The second story will be occupied by the general offices. These are finished in green tontone and have polished oak floors.

DIGEST OF GAME LAWS WILL BE DISTRIBUTED EARLIER THIS SEASON

The digest of game laws in Michigan for the 1930-1931 season will be distributed by the Department of Conservation, throughout the state early this month, at least a month earlier than last year. As in past years, the digest will list, besides the hunting and trapping seasons and the limits, various license regulations, and all special regulations relating to closed hunting areas.

The digests will be distributed to all county clerks, other license agents, all conservation officers and other field men of the Department, etc.

Tourist Camps Are Buzzing

Forty-Eight Applications for Iosco County Normal

At the present time there are forty-eight applications for admittance to the Iosco County Normal class for 1930-1931 in the hands of the county normal board. Sixteen of these are from students in other counties. Of course it is necessary that those from Iosco county be taken care of first if the scholarship of the student is such that would enable the student to become a good teacher.

When more than thirty applications are received for membership in one class the State Department of Public Instruction makes the following recommendations: "The county normal board will have an opportunity to select from those applying, young people who are best adapted by reason of scholarship, personality, and attitude toward country life and rural school work. All young people who will not be eighteen years of age in time to receive a certificate for the opening of school the following September should be excluded, so that their places may be taken by people ready for teaching.

At a meeting of the county normal board Saturday, August 2, the list of applications was thoroughly examined, and the qualifications examined according to the above recommendations. A group of twenty-eight, which is as large a class as is desirable where only two county normal teachers are employed, was selected. The remaining applications were either placed on a waiting list or the applicant asked to apply in some other county conveniently nearby for the applicant. The board was very sorry not to be able to take care of all those applying but they wish to extend their best wishes for the success of all and they hope those not accepted in this county will find a place in another normal class.

Alpena and Ogemaw normals have not yet received their quotas of applications.

Political Announcements

To the Voters of Iosco County: In view of the facts that there are no other candidates for County Treasurer in the September primaries, and I did not realize it is the custom of the Republican party to give a man a second term, I have decided to withdraw my name as candidate for county treasurer in favor of Mr. Grant, and if nothing happens to prevent, to come up for that office in two years.

Respectfully,
W. B. Piper.

Mrs. Alice Waterbury

Mrs. Alice Waterbury, widow of John M. Waterbury, died July 31 at the home of her daughter, Mrs. M. C. Woggaman at Alabaster.

Mrs. Alice Veronica Sheperd was born in New York State in 1846, and passed away at the age of 84 years and 11 months. She was united in marriage to John Mason Waterbury on May 22, 1869. To this union were born five children, three of whom died in infancy. Mrs. M. C. Woggaman of Alabaster and William E. Waterbury of Cleveland survive. She and her husband came to Tawas City early in their married life and made their home here since. Mr. Waterbury preceded his wife in death ten years ago. In her early days she became a charter member of the Baptist church in East Tawas which Rev. C. H. Prescott started. Later a church was organized in Tawas City, of which she has been an active member ever since.

The funeral services were held at twelve o'clock Sunday from the Baptist church. Rev. Frank Metcalf officiated.

Smith-Potts

Miss Blanche Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Smith of Alabaster, and Russell Potts of this city were united in marriage last Saturday. Rev. E. A. Kirchoff of St. Joseph's church performed the ceremony. Edward Smith and Miss Olive Smith, brother and sister of the bride, attended the bride and groom.

Accepts Position

Clifford Clayton, for the past 14 years mechanic at the Leslie garage, Prescott, has accepted the position as general manager at the Ford garage at Hale. Mr. Clayton is an expert mechanic, and will endeavor to give the people of Hale and vicinity the best service. In going to Hale, Mr. Clayton expressed his desire to fulfill every requirement of the automotive public, and solicits their patronage.

Barkman Mercantile Co. Offers Gift of Silver in August Circulator Sale

"We recognize that ideas for the modern home almost always originate with the woman," says Nathan Barkman, of the Barkman Mercantile Co.

"For that reason we are offering as a special premium during our August sale, featuring Glow Boys and Ray Boys, a gift of silver, something that every woman likes and can always use."

"We men have to admit that the women are responsible for modern ideas in the home and for that reason we are offering a gift of particular interest to them."

Mr. Barkman announces that the silver premium also applies to the new Glow Maid range which is now on display at their store.

Arrest Thieves Who Operated in County

The thieves who have been operating in Iosco county for some time were apprehended a week ago Saturday by Sheriff Chas. W. Curry and Dell Schumaker of the State Police just outside the village of Lincoln on U. S. 23. Walter Mahalak and son, Alfred, were taken in charge and are now in the Alpena jail lacking bail of $5,000.

According to officers, the Mahalaks have been suspected of petty thievery for some time and the development which finally brought arrest was the theft of cattle, which ranged from Omer on the south to Lachine on the north, and the suspicion of the Lincoln fire crew at the tower, which is across the road from the Mahalak farm.

Mahalak declared he had bought the cows at the Detroit stockyards, but several of the owners were positive that they knew their own stock. A cow that has been advertised for several weeks by Mrs. Andrew Schaaf of Wilber was positively identified by the Schaafs. Four other cows, said to have been stolen were also found at the farm. Two cows belonging to Mrs. John Robinson of Whittemore and one to Jim Schram of Omer, all were identified by their owners.

A bale of wire taken from the former Hadwin farm the first week of July was also found and was identified by the owner, Mrs. Ginsberg.

Previous to locating the Mahalaks Sheriff Curry had made a thorough search through Iosco, Arenac and Ogemaw counties and it is thought their arrest will stop the depredation in the county on cattle.

First Residence in Street Widening Program Moved

Work is progressing rapidly in widening the right-of-way through East Tawas for the proposed new Shore Road. Edgar Born of Cadillac has the contract for moving the Thomas, McKay and Sedgman residences. Moving of the Thomas residence has been completed and work on the McKay residence is now under way. The contract includes the construction of a new sidewalk to conform to the new street line.

Brilliant Ann Harding Has Lead in 'Holiday'

The stage hit, "Holiday," in which Ann Harding, Pathe's dazzling blonde from the stage, after a couple of hopeful tries in the talkie line, at last comes into her own in this excellent picture, will be shown at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, Sunday and Monday, August 10-11.

They gave her a tremendous part, and she fills every inch of it. As Linda Seton, daughter of the very rich, whose whole life is rebellion against the golden bars of her little social world, Miss Harding does brilliantly. She is helped by an unusually fine cast. In fact, Mary Astor, as her soulless sister, very nearly carries off the picture. Robert Ames, Monroe Owsley, William Holden and Edward Everett Horton are all perfectly cast.

This is as fine a piece of high comedy, with tragic overtones, as the talking screen has yet held. Another justification for the mike—and another for the talented Harding.

This picture just played Detroit, and is being given an early showing here. Be sure to see it.

County Fair Will Be Held Sept. 9 to 12

Many are now planning exhibits for the Iosco county fair which will be held September 9 to 12. The premium lists are now being distributed. A fine program of free attractions have been secured, also the usual rides and midway.

Fred C. Latter, secretary of the Iosco County Agricultural Society, in a communication to The Tawas Herald Thursday, said:

"Many people are asking for the dates of this year's fair. We are back to our old dates, the second week in September; entry day the ninth, and the program will be on the tenth, eleventh and twelfth. We have made a few changes in the premium books, so be sure to read yours. Do you know we paid more for prizes last year than was paid for any form of entertainment? We are encouraging this side of the fair, especially the club work."

"As for the entertainment end, we have booked only high class acts, and something entirely different from other years. Our firework contract calls for 39 set pieces and 285 shells, besides announcement bombs, fired by skilled men from the factory.

"Of course there will be racing two days and entries will be large. We have a new ride man this year, Ernest L. Wade, a young man who comes well recommended and who has a clean outfit."

"For the first time, we will have a loud speaker installed so that all announcements, results of races, music, and all acts can be heard plainly. This equipment is the same as used at Traverse City last year and should add considerably to our program."

"Plan now to attend your fair. Let's keep Iosco county on the map."

Last Health Lecture to Be Given Next Week

Dr. Frances Hennessy, of the Children's Fund of Michigan, who has been in Iosco county for the past few weeks, will give the last of a series of lectures throughout the county beginning Monday, August 11th. The topic is home nursing, which should be of interest to all women.

The schedule is as follows: Monday—10:00 a. m., Reno township hall; 2:30 p. m., Hale town hall. Tuesday—10:00 a. m., National City school; 2:30 p. m., Whittemore school. Wednesday—9:30 a. m., Baptist church, Hemlock road; 3:00 p. m., Court House, Tawas City. Thursday—2:30 p. m., Oscoda Auditorium, Oscoda.

Alabaster Wins Twice on Sunday

Alabaster collected two victories on Sunday when they defeated the AuGres nine in the opening game by a 4 to 3 count, and followed up by trouncing Townline, 9 to 0. Both games were played at Alabaster.

The AuGres-Alabaster game was a pitchers' battle between Engleman for AuGres and Erickson for Alabaster. The home boys tapped Engleman for a total of ten hits, including a triple by Davison, while AuGres gathered but eight hits off Erickson. Engleman struck out eleven Alabaster men, and Erickson found nine victims to this method.

The second game of the day saw Townline receive a severe lacing at the hands of the Alabaster boys. Alabaster collected eight hits behind Brown's effective pitching to put across this victory in fine shape.

Stirring Novel Now Becomes Great Talkie

"Sarah and Son," Timothy Shea's great, best-selling novel of mother-love, will be seen in its talking filmized version at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, Tuesday and Wednesday, August 12 and 13.

Ruth Chatterton, of "Madame X" and "The Laughing Lady" fame, is starred in the central role of Sarah Storm, the impoverished young wife-mother who, stimulated by a burning ambition to raise herself from obscurity and to regain the baby boy who had been spirited away from her by her worthless husband, finally achieves fame and glory as an operatic star and eventually is reunited with her son. How she accomplishes the final step of her plan furnishes some of the most tense and exciting scenes the talking screen has yet given us.

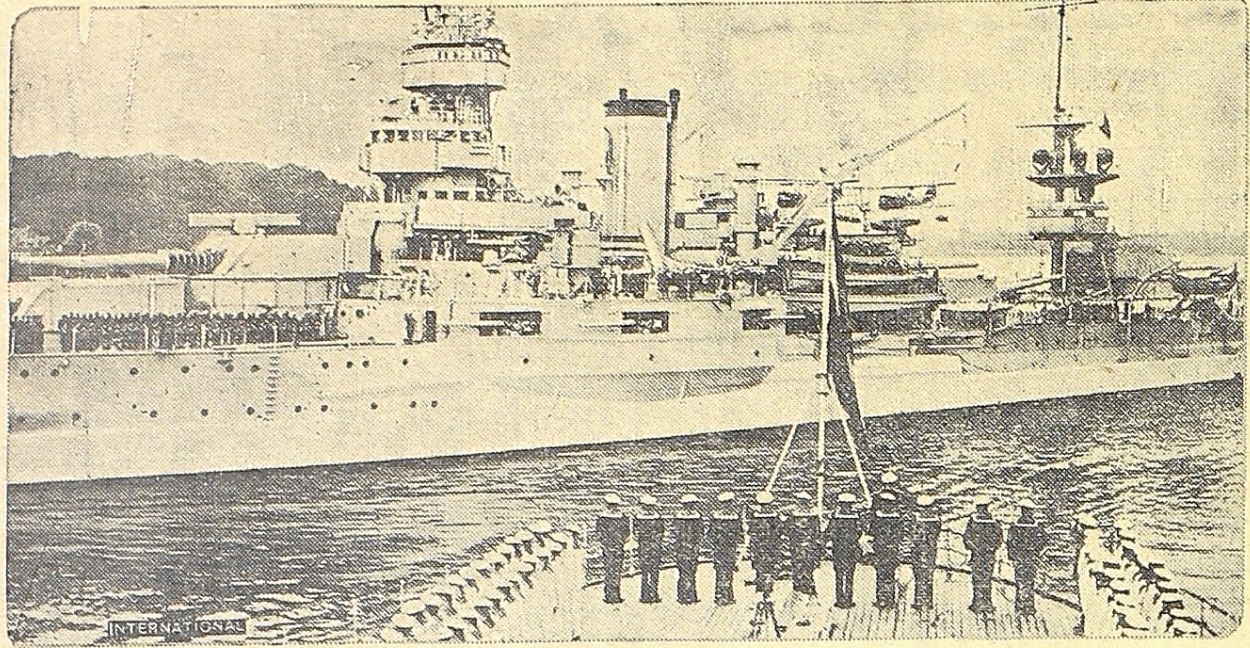

Fredric March, the romantic lead of "The Wild Party," and of "The Marriage Playground," is here cast as the lawyer who falls in love with Miss Chatterton and helps her to win both romance and the fulfillment of her plan to retrieve her son. The role of the little boy is played by Philippe de Lacy. The villainous husband is played by Fuller Mellish, Jr. See it sure!

THE OLD BRICK CAPITOL

BELLE BOYD

THE United States Supreme court is soon to have a new home in the National Capital befitting the dignity of that important branch of the federal government, but the selection of a site for this temple of justice has meant the passing of one of the most historic buildings in Washington.

For 115 years there stood at the corner of Maryland avenue and First street, N. E., in the block adjoining the Library of Congress, a building known as the "Old Brick Capitol," because at a critical period in our history it housed the government of the United States. But now it is no more. It has been torn down so that upon its site may be erected the stately new home of the national judiciary.

The Old Brick Capitol came into being as the result of one of the greatest catastrophes which ever befell the republic—the burning of the Capitol and other government buildings in Washington by the British during the War of 1812. As we look back upon it now, it seems strange that our government should have been so apathetic and the citizens of Washington so indifferent to danger as they were in August, 1814, when a British fleet sailed into Chesapeake bay and anchored off Fort Mchenry. If they gave the matter any thought at all, it was that New York or Baltimore might be attacked, but it seemed to occur to no one that the National Capitol was in any serious danger.

For one thing, they counted on Fort Mchenry to keep the invaders from coming up the bay, and if the enemy should attempt a naval attack on Washington by way of the Potomac river, they seemed to believe that the antiquated cannon placed at several points below the city would hold them off. It was no tribute to the intelligence of the British leaders to believe this and, as might have been expected, the enemy did exactly what no one seems to have thought they would do. They launched a land attack from the other direction and so swift were their movements and so inadequate the preparations by the Americans for guarding against such an emergency that the red coats were almost upon the city before they were discovered.

Then there was a great scurrying around and General Winder hastily assembled a force of some 6,000 men to halt the invaders. Five hundred of his men were sailors but the remainder were raw and undisciplined militia, and it was with this force that he faced an army of 5,000 British, mostly sailors and marines, under Admiral Cockburn and General Ross at Bladensburg. Americans to this day remember with shame the "Bladensburg races," as the newspapers of the day called the rout which followed. For although the 600 American sailors made a brave stand, the militia ran and the troops, with the exception of a few, fled in their panic flight. In the meantime Dolly Madison, the wife of the President, was proving herself a heroine. When news of the Bladensburg disaster reached Washington, most of the government officials and hundreds of citizens fled incontinently without thought of trying to save anything from the invaders. But Dolly seized the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution of the United States and other priceless documents, loaded them and other valuables of the government in a farm wagon and took them across the Potomac into Virginia, where she was later joined by the President, who was forced to hide out in the woods as the enemy marched into the Capital.

The British made a triumphal entry of it on August 24. Entering the Executive Mansion, the British officers, according to their own account, drank the British king's health in the American President's wine and then set fire to the building. Next they visited the Capitol and Admiral Cockburn took his seat in the chair of the speaker of the house of representatives. Springing to his feet, he shouted, "Shall this harbor of Yankee Democracy be burned? All for it will, say 'Aye!'" Shouts of "Aye! Aye!" filled the room and a few minutes later the torch was applied. Next they destroyed the treasury building, set fire to other government structures, and when they departed they left behind them a city virtually in ashes.

Washington, with its smoking ruins, was in a critical situation. Many members of congress had never been fully reconciled to moving the National Capital from old-established Philadelphia to this "backwoods village," and after the scattered legislators had reassembled, a movement was started to abandon Washington and reestablish the seat of government in Philadelphia. Then a group of leading Washington citizens got busy. They determined to provide, at their own expense, a suitable meeting place when the new congress convened.

It was this structure which for the next four years housed the government of the United States. President James Monroe took the oath of office on a platform erected on the north side of the building, the first outdoor inauguration ceremonies since Washington's in New York, and the one which established the precedent for the induction into office of later Presidents. But even more important during the four eventful years of the Old Brick Capitol's early history were the acts of the Fourteenth and Fifteenth congresses which met in it.

They granted a charter for 20 years to that bank of the United States against which Andrew Jackson waged his famous fight. They appropriated a million a year for eight years for naval construction. They authorized the President to engage John Trumbull to make his four big paintings for the new Capitol that was to be. They granted to Revolutionary veterans pensions of $20 a month to officers and $8 to privates, on "proof of need." They enacted, on April 4, 1818, the law adopting Capt. Samuel Chester Reid's design for the national flag. They ratified the treaty with Great Britain for the restriction of naval forces on the Great Lakes. They authorized the President to take possession of East and West Florida. They admitted Mississippi, Indiana and Illinois into the Union; made organized territories of Alabama and Arkansas and authorized Alabama to take steps for statehood.

Perhaps most important of all was the long debate over the request of Missouri to be admitted as a state. The request was not granted at that time. But John W. Taylor, a representative from New York, introduced an amendment to the bill for the admission of Missouri, providing that no slavery nor involuntary servitude should exist north of the line of 39 degrees 39 minutes north latitude. This he was finally prevailed upon to withdraw. But in the next congress it was taken up again by Henry Clay and was pressed to adoption as the famous Missouri compromise.

In the meantime, work was going forward on the rebuilding of the Capitol, and on December 6, 1819, just four years and two days after the Fourteenth congress assembled in the Old Brick Capitol, the Sixteenth congress assembled in the new marble Capitol, the first unit of the great structure which houses our government today. The Old Brick Capitol was turned over to the Circuit court for its use—an appropriate predecessor of the new home of the Supreme court which is to be built on its site. Later the Old Brick Capitol became a fashionable boarding house and served as a home for many notables during the next three decades. In it, John C. Calhoun, statesman, senator and Vice President, lived for nearly a quarter of a century, and he died in one of the rooms on the second floor in 1841.

The Civil war brought to the Old Brick Capitol its second era of fame. Commandeered by the War department for use as a house of detention, it became known as Old Capitol Prison and held within its walls scores of so-called "prisoners of state"—blockade runners, foreign army officers captured while serving in the Confederate forces, conscientious objectors, Union deserters and Confederate spies. Undoubtedly the most famous of all these was the betwixting woman spy for the men in gray—Belle Boyd.

While Belle Boyd was incarcerated there, after her first capture, she was accustomed to give a concert in her room every night for the benefit of other prisoners, and this invariably began with the singing of "Maryland, My Maryland." She was released in exchange for a Union general and sent South under a flag of truce. But she was soon at her work again, was again captured and once more sent to Old Capitol. During this period the prison was also the scene of one grim event—the execution of Maj. Henry Wirz, keeper of the Confederate prison camp at Andersonville, Ga. Tried by a military tribunal, presided over by Gen. Lew Wallace, later famous as the author of "Ben Hur," Wirz was convicted of conspiracy to undermine the health of Union prisoners and of violating the rules of civilized warfare and was hanged on a gallows in the prison courtyard on November 10, 1865.

After the war the Old Brick Capitol was remodeled and converted into three private dwellings, which were occupied by Associate Justice Field of the Supreme court, General Dunn and Mrs. Condit-Smith. In this period it was the scene of one more event of historic interest. In one of the drawing rooms Miss Louisa Condit-Smith became the wife of Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, soldier, territorial administrator and candidate for the nomination for the Presidency.

In 1921 Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont bought the building and presented it to the National Woman's party for its national headquarters. It became a gathering place for the feminists, not only of America but of the whole world, and there was carried on the work for the freedom and equality of women. Finally the government, in seeking a site for the new Supreme court building, selected this one, instituted condemnation proceedings two years ago, and this year the work of razing it began.

WAS NOT ACCUSTOMED TO PARLOR TRICKS

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

IT WAS greatly against the wishes of the Summers family that their daughter, Janet, accepted the position as assistant director of the "Fairleigh Summer Camp for City Children" at Lake of Pines. For several weeks it had been the subject of considerable argument and Mrs. Summers had wept on several occasions at the mention of it.

"But, mother, there is nothing at the seashore for me. I spent eight weeks there last summer and was bored to death. Nothing but dancing, bridge and motoring—that crowd won't even go swimming for fear of getting tanned! Sit around in flashy bathing suits under striped umbrellas and pose! I cannot waste another summer like that, and surely it won't be wasted if I can help 56 little children—poor, hungry little waifs—to get strong and well."

"And so you call spending a summer with your family, associating with the best people on the cape as any other normal young woman should do, wasting time, Janet?" inquired Mrs. Summers plaintively as she inspected the back of her exquisitely marcelled hair with a mirror. "And besides, the Leonardards have taken 'The Haven' for the summer and I had hoped—"

Janet laughed and kissed her mother's cheek. "So that is what you had up your sleeve! Well, Nancy will have to do the society stuff for the family. Not even Andrew Leonard and his family tree and his millions could tempt me away from the Fairleigh summer camp."

"And now children," called Miss Janet Summers of New York and Cape Cod the third morning of the camping season, "we will race to the lake and duck. The first five who get wet all over can drive to the post office with me. One! Two! Three!" and thirty children scampered down the incline into the lake. "Fine! Lizzie, Mabel, Arthur and you two boys were first. Now practice the swimming stroke I showed you yesterday and I am going to swim out to the raft. I'm coming right back."

She was swimming lazily out beyond the raft when a voice came across the water.

"Hey, youngster, you're getting pretty far out. Better go back. 'I'm going to race you in,' and Janet caught a glimpse of a tussled wet head above the blue of the lake, a muscular brown arm cutting the water like a knife. She turned quickly and started back. She was an excellent swimmer and they touched bottom at the same time and turned to face each other. The man laughed.

"Some swimmer! But—but, I guess you're not one of the youngsters after all. I'm Jim Fairleigh, Miss—"

"Summers, Mr. Fairleigh. Assistant to Mrs. Raney and Mr. Gray. I'm so glad to know you—but I thought you were an old man!" and then he was surrounded by a happy, laughing group of children, thin little arms encircling his legs, the air filled with shouts of Mr. Jim is here! Mr. Jim—"

An hour later he waded back into the water and struck out with a fine overarm stroke toward his camp on the opposite shore. Janet stood watching him for a moment.

"He is so different from Andrew and the rest. He likes to do things worth while! Come, children. Let's practice that stroke so we can show Mr. Jim tomorrow. One, two, three, one, two three," and beneath her breath she was saying "Mr. . . . Jim . . . Fairleigh . . . Jim . . . Fairleigh . . . Jim . . ."

He was a dandy visitor at the camp, sometimes swimming across the lake, other times driving up in his battered old car filled with vegetables, fruit, books, and on Saturdays there were watermelons or a freezer of ice cream for the Sunday dinner. And there were bouquets of garden flowers for Janet, old-fashioned blossoms—phlox, nasturtiums, sweet williams and pansies. Those are the only kind I grow in my garden," he said the first time he brought them. "They were my mother's favorites. I hope you like them, too."

He was a regular Sunday dinner guest and in the late afternoon as the sun began to disappear behind the pines and the lake took on a silvery shimmer under the twilight he would sit and tell stories to a group of quiet, contented children; stories of the fairies and the legends of Ireland; places he had visited on his winter travels; then he would sing the homely old folk songs and the plaintive hymns he had been taught by his mother, his clear, rich tenor carrying the melody sweetly into the early evening air. It was on one of these Sundays that the Fairleigh camp had the visitor—Andrew Leonard of New York and Cape Cod—glad, hatted, mustached, in a very smart maroon roadster driven by a colored chauffeur. His clothes spoke eloquently of Fifth avenue and Jim Fairleigh in his soft shirt with collar open at the neck, tweed knickers, heavy shoes, looked incongruous beside the city visitor.

Andrew Leonard was frankly bored and refused an invitation to stay to supper. He had just come up to see how Janet was, to bring messages from her family; her mother desired that she plan to come to the Cape before the season was entirely over, and to see what she was really doing and if she was happy.

"Of course I am happy, Andrew. Tell mother that, and also tell her I will not be back in time to go to the seashore. I am going to stay until the camp breaks up."

Jim Fairleigh stood beside her in the road and watched the maroon roadster disappear. "Never envied those city fellows much," he said haltingly, "until I met you. I knew right away that you were accustomed to parlor tricks—but I have been so busy working and living—that is, what I call living, I haven't had time to polish up much. Maybe, if I mother had lived—I'm sorry now—"

The week before the camp broke up he asked Janet to come to his cabin for lunch. She was to bring delicate little Tim Kelly and crippled Martha. He met them on the porch, an apron tied about his waist, a spoon in his hand. On the threshold Janet stopped short. The long living room was finished in redwood, the massive stone fireplace at one end flanked by well-filled bookcases. On a white bear rug before the hearth a collie stretched its yellow length and there were warm-toned rugs, reading lamps, comfortable chairs, a piano, and good prints on the walls.

"Lovely, perfect," exclaimed Janet. "Why haven't you invited me here before, Mr. Jim? It is beautiful."

"Why haven't I invited you here before?" he repeated softly. "I—I couldn't, because I knew if I were to see you where I have visualized you so often I couldn't keep from telling you what is in my heart, and I—I mustn't do that. You see," and he smiled down at her winsomely, little Tim pressed close against his shoulder, "I couldn't ask you to overlook my lack of parlor tricks."

Miss Janet Summers of New York and Cape Cod sat before her dressing table, an exquisite corsage of orchids in her lap, reading the small card attached to the lavender tulle.

"If you wear these tonight I will know your answer will be—that I hope it will be.

"ANDREW."

She looked at the lovely silver evening frock on her bed; at the silver slippers on her feet, and then she closed her eyes. She was back in that redwood-lined camp at Lake o' Pines, a yellow collie lay before the fireplace and fine blue eyes smiled down at her from beneath a shock of unruly hair, and instead of the delicate-toned blossoms before her hand caressed a rude bouquet of sweet william, phlox, spicy nasturtiums and pansies.

"Lizette, I want to send a telegram quick, and will you pack my trunk? Just my camping togs and sports dresses, Lizette, and heaps of aprons. And you can put these orchids in water. I am not wearing them tonight." On the telegram she wrote:

"Don't care about parlor tricks. You are all that counts. Coming tomorrow."

German Student Duels

Have Strong Defenders

Nations often judge one another's culture by the diversions of the students at their great universities. Many a European regards the mob excitement and roughness of United States college football teams as barbaric, the initiations of United States college fraternities as infantile. Recently, through the enterprise of press photographers, the United States was given an intimate contemporary view of a European college activity seldom viewed by outsiders—the Schlager mensur or "sport duel," as still practiced secretly with sharp sabers at the foremost universities of Germany.

At the University of Berlin and Heidelberg especially, dueling is preserved by the students in defiance of national law, in the belief that it teaches self-control and physical courage. The "sport duel" is fought "not on any point of endurance honor but as a test of endurance of bloodletting." The leaders of the undergraduate "corporations" tell of the representatives who are to meet. At Heidelberg each member of the most select of the forty-four corporations must fight ten duels during his three-year residence.

The duellists stand a saber's length apart, stripped to the buff. At the side of each is a second. Doctors and corporation officials are present; fellow-members sit about drinking beer and watching the "fun." About the middle of each duelist is fastened a protective pad, about each throat a thick scarf to prevent severance of the jugular vein. Over the eyes are placed wire mesh goggles; a steel snout protects the nose. The duellists' prime targets are one another's cheeks and forehead.—Time.

Cottonseed Meal as Remedy

The south, sections of which have suffered from time to time with pellagra, has had the remedy in a cheap form within the reach of all. Exhaustive tests have indicated that cottonseed meal is, next to yeast, the most prolific source of vitamin G, the anti-pellagra vitamin.

This vitamin, which is essential to life, is found also in eggs, lean meat, fish and milk. In some sections where large families and small incomes are found often these foods are denied to the members because of their cost.

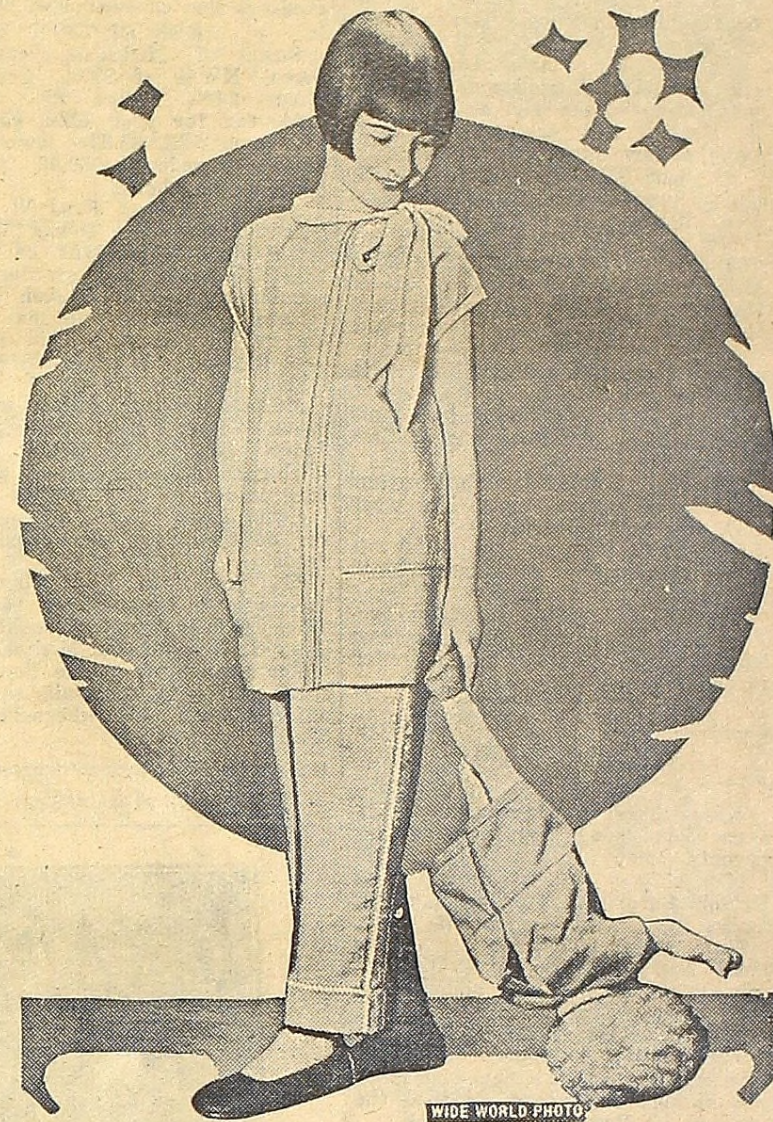

Cottonseed meal is also rich in vitamin B, which is anti-beriberi.

PAJAMAS IN CHILDHOOD'S REALM; BERET FOR FALL GAINS CLASS

IF THERE'S one place more than another where pajama costumes seem to fit into their environment becomingly, that place is in the children's realm. Bless their dear hearts, how cunning they look flitting about in their little trouser and blouse outfits, and with what enthusiasm designers are creating pajama styles for wee folks. There are as many kinds of pajama styles for fashionable youngsters as there are for grownups ranging from lounging to beach types.

For children from seven to fourteen are far outshining nightgowns.

Berets for Fall. That the beret will be outstanding for fall is already an established fact, but there are berets and berets, and the beret which aspires to style prestige during the coming season must prove its "class" through distinctive styling. Likewise the material of which it is made must be assuring as to quality and novelty. The favor accorded white acces-

ATTRACTIVE AND PRACTICAL SUIT

For the making of juvenile pajama costumes slanting is proving a most adaptable material. It has so many arguments in its favor, first among which is the fact of its perfect laundering qualities. Then too the lovely colors of shantung fit charmingly into the happy scenes of the lilliputian world.

Shantung in a delightfully cool-looking light green was the choice of the designer who styled the attractive and very practical suit illustrated. Bordered with white shantung make a pretty trimming. A unique feature is the group of tucks down the front, the blouse buttoning at the shoulders.

The pockets are adequate to store the trinkets which children take such joy in carrying about with them during play hours. The neckline is finished very prettily with a narrow scarf which is tied in a soft bow over one shoulder.

In all children's style displays nowadays particular attention is called to pajama fashions. Just now the sories, especially white millinery as an accent for black costumes, makes way for a program of perfectly charming berets styled of white velvet. These are manipulated in every conceivable way. A favorite type has a long shoulder drape, as shown first in the group below. Wide white velvet ribbon works out very successfully for models of this type. Frequently the piece-velvet is shirred, and being thin and dainty as chiffon, the effect is all that one can wish for.

A new fall inspiration is the white beret worn with the very chic neck ruches pleated of white mullin or starched chiffon. Add to this ultra combination white gloves and white purse and the black frock or ensemble is set off to perfection.

Black velvet touched with white repeats and repeats in the showing of autumn berets. The very attractive model to the right at the top in this group tells its own story of chic.

The importance of velvet for autumn is already conceded by milliners.

SOME BERETS FOR FALL

Designers are especially making a feature of shirred velvet. Note the stunning beret illustration in the lower left corner. It is of velvet shirred in a manner typical of the new trend. White feather brushes tipped with black add their quota of smartness.

The center hat is crocheted of chenille. It intermingles black and white in a tweed effect. Emphasis is also placed on the chenille beret color matched to the costume with which it is worn.

The group pictured concludes with a formal beret suitable for evening wear. It is made of glittering black cellophane with a band and a bow of narrow white velvet ribbon.

ASK YOURSELF THESE THREE QUESTIONS

Before you invest in anything, there are three things to consider:

- 1. Is the investment safe?
2. Does it yield substantially?
3. Is it saleable?

If you can say "Yes" to all three of those questions, and know definitely that "Yes" is correct, it's a sound investment.

We naturally have accumulated a lot of information on investments here at the Iosco County State Bank. That information is yours. Come in and talk over your investment problems. Maybe we can help you.

Love Piracy Man Exposed as Woman

Minneapolis, Minn.—For 24 years Eva Mary Hotaling lived as a man because she could get better jobs and earn more money. She even married a girl to save the family honor when her brother fled to avoid responsibility. And now she has been named as the "man" who stole a married woman's affections!

The suit was filed in the shape of a divorce complaint by Edward S. Halstad, prominent and well-to-do jeweler, against Mrs. Maunena Halstad, who, he charges, treated him "cruelly and inhumanly" after she met "Donald Hotaling," which is the name under which Eva Mary has gone for almost a quarter of a century.

Halstad's amazement when he learned that his supposed rival was a woman—a fact that reached the authorities because some one close to Mrs. Halstad babbled—may be imagined. He and his wife have been estranged for some time as a result, she said, of threats which he made against her life.

When she sued for divorce he retaliated by naming the supposed man who had been a frequent visitor at his home and whose friendliness with his wife he believed to be due to a clandestine love affair between them.

Miss Hotaling, admitting she was the "Donald" named in the jeweler's complaint, expressed regret that she had been found out and her sex revealed.

"I was just sixteen when I first donned male attire," she said. "It was not done as a lark, but as the result of a deliberate plan when, seeking work, I discovered that it was very hard for a girl to get a decent job at living wages."

To detectives she said that when her brother, Donald, refused to marry a girl who was in trouble through him, she took his place and led her to the altar. For seven years they lived together, she said, and not even the girl's own family knew the truth until she died in 1923.

After an investigation the authorities held that if Eva Mary chose to wear trousers and call herself Donald there was nothing that could be done about it legally and she was permitted to go about her affairs.

Cuckoo (the Clock Kind) Always Is in Season

Morehead City, N. C.—It may be illegal to shoot song birds but Jim Kelly got away with shooting the "cuckoo" in the clock. Game Warden Silas Brown said he was not justified in arresting Kelly for picking off the artificial bird. Jim was awakened at 3 a. m. by the cuckoo clock. He reached for a shotgun, fired at the bird and the noise ceased immediately. The bird retired in fragments behind its doors.

HISTORY'S MYSTERIES

Unsolved Riddles That Still Puzzle Authorities Here and Abroad

The Secret of the Misericordia

Beyond doubt the most mysterious brotherhood in the world is that of the "Misericordia," the strange fraternity which has its headquarters in Florence, Italy.

The origin of the Misericordia dates back to the Thirteenth century during the time when one of the deadly plagues was scourging Europe. Thousands died in every city and the bodies of the dead were left where they had fallen lest the living contract the dread disease. Even the sick were shunned, being left without the slightest care or comfort, and it was then that the workmen of Florence, prompted by a humane desire to be of as much assistance as possible, organized themselves into a brotherhood of mercy to nurse the sick and to give Christian burial to the dead.

After the plague had run its course the secret society was still held together, but gradually dropped some of its high ideals until even today the mention of the name of the brotherhood is likely to bring a shudder and a quick glance of apprehension in almost any city in Italy.

From the very conception of the organization a considerable amount of secrecy was maintained in order that all classes might be brought into a bond for the good of humanity and, from the richest to the poorest, a cordial invitation was extended to enter the Misericordia, the members of which wore the all-concealing gown and mask which they still affect. In addition, not only were the "Brothers of Mercy" unknown to the public at large, but they were ignorant of the names of the other members of their organization, for they never conversed when on duty or while wearing the insignia of their order and the affairs of the body were conducted with such secrecy that even brothers might belong without one ever knowing that the other was a member.

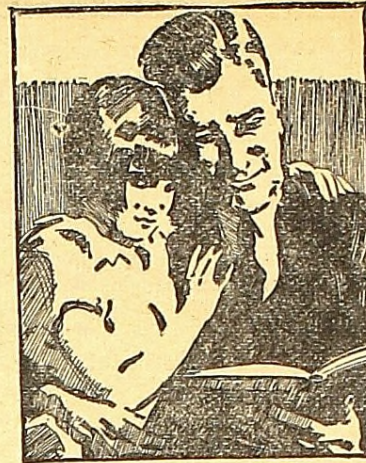

A secret council governs the entire membership and this council alone knows the names which appear upon the roster of the order, assigning the different members to their duties. The headquarters of the Misericordia is in the Piazza del Duomo at Florence and in this building each brother keeps a secret locker which contains his gown and masked hood. A signal is used to summon the members to duty and, when this is given, they are under oath to drop whatever they may be doing, present themselves at a previously designated meeting place, don their disguises and receive the commands of the council. Some may be called upon to carry the sick or wounded to the hospital, others to assist in the nursing of a case of contagious disease and still others may be assigned to certain duties which the council may consider to be in the interest of humanity at large, though they are hardly connected with the safety of the individual.

At the mysterious call the nobleman leaves his palace, the artisan drops his tools, the peasant quits his humble home and, upon terms of perfect equality and in entire ignorance of the identity of those with whom they are working, they proceed to the meeting place, there to receive the orders of their leaders, the supreme council.

It is no unusual sight in Florence to see gowned and masked persons hurrying along the street in the performance of their duties and the inhabitants of the city have grown so used to the sight that they make no effort to pierce the mystery which surrounds the identity of the individual, nor to discover the mission on which he has been dispatched. When summoned at the death of some distinguished brother, the Misericordia turn out in a body. They may be seen not infrequently carrying the remains of their dead comrade on a bier, while other members of the secret organization proceed and follow with lighted torches while dirgelike music adds to the solemnity of the occasion.

The visitor to Florence may be curious as to the identity of the men whose individuality is concealed beneath the flowing robes and masking hoods, but the natives have learned to regard them without curiosity and have almost ceased to speculate upon the mystery which lies behind the centuries-old secret of the Misericordia.

Acidity

The common cause of digestive difficulties is excess acid. Soda cannot alter this condition, and it burns the stomach. Something that will neutralize the acidity is the sensible thing to take. That is why physicians tell the public to use Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this delightful preparation can neutralize many times its volume in acid. It acts instantly; relief is quick, and very apparent. All gas is expelled; all sourness is soon gone; the whole system is sweetened. Do try this perfect anti-acid, and remember it is just as good for children, too, and pleasant for them to take.

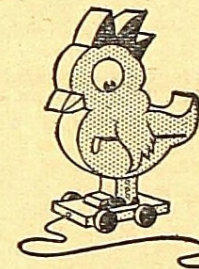

Any drug store has the genuine, prescription product.

Ancient Jam Was Good

Students of Ottawa university, at Ottawa, Ontario, are reported to have been served with plum jam which had lain buried in the university ground for 27 years and are said to have liked it. Forty quarts of the jam were found buried several feet in the earth by workers excavating for the building, the kitchen of which was situated over the spot where the jam was found.

Restless CHILDREN

CHILDREN will fret, often for no apparent reason. But there's always Castoria! Harmless as the recipe on the wrapper; mild and bland as it tastes. But its gentle action soothes a youngster more surely than a more powerful medicine.

That's the beauty of this special children's remedy! It may be given the tiniest infant—as often as there is need. In cases of colic, diarrhea or similar disturbance, it is invaluable. A coated tongue calls for just a few drops to ward off constipation; so does any suggestion of bad breath. Whenever children don't eat well, don't rest well, or have any little upset—this pure vegetable preparation is usually all that's needed.

If You Had a Million Dollars

Would you work if you did not have to do so? If by some unexpected circumstances you should fall heir to a million dollars, how would that fact change your present plans and your present occupation? Would you farm, or keep store or run the garage?

The curse of Eden was that because of his dereliction Adam should in the future earn his bread by the sweat of his brow. Not that he had been wholly idle before his misstep, for his job had been to keep the garden trimmed up, to dig about things a little, but the work was apparently pleasant and all but negligible.

Nothing has engaged scientists and engineers more during the last twenty-five years than the devising and construction of labor-saving machines. Everything that could possibly reduce or ameliorate work has been hailed with delight. We seem not to enjoy work. Anything that will reduce the hours of labor or make our jobs a little softer and a little more white-collared we received with enthusiasm. Middle-aged people—young fellows even—look forward to the time when they will not be enslaved by the mandates of a job, but will be free to do nothing and to come and go as they like.

I have watched the men in an office with which I am acquainted—fifty of them possibly and all under twenty-five years of age. They come hurrying in in the morning, a little late often, and settle down with evident reluctance to the routine of the day. Almost any one of them could be replaced without embarrassment or loss to the organization. They are earning a living, but only a small per cent of them care for the job they are holding or would keep it if keeping it were not necessary to existence. If these fellows should each come suddenly into the possession of a million dollars they probably would not look inside of the office again.

One of the professors at an eastern university recently sent out a questionnaire to two groups of professional men and women propounding this question of what their procedure would be if they had a million dollars suddenly given to them. Eighty-one per cent of the teachers addressed said that they would give up teaching if it were possible to do so, and 67 per cent of nurses agreed that under similar conditions they would give up nursing. That is, an overwhelming majority showed that they were not especially interested in their work as such but clung to it merely because it furnished them a living.

If it is generally true that the great majority of men—laboring men and professional men—are working only because they must, if you keep to your job simply because it affords you and your family subsistence or even a comfortable living, then there are a great many jobs being badly done.

Every one should enjoy his work; he should like it so well that even if he should fall heir to a million dollars he would go on loving it and doing his best in it.

Tires of Nude Life Experiment

Los Angeles.—Primitive life seems to have pulled on Dr. Friedrich Ritter, noted German scientist, although his affinity, Frau Doran, with whom he ran away, still clings to romance in the raw on the lonely Galapagos island off Ecuador.

This is the observation of Charles

S. Howard, San Francisco globe-trotter, who visited the couple in the course of his 66-day voyage from Florida on his yacht Sarah.

"The doctor and frau were in the nude when we first saw them," said Howard, "but they donned clothes to greet us. They were so excited to see us they were almost irrational in their joy."

"I asked the doctor if they ever planned to return to civilization. 'Well, maybe, but she says no, never,' he replied. So I tired of the primitive life and of his dictum of denying himself all food except fruit.

"He wears long hair and talks as though he considers himself inspired;

but you can find a lot of folks like that without leaving California."

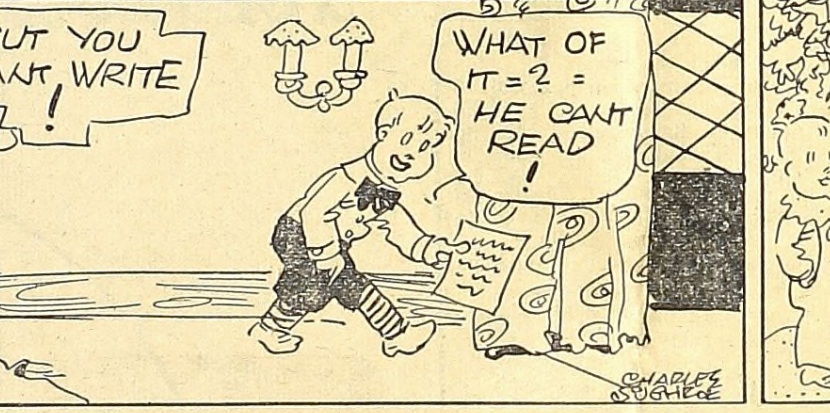

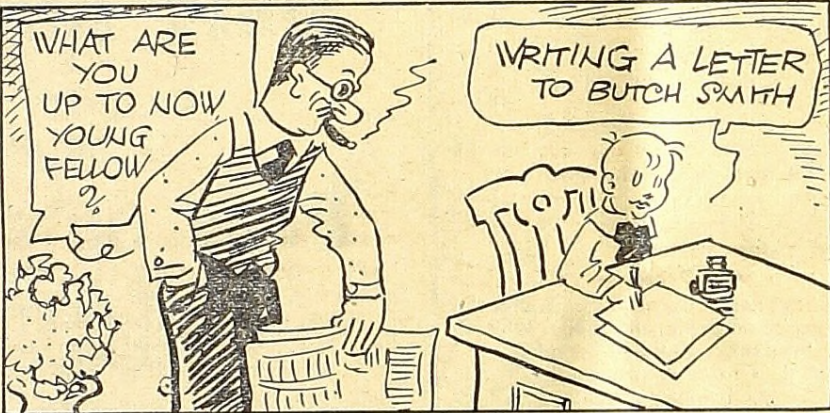

Ritter's trip to the island was promoted by a desire to escape the "boredom of civilization," and for the purpose of testing certain scientific theories relating to primitive nutrition and dietetics.

He left Berlin in July, 1929, with his woman companion, whom he had restored to health and who had expressed a wish to share his experiment. He spent his entire fortune on the trip.

The journey was made by way of Ecuador, where the couple bought a small boat to complete their travel to the Galapagos group—about 600 miles distant. Setting up a primitive domicile in the wilds of the island of their choice, the doctor and his companion engaged in testing the effect on their systems of a diet combining raw and cooked food, with raw cereals preponderating.

GOWN WELL NAMED

One of Mark Twain's When Mark Twain visited Jericho, he said, "I am where my grandmother has wished me many a time."

"The Enchantress" is the appropriate title for this dinner gown. It is of silk chiffon and is worn over a slip having a scalloped yoke. The fish-tail back is an interesting development of the skirt.

Rheumatic Fever Traced to Teeth

Philadelphia.—Jefferson Medical College has just completed experiments tending to prove definitely that rheumatic fever is the direct result of focal infections, such as infected teeth and tonsils.

This was achieved by managing for the first time to produce satisfactory infections artificially in animals and studying the immediate and subsequent results.

Dr. Virgil Holland Moon of the college laboratory announced the results and explained the methods of these experiments at clinical sessions in the amphitheater of Jefferson hospital, arranged by and for ex-internes of the institution.

He said that previous efforts at artificially inducing chronic focal infections in experimental animals had failed because the viruses used had been introduced under the skin by injection.

The new method employed an infected cotton swab, which was sealed in muscles or under the skin of the animals after incisions had been made.

This set up a chronic infection, which permitted development of symptoms in the animals corresponding "nearly exactly" to the symptoms of human patients suffering from rheumatic fever.

Autopsies on the animals proved that changes in the heart and artery tissues were identical with those found in autopsy on human rheumatic fever victims.

For several years physicians have suspected the direct relation of chronic focal infections to rheumatic fever, but experimental methods never before had permitted conclusive proof of the theory, Doctor Moon said.

Mosquitoes Gentlemen, They Prefer Blondes

Philadelphia.—Mosquitoes prefer blonds and will pass up a brunette nine times out of ten when there is a blond in sight.

This was the assertion of Herman Horning, city entomologist and an authority on mosquitoes and their habits.

"Mosquitoes and flies are sensitive to light," explained Mr. Horning. "They are easily attracted to light-haired folks, both men and women, and seem to prefer fair people to dark."

"Another noticeable thing is that in fields where mosquitoes buzz around cows or horses it will be found that light-colored animals are the greater sufferers."

Indians Adopt Friendly Crow as a Lucky Omen

Glacier Park, Mont.—Mrs. Yellow Kidney of the Glacier National park reservation, recently adopted a crow which flew into her tepee through the open flap. She allows the bird its freedom, and it has steadfastly stayed by her, even sleeping in the wigwag nights. The Indians regard the friendliness of this bird as a good omen, and the tribe is making "good medicine" over it.

Montana Voters O. K. New Yellowstone Span

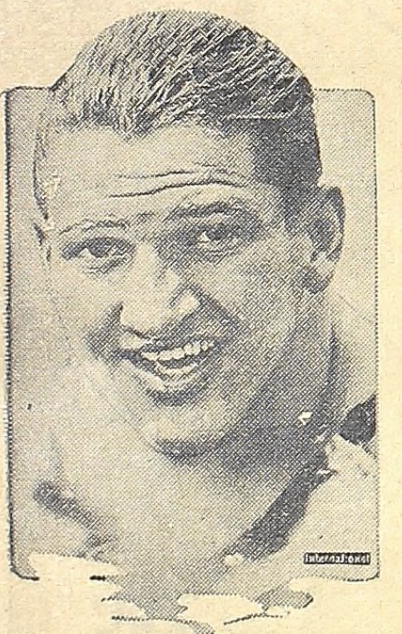

Sidney, Mont.—Richard county's electorate has given Montana's building program added impetus by approving at the polls the proposed $85,000 bond issue which will help finance construction of a new bridge across the Yellowstone river east of Sidney. Construction of the span will entail expenditure of $350,000, of which federal and state governments will contribute $265,000.
