TAKE SECOND PLACE IN COMMERCIAL WORK

Eight schools, Caro, Cass City, Gladwin, Pinconning, Midland, St. Charles, Standish and Tawas City were represented in the District Commercial contest held at Midland Saturday, May 3. Six events, first and second year typewriting, team typing, first year shorthand and two events in second year shorthand were held. Five places in each event were given, scoring from five points for first place to one point for fifth, and of these places, Tawas City placed first and third in first year shorthand, second in first year typewriting, third in second year typewriting, and second in team typewriting in which our team was composed of two first year and one second year student competing with teams made up entirely of second year people.

We are rather proud of the fact that we were the only school to place in all events entered, winning a total of five places in four events and nineteen points, which placed us second in total number of points scored. First place was won by Midland, who gained her lead in points over us in two shorthand events in which she was the only school to enter contestants.

Delta Leslie, Elvera Kasichke and Irwin Schlecte represented our commercial class.

PLANS PROGRESSING FOR ANNUAL TRI-COUNTY SPORTSMEN'S BANQUET

Preparations for the annual meeting and banquet of the Tri-County Sportsmen's Club to be held in Mio on June 13 are moving along with considerable interest. Many pleasant surprises and sensations will furnish the sportsmen with excellent entertainment from early morning until late in the evening. Wilbur C. Reach of Tawas City has charge of the trap shooting contest and this is creating a great deal of interest to sportsmen from every part of Michigan. Trophies and prizes that will be the envy of every trap shooter will be passed out to those making the highest score.

Wm. Doan and Charles Lewis of Mio are busily engaged securing expert log rollers to take part in the log rolling contest that will bring back echoes of the old logging days of this section of Michigan. Herman Butler of East Tawas has charge of the keno games and he now has a wonderful display of prizes that will be available to pass out to those holding the lucky numbers. Charles Lewis of Mio has special charge and care of the young ox that will be barbecued for the evening banquet. Photographs have been taken by various newspapermen and the ox will, no doubt, receive its share of publicity in the papers of the state within a comparatively short time.

Harvey Campbell, secretary and vice-president of the Detroit Chamber of Commerce will be Master of Ceremonies for the evening meeting. Everyone knows Harvey and his ability to handle such a meeting successfully and with considerable humor and entertainment. The club feels very fortunate, indeed, in having a man of Mr. Campbell's ability to handle the meeting. Several bands will be present to furnish music throughout the day and evening. Tickets are being distributed now and from all appearances this will be the largest gathering of sportsmen ever gotten together at one time in Michigan. The meeting is to be held on the banks of the Ausable river and lighting facilities will be furnished by the Consumers Power Company.

SCHOOL NOTES

High School

The Tawas City Public School Scholastic Contest which was put on to review the seventh and eighth graders of the surrounding rural schools last Friday proved to be an interesting event. Twelve schools were represented and fifty-three pupils were present. Scholarship pins were given to both seventh and eighth graders winning first place in a subject, and the school earning the most points was presented with a framed picture. The school taught by Miss Hattie Look won the picture.

We are all very proud of the students who competed in the commercial contest at Midland and who did so remarkably well.

Mr. G. I. Nippess, manager of the Business Institute with offices at Saginaw, Pontiac and Detroit, gave a demonstration of the stenotype machine on Monday. This machine takes the place of pencil shorthand and proves to be considerably more valuable.

Remember the senior benefit picture Tuesday and Wednesday. This is an all talking comedy, "Oh, Yeah!" and comes highly recommended. The proceeds will be used to help defray the cost of Commencement.

Standard tests were given in practically all classes this week. These tests offer a good review. By giving these tests we are able to compare our classes with thousands of other classes throughout the country. Stewart Roach obtained 142 in a Civics test. Harold Hartmann in the same test obtained 132. Data shows that those who get more than 130 are better than 90% of all the senior high school students who have taken the test. These two boys evidently must have a "Civics consciousness."

Our first baseball game of the season, scheduled for last Friday, with East Tawas, was postponed because of rain. Tuesday the base-

ADELBERT A. CHASE

Adelbert A. Chase, age 83 years, six months and 23 days, died Friday, April 25, at his home in Whittemore.

Adelbert Chase was born October 2, 1846, in Onida county, New York. He was enrolled in Company K, 189 Regiment of the New York Infantry, mustered into service at Albany, New York, September 23, 1864, and discharged May 30, 1865, near Washington. He was married to Almada E. Greco of Hockensville, Onida county, New York, on June 9th, 1869. They made their home at Hockensville until April, 1883, when they moved to Whittemore, Michigan, where they have since resided. Two children were born to this union, Bertha May Cataline, who died August 5, 1907, and Jesse W. Chase, who with the wife, are left to mourn his loss. He also leaves three grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

The deceased was a member of Whittemore Lodge No. 471, F. & A. M., and of Whittemore Chapter No. 426, Order of Eastern Star.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. George Smith of Whittemore at the home, with burial at the Reno cemetery. Both the Mason and Eastern Star lodges took part.

STATE FEATURES FILM OF GAIETY AND GANGLAND

Gangster rule and the gay night clubs of New York figure vividly in "The Woman Racket," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's story of the Gay White Way, which is playing at the State Theatre Friday (today) and Saturday, with Tom Moore and Blanche Sweet playing in their first talking picture together.

The story is a love tale set in the midst of New York's night life, with Moore as an Irish policeman on the Broadway beat, and Miss Sweet as a night club hostess. The plot concerns a policeman who marries a night club hostess and his battle with the underworld to bring her back when she deserts him for her old life. The highlights of the production include brilliant ballet and song numbers in spectacular night club sequences, in which Miss Sweet sings several song hits, a police raid on a fashionable club, police and gangster battles, a fire rescue using a pulmotor to revive a suffocated victim, and other thrills.

Robert Ober and Albert Kelly directed the production. Ober is noted as an actor, and recently played the radical cousin in "The Idle Rich." Kelly is noted for many motion picture productions.

Tom Moore is celebrated for his whimsical Irish role of the screen, and both he and Miss Sweet have been stars since early in the industry. Moore recently has been on the stage.

One of the odd bits of realism in the new picture is seen in the police review in which Moore is decorated for bravery by Wilbur Mack, the vaudeville star, a perfect "double" for Mavor James Walker of New York. So accurately was the scene produced that one would swear the real mayor was before the camera.

M. E. CHURCH
Next Sunday is "Mother's Day." Arrangements are being made to observe the occasion. The mothers of the community have a special invitation. Text: "When Jesus Saw His Mother."

NEW POSTOFFICE BUILDING IS PROGRESSING RAPIDLY

Since the foundations were laid, the new postoffice is progressing rapidly, it being to the sub-floor stage at present.

The reporter has been looking over the face brick to be used in the construction and agrees with the builders that the new building will make a fine addition to the city.

Moeller Bros. are to be emulated on their progressiveness, and from all indications there is going to be a little more dressing up on main street this year.

JOHN W. TAIT DIES AT FLINT

John Tait, age 79, died in Flint Wednesday afternoon of pneumonia, after a two-day illness. Mr. Tait and son Temple, had arrived in Flint that morning.

Mr. Tait had been a resident of East Tawas for over 60 years, holding various offices in the city for forty years. He was city treasurer at the time of his death. He was a member of Isoco Chapter No. 83, R. A. M., and of Baldwin Lodge No. 274, F. & A. M.

He leaves three sons, Sam and Fred Tait of Flint, Temple Tait of East Tawas, two daughters, Mrs. Anna Mack of Atlanta, Ga., and Mrs. Robert Peckett of Pelston, Manitoba.

The funeral will be held Sunday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock from the home.

MISS HATTIE LOOK'S SCHOOL WINS HONORS IN SCHOLASTIC CONTEST

The Tawas City Public School Scholastic Contest, put on for the seventh and eighth graders of the surrounding rural schools last Friday, proved to be a real event. Fifty-three pupils representing twelve schools were present.

Mrs. Hattie Kohn, Charles Colby, Walter Laidlaw, Stanley Daley, and the Misses Hattie Look, Isabelle King, Ellen Kane, Victoria Klish, Gladys Gates, Edna Daley, Elsie Neumann and Ila Carter were the teachers of the respective twelve schools.

Objective tests in the form of a small booklet were used in the most of the subjects. The questions for reading were based upon the book which is being used this year for the state examinations in this subject: that is, "Sandy MacDonald's Man," and the questions were prepared by the author, R. Clyde Ford, of the Michigan State Normal College of Ypsilanti.

A scholarship pin was given each seventh and eighth grader who won first place in a subject, and the school that won the most points was given a framed picture. "The Horse Fair." To determine the winning school, each first place was given five points, each second place was given three points and each third place was given one point.

The following pupils in the seventh grade won scholarship pins, with the subject and teacher also given: Floyd Frisch, Arithmetic, E. Neumann; Margaret Smith, Reading, S. Daley; William Link, Language, V. Klish; Elmer Katterman, Geography, S. Daley; Margaret Smith, Physiology, S. Daley; Bernice Wood, Spelling, G. Gates.

The same material in regard to the eighth graders, is given below: Audra Winn, Agriculture, W. Laidlaw; Leora McArthur, Arithmetic, I. Carter; Philip Giroux, American History, H. Look; Georgina Pringle, Civics, I. King; Philo Giroux, Physiology, H. Look; Helen Luce, Spelling, I. King; Philip Giroux, Geography, H. Look; Leora McArthur, Language, I. Carter.

Because of a misunderstanding in regard to enrollment, it was at first thought that the school taught by Walter Laidlaw had won the most points. It was finally ascertained, however, that the pupils from Miss Hattie Look's school, earning 26.77 points, had won the prize. Ila Carter's school, winner 19.5 points, took second, while the pupils of Stanley Daley with 15.67 points, obtained third place.

A lunch furnished by the high school teachers of the local school was given at noon in the Ladies' Aid rooms of the Zion Lutheran church, and a supper tendered by the local eighth graders and high school students was partaken at 5:30. Games were enjoyed in the evening at the school building until time to announce the results of the contest.

While many people assisted to promote the success of the contest, the school especially desires to express its appreciation to Mrs. Joseph Warts and Mrs. Ronald Curry, who so kindly assisted in preparing the refreshments, and to the members of the Ladies' Aid of the Zion Lutheran church, who loaned the rooms and equipment for the meals.

ALICE DETECTED A PAIR OF KIDNAPERS

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

ALICE ARNOLD shut the schoolhouse door behind her, locked it, slipped the key in the pocket of her thick-brown sweater and started down the road toward the farmhouse where she was at present making her home. It was a raw, cold day and the dirt road was full of puddles. Alice, deep in thought, splashed into a puddle before she saw it. The incident added to the trouble she had been having all day and for a moment she felt a desolating sense of depression and insufficiency.

She felt, poor girl, that all the years she had spent preparing for the profession of teaching had been thrown away. The only school she could get was of the Sawmill Hollow type. Sawmill Hollow folks did not have daily papers, radios and telephones. In order to keep her job Alice simply had to fall into the existing order of things. It was a crucial test of the girl's character. Even so, she was not sure that Mr. Simpkins, the trustee of the district, was going to hire her for the ensuing year.

Started by a horn, she jumped to one side as a huge green roadster came floundering through the ruts. The presence of such a car on a road which automobiles avoided, particularly at this season of the year, astonished Alice. She saw that the car held a man and a woman. Thirty feet farther down the road was a sluice rudely filled with stones.

The green car hit the sluice with a terrific bounce and stopped. After an interval of useless effort the driver lowered the window on his side, looked out and yelled to the girl.

"Is there any place 'round here where we can spend the night?" he demanded. "I'm stuck."

"Yes, there's a farmhouse right around the turn ahead of you," Alice replied. "I'm going there now. I'll walk on and tell Mrs. Peck you are coming, if you wish."

"I'm much obliged to you," said the man.

Alice was sure Mrs. Peck would take the couple in, for it would mean money, always a vital consideration in the Peck family.

"Sure, I'll take 'em," Mrs. Peck said. "I never done such a thing before. What you feel I ought to charge 'em for supper, breakfast and lodgin', Allie?"

Alice named a price she considered fair, then went on up to her room. Presently she heard the motorists arrive. The man's voice sounded curt, crabbed. They came upstairs to the spare bedroom which adjoined Alice's. At the jingle of the supper bell she ran downstairs to find Mrs. Peck waiting for her.

"I'll have to ask 'em more'n you said, Allie," the woman said. "There's three. They've got a kid with 'em."

"I didn't see any child," Alice said, puzzled.

"Well, they've got one. All bundled up. He's sick. The woman said she'd stay upstairs with him and I could send her supper up and some bread and milk for the young one."

At midnight Alice was awakened from deep sleep by the cries of the child in the adjoining room. She listened and heard the man and woman get out of bed and move about. The child cried on. Another sound sent the blood flying to Alice's cheeks. The woman had slapped the child.

"A baby's mother," thought the girl indignantly, "ought to know when her child cries like that something is seriously wrong. What kind of woman is she?"

Springing from her bed, she flung on her bathrobe and went to the strangers' room. She knocked on the door.

"Has your baby got the colic?" she asked. "Can't I do something?"

A poignant silence followed. Then the man answered harshly.

"Go back to bed. We'll attend to this little brat ourselves."

"Wes!" chided the woman. "Shut your big mouth!"

"Wes! The name the man had given to Mrs. Peck was Robert L. Rutherford. Wes!

Alice ran swiftly and lightly downstairs to the bedroom of Mr. and Mrs. Peck and rapped softly.

Mrs. Peck came to the door, trailing a bed quilt snatched from the bed. She had a lighted lamp in her hand.

"My land, Alice! What's the matter with you? You're white as a ghost!"

"Hush! Don't let them hear your upstairs. Mrs. Peck, that pair in your spare bedroom are kidnapers. They've stolen that baby."

"Allie! How you talk!"

"I'll swear to it. You and Mr. Peck must do something. Probably the man will put up a fight. He may have a gun or something. He's a tough customer."

his big shoulder against the old door. It opened.

Alice heard something like a fight going on for perhaps five minutes. Then Mrs. Peck came down breathlessly, carrying a year-old baby.

"Here! Take care of him," she panted. "It's just the way you thought. I'm sure of it. That pair are getting out. My land! To think we'd harbor such trash. I guess he's got his car fixed so it'll carry 'em out the holler. If it don't, they can walk for all I care."

Next morning Jake hitched up and drove to town and told the police everything.

Late that afternoon a car drove up to Jake's door. From it stepped a pale woman and a harried man accompanied by the local sheriff. They were Mr. and Mrs. Forrest. Alice had hurried home from school to give the baby his bath. She had him in her arms when the Forrests entered. There was no discounting the relationship between woman and child. Bobby knew his mother. And his mother—

He had been snatched from his baby pen on the porch. Police had been searching high and low.

A week later the Hollow school had a substitute teacher. Alice had gone to act as nurse to Bobby and his four brothers and sisters.

"She's set herself down in a butter tub," remarked Mrs. Peck. "Them Forrests are richer than grease. They certainly did handsome by me 'n' Jake. We're going to get us a radio and some other things. Land sakes! We're so far off the main road that we don't know any more about what's going on in this world than the old red rooster does."

Few Smashups When Man at Wheel "Knows How"

The mounting death rate by motor car accidents is well known. It is quite unnecessary to recite the thousands that die each year—or to figure out what that means per minute. Laws we have plenty, at least in number; ordinances; and plenty of indignation. But little is being done of a constructive nature to remedy the situation.

Most of the legislation to date has been based on the idea that speed is the chief fault. But speed is no sin in itself. Most motorists unconsciously break speed laws—automobiles change far more in design and more rapidly than do the automobile codes. A high speed car with four-wheel brakes is a thing different than the car without them.

What is really needed is a generation of carefully trained drivers. Skill is the paramount consideration in any human activity. How well we all can see the errors in the driving of the other fellow.

How well we know the man who thinks he "can make it." And how much do we appreciate the good driver?

On the road the art of overtaking traffic is just that—an art.

The man who knows how to do it waits his opportunity—darts around the other car with proper warning and wheels into line properly.

In the hands of the inept there is great danger of accident.

Co-ordination makes the good tennis player—and the good automobile driver. Timing is of the essence.

The man who is alert, who knows his stuff, whose muscles obey without thinking, is the good citizen on the road and in the street. You may not agree with his politics, his creed, his morals—if any—but you thank heaven for him on the road when he passes you—nor do you hesitate to drive with him without a quiver.—Louisville Herald-Post.

Ingenious Coin Detector

A coin detector for vending machines which will refuse slugs has been made and is part of the robot vending machine. The coin which is put into the robot is first tested for weight. Then it passes to the chief detector, which is an electromagnet. True coins are not halted, but any disk containing fraudulent metals is drawn aside into a channel which rejects it. In passing, the guilty slug forms an electric contact which starts a disk phonograph in the top of the cabinet. The person who inserted the counterfeit coin is startled by hearing the words, "Please use good coins only." The voice is recorded on a single groove. When the revolution is complete, the contact is broken and the record stops.

Santa Fe Old City

The first settlement at Santa Fe dates back to 1606. The site, however, was first visited by Coronado in 1541, but no settlement was made by white men until 1606. The original name was La Ciudad Real de la Santa Fe, which means "The Royal City of the Holy Faith." Various cyclopedias give the above date. A writer in "Historic Towns of the Western States" says that the exact date of the founding of Santa Fe is not known, due to the destruction of the Spanish archives in 1680, though it is believed that Juan de Oñate began to build the settlement shortly after 1605.

Rain From Clear Sky

The weather bureau says it does not know of the phenomenon of rain falling from a clear sky. In the sense of true rain. Drops of water, sometimes fall from trees as a result of accumulated dew, and from one or two species of trees as a result of water exuded through the leaves and also from certain trees—the sycamore, for instance—due to the sapping of the limbs by a kind of insect. But, of course, none of these things is true rain.

HISTORY'S MYSTERIES

Unsolved Riddles That Still Puzzle Authorities Here and Abroad

Without a Clue

IT WAS on Christmas night, in 1910, that the first news was made public of what is probably the most baffling and mysterious disappearance of its kind in the police annals of the United States—the unexplained and apparently insoluble vanishing of Dorothy Harriet Camille Arnold, the daughter of Francis R. Arnold, a wealthy importer.

The facts in the case were few and utterly devoid of sensationalism, thus making the climax stand out with all the force and contrast of lightning against a pitch black sky. On the morning of December 12, thirteen days before any inkling of the affair reached the newspapers, Miss Arnold had left her home at 108 East Seventy-ninth street, New York, supposedly for a morning's shopping. She was in the best of health and spirits and, among the errands which she intended to do, was the purchasing of a dress at one of the Fifth avenue shops. As soon as she found what she wanted she was to call her mother on the telephone and the final decision would then be made.

The thorough and searching investigations of the police and the reporters later developed the fact that Miss Arnold had walked from her home to a store at Fifth avenue and Fifty-ninth street, where she purchased a box of candy, which she charged to her personal account. The sales check showed that it was about noon when she left the store and, some two hours later, she was at Brentano's book store, Fifth avenue and Twenty-seventh street, where she bought a book which she stated was to be given away as a Christmas present.

Just as she was leaving Brentano's, Miss Arnold met a woman friend and, in response to the usual question as to how she was feeling, replied: "I never felt better in my life," and then, as she was leaving, she added: "I'm going to walk home through Central park. Want to join me?" But the friend declined and Miss Arnold continued on her way—never again to be heard of. Had the friend accompanied her it is possible that one of the greatest mysteries of modern times might never have occurred but, as it happened, Dorothy Arnold went on alone and vanished.

Wishing to avoid publicity as much as possible, the Arnold family purposely suppressed the news of their daughter's disappearance until, at the request of the police, it was given out in order that the publication of her picture and a full description might develop possible clues to her disappearance. But, although there were a number of apparent inconsistencies about the case—probably due to the natural shrinking from the nationwide attention which the affair attracted—nothing definite was ever discovered. The most striking point elicited by the investigations of the newspaper reporters was that, despite the Arnold family's definite statements that their daughter had had no love affairs, she had been carrying on a secret correspondence with a bachelor in Pittsburgh. But it was quite evident that the man in question could have had no connection whatever with the disappearance of the New York heiress and this lead was dropped both by the police and the press.

White slavery, which was at that time very much in the public eye, was popularly blamed for the unsolved mystery but when it came to details even the most astute detectives were at a loss to explain how a strong, athletic girl like Miss Arnold could have been kidnaped and concealed without leaving the slightest trace, while, if she had been made away with, it would have been practically impossible to hide all signs of the body and her distinctive clothing—descriptions of which were flashed to all parts of the world. That Miss Arnold had not planned to leave home was evident from the fact that she left all her jewels and a considerable sum of money in cash behind her and that, on the very morning of her disappearance, she had written several letters relative to a tea in honor of a number of her former schoolmates at Bryn Mawr.

The theory of suicide was untenable because her body would have been found. Premeditated flight was hardly to be considered, while sudden flight would have undoubtedly led to recognition somewhere in the country. Foul play was the only alternative remaining, but in the event that Miss Arnold was either kidnaped or killed, how did those responsible succeed in hiding all traces of their crime from the police of two continents?

This is the question which has puzzled the minds of master detectives like William J. Burns, Chief Flynn of the secret service, Sir E. R. Henry, chief of Scotland Yard, and hundreds of others who have endeavored in vain to solve the riddle without a clue.

Robot Writes Message

Berlin, Germany, has been much interested in a full-sized dummy of a woman which writes the exact reproduction of the handwriting of the sender operating some distance away. The operator pens the message on a device which transmits the impulses to the robot, which in turn transfers these impulses to a blackboard or chart.

Origin of Mothers' Day

Bricard's "The First Step"

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ALTHOUGH the official observance of the second Sunday in May as Mother's day is regarded as a modern custom, it is in reality a revival of one of the oldest feasts celebrated by mankind. For the gifts of flowers, candy and the like which we send on Mother's day correspond to the ancient simnel cake, a feature of "Mothering day" of the early Britons. On Mothering day all young persons away from home visited their parents, taking along gifts of sweet confections of honey in the form of simnel cakes. Still farther back in antiquity the people of Asia Minor held a feast early in May to worship Rhea, "the Great Mother of the Gods," and this feast later became the feast of Hilaria, an annual event on the Ides of March in Greece and Rome.

Just how much these ancient rites contributed to the modern celebration of Mother's day it is impossible to say, for there is some dispute as to the origin of the idea which resulted finally in setting aside the second Sunday of May for honoring the mothers of the nation. No less than four cities in as many different states claim that honor for one of their citizens. Up in Albion, N. Y., they will tell you that it originated there and offer the following facts in support of that statement:

George M. Pullman dedicated a home on the St. Lawrence river to "Father and Mother." This was opened for a large family reunion in August, 1888. In 1894 a church was built by Mr. Pullman in Albion, in memory of his parents. He put a great deal of thought, sentiment and time into both buildings—the home and the church.

These two things and the manner in which the work was done made such an impression upon the people at Albion that at the first anniversary of the mother's passing on it was decided to call the Sunday nearest that date "Mother's day," and they voted that hereafter, in that church, it should be an annual event.

No one at that time had any thought of how far-reaching this observance would become, or that it would so appeal to all lovers of mothers as the yearly celebration has now shown.

Down in Henderson, Ky., they claim the honor for Mary Towles Sasseen Wilson. Born and reared in this little city, on the south bank of the Ohio river, in the 60s, she labored earnestly to have April 20, her mother's natal day, observed in the schools in the manner in which the day is now celebrated.

In 1893 Miss Sasseen, then a school teacher, published a book setting forth her ideas, aims and objects, dedicating the volume to her mother, with a hope for national recognition.

She traveled extensively and addressed various educational meetings throughout the country in her effort to have the day observed in the schools. It was in the Little Center street school of Henderson that the first observance of Mother's day was held by Miss Sasseen, and in 1894 she succeeded in having it celebrated in the public schools of Springfield, Ohio. In 1899 she became a candidate for superintendent of public instruction of Kentucky, and it was then generally discussed over the state that she had first conceived the plan of celebrating Mother's day.

Mary Towles Sasseen married Judge Marshall Wilson of Florida, and gave her life to the cause of motherhood when her first child was born.

Still another claimant to the honor is Indianapolis, Ind., which comes forth with a citizen who, it says, is the "father of Mother's day." Recently Representative Louis Ludlow of Indiana in a speech on "The Origin of Mother's Day" put forward the Indianapolis citizen's claim to the honor. His speech, as reported in the Congressional Record, follows:

Mr. Speaker, one of the most blessed of all anniversaries is Mother's day. The very name of this anniversary makes a thousand bells to tinkle in our recollection. It sends us back to first principles and revives all of the hallowed memories of childhood. It brings before the vision of every one of us the sweetest face we have ever known; we see her smiles and tears and once more hear her sing her lullabies. It makes our hearts throb and our voices choke as we recall the unfathomable devotion of "mother," how she toiled and suffered and the privations she endured that we might be fed and clothed and trained to do the part of honest and upright citizens in the varied activities of life.

It is to me a source of special pride that the city which I have the honor to represent in the congress of the United States was the birthplace of Mother's day. A silver-tongued orator of Indiana—Frank E. Hering—first coined the sacred phrase which is now recurrently heard around the world. The Order of Eagles, of which he has long been an outstanding leader, took up the slogan; and giving expression to the mother love that is in the hearts of all of us, it has striven worthily and accomplished a great deal toward throwing the encircling arms of love and protection around the poor and aged mothers of the land.

A most interesting account of the origin of Mother's day is contained in an editorial that appeared in the Indianapolis Times on February 7, 1930. Mr. Boyd Gurley, the author of the editorial, is a patriotic and brilliant newspaper man who in 1925 was awarded the Pulitzer gold-medal prize in competition with all of the editors of America for the most distinguished public service rendered by the newspaper profession during that year. The editorial in the Indianapolis Times is as follows:

A REAL ANNIVERSARY
This city has many anniversaries which it celebrates in pride and thankfulness, the birthdays of those who served the nation and humanity well, of soldiers and statesmen who won glory and gratitude, of poets who wrote such that an immortal, and whose messages remain for the ages.

Today is a different sort of anniversary. It is the birthday anniversary of an idea which became an impulse; an impulse that became a great movement.

On the evening of February 7, 1904, the English Opera House was crowded. Those who assembled belonged to the lodge of Eagles.

The speaker was a young professor from Notre Dame, notable chiefly as being the first Protestant to hold such a position in that university. Otto de Luse had found him at South Bend and been impressed by his oratorical charm.

He did not suspect that the event was to make history.

It was on that night that Frank E. Hering, in a burst of oratory, traced all the goodness of men to mother love, all the advancement of civilization to the sacrifices of motherhood, all the hopes of the future to the influence of mothers.

He urged that in every Eagles' lodge one day be set aside each year in which men would remember their mothers, and in that memory lift themselves from sordid thought to higher planes of action.

The idea caught and held attention. It was an appeal to something so basic and fundamental. It tapped the wells of all inspiration.

So it happened that in many Eagles' lodges, long before Mother's day became a national institution, programs each year were held to honor the mothers of men. The idea that found expression in the English theater had become a movement.

When, a few years ago, the American War Mothers became interested in tracing the origin of this national anniversary they searched the records. Others claimed recognition to this honor. But the War Mothers, one of the few bodies chartered by congress, decided that Frank E. Hering was the real "father of Mother's day."

Last fall they sent a committee to his home in South Bend to pin upon his breast their medal of honor, awarded to but three others, all from military life. His is the only award to a civilian.

much of its sorrow and leave it only its glory. It is well to remember anniversaries, especially of imperishable ideas. It is also well for Indianapolis to remember in pride that with her other contributions to progress and civilization it furnished the birthplace for a great idea from which has come better things for all.

The fourth city which claims the honor of having given to the nation this red-letter day on its calendar is Philadelphia. The Quaker city points out that the movement, which resulted in congress passing a joint resolution authorizing a Mother's Day and in President Wilson issuing a special proclamation designating a Sunday in May as the date, thus giving the observance the official sanction of the government of the United States, was started there in 1908 by one of its daughters, Miss Anna Jarvis.

Miss Jarvis' mother, who died in 1907, had been active in the work of the church and Sunday school of a small town in Virginia. On the anniversary of her death the pastor asked the daughter to arrange for a special service in the church where her mother had been a leading spirit. In complying with the request she began to realize the growing lack of tender consideration of absent mothers on the part of children who had left the home roof and strayed out into the world, each with a different interest.

Miss Jarvis talked the matter over with a friend, saying she would like to have one day of the year set aside, especially dedicated to the "best little mother in the world." Through the influence of this friend and others who had become interested, the first observance of the day was held May 10, 1908, in Philadelphia, with special services in all the Sunday schools in the city.

So popular was the idea with the people that Miss Jarvis became even more interested and began a wide-spread publicity of the event. She wrote letters or interviewed people in all walks of life for a proper observance of the day. By the time another anniversary had come around many individuals and organizations observed the second Sunday in May with appropriate ceremonies "in honor of the best mother who ever lived." As a result not only the entire nation, but many foreign countries, observe this day with appropriate ceremonies.

Pennsylvania was the first to make it a state holiday. This was in 1915. In the same year the mayor of Boston set an example of giving a free picnic in a park, when all mothers, and their children were given a big dinner by the business men of the city. The object was "to give a day of rest and recreation to mothers who have not had a summer vacation away from the city, and who get few opportunities to do so."

On May 10, 1913, a resolution passed by the senate and house of representatives to make the second Sunday in May a national holiday, "dedicated to the memory of the best mother in the world, your mother." President Wilson was authorized and requested to issue a proclamation to display United States flags on all government buildings in celebration of the day. It is said that when President Wilson signed the proclamation, he turned to William Jennings Bryan, his secretary of state, and said: "Bryan, that's the finest thing this congress has done. God bless the mothers."

Each year the idea grew more and more popular, until in a few years there was scarcely a small church or an organization throughout the land that did not make some observance of the day. And then came the World war, and it was during this time that the day was more universally observed than at any previous time. Boys in France were requested to write their mothers on that day, and so great was the response that shipload after shipload of letters landed at the port of New York to be distributed all over the nation to mothers whose sons had "gone across."

At the beginning the slogan adopted was, as it still is, "In honor of the best mother who ever lived," and the badge was then the white carnation. It is said that this flower was chosen because it was the favorite flower of a President, famous for his devotion to his mother—William McKinley, who habitually wore a white carnation in her honor.

BOX PLEATS FOR THE SKIRT; MODERNISTIC SCARF AND BLOUSE

STUDY well the skirt pictured, which with its jacket of self fabric and a frilly blouse completes a most voguish costume. You will discover that it is somewhat unusual. Box-pleated! That's it—later than side pleats so fashionists declare. Which means that to be up-to-the-instant in modishness you will be losing no time in acquiring one of the new-type pleated skirts. Take note, if you please, that the box pleats graduate from narrow at the top to wider at the hemline. Pleaters tell us that the way to prepare for these widening pleats is to cut the material somewhat circular, not, however, a complete circle as for the sunburst types. You'll love a skirt like this in the illustration, which, as you see, has a fitted yoke buttoning at the side, to which the flaring pleated portion is seamed. Of course every style-minded woman will be wanting a frilly blouse to wear with this skirt. Make it of crepe, satin or shantung, sheer wool challis, pastel-colored handkerchief or dainty batiste as you will, and providing it has a finely pleated jabot frill, it will answer to fashion's latest call.

MOST VOGUISH COSTUME

this very moment fancy is turning with enthusiasm to the scarf and the blouse, knowing what an important part they play in ensembling the tailleur and in the field of the sports costume.

Facts which are outstanding in regard to the blouse which is smartest and the scarf which is ultra chic are that the former, because of the vogue for high waists, is most apt to be a tuck-in, while big squares of silk, bizarre both in color and design, lead in the sports scarf movement.

Colors for the blouse and the scarf run in two trends—very bright hues versus the new "pretty" pastels. As to the modish "baby colors," light blue, delicate pink and others of the esthetic pastels, they express themselves for the most part in monotonous, but when it comes to the vivid yellows, reds, greens and blues, they are apt to go modernistic in design, after the manner noted in the blouse and the scarf pictured.

If the color combination carried out in the blouse pictured be followed, you will choose beige for the main part, with maroon (chestnut brown) for the piping and the bordering on the silk square which ties so nonchalantly about the throat. Beige, navy and red would make a striking combination, using the bright navy for the insets, with red pipings, bordering the neckerchief, the skirt in matching navy. A costume like this is successfully carried out either in lightweight wove jersey or silk crepe.

Red, navy and gray on a cream-white background are worked in a highly modernistic patterning for the huge square scarf, which is almost sizable enough to be called a shawl. At any rate, silken squares done in hectic colorings are a very swanky sort for sports wear. In assembling a wardrobe of scarfs, for "a scarf for every occasion" has become almost a slogan in the neckerwear realm, be sure to add a pleated type, for things pleated, be they skirt, cape or in a trimming way, enter the mode at every opportunity.

When the tailored suit is "in" as it so decidedly is this season, then does the world of fashion become increasingly blouse-conscious and scarf-minded. So it is, that at

Do You Read Bank Advertisements?

One man tells us he thinks Bank Ads are dull and uninteresting. He never reads them, he says.

We're inclined to agree with him! So many bank advertisements talk about resources and assets and financial soundness—all dull reading, even to the bankers, themselves.

We prefer that our resources and assets and financial soundness be taken for granted. These details are open for your investigation always, so why talk about them?

We prefer to think of the Iosco County State Bank as a Tawas City institution—an institution interested in the welfare of this community and a useful "cog" in Tawas City's business wheel. Our advertisements, we hope, reflect that aim.

Why does the omelet-recipe say
SERVE AT ONCE?

THE minute an omelet is hot from the pan, it is puffed up, tender... at its best... And the minute vegetables are fresh from the garden, all their flavor, all their juice are at their high point.

The way to have white wax beans while they are tender; and carrots when so crisp they cook creamy before they are creamed... the way to have all vegetables at their climactic of freshness, is to pick them from a garden of your own. And the way to grow vegetables approaching perfection is to plant Ferry's purebred Seeds.

These seeds are perfected the way breeders perfect cattle. A Ferry-bred tomato is no more like an ordinary tomato than Ferry's sweet corn is like horse corn. Find Ferry's purebred Seeds at the "store around the corner." And write for Ferry's Seed Annual. This gives you 73 years' experience in gardens before you start—news of mulch paper—and even of better ways to cook vegetables. D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Michigan.

Want fresh lima beans with Sunday roast? Eleven tender varieties are in this Annual. Only purebred seeds can produce their rich, buttery flavor.

Tawas Breezes

VOL. I MAY 9, 1930 NUMBER 1

This issue marks the beginning of another year for the Tawas Breezes.

Many a newspaper has quit in less time than that.

As an editor, of course, we probably wouldn't rank with Horace Greeley.

And it's probably true that advertising experts would not grade us very high on the way we handle this space.

But that's all right, too. They're not paying for it, either.

And this much we do know:

We've had a lot of fun these past years getting the Tawas Breezes ready each week—and we hope you've enjoyed it as much as we have.

And we also know this; through the columns of our little newspaper we have had an opportunity to know more people than we ever knew before, and we believe more people know us.

Now that we're starting another year, we certainly will appreciate any suggestions you can give us.

Those are the results we had hoped for.

We want to improve the Tawas Breezes this next year, and your suggestions will do a lot toward that end.

Just as we intend to improve the service this firm is giving to the people of this community.

Our years of experience, we believe can be of some assistance to you. And they are certainly at your disposal.

And so starts another year for the Breezes.

Incidentally, right here before we use up all the room, we want to thank you for all the interest you have shown in this space. It helps! It certainly does!

SUCH IS LIFE — Thrifty Idea!

GREAT INTEREST IN GLIDERS MANIFESTED

Cheaper Than Power Planes but Safety Doubtful.

New York.—Through the long-forgotten science and sport of gliding, aviation, which for a time last year appeared to be losing its hold on the popular imagination...

Two arguments are advanced by the glider enthusiasts in favor of this method of flying and learning to fly: one that it is cheap and the other that it is safe. Certainly it costs less than power planes...

Hawks differentiates distinctly between gliding, soaring and towing. The last, he admits frankly, is fraught with serious problems and danger. It is hard work...

However, the interest in gliding bids fair to outshine for a time public interest in all other forms of aeronautics. The progress of Hawks across the country was a long series of receptions in which thousands participated...

Speculation, particularly in Germany, as to the commercial availability of the towed glider for the transport of goods is attracting attention. Captain Hawks, enthusiast as he is, has little faith in this form of transport...

The next step appears to be "powered gliders," although your true sail-plane enthusiast resents the idea as much as the sailboat fan abhors all forms of mechanical propulsion...

Says Autogiros Will Have 200-Mile Speed

Speaking recently before the Royal Aeronautical Society in London, Juan de la Cierva, inventor of the windmill plane, said that he was satisfied it was possible to design autogiros having a top speed of 200 miles an hour...

The autogiros lately produced, the inventor pointed out, had no better performance than the equivalent conventional airplanes. In fact, they had a little less speed and a little less climb. Nevertheless, they were better flying machines.

'CHUTES STUDIED BY EXPERT FOR NAVY

Recent Improvements Are Being Given Tests.

Washington.—J. E. Sullivan of the aeronautics bureau of the Navy department, has been assigned to study parachute problems.

A cotton substitute for the silk used in parachutes is being subjected to experiments. The substitute is cheaper, according to Sullivan. While commercial interests are employing cotton to a certain extent, the bureau has not arrived at any definite conclusion regarding its use for naval purposes, he said.

There are four major manufacturers of parachutes today, while there were only one or two five years ago, he pointed out.

A recent improvement made by one manufacturer has been to make the pack perform the functions of the pilot parachute.

The pilot parachute on the ordinary chute is the first to open, and drags the larger one after it. When the rip cord releases the spring on this new type, the bottom of the pack opens and replaces the old type of pilot.

Another manufacturer has improved his product by reducing the size, which, although it makes the rate of descent faster, opens more quickly. Still another manufacturer is working on a triangular shaped parachute, which is claimed to have the feature of being steerable.

Improper operation in the releasing device and improper packing are the two principal causes of accidents in the use of parachutes, the bureau's study shows. The present development of parachutes is being worked out to a large extent on increasing their performance characteristics—making them stronger, more durable, with smaller packs, and less bulky.

The features which the navy desires to see stressed, according to Sullivan, are the certainty and rapidity of opening, slow rate of descent, which must be about twenty feet a second, and non-oscillating action.

TO PILOT DOX PLANE

Lieut. C. H. Schildhauer, one of the crack pilots of the United States navy, who, according to information from authoritative sources, will pilot the glant twelve-engine Dornier Dox plane when it starts on its East-to-West transatlantic flight in July with fifty persons on board.

Army Plane Maneuvers at Height of 25,000 Feet

Burbank, Calif.—Tactical maneuvers 25,000 feet in the air—approximately two miles higher than aerial battles were fought during the war—have been carried out by a new pursuit plane designed for the army here.

The new model is a biplane, powered by a single 425-horse power motor. It is equipped with a supercharger which increases its climbing power, and a new cowling design to give it greater speed.

Officials of the Boeing factory said in recent tests the ship flew from the ground to an altitude of 10,000 feet and back in four and one-half minutes. They said it attained a speed in excess of 200 miles an hour.

Pilot Boasts of Sight

Omaha.—Robert Cochrane, Boeing pilot on the Omaha-Chicago division of the transcontinental air-mail route, claims a record for sharp vision after seeing beacon lights 150 miles away from here. He was flying at 7,000 feet above the city when he spied all lights to the east leading to Des Moines and two beacons beyond.

Assolant, Ocean Flyer Goes Back to Old Job

Le Bourget.—Jean Assolant, after a few months of glory for crossing the Atlantic last June, has gone back to his job as a pilot on the Paris-Strasbourg air line.

Assolant still is popular but he also is poor and he has to make a living. He met kings and presidents when he and his companions, Lotti and Lefevre, made a tour of European capitals after their transatlantic flight but there was no salary attached to the job of spreading the fame of France.

Flying is Assolant's trade, his every-day work that puts butter on his bread. His pastime is football.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

By GRANT DIXON.

Live Exhibit. The American Museum of Natural History, a vast and impressive hall of dead things, has one live exhibit—snakes. Everything else is as extinct as the dinosaur exhibit. A few live snakes are no great trouble to a well organized museum, but the Natural History museum has been greatly upset. A garter snake decided to have a family, and brought 24 troublesome children into being. The infants were something like moths; they got into everything. They seeped out of their own enclosures, and some of the best minds of the museum have been sorely taxed in hunting the babies down. They aren't sure that all have been captured yet. Nobody is greatly worried, though, for garter snakes are quite harmless.

Roof Scene.

As I sit in my office, I can see, on the rooftop across the street, a man practicing a speech. He is ineffectually trying to hide himself behind a chimney. He is holding a copy of the speech in one hand, and wildly gesticulating with the other. Others in my building have noticed him, and one of the onlookers yells applause. "Yea-a-a!" The speaker turns, and grins. "I've got to make it tomorrow night," he yells. "Want to hear me?"

Bob's Dream.

Robert Benchley relates that he had a dream the other night. "I dreamed," he told me, "that I was acting as a judge in a dispute between two Indians over a blanket. The affair had just got to the point where one Indian called the other a thief, when I woke up. I looked at the clock. It was early—only 8 o'clock. So I decided I had time to go back to sleep and hear the rest of the case."

New Vogue.

It is not surprising these days to notice among the snooty limousines that race up and down Park avenue a ridiculous old gasoline buggy of the vintage of 1905 or 1910. The occupant thereof will not be a junkman, as one might suspect, but one of the upper set. The rich, and particularly the nouveau riche, have adopted the fad of buying and operating museum-piece motor cars.

Slight Error.

A young New York college professor recently received a mass of flowers and telegrams that he didn't appreciate, all due to the carelessness of a rewrite man on a financial newspaper. This rewrite man is employed in boiling down the news of the day as it comes over the tickers. One item read that Soandso, assistant dean at a certain college, had been made dean. The rewrite man thought the information to be that Soandso is dead—and he wrote it thus.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Earth Loses Sun's Heat

Usually we think the earth is kept warm by the sun. But most of the heat given us by the sun dissipates itself during the night, and as half the earth is dark while the sun shines on the other half, there can be no permanent accumulation from the sun. The earth is really kept warm by heat from within it.

Dance and Defy Age, Says Octogenarian

For more than half a century she has been teaching others to dance—to dance and stay young.

secure a closer view. Perhaps women must smoke when the urge is on, even if by so doing they bring discomfort to a helpless convalescent, but even the most intimate relationships do not warrant sitting on a friend who is just recovering from a serious operation.

Mrs. Felton has just been calling upon Mrs. Ford, who, poor woman, has been on her back for months and is pretty near the end of her journey.

The two women are about the same age, the former husky, vigorous, and proud of the fact that she has never had a sick day in her life. She prolongs her call for an hour or so, when twenty minutes would have been more than adequate, and spends the time in telling how amazingly well she is, how many herculean physical tasks she has recently performed, and how, if nothing unforeseen happens, she seems likely to live to be a hundred. Somehow she does not sense the fact that this flaunting of her exuberant health in the face of a woman who at best has only a few weeks of life before her, has not helped the invalid the easier to bear her own pains and disappointments.

Mrs. Higgins knows what to do when she comes into a sickroom. "What a lovely room you have," she says to Mrs. Ford, as she enters the sick chamber. "If you must be sick—and really you look better than you did when I was here before—you certainly have a beautiful place to stay in. Everybody's asking about you. Sometimes I think I'd be willing to be sick myself just to find out how many friends I had, and especially if I had as many as you have."

She stays hardly ten minutes but she leaves the sick woman cheered, hopeful, happy in the thought that she may, after all, get well, and if she doesn't she is not going to be forgotten, for she will be leaving behind those who love her.

Wealth Awaits Long Missing Girl

Seattle.—There's a fairy godmother in Seattle waiting to lavish her love and the good things of this life on Hope Johnston, an orphan, if the right Hope Johnston can be found.

The lucky girl, who should now be about twenty, may learn all about her good fortune by communicating with Louis Abels, insurance broker in the Exeter apartments.

For the "fairy godmother" is none other than Abels' wife, Margaret. For years Mrs. Abels has been searching for Hope, whose father, Mrs. Abels' brother, was killed in a mine explosion at Tolt in 1911, and whose mother died of a broken heart shortly after. Mrs. Abels' long search for her niece was brought to light when Abels visited Justice J. B. Wright for information regarding the Hope Johnston who had been given a suspended sentence of thirty days in his court for poisoning a girl friend's party dress.

Thinking the girl might be the one he and his wife had vainly searched for through the years, Abels obtained detailed information about her, which led only to another disappointment, he admitted.

"I am certain she is not the same Hope Johnston," he said, "even though the police have not been able to find her again so that we could see her. The information we have now con-

VISITING THE SICK

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK, Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

It is a very commendable habit, this visiting the sick, and one which, with all our modern equipment and trained nurses to care for those who are not well, is not so generally found as it was fifty years ago or so. It is not only commendable; it is in reality one of the human virtues for which heaven is the promised reward.

"I was sick, and ye ministered unto me," was an act for which one is to be rewarded with a heavenly inheritance. And yet, some one could do the world a service and possibly make a fortune for himself if he could establish a school for the purpose of teaching the ignorant what is best to do and to say, when visiting the sick, not to speak of what were well not to say or do.

Two young women were calling on Jacobs when I dropped in on him at the hospital not long ago. Jacobs had only recently come from under the knife and must still have had a good many tender spots on his anatomy. The young women were all but sitting on him as he lay in a helpless condition, each one perched unconventionally on the bed, smoking and hovering over him as if he were a curiosity of which they were trying to

THE STORY

On a pleasure trip in eastern waters, Philip Amory, English World War veteran, now a trader on the island of Papua, New Guinea, plunges overboard to save the life of a musical comedy actress, known as "Gin-Sling." Amory becomes interested in Pia Laurier, member of a wealthy New South Wales family. He tells her of his knowledge of a wonderful gold field on the island. "Gin-Sling" tells him Pia is engaged to Sir Richard Fanshaw, a long-forgetter incident in which he witnessed the escape of Fanshaw from a leper colony. He tells his friend Bassett about it and decides to inform Laurier. He goes to Thursday Island to send the message. Amory hears Fanshaw dictate a message which indicates that the secret of the gold field is known. Amory meets with an accident that lays him up for three weeks.

"I think you're very good indeed," I lied promptly. Dismay was the emotion that, in truth, had possession of me. I wondered how many people knew, or would know, and how soon they would be on the track of the unique, amazing place known as Tata-tata. I swore to myself that, doctors or no doctors, I was off tomorrow.

Something of this I said. Gin-Sling eyed me with a satisfaction that I found almost puzzling. "Right; get off and beat him to it. That's the way, my lad; drink hearty, you'll soon be dead!" was her entirely Jinnian comment. "What way will you go?" she asked, presently.

"Way? Oh, by Daru, I suppose." She seemed to like that, and I realized, with some astonishment, that the map of Papua was no blank to her. "Well," she said, "I must be going, or the cats will begin to mew. Call and say good-by to me before you go. I'm out of a shop now, so I dare say I'll make back to little Sydney again. You've no idea what a lamb you look in those pink pajamas, cuddly boy! See you again soon." Her yellow stockings gleamed as she walked down the long veranda. Just not dancing, out through the doorway into the smiling sun.

Next day I left the hospital. I called on Jinny, as a matter of course, and was rather surprised to find that she had sailed the previous night. The hotel people didn't seem to be sure what boat she had taken or where she had gone. And the truth was, that I had too much to do to puzzle over the matter, for more than a little while. Nor did I, for even an instance, suspect what matters of grave import had lain concealed beneath the light surfaces of our talk.

I had to go to Port Moresby. It turned out, because there was no one at Daru to take charge of my store, the man on whom I counted having suddenly left. I remember I was worried at having to go, but consoled myself by remembering that Sir Richard and his lot could not possibly get away before me, since they had still to do their recruiting, and mine was as good as done. I had only to whistle, and get as many boys as I wanted, but they would have to employ a recruiter, and probably overcome a good many difficulties before they collected boys enough to carry for a large party of strange white men. As to Pia, she was safe in the East.

So, feeling like myself again at last, I sailed once more in the merry sun and wind, heading my cutter for Port Moresby.

Never since then have I believed in presentiments, in warnings, or shadows that fall before events. There was no warning for me. Singing, I went straight to the dark day of my life; the day that has colored, and will color, every following hour, until that time when hours and days shall mean nothing more to me.

CHAPTER VI

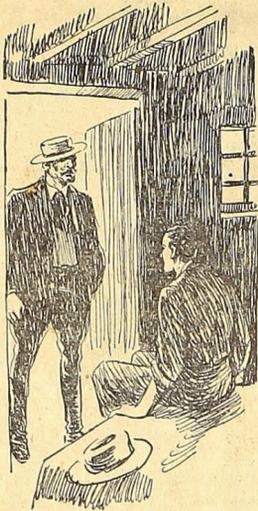

I made Port Moresby on the evening of the third day. My boy was not with me; I had sent him back to Daru direct, and was alone. It was duskish when I sighted Paga Hill, with a nasty squall coming up. I thought with disgust of the trouble of seeing the doctor, and the customs, and getting pratique, all to be gone through before I could have leave to land. Very likely they wouldn't give me pratique that evening; I should have to sleep on board the tiny cutter again, just when I needed a good rest.

The sight of Fisherman Island looming up to starboard decided me. I would run in there, spend the night at the empty quarantine station, and get off early next day for the port. Nobody would know—the island was uninhabited save by the old, crazy Solomon Island caretaker who had been there for over thirty years, and couldn't tell tales even if he would. Perhaps I was breaking quarantine laws—I didn't know, and did not much care. I knew that the two houses were comfortable, if one could get into them, and I reckoned I could manage that.

I found the two little houses standing up stark and pale against the velvet sky; I scrambled into one, and cautiously flashed my torch.

"Well!" was my astonished comment. Somebody had certainly been preparing the place for a stay. There was a comfortable bed, a couple of planter chairs, a box that—I guessed contained linen and oddments of various kinds. I peered into the cook-house. Stores; cooking utensils. "They'll be coming along tomorrow," I thought; and reflected that I was luckier than I deserved.

It was very cool out there, I remember; far cooler than it would have been in little iron rooms beneath the stifling roofs of town. I had a bite of something from the locker of my boat, flung my bedding on the unknown person's bedstead, and slept magnificently.

Dawn came with a wild crying of seabirds, and a sudden wind that burst in the door. It waked me, and I slid to earth, looking for my shoes, for now it was full time I got away. I suppose I took a few seconds to slip on and tie my shoes; I never heard a sound—but when I looked up, there was some one in the doorway.

My first thought—for you could not see the man's face, so blackly was he silhouetted against the pale rose and primrose of the sky—was—"Caught; maybe it's the doctor inspecting." My second sent the blood from heart to fingertips, like leaping flame. I knew that tall, tight, well-set figure, that bearded head. I had seen it four times; once on the island of decay and death; once on the great liner in the Arafura sea, once at the hotel on Thursday, and now here.

Fanshaw had seen me, he came across the floor in a couple of strides, and asked me, with profane additions, what on earth I might be doing there?

I could hardly answer him at first; never, till that moment, had it occurred to me that, however well he was known to me, I was, so far, quite unknown to him, except by repute.

I answered him briefly. "I did not know anyone had the place. I got in late, and camped."

"The h—! you did," answered Fanshaw roughly. "Don't you know you have to get leave to land?"

"There was a squall coming."

"Squall be hanged. You'd better clear out of this, and be thankful if I don't report you."

I might have gone—knowing myself to be in the wrong, and not wishing to enlighten Fanshaw more than was necessary about myself—I might have gone, and changed the course of four lives that day—had not the merest trifle intervened. Nothing on earth but a cushion. Sir Richard had been carrying it, wrapped up in paper; while he was talking to me, he laid it down on a table, and the paper, being insufficiently fastened, burst open. I saw the thing, a pretty trifle of white satin and embroidered flowers, crying "Wedding Present" in every stitch and thread. I saw somebody's card fastened to it. And immediately I knew what it was; for whom it had been intended. And the world, for one reeling instant, vanished behind veils of red.

I came out of that moment's madness calm and cold, as once or twice, in the war, I had found myself, before the doing of some deed that brought a medal after it.

"You are Sir Richard Fanshaw," I stated. He looked at me curiously; I thought he was beginning to guess.

"It may interest you to know," I went on, that I am Philip Amory.

Now he turned scarlet; the curious honey-colored eyes flashed crescent moons of white above and below, like the eyes of a dangerous horse.

"It seems," he said, restraining himself, "that I owe you a great deal of kindly interest in what I had supposed were my affairs."

I let the gibe pass. I had one thing only in my mind, and, like a charging bull, I drove straight for it.

"Where is Miss Laurier?" I asked. I didn't expect him to answer, but he replied at once, coolly.

"About forty-five miles out at sea on today's Morinda."

"She has come back to marry you?" "Exactly."

"You're fixing up this place for her?" He did not reply to that; he looked at me, watchfully, as one boxer eyes another in the ring.

"Well, I want to tell you," I said, "that you won't marry her—as long as I'm above ground."

Again he was silent. Again I charged like a bull; but this time, it was as a bull charges, frantically and uselessly, upon the barrier about the ring.

"You were the man who got away from Iota Island. You're an escaped leper."

He just laughed a little; seemed to be waiting for me to have done. I had not anticipated this. He just stood there, not admitting, not denying. If I was strong, he, with his weight of added years and honors, his money, and his celebrity, to back him up, was stronger. I could feel all that—as he meant that I should feel it—almost visibly upholding and supporting him, as we stood there in the windy quarantine house, with the seabirds crying on the sands outside; Fanshaw and I—one and one, with a shadowy third—the eternal triangle yet again.

Fanshaw was entirely self-possessed. He waited till it seemed clear that I had done, and then spoke.

"Your boat is outside. You can get away as quick as you like."

"If I do," I warned him, "I'll sail straight to Port and stop your d—d marriage."

"Just as you choose," he said. He took the white cushion out of its paper, smoothed it, laid it carefully on the back of one of the planter chairs; set down some small parcels he had in his pockets, and walked out of the house. He did not seem to be paying any attention at all to me.

One used to fight in the great war, sometimes, when one was almost three parts asleep; drunk with the want of rest, long continued, with the never-relaxing strain. So I fought then, drunk, drugged by Fanshaw's enormous personality, his superior mental forces, yet determined, as ever one had been in the trenches, not to give in while life was life, and I was I.

We went down to the beach, almost together. There was my cutter, rocking on the tide; there, long and black and slim, was what I knew to be the fastest thing afloat for a thousand miles—a speed launch capable of doing thirty miles an hour, which had lain for some good while in Port, unsaleable, because she simply ate fuel.

I thought I knew who had bought her now; who didn't count a tin or two of benzine, when he happened to be in a hurry.

Cured Small Boys of "Finickiness" at Meals

Meal time generally was a trying period in the Brown household. Invariably Bobby didn't like half the things that were served, and Billy expressed a dislike for the other half. Often they agreed on the same item. It required threats and persuasion to force them to partake of the food provided, but at length the Browns decided on a new method.

For weeks they compiled a list of the eatables that the boys hated, and served them exclusively for dinner. There was a howl of anguish from the two urchins as they glanced at the table. The parents passed the various dishes instead of Mr. Brown serving them, but the boys, with a pained look, took tiny helpings or passed them up entirely. They pecked at the food and went to bed hungry, for Mrs. Brown had seen to it that there was nothing in the larder to attract them.

This went on for several meals—and the boys finally had to surrender. Now they actually are fond of some of the victuals they formerly detested.

However, neither has been heard since then to kick about any item of the food. They are afraid they'll have to eat it for days at a time.—New York Sun.

One Point of View

It's going on and up that's the fun of studying; not arriving at the place. Arriving is the end.

Mother Love Superior to Fear of Crocodile

Mentally the South African native may not measure up to the standard of the white man, but on the question of courage the Bantu loses little in comparison with his master if Africa, says a writer in the Boston Globe. And this goes for the women, too.

Take a case in point. Recently a little black girl ventured to the banks of the Gwaai river, near Bulawayo, Rhodesia. While she was stooping to fill her calabash a crocodile glided up the bank and seized her, fixing its teeth in her back.

Struggling and screaming for help the girl managed to free herself for a moment, only to be grasped again, this time by the arm. The mother, hearing the cries and guessing their cause, had the presence of mind to arm herself with an assegai as she flew to the rescue.

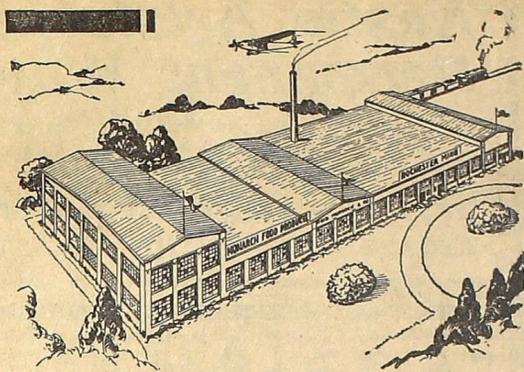

When she reached the scene the crocodile had already dragged the child into the water, but the mother plunged in and attacked the crocodile so fiercely that it gave up the prey and made for deeper water. The child, minus an arm, is now doing well.

Experiments Prove That "Mulching" Helps Crops

For many years Hawaiian sugar planters made a practice of leaving the crop refuse, such as leaves and tops, between the rows of growing cane. This served the double purpose of conserving the moisture in the soil and keeping down the weed growth. Later the experiment was made of covering the ground between the rows with a cheap grade of asphalt paper, and still later the entire field was so covered when it was found that the stiff shoots of the cane would penetrate the paper, while weeds would not. These differing processes are known as mulching. The same thing is now done with the pineapple crop, holes being made in the paper so that the pineapples can grow through. Experiments made in the United States in mulching various vegetables are said to have resulted in production increases of from 30 to 500 or 600 per cent. It is said that 12 days after a rain soil protected with paper mulch will contain as much as 20 per cent more moisture than unmulched soil in the same vicinity.

Britain's Richest City

If the proportion of well-to-do citizens may be gauged by the number of private motor cars licensed in a city, then Bradford is the richest city in Great Britain. In ratio to its population, Bradford has the largest number of private motor cars; London, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Manchester, and Birmingham being far behind. With 5,700 private cars, Bradford has one for every fifty of its inhabitants.

It had met the test and come through with flying colors. No other flour can satisfy me now. I could tell Gold Medal 'Kitchen-tested' flour in the dark."

THEY use a new-type flour for all baking purposes—GOLD MEDAL "Kitchen-tested" Flour—that simplifies baking remarkably and banishes the cause of most baking failures.

Failures, experts found, were mostly due to the fact that two sacks of the same flour often acted differently, even with the same recipe. . . . it was not uniform in oven action.
