VOLUME XXXVII

TAWAS CITY, MICHIGAN, FRIDAY, APRIL 18, 1930

TAWAS CITY

Miss Irma Kasischke spent last week end in Utica with relatives. Mrs. Edw. Matthews and children of Oscoda spent a few days this week with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John B. King.

Mrs. Albert Mallon left Thursday for a short visit in Detroit.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Moeller spent Sunday in Caro. They were accompanied by M. H. Barnes.

Bridge lamps and floor lamps for attractive rooms. Barkmans, adv.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Curry, Mr. and Mrs. John Forsten spent Saturday in Bay City.

Mrs. W. H. Fitzhugh returned Sunday from Bay City, where she spent the past few months.

George A. Prescott is spending the week in Detroit.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Glumm and two sons of Lansing came Friday to spend Easter Sunday with Mrs. Glumm's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Neumann.

Scratch feed, $1.99 per 100 lbs.; Lard, 8 lbs., $1.00; Sugar, $5.50 per 100 lbs. A. & P. adv.

Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Musolf and family left Thursday morning for Hastings, where they will visit Mrs. Musolf's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hinman.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dease and daughters spent the week end with relatives in Detroit.

All kinds of bulk and package seeds. Moeller Bros. adv.

Miss Alta Leslie was a week end visitor in Flint.

Mark Beardslee and friend of Detroit were the week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Beardslee.

Gerald Stepanik of Detroit is spending his Easter vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Stepanik.

Are you planning on a new dining room suite? See what we have to offer at Barkmans, adv.

L. H. Braddock returned from Ithaca, where he spent a couple of days.

Michael Coyle, who attends Notre Dame University at South Bend, Ind., is home for the spring vacation.

Miss Nettie Laidlaw of Detroit arrived Friday to spend the week with her sister, Mrs. Robert Murray.

Pride in dress can be expressed in your selection of a new suit at Barkmans, adv.

Miss Freda Hydorn and Bill Hydorn of Bay City are the guests of their aunt, Mrs. Burley Wilson, this week.

Swift Premium and Armour Star Hams. Special. Moeller Bros. adv.

Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Johnson of Newaygo spent Tuesday in the city. They spent a couple of days with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Nixon of Detroit at the latter's cottage on the AuSable-river.

There will be a special meeting of members of the Twentieth Century Club at the home of Mrs. Ray Tuttle on Saturday, April 19, at 2:30. Every member is urged to be present.

Specials in cribs at very attractive prices at Barkmans, adv.

The meeting of the local Parent-Teacher Association which was held last Thursday evening was much enjoyed by those present, but the attendance was poor. Professor Frank E. Robinson of the Central State Teachers' College gave an excellent educational address, and the local parts of the program proved to be exceptionally entertaining. All should come out for the next and last meeting of the year.

Just received a car of Petoskey Portland cement, $2.25 per bbl. Kentucky lump coal at $8.25 per ton, delivered in either town. Iosco Elevator Co. adv.

BOY SCOUTS

The Boy Scouts held their meeting at the Baptist church Monday evening, April 14. Seventeen boys were present. We also had two visitors.

Games were played and then boxing matches were held. Sixty cents in dues were taken up.

Saturday morning twelve scouts walked to East Tawas, where they met the East Tawas scouts, and then all enjoyed a hike to Evans' cottage on Lake Huron.

M. E. CHURCH

Easter subject: "The First Easter Morning." The statement might be a surprise that no other event is supported by stranger evidence than the resurrection of Christ, but such is the fact and upon this fact the Christian rests his hope of immortality.

Sunday evening an Easter pageant will be given by the Epworth League under the sponsorship of Mrs. Ronald Curry.

Good Friday service will be held in the Baptist church, Union service, at 2:00 p. m. Please be prompt. The lecture on the Trial of Jesus should begin at 2:15. This is known as the greatest trial in the history of criminal law. Jesus was tried five times before three judges, acquitted three times, and crucified, but not for the charge of which he had been condemned. The proceedings and errors of the trial will be discussed at length.

All are welcome to these services. Swift Premium and Armour Star Hams. Special. Moeller Bros. adv.

GRANT TOWNSHIP PIONEER DIES SUNDAY

Reuben Smith, pioneer of Grant township, passed away Sunday afternoon, April 13, after many years of ill health. He was 71 years, nine months and 25 days old at the time of death.

The deceased was born in Canada June 19th, 1858. He came to Michigan in 1867, making his home for 26 years in Tawas township, moving to Grant township in 1893, where he has since resided. On January 17th, 1881, he was united in marriage to Charlotte Hyland of Tawas. To this union were born 12 children, all of whom, with the exception of a daughter, Grace, who died ten years ago, survive him.

Those left to mourn his loss are his wife, five sons, Henry at home, Fred, Chester and Clare of Flint, and Roy of Lansing, six daughters, Mrs. Gordon Culham of Cabri, Saskatchewan, Mrs. John VanWagnen of Millington, Mrs. Wm. Herriman of Whittemore, Mrs. John Burt and Mrs. Fred Pfahl of Grant township and Celia Smith at home; two brothers, Andrew of Grant township, and Thad of California, and one sister, Mrs. Ellen Webster of Flint, all of whom, with the exception of Thad Smith, were present at the funeral. Twenty-eight grandchildren and a host of other relatives and friends also survive him.

The funeral services were held Thursday, April 17, from the Hemlock road Baptist church, of which he has been a faithful member for many years. Rev. Frank Metcalf officiating, assisted by Rev. Pearson. Interment was made in Tawas City cemetery.

"Oh, why and whither? God knows all; I only know that he is good; And that whatever may befall Or here or there, must be the best that could.

For he is merciful as just; And so, by faith correcting sight, I bow before his will, and trust How'er they seem he doeth all things right."

SCHOOL NOTES

High School

Irvin Burtzloff, Irwin Schlecte, Delta Leslie, Dorothy Bigelow and Elvera Kasischke recently received membership certificates in the Order of Artistic Typists. These awards are given by the Gregg Writer, a commercial magazine.

There was no school on Friday of this week.

The physician and nurse who will do work in the county under the Children's Fund of Michigan furnished by Senator James Couzens of Detroit, visited us recently. The first work will be the immunization of the pupils against diphtheria by the use of toxin-antitoxin. Cards are being taken home upon which parents must give their written consent before the immunization will be given. It is expected that the children who take the treatment will be free from a serious attack of diphtheria for the remainder of their lives. The cards are being returned in large numbers, and so it is probable that the greater share of the school will have the work done.

We regret to say that the last meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association was not well attended. It was quite evident, in fact, that there was the smallest number present of any meeting of the year. Professor Frank E. Robinson of the Central State Teachers' College gave an excellent talk in regard to education, and it certainly is to be regretted that more were not present to take advantage of the opportunity.

Seventh and Eighth Grades

Jack Mark has been pronounced the winner of the "Health Essay Writing Contest" for our room. The essay will appear later in The Herald. His essay has entered the state contest.

Note—We should also take cognizance of the fact that Jack is now well prepared for the ensuing winter, as he won the pair of gloves which was offered as a prize by C. L. McLean & Co.

Fifth and Sixth Grades

The sixth grade won in the spelling contest last week.

Mrs. Mallon visited our room recently.

The fifth grade Hygiene class is making posters of fruits good to eat.

Primary

We have made many pretty things for Easter.

We learned a song about Easter that we like very much.

June Louise Smith brought us some phonograph records to use.

TO BREAK GROUND MONDAY FOR NEW POST OFFICE

Ground will be broken for the new post office building Monday, stated Charles Moeller. The old building is now being torn down.

The post office is temporarily located in the Prescott building. Dudley Nelem, contractor, says that it will require about six weeks to construct the new building.

TWENTIETH CENTURY CLUB

Mrs. C. F. Smith gave a very interesting and instructive talk on child health at the meeting of the club at the Masonic lobby Saturday, April 12. Mrs. Smith spoke in particular in regard to the care of children during their first and second years, giving excellent advice in the matter of the kinds of food needed during that period.

The club members appreciate Mrs. Smith's excellent talk. Let us remember that May Day is Child Health Day and the slogan for 1930 is "Every Parent and Every Community United for Health for Every Child."

This meeting was the last meeting of the year, taking place on Saturday. We have had an excellent year under the capable leadership of our president, Mrs. Bradlock. Let us begin next year with the determination to do as well or better, and remember that we get out of the organizations to which we belong just what we put into them.

Our next meeting will be the evening of April 24, at the Tawas City high school. At that time Dr. Davis, dentist in the State Health Department, will be with us. We are depending on every club member to be present and as this is an open meeting, invite all your neighbors.

The following evening, April 25, is the annual club banquet and gentlemen's night. This will be given at the Lakeside Tavern. We are asked to get our tickets by April 22.

FIRST ARLEN FILM AN ALL-AROUND THRILLER

"Burning Up," Richard Arlen's first starring picture, which will be shown Sunday and Monday, April 20 and 21, at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, is an all-around good thriller. Kids and grown-ups, young and old will find entertainment in this enjoyable, clean cut action-romance.

"Burning Up" is the story of a likeable, ambitious young man, unwittingly mixed up with a group of ne'er-do-wells, chiefly engaged in crooked promotions. Lovely Mary Brian enters the scene and captures the boy's heart. Then he discovers the unethical and criminal actions of his business companions and their scheme for defrauding the girl's father of a large sum of money. How he defeats their plans and wins the girl is a thrilling story to which only the picture itself can do full justice.

Arlen is his own likable self in this picture. Those who have become acquainted with him in his recent hits, "The Virginian," "The Man I Love," or remember him from the most clean-cut young actors on the American screen, a hero worthy of imitation in every part he plays.

The cast includes four well-known and popular character men, Francis McDonald, Sam Hardy, Tully Marshall and Charles Selton. The fact that A. Edward Sutherland, director of "The Dance of Life" and "Close Harmony," "Fast Company" and "Pointed Heels," made the picture is assurance of good wholesome enjoyment.

RENO

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Latter were overnight visitors with his brother, Byron, and family at Millington Sunday. He attended an insurance meeting at Saginaw enroute home.

Mrs. Harry Sherman was called to Hubbard Lake by the death of her sister one day last week.

Mrs. Haywood of Flint spent a few days with her brother Sherman Johnson, last week.

Miss Clara Latter is spending her Easter vacation at the parental home.

Miss Violet Latter spent the week end with her sister, Mrs. C. Smith, at Flint.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Robinson and son, Carlton, and Mrs. T. Frockins spent the week end in Flint with relatives.

Mrs. Sherman Johnson spent last week in Flint and other points visiting relatives and friends.

Eliza, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Shortt, died at their home Saturday morning after a lingering illness. Obituary next week.

Chas. Thompson and R. A. Bentley were at Tawas on business Monday.

Henry Ransor visited at the Harsch ranch Monday.

Henry Seafert and Miss Ida Hiltz spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Louis Harsch.

Miss Marion Latter was at Bay City on Friday.

I am now taking orders for spring deliveries and markers for spring delivery.

LAST TRAIN RUN OVER ROSE CITY DIVISION

The last scheduled train over the Rose City division of the Detroit & Mackinac railroad was run Tuesday. Extra freights will be run over the division to take care of any unfinished business billed in or out before Thursday. When this business is completed the steel will be removed.

The train crew on the final scheduled run was Joseph Stepanski, conductor; Wm. Berry, brakeman; John Swartz, Sr., engineer; and John Klinger, fireman.

The Rose City division was constructed during the later lumbering days. While much of the pine timber had been floated out to Saginaw bay on the streams and rivers, millions of feet of hardwood and pine were shipped over the line. As the forest products dwindled, the railroad became instrumental in the agricultural and industrial development of the territory and helped to introduce tourists and sportsmen to its beautiful lakes and streams. This partly replaced the business which was lost when the timber disappeared, but with the advent of automobiles and trucks, passenger traffic began to decrease and soon reached the vanishing point and a large inroad was made on the freight business.

About two years ago application was made by the railroad company to the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Public Utilities Commission for an abandonment of the division. This was fought by the residents along the route. They contended that sufficient freight traffic was being maintained to warrant a continuance of the road and that its abandonment would be an irreparable damage to the territory.

About 30 days ago the Interstate Commerce Commission allowed the abandonment of the division as asked for in the petition of the railroad company, maintaining that business did not warrant continuance of the branch.

SUPERVISORS WILL MEET ON TUESDAY, APRIL 22nd

A session of the Board of Supervisors for the county of Iosco was held at Tuesday, April 22, announced County Clerk Frank E. Dease, yesterday.

IOSCO CHURCH SCHOOLS

A most delightful Father and Son, Mother and Daughter banquet was held at the Alabaster church last Monday evening. The young men of the church school sponsored the affair, and had evidently expended much time and effort in providing a delicious menu (which was served by the Ladies Aid), appropriate decorations, and an entertaining program. Much credit is due these young men for planning and carrying out such a successful project.

Hale is arranging for their second annual Vacation Bible School to be held in June. Early plans insure success.

The inter-school contest will close with Easter Sunday. Reports show Alabaster leading in increased total attendance, Hemlock Road second, Whittemore M. E. third, Hemlock Road holds first place in increased attendance of men, Hale M. E. second. Alabaster third. Since many schools will have large attendances for Easter programs, one cannot as yet forecast the contest winners with any degree of certainty.

Arrangements are going forward for Miss Catton's visit May 9th to 13th. Plans include an evening at Hale May 9th; a Keyworkers Conference at the home of Mrs. Helen Shattuck May 10th; an informal "Acquaintance Meeting" of teachers and parents at Tawas City the afternoon of May 11th, and a similar affair at East Tawas in the evening. The various communities are co-operating splendidly and it is hoped every church school may be included in Miss Catton's itinerary.

HERBERT PRATT

Herbert Pratt died Wednesday, April 9, at Charlotte, Mich., after an illness of one week. He was born near Owosso March 2, 1906, and when a youth moved with his parents to Long Lake, where he has always resided until about four weeks ago, when he went to Charlotte to work. After finishing the Long Lake school, he assisted his father on the farm, and his happy disposition and sunny smile won him many friends, who mourn his death.

The funeral services were held at the Adventist church Saturday afternoon, Rev. Alcock of Cedar Lake officiating. Burial at Oak Grove cemetery, South Branch. Besides his father and mother, three sisters, Fannie, Alice and Grace, and one brother, Raymond, survive his passing.

SPORTSMEN TO GATHER AT MIO FRI., JUNE 13

"Four thousand sportsmen will gather on the AuSable river at Mio on June 13 for one of the largest gatherings of sportsmen ever experienced in the state of Michigan. Mio, with the setting it has, is a most ideal location for such a meeting," said R. G. Schreck, secretary of the club, in a communication to The Tawas Herald last Saturday.

"The AuSable river, historically famous as one of the finest fishing streams in Michigan and the forest that extends for miles in each direction from Mio itself, forming one of the finest game countries in existence, has always been appealing to the red-blooded sportsmen. Year after year the sportsmen from all parts of Michigan and elsewhere have congregated at Mio for fishing and hunting. For this reason Mio has been chosen as the place for the annual meeting and banquet of the Tri-County Sportsmen's Club for 1930.

"The directors of the organization met in Mio a few weeks ago and made arrangements for the location, the meeting and the banquet. Prizes ranging from outdoor motors and canoes to anglers, flies and "plunkers" baits will act as a stimulant to those wishing to take part in the many stunts that will be staged on that day. From early morning until late at night action will be the keyword among the sportsmen. There will be fly casting contests, log rolling contests, trap shooting, boat races, swimming races, diving contests, keno games and everything that the sportsman enjoys. Guns, creels, reels, rods, lines, hip boots and hunting knives are among the sportsmen equipment that those who break the jinx of the day and date will carry away. No long speeches will be tolerated at this time and the entire program will be something entirely different from anything staged before by the Tri-County Sportsmen organization. This organization has established a prestige for the type and quality of its annual meetings. Their annual gatherings have been attended by the high officials of Michigan and Washington and has attracted sportsmen from every portion of the state.

"The evening's program will be staged in a large tent procured for the occasion. The grounds and tent will be lighted by the Consumers Power Company. The evening program will be snappy and interesting. Several bands will furnish the music during the day and during the banquet.

THE STORY

On a pleasure trip in eastern waters, Philip Amory, English World War veteran, now a trader on the island of Papua, New Guinea, plunges overboard to save the life of a musical comedy actress, known as "Gin-Sling." Amory becomes interested in Pia Laurier, member of a wealthy New South Wales family. He tells her of his knowledge of a wonderful gold field on the island, though he does not disclose the name of the place. "Gin-Sling" tells him Pia is engaged to Sir Richard Fanshaw. Amory, however, is confident that the girl is not indifferent to him. His holiday ended, he arrives back at Daru. He meets an Englishman, Spicer, there on development business for a syndicate of which Fanshaw is head. Fanshaw's name recalls to Amory a long-forgotten incident in which he witnessed the escape of Fanshaw from a leper colony. He tells his friend Bassett about it.

"It's not what you would call material to the evidence," I answered Bassett. "But you can take it so if you like."

"Very well. Do you know where her parents are?"

"Could find 'em, I suppose." "The only thing to do is to tell them. Mind, they may not believe you. The story's thin, and I daresay they know you are gone on the girl yourself."

"The mother does, and she'd poison me if she could," was my reply. "What if the marriage is coming off immediately?"

"It couldn't," pointed out Bassett, "if he's going on this trip—but if you have any uneasiness on that point, you can go to Thursday island and send a wireless."

"For all Australia to read?"

"Cross to Cape York and get the land line."

"I don't mind," said I thoughtfully, "if I do. You see—it may seem foolish, but I can't help fearing she might be attracted to the country. She's dead nuts on hearing about it."

"Don't forget, Black Sheep," said Bassett (and I knew by the nickname, that he wanted to say much he would certainly leave unsaid; much kindness, much consideration for that which could not be helped or consoled) "Don't forget that there's such a thing as a law of libel; if you make mistakes, you may have to pay for them very dearly."

"I'll pay anything and everything," I said, rising. "I'll pay my life if I have to. Thanks. I'll do as you suggest. The sooner I can get to T. I."

There I stopped, halting in the middle of my walk to the door. A sound had checked me.

"What was that?" I said to the R. M. in a low voice. I had thought I heard a noise, just under my feet; a sneeze—suppressed, yet audible—not coming from outside.

We stood, two figures turned to stone, and listened. I don't know what Bassett thought I had heard; maybe the beginning of a revolt among the man-eater and murderer prisoners, lightly confined in a wooden jail some few score yards away; maybe the movements of some half-crazed native, oppressed with the strange Vaiala madness that has filled a few hurried graves, in Papua's West.

"There's nobody," said Bassett. I did not answer him. I made a sudden dart for the steps, down the steps, under the house, where eight foot high piles made a little forest of darkness and secrecy, beneath the Residency floors. There was nobody there. But in the garden, the peering water-logged moon showed me a spray or two of the hibiscus hedge in sudden, agitated motion.

I jumped the hedge, and came down unexpectedly on something large and dusky, that heaved beneath my feet, and threw me off, as a bucking outlaw throws its rider; I fell, recovered myself, and saw, down the croton avenue, a man running away. He was tall and thin, and he ran in a flat-footed, heavy, plunking manner that instantly suggested to me two large, flat feet I had seen earlier in the evening.

"Spicer!" I said to myself, and gave chase.

It had begun to rain again, the paths were slippery, and the crash of falling water on drenched and down-beaten leaves, made noise enough to cover any retreat. Using my torch, I caught a glimpse of the fugitive, lost him, thought I saw him again, and finally pulled up on the beach road, near the trader Maidstone's, alone.

We aren't formal, in Western Papua. I went at once and knocked at Maidstone's door. "Who's sick?" was his first query. "Who it is?"

"Amory," I answered. "Nobody's sick. Is your boarder in?"

"He's not a boarder, we don't take boarders," was Maidstone's answer. "If you mean the nut who blew in today, he's in bed."

"Sure?" "Maidstone disappeared. Well, now, it's a queer thing," he commented, coming back and standing, an odd, pajama'd figure, on the soaked veranda boards, which reflected his bare feet like ice. "He's not there— Eh, what are you d—ning him for? What's he done?"

"I don't know what he hasn't done," I answered, furiously, for now I was almost sure this Spicer, the creature of Fanshaw, had overheard every word I said to Bassett. "Break his neck when he comes in, or chuck him to the alligators; it's the best thing you can do with him."

"Well, now, the wife wouldn't like any rudeness," answered Maidstone placidly. "I suppose he's got a right to go in the house, or out of the house, as he likes. You go back to your store, Phil Amory; you'd ought to be in bed. Good-night."

I did not go to bed. I went back to Bassett's. "Bassett," I said, bolting up the staircase. "That brute of a Spicer chap was underneath the house."

"You go to bed, Amory, and let other people go," he answered. "You're fanciful."

"I saw him, I tell you," was my angry response. "Running away among the mangoes. And Maidstone said he wasn't there."

"Tackle him yourself tomorrow morning," counseled Bassett. "Aren't you going to let anyone on the island go to sleep? Be off, Black Sheep, or I'll arrest you."

"I can tell you this," was my parting shot, "there's no power in Papua will get me to Thursday island now."

Nevertheless, when morning came, I began to think differently. I went to Maidstone's as early as possible. Spicer was lounging on the veranda, in Mrs. Maidstone's special chair, with a tin of Maidstone's special cigarettes at his elbow. Maidstone's boy was busy fetching him matches, soda water, another cushion for his head, a magazine to read. Mrs. Maidstone, in the background, was flying about, busy and energetic as usual. Slim, blue-eyed, pretty in a belated schoolgirl sort of fashion, this middle-aged woman of the outback was a constant wonder to me. She had seen and done almost all that the hardest cases in West Papua had seen and done—run risks, in earlier days, that made one's heart stand still to think of; nursed many a man through accident or fever; laid out and dressed for burial some of them. She had taken in houseless strangers, until the small profits of the store were eaten into almost beyond bearing. She had lived hard, and known no luxury, for years; faced danger like a man, and done a woman's work. Withal, she was the merriest thing in Western Papua, and, but for a line or two, and a gray hair or two, you might have given her five-and-twenty years.

I jumped straight into the heart of things, which habit is one of my most incurable faults. But what! life is short—I'd rather jump into now and then a hidden swamp, than spend days painfully walking round dusty roads.

"Do you mind telling me," I said, "what you were doing under the R. M.'s house last night?"

I expected a plain denial, more or less angry. But Spicer was too clever for that.

"Oh, come now," he answered, with a man-of-the-world air, and something like a wink. "You can't expect me to give an account of my wanderings about this very fascinating island, after dark. No, Black Sheep, I can't let you baa-baa at me; leave that to the missionaries."

I could have knocked him off the veranda, with the utmost satisfaction; I am not sure that I shouldn't have done it, in spite of Mrs. Maidstone's presence, if something had not told me to move carefully, keep a look-out for red herrings trailed across the track.

"My name is Amory," I said. "What were you doing?"

He made as if to dig me in the ribs with a white, splayed forefinger; I think the look in my eyes made him draw it back, for never, without actually doing it, was I nearer to smashing in any man's face, in my life.

"Naughty, naughty," was what he said. "Ladies present."

Mrs. Maidstone—I don't know how—managed to melt away.

"Really," I said. "I have my reasons, which I dare say—" (for I was beginning to think he hadn't heard anything) "you know nothing about. I saw you, if not under the house, certainly close to the R. M.'s in the middle of last night, and when I chanced you, you ran away."

"You bet I did," said Spicer with a giggle. "Thought you were the enraged husband, for a flyer."

"Bassett isn't married," I told him. "The warden is," he sniggered. "Very pretty wife, too."

Now this bewildered me, for I did know Taluna, the wife of the native warden, and I had seen her, only a week before, brought up in court by her husband, in connection with a charge of "stealing" her, which he was making against another native. Taluna was no saint, and for a Papuan, she was unusually good looking. It was also true that the warden's house was within a stone's throw of the place where I had stumbled over Spicer.

I didn't know what to think. Mrs. Maidstone came back at that moment, with a tray of glasses, interrupting—I fancied, deliberately—the conference. She offered us whisky; I took two fingers of it; Spicer took some more soda water. It added to my dislike of him. I have always held that there's as likely as not to be something wrong about either a teetotaler or a non-smoker; if not wrong, half-baked. . . . Granted, that there are exceptions. Spicer I did not take to be an exception.

I knew that Bassett, who was shrewd enough, thought I had been wrong in supposing Spicer to be listening under the house. I knew, too, that he did not tell me—that a man who is overwrought, excited, and begins to fancy himself spied upon, may be in rather a bad way. Perhaps it was Mary Maidstone who gave the final stroke to my suspicions.

"Are you two done quarreling?" she asked gaily, as I put away the tray I had taken from her hands. "And if you are, can I ask you, Phil, when you're going across again? I want you to do me an errand."

"Across," meant the trip of 120 miles, from this near point of Papua, to Australia.

"It depends," I answered her, "on Mr. Spicer."

"How, on me?" asked Spicer brusquely.

"I heard," I answered him evenly, "that you wanted a number of boys recruited. I have a good cutter and know the villages. I'd be glad to make you a price."

"If he heard me," my thought ran, "if he knows that I'm off as fast as I can go to put a spoke in Fanshaw's wheel, he'll try and keep me here; nothing simpler."

But Spicer, it seemed, did not want me to stay.

"There's no hurry," he said patronizingly. "Take your time. I shall stay here another three weeks," (I saw Mary Maidstone make a face of dismay, behind his back) "I'm waiting for the 'Papuan Chief' to bring the rest of the members of the expedition along. Of course I am leader, next to Sir Richard, and I have all the organizing in my hands. If you want to run across, don't mind me. Thursday Island—Thirsty Island—every one knows it." He laughed rudely, and looked at my emptied glass.

Now, I am not a drinking man, if I do once in a way shift a glass before the sun's over the yard. I felt, once again, exceedingly inclined to pick a quarrel with this Spicer; once again, remembered that I could not afford to do so, if I wished to make sure of certain things.

"Very well," I said, watching his face. "I'll start across today—anchor at Cap, and get in early tomorrow. Mrs. Maidstone, if you've any commissions, I'll be delighted to attend to them."

"Right you are," answered my hostess cheerfully, with something of her gay schoolgirl manner coming back. "Just a sec, and I'll give you my list." She went off into the store, and Spicer, who had not altered by so much as a line the expression of his large, flat countenance, took the cigarette out of his mouth to remark—

"Good trip to you." It was a dismissal, somewhat in the royal manner. I held myself in from answering him as I wished, and followed Mary Maidstone.

Hotels in Thursday island—of which there are a surprising number—are never the same, twice visited. Proprietors, managers and manageresses, vary almost as the seasons go. The Grand Cosmopolis, where I put up, looked much as usual, there was a desolate big dining room, with a pilot eating his lunch, slowly and contentedly, as pilots do, alone.

Great Writers Worked Under Odd Conditions

A new game for the students of the history of literature, writes the Paris correspondent of the London Observer, is to examine the physical conditions under which famous writers did their work. For some, tobacco was indispensable. Verlaine used to smoke almost incessantly. So did Francois Coppee, and Huysmans was a great cigarette smoker. Both of these men also found the society of cats a stimulant to their inspiration, as did Theophile Gautier and Baudelaire. The story and vigorous Jean Hiephen, who reproached Paul Bourget for drinking nothing but water, used to do twenty minutes of gymnastic exercise before sitting down to work, and Mistral could only write poetry after a sharp walk. Ernest Renan used to stare into the palm of his hand as if his ideas came from there. Balzac, who could eat with a gargantuan appetite when he had finished working, needed the help neither of wine nor tobacco, which he detested, although Lamartine falsely accused him of showing teeth blackened by the nicotine of cigars. Chateaubriand when he dictated to his secretary, used to walk barefoot up and down the cold stone floor of his room.

Largest Plane in the World

Photograph shows the new giant Italian airplane Caproni 6000, which is the largest plane in the world; larger than the famous DO X. It is designed and built for military purposes, but with special arrangements can be fitted for long-distance passenger service. It is an all-steel tube plane with a semi-thick wing section, fitted with six Isotta Fraschini engines of 1,000 horse power each. On a recent test flight it established six new world's records.

NEW DEVICE GUIDES PLANE THROUGH FOG

Contrivance Adaptation of Plan Used During War.

Chicago.—A new device designed to guide airplanes through darkness and fog, the bugaboos of all airmen, was given its first public demonstration recently by its inventor, Earl C. Hanson, at the Ford Transport exhibit in the One Hundred and Thirty-first regiment armory.

The demonstration followed a year of secret tests conducted at the Ford airport at Lansing, Ill., where planes using the new equipment installed there were directed through bad weather and brought to the ground through the use of the invisible "pilot."

Mr. Hanson, a Chicagoan, explained that the new contrivance is an adaptation of the device used by the allies during the war to tap the enemies' wires. It is now being used in harbors to guide ships along treacherous channels and through thick fog, he said.

Aviation experts who inspected the miniature device installed at the armory proclaimed it one of the foremost developments in the efforts being made to combat the dangers of flying in conditions of poor visibility, a source of peril for air travelers.

Mr. Hudson's device is based on the principle of electro-magnetic induction. Two series of energized cables are laid on the ground leading to an airport. The cables are parallel and each series gives off a signal code, one a series of dashes and the other a series of dots, so that a pilot flying into a fogbound field picks up a continuous signal by flying a middle path between the cables. This signal grows in intensity until the plane reaches the edge of the field where another loop of cables, called the "gun coil," gives the signal to cut motors and glide to a landing.

Besides providing a steady and continuous directional signal, the cable also gives the pilot an exact reading of his actual height above the ground—a distinct improvement over the present altimeter. The altitude and directional readings may be transmitted to the pilot by head phones, calibrated meter or by a system of lights on the instrument board.

Adds to Directional Beacon.
Last year saw the development of the radio directional beacon for guiding pilots along the air lines, but there previously has been no simple, dependable means evolved to direct the flyer through thick fog to a landing after he has arrived over the airport of his destination.

The cable system is not limited to its use to airport approaches, according to the inventor. He explained that through the aid of cables laid across country, pilots will be able to follow a course over the most treacherous mountains, being able to keep to a direct course and at a safe altitude by the continuous invisible path set up by signals.

Control Is Invented for Airplane's Wings

Flint, Mich.—George Gardner, Flint engineer, has sent an operating model of his new mechanical airplane wing control to Dr. Alexander Kleim, head of the aeronautics school at New York university, for wind tunnel tests.

Gardner's invention would make it possible for a pilot to adjust the angle of his wings to suit his movements in the air. Both wings move as a unit, their angle being changed as the plane moves through the air by a lever in the cockpit. The wings may be locked in any position by means of a brake which can withstand terrific air pressure, according to Gardner. Steel tubing extends through the center of both wings and fuselage for strength. Gardner believes his invention will make it possible to pull planes out of dives and spins and will improve take-offs and load carrying ability. For night flying a set of lights is provided to inform the pilot of the exact adjustment of the wings.

NEED 10,000 PILOTS FOR MILITARY DUTY

Army Air Chief Believes in Preparedness.

Washington.—For a major emergency the United States should have 10,000 trained military pilots upon whom it could call for immediate service, in the opinion of Maj. Gen. James E. Fechet, chief of the army air corps. Of this number there should be 2,500 in actual service in the regular army, he believes.

In testifying before a subcommittee of the house appropriations committee during consideration of the War Department appropriations bill, General Fechet declared that there are only 4,000 first-class pilots in the country who are fit for military service without special training. These men are in the army and navy air services or are kept in continuous training through the reserve system. There are 1,064 reserve pilots ready for emergency duty, he said.

The ordinary commercial pilot who has had no military training is not available for emergency duty, General Fechet pointed out. Before he can be used he must be given a general military training. Many commercial flyers never can be qualified as military pilots because they fail to possess qualifications which a fighting pilot must have, but which are not required for ordinary flying.

The military pilot must fly instinctively and not mechanically, he declared. He must be able to fly tight, close formations and to carry out his work without endangering the other men.

"Some men," said the air corps chief, "cannot fly that way, because they just absolutely cannot fly close. Their nervous makeup prevents them from doing it. Others, when they are close, are so occupied in watching the other ships that they make poor formation flyers."

In addition, the military pilot must know the use of machine guns, the use of bomb sights and the dropping of bombs, aerial photography and observation work. He must have military training, ground work on engines and instruments and navigation. He must know enough of military tactics and operation to co-operate intelligently with ground forces. Many commercial pilots would require from two to eight months' training to become good military pilots, General Fechet estimated.

Montana Claims First Aerial Sheep Herder

First the name of Ear Vance was synonymous with aviation in Montana; then it became in the last few years associated with sheep raising, a highly remunerative pursuit with prevailing wool prices.

Now the erstwhile Miles City (Mont.) pioneer pilot has brought his two loves together, and he is an aerial-sheep herder.

Vance in his idle moments runs the principal air taxi service there. He also owns several flocks of "woolies." But his sheep, as all other good sheep do in the Rockies, have a habit of straying, so Earl hops in his single-seater biplane and goes a-hunting. To date he has recaptured three recalcitrant bands of sheep that strayed from their grazing grounds.

"They're the easiest things in the world to spot from the air," remarks Vance. "I don't know the especial baa-ba of my bands, but if I see a bunch that is in a pocket of the mountains alone, I know darned well they are mine."

Parachute Jumping Curbed

Strict regulation of parachute jumping has been decreed by the state aeronautics commission of Pennsylvania. Hereafter no pilot or airplane licensed by the commission will be permitted to carry as a passenger a parachute jumper or person intending to jump for exhibition purposes who is not equipped with an approved type parachute properly packed and an approved reserve parachute properly packed.

Doctor's PRESCRIPTION when system is sluggish; costs nothing to try

When your bowels need help, the mildest thing that will do the work is always the sensible choice. Take a laxative that a family doctor has used for all sorts of cases of constipation. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is so pleasant to the taste, so gentle in its action, it is given children of tender age and yet it is just as thorough and effective as stronger preparations. Pure senna, and harmless laxative herbs; ingredients that soon start a gentle muscular action. Avoid a coated tongue, bad breath, bilious headaches, etc. Every drug store has Dr. Caldwell's famous prescription in big bottles. Or just write Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, Monticello, Ill., for a free trial bottle.

Prized Volumes in Museum

Two rare volumes, one a perfectly preserved copy of Josephus' "De Antiquitate Judaica et de Bello Judaico," printed by Jo Schussler at Augsburg in 1470, about 14 years after the printing of the Gutenberg Bible, are in the St. Louis Art museum. The other volume is a copy of the "Hyperotomachia Poliphili," written by Columna and printed by Aldus Manutius at Venice in 1499.

Relaxations

"Do you think a man of great public responsibility ought to permit himself the diversions of ordinary humanity?"

"Certainly," replied Senator Sorghum. "There is nothing more sensible than a little nonsense at the right time and place."

Restless Children

Children will fret, often for no apparent reason. But there's always one sure way to comfort a restless, fretful child. Castoria! Harmless as the recipe on the wrapper; mild and bland as its tastes. But its gentle action soothes a youngster more surely than some powerful medicine that is meant for the stronger systems of adults.

That's the beauty of this special children's remedy! It may be given the tiniest infant—as often as there is any need. In cases of colic, diarrhea, or similar disturbance, it is invaluable. But it has everyday uses all mothers should understand. A coated tongue calls for a few drops to ward off constipation; so does any suggestion of bad breath. Whenever children don't eat well, don't rest well, or have any little upset—this pure vegetable preparation is usually all that's needed to set everything to rights. Genuine Castoria has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper. Doctors prescribe it.

Says Men Want Pals, Not Patients!

SHE was engaged! She was the happiest girl in the world. A round of teas and parties, a whirl of pleasure, and she began to wonder what was the matter. Too tired to go out—and he—was he becoming tired of her?

It was at this point that Miss Margaret Belden of Los Angeles woke up to the fact that something had to be done about it. "Men want pals, not patients" she writes. "I went right to my doctor. Do you know what he said? Rest—and Nujol!"
"With a prayer in my heart and Nujol in my medicine cabinet I began to fight back to being the healthy, robust, happy girl I had been before. Two months passed. No more tears—no more worrying, no more bad dreams. Today I beat him on the tennis court, and although he can out-swim me, I make him work doing it. It's good to be happy. It's good to be free, physically, and be able to share, any time, in sports or dancing or anything else with the one you love!"
Here's another one who has learned that the simplest and surest way to be well and full of good spirits is to clear the bodily poisons out of your system regularly. Not with powerful drugs, but normally, naturally, easily. Doctors and nurses recommend such a natural treatment as Nujol, because this crystal-clear liquid isn't a medicine at all! It cannot harm even a little baby! It contains absolutely no drugs. It is simply internal lubrication that your body needs like any other machine. Good looks and good spirits—do they spell popularity? You know they do! Get a bottle of Nujol tonight in any drug store. Sold in sealed packages only—trademarked "Nujol." Insist on Nujol by name. It costs but a few cents—and it will make you feel like a million dollars.

CURLYHEAD WON THE BEAUTY PRIZE

(By D. J. Walsh.)

KATHERINE MORLEY was perched high on a step-ladder washing windows. She had got round to the back of the house where the glass was dirtiest, for the thick, black smoke of the factory was often whipped by the north wind right against this side of the house. But since this factory furnished the Stowells' living no complaint was ever made. Mr. Stowell was factory boss. And Mrs. Stowell was Katherine's boss.

Katherine did not sing at her work because she was always too busy dreaming a dream that was still sweet, although it did not seem to be any nearer realization than it had when her father died, two years before. That was when she had started in to work for the Stowells. The dream was wholly ingenious. In it Katherine always saw herself keeping a bang-up little millinery store, to which pretty ladies came flocking. Of course, she wore her own hats; that was good advertising. And she looked fine in them, too.

"Hello, Curlyhead!" Katherine looked down from her perch and saw Philo Mason, whose father kept a market garden. Philo had a big basket of fresh green lettuce on each arm.

"Want some of this here?" he demanded.

"How much a bunch?" Katherine was wary. Mrs. Stowell left most of the marketing to her and she had to account for every cent expended.

"Five cents." "I'll take two bunches. Wait till I get the money. I ought to give you a slap instead," she said as she gave Philo the coin. "I've told you times enough not to call me Curlyhead. It makes me hoppin' mad."

"Say! I think your hair's pretty, Katherine," the lad said, earnestly. "I don't do it to be mean. My sister, Dorothy, would be tickled pink if she had hair that curled like yours. Say! You heard about the beauty contest? Look here."

Philo drew a scrap of paper from his pocket and spread it out before Katherine's eyes. "This tells all about it. I brought it to give to you. Dorothy's going into it and a lot of the girls she knows. Not one of 'em's as pretty as you are. See what it says. All you got to do is to send in your photograph. And if the judges give you the prize you get a thousand dollars, clean cash."

It was late afternoon before Katherine got a bit of time for herself. She sat down in her room and read the paper Philo had given her. It wasn't a beauty contest, it was an advertising contest. The best-looking photograph would be used to promote the enterprise.

"I wouldn't stand a show beside Dorothy Mason and those girls," sighed Katherine. But a thousand dollars. That would mean the realization of the dream.

Katherine looked down at her small calloused hands. She sighed. Then she plunged into a bureau drawer and brought forth a photograph. She wrapped it carefully and took the small parcel to the nearest drug store, where she could get it weighed and stamped. Then she dropped it into the mail box and went home.

That night when she was serving cake and pink ice cream to Mrs. Stowell's guests Katherine stubbed her toe or caught her heel or something. But down she flopped with a tray of ice cream. And the ice cream slid all over the new Persian rug. Some of it got on the tail of Mrs. Winchell's green crepe. It was a mess. And only half the company served.

Katherine cleaned up as well as she could, sent for more ice cream, apologized to Mrs. Winchell. Then she went back to the kitchen and leaned against the hot water boiler and cried. When she broke the cut glass salad bowl Mrs. Stowell had taken it out of her wages. That rug had cost $87 at a bargain. Eighty-seven dollars! And she got only $6 a week.

Her fears were warranted. After the guests had departed Mrs. Stowell took her in hand. Mr. Stowell good-naturedly took her part. He said he'd send the rug to the cleaner's and it would come home nice as new.

"I ought to fire you," flamed Mrs. Stowell. She always said that. But she wouldn't. Because she could never get another Katherine at $6 a week.

Things had been said that hurt way deep down in Katherine's heart. She wanted to say: "You don't have to fire me. I'm going anyway." But she didn't dare. Where would she go? She had no relatives. No, she'd have to stay and put up with what she got.

She got plenty for the next few days. Then the rug came home nice as new. But Mrs. Stowell could never get over the humiliation of seeing Katherine sprawling in a mass of pink ice cream before the high-nosed Winchells. In consequence she bore on a little harder than she had ever done before.

One evening Katherine was called into the living room. She found Mr.

and Mrs. Stowell staring at the evening newspaper. There was the picture of a laughing girl with bright eyes flaring forth from a mass of curls. The headline was: "Miss Katherine Morley Wins Prize."

"Well, say! I congratulate you, Katherine," said Mr. Stowell. "My wife sent in her picture. So did every woman in town, I guess. And you beat them to it. What are you going to do about it, Katherine?"

Katherine stared white-faced, big-eyed at her own face, her own name there before her. Then, like a flash, she was out of the room, running upstairs to her room. On her battered bureau lay the thin parcel which she knew was her picture returned to her. It had come in the afternoon's mail and she hadn't had the heart to open it or look at the letter that had accompanied it. She had known that it was no use from the start. Now, with trembling hands, she tore open the letter. The first thing she saw was a blue slip of paper made out in four significant figures.

Katherine's dream was realized. She got her hat shop, the Katherine hat shop. It seemed she had a flare for chic which brought her immediate popularity. Even Mrs. Stowell once bought a hat there. Katherine waited upon her.

"I hardly knew you, Katherine," remarked Mrs. Stowell.

"I hardly know myself," replied Katherine, smiling. "But I believe I do know hats. How about this beret, Mrs. Stowell? Off the face designs are popular this season. And I think you will find it becoming."

Nothing Peculiar About Downfalls of Red Rain

A shower of red rain fell not so very long ago in the south of France. While this strange phenomenon aroused considerable fear among the superstitious rural French, scientific knowledge has found reasonable and entirely harmless solutions for such anomalies.

The catalogue of things alleged to have fallen in these mysterious showers is a long one. It includes fishes, frogs, rats, mice, serpents, insects, grain, honey, manna, sulphur, ink, milk, and—most frequently of all—blood.

Stories of bloody rain are related by Homer, Virgil and several Roman historians. Plutarch speaks of showers of blood following great battles and asserts that bloody vapors, distilled from the bodies of the slain, impregnated the clouds, from which they were subsequently shed on the earth.

Gregory of Tours declared that a shower of blood fell over Paris in the year 482 A. D., when "many people had their clothes stained with it and cast them off in terror." The same phenomenon was observed at Brescia for three days and three nights before the death of Pope Adrian II in the year 872. Another three-day shower of blood is said to have occurred in France and Germany in March, 1171.

In 1699 one of these "blood rains" took place at Châtillon-sur-Seine. "There fell in various parts of the town," says the "History of the Academy of Science," "a sort of rain, or reddish liquid, thick, viscous and foul-smelling, which resembled a rain of blood. The prints of great drops of it were observed on walls; it was this fact that led to the belief that this rain was made of stagnant, muddy water raised by a whirlwind from some pond in the neighborhood."

Although the non-miraculous nature of red rains was thus suspected at a comparatively early date, they continued to be a source of terror to the ignorant majority of Europeans until a generation or so ago, while even in scientific circles some curiously erroneous notions concerning them prevailed down to the middle or latter part of the Nineteenth century.

Ancient Scissors
A pair of scissors, said to be 250 years old, has been acquired by the Guildhall (London) museum. The scissors were discovered behind some old paneling in the house known as Queen Elizabeth's lodge in Epping forest. They were covered with rust, but when this was removed it was found that they had a mark stamped on each blade. This maker's mark consists of a heart above a monogram of the combined letters T and E, and a reference to the records of the Cutlers' company has established the fact that this heart was assigned as a trade mark to Thomas Elliott in 1673 or 1674. The scissors, therefore, belong to the time of Charles II.

Utility First Consideration
There is an error in mixing up utility and culture as chief ends and aims. After all, we have to recognize that utility is the first and most important consideration in the business of living. The supplying of our physical needs and wants is indispensable. Culture, which is the understanding that enables us to enjoy the finer things of life, is also of the utmost importance, but in our pursuit of that we neglect the utilities we shall soon find ourselves on the toboggan slide to a swift finish.—Providence Journal.

Nerve System in Plant
Perhaps plants have nervous systems and hereafter may be treated by neurologists, says Popular Science Monthly. In experiments with the large cells of the water plant Nitella, Dr. W. J. V. Osterhout of the Rockefeller Institute has found evidence of nerve currents similar to those of animal muscle and nerve. His experiments were conducted with the aid of an ingenious electrical apparatus which was able to detect minute electrical variations within the cells of the plant.

LACE BEDECKS EVENING MODE; 1930 MILLINERY IS STUNNING

THERE is magic in the word lace. Speak of it when, or where, or how, the mere mention of lace never fails to carry a message of the exclusively and prettily feminine. And so, in this season of "feminine" fashions it follows as the day the night, that stylists everywhere have turned with unbounded enthusiasm to lace as the logical expression of the trend of the mode.

The most ravishing frocks at the Paris openings this spring were fashion-

"different." The majority of them are of beguiling and exotic straws and—they are worn for the most part set back on the head so as to show the hair!

The fact that crowns are so very shallow this season is a very significant one. They are made that way on purpose, for the new movement, as said before, is to wear the hat back on the head, so as to lift the brim from the brow.

Even the close-fitting bonnet types, ioned of lace. Not only was lace featured for evening wear, but its adaptability to daytime occasion was accentuated in most charming tailored ensembles, whose colorings were lovely beyond words.

When Dame Fashion visioned flowing sleeves and flowing hemlines for the coming months she must have had lace in mind as a means of making her dreams come true. You can see by the frock in the picture how gracefully lace yields to the lilt and the swerve of lines which interpret the newer lengthened silhouettes. This stunning gown is of blue lace, for blues of every degree are carrying the honors for both day and evening wear. This exquisite French model carries out the closely-fitted bodice, placing accent on sleeves of medieval inspiration.

The newest thing in lace fashioning is to make the upper part of the gown of chiffon or net that transparent lit-after the style of the first model in the group below, feature shallow crowns, giving a lilt and a tilt to the brim quite unlike that of the clothes of old. A front view of this chapeau gives a most fascinating glimpse of a face framed in soft wavy tresses. The bow at the back is a very smart trimming theme for this season.

The off-the-face hat to the right at the top of the illustration likewise has one of the new shallow crowns. The colorful little feather motif at the side is just such as is noted on many of the spring straws—especially on Paris imports.

And brims! They are that picturesque, some of them, they are almost spectacular. From medium to enormous dimensions in their range. Many of them are beautifully transparent, for the new lace straws are that airy fairy they look as if they were too fragile to be practical. That is where they are deceiving, for the presence is not detected except at close range. This treatment results in entrancing effects, as the gown in the picture bears witness.

Ever so many of the smartest evening lace dresses center interest at the back, where flowing capes arranged in picturesque fashion add infinite grace to the silhouette.

The New Millinery.
In Vanity fair the stage is "all set" for a glorious millinery season, full of frills and all things lovely and prettily feminine—such as has not been the privilege of women to enjoy for years and years.

The hats are stunning, they are bewitching, they are flattering, they are lace being actually made of straw is really very substantial.

In the instance of the picturesque creation here pictured, the modiste has added a halo of transparent straw lace to the diminutive brim of an exquisite panama straw bonnet, the entire being in a radiant brown to harmonize with the capucine coloring in the chiffon of which the gown is made. The bow at the side is of turquoise velvet ribbon. And hereby hangs a tale, to the effect that Paris modistes declare there really must be a touch of turquoise somewhere about the chapeau that is to top frocks of flowery chiffon this summer.

MY WHAT A SNOWY WASH, MRS. KING. HOW DO YOU DO IT?

"I don't scrub" says Mrs. King

"YOU'LL be surprised to know I haven't used a washboard in years. Why should I—when Rinsol soaks clothes whiter. And saves them from getting that scrubbed-out look. 'On washday, I let Rinsol's creamy suds do all the work. Rinsol is all I ever use—no other soap—no softener. My wash comes so white, I don't even boil. Rinsol is wonderful!'"

Safe, economical suds
You can trust your finest cottons and linens to Rinsol. The makers of 38 washing machines recommend it.

Even in hardest water, Rinsol's suds are thick, creamy, lasting. And it's all you need in tub or washer. A real thrift-soap; gives twice as much suds, cup for cup, as the lightweight, puffed-up kinds.

Great for dishes, too—for floors, walls, bathtubs, linoleum—and all cleaning Get the BIG package.

Odd Electrical Discharge

St. Elmo's fire is the glow accompanying the brushlike discharges of atmospheric electricity which usually appear as a tip of light on the extremities of pointed objects, such as a church tower or the masts of ships, during stormy weather. It is commonly accompanied by a crackling or fizzing noise. The name St. Elmo is an Italian corruption through Saut' Ermo or St. Erasmus, the patron saint of Mediterranean sailors, who regarded St. Elmo's fire as the visible sign of his guardianship.

You Can Beat the Life Out of Rugs and Carpets, but --- You Cannot Beat CLEANNESS Into Them

IT has been tried for years and cannot be done. No amount of whacking will beat all the dirt or any of the stains from rugs and carpets. Why flog your floor coverings within an inch of ruination? Why raise a whirlwind of dust for the family and neighbors to consume?

When we clean your carpets and rugs by our Special Shampoo Process you can see and feel cleanness all over, all through. Dirt and grease spots are dissolved and washed away by pure soap and water. The Shampoo process is gentle, harmless and thorough. It cannot wear, tear, discolor or loosen the fibers of the finest rug. Shampooing leaves only brightness and cleanness to show where dirt has been.

We Will Take as Much Care in Shampooing Your Rugs As If They Were Our Own

WE cannot give you more assurance or a safer guarantee than this. When you entrust your rugs and carpets to our shampoo process your work is placed in safe hands. WRITE OR PHONE US TO CALL.

Defining Boundaries

To beat the bounds means to trace out by perambulation the bounds of a parish by striking with a rod certain points in passing by way of calling to witness. This is an old custom still kept up in many English parishes by going around the boundaries on Holy Thursday, or Ascension day. In Scotland beating the bounds is called riding the marches.

What's a stack of hotcakes got to do with a GARDEN?

HOTCAKES just off the griddle are at their tenderest. Then's the time to eat them—when they're hot. And vegetables just from a garden are at their tenderest. Then is the time to eat them, too—when the radishes are solid, crisp. When the tomatoes sparkle as you peel them, and you can slice them smooth and thin.

Have a kitchen garden and enjoy all your vegetables at their climax-time, when they are most tender and sweet. Plant Ferry's purebred Seeds. These have abundant life inside. They are what their name says—purebred. Generations of the seeds that finally became these seeds produced vegetables and flowers approaching perfection.

Ferry's Seeds are at the "store around the corner." A few packets will show what your own yard can grow—but you will want more than a few packets when you look over Ferry's Seed Annual. With this, your garden can produce from early-radiant time till frost, when crisp, white celery can last clear on till spring again! For the Annual, write to D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Michigan.

P. S.—THE GARDENER HAS NO SECOND CHANCE. PLANT THE BEST.

When you select seeds from Ferry's display box, you select the results of 73 years of successful growing.

Easter Lilies

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

AS WE read the sixth chapter of the Gospel according to St. Matthew, we find these two verses:

"And why take ye thought for raiment? Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin:

"And yet I say unto you, that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these."

And it is these flowers which, more than anything else, have become the symbols of Easter which we celebrate this year on April 20. As such a symbol the lily has a double significance. It is one of the earliest spring flowers. It typifies the rebirth of nature after the long winter sleep. In its dry, brown bulb life lies dormant during the winter and then when spring comes, this life begins to stir. First it pushes out the tender green leaves, and then the buds appear. Finally the white blossom comes forth in all its glory as the perfect emblem of resurrected life.

Its other significance is a religious one, its snow-white purity being emblematic of the flawless life of Christ whose resurrection from the tomb we commemorate on Easter day. In fact, no other flower has a place in the religious life and literature of the Christian world to compare to the lily. Yet its glory is not so new as Christianity, ancient though the beginnings of that religion may seem to us.

The Greeks and the Romans prized it above all flowers and in their earlier civilizations it had already come to symbolize purity and virtue. It was because of the place lilies had won in the popular esteem that they found place in the early paintings of the Virgin. The angel Gabriel was depicted carrying them in annunciation pictures and it is because of this that the most beautiful of these flowers, Lilium candidum, most used at Easter, is called the madonna lily.

Although this trumpet-like blossom is the best known of all the members of the lily family, there are others which are very interesting even though they do not have such significance for us as the madonna lily. In the high Himalayas in Asia grows a great lily ten feet tall. Agents of the United States government found a magnificent specimen of lily in China a generation ago—a lily of the madonna type, but harder—and brought it to America and they have been offering it to citizens to plant from coast to coast.

Most of the lilies that are native to America are radiant with color. There is the turk's cap, for instance, that flaunts the deep yellow of its many blooms through the waste stretches of parts of New England. Great, staminate stalks, sometimes nine feet tall, has the turk's cap. It may have half a dozen orange blooms at its top, but those who have tamed this plant and given it care have induced it to provide as many as 40 blossoms.

A quite different American flower is the little trout lily which likes to grow along the streams or in the deep woods. With the nourishment it has saved up in its bulb it starts growing in the early spring and is likely to have bloomed before the leaves of the trees have grown to the stage of making shade to interfere with it. A radiant yellow, the trout lily stands out vividly against its background of green.

The blue flag running to purple is another American lily that has found itself a home in many gardens. The mottled tiger lily has been a favorite for many generations. In California the "leopard lily lights the heather dun," and the late shorn meadow is often red with their bloom.

The red lilies of New England, however, outshine them all and have inspired many a poet of that region. Lucy Larcom spoke of them as "red lilies blazing out of the thicket." Paul Hamilton Hayne thought that the red lily "stands from all her sister flowers apart"

An Easter Flower

"To make one petal, myriads of atoms (each in itself a planetary system of electrons) must climb and wheel to their exact stations in the design."—Statement of a scientist.

Up-whispered by what Power,
Deeper than moon or sun
Must each of the myriad atoms of this flower
To its own point of the colored pattern run;

Each atom, from earth's gloom,
A clean sun-cluster driven
To make, at its bright goal, one grain of bloom,
Or fleck with rose one petal's edge in Heaven?

What blind roots lifted up
This sacramental sign,
Transmuting their dark food, in this wild cup
Of glory, to what Heavenly bread and wine?

What Music was concealed,
What Logos in this loam,
That the Celestial Beauty here revealed
Should thus be struggling to its lost home?

Whence was the radiant storm,
The still up-rushing song,
That built of formless earth this heavenly form,
Redeeming with art, the world's blind wrong.

Unlocking everywhere
The spirit's Wintry prison,
And whispering from the grave, "Not here! Not here!
He is not dead. The Light you seek is risen!"

—Alfred Noyes in the Washington Star.

Probably the most remarkable lily in the world is the yucca, or spanish bayonet, of the arid plains of the Southwest. There the lily becomes a plant that is quite treelike and lives for years. The lily leaves become harsh, dagger-tipped implements to serve the purpose of repelling attack. These may sit close to the ground or, again, they may stand as high as a man on horseback.

From the cluster of leaf armor there springs now and again a tall stalk that may reach like a flagpole into the desert sunshine. At the top of this staff there forms and finally breaks into bloom such an assemblage of pure white, bell-like, richly-perfumed, and in every way perfect lilies as nature produces nowhere else in a single cluster. It is given to the desert to grow the greatest of all the lily-bearing plants despite the fact that the chief habitat of the breed seems to be the marsh.

Lilies all grow from bulbs. This bulb-making capacity of the lily family is one of its dominant traits. It and the six petals to all lily blooms are marks of the tribe. Tulips, daffodils, hyacinths, crocuses, all are actually, because they spring from bulbs, members of the lily family.

But beautiful as are these members of the lily family, there are others which are utilitarian rather than purely ornamental and which, although like the "lilies of the field which toll not," do furnish mankind with edible crops. Surprising though it may be, botanists will tell you that some of our common vegetables are in reality "lilies."

There is asparagus, for instance, that is bought in the market tied up in bundles of many stalks, each exactly like the other. There is nothing about this asparagus in this form that would indicate that it is a lily. Asparagus tips are but young plants just coming through the ground. If they were allowed to grow they would throw out tall, lily-like stalks and crown them with six-tipped flowers that any observer would be able to identify as lilies.

The presence of this commonplace asparagus in an idling family is rather a let down to its pretensions. This, however, is not the worst. If the truth must be told, the onion is a lily. The onion is a lily that has been bred through centuries for the development of its bulb and the suppression of its top. So it has come about that the bulb may be three inches across and the top so insignificant that, when it has dried up, it hardly appears at all. Yet when this top is growing and flowering it is like those delicate plants of the window sills which sometimes are called tube roses, but which actually are a delicate, refined and fragrant lily that comes out of the Orient.

Onions came from the Near East and in ancient days furnished a staple food for the rural inhabitants of Greece and Italy. Not only was garlic a food, but it was reputed to have medicinal value and to be helpful to the stomach in its functions.

These two bulb vegetables, the Cinderellas of the plant food world, ride about the earth in trainloads and ship-loads. The material service they render is greater than that of all the other lilies put together. One would have to look far in all the relationships of nature to find a contrast more striking than that of the Easter lily and the garlic of the Mediterranean.

Even though the lily is the one perfect symbol of Easter, there are two others which through the centuries have become so closely associated with this red-letter day in our calendars that we think of them almost as quickly, in thinking of Easter, as we do of the lily. They are the rabbit and the egg.

The association of the rabbit or hare with Easter has its foundations in the ancient belief in European and Asiatic countries that the hare is the symbol for the moon. In fact, the Chinese represent the moon as a rabbit pounding rice in a mortar, while Hindu and Japanese artists paint the hare across the face of the moon. As the time of the Easter festival is governed by the phases of the moon this may be an explanation of their connection.

U. of C.'s Beautiful New Library in Los Angeles

Impressive ceremonies marked the dedication of the new site of the University of California at Los Angeles. Erected at a cost of more than $3,500,000, the new buildings, representing the nucleus of a thirty million dollar building program, were formally presented to the state of California. The photograph shows a view of the library.

Elephant Breaks Up Hindu Prayer

Bombay.—Several persons were trampled upon and seriously injured recently when a young male elephant ran amuck for half an hour at Allahabad during the Kumbh Mela religious festival.

Two million pilgrims were packed along the wayside reciting prayers while a procession including nine elephants was returning from the river bank with all the customary pageantry of gorgeous banners, musical bands, naked attendants, and the gold and silver palanquins borne on the shoulders of the men, generally associated with religious festivals here, when the young elephant, apparently peevish at the slow progress of the procession, made a sudden rush at a female elephant immediately in front and gored it savagely.

The suddenness of the attack resulted in the driver and passenger being flung off the attacked animal, which trumpeted shrilly with rage and pain. The crazed attacker then turned its attention to the other beasts, trumpeted, threw out its hind legs, and finally unseated its rider.

Father Sage Says:

Moving in circles isn't the way to get ahead, even though you may move in the very best circles.

In the belief that an elephant can be subdued in even its wildest mood if a camel bites its ear, some venturesome spirits drove a camel toward the beast, which in consequence dashed off and plunged at great speed into the crowd, scattering them right and left. Panic immediately followed, and men, women and children screamed and fought madly in their efforts to escape from the path of the infuriated animal.

Luckily, the courage and resource of Captain Niblett, a magistrate, and Mr. Cole, a police officer, saved what would undoubtedly have been a much worse disaster.

Captain Niblett procured two tame elephants and set out to capture the escaped beast, which was now racing rapidly toward the river, while Cole galloped ahead on horseback, warning the crowd.

The huge four-footed pachyderm plunged pell-mell through an encampment of pilgrims by the river bank and crashed through a number of low huts constructed of thatch and bamboo, which gave way before the monster like match boxes. Inside almost every hut fires were left burning, and in consequence the wretched dwellings quickly became a series of blazing bonfires.

Captain Niblett chased the mad elephant over four miles of territory before finally coming to grips. Then followed a struggle between the three elephants which lasted some time before the raving monster was finally subdued and returned to his trembling attendant at Allahabad.

Coaxing Cows' Appetite With Hawaiian Molasses

Colville, Wash.—Black strap molasses from Hawaiian sugar fields is being fed to dairy cattle here in an experiment to increase milk production. The black, thick sirup is shipped in barrels and is a residue from sugar vats.

Thinned with water, it is sprinkled over grain, hay or roughage. With the added molasses cows will devour with avidity food which is generally left in the mangers.

PLAN APPLE AND PEAR TREE SPRAY

Prevents Fruit From Becoming Infested With Worms.

Plans for spraying apple and pear trees to prevent the fruits from becoming infested with worms should be made with the intention of giving the trees the first application as soon as the blossoms fall, or not later than 10 days afterward. Colorado is fortunate in having only one insect that causes wormy apples and pears—the codling moth.

Spraying with arsenate of lead, used at the rate of 1 pound to 50 gallons of water, has been found to be the most effective single method of treatment, according to George M. List, chief deputy state entomologist at the Colorado agricultural college. In some heavily infested sections certain other supplementary methods are advised, but the spraying alone, if thoroughly done, gives good results in most localities.

The number of applications necessary depends upon a number of conditions, but in most orchards three have proved to be sufficient. The object of the first spraying during the ten-day period after the blossoms fall, is to get some of the poison into the blossom end of each small fruit to poison any worms that attempt to enter at that point.

The second application should be made in from 3 to 4 weeks after the blossoms have fallen, and the third one during the early part of August.

There are two broods of the worms during the season. The second and third spray applications are applied just as these get ready to enter the fruit.

Growers in the intensive fruit-growing sections where more applications of spray and other control methods are required should keep in touch with their county pest inspectors and county extension agents to secure the most accurate spray dates.

Loganberry Is a Valuable Fruit on Pacific Coast

The loganberry was originated by Judge J. H. Logan, of Santa Cruz, Calif. It is the result of a cross between the aughinburgh, a variety of the wild blackberry of California, and a red raspberry, possibly red antwerp. It was a chance hybrid developed from seed in 1881. It has been cultivated extensively along the Pacific coast, as far north as British Columbia. It grows very vigorously and the fruit is a valuable crop there, where it is canned, evaporated, and made into juice. However, the plant is very tender; in the East it will not survive without protection, and even where it survives it does not fruit as heavily as where the winters are mild. For this reason eastern nurserymen rarely catalogue it. Oregon is especially interested commercially in loganberries.

First Fruits of Year Will Be Strawberries

About the first fruits of summer will be strawberries. In order to get the utmost returns from the space, the city man may very conveniently tuck his strawberry plants in front of and underneath the grapevines.

Strawberries will be followed by the earliest cherries and by currants, raspberries and gooseberries. Fifty bushes of each of the two best sorts of currants, one hundred each of two varieties of raspberries, and twenty-five bushes of some good gooseberry will, if well cultivated, furnish an abundant supply. One dozen cherry trees will be enough. One hundred bushes of the blackberry will supply two quarts for a day for some weeks toward the close of summer.

Horticultural Notes

Bridge grafting is the only satisfactory way to save girdled trees.

Most fungous or bacterial parasites thrive best where moisture is plentiful.

Pruning of berry plants is an important matter and must never be neglected.

Color has been found to be the most important single quality factor in the sale of American fruit.

As far as the fruit trees are concerned, the San Jose scale attacks the trunk, limbs, foliage and fruit.

It has been estimated that bees are of equal value as agents in cross-pollination as they are as honey producers.

Practically all of our orchard fruits are attacked by the San Jose scale and many of the ornamental trees and shrubs are also attacked.

Black raspberries should be sprayed every year for the control of anthracnose and other fungous diseases, say state college plant specialists. Spray other brambles as they need it.

Report Another "Flying Dutchman"

Buenos Aires.—Another "mystery ship" of the seas, missing for 14 months, has again been sighted.

Thirteen months ago the Danish training ship Kobenhavn, which vanished mysteriously in December of 1928, appeared like a bedraggled wraith in the middle of the South Atlantic ocean, heading toward the polar seas of Antarctica.

This is the weird news brought here by Philip Lindsay, a British missionary, the first man to reach civilization from the Tristan da Cunha island group since January of 1929.

The Tristan da Cunchas are in the South Atlantic, just north of the extreme limit of floating ice, and about midway between Buenos Aires and Cape Town.

According to Lindsay, the Kobenhavn, like a spectre, passed the Tristan da Cunchas on January 21, 1929. Her mainmast was missing and her rigging was flying loose in the wind. The only recognizable feature of the ship was her back hull, around which a white band had been painted.

When last heard of the Kobenhavn sailed from La Plata, Argentina, for Australia, on December 14, 1928. Sixty naval cadets were aboard, including scions of some of Denmark's most prominent families. Several staff officers of the Danish navy were also aboard.

RAIN

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

It is raining as I write this—a gentle rain that sinks into the ground and disappears as it falls. Nothing else is so restful as a rain; nothing so quieting to the nerves. I should not like to live in a place where it does not rain regularly. I have just been reading an article in praise of the climate of California.

"Picture to yourself," it says, "what a difference is made in your habits, your moods, your whole adjustment to life, when you know that for at least four months of the year—June to October—no rain will fall."

I have the picture. Dust in the air, hillsides brown and sear; vegetation everywhere drying up excepting as some one stands with a hose in his hands and sprinkles the lawn and the flower beds. A hot sun beating down upon one and no hope of rain for four months to cool off the atmosphere; grass, and shrubs, and flowers burned brown and dead excepting where some faithful hand gives them regular attention! A dry wind blowing the yellow dust into one's eyes! It makes no appeal to me. I like variety; I like the soft mist against my face; I like to hear the drops beating upon the roof or against the window panes; I thoroughly enjoy rain, and some way, in spite of the absence of rubbers and rain coats and umbrellas, I seldom seem to get wet.

Nothing artificial can ever refresh the vegetable world as a good rain does. The air smells better, tastes better, and seems to penetrate more deeply into the lungs after a rain. I can work with more enthusiasm, with more concentration and with more energy during a rain. When the rain is falling outside it gives opportunity to finish the uncompleted task; to settle down to something that has been waiting for attention for days or weeks.

When I was a boy on the farm a rainy day was a period to be looked forward to. Before the hard work of farm life had fastened itself upon me, a rainy day was a play day. We cut all sorts of capers in the hay loft as the rain pattered down upon the roof above us; or we went fishing. It was thought that the fish would bite more ravenously upon a rainy day. It may have been, but anyway it was rare sport to sit upon the bank of the creek all huddled up and watch the corks on our fishing lines bobbing up and down.

I have always liked to read, and as I look back upon the years that have passed it seems to me that much of the reading that I have done since the time I was ten years old has been done while the rain was coming down outside and other tasks for the time being set aside.

No! I like sunshine and I take pleasure in clear weather, but I don't want to live where it doesn't rain. Absence of rain would take away half the pleasure of life.

If the Truth Were Always Told

Puts Filial Duty Before Career

Iola, Kan.—From a concert pianist with excellent prospects in Chicago, to operator of a drug store in a city of less than 10,000 population, is a long step, but a step which filial devotion prompted Lloyd N. Brown to take.

Five years ago Brown was an instructor in piano in a Chicago music institute. He had completed his study there and had been retained as an instructor. In addition to teaching, he filled concert engagements and on several occasions played with the Chicago Symphony orchestra.

His prospects were bright and it was predicted he would soon be one of the outstanding figures in the musical world.

Just as Brown was making the most forward strides toward fame he received word from home that his father, Dr. H. A. Brown, veteran physician and druggist here, had suffered a stroke of paralysis and that Lloyd, the only son, was sorely needed at home.

As he saw it, only one road was open for him. Before him was success in the musical world that he loved; not only success for himself, but for his wife, an accomplished violinist whom he met and married in Chicago.

He closed his piano, resigned his position with the college and forsook his career as a musician to hurry home to his parents and to enter the comparatively strange profession of a druggist.

But his heart is not in the drug business. He intends some day to return to his music. He has a standing offer to return to Chicago as an instructor.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

The Polar Spin

If people resided at, or on, the North and South poles, they would get much less of a "ride" each twenty-four hours than those at the equator.

A circle at the pole might be only a foot in circumference, while at the equator the earth is 25,000 miles in girth. As the whole earth revolves once daily, the polar resident gets the shorter ride.

TO THE HONORABLE TOWNSHIP BOARD OF TAWAS TOWNSHIP AND TAXPAYERS:

No doubt you will be interested to know something about the principal work done during the past year by your Highway Commissioner. While my report of last December shows the amounts of material bought and the amount paid for labor, repair on the different implements, it did not state any particular roads. I hereby give you the amounts expended in Road District No. 1.

Old main Townline, brushing, stumping, filling and ditching	$296.78
Near M. E. church north and southeast thereof	73.76
Ebert road, 1/2 mile turnpiking and ditching	95.63
Laper road	56.25
Bessie road	80.88
Hoshach road	45.00

Total	$648.30
Dynamite not included.
Repairing bridges and culverts, labor	14.50

These figures do not include timber, planks, cedar, drift bolts and spikes.

The total amount expended on all roads for labor was $717.86, which shows that the main part of the township received a very small part of the Highway Improvement fund. You will also notice all roads mentioned above had to be brushed, also stumps removed before any permanent improvement could be undertaken.

Labor on Harris and Ruel Bridge
Wm. Katterman	$1.50
Jos. Ruel	3.00
Waldo Curry	2.00
Jos. Freel and son	3.00
Theo. Anschuetz	9.50

This does not include any timber for bridges and culverts or the highway commissioner's labor which is paid out of the General fund.

Dated Tawas Township, this 31st day of March, 1930.

E. S. Anschuetz,
Commissioner of Highways,
Tawas Township.
