SLOAN EXPLAINS DIFFICULTIES IN SNOW REMOVAL

The Iosco County Road Commission for the last three years has endeavored to carry out a snow removal program for the benefit of all the county, and in a way to best serve the people as a whole. Although handicapped by having more than twice the road mileage for our one truck plow than the state and other counties that are well equipped have for each such plow, it seems necessary to explain to some people living on the side roads just why the commission is not now able to plow every road the first day after a storm, especially in the case of a severe storm like the recent snow, when it was hard the next day and much more difficult to remove than the ordinary snow, said county road engineer J. Sloan yesterday.

The aim, of course, is to open the main roads first, and those leading to the plants where hundreds work for a livelihood, and then to proceed as rapidly as possible to open the side roads.

In order to illustrate more clearly some of the difficulties that may arise, let us follow our equipment through the last storm and then if you happen to be one of those who called up to know when your road would be opened, just imagine yourself in the place of those responsible.

Last Tuesday the storm was well under way. Our only truck plow was sent from Tawas to Hale and Long Lake by way of the Meadow road to try and keep the drifts broken. Although the wind was still raging and no road would stay open for more than a few minutes, however, the idea was to keep the heavy snow from setting and also to help those who might be on the road at that time and in distress.

On learning that evening that our truck plow was having ignition trouble, and was unable to come through, we started our tractor plow out about 6 p. m. over the same route to open it up and see that the truck got in. The tractor reached the truck about 4 o'clock that night near Hale and started at once on the return trip, again opening up the main roads back to Tawas by way of the Meadow, which had been blown full almost immediately after each trip until the last one to Tawas. This let traffic through on the Meadow road a day or so before even U. S. 23 was opened. Please remember, the state has twice the equipment per mile for this work that the county has, besides having all the money necessary, while no one can deny that the county has no such finances and has to make every dollar count. Although U. S. 23 was closed long after our main roads were at least passable, no complaint was heard of this from many residents who seem to think that the secondary roads should be opened as soon as any of them.

Considering the fact that we worked four days and three nights to cover our gravel roads after this last storm, it should not be surprising to some that their roads were not opened at once and that our first efforts were directed toward the roads serving the most people, especially those leading to the plants.

Taking into consideration our shortage of equipment for the mileage we have, and a breakdown which put us behind over a half day, we feel that we did the best possible. A truck can't do any more than run day and night until all roads are opened.

It is a common occurrence in counties that are well equipped for snow removal in the heavy snow districts, not to get some side roads opened for a week or more after a big snow fall.

Only three years ago we gave little thought to removing snow from any road. So don't expect too much. We are making good progress. Next year we expect to have two truck plows and will be more able to satisfy those living on the side roads. However, if after a heavy snow fall your road is opened the next day, don't make it a point to call up and demand the same next time. Remember, we are doing our best to let you out the next day. However, machinery sometimes breaks and we might be delayed a few hours. Although we work night and day to get to you, we might not in some cases be able to be quite so prompt.

Next Sunday's subject will be "Peter and Judas Iscariot." This address will be the fifth in a series of sermons covering some of the last events in the earthly life of Jesus. His rejection, founding the church, and scenes in Gethsemane.

Sunday, April 13, and Good Friday that follows "The Trial of Jesus in the Light of Jewish Laws and Customs" will be reviewed in a lecture. Jesus had two trials; an ecclesiastical and a civil trial. In each of these there were three stages. From 17 to 21 errors in these trials has been the estimate of lawyers and jurists.

The public is invited to these services, also to the resurrection services of Easter morning.

Uncle Sam Starts Taking Inventory

WILL BUILD NEW POSTOFFICE BUILDING

Charles Moeller, Thursday morning, said that work on the new postoffice building will commence within a short time. In conjunction with the new building, the grocery store will be remodeled, stated Mr. Moeller. The upper story of the store building will be removed and the two buildings will be finished with brick veneer.

During the period of construction the postoffice will be removed to the Prescott building.

CITY COUNCIL FAVORS D. & M. DEPOT PETITION

A resolution favoring the application of the Detroit & Mackinac Railroad to abandon its stations at Tawas City and East Tawas and the building of a new station midway between the two points was passed at a special meeting of the common council Monday evening.

The meeting was called to order by the Mayor. Present: Aldermen Schrieber, Wendt, Leslie, Britting and Lanski, and about fifty representative citizens.

Mayor Braddock then stated to those present the object of the meeting and asked consideration of the council as to the question of the abandonment of the present railway station in Tawas City, and the petition and application of the railway company to the Public Utilities Commission for permission and authority to make such change; and further stated that the meeting was open to the public, and any person so desiring would be heard on the subject.

After hearing remarks and arguments pro and con in regard thereto it was moved by Alderman Wendt and seconded by Alderman Schrieber, that it is the sense and opinion of the council that such permission and authority be given and granted to said Railroad Company by the Public Utilities Commission of the State of Michigan to make such change as applied for.

NO ONE ENROLLED FROM IOSCO FOR C. M. T. C. AS YET

Communications recently received by myself from the War Department contain the information that to date Iosco county has forwarded no applications for the Citizens Military Training Camps this summer, and the quota for the state has already seen 25% enrollment.

May I take this opportunity to again state that this thirty-day vacation is an invaluable gift to the trainee and offers the parents a chance to send their boys to a summer camp at no expense.

Thirty days of supervised activities designed by Uncle Sam to send your son home from camp better physically, mentally, and with a foundation for citizenship that will live with him for life.

Applications will be received by J. K. Osgerby, Mrs. L. H. Braddock or myself. Information will be given if any question arises.

I understand that Iosco county has heretofore always exceeded its quota. Let us do it again this year. O. A. Hilton, East Tawas.

INDIES WIN FINAL GAME; SCORE 37-18

Rowley Brothers of Bay City, the only team to defeat the locals early in the season, fell before a spirited rush of the local Independents at the local Community Building last Friday evening. The locals were running true to form and gathered an early lead. The score at half was 21 to 5, all East Tawas Indies. Frequent substitutions were made on both sides and the play continued hard and fast throughout the game. The final score was 37 to 18. A splendid crowd was on hand to witness the last game of the season, and in many ways it proved the best exhibition of basketball seen on the local court this season.

The exceptional record of the local boys in winning 13 out of 16 games for the season is summarized as follows:

Opponents	Tawas Indies Score
Rowley Bros., Bay City	19
Leix Bros., Dairy, B. City	25
Ind. Brownhull, B. City	19
Ych. Central, Bay City	12
Alpena Eskimos	26
Rowley Bros., Bay City	27
Tawas City Indies	11
Clennie Reds	13
Harrisville Indies	14
Cuyler's Harrisville club	12
Bay City Y.M.C.A.	21
Essexville	21
Alpena Eskimos	22
Bay City Y.M.C.A.	11
Alpena Eskimos	10
Rowley Bros., Bay City	18
Totals	281 449

A total of 449 points scored by the locals as against 281 for all opponents in the 16 games indicates the scoring strength of the club. A glance at the list of first class clubs brought to the local floor this season discloses the calibre of the opposition.

The following figures representing the total points scored by individuals, as closely as can be determined from available records, are of interest to local fans. Maaske has the lead by a considerable margin, followed by Noel, M. Lixey and Hogan, all running close.

Player	Points
H. Maaske	129
S. Noel	90
M. Lixey	82
J. Hogan	68
P. Stevenson	31
J. Forsten	25
H. Lixey	20
T. Lixey	4

During the past season, receipts at games, dances and donations totaled $667.25. For this same period the expenses amounted to $623.00, leaving a balance in the treasury of $44.25. This is evidence of the growing popularity of basketball in this community. A total of $289.00 was turned in to the State Park Board as a result of the benefit games and the scheduled games on the Independents' basketball outline for the season. The Indies wish to express their sincere vote of thanks to the park board and attendant, Mr. Goupil, for the use of the local court, also to the local fans for their splendid support throughout the successful season. They have tried hard to provide good, clean entertainment for the basketball fans of this community and we believe their record stands for itself. They will hope to be in the field with a first rate aggregation again next season, at which time they will deserve your wholehearted support.

SPEED, COMEDY, PATHOS IN HAINES' "NAVY BLUES"

William Haines—Gob. Haines has played everything from a football player to a Marine, but his role as an enlisted man on a destroyer is his most comical, as well as one of the best acted characters he has ever given the screen. It is incidentally, "Navy Blues," is all-talking picture, playing at the State Theatre last times today, Friday, that he gives film fans his new slant on his many-sided talent.

Haines plays a sailor who loves a lass, and Anita Page plays the girl. There is a misunderstanding, a long cruise, and a reconciliation that follows a dramatic rescue from a gangster haunt, and between these more serious episodes Haines frolics through fights and pranks on board ship and ashore. The Y. W. C. A. social scene, the grogshop episode in Manila and intimate details of navy life are interesting sidelights.

Anita Page makes a charming heroine and Karl Dane as "Sven," Haines' big "buddy," has a remarkable character. J. C. Nugent and Edythe Chapman as the heroine's parents are excellently cast.

Haines, incidentally, sings the theme song, "I've Got the Navy Blues," specially written for the picture, aided and abetted by a sailor's quartet. It is a lighthearted, catchy song that bids fair to be one of the frequently whistled airs of the season.

"SUNNY SIDE UP" AT STATE ON SATURDAY, SUNDAY AND MONDAY

The Fox musical comedy, "Sunny Side Up," opens a three day engagement at the State Theatre Saturday, Chas. Farrell and Janet Gaynor are co-featured in this musical production. Farrell renders an altogether different performance in this picture than in any previous one. He not only makes his debut as a singer, but it is his first "white collar" role. Miss Gaynor is permitted for the first time in this picture to wear lovely clothes which tend to make her prove popular and lovable. El Brendel, "the funny Swede," from "The Cock and the Egg," plays the comic parts to a result that will keep you laughing for days afterward.

Dy Sylvia Brown and Henderson distinguished song writing trio of Broadway, wrote the story, dialogue and the music. The song hits from this picture have become very famous recently over the radio. They are, "I'm a Dreamer, Aren't We All," "Sunny Side Up," "Turn on the Heat," "If I Had a Talking Picture of You," and numerous others. This picture carries the best recommendations from every motion picture critic in the country. See it—Saturday, Sunday or Monday. Admission 10c-40c.

SIGNAL SYSTEM FOR ALL THE AIRPORTS

Federal Board Plans for Better Traffic Rules.

Washington.—Foreseeing a day when there will be need for air traffic control systems at most of the airports of the country and realizing the necessity for a nationally recognized method in the performance of this work so that flyers coming into a strange airport will not upset the system used at that particular field, a committee on standard signal systems for airports, organized by the Department of Commerce, has made an extensive canvass of airports.
Harry H. Bleg, director of aeronautic development of the bureau of aeronautics, who served as chairman of this committee, states that the canvass was made to bring about uniformity in air traffic control systems at airports and says that it has emphasized that existing systems leave much to be desired.
Improvement Called Vital.
"The general reaction to the canvass," Mr. Bleg said, "seems to be that the studies are timely and that a solution of the problem of traffic control at airports is vital to the advancement of the industry. Furthermore, uniformity in the system adopted over the country at large is held to be of the greatest importance."
"The reports received indicate that sirens are in use at a few of the larger airports and are quite effective in conveying information to ground operations. Visual signals include a wide variety of devices. Vari-colored flags are used in some cases. At a Western airport red and green semaphores, operated from the control tower, are employed. At night red lights are placed on these semaphores. Three other Western airports have erected two steel panels, red on one side and white on the other, which are used to control transport planes in flight. The Very pistol, red and green illuminations of the wind-tee and blinking of the boundary lights are night signal methods.

NEW ENGLAND TOUR PLANNED FOR MAY

Thirty Planes to Engage in Three-Day Test.

Boston.—An air tour of New England sponsored by the New England Council and the National Aeronautic Association will begin May 27 and continue three days, with thirty planes participating. Six women members of the Women's Wing and Prop club of Boston have signified their intention of taking part. Ten thousand dollars in prize money will be awarded.
The planes will leave the Springfield (Mass.) airport and proceed northward, making their first stop at the Turners Falls-Greenfield airport and the second at Springfield, Vt. At Montpelier-Barre the squadron will stop for luncheon, and in the afternoon will fly to Newport, Vt., and then to Concord, N. H., the first overnight stop.
On the second day they will fly in the morning across New Hampshire and Maine to Portland for a luncheon stop, proceeding in the afternoon to Boston, and thence to New Bedford for the second overnight stop. On the third day the stops will include Providence, R. I.; Bridgeport, Conn., and Hartford.
On the following day (Memorial Day) the planes will return again to Springfield for the dedication of the Bowles airport, and on the two following days there will be a program of races for flyers in the tour.
The tour is being planned in connection with an aerial survey to be made by the New England Council. This survey will make it possible to map out logical development of air lanes throughout and designate approved landing fields.

ONLY A DOCTOR KNOWS WHAT A LAXATIVE SHOULD BE

Danger lies in careless selection of laxatives! By taking the first thing that comes to mind when bad breath, headache, dizziness, nausea, biliousness, gas on stomach and bowels, lack of appetite or energy warns of constipation, you risk forming the laxative habit.
Depend on a doctor's judgment in choosing your laxative. Here's one made from the prescription of a specialist in bowel and stomach disorders. Its originator tried it in thousands of cases; found it safe for women, children and old folks; thoroughly effective for the most robust man. Today, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, as it is called, is the world's most popular laxative. It is composed of fresh herbs and other pure ingredients. You can get it, in generous bottles and ready for use, at any drugstore.

Mexico Turns Air Mail Over to Private Lines

Mexico City.—Following the course set out by the United States, Mexico has abandoned its government-operated air mail service in favor of private contracts, it is announced by the post office department.
The six planes used on the government mail line between here and Laredo have been presented to Mexican schools of civil aeronautics. The government officials in charge believe that aeronautics will develop much faster without the restrictions of the subsidy plan or from the interference of the government.
All phases of aviation development in Mexico are being closely patterned after those in the United States. It is reported. Expansion for commercial air transportation is readily found in the country, named by some as "the country of vast distances."

Jensen Flies Backward, His Plane Upside Down

Roosevelt Field, N. Y.—Martin Jensen, holder of the world's record for solo endurance flying, created a new stunt by flying backward, upside down, for about a mile.
The aviator was using the first plane turned out by his factory at Lehigh ton, Pa., a Liplane of 100 horsepower which, he said, was constructed on a principle which would keep the center of gravity stationary in the wings regardless of the position of the ship.

"Gliderport" Is a New Word for Dictionary

Aviation coins another word for the dictionary makers, now that gliders are being adopted by many people as a sport. Harry Kuchins, a furniture manufacturer of St. Louis, has purchased a tract of land and intends to construct an exclusive glider port.
A gliderport is distinguished from an airport in that an airport is a level piece of land which has the least possible number of approach obstructions and the gliderport should be entirely surrounded by high hills so that these motorless flying machines may be taken off from the top of the hills in any wind direction and flown to the level ground in the center.

The Strangest American

John Randolph

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
 NE hundred and four years ago this month there took place on the Virginia side of the Potomac river one of the strangest duels in the history of the American code duello. It was between a member of the United States senate,

John Randolph of Virginia, and Henry Clay of Kentucky, secretary of state. Back of the duel lay the conflict between two political theories, those of President John Quincy Adams, supported by Clay, and those of a future President, Andrew Jackson, supported by Randolph. But the immediate cause of the duel was a speech which Randolph had made in the senate.

The debate which produced this speech was of minor importance. It had to do with a resolution calling for the production of certain documents. But Randolph made it the occasion for such a vitriolic speech as only he could make. He assailed the administration, paying particular attention to the "close association in it of the austere, correct and pious Adams with the frequently drunken, incessantly gambling Clay," and ending up with these famous words: "I was defeated horse, foot and dragons—cut up and clean broke down by the coalition of Bifli (Adams) and Black George (Clay)—by the combination, unheard of till then, of the Puritan with the blackleg."

Heretofore Clay had ignored the whispering campaign against him, based on his drinking and his gambling. But this was a denunciation which he could not disregard. He challenged Randolph to a duel and as word of the affair got out the excitement in Washington was tremendous. Thomas Hart Benton, senator of Missouri, by permission of the principals, was allowed to attend the duel which was held on the afternoon of April 8, 1826.

Noted for his eccentricity and running true to form, even on the dueling field, Randolph appeared for the encounter with a white flannel wrapper over his coat. Despite the fact that his seconds had "haired" the trigger of his pistol, he insisted upon keeping on a pair of thick buckskin gloves even though these would destroy his delicacy of touch and perhaps cause him to fire before the word was given. And that is exactly what happened. As he stood holding his pistol, muzzle downward, it was discharged. Clay's seconds immediately protested but Clay silenced them and demanded that his opponent be given another pistol.

Henry Clay

Rather Randolph's reputation lives because he carried "the wickedest tongue that ever hung in the head of an American congressman, or at any rate, in the head of one who had both the courage and the wit to use it."

Many Americans can remember the day when invective, with all its synonyms of abuse, reproach, railing, censure, sarcasm, satire and vituperation were an indispensable part of the equipment of the politician. But of all who ever used them, Randolph was the acknowledged master, intimates Johnson, when he says:

No man since his day, when attacked in debate by half a dozen honorable members, has had the superb insolence to rise and quote, as he leisurely surveyed the United States House of Representatives:

"The little dogs and all,
 Tray, Blanch and Sweetheart,
 See, they bark at me!"

His characterization of John Quincy Adams and Clay as "Bifli and Black George—the Puritan and the blackleg," hardly needed the duel which followed to stamp it upon the memory of the country, for, although there was no duel as a result, the country had remembered the description of Thomas Jefferson as "St. Thomas of Cantebury," because, as in the other case, there was just enough truth in it to make it stick and sting.

Although John Randolph himself once complained that "All the bastard wit of the country has been fathered on me," Johnson cites some of his brilliant sallies.

He once spoke of "the glorious privilege of finding fault—one very dear to the depraved condition of human nature." Of Robert Wright and John Ren (Ray) he said that the house of representatives had two anomalies: "A Wright always wrong and a Rae without a light." Once a new member, elected to fill a vacancy in the house caused by a death, attacked Randolph, who ignored it at the time. Later, however, while discussing a bill in which the dead congressman had been much interested Randolph remarked that this bill has lost much in the death of his dear friend, Mr. . . . . . "whose seat remains vacant."

When Richard Rush was appointed secretary of the treasury, the gentleman from Virginia declared that "Never were abilities so much below mediocrity so well rewarded; no, not when Caligula's horse was made Consul." Of a certain pedantic individual he said that his mind was like a parcel of land which he knew—poor to begin with and made more barren by too intensive cultivation. "Denouncing me?" he demanded when a friend told him that a certain person had attacked him. "That is strange. I never did him a favor." One day he met an enemy on the narrow sidewalks of Washington. The man halted in the middle of the walk and belligerently declared "I never step out of my way for puppies." "I always do," replied Randolph, stepping aside. "Pass on!"

But Randolph's place in history is much more significant than that of a mere coiner of epigrams, according to his biographer, who declares that he was "the most powerful single influence in transforming the South from the nourishing mother of the republic into the frantic opponent of the republic" and while "it would be far too much to say that John Randolph of Roanoke diverted the spirit of southern statecraft from the philosophy of Thomas Jefferson to that of Jefferson Davis; it is incontestably true that he witnessed that transition and that he assisted it." It seems strange perhaps that the man who was "admittedly the first orator in a congress that included Webster, Clay and Calhoun," should be remembered mainly because of his violence of action and vituperation of speech. For, says Johnson:

His human opponents were impressive enough for he drew the wrath successively of Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, John Marshall, John C. Calhoun, John Quincy Adams, Henry Clay, Daniel Webster and Andrew Jackson. . . . He asked no quarter of the best of them, and no weak man could have stood a moment against the least of these.

Certain of the elements of greatness John Randolph of Roanoke possessed beyond the shadow of a doubt. In intellectual keenness and alertness, he rivaled the great Virginians; in courage no man among them surpassed him and not all were his equals; in depth of learning he was superior to most of them perhaps to all; in personal integrity not Washington himself was further beyond reproach. In addition Randolph possessed a quality which none of the stars in Virginia's political firmament afforded anything like the first degree. This quality was his sheen, his coronation, his sheer, blinding brilliance.

But for all this, he was a man attended by fatality, the heir of the House of Usher. Born to the purple, wealthy, a handsome youth, charming in his personal relations and equipped with a magnificent mind, it seemed upon his entrance into public life that all the beneficent powers had combined to insure his happiness and his glory. But his fair prospects were all illusory. Instead of primroses, his path was strewn with thorns and thorns. . . . Instead of becoming the stepfather of his country, "I mean the Commonwealth of Virginia," he urged her along a road stinkingly similar to the one he trod, and which led not to glory everlasting, but to defeat, madness and death.

For a physical affliction which Randolph sustained at the age of nineteen, following an attack of scarlet fever, changed the whole course of his life and made him an embittered, frustrated man. To the end of his days he retained a curiously boyish appearance, beardless, with a shrill, high-pitched voice. This fact, coupled with the statement that he was "the first orator" of his time and his own statement of "I am an aristocrat. I love justice and hate equality," only accentuates the grotesque character of the picture of the man who was John Randolph of Roanoke. "When he was over forty a spectator in the house gallery was dumfounded at learning that the skinny youth he saw on the floor, and whom he had believed to be about sixteen, was the great Mr. Randolph of Virginia."

The result of this affliction was inevitable. "Here was an intensely proud member of a proud race, a man who cherished his lineage above all his material possessions, a man to whom the family was not merely a sacred, but a downright awe-inspiring institution, deprived of the privilege of continuing his family," writes Johnson. "Here was a scornful man doomed forever to be the target of the shafts of the scornful. Here was a romantic man ridiculously debarred from amorous romance. Here was a man whose finest quality, perhaps, was his capacity for unflinching devotion to the domestic interests of his kin, denied the possibility of setting up a domestic establishment of his own. It is inconceivable that this frustration, this profound humiliation should have failed to work out in bitterness of spirit."

So John Randolph of Roanoke, who had in him the elements of greatness, just missed greatness. If he had not been such a strong man, his story would be a pathetic one. His "own people have remembered him with a curious mixture of terror, pride and wild delight. For, dark as is his story, on occasion it glitters and sparkles as does that of no other American of any generation." It is the story of a fighting man of the breed of Roland, and no one who is stirred by a tale of a warrior who lays about him with a right good will can fail to be stirred by Randolph. But it is above all else a fantastic tale, frequently verging upon the grotesque. The incredibly long, incredibly lean figure was Don Quixote to the life; but John Randolph's own were the glittering eyes, and the almost fabulous forefinger with which he seemed to transfix a shivering opponent—this, the strangest American.

HOW TO LIVE LONGER

Handle With Care

AUTOMOBILING has been defined as the greatest sport on earth. And there seems to be a large amount of evidence to sustain that point. On the other hand, like everything else, there are two sides to the question. For example, in the United States within the last twelve months there have been more than thirty thousand deaths which were directly attributed to the motor car. Not to mention the many times that number of accidents which did not result fatally. It should, therefore, be quite plain that gasoline can do much damage as well as create much pleasure.

With the use of the automobile practically universal, and tourist travel growing by leaps and bounds, it is logical to warn the man at the wheel. It is only natural that by rolling along on a fine highway the operator will develop a keen enthusiasm. But the zest and fascination associated with this sort of thing can very quickly dull one's judgment, which unfortunately frequently occurs. When this happens, selfishness and recklessness step in—and many drivers and passengers step out!

It cannot be gainsaid that to operate a car as to make a hospital case or worse of one's self or friends is the height of folly. Yet by "beating" trains and in turn by being beaten by them, by failing to keep a firm grasp on the steering wheel at all times, by disregarding caution signs and lights, and by permitting impatience to keep the car in high when caution demands less speed, many thousands of automobilists will conclude their ride by adorning a hospital bed or by making business for the cemetery people.

It seems a shame that with streets and highways admirably marked to aid in careful operation, with water supplies in many jurisdictions designated safe by health officials, with adequate supervision of wayside stands and camping grounds and finally, with all the health and pleasure which may be derived from the wide open spaces, so many drivers will put an untimely end to themselves and others by careless driving.

Remember, that all the personal health in the world coupled with a life expectancy of many happy years will be of no avail whatever if caution on the road is thoughtlessly tossed away. Therefore, at all times handle that automobile of yours with care. And live to drive another day!

Forcing the Issue

NO ONE wants to grow old. But no one can prevent it. Man is born, lives and dies—a sequence which the wisest can in no way avoid. Any worrying will not help matters in the least. Intelligent living, on the other hand, is of great value in postponing the inevitable old age condition.

One has but to look around to realize that young men and women, as well as older ones, are foolishly engaged in habits that tend to shorten life. The consequence is that many a person who has actually only existed fifty or sixty years is an septuagenarian from a physiological standpoint. Where is the sense to that?

Continual worry, lack of the proper amount of rest, over-playing or over-working, falling to exercise, excesses of all kinds, and in general, forgetting that the body as well as business requires intelligent direction, are the factors that prematurely hasten old age.

It is an established and scientific fact that careful living, barring accidents, will defer old age. Therefore, so conduct your life that when you look old you actually are that way. Why force the issue?

Revelation Put Beau in Unfavorable Light

Butler Glaezer, critic and poet, was talking about a biography of George Washington that does not flatter the Father of his Country.

"Few men's lives at that," he said, "can stand the searchlight as well as Washington's stands it. A girl turned the searchlight on her beau once, and if the poor fellow came out badly in one way—well, we'd all come out badly in another."

"This poor fellow I'm speaking of gave his girl an umbrella on her birthday. She didn't like the umbrella any too well, and since the ticket of the department store where it had been bought was tied to the handle, she decided to exchange it without saying anything to anybody beforehand."

"So she trotted to the department store, went to the exchange man and said: 'I'd like to exchange this umbrella, please, for another at the same price.'"

"'With pleasure, madam,' said the man. He was all smiles and bows. But after he'd unwrapped the umbrella he looked very stern."

"'This umbrella,' he said, 'wasn't bought from us, madam.'"

"'Oh, yes, it was,' said the girl. 'Look, there's your ticket on it.'"

"'Ah, yes,' said the man, 'that's our ticket—our ticket for re-covering.'"

Pretty Things That are made at Home

MAKE yourself a beret and see how it can express your personality.

It's easy. All the girls are doing it. Paris has decreed, and all the world agrees that the soft, informal beret is quite the thing for wear with sports clothes, the soft tweed and wool ensembles, and later on those lovely cotton frocks you are thinking of making or buying, for cotton has come into its own again, and very beautiful are the new designs. Incidentally these berets are going to make to match or contrast with your spring and summer wardrobe are crocheted or knitted from cotton yarn which washes like a handkerchief, and comes in all the smart colors, fashion favoring yellows, tans and browns, and the newest of purples, reds, greens and blues, as well as the more delicate pastels and white.

You could really afford a different beret for every sports frock and ensemble, as the cost of making is but 50 to 75 cents. You will doubtless want one in white, as white is going to be very popular indeed this summer, and white accessories will be much worn with pastels, such as white kid shoes and a white beret with pink or light blue or pale green, as well as with white frocks. Stylists tell us it is going to be a big white kid shoe season, and naturally one must match hat and shoes in contrast or in self-tone with the costume.

Some of the smartest of the new ensembles have beret, belt and envelope bag to match, and the girl who is at all ingenious should experience no difficulty in crocheting or knitting beret, bag and belt of the fine, long-thread cotton yarns now on the market, which are so soft, so light and so pliable, they make up really luxurious. There are two types of berets you can crochet, the snug top, like that in the upper left corner of the sketch, and the vagabond, like that at the right. By a little manipulation these two shapes can be twisted and turned into six or eight styles of becomingness. Two of these different versions of the vagabond type are shown in the center of the sketch.

In making either the snug top or vagabond beret, first measure the head size around the top of the forehead, over the ears and back to the nape of the neck. This measure is usually 22 to 23 1/2 inches. You will require two balls of the cotton yarn for the snug top, and three balls for the vagabond type.

STRAW LACE, BOWS, FEATHERS, FLOWERS, GIVE DRESSY AIR TO HATS

NO WONDER the initial millinery displays have set all vanity fair a-talking. Simply marvelous are the new hats, so flattering, so prettily feminine—"perfect dreams" according to the general verdict. Not the slightest excuse for being unbecomingly batted this season!

The first hat at the same time that it has a tailored aspect, also assumes a dressy mien because of the transparent straw-and-hair flange which encircles its black panama-like crown.

There is a bordering of filmy hair braid about the big black hat in the upper right corner. Millinery designers are accenting transparent effects throughout the entire hat program. A detail of special significance is the posing of a cluster of tiny flowers under the brim. It is said that underbrim treatments will be increasingly featured as the season advances.

Note the gay little pasted feather motifs on the large hat below to the left. One sees these pasted efforts on ever so many of the straws arriving from abroad.

The bow hat! You will be hearing more and more about bow trimmings. The model shown here uses taffeta cut into wide strips, which are self-lined for the loops at the side.

HOW IN THE WORLD DO YOU GET YOUR WASH SO WHITE, MRS. NELSON?

Mrs. Nelson tells secret of her easy washdays

"I DON'T even scrub—think of that! I don't bother about boiling, either. I just let my wash soak snowy-white in Rinso suds."

"The Rinso way is so easy on clothes. They aren't scrubbed threadbare."

Rinso is economical
 This granulated soap is all you need even in hardest water—no bar soaps, chips, powders, softeners. Cup for cup, it gives twice as much suds as puffed-up soaps. Rich, lasting suds.

Rinso is recommended by the makers of 38 washers. You can trust your finest linens to it. Great for dishes, too. Get the BIG package.

Citizens' Mutual Agents Meeting Howell, Mich., March 18, 1930

Two Hundred Agents of the Citizens' Mutual Auto Insurance Company Met at Howell, Tuesday, March 18th.

Commissioner of Insurance, C. D. Livingston, complimented the Company and its agents for the large meeting. He said that about 80% of the Michigan Automobile insurance was written by Michigan companies. The State took pride in building up these companies, and that good service in handling complicated automobile claims would continue to make such companies grow. That the man who takes a policy for automobile insurance depends upon the Agent and the Adjuster to give him good service. He pointed out that the successful agent is a man of good standing in the community. One who is honest and upright with his company and with the public. A good agent will be fair with his competitors and not attempt to knock another company. An agent who is fair grows in public confidence.

The Secretary of the Company reported that the Company had done an increased business in February. The two hundred agents present brought good reports from various parts of the state and pledged that they would do their part to make 1930 a successful year. The Company is now in its 15th successful year. It has state-wide adjusting and agency forces and has able attorneys in every part of the state to assist on the complicated claims as a result of automobile accidents.

Don Van Winkle, as attorney for the Company, pointed out the state pride in supporting Michigan companies. He said he had watched the growth and success of the company and the time and effort that had been made to build up an organization of men who are specializing in writing and taking care of claims as a result of automobile accidents. The record of the Company for prompt and fair settlements was well known, and fair dealing had assisted largely in increasing the business year by year.

A fine banquet was served and the Agents left, promising good results for the year.—Adv.

Published in the interest of the people of Iosco County

95c per 24½ lb. sack. This flour sale will last until April 12.

"Good morning, Mrs. Betts. Oh, I say, I saw Mrs. Budd this morning and she told me the very same news I asked you not to repeat to anyone, because I promised Mrs. Spring that I would not tell."

"But Mrs. Budd promised me she wouldn't tell if I told her."

"Oh, well, never mind. I told her I wouldn't tell you she had told me you had told her."

Pillsbury's Best bread flour, $8.00 per barrel, $1.00 per 24½ lb. sack; Blackburn's Best, $7.60 per barrel.

We will have another car of Hexite in today, and a car of lump coal.

"Is there anything more exasperating than to have a wife who can cook but won't do it?" said the first man.

"Yes, indeed," replied the other, "to have one that can't cook and will."

"You can't divide apples by peaches or pears," lisped Harold, bravely.

"Correct, go on," smiled the teacher.

"But you can add them," cried Harold, with a happy thought, "and—make fruit salad."

MORTGAGE SALE

DEFAULT having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Rowland Keith and Sarah Keith, his wife, and Sarah Keith in her own right, of Plainfield township, Iosco County, Michigan, to Ealy, McKay and Company dated the 14th day of January, A. D. 1921, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the county of Iosco, State of Michigan, on the 27th day of January, A. D. 1921, in Liber 21 of Mortgages on page 341, said mortgage being duly assigned on April 30, 1925 to First National Bank of Bay City, Michigan, said assignment being recorded on May 4, 1925 in Liber 26 of Mortgages on page 301, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice, for principal and interest, the sum of Two Thousand Six Hundred Ninety-five and 20/100 Dollars ($2695.20), and an attorney fee as provided for by law, and no suit or proceedings at law having been instituted to recover the moneys secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and the statute in such case made and provided, on Saturday, the 24th day of May, A. D. 1930, at 10:00 o'clock in the forenoon, the undersigned will, at the court house in the city of Tawas City, that being the place where Circuit Court for the county of Iosco is held, sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount so as aforesaid due on said mortgage, with six (6) per cent interest, and all legal costs, together with said attorney's fee to-wit: the South one-half (½) of the northeast quarter (¼) of section 23, town 23 north range 5 east, containing 80 acres of land more or less.

Patron Saint of Penniless Brides

Baton Rouge, La.—Back in the Eighteenth century when Louisiana was a mysterious region of swamps and bayous and forests, a young man made love to a girl who lived along the Mississippi.

She would not marry because she was too poor to bring him a dowry. But to his death at the age of eighty-four he remained faithful to her memory. And his will provided that the interest from $35,000 should be divided annually among the worthy brides of his loved one's home town as dowry money.

Recently the police jury, which corresponds to the county supervisors or commissioners in other states, of West Baton Rouge parish allotted close to $200 each to 13 girls who married within the last year.

It was their dowry, a gift from Julien Poydras, a boy from Nantes, Brittany, who came to this country in 1768 after colorful years before the mast.

He peddled odds and ends up and down the Mississippi. He lived a simple life, and he worked hard. Not strange, then, that by the year 1800 he was owner of a hundred slaves and five plantations in the parishes of West Baton Rouge and Pointe Coupee. Honors, too, came to this adventurous Breton. He was the president of the first legislative council of Louisiana territory. From 1809 to 1812 he was a delegate to congress. He was president of the constitutional convention that opened in New Orleans on November 4, 1811. When Louisiana was admitted to the Union, he served as president of the state senate.

The will of Julien Poydras ordered that all of his slaves be freed within 25 years, and it gave money to schools, hospitals and charitable organizations. But the bequest best remembered is the dowry money. For 100 years it has meant added happiness for the girls in the parish across the Mississippi from the capital city.

To them Julien Poydras was more than a great Louisianian—he was a man who appreciated the pangs of a girl who must come dowryless to her husband.

Relentless Drive on Counterfeiters

Washington.—Secret service, aided by local police, made 138 arrests in the country last month for counterfeiting.

This is a record for one month and evidence of the vigor with which the campaign against counterfeiting is being conducted. Most of the counterfeiting is in $5 and $10 bills, all of which are declared by experts to be only fair work.

The bills are passed in small communities and in the suburbs or congested districts of large cities and reach the banks and big business houses, which promptly bundle them up for deposit or to be sent to Washington for redemption with the result that the counterfeiters are not often detected before reaching Washington. In the opinion of the experts they should be.

"Congestion of the court calendars and leniency in court sentences is partly responsible for the present situation in counterfeiting," said W. H. Moran, chief of the secret revenue service.

"We need quicker action in bringing counterfeiters to trial and longer jail sentences. Counterfeiting is the most despicable business in the world, for, if successful, it is always an innocent person who suffers and it may be his last cent in the world."

Moran emphatically denied the smaller paper money now in use in this country has anything to do with the increase in counterfeiting. "A counterfeit is a counterfeit," he said. "It is no easier to counterfeit a small bill than a large one. The faces of the Presidents are the same size on both the old and new bills and that part of the bill is the most difficult for any counterfeiter to imitate so as to pass casual inspection."

The rapidity with which the counterfeiters are being arrested encourages Moran in the belief that no counterfeiters can hope to escape the law long.

When Character and Habits Develop

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

Mrs. Cline was delivering herself of a very scathing denunciation of the evil influences which college had exercised over her son. He had come away from home, she averred, clean-minded, honest, and temperate, and now she found him mixed up in every sort of irregularity. He had been caught cribbing; he had wasted his allowance in gambling, and he was known to be drinking, and involved in even more unsavory things, and college was to blame for it all.

I was myself not so sure of the fact that his derelictions could all be laid at the college doors, and I said so. I even went so far as to ask the boy himself, and he very frankly told me that he had learned nothing new in college. He had simply developed the tendencies and the habits which had had their beginnings in high school. Being away from home, he had been freer to follow his desires, and he was stooping putting more energy and interest into his dissipations. The habits which dominate us through life, the principles of character which we follow are developed very early in life.

Rudyard Kipling in a recent address to a group of English school boys in southern England on the opening of a junior school in which they were students, expresses something of the same idea:

"I am sure you have been told many times that your school gives you in miniature almost every problem and situation you may be called upon to meet later. Strange as it may seem, it is true because—perhaps you have been told this—very few men are more than sixteen years old when it comes to a pinch.

"So if you can remember the style of a man's work, or, better still, of play, you can make a close guess later on as to what he will do and how and why, and presently you will realize that men seldom do anything for the first time, except at school. It is not as if men were original creatures. They are boy products."

It is quite the truth. Men are only boy products, and they change little after boyhood. An example of this:

Martin, shortly after he was out of college, was contemplating marriage, and he was discussing with me the great change which would be wrought in him by that ceremony.

"I'm going to be a different man next year," he said.

"How so?" I inquired.

"She'll make me so," he replied confidently.

But she didn't. Martin is just as much a pessimist, a procrastinator, an irresponsible debtor as he was forty years ago. His habits and his character were formed during boyhood, and they have remained the same.

Possibly we are born with certain tendencies, possibly many of these are cultivated, but for most of us our habits and our characters are pretty well settled, while as youths we are under the influence of home.

Polly Was Too Temperamental

New York.—A hundred and sixty parrots from Nicaragua expended all the riches of their limited vocabularies here when they were ordered by the public health officials to spend thirty days at Hoffman's island under observation for signs of parrot fever.

One bird, more talented than the others, almost got ashore by posing as a kitten, but at the last moment betrayed himself by directing an uncomplimentary epithet at one of the ship's officers.

All the birds came in on the Columbia of the Panama Mail line, which arrived from San Francisco after stopping at Central American ports to collect the parrots, seven macaws, two toucans and fifty ring-tailed monkeys.

Mrs. Margaret Daly, a stewardess, also had a parrot and she wanted badly to get in the city. She knew that it would be suspected of carrying psittacosis, but she was morally certain the bird was well. So she taught it to meow like a cat and then put it in a wicker cage covered with cloth.

"What's in the cage?" asked a customs agent.

"A kitten," she said.

"Meow!" said the parrot in confirmation. "Meeeeeow!"

Then through a chink it caught sight of a ship's officer.

"Hello, you ———" it jovially remarked.

"What kind of a kitten is that, anyway?" said the inspector.

He tore off the cloth around the cage. The parrot returned his gaze.

Chinese Bandits Steal Telephone Wires

Nanking, China.—Minnesota folk thought they had found an enterprising thief when it was discovered that several hundred feet of wire had been stolen recently from power company poles near Stillwater, but China can duplicate the tale on an even larger scale. Telephone users in the western district of nationalist China's new capital awoke after a recent heavy snowfall to find their phones out of order. Workmen who investigated found that all the wire in the whole district had been stripped from the poles by bandits, and the sheltering aid of the snow.

Seaweed as a Barometer

At the seashore we may not have a barometer at our disposal, but the seaweed can be of great help in forecasting weather. When a great deal of moisture is in the air, indicating probable rain, the seaweed feels damp. When the weed is dry, there is little likelihood of rain.

The Language of the Flowers

The upsets of Children

All children are subject to little upsets. They come at unexpected times. They seem twice as serious in the dead of night. But there's one form of comfort on which a mother can always rely; good old Castoria. This pure vegetable preparation can't harm the tiniest infant. Yet mild as it is, it soothes a restless, fretful baby like nothing else. Its quick relief soon sees the youngster comfortable once more, back to sleep. Even an attack of colic, or diarrhea, yields to the soothing influence of Castoria. Keep Castoria in mind, and keep a bottle in the house—always. Give a few drops to any child whose tongue is coated, or whose breath is bad. Continue with Castoria until the child is grown! Every drugstore has Castoria; the genuine has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper.

Mrs. H. Dolhonde, 6318 York St., New Orleans, Louisiana

"Before my last baby was born, I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I got such good results that I named her Catherine Lydia. I have six older children and five grandchildren, too. I am now taking the Vegetable Compound again because of my age. I eat and sleep better and I do all my housework, and my washing. I will do my best to answer letters."

Mrs. Harold Goodnow 36 Cane St., Fitchburg, Massachusetts

"I cannot praise your medicine enough. After my baby came I was rundown. I had to go to bed often through the day. I took three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I felt like a different woman. If any mother has those tired feelings I advise her to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

Mrs. Lloyd R. Blasing, 115 So. Ohio St., Anaheim, California

"After my baby came I was so nervous and tired that I felt miserable. One day a booklet was left at our door and after reading it I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am now on my fourth bottle and I feel much stronger. It has helped me in every way and I feel sure that other women in rundown condition will pick up if they will only take a few bottles."

THE STORY

On a pleasure trip in eastern waters, Philip Amory, English World War veteran, now a trader on the island of Papua, New Guinea, plunges overboard to save the life of a musical comedy actress, known as "Gin-Sling." Amory becomes interested in Pia Laurier, member of a wealthy New South Wales family. He tells her of his knowledge of a wonderful gold field on the island, though he does not disclose the name of the place. "Gin-Sling" tells him Pia is engaged to Sir Richard Fanshaw. Amory, however, is confident that the girl is not indifferent to him. His holiday ended, he arrives back at Daru. He meets an Englishman, Spicer, there on development business for a syndicate of which Fanshaw is head.

CHAPTER III—Continued

There are such things as warnings; and if ever I felt a warning, it was then. I felt (how shall I put it?) that this place was not good to be in.

There was a personality about it—every one has felt such things, though few care to say so—and it was distinctly hostile.

Of course, that did not stop me from exploring; I had to find out where we were. Further, I was wet through, without a change; it was a tropic night, but tropic nights, with high wind blowing, can be unpleasantly cool, and I shivered a bit, as I tramped the rough, blown grasses; I should have been glad of a house wherein I might take shelter, and find somebody's clothes to borrow. I rather thought the island was uninhabited. In the moonlight, I had seen traces of footsteps, or what looked like footprints, in the grass! I had seen a pile of coconuts heaped up at the foot of a palm.

It would have been about twenty minutes after landing, when I was getting well warmed up with exercise, that I ran across the houses. They were two or three only, mere hovels thrown together of brushwood and palm.

They seemed to me to be semi-alive, crouching, as if afraid of my approach. It may have been this fancy that urged me to take care, walk delicately, as I neared them. Most were unlighted; from one, however, came a faint red gleam through plaited walls. Somebody, within, was waking, while the rest of the island slept.

The wind had risen, was still rising. It made an intolerable clamor. Masked by the noise, I walked right up to the house wall and peered through a chink.

I do not know what I expected to see; something astonishing, certainly—but whatever it may have been, it was less amazing than the reality.

I saw a white man like myself; a well-bred looking man, with a beard, brown eyes, and wavy brown hair. He was dressed in a most extraordinary rig—loincloth and jumper, such as the natives use, but of a pattern never worn by any native of the Pacific world, yellow, with spots of black as big as dinner plates. Ugly, conspicuous in the last degree—and so coarse in texture that its folds were stiff as canvas.

"Ought to last a lifetime, that rig," I thought. "Bad sort of thing to go shooting or fishing in; anything alive would spot you a hundred yards off. Why in Tophet does he wear it?"

The question was no sooner asked than answered. He wasn't going to wear it—any longer than he could help. He had been busy packing a small bag, when I looked in; now, snapping the lock, he began pulling off his hideous shirt, and loosening the loincloth. Hung up on a rafter beside him, I saw a European suit, crumpled and earth-stained; it looked almost as if it had been buried and dug up again.

The crack was narrow; I stretched forward to look through, and managed, somehow, to stagger against the flimsy hut wall. It creaked and bent in as if it had been made of paper. The man must have seen it move; with his arm half out of his shirt, he made a snatch at a revolver that was lying beside the bag, and swung round, eyes glaring like a cat's when it sees prey, to face the spot where I was standing.

I did not stand long. Covered by the noise of the wind, I bolted as hard as I could go for a tussock of hibiscus bush, and dropped into it. By the time the man had got out of the hut, I was lying low, safe among the interlaced stems, and peering through. If I died for it, I was going to know what all this was about.

There were dozens of tussocks near the house; he must have seen the futility of trying to search them. He stood in the doorway, outlined by the smoky flame of his hurricane lamp, and staring wildly about. The spotted-leopard clothes were fastened again; they looked very odd, with the socks and boots he was wearing, and the hat he held in one hand. It was a handsome, well-bred hand, but the little finger, I noticed, had a defective and broken nail.

"Black," he called in a cautious voice that scarcely carried through the wind. "Black—was—that you?" I thought he rather hoped it was Black; was arguing with himself that it couldn't have been anyone else.

A freakish humor seized me. I slipped out at the back of the tussock, and showed my head.

"Yes," I answered, aware that no man could identify another in that light, under trees, at fifty yards distance.

He Made a Snatch at a Revolver That Was Lying Beside the Bag.

"What the devil are you playing about, then?"

"Don't want to be seen," I answered truthfully.

This seemed to satisfy him, more or less. "Is the launch there?" he asked presently. I said it was.

"Go and get everything ready to start. I'll be down in two minutes."

This was awkward. I could not be sure of safety, once I left the shelter of the bushes. Black might be inches taller or shorter, pounds heavier or lighter, than I. I hesitated, uncertain what to do.

It seemed that the man in the hut could not endure delay. "What are you messing and waiting about?" he demanded, with an oath. "If I'm caught, so are you, and it's five years on the breakwater."

"(So I'm supposed to be committing a crime. I wonder what?) I thought.) The freakish devil that had possession of me prompted me to reply—at a venture. "What about the money?"

This let loose a surprising flood of profanity. I judged that Mr. Black, whoever he was, had been exacting in his demands.

"Money?" (Fiery interval.) "Money? What do you want? Five hundred already, and another five when you land me in Valparaiso!" ("Crums! Valparaiso—in a launch!" I thought. "Who has he been murdering?")

"—And all the cursed expenses into the bargain, and you want more!"

"No," I shouted across the wind. "No. I'm going off to the launch."

The conversation, I thought, was growing too exacting; not much longer should I be able to keep up my end of it—and then, there was that revolver, in the hands of what seemed to be a desperate man. A cloud was coming over the moon. I waited till it touched, then made a bolt. "Hurry up," I shouted, as I ran away, devout-

Caves Valuable, Apart From Scenic Splendor

The limestone caves at Walmote in New Zealand bring tourists from every part of the world to see the extraordinary beauties of the glow-worm cavern with its myriad stars of phosphorescent fire. The Mendips caves of Somersetshire and the Peak caves of Derbyshire, England, have thousands of visitors yearly, and so has the Mammoth cave of Kentucky. The Mammoth cave had quantities of salt peter in it which were dug and carried away for making gunpowder. But many caves have a value apart from that of mere scenic splendor. In the bush country near Te Kiuti in Auckland a huge cavern in which is a wonderful deposit of alabaster, has been recently discovered. Another cave called the Carlsbad cavern, ly hoping that he would do nothing of the kind.

"This," I thought, "is clearly an island inhabited by criminals or madmen. Yet I haven't heard of any convict station nearer than New Caledonia. I give it up." I was almost back on the sea-beach by now; it occurred to me that I might as well slip up one of the palm trees, and see whether there was really anything in this talk of a launch.

The palm I had chosen was tall, but a little bent with age, I had not much difficulty in wriggling my way up into the crown. I waited for clear moonlight, and made my survey.

"Gosh!" I exclaimed. There was undoubtedly a launch, if one may so designate a fine thirty or forty ton boat, schooner rigged, and fitted with an engine; well able to make the run to Valparaiso, or anywhere else, in competent hands. She was lying some way out at sea, on the leeward side of the island, beyond the inner lagoon. I could see a dinghy, like a little black water beetle, creeping landwards from her side.

"That," I thought, "will be Black. I wonder what the two of them will make of it when they get together?" And the thought so intrigued me, that I fell to laughing, and nearly lost my hold.

But when I got down safe to ground again, I was more than sobered by the thought that came almost immediately—"If what he said is true—if he has given a man called Black a thousand pounds, and expenses—Crums, what expenses they'll be!—to run him out of this, there must have been dirty work somewhere, and I'm mixed up in it." I could not help remembering, somewhat unpleasantly, the remark about "five years on the breakwater."

"Omega, I must tell you—but I will tell no more than I must—belongs to a non-British power, which has a short way with offenders against its rather Draconic code of laws. I didn't know what you could be sent to the breakwater for, but I knew there was one, in an out-of-the-way Omeigan port, and I guessed that labor of the Portland island kind, conducted under a tropical sun, was likely to be the kind of thing a wise man should avoid, at any cost.

I thought the matter out at length I could arrive at only one conclusion. Whole knowledge was better than half. Whatever the risks might be of exploring yet further this odd, unpleasant place, it would be well for me to find out as much as possible, as soon as possible and (but that went without saying) get away as soon as possible afterwards.

Once more I climbed the palm; swung out among the clashing stems among the swaying butts of the leaves, and looked for the launch. She was off, a long way out to sea, I saw her gliding, black in the silver path of the moon.

"Good," I thought, and slid down again. A few minutes rapid walking found me once more among the little, sinister houses, with their horned gables and their air of being huddled together for some evil deed. The hut that had been lighted, was dark now. I lit a match, from the small reserve I always kept in a bottle, and looked in. No one was there. The place bore signs of hurried desertion—a stretcher bed overturned, with bed-clothes flung on the ground; a cabin trunk gaped open, and gutted; piles of gray ash suggesting papers destroyed.

In the middle of the floor lay a loincloth and a shirt of coarse cotton, bright yellow, with black spots as big as plates.

I stood in the doorway and looked, till my match burned out. I did not strike another. I walked away, and left the deserted hut to itself. And once more, mastering as a drug, and heavy as a dream, came over me that definite presage of ill.

In the little hollow there were fifteen other houses, all small and rudely built of bush material. I looked at them for a minute, swallowed in my throat—for something very like fear had me—and then, thinking no longer, but driving myself as one used to do "over the top," in the hour after dawn, I found a coconut stump for a torch, lit it, and carried it, flaring furiously in the diminished wind, to the first of the houses. The door was not shut. I held the torch above my head and looked in. I looked for quite a long time at what I saw, making sure that I understood it, and that my eyes had not in any way misled me. Then, dashing out the torch against the ground, I fled for the sea—the clean sea. It seemed to me that to be drowned in that clean sea would be a fate a man needn't quarrel with—a fate ten thousand times better than the horror I had left behind.

ORCHARD GLEANINGS

LOW TEMPERATURE FOR FRESH FRUIT

Products Keep Well Only Within a Limited Range.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Temperature plays a most important part in the storage of many fruits that are shipped to market from distant areas of production. Most fruits keep well only within a rather limited range of temperature. With meats and dairy products the important thing is to keep them cold enough, but many fruits are injured seriously by a temperature only a few degrees lower than the most favorable temperature for storage.

"The life processes of fruits and vegetables," says Dr. Lon A. Hawkins, of the United States Department of Agriculture, in explaining this fact, "are chemical or physical in nature and are governed by chemical and physical laws. According to Van Hoff's law, the rate of a chemical reaction is doubled or tripled for each 18 degrees Fahrenheit rise in temperature. The rate at which the life processes of fruits and vegetables proceed in storage increases as temperature rises."

Doctor Hawkins illustrates the point by giving experience with Bartlett pears. "As a rule," he says, "this fruit will keep twice as long at 31 degrees as at 36 degrees Fahrenheit, twice as long at 36 degrees as at 43 degrees, and twice as long at this temperature as at 53 degrees. In other words, it will keep about eight times as long at 31 degrees as at 53 degrees. At 65 degrees, however, the fruit keeps about as long as at 53 degrees."

Spray Rings Insure High Quality Wisconsin Fruit

Wisconsin's 169 spray rings, with a combined membership of 1,800 persons living in 27 different counties, account for the high quality of Badger apples grown during the season of 1929, according to C. L. Kuehner, extension horticulturist at the Wisconsin College of Agriculture.

"Consistently high yields and favorable prices reward extra effort on the part of farm orchardists," says Kuehner. Wisconsin spray rings, especially emphasizing insect control, disease eradication, orchard fertilization, hand picking, grading, and careful packing have aided the improvement of fruit quality.

Spray rings, in addition to raising the yield and improving the quality of Wisconsin apples, have afforded their members opportunity to pool their resources in purchasing supplies. Consequently considerable savings in the amount of cash that necessarily needs to be expended for the purchase of spray materials, fertilizers, grading machinery, and other orchard supplies have made possible, Kuehner points out.

Work of Honey Bee

The economic importance of the honey bee to the fruit grower was well demonstrated last spring when weather conditions were so bad at blooming time. It is a vital problem. Some varieties are self-sterile, that is, they will not set fruit with their own pollen. If such varieties are planted in large blocks alone, they rarely produce good fruit crops although other factors may be favorable. If you have a large block of one variety rarely can you produce a good fruit crop, due to a lack of pollen from some other variety for cross-pollination.

Horticultural Hints

Line should be purchased and kept in air-tight containers.

Lead arsenate is for the control of the plum curculio, the larvae of which are found in wormy cherries.

If trees are sprayed in full bloom, it may not only injure the bees but also prevent fruit pollination.

Disks and tips for spray guns and nozzles, if kept on hand, will not increase expenses in any way, and may prevent loss of valuable time, or improper application.

Many clean crops of grapes may be grown without following any set spray schedule, but the grower should be on the lookout for trouble and start control measures as soon as insect pests are found.

Apple trees planted 40 feet apart yielded 43 bushels more fruit to the acre than trees spaced 30 feet apart.

The fruit tree leaf roller is generally distributed through the fruit-growing sections and at times becomes so numerous as to be of major importance.

In most orchards there is sure to be some scale present which must be kept under control. Young nonbearing orchards in particular must be watched.

Bride Tells Her Secret

"FOR a young bride of twenty-one to lose her vitality and pep is disastrous, almost a sacrifice," says Mrs. George E. Pillow, of Franklin, Va. "That, however," she continues, "is just what I did."

"I had only been married a few months to an athletic husband, who went everywhere and did everything. I tried to keep up with his pace, and simply collapsed under the strain. I never was really ill; just sallow-skinned, depressed, and lifeless. Swimming, dancing, golf, I just couldn't face them. When I began to lose my clear complexion, I was desperate."

"Then one day a girl friend came to pay me a visit. In the bottom of her little bag of clothes lay a crystal-clear bottle—Nujol! A short woman-to-woman talk—a telephone call to a neighboring drug store—and my future happiness was settled."

"That was a year ago. Now I too am never without Nujol, which has brightened and cleansed my body like a cake of pure soap. I eat, sleep, swim, and hike with the enthusiasm of a child. My complexion is all it used to be—and best of all—I am my husband's little pal again."

The wonderful thing about crystal-clear Nujol is that it is not a medicine; it contains no drugs—it cannot hurt even a baby. It is simply the normal internal lubrication which Beauty, Charm, Clear Skin—How Can They be Won? your body needs. Let Nujol clear the poisons out of your body (we all have them), and flood the sunshine of happiness into your life. It sounds like a fairy tale, but millions of people have proved it. So can you. Get Nujol at any drug store—sold only in sealed packages, with the Nujol trademark. It costs but a few cents and it will make you feel like a million dollars!

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE SALE
 DEFAULT having been made in the performance and payment of a certain mortgage dated April 11, 1924, made and executed by Fielden T. White and Alida E. White, his wife, of Prairie Depot, Ohio, to Linus W. Oviatt of Bay City, Michigan, which mortgage was recorded in the Iosco County Register of Deeds' office on the 5th day of May, 1924, in Liber 22 of Mortgages on page 459, and assigned by an assignment dated May 6th, 1924, to the Bay County Savings Bank of Bay City, Michigan, which assignment was recorded in the Iosco County Register of Deeds' office on May 7th, 1924, in Liber 2 of Mortgage Assignments on page 309; and the sums of $2380.00 as principal, $226.38 as taxes, $30.03 as insurance, and $343.02 as interest on principal, taxes and insurance, being now due, to which is added an attorney fee of $25.00 as provided by the terms of the mortgage, and as no suit or proceedings have been instituted at law to recover the debt now claimed to be due on said mortgage, said mortgage, by virtue of the power of sale therein contained, will be foreclosed by the sale of the premises therein described at public auction at the front door of the court house in the City of Tawas City, County of Iosco, State of Michigan (that being the place where the Circuit Court for the County of Iosco is held) on the seventh day of June, 1930, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, Eastern Standard time, which premises are described as follows:

All that certain piece or parcel of land situated in the Township of Plainfield, in the County of Iosco and State of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit:

The North one-half (N<sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub>) of Northwest one-fourth (NW<sup>1</sup>/<sub>4</sub>) of Section Fourteen (14), Town Twenty-three (23) North and of Range Five East (5E), containing 80 acres more or less, according to the government survey thereof.

Dated March 7th, 1930.

STATE PARK
RULES AND REGULATIONS

Michigan State Parks are open and free to the public. Visitors are welcome to use them for the various activities permitted. In order to prevent abuse and misuse of the privileges offered by these parks the following rules and regulations will be enforced:

1. The destruction or injury of any sign, guide post or property of any kind is unlawful. This includes the peeling of bark, carving and chopping of trees, cutting branches, driving nails, digging ground from roots and the removal of trees, shrubs and plants, picking wildflowers, and other injuries.
2. To carry or have firearms in possession in a State Park is unlawful.
3. Throwing of tin cans, bottles, papers, junk or refuse of any kind on the ground or in a lake or stream; or the misuse and abuse of seats, tables and other park equipment is prohibited.
4. Speed limit for motor vehicles on park roads is 20 miles per hour except where otherwise posted.
5. Dogs in park must be tied with chain or controlled on a leash. They are not allowed to run loose about the park.
6. Vending or peddling in the park is prohibited.
7. Building or starting fires in the open or in any place except where proper provisions have been made or to leave fires while burning is prohibited.
8. Washing or the throwing of waste of any kind around well or spring or the use of woods as toilets or the use of toilets for bath-houses is prohibited.
9. Persons desiring to camp in State Park are required to obtain permit before making camp. A permit will be issued to camp 7 days or less on a single site in parks within Oakland, Livingston, Macomb, St. Clair, Ottawa and Bay counties. The time limit in all other parks will be 15 days on a single site. When time of permit has expired, campers are required to move from the park. To remain longer, permit must be renewed.
10. Camping, horseback riding or driving of automobiles or other vehicles on areas (picnic ground, children's playground, bathing beaches, etc.) posted against such traffic or utilization is prohibited.
11. Camping in the park by boys under seventeen years of age

THE NEW Maytag

The New Maytag Aluminum Washer is the crowning achievement of The Maytag Company. It embodies the skill, the resources and the best ideas of the Maytag organization. It exemplifies the highest development of a domestic washing machine for the home. No other washer so completely fills the need of the housewife. The New Maytag is the result of patient and painstaking engineering skill developed along the lines that would serve the user best. It is impossible here, with mere words, to do the New Maytag justice. The power of description falls short in its effort to give you a graphic picture of this greatest of all washers, to outline its higher qualities and points of greater superiority.
