

TAWAS CITYNEW RESTAURANT OPENS NEXT WEDNESDAY

The place has been furnished with up-to-date equipment—a Pyrofax restaurant range was purchased from the Miller Tire & Electric Shop, general electric refrigerators, American radiators and boilers, electrical work and plumbing were installed by Fred T. Luedtke, beautiful floor coverings from W. A. Evans Furniture company. Hunt floor and wall cases and Arctic soda fountain and ice cream equipment. The building was remodeled by Dudley Nelem, with brick work by Alfred Boomer. Builders supplies were furnished by Barkman Lumber company. Clark McCormick decorated the interior.

Mr. Trudell has secured the services of Louis Callahan of Bay City as manager. Mr. Callahan has had a wide experience at Bay City and Detroit in the restaurant business. He said, "We invite the people of the Tawas to visit us. We are proud of the fine appearance of our place and hope you will like it."

"THE THIRTEENTH CHAIR" HAS BAFFLING PLOT

Another successful stage play has come to the talking screen. Just as "Madame X" set a new mark in screen technique, so does "The 13th Chair." Tod Browning's all-talking film production of the Veiller mystery drama, set a new mark for mystery stories on the screen.

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer thriller which plays at the State Theatre Sunday and Monday, is Browning's debut as a director of talking pictures, and serves to introduce Margaret Wycherley, New York stage star, to the screen in the role she created on the speaking stage.

Early BirdsROSE CITY BRANCH WILL BE DISCONTINUED

The Interstate Commerce Commission has allowed the petition in which the Detroit & Mackinac Railroad company asked to discontinue the Rose City branch. The petition has been under consideration for some time and the business received on the branch for the past 18 months was the basis on which the commission made its decision. It is said that operations will be continued for 30 days to allow the patrons to complete any shipments which they may have.

MRS. WILLIAM H. GORDON

Mrs. William H. Gordon, age 81 years, 11 months and 17 days, died Friday, March 14, at her home in Logan township, Oremaw county. Military clothes and equipment, mileage to and from camp, laundry service are provided free to all young men admitted. This is a pleasant and beneficial course. This year's camp dates are July 18 to August 16.

"BIG TIME" COMBINES ROMANCE AND COMEDY

"Big Time," a backstage romance made by Fox Movietone, which is the attraction at the State Theatre Friday and Saturday, features Lee Tracy, Mae Clarke and Josephine Dunn. The first two named came from the New York stage where they made individual successes in musical comedy and dramatic productions.

Daphne Pollard, celebrated comedienne of the screen, and Stepin Fetchit, inimitable negro comedian, provide the laughs and, there are many from this rollicking pair.

The story, directed by Kenneth Hawks, concerns a small time hooper who has an exaggerated idea of his ability and a talented chorus girl who is in love with him. They marry and a naturally interesting event follows. After this event he teams up with another girl and this arrogant song and dance man flops and can't get another stage job, finally drifting down into despair.

How the egotistical hooper is finally made to realize his shortcomings and is converted to a more humble outlook on life, provides a most interesting and dramatic story which is punctuated by many backstage sidelights and some unusual comedy.

HEALTH ESSAY CONTEST

MARCH 27 TO APRIL 9

Aided by material contained in two pamphlets distributed to them this week, students in the 7th and 8th grades are beginning work on the health essay contest "Protecting Health in Youth," to be held from March 27 to April 9.

In addition to the two pamphlets, copies of which were provided by the Michigan Tuberculosis Association for each of the 45 children in the contest, three supplementary booklets have been given teachers for their pupils to refer to in writing the essays. Other materials for use in the contest have also been furnished by the Association, which is co-operating with the school in arranging for the contest as one of its Christmas seal activities.

Unusual interest is expected to be attached to the poster and figure exhibit that will be displayed from March 28 to April 3 in the window of the C. L. McLean & Co. store, as an added feature of the contest. In writing their essays, students will be referred for information to this exhibit. It pictures graphically the "peak years" for tuberculosis deaths, and illustrates the fact that health measures taken in youth will prevent them.

The store will give the writer of the winning essay a prize, consisting of a pair of gloves, which will be shown in its window with the exhibit.

Interior painting, paperhanging, and decorating done at moderate rates by L. G. MacAndrew. Phone 263.

70 FATHERS AND SONS GATHER AT HALE BANQUET

On the evening of March 20th, about seventy fathers and sons enjoyed the banquet prepared by the Dorcas Society and sponsored by the Hale Baptist church school. The tables were lovely, with favors and tapers and vases of cut flowers all in harmony with the color scheme of orchid. The three-course menu was most delicious.

The program which followed was both interesting and unique. S. J. E. Lucas as toastmaster, introduced E. W. Doak of East Tawas, who led the group in the singing of pep songs in honor of the dads and lads. In his toast to the sons, W. A. Evans of East Tawas expressed a father's sincere interest in his son. Cecil McGirr of Hale responded with a splendid toast to the fathers. From his wealth of experience as a public school teacher as well as a father, J. K. Osgerby brought a heart-searching message to both fathers and sons. The seriousness of his talk was tempered, from time to time, with bits of humor which elicited gales of appreciative laughter. Mr. Osgerby urged his hearers to realize that "the kingdom of God is within you—yes, and the kingdom of success in business, in science, in art, in literature—in whatever vocation you may choose, the kingdom of all things is Within You."

From Davison, Mich., especially for this occasion, had come Ralph Brown, former Hale boy, and now a minister of the Methodist church. Before the banquet there had been happy exchanges of greetings and reminiscences with old friends; and now, as Ralph rose to speak, there was a feeling of expectancy and warm welcome. He began by paying earnest tribute to those fine, stalwart folk of the older generation who had been the community leaders in his boyhood days, and many of whom have since passed to the Great Beyond. "I have notes in my pocket," he said, "but I prefer to speak from my heart tonight." He complimented the sponsors of this Father and Son project. "You are placing the emphasis rightly, in thus glorifying the vital relationship which should exist between father and son. As the father of two sons and two daughters I feel I have the right to speak with some authority." His main emphasis was upon the value of fathers and sons seeing each other's viewpoint—the father remembering always the youth of his son and not expecting him to view life as a man would view it, and the son appreciative of his father's years of experience. In closing, Ralph again thanked those who had made possible this meeting with old friends. "You home-town folks are dearer to me than any friends I have known elsewhere," he said.

As the crowd dispersed, the mutual reaction to this fine evening of fellowship might well be expressed in the well known quotation, "It is well for me to have been here."

IOSCO SUNDAY SCHOOLS

Definite word has been received that Miss Ione Catton, Director of Children's Work for the Michigan Council of Religious Education, will spend a week in our county during May. Friends of Miss Catton are glad to know she is again at her desk, following a two-months hospital illness.

The County Council gladly acknowledges receipt of $26.75 from the East Tawas M. E. school.

Four groups of Campfire Girls are in process of organization in East Tawas, and one group at Hemlock Road. This will bring the total for Ioseo county to 12 groups. There are also three groups of Blue Birds.

The inter-school attendance contest, goes forward enthusiastically. March 16th reports showed Alabaster leading in increased total attendance, with a percentage of 65; Hemlock second with 29% and Whittemore M. E. third with 18%. On the same date Hemlock, with a percentage of 50, gained first place in increased attendance of men; Alabaster followed closely with a 43% increase, and Hale M. E. was third with 37%. Reports for the 23rd are as yet incomplete.

The Tawas City M. E. church school has a remarkable report for last Sunday. Father's day was observed with an appropriate worship service. An 80% increase in the attendance of men was noted, as a splendid increase in total attendance.

NEW LAW PROTECTS PERCH IN INLAND WATER DURING APRIL

Anglers will not be allowed to fish for perch in inland waters during the month of April, by the terms of a new conservation law which becomes effective April first, according to an announcement by Arthur Leitz, conservation officer.

This action is taken to protect perch during the season when they run up rivers to spawn. Although it prevents fishermen from angling for perch in the rivers during the month of April, its restrictions do not apply to Saginaw bay.

The perch season is not officially open in pike lakes and trout lakes until May first. In all other lakes it opens June 25.

A "Whiskers" Come-back?

Horace Greeley

Edwin M. Stanton

Napoleon III

Ex-Kaiser Wilhelm

Gen. A.E. Burnside

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
ARE whiskers about to stage a come-back on the face of American manhood? Wait, now, before you give a scornful reply to that question! For there are certain signs to indicate that the idea is not so fanciful as it may appear to be at the first superficial thought.

Do our newspapers accurately reflect contemporary American life? Consider, then, two newspaper items. One reads as follows:

Appropos the rumor that whiskers are about to do a come-back as a companion piece to bustles, also reported to be staging a come-back, this should bring about a revival of the pottery industry by stimulating trade in mustache cups. —Auxvasse (Mo.) Review.

The other goes into the subject more exhaustively and says:

Taffeta and ruffles have been worn before, and still there was no wide outbreak of whiskers. We had the long skirt for a while, too, and few whiskers returned. But it will be a surprising and an unwhiskered thing if we can have black mitts for evening and billowy skirts that sweep the ground and these coy puff sleeves and lace bonnets and now long-skirted bathing suits, even—and never a burnside to go with them. The wax modiste in the windows of shop and shoppe alike cry out for bearded company. A woman in such apparel not only needs an escort to the soiree; she needs a coughy blade with whiskers. Therefore, he will appear, and the motion picture doctor will no longer be alone in his Van Dyke.

There are portents, political and musical. A Paris dispatch informs us that "the present French cabinet, which consists of 22 ministers and sub-ministers, shows not a single shaven member," and in addition, four chief representatives at the London parley brought mustaches, while the fifth has a beard. Locally, every one is aware of Chief Justice Hughes, Mr. J. Ham Lewis, Louis Gray, Doctor Britton of the New York botanical garden and Ernest Boyd, critic incarnate, and finally several tenors have appeared in those mustaches which we associate with barytones.

Inevitably we must return to our mutton chops if the spring fashions continue back toward 1830. The short bodice, the sprigged frock, the chignon and the genteel black glove look timid with no protective whiskers above them, yet here they are. And when whiskers come back, mark your grandfather's words, so will chaperons. —New York Herald Tribune.

There you have it—from both the rural and the metropolitan press, representing both the country and the city! However true it may be that the safety-razor-using, smooth-faced American appears to be in the majority today, is it beyond belief that he may choose to return to the be-whiskered glory of the past? History shows that the facial adornment of the ruler of a nation usually sets the hirsute styles of the citizens of that nation. Now, of course, in a democracy such as ours the citizens are not likely to imitate the example of their President as are the subjects of a monarchy to follow the mode set by their king or emperor.

But the fact remains that during most of our history Americans have in general followed the style in regard to whiskers or no whiskers as set by our Presidents, although that may have been only a coincidence. Our early Presidents from Washington down to and including Buchanan were all smooth-faced and most Americans of their times were, too. Abraham Lincoln was the first President with a full beard and during his administration the golden age of whiskers began. Not the least of the elements which made the Civil war so picturesque were the magnificent mustaches, beards and sideburns which adorned the generals and statesmen, both Union and Confederate, during that period. A Civil war general, or even a colonel, a major or a captain without whiskers—well, the picture simply isn't complete, that's all!

Lincoln's successor, Andrew Johnson, was smooth-shaven, it is true, but his successors more than made up for his deficiency in carrying on the tradition. With the inauguration of Grant, whiskers came definitely into their own and for the next thirty years they were much in evidence in both the White House and the Capitol. Grant, Hayes, Garfield and Harrison all wore full beards, Arthur wore a mustache and sideburns and Cleveland wore a mustache. McKinley's smooth-shaven face marked the end of the bearded era, but Roosevelt and Taft symbolized a sort of a hang-over with their mustaches.

The present smooth-shaven era began with Woodrow Wilson and has continued through the administrations of Harding and Coolidge down to the election of Hoover. Now that we have had nearly twenty years of smooth-shaven Presidents is the pendulum about to swing back again, and give us another bearded President to set the style for his fellow-Americans? And if whiskers are to stage a come-back, what are to be the most popular styles?

Look at the portraits of the be-whiskered notables shown above and pick out your own style. The full, flowing "chest-protector" beard worn by Edwin M. Stanton, secretary of war in Lincoln's cabinet, is not only typical of the style most popular in the American golden age of whiskers but it is one of the oldest styles. As will be seen by data presented later in this article, it goes back to very ancient times. If, however, it would overtax the patience of the average American to wait for the growth of such a luxuriant crop, the hairy collar style, with the ostrich plume effect, as exemplified by Horace Greeley, the great editor, might be less trouble to cultivate.

Many Americans may not remember the services of the gallant Gen. Ambrose Everett Burnside during the Civil war, but they are not likely to forget what he contributed to American facial adornment. They are sometimes referred to as "mutton chop whiskers," thereby depriving the general of credit which properly belongs to him. For, as everybody knows, the right name for them is obtained by reversing the name of the man who made them popular and calling them "sideburns." Similarly, his imperial—and ill-fated—majesty, Napoleon III, made popular in France the combination of sharp-pointed mustache and lower-lip whiskers, or "goatee," which goes by the name of "imperial." It is doubtful if the average American would care for this "foreign invention"—referring one of the "made-in-America" brands—any more than he would care for the sharply up-turned mustache of the ex-kaiser of Germany. One fault of the latter type—at least, there is a tradition to this effect—is that it requires too much attention, such as putting it in a cloth framework at night so that it will not sag, droop or otherwise lose its perky uprightness.

The United States, however, is not the only country in which there are signs of a whiskers come-back. From France comes word that a well-known arbiter of styles on the Parisian boulevards has started a campaign for the return of the beard which he regards as the "outward sign of a mature mind." This is another historical cycle completed, for in early times the beard was considered by all nations as a sign of strength and manhood, carefully cherished and almost regarded as sacred. More than that, its removal was considered a particularly degrading form of punishment. In the second book of Samuel in the Old Testament is related the story of the servants which King David sent to Hanun, ruler of the Ammonites, to comfort him for the death of his father. Their reception is described as follows:

And the princes of the children of Ammon said unto Hanun their lord, Thinkest thou that David hath honoured thy father, that he hath sent comforters unto thee? hath not David rather sent his servants unto thee, to search the city, and to spy it out and to overthrow it?

Wherefore Hanun took David's servants and shaved off the one-half of their beards, and cut off their garments in the middle, even to their buttocks, and sent them away.

When they told it unto David, he sent to meet them, because the men were greatly ashamed; and the king said, Tarry at Jericho unto your beards be grown, and then return.

Among the Moslems the beard was also held in great respect and the strongest oath that a Mohammedan could utter was, "By the beard of the Prophet!" People of this religious belief took great care of their beards, habitually carrying combs to comb it and keep it in order. It was their custom to do this after prayers, while still on their knees, and if any hairs fell out they immediately picked them up and preserved them for burial with their owners. They also dyed their beards, usually red, not only because dye of that color was easily obtainable, but because it was nearly like the golden yellow, the color recommended by Mohammed, who hated black, the color which the Persians dyed their beards.

In France and Spain the wearing of beards followed the styles set by the monarchs of those countries. The beard was commonly worn in France until the time of Louis XII, who, being young and beardless, set a new style and the fashion changed. In Spain the loyal Spanish courtiers removed their beards when Philip V, who was unable to grow a beard, came to the throne.

In Russia Peter the Great issued a royal edict compelling his subjects to shave or pay a tax on their beards in proportion to the rank of the wearer. Henry VIII of England attempted a similar tax in England, but found it difficult to enforce the law and later gave it up. As a result the reigns of Elizabeth and James I were characterized by the wildest extravagance in beard growing with some men clipping their beards into as many formal shapes as the old-fashioned box hedges. Under the reign of Charles I the Van Dyke beard, named for the famous painter, became popular, only to be followed by a smooth-faced era during the Eighteenth century and down to the days of "our dear queen," Victoria, whose royal consort and whose son, later Edward VII, brought back the pointed beard as one of the glories of the Mid-Victorian days.

If, indeed, there is a whiskers come-back and beards once more become popular, they will bring with them vexing problems. One of them is: what to do with the beard when it is not in use—taking it for granted that a beard can be put to use, such as stroking it as an aid to cautious thought and tweaking it, either one's own or another's, to suggest violence, determination or aggressiveness. How serious this problem may be is indicated by the following incident related recently by a writer in the Boston Herald:

Some years ago a certain eminent man of New England wrote a letter to another eminent New Englander whose title to eminence is substantial and the land. It is a beard in the fullest dimensions of old New England. In the letter to this bearded New Englander the friend asked this question: When you retire at night, do you tuck the beard under the sheet, or do you leave it free outside and above the sheet?

This, we are told, caused the wearer of the beard much distress. Until the matter had thus been called to his attention, he is reported to have told his friends afterward, he had never given this problem any thought. He had had fallen gracefully into sleep, untroubled and unperplexed. It never had occurred to him that there was anything complicated or puzzling about the performance. Since that letter and its question, however, he had hardly had a comfortable night's sleep, for the moment he put out the light and popped into bed he had begun to debate which disposal of his beard he would make above the sheet or beneath it. By this we learn that the beard, like many another luxury in life, carries with it responsibilities and perplexities.

On a recent trip he was, as usual, perfectly groomed for every occasion. At times he could not resist showing off a bit, and once he paraded the length of his private train in his lounging pajamas—an exquisite creation of blue trimmed with red, and set off with a red stock tie.

All went well until one morning when the stop-over at a fashionable country club called for a golf outfit. He was as pleased as usual with his habiliments until he saw his secretary.

"Come here," he shouted, infuriated. "What do you mean by this? Your trousers hang better than mine!"

Rasputin's Daughter Public Dancer

Paris, France.—The daughter of the monk Rasputin, who wielded powerful influence over the czarina of Russia, Mme. Marie Solovieva-Rasputin, earns a meager living as a cabaret dancer in Montmartre.

Since she came to France with many thousands of other Russians after the Red revolution, the daughter of Rasputin has experienced many vicissitudes and has worked in many humble stations in order to support herself and her two children.

"I consider myself lucky in being able to dance in the fashionable night resorts in the bright-light district of Paris, where thousands of Americans come to amuse themselves," Mme. Solovieva-Rasputin said.

"I have been dogged by the same sinister influence which fate seemed to exercise over my father, because I was recently involved in a taxi smash and was unable to work for a time, and it was only because of gifts from charitable people that I and my two daughters, seven and five years old, have been able to exist."

The daughter of the Russian monk is intensely religious. At night, after the bright lights of Montmartre are dimmed, she goes to her room and prays before the ikon, which is one of the few legacies she possesses from her father. The ikon was found near his body after his assassination.

"I carry this ikon with me always, cherishing it as a rare memento of my unhappy father. Whatever may have been said about him, my father was the incarnation of sagacity and common sense and he was also gifted with the power of clairvoyance. Many times he said: 'When I am dead the dynasty will be overthrown.' Three months after his assassination the revolution broke out, bathing Russia in bloodshed and sweeping away such small fortunes as we possessed.

"My father was poor and after his death our plight was terrible. My husband was an officer in the army of Admiral Kolchea. When the Reds defeated the White army we fled from Russia and sought refuge here in France."

Rasputin's daughter is planning a visit to the United States, where she hopes to lecture on her father and his relations with the Russian imperial family.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Heart Action

It is estimated that something like six barrels of blood pass through the two ventricles of the heart every hour. In other words, the amount approximates 1,800 pounds, or 224 gallons. A writer estimates that one hour's energy of the heart would raise 11,250 pounds one foot.

Children Sacrificed in Jericho

Jericho, Palestine.—The practice of child-sacrifice on the site of Jericho in the Bronze age was revealed by inspection of the latest excavations made here under direction of the British archeologist, Prof. Walter Garstang.

Tragic aspects of ancient life within the walled city before the Israelite conquest were revealed during excavation of the bones of children killed sacrificially in the years prior to Joshua's successful assault on the city.

by Professor Garstang on a visit to the excavations at old Jericho where the Sir Charles Marston expedition has been working some time.

The defensive citadel, twelve feet thick of exceptional height, was believed to have been built about 2,000 B. C. But the excavations have changed many previous assumptions about old Jericho, which was cursed and burned by Joshua.

The expedition has discovered that the earlier city had the largest wall and that the city began to decline and lose population, making necessary the building of smaller and more easily protected walls in later centuries.

The theory that an earthquake caused the collapse of the wall of Jericho, will be worked out by the expedition next, as this season's work will end shortly.

The biblical version is that Joshua was instructed to have his priests march around the wall seven days, blowing trumpets and then, on the seventh day, all the people shouted with a great shout and the wall fell flat and they marched in. The inhabitants of the besieged city were then slain and the city itself burned.

In the burned city, as it is exposed today, the remains of charred corn in a bin were seen which were there when the Israelites marched over the fallen wall.

to go at things with energy and push whatever he undertook quickly through to completion. If he did not like loitering when he was out for a walk, he disliked it equally when it came to any other task or problem which was his for accomplishment or solution.

It was the loitering of the hare which caused him to lose the race with the tortoise. He was by far the better runner and could have won "hands down," as we now say, but, having begun his task, he lay down in the furrow and went to sleep, and so was beaten by his slow competitor, the tortoise.

Men do their work so today. Benson told me twenty years ago that he had a book underway, but he is a loiterer and it is not yet written. Gould has been going to improve his business house and bring his equipment and his methods up to date, but he loiters on the job and in the meantime his competitors have gotten the edge on him. Rusk is behind with his school work; not because he has lacked time. He has dawdled along; he has loitered and the result is disastrous.

LOITERING

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

There is, of course, imminent danger in traveling too rapidly, as many people can attest. Haste often does make waste, and the longest way round is not infrequently the shortest way home. We are likely to get into trouble of various sorts if we go too fast. I was myself startled by the sound of a policeman's bell and handed a check as I was coming down Western avenue, not long ago, which cost me ten dollars and an hour's delay when, if I had gone more deliberately I should have saved my money and arrived home in adequate time to meet the engagement which I was making unfortunate haste to keep.

But there is such a thing as taking too much time, of dawdling along and getting nothing done; of watching the pictures on the wall when we should be having the eyes on the book or the problem.

Thomas Arnold, the great master of Rugby, enjoyed the out-of-doors and one of his chief out-of-door delights consisted in taking long walks. His biographer says of him: "He hated loitering," and quite as feelingly he disliked going alone. Mrs. Arnold was not so young as her husband; nor was she as fleet of foot, but she always went with her husband. Since she could not walk as fast as he, she rode a little gray pony and one of the stipulations had to be that the pony should, without urging, be able to get over the ground at the rate of at least four miles an hour. The two could often be seen together on the roads about Ambleside and Grasmere; she sitting upright upon the little active beast and he striding along beside her, with no loitering on the way. It was characteristic of Arnold

DAIRY TALES DAIRY

ROPY MILK OFTEN CAN BE AVOIDED

Condition Due to Bacterial Contamination of Water.

Frequently in the spring of the year there are outbreaks of ropy milk. This condition is due to bacterial contamination coming principally from surface water and, in some cases, from feeds. It is entirely different from the ropy or stringy milk due to the diseased condition of the udder, according to Charles N. Shephardson, associate professor of animal husbandry, Colorado Agricultural college. In the latter case the ropiness is apparent in the milk when it is drawn; in the case of bacterial contamination the ropy condition develops from 12 to 24 hours after milking.

The remedy for this trouble is entirely a matter of sanitary precautions. The cow should be thoroughly cleaned to avoid manure or other dirt particles falling into the milk. The utensils should be thoroughly sterilized also.

While the cow is generally recognized as one source of this trouble, it is frequently overlooked that unclean utensils may also be a cause. The utensils frequently become a source of contamination due to improper washing or to the use of contaminated water. To overcome this they should all be thoroughly sterilized, either by the use of a chlorine solution or by steaming.

Steaming is generally the most efficient method, although this is rather difficult on many farms due to the lack of facilities. For efficient sterilization utensils should be steamed for five minutes at 200 degrees Fahrenheit. The organism causing the trouble, however, will be killed at a somewhat lower temperature in most cases. Sterilization may be secured by scalding the utensils in boiling water where steaming facilities are not available. This practice is not recommended because frequently the water is only lukewarm after it has been turned over all of the utensils. Such water has but little value for sterilization. In order to secure sterilization by scalding the utensils should be placed in a container full of boiling water which is left over the fire during the time it is being used.

"Do I smell a short circuit, or your pipe?"

BUT why smoke a pipe that smells like burning insulation? . . . The poor chap probably never heard of Sir Walter Raleigh's favorite smoking mixture. He doesn't know there's a tobacco so mild and fragrant it gets the O.K. of even the fussiest pipe-smoker. He doesn't know that true mildness needs a sacrifice body, flavor and "kick." He doesn't know he can smoke a pipe all day long without getting himself or anybody else all hot and bothered. In other words, he hasn't met Sir Walter Raleigh. Some day he will. Let's hope it's soon.

How to Take Care of Your Pipe (Hint No. 4) Don't use a sharp knife to clean out the carbon. You may cut through the cake and chip the wood. A lot of little "wood spots" take away from the sweetness of a pipe. Use a dull knife or reamer. Send for our free booklet, "How to Take Care of Your Pipe." Cow Test Association

Shows Up Money Makers

Do your cows make you a profit above the cost of their feed, that is, a reasonable return for your labor? The cow testing associations are answering this question for many dairymen. The yearly record of the association is the real standard of a cow's production, for it shows what she will do under average conditions for the average farmer. The expense of belonging to an association is more than made up by discovering the cows that are not paying a profit. By careful selection and weeding out the poor ones, the average herd production in some cow testing associations has been raised to more than 9,000 pounds per cow a year.

Many of the cows in these associations are making a profit above feed cost of $150 to $350 a year. If you have any surplus stock to dispose of and can show by the cow-testing record that a cow has made, let us say, 1,000 pounds of milk, 350 pounds of fat and a profit above feed cost of $180, it will be no trouble to sell such a cow at a good price. It might easily pay the cost of membership.

Dairy Hints

Plenty of legume hay and silage and the proper amount of a good grain mixture should be the aim of every dairy farmer during the winter months.

Legume hay is a good foundation for the bull's winter ration. It is high in mineral and vitamins, and is valuable for keeping heavily used bulls in condition.

Holsteins and Ayrshires producing large amounts of milk that is lower in fat should have one pound of grain for four or five pounds of milk produced per day.

Alfalfa hay is the most desirable dairy feed from the standpoint of yield per acre and feeding value per ton. The average cow will consume about two tons of hay per year when not fed silage.

In planning the dairy fed the roughage should govern the kind of grain and the proportions of the different grains.

Corn, alfalfa, sweet clover, or soy bean silage imparts an abnormal flavor to milk when fed to dairy cows before milking.

In order to obtain the benefit of silage in the dairy ration and at the same time avoid loss due to the production of silage-flavored milk, feed all silage immediately after milking.

Evil books scarcely live as long as the indignation they arouse.

"Backlash"

The play in a gear train, or any loose motion in connected parts of machinery is known as a "backlash." In angling, bait casters call a reverse winding on the reel a backlash.

"Free Verse" Old

The term "polyphonic prose" is sometimes used as the equivalent of vers libre or free verse. There are examples of it in ancient literature, such as the Old Testament.

HALE

Miss Faye Yawger underwent an operation at the General hospital, Saginaw, on Tuesday. First reports were as favorable as could be expected. Mrs. Yawger is in Saginaw with her daughter.

Mrs. John H. Johnson and daughters are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Emil Giegling of Grayling this week.

Thursday evening was the regular meeting of Hale Chapter No. 482, O. E. S.

The blizzard raging Tuesday and Wednesday blocked the roads, and the mail truck was unable to go farther than Hale on Wednesday.

The O. E. S. party last Thursday evening was well attended. The committee in charge, Mesdames Harry Westcott and Glenn Healy, received many compliments on the pretty decorations and excellent lunch served. First prizes were awarded Miss Grace Graves and Forrest Streeter; consolation, Edward Tottingham.

Mr. and Mrs. John Slocum of South Branch were callers in town enroute home from Ontario, where they were called by the illness and death of Mrs. Slocum's mother.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Greve at Loud Dam burned Saturday night, March 15. The fire, it is supposed, caught from an over-heated furnace. Mr. and Mrs. Greve were in town, and when it was discovered, it was too late to save the household goods. The house, the property of the Consumers Power company, was insured, but Mr. Greve had no insurance on the contents, and the loss to the young couple is a severe one.

THE STORY

On a pleasure trip in eastern waters, Philip Amory, English World War veteran, now a trader on the island of Papua, New Guinea, plunges overboard to save the life of a musical comedy actress, known as "Gin-Sling." Amory becomes interested in Pia Laurier, member of a wealthy New South Wales family. He tells her of his knowledge of a wonderful gold field on the island, though he does not disclose the name of the place. "Gin-Sling" tells him Pia is engaged to Sir Richard Fanshaw. Amory, however, is confident that the girl is not indifferent to him. His holiday ended, he arrives back at Daru.

I could not tell. Often I did not think of it. I was reasonably busy as a trader, and my boat, up and down the coast in a cutter, was a fong one; the crucial peak of solvency had just been reached, and passed, and I was beginning to send money up to Port Moresby bank. Not much, heaven knows—but still, it was prosperity, or the dawn of that pleasant condition; and it promised, in due time, the fulfillment of my dream of exploration. Nothing in the world to do with Sir Richard Fanshaw, far above me and my little affairs, as Pia Laurier was above us both.

Where was the connection? I would have given much to know. But weeks passed, and I was no nearer recalling the vague, three-parts forgotten thing that linked Sir Richard Fanshaw to Daru and its sea-scents and windy doorways, and my little trading store.

And now I have to relate when, and in what manner, enlightenment came. I had gone up to the Residency, on an afternoon when there was something doing more than usual; the R. M. (resident magistrate) was back from a wild patrol beyond the utmost rim of civilization or knowledge; an A. R. M. (assistant resident magistrate) and a patrol officer happened to be "in" at the same time, and this was an occurrence so unusual as to warrant, fairly, a dinner party. David Bassett, the R. M., a very good friend of mine, had sent a prisoner to my store with a note—

"Dear Amory:
"Come round to dinner if you can. Northanger and Purchase are back. No particular food, but a good deal of yarning. Have you an egg? If so, send or bring it, under careful escort."
"Yours,
"D. Bassett."

I sent him all the eggs I could muster. In Papua, you must know, eggs are the test of popularity, the medium by which friendship, servility, hope, esteem, all find expression. You borrow eggs from prudent people; beg them from anyone who you think may be fool enough to give; buy where you can (but that is seldom), present to your sweetheart, your chum, your friend in hospital; bring with a servile grin, to the man in high position, the man who has lent you money, or can get you promotion. Eggs, in Papua, are the true social barometer. . . . I had eggs, and always gave Bassett some when he asked for them. Bassett was R. M., and could be useful to me; besides which, I liked him; furthermore, on this occasion, I was going to be asked to eat the eggs, or help to do so.

Following my eggs, I went up to the Residency. Several men, like large joints of meat enclosed in a rather small meat safe, were sitting within the transparent hessian walls. I had expected three, but I saw four. Who else, besides Northanger and Purchase, I wondered, was "in"?

"Hello, here's Black Sheep," somebody said; and my host began introducing.

"Northanger, Purchase, you know the Black Sheep. Mr. Spicer, Mr. Amory."

The newcomer—he was a fatish man with extremely flat feet and a steeked head of fairish hair; young, good looking in a disgusting sort of way, and dowered with an excess of the manner sometimes miscalled "Oxford,"—fixed me with a cool stare, and demanded of the R. M.—"Why do you call him Black Sheep?"

"Mostly because his eyes are black, and his hair, and partly because he's a decent sort of chap," replied Bassett, staring back at the fatish man.

Mr. Spicer immediately dropped me out of notice, took a watch from his pocket, and yawned.

Bassett rang the bell for dinner. "Who is he?" I asked, in a whisper, of Northanger, as we went into the dining room, a clean, polished, rather prisonlike apartment that shouted in every foot of its barren expanse, its owner's bachelor condition.

"Fellow who's come across to make arrangements for some mineral prospecting crowd," answered Northanger, a little wearily.

We fled in. "Why did you ask him?" I found time to demand of Bassett. And Bassett, looking at me with large sad eyes, answered simply—"I never did; he wished himself onto the party," and took his seat.

Through the turtle soup—we are usually sick of turtle soup in Daru—through the fish (we are almost always tired of fish, because we get it plentifully, and free) through the roast of dugong, and the inevitable custard pudding and tinned pears, Mr. Spicer talked, with just so many pauses as would allow of his eating an excellent dinner. It seemed that he had acquaintances among most of the titled families of England; that they had been chosen to come ahead and "organize" the expedition, by a mass meeting of marquises, dukes and earls.

"This," he did not forget to tell us, "is Empiah stuff. Nothing colonial about it. Development of the British Empiah, on which the sun never sets."

"Our chief, Sir Richard Fanshaw—"
At this point, my slack attention tightened. "Your what?" I rapped. "Who did you say?" For I thought—being bored half asleep—that my ears were playing me false. So often had that name hummed in my head, between sleeping and waking, that I could not believe I was hearing it actually spoken by some one else.

"Sir Richard Fanshaw, K. C. V. O. Celebrated airman in the War. Extremely successful manager of companies devoted to the extension of Empiah interests. Chief in this matter, if any one is chief but myself. I expect him to follow very shortly, via Port Moresby."

I don't know what it was—maybe the new interest, the fresh channel of feeling opened up, by Spicer and his talk; maybe the mention, from an unexpected quarter, of Fanshaw's name—but something, at that moment, set off a fuse beneath the long dormant part of my memory, and exploded it into action. I knew, with certainty, where and how I had seen Sir Richard Fanshaw before—my G—d, I knew!

In the glass that hung opposite the table, I saw my face turn to something like a piece of white blotting paper, with black blotches for eyes and brows. I didn't know that I saw it; I remembered that after. At the moment, I was only concerned with getting out of the house. Spicer, the R. M., Northanger and Purchase, might all have been taken out and drowned together in a bag, for what I cared. There was nothing that I cared about, nothing that I knew, save that mad instinct to bolt off the course and get away.

We had done dinner, and were just moving back into the miscalled mosquito room. I touched my host on the shoulder.

"Sorry," I lied, "but I've got a touch of fever; I'll have to go home."
"You do look most awfully sick, Black Sheep. Better get to bed; you might be going down with black-water."

"Night!" I said, and slipped away. As I descended the veranda steps, the loud, high voice of Spicer was still holding forth. "Where you have failed," he was telling Northanger and Purchase, who had mapped out enough new country to deserve a dozen R. G. S. medals—"Where you have all of you given way"—(there was not a man in the room but had performed feats of surprise, attack, capture among the wild cannibals of the interior, enough to furnish plots to a dozen "movies")—"I shall succeed; I and my chief. We shall plant the flag of the British Empiah where never flag has waved before. We are organized; prepared, for anything that may happen. What we expect to find . . ."

I remember wondering, as I went through the garden, and into the croton walk, at dog trot, if Spicer and his gang, perchance, had picked up some rumor of the secret that was my capital and my hope. I remember telling myself that it did not matter if they had. Nothing mattered except what I had, with shock and horror unspoken, recalled.

. . . Nineteen—nineteen the year; myself, newly demobilized, spending my gratuity money in a hurried trip through the South Sea islands that I, in common with thousands of others, had always wished to know. Somebody who said—"You should have seen The Islands years before, before the War—ten years before. They're not what they were. Too many dashed tourists now. If you can handle boats, get a cutter with a bit of a cabin, and go away back. Where from? Anywhere almost. Out of reach of steamers and Cook tickets, that's all. . . ."
The cutter hired; a native or two engaged as crew. Weeks, then, of the happiness I had come far to seek. "Through the Looking Glass," I had gone like the child in the immortal

Mythical Giants Known to Eskimo as "Tornit"

The Tornit is a fabulous race which the Central Eskimo believe to be akin to themselves, but much taller and stronger, having very long arms and legs and being able to toss huge boulders as though they were pebbles. The Akudmirnir call them Tunludjuat. They lived with the Eskimo in the stone houses larger than theirs, as shown by the ruins that are still pointed out. Under their long deer-skin coats they carried lamps with which to cook the meat of seals as soon as they were killed. They could make stone implements only, no bows or knives, but these they stole from the Eskimo, who were afraid to defend their property until a young Eskimo drilled a hole in the skull of one of them who had ruined his kalak, while the giant was asleep. The Tor-nit then feared that they would all be killed, and secretly stole away, cutting off the skirts of their coats and tying up their hair so that they should not be recognized if pursued.

The Greenland Eskimo believed the Tornit to be a mythical race of giants who lived on the ice cap, and were seen rarely hunting at the heads of the fjords. The Labrador Eskimo, like those of Hudson bay and Baffin-Land, imagine them to be more like themselves.—Literary Digest.

It must have been about the sixth month of my journeying, when, with money running low, and mind almost sated with tropic beauties and wonders—so that I began to think I might soon, without regret, return to civilization—I came upon a group of islands that I shall call Omega.

There is a town in the Omega group, a town that, for reasons I cannot give here, offers more commercial interests and possibilities than most island places. This is important, and should be remembered; it has to do with what I am going to tell.

The town appealed to me but little. It was the outer part of the archipelago that drew me; thin atoll islands, barren and very bright; islets with here and there a coconut palm, and here and there a lost melancholy looking pandanus tree; shoal waters that were mauve and sapphire, pearl and celadon-green. I had bought the cutter by this time, with a small windfall of a legacy that came my way, and I had just enough money left to run her for a few more weeks. I hadn't cash for anything of a crew, however, save one old silly fellow who was willing to come without wages. He professed to know the group from end to end, and though I was a little doubtful of his knowledge, I could not afford to quarrel with it, or him. After all, I thought, we shall get somewhere, and come away somehow, and that's all one really wants. . . .

It was on a windy, wicked afternoon, with high clouds flying, that we got blown away from our course, such as it was; obliged to abandon all attempt to get to the group of atolls for which I had been aiming. I gave the tiller into the hand of Taviti, the "crew," slung my two sleeping boards across the seats, and lay down with a rice sack under my head. Taviti was to call me at moonrise, which I judged to be about ten o'clock.

I didn't sleep for a while. The cutter pitched violently in the cross sea raised by tide and wind, hammering with her bows on the water till you might have thought she would stove herself in. It looked like ugly weather, I thought—and then, of a sudden, I slept.

I was awakened by the smothering dash of salt water over my head, and a blow from the cutter's gunwale, that got me in the ribs as I was being swept overboard. Everything about me was white foam and swelling water; I felt sand beneath my toes, but could not grip it, because the short breaking waves had me at their will, and were knocking me about as a child batters a toy. I fought, and got foothold at last. The cutter was lying on her side, smashing her mast and rigging as she swayed about with the seas. Taviti was just crawling out onto a stone, like a rat escaped from the drowning plait.

"Where are we?" I shouted to him, as I crawled out beside him. There was no use scolding him for his careless handling of the boat, now. Low tide would strand the cutter; till then, one could do little or nothing.

"I d'know, Arki (chief)," mournfully answered the old man. Then, with a burst of animation—"I think we somewhere."

"Well, wherever we are," I said, "the first thing to do is to get the cable of the boat fast to something." And that, with considerable difficulty, we did, securing what was left of her to one of the big black stones, so that she might not be carried away by outgoing tide. Taviti, after this, found a little hole—you could hardly call it a cave—among the rocks, and dragged himself into it, covering his lean, wet body, so far as he could, with a mass of seaweed.

I left him there, while I started to explore the place, and find out, if I could, where Taviti's mad seamanship, backed by my own carelessness, had landed me. It was not much past full moon time; and nowhere on earth's surface does the moon shine with more effect, than on a coral island. I could see everything about me almost as plainly as in the day. And I did not like what I saw.

Things the Pilot Must Watch

Here is a view of the instrument board of the latest type of airmail planes now being used to carry the nation's mail. The special arrangement of the instruments is made for night flying. Flight instruments are grouped in the center of the panel because they are used most often by the pilot. On the right side are located the engine gauges and at the left the electrical control equipment.

CRITICAL YEAR FOR AVIATION IS SEEN

Postmaster General Brown for Revised Rates.

Cleveland.—As an aftermath of rapid development, commercial aviation in this country is now facing one of the most critical 12 months in its young life, according to an opinion expressed by Postmaster General Walter F. Brown.

The picture he paints reveals that nearly all passenger lines suffered severe losses last year. Air mail operators, although faring better, in many cases were compelled to use the profits from mail operations to offset the losses occurred in carrying passengers.

Coast-to-coast flying facilities were provided before any considerable number of people had even made sight-seeing flights over their own home towns, Brown said in depicting the growth of large-scale aviation business.

Disparity in Rates. A condition also exists in the air mail service which cannot be corrected until mail rates undergo thorough revision, according to the postmaster general.

"In our judgment, the method of determining the compensation of air mail contractors must be revolutionized. The system of paying by the pound, regardless of distance traveled, is manifestly unsound," he said.

Brown cited examples of the disparity between the compensation paid various contractors. The rates from Boston to New York, he said, is $3 per pound; New York to Chicago, 86 cents per pound; Chicago to Salt Lake City, $1.95 per pound; Salt Lake City to Los Angeles, $3, and from Cleveland to Pittsburgh, $3 per pound.

Contractors on prosperous routes have naturally prospered, Brown said, while those on routes where mail flows in a small volume have suffered heavy losses.

Want Fixed Rates. An amendment already has been drawn up by the Post Office department to correct these discrepancies in rates. A vote on the measure is expected in the next congress.

The amendment, in brief, authorizes the postmaster general to contract for air mail between cities at fixed rates per mile for definite weight spaces, rather than paying by the pound regardless of distance traveled.

These changes, in Brown's opinion, would render a double service—give immediate aid to the lines in distress, and greatly increase the air mail service to the public by permitting dispatch by mail on regularly scheduled passenger flights.

Airplane Brought Fate to Polish Murderer

The airplane in the role of an up-to-date avenging angel is the center of a murder story recently reported from Warsaw to the Frankfurter Zeitung. It appears that one day a telegram received in Pinsk told of the burning of the cabin of a forester living in an almost uninhabited section of the "swamps" about eighty kilometers away and of the death of his wife and child in the flames.

Such an occurrence was nothing unusual in that section and ordinarily would have called for a merely perfunctory investigation. But this time the Pinsk judge in charge of such work was struck by the fact that the fire had occurred at six o'clock in the evening, when nobody should have been asleep, and that, consequently, there was no good reason why the woman and child should have lost their lives. Instead of proceeding by automobile over almost impassable roads, the energetic judge appealed to the commandant of Pinsk for a couple of military planes and within half an hour the official and his assistant swooped down upon the scene of the "accident."

There they found the body of the woman, with a gag in her mouth. The forester had murdered her and their child so as to be able to live with her rival undisturbed. Overcome by the dramatic arrival of the agents of justice, the guilty man fired a bullet through his head and lived just long enough to confess his crime.

Alaska Priest Visits Parishes in Airplane

Anchorage, Alaska.—One Alaska missionary has qualified as a sky pilot. Rev. George H. Woodley, Jesuit priest, does not propose to trek long days with dog teams over snow or glaciers nor paddle a canoe to isolated mission posts of four parishes in his charge. He has obtained two Fairchild cabin planes with skis and pontoons and will be able to land under varying conditions of weather. Rev. Mr. Woodley will carry supplies, books and medicines to distant villages and will use the planes for emergency ambulances.

MANEUVERS FOR AIR FIGHTERS PLANNED

National Concentration in California in April.

Mitchel Field, L. I.—The nation's aerial fighters stationed at this base, and at other stations throughout the country for the national concentration of military aircraft forces at the Air Corps field exercises to be held in California next month. During the aerial maneuvers, which will be held from April 1 to April 24, several new tactical theories in air operation are to be tested.

The coming exercises will mark the first time that there has been a national concentration of military planes on the Pacific coast. More than 130 ships will participate in the maneuvers, which are to be conducted under the command of Brig. Gen. William G. Gilmore, assistant to the chief of the air corps in charge of training and operations.

While the major portion of the flight problem will be worked out at Mather field, near Sacramento, some of the principal operations will be conducted near San Francisco, and this will be the first time that planes have been used on a large scale in simulated coast defense operations. It is believed that in this phase of the aerial exercises the question of the battleship versus the airplane will be reopened.

The first week of the military aircraft exercises will be devoted to the training of the elements within the various groups to be represented in the concentration and which will be drawn from all parts of the United States. This will involve training in air discipline, including traffic problems, such as prompt take-offs and landings with a view to perfecting coordination of combined units on congested areas.

The second week will be devoted to elementary tactical problems involving each type of aircraft and including practical tests of new and untried tactics which have been evolved from previous exercises.

Plane "Blown" From Ice by Another Craft

Chicago.—When a party of Canadian explorers and prospectors, flying in a heavily loaded plane, landed on a frozen lake recently they were unable to take off. The wind, which had been blowing at about 40 miles an hour when they landed a few hours before, had dropped to a dead calm. In vain they tried to give the plane a flying start by placing snow before the skids, but all the big craft would do was to leap into the air and sink heavily to the ice again.

As they were about to give up in despair, a second plane landed. There was some talk about transferring part of the first plane's load to the newcomer. The pilot of the latter craft, however, declined to take any extra load.

"I'll tell you what I'll do," he said. "I'll give you a blow." As no one had heard of a "blow" it was explained. The second plane taxied out to the middle of the lake, followed by the first. Faster and faster they went. The second plane flew easily, gracefully, but the pilot held it close to the ice. A little further along the skids of the first plane left the ice, really blown aloft.

Needless Pain!

Some folks take pain for granted. They let a cold "run its course." They wait for their headaches to "wear off." If suffering from neuralgia or from neuritis, they rely on feeling better in the morning. Meantime, they suffer unnecessary pain. Unnecessary, because there is an antidote. Bayer Aspirin always offers immediate relief from various aches and pains we once had to endure. If pain persists, consult your doctor as to its cause. Save yourself a lot of pain and discomfort through the many uses of Bayer Aspirin. Protect yourself by buying the genuine. Bayer is safe. Always the same. All drugstores.

Barriers of Rock Dust

Come In for Criticism

The so-called rock-dust barriers, which are being recommended by the bureau of mines to prevent the tragic, progressive explosions which take so many lives in the mines of the country, are effective only when properly installed.

Inspections carried on by the bureau have indicated that in many mines the barrier is a hurdle only and not a true barrier. In other words, the hinged shelves, upon which are placed large quantities of very fine rock dust, are erected anywhere from two to five feet from the ceiling of the mine passages, and when tripped by an explosion, present a fine fireproof curtain from that point to the floor, but leave a sufficiently large opening above the dust for the flames to go leaping through.

Other shelves have been found so sturdily erected that no ordinary rush of air from an explosion would unseat them. Nothing short of a heavy charge of dynamite would get them into action.—Washington Star.

Don't Like Swaying Homes

Apartment houses in the form of sky-piercing towers now are the vogue for homes among wealthy New Yorkers. Charles Driscoll tells of one such tower in which apartments near the top rent for $60,000 each. But high winds make the tower sway so violently that tenants who are not good sailors complain of seasickness. The result is vacant apartments and a new rental problem.—Capper's Weekly.

Russia Conserving Gold

The Russian commissariat of health has ruled that gold received by government dentists from the state gold fund is to be used only on the teeth of toilers favored by the social insurance law, preference being given to industrial workers. Clients of all other categories can have a gold crown or filling made only on condition that they bring the metal with them. Rings, bracelets, chains, brooches and earrings are acceptable. This system has been introduced to curtail the use of precious metal from the state's fund on antiproletarian elements.

Stomach Trouble—Blood Impoverished

Kalamazoo, Mich.—"Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is an excellent blood and stomach medicine. I was suffering from stomach trouble, after eating I would be bothered with gas which caused me a lot of distress, and my blood was thin and in an impoverished condition. Thru this I became rundown, weak and nervous. I took the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and it relieved me of the weak stomach, enriched my blood and I grew well and strong. Safety Airplane Appliance Hazards of airplane landing in dense fogs may be eliminated by a "high-frequency landing beam" being perfected by Dr. J. H. Dellinger, bureau of standards. The beam will not only lead a pilot to the landing field, but will enable him to "slide down" for the actual landing.

Symptom Hunting

IT IS indeed surprising how many people under a misguided idea of enjoyment develop and maintain a fear complex in relation to their well-being. For instance, a muscle pain on the left side of the chest convincingly suggests a fatal heart condition, a sore on any portion of the body is conclusive evidence of cancer, a pain in the neck is the first indication of chronic neuritis, a slight stitch in the lower right side is undeniable proof of appendicitis, a backache means kidney trouble and a cough of more than two days' standing is an established case of tuberculosis!

While it must be admitted that it is always sensible to have a proper regard for the unusual manifestation, even though it be but a slight one, it is quite another matter to be forever and anon interpreting this and that little pain as an immediate indication of the necessity of a surgeon's knife or as the first step in the journey to the grave.

The super-egoist, who thus is constantly and for the time being, pleasantly in a mental furor, fails to realize that this grand and glorious world has sufficient real trouble in it without borrowing imaginary ones.

Moreover, in addition to being a downright nuisance to himself and others, a person habitually thinking in terms of personal calamity is likely to suffer from an unhealthy mental backfire.

There are, and will continue to be, many millions of people in the United States who will never become the victims of any of the major ills to which humanity sometimes is heir—a fact which the alarmists do not appear to appreciate.

For all practical purposes, barring acute conditions, the annual physical examination can usually be relied upon to guard one against the insidious inroads of the major maladies.

Consequently, if you are a symptom hunter drop it from your sport list and go in for something worth while. Symptom hunting most decidedly is a poor game.

Walk, but Watch Out

THE other day a man was attempting to figure his bank balance while crossing the street. His family is now figuring how much they will owe the undertaker.

The point to this sad tale is this: that when one is crossing a street or highway the main business is to achieve the other side safely. Romancing, calculating or plain absent-mindedness has no business being mixed up with the procedure.

Thousands of men and women who should have known better get seriously injured, and some times fatally so, simply because they failed to realize that the automobile will always have the best of the argument in case of a collision with a pedestrian.

Lawyers, indeed, may plead for the victim or his heirs. But even substantial damages are poor pay for a permanent injury or an untimely decease.

Whether one does or does not choose to leave this world by way of an automobile knockout, in nine cases out of ten can be decided by the individual himself. Certainly, health officials cannot do much for him along this line.

True, there may be worse and more painful ways of bidding adieu to life. But that is a slight solace to him who really hasn't any actual desire to leave sooner than is absolutely required.

Respect the killing and maiming power of the motor car. Give gas the right of way by not getting in the way. Walk, but watch out!

Insects Make Trouble for Railroad Officials

A report from Corcozio, Italy, recently received stated that a train was held up for some hours by a swarm of snails which crawled on the rails and made them so slippery they could not grip. Two years ago a swarm of locusts disorganized the railway between Niort and Fontenay-le-Comte by settling on the permanent way, and the same pests have more than once caused trouble on the South African railways, when a train has run into a swarm crossing the lines, and their crushed bodies have rendered the rails too slippery for the wheels to grip. Not many years ago, also, a swarm of bees held up the traffic at Burgess Hill station, on the Brighton (England) line, and a solitary cockroach, by climbing into the telegraphic instrument in a signal box, once held up an express between Toronto and Winnipeg for some considerable time.

Less Snow in Arctic

That in spite of the freezing temperature there is less snow in the Arctic regions than in this country has been revealed by official figures. The total annual precipitation is seldom more than ten inches, whereas central parts of the United States have forty or more. The dry air, caused by the low temperature of the Arctic, can give rise to little rain or snow.

POLKA DOTS GROW IN POPULARITY; CHILDREN'S CLOTHES COPY ELDERS'

IN THE styling of the new spring frocks no matter how simple or how elaborate, or whether of wash materials or dressiest of rich weaves, little capes and soft bows are details seldom omitted. Wherefore the woman who is her own seamstress, in buying materials for the frocks she intends to make, in every instance calculate on enough extra for a little cape.

Of course, the cape can be made as an integral part of the dress or it can be a removable tye; the latter being others light on dark backgrounds. Children's spring clothes reveal the interesting fact that the adult realm is not the only place where Dame Fashion has been busily introducing startling innovations. It seems that whenever a new detail was decreed for grownup modes a duplicate order was issued from fashion's headquarters in regard to youngsters' spring attire.

Certain it is that apparel for the younger generation is amusingly reflecting a sophisticated styling which far the more practical. Most of the new daytime frocks have adorable little puff sleeves, or if not puffs then short fitted effects tied with perky bows and when the cape is carried on the arm, or not in service, these details add increased charm to the picture.

Special attention is called to the soft bow and girde treatment as employed in the stylizing of the dress pictured. This swathed hip effect is repeated again and again by dress-makers and designers; they having discovered that it gives a slenderized effect at the waistline, even though the skirt be very full and flaring. Taking it all in all this simple youthful model made of polka dot print is a very commendable type for the home-sewing woman to undertake.

It is surprising the enthusiasm which is again expressed for polka dots. Indeed, in the spring mode the polka-dot theme is more outstanding than ever. An interesting display of polka-dot effects makes use of companion prints. That is, polka-dot materials with dark backgrounds, are worked with the color scheme re-features such intriguing items as boleros, peplums, short puff and cap sleeves, raised waistlines, the princess silhouette, jacket frocks and suits, and a host of other equally as arresting treatments.

The frock pictured below adopts for the growing girl the new silhouette which flares a princess top with a wide circular flounce. These semi-fitted lines are very smart and new for washable daytime frocks, gingham, pique and printed linen, being especially adaptable to this handling. The fact that this pretty dress omits sleeves is significant, for the sleeveless theme predominates in frocks for girls of ten, twelve, and thereabout.

As to choice of materials for little folks' dresses, again the tendency is to follow in the footsteps of grown ups. Very sophisticated patternings are used for even the smallest tots. The new cotton and linen prints display the same modernistic tendencies as the materials which mother and big sister are wearing this spring.

The guiding principle of the prints employed in developing frocks and ensemble costumes for little girls is to versed. These half-in-half effects are played up conspicuously not only in one-piece frocks but jacket suits made of the two-color contrasts are featured with infinite attractiveness.

And if you are wanting something in the way of sports prints which has just made its appearance this season, ask to see the new star patternings. The colorings and the general impression is much the same as that of the polka-dot prints only instead of dots one "sees stars"—myriads of little stars, some dark on light, again emphasize bold brightly colored designs instead of the dainty small patterns usually favored for children.

The use of companion prints is prevailing in the juvenile style realm as it is in connection with fashions for the mature. For instance, jacket frocks use a polka-dot silk with navy for the background, for the skirt and bolero, the blouse being made of the identical silk with the colors being reversed.

"The Thirteenth Chair" introduces fans to a new order in mystery drama, with ghosts, a ghastly crime, a baffling mystery, and a dramatic duel of wits between detectives and a spirit medium seeking to save her daughter from suspicion. While in the main the plot follows the original stage drama, the uncanny effects and deft handling of the details make it a more vibrant story.
