to New York this year appears probable. One contestant would be Capt. Dieudonne Coste, accepted as the holder of the world's records for straight line and measured course long distance flying. The other will be Capt. Carrelier, who was officially credited with bringing down 14 enemy planes during the World war.

Manufacturers began work in December on a new airplane in which Captain Coste about next June expects to link Le Bourget and the Roosevelt flying field without a stop.

Meanwhile the French airplane manufacturer, Cosinnet, has started to build a monoplane with thick wings in which fuel will be stored. With the 1,800 horse power to be developed from three Hispano-Suiza motors, Captain Carrelier expects this plane to have a lifting capacity of 13 tons and a cruising range of 7,000 miles. He said tonight that he would be ready to start ahead of Captain Coste.

YOU HAVE A DOCTOR'S WORD FOR THIS LAXATIVE

In 1875, an earnest young man began to practice medicine. As a family doctor, he saw the harm in harsh purgatives for constipation and began to search for something harmless to the sensitive bowels.

Out of his experience was born a famous prescription. He wrote it thousands of times. It proved an ideal laxative for old and young. As people saw how marvelously the most sluggish bowels are started and bad breath, headaches, feverishness, nausea, gas, poor appetite, and such disorders, are relieved by the prescription, it became necessary to put it up ready for use.

Today, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, as it is called, is the world's most popular laxative. It never varies from Dr. Caldwell's original effective and harmless formula. All druggists have it.

Acidity

The common cause of digestive difficulties is excess acid. Soda cannot alter this condition, and it burns the stomach. Something that will neutralize the acidity is the sensible thing to take. That is why physicians tell the public to use Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this delightful preparation can neutralize many times its volume in acid. It acts instantly; relief is quick, and very apparent. All gas is dispelled; all sourness is soon gone; the whole system is sweetened. Do try this perfect anti-acid, and remember it is just as good for children, too, and pleasant for them to take.

When the Census Taker Calls

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
Drawing by Ray Walters.

WITHIN the next few weeks an army of 100,000 men and women will be visiting every home in the United States and asking a series of questions which every one of us must answer, or have answered for us. Those questions are the following:

Name and address, sex, color or race, age, single, married, widowed or divorced; relationship to head of family; home owned or rented, free or mortgaged; literacy, place of birth and that of parents; citizenship, ability to speak English, whether employed and trade or profession, whether veteran of any American war.

But lest you should feel that the asking of these questions is a meddling interference in your private affairs, let it be stated at once that the man or woman who calls at your home and asks you these questions is a census enumerator, engaged in the huge task of taking the 15th decennial census of population in the United States, in accordance with Article 1 of the Constitution of the United States, that you are required by law to give true answers to the questions and that there is no real reason whatsoever why you should not answer them. For you have this assurance from Dr. William M. Stewart, chief of the bureau of the census, in regard to it:

"No citizen need hesitate to answer the questions asked by the enumerators. The facts, so far as the individual is concerned, will be safe in the hands of the government and will never be disclosed. No one need have the slightest fear that his personal or business secrets will ever be disclosed to friend or foe. The oath of the enumerator requires that he shall keep secret the answers to queries. If he does not, he is guilty of a crime, and if detected there is not the slightest doubt as to what will happen. The law will be invoked and enforced to the limit."

The 1930 census will be the greatest "counting of noses" in the history of the world. When it is completed Uncle Sam will know just how many more children he has than he had in 1920. As to what the population of the United States will be, Doctor Stewart says:

"It will be more than 121,000,000 and less than 125,000,000. We are certain as to this, because we know that the population of the continental United States is now increasing at the rate of about 1,400,000 persons each year, or, to put it another way, at the approximate rate of one person every twenty seconds. These totals are made up of the annual excess of births over deaths, which amounts to about 1,150,000, and the excess of immigration over emigration, which gives us an additional 240,000 each year. The 1930 census will show that our people are thirty times as many as were in the country in 1790 and nearly twice as many as in 1890, or only forty years ago.

"History records no instance in which population has so rapidly increased as has been the case in the United States. Neither is it of record that the increase in population has anywhere else been accomplished by so great an improvement in the comfort and well-being of the people generally.

"In 1790 there were 4.5 persons for each square mile of what was then the United States. The 1930 census, I believe, will show forty people to each square mile, or nearly ten times more than at the time of the first census. In 1790 there were six cities in the United States with more than 8,000 inhabitants. Then the cities were responsible for only 3 per cent of the population; America in those days was truly agricultural. In 1920 the cities with more than 8,000 inhabitants numbered 924 and their population was 44 per cent of the national total. Add to these the little towns and villages of less than 8,000 people and we find that in 1920 the urban population was a little more than half the total for the Union."

In accomplishing the huge task which faces Uncle Sam's army of census enumerators, they will visit not only 30,000,000 homes but also more than 2,000,000 stores, almost 200,000 manufacturing plants, and in addition they will compile data concerning 6,000,000 farms, 14,000 mines and quarries, 100,000 irrigation and drainage projects. The reason for this is that the 15th decennial census will be not only a count of population but also a comprehensive study of the commerce and industry of the nation, a census of distribution. In the last named it is hoped that there will be found at least some of the reasons for an estimated annual loss of $10,000,000,000 in the process of placing commodities in the hands of the ultimate consumer.

"The 1930 census," says Doctor Stewart, "is going to be, we hope and believe, the most nearly perfect tabulation of population, business and other basic facts ever taken in history. I say this with the fact in mind that nearly 3,000 years have passed since the first census was made—when King David set out to number the people of Israel and Judah. It took him nine months and twenty days to do the job, and among the things he found out was that there were in Israel and in Judah about 1,300,000 'valiant men that drew the sword.'

"The first census of the United States was taken 139 years ago. The United States was first among the countries to make a regular periodical enumeration of its inhabitants a part of the fundamental law.

"The first American census, taken in 1790, was very limited in scope and was directed by the United States marshals. They were allowed thirteen months on the job, and when the totals were added up our population was about 4,000,000. That census related solely to population. The name of the head of the family was taken, together with the number of persons in each family, classified as free or slave. The whites, who were free, were classified as 'free whites,' as male or female, and the free whites males as over or under sixteen years of age. That was about all there was to it. The marshals who supervised the 1790 count numbered only 17, the enumerators 650, and you will appreciate what the latter figure means when you are told that the enumerators who will take the 1930 census will be an army of more than 100,000.

"Since the 1790 census the nations of the world have been gradually developing methods and machinery that speed up the counting of heads and the accumulation of a vast amount of data regarding economic, social, educational and other conditions. Here in the United States the development has probably been more far reaching than in any other country. Consequently the director of the census is now by law required to enumerate in the space of one month more than 120,000,000 people and at the same time obtain very extensive information about 6,000,000 farms, 14,000 mines, 100,000 irrigation and drainage projects, the facts of employment and unemployment affecting millions of people, and also the trade, profession or particular kind of work done by every person of working age in the nation. Quite a job for four weeks, is it not? Yet it can and will be completed in the allotted thirty days."

With the exception of a comparatively few, when the vest total is considered, the original records of every family enumerated in the 1790 and subsequent census are on file in the census bureau, according to Mr. Stewart. The missing records have been lost or destroyed by accident. However, file on John Hancock has been preserved and his family was reported as being made up of "two white males over sixteen years of age, three white females and seven other free persons, not white." It is presumed the seven free persons listed as "not white" were negro servants.

In the taking of the 1860 census, each person was for the first time asked to give the value of his or her real and personal property. The records for Illinois show that Abraham Lincoln's family comprised Mr. Lincoln, his wife, his three sons and a boy, fourteen years old, named Philip Dinkell. Mr. Lincoln said he was worth $17,000, of which $5,000 was the value of his real estate, the remainder being personal property. In the same census James Buchanan listed his household as consisting of himself, his niece, Miss Harriet Lane, and eleven employees and servants, all of the latter being of foreign birth.

The system of individual enumeration, was adopted at the census of 1850, and at the same time a number of new classifications were added—illiteracy, school attendance, occupation, place of birth, age, etc.

THE STORY

On a pleasure trip in eastern waters, Philip Amory, English World War veteran, now a trader on the island of Papua, New Guinea, plunges overboard to save the life of a musical comedy actress, known as "Gin-Sling." Amory becomes interested in Pia Laurier, member of a wealthy New South Wales family.

CHAPTER II—Continued

What I wanted, what I was prepared to pull the ship in pieces to get, was another talk with Pia. I knew her mother would nose us out before long; still, the dining saloon, between meals, is a good place for quiet on almost any ship, and I hoped she would be there.

She was, lingering over the last of her breakfast, alone at her table. I ordered breakfast, and asked if I might join her. She bowed her head a little coolly, and I remembered that one could see passing figures on deck, from the open scuttles above us. You couldn't curse Gin-Sling—if you were a man like others, but if I had been extraordinary enough to dislike Jinny Treacher, I should certainly have cursed her then, in that she had shorn away a few of my inestimable moments; wasted them for me with the necessity of making explanations.

I don't know what we talked about at first. It was like orchard-robbing—when you run from one tree to another, plucking, eating, cramming, hurrying, intent on getting as much as you can in the few minutes before you are found and chased out by the farmer with the cart whip. You hardly know what you have had, in the end—only that it has been fun. . . .

By and by all the stewards had breakfast and were gone, and somebody was dusting at the far end of the saloon; and bells sounded, of which we took no note. We were too busy orchard-robbing. I remember about this time, that we began to tell each other the story of our lives. Pia had got to the diamond bracelet, and the day she rode for it and won it on Randwick race course; and an interesting incident that had the prince of Wales in it—when suddenly she checked herself, and said—

"It's all such tosh, isn't it? You live a real life. Tell me some secrets and adventures in New Guinea."

Now, I don't know—or perhaps I do—what had helped her to read me as she did; but it is a fact that while she was talking, something that was both a secret and an adventure—and a big one of both kinds—had been floating about in my consciousness. I had never spoken of it, never hinted it, to a soul. It was my chief and almost only reason for burying myself on the wild west coast as a trader, beyond call of civilization; and it might be in the end, the means of setting me free to choose between the wild life and the tame; to choose, indeed, between any and all of the goods of this purchasable world. I had been sitting on the secret with the persistency of a wild fowl on an egg—and now, in an instant, behold it discovered, given over to the girl whom I had not yet known forty-eight hours.

"There is an adventure," I said, glancing about the emptied, silent saloon. "I've never told anyone." Pia nodded, as if to say—"Of course; not till I came." It was amazing, how we talked without words, that morning on the sea.

"I've explored a bit," I went on. "Not much. It takes money. But I know something. There was an expedition starved out, years ago, between two unknown rivers, and just as it had to turn back they saw something wonderful. It was so wonderful that the leader of the expedition just looked at it, and came away, and never said a word to anyone—his mate died on the way back—but he always meant to go back, as soon as he could get the money to fit out again, because he knew there might be a fortune in it. Well, he never did; he died, too—"

"Does every one die in Papua?" cut in Pia.

"Well, it isn't exactly a sanatorium outbreak—but the towns—"

"Never mind about the towns. Tell me the secret. Did your friend who died give it to you?"

"No. He left it to the woman he had been engaged to, only she—"

"Died?"

"No. She was dead when he left it to her, and I couldn't find out anything about her people, and his diary was in my hands, so I simply kept it, partly because I didn't suppose anyone would believe it but myself, and partly because I wasn't going to have anyone else trying. No, he had no relations, either—"

"Does nobody?"

"If we have, we don't tell about 'em. They're either too bad, or too good, if you understand me. Well—"

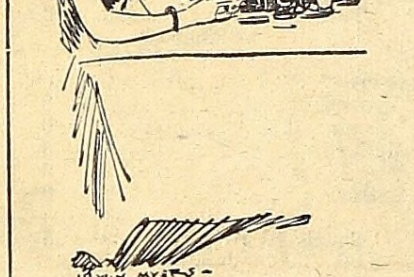

"But the secret—what was it?"

I looked round again before speaking; almost I thought I heard the tramp of feet. But that was not likely—no one came there at that hour of the day. I was going on, when Pia jumped out of her seat as if a bucket of water had been poured over her, and without a word bolted up the wide staircase. Her flying heels disappeared on deck, just at the moment when a stately procession through some unknown ship's alleyway, entered the saloon. The captain, the purser, the doctor, the chief steward, all in white, all sparkling in their several degrees with gold buttons, gold stripes, gold epaulettes, gold capbands. Eleven o'clock inspection, nothing less!

"Gosh!" I murmured, collecting myself, and standing up. The captain paused, gave me a kindly nod, and asked me if I was none the worse for yesterday's adventure; said one or two polite things, and passed on. They were all gone in a minute, and I had time to recollect myself, and bless the ready ears of Pia Laurier.

I did not go out on deck; I did not want to. What I wanted was to be alone, and remember every little thing she had said, done, and looked, in that amazing two hours. It was impossible that Pia should have fallen in love with me—impossible, I kept telling myself fiercely. A girl like that—a girl who had the world at her feet—a girl brought up—

"But the Secret—What Was It?"

Well, but if she were not in love—a girl brought up like that—what had she been doing? Flirting outrageously, reasonlessly, with a man she didn't know anything about; a man of whom her family certainly disapproved. If she were not in love with me, I was bound to suppose that this sort of thing was her usual habit; that she would dodge away from her people to "carry on" below decks, with anyone and every one. There was no getting away from it; if I were not especially favored, then lovely face, pure eyes, never on earth had lied as did the face, the eyes, of Pia Laurier.

After all—after all—that plunge yesterday—the sharks—I did not want to "shake hands with myself" over an exploit that was nothing at all, compared to the things one had had to do as a matter of routine, day by day, during the not-yet-forgotten great war; still, I could not deny that it might have looked well to a girl who didn't know anything about battlefields. Certainly Jinny Treacher—

Sky and sea pale blue with a laugh in the heart of it, and a hint of coming dark that shadowed the laugh, even as some subconscious thought of time that flies, beauty that passes, was wont to shadow the sun of Jinny's merriment. Gulls screaming about the mast-heads, as they scream at break of even—who knows why? In fine, my last day almost done. My voyage over, all but the night and a useless hour or two of early morning; for we were not, after all, to run in to Thursday Island; a tender was to meet the ship, and take the passengers off.

What had I done? Where was the link that I had sworn should bridge the space between Pia Laurier's life and mine, somehow, before I left the ship? The answer was—Nothing; nowhere.

Jinny and her crew had never left me alone, from morning until now. The two other girls had been pressed into service; they with Jinny's special posse of youthful admirers, and last, never least, Gin-Sling herself, had combined to keep every moment occupied. Things had eaten, minute by minute, hour by hour, into my precious afternoon, until now it was near sunset, and the west toward which we were running, gateway of the Old World's East, was red with the lifeblood of the last day Pia and I might ever know, together.

There wasn't a man on the ship who did not envy me, I think for Jinny made me her partner in every game, and if I did not kiss her a dozen times or more, behind funnels, deck-houses, inside alleyways and down companions, it was not because she did not give me fair chance of doing so. I suppose I was freely credited with what I did not take. At any rate I caught the stinging tail of a joke or two, while passing the smoke-room windows on one of Jinny's wild "ploys."

She may have been touched also. At all events she paused, and with a self-possession I had not thought to be in her, faced me, and asked straight out—

"Why don't you like me, Mr. Phil Amory?"

"But of course I do," I answered her.

"You don't," she stated, coolly. "Not after saving my life and all."

"Liking!" I said. "No, I don't like you. If I saw more of you, I should love—you. But liking, that's another thing."

Jinny puzzled this out. She was not used to subtleties. But she could jump to conclusions with fearsome swiftness, and she jumped now.

"I know what you mean by love," she said, and suddenly, coarsely, she turned and spat into the water.

"Do you know," she said—and she turned so that I could see her face; the bird-like eyes, gold eyes rimmed with dark; the desirous, beautiful mouth, the circling hair—"Do you know what the square emerald ring on Pia Laurier's hand is?"

"Ring?" I said stupidly. Most men notice rings scarce at all. I remembered seeing jewels on Pia's tanned brown-satin wrist—or was it on the fingers, with the dainty white V-marks between, where the sun had spared to strike?

"Do you know who set that fashion?"

"I didn't know it was a fashion," I answered, still hopelessly at sea.

"It was Princess Mary—when she got engaged. All the smart girls have wanted square emeralds ever since. Smoke that!"

She whirled, one of her cancer whirrs, and left me. "Come on, girls," I heard her crying, down the deck. "Get the gramophone going again. 'Nother dance—drink hearty, we'd soon be dead."

So little did I understand what she meant, that I was conscious, at first, only of relief. She had let me go; I could hunt up Pia Laurier, who had not been visible all afternoon. Part of my coinage of golden hours was still unspent; I must husband it, use it wisely. Pia—Jinny—

I was hurrying toward the music room, an excellent strategic point for viewing the main companion and the decks—when the full meaning of Jinny's remarks, and of her fierce "Smoke that!" broke on me.

Princess Mary had fancied a square emerald for an engagement ring. Princess Mary had made square emerald engagement rings popular with the set to which Pia Laurier belonged. Pia wore a square emerald ring—I remembered—fatally I remembered now—on her third left finger.

Explaining Bent Cross on Crown of Hungary

With reference to a question recently asked concerning the famous St. Stephen's crown of Hungary and the reason why the cross on top of it is bent, a Hungarian reader, B. S., writes as follows: "As a painter I painted signs which bear the Hungarian royal crown. My master told me they had a revolution in 1848 and some one buried the crown in the forest of Lakva, southeast of Zlatica. No body knew of it for years until Franz Josef was to be crowned. The government sent men to look for it and by the help of a Serbian shepherd they found it with its cross bent." This story is confirmed by Henri de Wenedel's book, "The Real Francis Joseph," which states: "Before Kossuth left he buried with his own hands the Hungarian crown, the old crown of St. Stephen. In the neighborhood of the frontier village of Orsova. When it was recovered later, the little cross on the top was bent on one side. From this time onward the arms of Hungary have borne a crown with a cross bent toward the left."—Detroit News.

The Bend In the Road

Up to a certain spot you move along, strong and self-reliant, with your little family about you. But even then, that little family needs protection against your untimely loss.

Later, there comes a bend in the road. You are no longer strong. The years of toil have begun to tell. YOU need protection, then, from humiliating dependence.

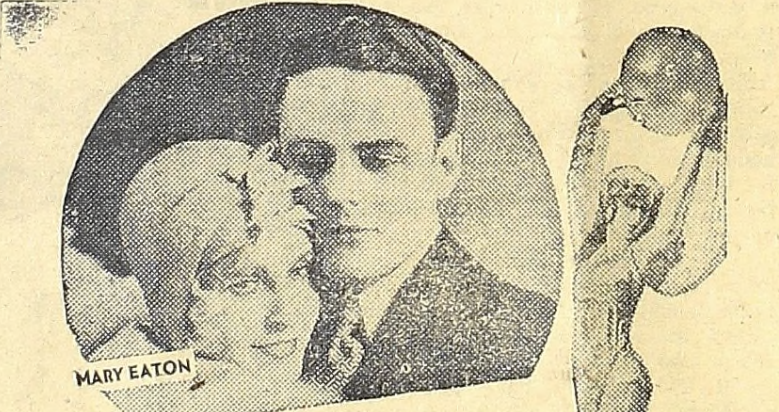

Let us take care of both emergencies.
