TAWAS CITY SCHOOL NOTES

High School

The boys' and girls' glee clubs have now been organized and are meeting twice weekly. A quarter of a unit of credit is given for this extra-curricular activity. We are expecting more music soon for the boys, and then we will be able to begin in earnest.

The high school chorus will meet on Friday afternoons.

The high school art class at present is studying perspective, but will soon begin design which will lead to applied work.

The primary election to nominate candidates for the presidency and class representatives of the student council was held Tuesday. The names of the three people who received the most votes for each position will appear upon the final election ballot Friday. In case of one or more ties, more than the three names will appear for that particular office. The council is composed of a president chosen by the high school at large from either the Junior or the Senior class, one representative from each of the four grades, and a faculty representative. The candidates selected at the primaries Tuesday for each office were as follows:

President: Beulah Hiltz, William Leslie, Bessie Metcalf.

Senior Representative: Marcella Low, Delta Leslie, Irwin Schlecte.

Junior Representative: Glen Barnes, Evelyn Beck, Viola Burtzloff, Elsie Mueller, Leona Ulman.

Sophomore Representative: Allan Herriman, Dora Mark, Ila Sims, Clair Thompson.

Freshman Representative: Ernestine Cecil, Phillip Giroux, Arlene Leslie, Theone Lincoln.

The Senior, Junior and Sophomore classes have held meetings and

LOCALS ADD ANOTHER WIN; SCORE 7 TO 5

Tawas City added another to its string of victories last Sunday, when they beat out the National Gypsum nine by the score of 7-5. The contest took place at the local athletic field.

Boulder was the winning pitcher of this contest. He went the entire game in fine style, and although he allowed the visiting squad nine hits, they were well scattered. His mates' fielding was extremely off color and as a result he was placed in numerous trying positions.

Opposing Boulder on the mound was Clare Franks. Franks pitched excellent ball for five innings, but weakened in the sixth, when the local boys found him for four hits which were assisted by a walk and a fielder's choice to tally five runs, thereby grabbing a lead which meant victory. He was relieved in the seventh by Jordan, who held the locals hitless during their remaining two times at bat.

Next Sunday the Tawas City athletic field will be the scene of a clash between the nines of Tawas City and East Tawas. These teams have played two very hard games this season, and Sunday's contest, which will be the final meeting of East Tawas and Tawas City this year, will be no exception. Nothing less than a real, exciting battle can be expected. Don't miss it, fans. Game called at 2:00, Central Standard time.

Table with 5 columns: Player, AB, R, H, O, A, E. Rows include Forsten, Swartz, Libka, Musolf, Kasischke, DeCon, Libka, Laidlaw, Foudler, and Totals.

Table with 5 columns: Player, AB, R, H, O, A, E. Rows include Dorsey, Youngs, Schneider, Biggs, Westcott, Westcott, C. Curry, Franks, Jordan, and Totals.

Summary: Two-base hits—Dorsey, Youngs, Biggs, E. Libka, Forsten, Boulder. Three-base hit—Musolf. Double plays—Swartz to Musolf; DeCou to W. Kasischke, Stolen bases—Tawas, 9; National Gypsum, 1. Bases on balls—off Franks, 5; off Jordan, 1. Struck out—by Jordan, 3; by Franks, 9; by Boulder, 5. Hits—off Franks, 9 in 6 innings; off Jordan, no hits in two innings.

CARD OF THANKS

It is gratifying to me to extend my thanks and appreciation to the electorate of my senatorial district who in such an overwhelming manner bestowed upon me the honor of state senator. I repeat now as I have at all times during my campaign that I shall consider myself as the servant of my people and shall perform my duty in compliance with the mandates of my office. Ben Carpenter.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to acknowledge our sincere thanks to the friends and neighbors for the kind expressions of sympathy and beautiful floral offerings given to us at the death of our husband and father. Mrs. John H. White and family.

NOTE OF APPRECIATION

I wish to thank the voters of Isoco county for their loyal support in nominating me for the office of sheriff at the primary election. Charles C. Miller.

MRS. MILTON BEEMER

Mrs. Milton Beemer passed away Friday, September 5, at her home at Cashmere, Washington. Death was due to a stroke paralysis. The remains were brought here for interment and funeral services were held Monday. Rev. Frank Metcalf officiated.

Mrs. Pearl Wingrove Beemer was born in Canada, and when she was five years of age her parents moved to Michigan, where she spent her girlhood days. On July 26, 1899 she was united in marriage to Milton Beemer, making 31 years last July that Mr. and Mrs. Beemer have been married. In the year of 1912, Mrs. Beemer went west with her husband to Victoria, British Columbia; from there to Seattle, Wash., and from Seattle to Cashmere, Wash., where they have since made their home.

She is survived by her husband, Milton Beemer, two sisters, Mrs. Lucy Krumm of Tawas City, Mrs. Sarah Weaver of Lansing and two brothers, Geo. Wingrove of Detroit and Jos. Wingrove of East Tawas, besides a host of friends.

COUNTY NORMAL NOTES

Alfreda Brookins from Whittemore and Doreen Pollard from East Tawas entered Normal classes Monday morning, making our enrollment twenty-nine in number.

We organized our class Wednesday afternoon. The meeting was called to order by Mrs. Osgerby. Delois Durant of East Tawas was elected president for the class of '31. Herbert Wendt of Tawas City was chosen vice-president. Stanley Westery, Beatrice Klenow of St. Joseph school was chosen treasurer. Our class advisor is Mrs. Osgerby. Lois Leslie of Whittemore has been chosen reporter. With these officers and the wonderful class behind them, we are sure to have a very eventful and enjoyable year.

FAMOUS SINGER IN "SONG OF MY HEART"

In a contest conducted by Photoplay, there were more requests for John McCormack to sing "Little Boy Blue" and "I Hear You Calling" than any other numbers. These are the hit pieces, and when he sings 'em you break down and tell your real name. Does that Irishman touch the old heartstrings? The romance concerns one Sean O'Carolan who loves the girl who married another. And, although McCormack isn't expected to do any heavy acting, his is a pleasing personality. The settings are gorgeous. Most of it was filmed, you know, in the Land of the Shamrock. See it by all means, at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, September 23 and 24.

CARD OF THANKS

To the Voters of Isoco County: I want to take this opportunity of thanking the voters of Isoco county for the support given me for the nomination for County Clerk at the primary election September 9, and I surely appreciate the majority of votes received. If elected, will endeavor to perform the duties to the best of my ability and in the interest of all concerned. Very respectfully, Frank E. Dease.

CARD OF THANKS

On behalf of the Isoco County Agricultural Society we wish to express our appreciation of the fine co-operation of the citizens of the county in making the 56th annual fair a success. We especially are grateful to the superintendents of the different departments, exhibitors, and everyone who in any way contributed to the success of the fair. A. W. Colby, President, Fred C. Latter, Secretary, A. N. Sherk, Treasurer.

COMING

Dr. A. S. Allard, optometrist, will be in Whittemore at Hotel, Wednesday afternoon, October 1st, from 1 to 4:30 p. m. See him about your eyes. Dr. A. S. Allard, Optometrist.

FARM EXHIBITS EXCELLENT AT COUNTY FAIR

The Isoco County Agricultural Society closed a successful fair last Friday. Notwithstanding the dry weather conditions during the growing season, a large amount of very fine farm products was on display, some of the very best ever shown here.

All departments of the fair had excellent exhibits, especially noteworthy being the school and manual training sections. The racing program was filled with interesting events.

While the midway was small and the merry-go-round and rides which were contracted for did not arrive, there was a fine program of free attractions. The fireworks exhibition was excellent.

LOCAL SPORTSMEN SPONSOR BENEFITS

"Mickey the Beaver," and other unique wild life films in the repertoire of James Macgillivray's Nature Program, which begins the preface of a nation-wide theatre service with Indiana dates in November, will feature local programs planned by sportsmen to meet a deficit in the Tri-County Club's treasury. The benefit shows are scheduled for East Tawas, Tawas City, Standish, West Branch, Oscoda, Harrisville, Mio and Lincoln.

The sportsmen's deficit is largely the result of diversion of the county at the last state meeting at Mio to the distant trap-shoot location. More than half of the 3,000 gathered there found it more convenient to patronize Mio hotels and restaurants than to trek to the barbecue location where nearly $1,000 had been expended in food and service accommodations.

Local musical and other stage features will support the picture program. Supplementing the picture shows of wild life a series of benefit dances will be given through the winter months. Excerpts from Mr. Macgillivray's program have recently been purchased by the United States Biological Survey and the Canadian National Parks bureau. Local sportsmen will sponsor the programs in the several towns. R. G. Schreck, East Tawas, Joey Miller, Harrisville, and Nada Mills, Oscoda, constitute a committee of the executive board of the sportsmen's club in charge of the benefits.

Madam Von will be here September 15 to October 1.

REPUBLICANS MEET HERE TUESDAY A.M.

Perfect harmony prevailed at the Republican county convention held here Tuesday. The three delegates elected to attend the state convention at Grand Rapids were Fred C. Holbeck, Geo. A. Prescott, Jr., and Miss Edna Otis. The alternates elected were J. G. Dimmick, Erick Knuth and W. A. Curtis.

The following is the proceedings of the meeting: Called to order by Hon. F. C. Motion made and seconded that Mr. Holbeck be made temporary chairman. Carried.

Motion made and seconded that Chas. F. Klump act as secretary. Carried.

Motion made and seconded that the chair appoint two tellers. Carried. Joseph Barkman and A. J. Carlson were appointed.

Officers of the convention sworn in by F. F. Taylor. Committee appointments as follows: Credentials—A. Dillon, Lloyd Little, Mrs. Lucille Stevens; Permanent Organization—F. F. Taylor, Ernest Crego, John Stewart; Resolutions—Miss Edna Otis, George Prescott, Richard Glendon.

Report of the Committee on Credentials reports on the delegates elected at the primary day. Quorum present. Motion made and seconded that the report be accepted and delegates so named sit in the convention. Carried.

Report of Committee on Organization and order of business as follows: We, the committee, beg leave to report as follows: That the temporary organization be made permanent; that the report of the committee on resolutions be read to the convention; that three delegates be elected to the State Republican convention, each delegate to be elected one at a time; that three alternate delegates be elected.—Signed: F. F. Taylor, J. A. Stewart, E. Crego. Accepted and adopted.

Committee on Resolutions report as follows: We re-affirm our allegiance to the principles of the Republican party as ably carried on by President Hoover, and the national administration, also the work of our senators and congressmen at Washington. We heartily endorse the present state administration, and point with pride to achievements in Isoco county that have been made possible by Governor Green and his co-workers.

As Republicans, we endorse the candidacy of Hon. William F. Turner, a resident of the tenth congressional district, for state treasurer. Mr. Turner sponsored the bill to aid the poorer school districts of the state, whereby Isoco county benefited. We also endorse the candidacy of Hon. Frank Fitzgerald, business manager of the Highway Department, for secretary of state, believing that his work as deputy secretary of state has ably fitted him to handle the office. We lend our support to and heartily endorse Ben Carpenter for state senator, and Fred C. Holbeck for state representative. We also endorse, then, the county nominees of the party.

We urge the voters of the county affiliated with the Grand Old Party, to go to the polls in November and again roll up a majority for all Republican nominees. Signed: Edna M. Otis, Richard Glendon, George A. Prescott, Jr.

The following delegates were elected: Fred C. Holbeck, George A. Prescott, Jr., Miss Edna Otis, Alternates: J. G. Dimmick, Erick Knuth, W. A. Curtis.

BUSTER KEATON IN HIS LATEST COMEDY HIT

The big offering at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, Sunday and Monday, September 21 and 22, is "Dough Boys." It is very funny. The laughs are close together and we can guarantee our patrons that they will get their money's worth if they are seeking laughter and nothing else. Keaton puts over another role of a dumb guy who gets pushed into the army before he is aware of it. Cliff Edwards, as usual, delivers some good comedy, while Sally Eilers makes a very satisfactory heroine.

Buster again adopts the name of Elmer, having used the same name in "Free and Easy." He portrays a rich man's son who finds the army rather distasteful until he discovers the girl is among the entertainers at the camp. Then follow the comical lessons in drill, bayonet work, the voyage overseas and a theatrical show close to the trenches. At the front Keaton attempts to bring in an enemy prisoner, but by mistake brings in Cliff Edwards, his buddy, who had gone over the top also for a prisoner. There is a lot of hokum and funny situations that help to make this a first class feature for laughing purposes.—Don't miss it!

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to express my sincere thanks to the friends for the kindnesses extended to me at the death of my wife, also for the beautiful floral tributes, and Rev. Metcalf for his kind words. I wish especially to thank the choir for the beautiful songs rendered. M. E. Beemer.

LOVE MAY COME TO ANY MAN

By LAURA R. MONTGOMERY

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

"NO," REPEATED Leland Randolph, "we positively could not accept the story. The long arm of coincidence is overworked."

His chin scowled. "You take yourself too seriously. The world would wag if we'd never heard of the thirty-six dramatic situations and it wouldn't hurt to give the little lady a hand."

Leland's classical face failed to soften. He liked Pete and he had been glad to have him take over a share of the fabled apartment during the absence of his Aunt Minerva, who had gone on a lecture tour. Pete was usually out evenings and his frivolous views on life were restful after Minerva's argumentative lectures. Tonight, however, Pete had lingered to coax the editor into reconsidering a story by a friend of his. "Not a chance, Pete," muttered Leland. "Any story concerning a lovely lady locked outside somewhere in her peach negligee sickens me. Let those dames carry a long coat or something. The plot has whiskers and I'd be untrue to my art if I permitted it to slip by me. Your Dulcie will have to submit her story elsewhere."

The learned Leland had one vice—a passion for gaudy pajamas. A new conceit in the garments he loved set his head whirling and he had never yet discovered a tint or pattern quite loud enough really to please him. While speaking he had been adjusting the golden cords of his turquoise satin pajamas about his coat. "The women send in such slush: 'A man notices a girl's face framed in a train window and the flame of love leaps into his heart. Her lovely features are indelibly engraved upon his memory, the sacred fire glows on and on and then—ah, then—he miraculously finds her, that little princess, that girl of his dreams.' Always her eyes are twin pools of blue fire, invariably she has hair that is not real hair, but only a golden mist flung out adorably about her oval or heart-shaped face. Never once has a lady writer presented for my attention a heroine who was named Lizzie, or one with a square face and a snub nose."

"I know too much about marriage to pay any attention to girls, but if I intended to halter my head with domestic servitude I'd go about it sanely and ferret out her habits. Gold-mist hair and sapphire lacy lashed eyes are barred. I'd select a girl who loved to cook and one who could barely write her name." Leland shrugged and dropped into a deep chair.

"You know, Leland, there is coincidence in real life."

There was no reply, but the pause was filled by the voice of Ducky-Dear. Aunt Minerva's canary, who cheeped indignantly from the sun porch. A cold wind, bearing rain, had blown up and the porch was facing the shower.

"The janitor said the bird was sent back here from the train; that your aunt decided not to take it with her," grinned Pete.

"I told her I wouldn't keep it," groaned Leland. He was a master in his office, but a cipher in his home.

"Better get the cage inside," advised Pete, as a clap of thunder sounded. The hot air of the living room was stifling and Leland stood in the doorway now, breathing in the delightful coolness.

"I haven't my slippers, Pete. You slip out and get the cage."

But Pete had gone down the hall and the editor reluctantly stepped out upon the cement floor, forgetting that his white and well-formed feet were bare.

Then the balcony door slammed. Instantly he sprang toward it, and he heard, or fancied he did, the sound of the night latch being shot into place. Furiously he banged on the door for Pete, well aware that that young person had an engagement at nine o'clock. Then he tried to meditate. The refreshing coolness of the rain had failed to remain welcome and he now shivered. The wind was crisp, the rain very wet. His neighbors on both sides were bachelor girls, very jazzy. They smoked and sang and kept their radios on all night when they chose. He blushed as he pictured their pagan delight should they view his golden tassels and white feet.

He tried to break in the door, but the tiny leaded panes were soundly constructed. The front of the apartment was the balcony. The sides were too far back to be reached.

Five stories below the world laughed. From the parked cars he could hear languorous murmurs. The petters were in their glass-walled love-cars while he, Leland Randolph, ground his teeth, lifting his left foot from a cold stream vending its way toward the gutterpipe in the floor. Pete was not likely to return before four or five o'clock. Ducky-Dear would catch cold. The only way out of his balcony lay above him. He knew nothing of the tenants below him, but he'd seen an elderly man in the flat above.

The ascent of the stone pillar was painful and his person bore various wounds before he clambered into the sixth floor balcony. The door stood open and a golden oblong of light streamed welcomingly out into the wetness. Half-blinded by the rain, he leaped forward. He'd had but casual glimpses of the elderly man, but he now experienced a feeling of warm friendship toward him. "Say, old chap. Let me in out of the rain, will you?"

There was a stir within and he stopped in the doorway to stare at the pretty scene. A lady was hunched over the built-in writing table and she wept thoroughly. Her rest-gown was fashioned from rosy silks and frail laces.

"Oh," sighed Leland. "Oh."

Widely her violet eyes regarded him. They were lacy lashed and her golden curls were but a gay mist. Her amazed gaze wandered slowly down the turquoise satin and remained upon his large and now travel-worn feet. Clutching her cobwebby mouchoir, she sprang up, her pink lips parting.

"Don't scream," he besought her. "I'll go—only I'm locked out of my apartment just below here. I—I supposed a man lived here and I climbed over the pillar. I didn't know just what to do and Ducky-Dear will get wet and my Aunt Minerva—"

His remarkable recital was cut short by a series of high giggles, the tears still wet on her cheeks. "Don't tell me you got locked out—in these days such a story is—" again mirth intervened and she gazed at him helplessly. "Ducky-Dear," she repeated.

Apparently she did not intend to have him arrested, as he had feared at first. Leland tried to make his gaze soulful—never had he seen a girl so well worth looking at. "You are lovely," he stammered, unconscious of his bromide, "wonderful. My name is Leland Randolph and Ducky-Dear is a bird."

Her laughter fled and her eyes now resembled hard and polished amethysts instead of the rain-washed violets of an instant before. "Oh! So you are the man who cannot be suited; my plots are threadbare—filched from the time of King Tut. Built upon the long arm of coincidence—too frilly—too girly—oh!" Furiously she snatched up the letter that she'd been weeping over and read: "I'm bored by the indiscreet girl who gets locked out into the night in her fascinating pink steps. I'm sick unto death of the man who miraculously stumbles across the girl of his dreams. Don't waste your postage and my time."

Leland lifted pleading, satin-clothed arms. "Don't. I perceive my error and I realize now that love may come to any man."

"So you've come to the 'come-to-realize state,'" she quoted. "I suppose you'll begin to brush your hair forty times nights and mornings and—"

"Forgive me. I lo—" he caught sight of a gold tassel swinging out and he halted, belatedly aware of his garb. "May I call upon you tomorrow when properly dressed?"

"Just how do you expect to get dressed?" she impersonally inquired. "I hate to interrupt you so often, but I suggest that you go."

"If you'd lend me something—a robe or anything, I could dash out your front door and down. The janitor will have a pass key."

A latchkey had clicked, the sound drowned by Leland's frenzied tones, and a white-haired man now strode indignantly toward him.

"Dulcie Johnson, what does this mean? Have you gone mad?" A cane was furiously trained upon the guest in smug satins.

A light broke upon the wild brain of the porch-climber. There had been an elusive familiarity about the lady that had puzzled him. "Just another coincidence," faltered Leland. "Mr. Johnson, don't you remember me? I used to cut your grass when Dulcie was a freckled tomboy."

Dulcie grinned, losing entirely her romantic, soft appearance. "Yes. It's the same old plot that crops up in his mail every morning. Daddy, don't let him through our apartment unless he promises to run the story of mine he rejected today."

A gust of wind sent rain splashing through the open door and Mr. Johnson slammed the balcony door crossly. "I take it you are the editor who has rejected her stories. You say you used to cut my grass. Well, if you'll cut your visit short, I'll lend you a shawl or something to cover your fancy dress."

Leland, slinking down the well-lighted stairway, his attire hidden beneath an ugly gray bathrobe, wondered at the pleased triumph upon the freckled face of Pete, who, oddly enough, was standing in the door of the fifth-floor apartment.

Check on Car's Position

A Berlin engineer, Karl Dams, has invented a device which records the precise position of a motor car at any moment. The control apparatus consists of a mechanism arranged at the car's dashboard into which a map of the region in question is put. The map unrolls automatically in conformity with the car's speed; a pin registers the distance covered on the map, and thus fixes the car's place at any moment.

ELBOW CUFFS FOR FUR COATS; THREE-QUARTER-LENGTH STYLES

IT'S the sleeve which makes the coat this season. At least, it has a whole lot to do with announcing autumn 1930 as the date of its styling. Once launched on the subject of the new coat sleeves there is no place to stop and take breath, for the program is continuous, so far as novelty is concerned.

The majority of coat sleeves styling the new coats go half-in-half with cloth and fur. Either the fur cuffs quarter-length coats styles, as pictured. For these shorter-than-skirt coat types tweed is the preferred material in novelty weaves, especially black and white mixtures. The new deep-toned reds, greens, browns and inky blues are also in evidence. Berets of matching tweed add an intriguing note in many instances.

It is important to remember in regard to these simply tailored long types that they are considered as extend up to the elbow and beyond, or the lower half of the sleeve is made of fur, usually in a pouf, as after the manner of the model pictured. This chic coat is made of oak brown velour, with the collar and cuffs of beige lapin fur. Materials of velvety texture and rich warm color, as is this, are striking a most popular note for fall and the coming winter.

There is quite a rivalry between sleeves, the full-below-elbow portion of which is made of fabriclike fur, and sleeves which boast deep widely flaring cuffs. When the long-haired furs are employed, the tendency is to apply them in most fantastic ways, the spiral form for fur borderings which begins at the wrist and winds spirally to even above the elbow in some instances being a favorite treatment.

A distinct feature of the new coat models is their generous lapping at smart for the young college girl as they are for women of more mature years. The blouse is made to tell a story of youth in its endless frills, its unique materials, such as the very new wool lace and topped with a beret—the ensemble is most debonaire.

However, these simple modes, such as illustrated, are only the starting point from which the longer coat suits diverge into many paths, the most notable being in the direction of the stunning Russian tunic effects which are the "rage" for fall. The simple belted types of cloth in rich autumn tones are in the limelight for immediate wear with a promise of the most picturesque types imagination can conceive of for later on, in which elaborate fur decorations will accent the Russian influence.

the front closing. The coat pictured gives striking evidence of this. Another characteristic of the majority of late models is their complicated seaming, which leads to extreme shapeliness, and in many fitted-in-at-the-waist silhouettes.

There is no monotony in coat styling, as the fall and winter models will confirm. One of the latest innovations is the cloth coat with a deep fur yoke. This style is given many interpretations.

the late fall and winter months, will introduce styles which are almost replicas of the romantic fur-laden costumes of the Far East. Which means that accent will be placed on wide fur borderings, and upon flares for the skirt and flares for the tunic, and for front openings which lap far over with the aid of imposing rows of buttons. There will be wide cuffs on these tunic coats, made of sturdy cloth, and military high collars which close up around the throat, or else huge shawl or cushion collar types, and crowning joy of all—the muff!

Stalin Hailed as Lenin's Savior

Moscow, U. S. S. R.—How Joseph Stalin, undisputed leader of the Soviet domain, once turned barber and cut the beard and mustache of Lenin is revealed in a dramatic account of the scene just written by Gregory Zinoviev.

Bolshevik faction to reach the decision—by which Lenin was bound—that he must not let himself be arrested.

It was after that decision was taken that Stalin and some comrades went to the Allidouev flat and arranged details of the escape.

Zinoviev is convinced that had Lenin surrendered he would have been summarily executed and the whole course of Russian history would have been different.

Stalin's foresight is thus shown to be in part responsible for saving not only Lenin's life but the whole Soviet revolution.

U. S. Population Center Moves 25 Miles West

Washington.—The center of population of the United States has moved westward 25 to 30 miles in the last decade, census bureau officials estimate.

Although it will be several months before census statisticians determine the exact point representing the center of population, it is likely to be close to Hymera, Sullivan county, Indiana.

In 1920 the center of population was found to be 1.9 miles west of Whitehall, Clay township, Owen county, Indiana.

Police Chief Defies Bank Bandits

Watertown, S. D.—Bank robbers recently active in states of the Northwest who attempt to raid any of the three banks of Watertown will have to come to town in a war tank, for they will have to face machine gun and rifle fire.

Through efforts of bank officers the police department has been provided with a machine gun and two extra magazines of cartridges for direct protection of the banks.

The machine gun used for the direct protection of the banks has been mounted at a concealed point where it commands the intersection on which the three banks are located.

Thus at the slightest alarm, should bank robbers appear at any of the banks, they would instantly be under a hail of machine gun and rifle bullets from which no living thing could emerge.

The Anonymous Letter

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK, Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I have never written an anonymous letter, though I can easily see the advantages of such a procedure. One could so easily by this method correct social and civic errors, jack up one's friends and all without being detected.

HISTORY'S MYSTERIES

Unsolved Riddles That Still Puzzle Authorities Here and Abroad

The Origin of the Stars and Stripes

AT THE outbreak of the American Revolution most of the states adopted flags of their own. The Connecticut troops who participated in the battle of Bunker Hill had a banner bearing the coat of arms of their state with the motto, "Qui Transtulit Sustinet."

Later came the "Beware" and "Don't Tread On Me," flags and the snake flag was used by the southern states from 1776 to June, 1777. A chain of thirteen links, a ring, a tiger and a field of wheat were also used as fighting devices.

In October, 1775, Washington wrote to two officers who were about to take command of cruisers: "Please fix on some flag by which our vessels may know each other."

John Paul Jones has left it on record that the "flag of America" was hoisted by his own hand on his vessel, the Alfred, this being the first time that this emblem was ever displayed on a man of war, but no exact date for the display of the Jones flag is given.

According to the available records, congress adopted a resolution on June 14, 1777, which read as follows: "Resolved, That the flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the Union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation."

It is claimed that the first use of the stars and stripes in actual military service was at Fort Stanwix in 1777. On August 2 of that year the fort was beset by the British and Indians and the garrison being without a flag, one was made in the fort.

There are several available answers to the question: "What suggested the Stars and Stripes?" Some authorities maintain that Washington found in the coat of arms of his own family a hint from which he designed the flag, this device being two red bars on a white ground, with three gold stripes above the top bars.

It cannot be questioned, though, that the United States is largely indebted to the first President for the present flag, but none of the questions in doubt with respect to the Stars and Stripes will ever be settled to the satisfaction of every one.

Scientist Promises Wonderful Light

Los Angeles.—Dr. William George Schnell, young scientist, claims a formula to produce light as bright as the sun's without the use of electricity. His invention assertedly is composed of the same atoms which compose the sun.

Doctor Schnell, University of Colorado and University of Dresden graduate, said the formula really was a reproduction of the sun itself.

Doctor Schnell said the test of burning wood by a magnifying glass had been equally successful with the sun and with his invention.

The inventor said he had illuminated entire rooms with his mysterious light and has conducted other

VOL. I SEPTEMBER 19, 1930 NUMBER 20

Four year old boy to postmaster: "Is there a package here for us?" Postmaster, after making search: "No." Four year old: "That's funny. We are expecting a baby at our house, and it ought to be here any time."

We are in the market for—wheat at 90c per bu.; oats, 40c per bu.; buckwheat at $1.75 per 100 lbs.; barley, $1.60 per 100 lbs.; peas, $2.25 per 100 lbs.; rye, 65c per bu.

"Is your brother a good salesman?" "I'll say he is! He sold buggy whips in Detroit last month!"

Corn and oat chop, $2.10 per 100 lbs.; whole corn, $2.30 per 100 lbs.; coarse corn meal, $2.40 per 100 lbs.; cracked corn, $2.40 per 100 lbs.; middlings, $2.20 per 100 lbs.; Hexite, $2.10 per 100 lbs.; Pillsbury's Best flour, 95c per sack; Big Master flour, 90c per sack; Blackburn's Best flour, 90c per sack; Blue Bird pastry flour, 90c per sack.

Young Thing (to Aviator): "And do you come down the same way you go up?"

Aviator: "No. I try to come down feet first."

Did we hear somebody mention football? The fall comes on. And we all sigh. For a big piece Of pumpkin pie.

We're not worried for fear the cigarette lighter will replace matches—until somebody invents a toothpick attachment for the lighter.

Nothing can make a girl more unpopular than to win a popularity contest.

Nothing seems very funny at six o'clock in the morning. Have you ever noticed that?

"Waiter, it has been half an hour since I ordered that turtle soup."

"Sorry, sir, but you know how turtles are."

HEMLOCK

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Anschuetz and family and Chelsea Chambers spent Friday in Bay City.

Russell Long spent Thursday evening with Orville Brown in Tawas City.

Clare Franks spent a few days in Detroit last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Herriman and son, Gerald, of Detroit, are visiting his father, H. Herriman, and other relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. John Kelly and son, Arthur, of Flint are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Van Sickle, and brother, Stanley Van Sickle and family.

Mrs. Clara McIvor and son, Harvey, of Detroit spent Saturday afternoon and Sunday with relatives and friends here, returning to Detroit Sunday evening.

A reunion of the Brown family was held at Sand Lake Sunday. The following were present: Paul Brown, Mrs. Amelia Bamberger and son, Charles, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Miller and daughter, Mable, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Will Brown and family and Chester Bielby of Tawas City. Mrs. Clara McIvor and son, Harvey, of Detroit, Miss Lois Chambers, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Biggs and family, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Hayes and family. The group, 32 in all, enjoyed a fine chicken dinner, and all had a very good time. As a number of the members of the family were not present, it was hoped to have them all out another year.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitney and son, Jerry, "Grandpa" Whitney and Mrs. George Whitney and two sons of Bay City spent Sunday morning with Mrs. Amelia Bamberger and other friends here.

Lois Fraser is entertaining a girl friend from Bay City.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Smith spent the week end in Lansing.

A number of our farmers carried away prizes at the county fair.

L. D. Watts, Cecil Watts and George Binder attended the Saginaw county fair on Thursday.

The wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. John Burt was a big event Saturday evening. Tables were set for 75 neighbors, relatives and friends. The hall was decorated with white wedding bells and streamers, and centering the table was a white wedding cake. Mr. and Mrs. Burt were presented with a set of silverware in behalf of those present. An old time get-together was enjoyed, the evening binged in singing and visiting. All were glad that Mrs. Burt was well enough to be out and enjoy the good time.

Little Charles Hayes was able to be out Sunday for the first time in 18 weeks. Although he is not able to walk, he is much improved, and we hope he will soon be able to walk again.

Some from here are planning to attend the Alpena fair this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Rapp took their infant daughter, Betty Jo, to Omer hospital on Sunday night. The little one is very ill at this writing.

Members of the Ladies Aid and their husbands enjoyed a party at the church annex on Friday evening of last week. The party was sponsored by the losing side in a contest and proved an enjoyable affair. Many of the ladies were dressed in old-fashioned clothes. The program was also of a bygone period, each person present told an outstanding story of his or her childhood days. A delicious lunch was served.

Rose as Inspiration

The rose has inspired not only half religious mythology, but great secular poetry from ancient times on. Hafiz sang of the roses of Shiraz and Sappho sang of her beloved who was likened to the rose. Even the ribald Aristophanes, speaking sincere phrase, exclaimed, "Thou hast spoken in roses!" One Persian poet is known as "the poet of the rose." Attar, whose name is given to the essence of the flower.

Universal Language

The only universal language that seems to have much success is the wink.—Kansas City Star.

Lyric Defined

An excellent definition of a lyric is a "short poem, musical in style and personal in tone."

THE STORY

Renewing a childhood attachment, Ernestine Briceland, of a wealthy family, is attracted by Will Todd, newspaper artist. Her sister, Lillian, urges her to break off the affair, but Ernestine refuses. A runaway marriage follows. Loring Hamilton wins Lillian's consent to become his wife. Will and Ernestine begin their married life in humble surroundings. John Poole, Will's best friend, gives a birthday party for Ernestine at Ruby Pastano's resort. Ernestine and Will have their first quarrel as a result.

CHAPTER V—Continued

"I didn't say that. Certainly he has responsibilities. He is to provide for her to the best of his ability. He is to share all his earnings and his honors with her. He is to shelter her and speak kindly to her and love her and not find fault. He is to be faithful in word and thought. He is to be natural in his relationship with her and avoid sentimentality. But also, she is to be a woman grown and unafraid, his equal, not a child for him to protect like a child."

"You are so hard," she wept, "so hard with me."

He bent and kissed her and pressed his face to hers. "It's life," he said. "We have to grow up. Life is hard."

Ernestine awakened next morning to find that the pain and confusion of the night before had vanished into a new and not unhappy perspective on her life.

For the first time she could see what a blow it had been to mamma and papa to have her living in Erie street, with no margin, no possessions, no possibility of restraint or economy. How difficult it was—perhaps for their sakes she ought to co-operate with mamma and papa to do something for them. Enough money for a decent flat—a small comfortable house—it would be so much easier for mamma.

But Ernestine felt again the cold wind on her cheeks, remembered vividly how she had wept, and how she had said, again and again, "I promise, Will—I promise." He had asked her for no such statement. She had done the bargaining. Whatever it cost—to her family or to herself—she would keep that promise to Will, and live on what he brought her until he himself told her to do otherwise.

Ernestine began to wonder if she would be as good a wife and mother as Elaine Briceland, when the time came that Will had made good.

She paused to consider this thought and smiled happily, for now she saw that for the first time she was entirely confident of Will's success. It had been as much longing as conviction before, but now she was sure. How hard he was! His hardness brought only admiration this morning, the practical respect of a practical person. "If you want to go back, you've only to put on your hat and do it!" She wondered how many men had the courage to take a stand like that.

She did not regret the quarrel at all. Her marriage had attained a new reality. She knew that she was not simply having a good time. She knew that she could not go home when the party was over. They had advanced from the honeymoon period into permanence.

In what way, here and now, could she make this new feeling practical, make it effective?

How would they meet the obligation of childbirth? Would she go home to mamma or to some hospital? They would have to plan without mamma if they were to be consistent. She understood that babies were frightfully expensive. She had read articles in magazines about them. Yet thousands of women with no more money than she possessed had babies. She would have to find out how they managed.

She would have to see a doctor, ask questions, answer them. She would have to find out the rates at different hospitals, under different conditions. And after she had investigated the matter and decided on her own plan, she would have to begin to save a definite amount every week, out of Will's pay, so that they might meet the emergency. That would be fun—to have money in her hand, when her time came!

She decided to say nothing to Will about this, until she knew. Like her mother, she must exercise her virtue privately and let results speak for her. She had a few dollars with which to open a savings account. There was a bank nearby, a branch of a downtown bank. She would get a metal coin chest for herself and Will.

Her mental activity now became physical, and she rose and dressed, kissed Will lightly on the cheek, and left a note on the dresser for him, lest he think she had taken his advice and gone home. Downstairs she found a box full of roses for her, and a card in it with a few words written in an erect elaborate script:

"To beg forgiveness for my rudeness, and to express the hope that we may be real friends some day.—L. S. Pastano"

Ernestine gave the roses to Mrs. Bennett without comment and went out.

Last April she had been a school-girl. Now she was filled with the solemn importance of wifehood and motherhood. The sweet air filled her with happiness. Her husband's face fled before her mind's eye, down the long curve of boulevard, an indignant countenance, fiery, strong. Her heart contracted within her at the thought of him and his love.

The visit to the doctor's was prolonged, but she reached mamma's house in time for lunch, and found the two women so full of Lillian's plans that she kept her own secret.

Determined to make the day complete she left early and set out for the long tiresome street car ride to the Northwest side. She was ashamed to realize how few were the visits she and Will had made to the little house where his mother and father lived. She was at her mother's home two or three times a week, but they had not been to see Will's mother half a dozen times in the months of their marriage. It was not intentional neglect, but it always seemed to work out that way, and Will had been as lax as she about spending his one day a week on that long journey.

CHAPTER VI

Ernestine Asks a Favor

When Ernestine reached her mother-in-law's house, she was astonished to find a crowd of people standing about the door, and to see a taxi just driving away, and another car at the curb. When she came into the group, every one fell silent, and Ernestine looked at the faces with curiosity and a sense of fear.

"What's the matter?" she said nervously to the big housewife who opened the door for her.

"Will's been trying to find you—they just brought his pa home. He's dead—dropped dead at his work today, and his ma's real bad. I got Will on the telephone, at the paper, and he came right out here, but he didn't know where you was."

Ernestine stood staring at her, and her hand went up to her heart in a frightened gesture.

"Where's Will?" she asked wildly.

"He's in with his ma. Go still—the doctor's working with her. She's been awful bad the last few days. I've been with her all the time."

"But she didn't tell us."

"She thought she'd be better—she's been sick so long—"

Will looked up as she came in and called her name softly. She went straight to him and put her arms around him. His face was wet with tears—he was not the positive, fiery creature with whom she had quarreled so bitterly the night before, but a little boy, lost and confused. She kissed him quickly, several times, and he said to her:

"I'm glad you got here—Mrs. Bennett didn't know where you were. Oh, Ernestine—mom's so sick—the doctor doesn't know whether she'll ever be better—and dad gone like that—just like a breath. I haven't seen him for three weeks."

"Darling—he'd want to go—quickly," said Ernestine, feeling the futility of words—the emptiness of comfort. It wasn't her father, her conscience told her. She and Will had been neglectful.

The doctor came out of the bedroom and asked Ernestine crisply to get him some hot water. Ernestine took off her fur coat and her little red hat and went into the kitchen. There was a fire in the small range, and awkwardly she put some coal upon it and set the teakettle on to heat. The doctor asked her for towels. She waited on him as well as she could and accepted in silence his sharp reprimand when she was clumsy.

The neighbors had dissolved. Mrs. Schluss, who lived next door, came in and made a little supper. She put it on the kitchen table and said to Ernestine:

"See if you can get Will to eat—he's in there crying."

"I will," said Ernestine, and Mrs. Schluss went on:

"You'll have to stay here, now, I guess. Will's ma shouldn't have been left alone, and now, his pa's dead, there's nobody to look out for her but you and Will."

"Of course I'll come," said Ernestine. "I'd have come before, if I had known that I was needed. We didn't want to be a burden—"

She found this phrase in her mind as she coaxed Will to eat a little supper. Had their motives been entirely unselfish, in going to Erie street? Hadn't they wanted to be alone—away from his people? Should she have stayed with Will's mother, and nursed her, and done the work? There was no question but that Mrs. Schluss, and probably other neighbors as well, thought that she should. Her heart ached with remorse.

Will stayed in the kitchen with her, and Ernestine washed the dishes and put them all away, going to him at times and patting or caressing him.

The undertaker came, the doctor left and returned about nine o'clock. He called Will into the other room, but after a time Will came back into the kitchen, where Ernestine sat, not knowing what to do.

"Ernestine—" Will looked at her uncertainly; his eyes appeared small and red with weeping, his nose seemed unusually big in his pale face, and his mouth was like a child's. "The doctor thinks we ought not have the funeral here—because of mother being so ill. The noise, and people coming in and out—he thinks she is ill enough that it might go against her. Do you—do you think your mother—I don't want him buried in a chapel—and he didn't belong to any church. He was an officer in an ethical society—they'll have the services—I don't know what to plan—"

The back door opened and Mrs. Schluss came in while he was talking, and with her another neighbor—Ernestine remembered having met him once before. His name was John Pryor, and he was a printer. Ernestine understood the entreaty in Will's eyes—but her heart sank: Mamma did not like funerals, and least of all would she like this one.

"I'll ask," she said uncertainly, and went to the telephone which was hung on the kitchen wall. It seemed an eternity before Ernestine heard her mother's voice. Falteringly, she told her what had happened—wondering why she had not called her sooner.

He Patted Her Arm and Tried to Control His Feelings.

"But, darling," cried mamma, "to think of you in all that trouble—I'll send the car right after you. You must come home to mamma until this is all over—you've never been to a funeral in your life, Ernestine. It will be so hard for you."

"Mamma," said Ernestine with vexation, "you know I can't come—I'm needed here. It's something else I called you for. Mamma, they can't have the funeral here at the house, because Will's mother is so ill it would be dangerous for her, and, of course, Will doesn't want his father buried from the funeral parlors, and he doesn't belong to any church—we don't know just what to do, mamma—" She couldn't say it. She simply could not.

"It's too bad you and Will aren't keeping house," said mamma. "If you had let papa help you you could do this for Will, now."

"You don't want to, mamma? I thought perhaps—your house is so big—that you would do this for Will. I'm asking you to have Will's father's funeral at our—at your house, mamma—" All their eyes were on her—her face was scarlet, her eyes were suffused with tears of humiliation.

"Why, Ernestine," said mamma, in a troubled voice, "I don't know. I'll have to talk to daddy—grandmother's not well. Wait a minute—hold the wire."

Ernestine stood in silence, saying to Will with her lips, "She's asking papa," waiting in the endless interval, certain of refusal—already hurt and resentful.

"Ernestine," mamma's voice was terribly sympathetic, "we're all just as sorry as you can be, but papa doesn't think Mr. Todd would want it. It doesn't seem practical, dear—the funeral home right there in his own neighborhood—lots of people are buried from such chapels every day, darling. Don't ask mamma to do such a hard thing—"

Ernestine hung up the receiver without a word and turned strained great eyes upon Will. John Pryor regarded her with a sarcastic smile. He was a socialist, or an anarchist, or something, Ernestine recalled.

"Will," he said with instant kindness, "let me have this funeral for you? It's right here, in the neighborhood, and it won't be a bit of trouble—your father and I belong to the same society—it would be all right with him, I know."

"All right," said Will dully, and turned to the undertaker: "Fix it that way—will you tend to the notices?"

"Will," Ernestine implored him, "it's not my fault—they don't understand—"

He patted her arm and tried to control his feelings.

"That's all right, kitten. I know you can't help it—it's just their way." His face worked, and suddenly he clenched his big hand. "My father—he was good enough to work for yours, for half his lifetime—good enough for that—but not good enough for his dead body—"

"Will—Will—don't—don't, darling—oh, you must not say such a thing—sweetheart."

"Let him cry," said Mrs. Schluss wisely, and Will cried upon Ernestine's shoulder—his tears wet her blouse, and she held him, feeling the great sobs rack him, wondering dimly if she would mourn for her father that way.

This would be her home, she resolved, kissing his tear-wet face, holding him to her heart. She would stay with Will and his mother. Her people had denied her husband the kindness that was due among kinsfolk. They had denied her. She felt that she didn't care whether she ever saw them again. If they had done this for Will, everything else would have followed, but now, in common loyalty to her husband, she had to recognize this hurt.

She was almost fainting with weariness. It seemed to her the night would never end.

Papa came in his big car and took Ernestine and Will and Mrs. Schluss to the burying ground. Will accepted this courtesy with dignity. He was not the person to quibble at a time like this.

The services of the Ethical society were brief and dignified. It was Ernestine's first acquaintance with death, and she felt the power of human dignity, felt as she had never felt before the common inheritance, the integrity of Will's father's life.

When they came back, Ernestine sat in the car and talked to her father a few minutes. She told him that she and Will were to stay at the little house, that she was going to try her hand at housework and nursing. She should have done it sooner—she didn't realize, she said, that she was needed.

She ought not reproach herself, her father answered—she had done quite well to avoid being a responsibility to Will's father and mother.

"That wasn't enough," said Ernestine. "I've a new set of values to learn."

"You think the ones you learned at home inadequate?"

"I didn't mean that."

"You've been very quiet with me all day. Do you resent our attitude?"

Ernestine was near to tears. "It hurt Will," she said, her voice shaking. "It forces me to take a stand—I have to be loyal to Will. Papa, I love you all so, but I love Will most. He's my husband. If he's hurt, so am I."

Her father's face had grown very white. He sat studying his gloved hand upon the polished steering wheel.

"That's right," he said after a little. "After all, that's part of what you learned at home—I hope. I thought—your mother wants me to tell you—we'll establish a trust fund for you and one for Lillian when she is married. I've got my money tied up in this stone merger, but I can settle some on you now, and more later, or I can give you an allowance."

He stopped, controlled his emotion, and went on steadily, "I still think your marriage will prove disastrous, but you're my little girl—I want you to be happy. Of course, you can always come home, but as long as you stay with Will, I'd like to do what I can for you, Ernestine."

It was a long speech for him. He was always quick, half a phrase, half a sentence, sufficed him. Ernestine's hands squeezed his arm, she pulled him down and kissed him, and he put his big arm, awkward in his overcoat, about her, and drew her close.

"Before Will and I were married—he thought you might think he wanted my money—wanted some advantage, and I promised him I'd live his life, live on his income. I made a bargain and I must stand by it, papa. But I'm glad you told me—if I should need money, I'll let you know. Thank you."

He kissed her again, and they said goodby. The conversation had washed away a little of her resentment and made her feel better. She had a strong desire to cling to her own family.

How Fledging Cuckoo Ousts Its Bedfellows

Early birds, says the New York Times, lured north by early spring warmth, do well to avoid cuckoos as neighbors when they start nest building.

The cuckoo mother lays its egg in the nest of some other bird and flies away without another thought for the cares of motherhood. The fledgling, newly hatched, rewards the hospitality of its hosts by shoving their eggs out of the nest and wailing all of the food the devoted pair continue to bring to the nest.

Fresh proof of the unsocial habits of the cuckoo was brought forward at a meeting of the Linnean society in London by an English scientist. Last summer he photographed the young birds in the very act of ousting their bedfellows.

The pictures taken show that the bird slips one wing under the egg, rolls it up on his back and then slowly shoves it up to the edge of the nest and over, "like a human workman walking backward and rolling a heavy barrel up a steep incline with his shoulders."

The scientist reports that one cuckoo, only a day and a half old, threw out the same egg 15 times within the hour, it being caught and replaced each time.

Bricks Without Straw

Mrs. Finnigan labored over her wash-tub while Mr. Finnigan sat in the garden and gazed into space. His inactivity finally became more than Mrs. Finnigan could bear—at least, in silence.

"Why don't you come into the kitchen and help me with these clothes?" she inquired.

Mr. Finnigan turned and directed his gaze upon his wife.

"Why, Moya, can't you see I'm busy?" he drawled.

"Busy?" snapped Mrs. Finnigan. "What doin'?"

"Why, I'm thinkin', Moya!"

"Thinkin'?" she repeated. "With what?"

Ernestine yielded to impulse, was enfolded on the soft and luxurious bosom of Madame Pastano and kissed her smooth cheek. How strange that all of her haughty resentment was gone, that she actually liked Ruby Pastano, with his slow thick voice and his mottled dark eyes.

"When Willie's mamma is better, you will come to visit us?" the old lady asked, and Ernestine called her husband Willie for days afterward. She promised to come.

Will was worried about money, and Ernestine tried to spend as little as possible. Mr. Todd's lodge insurance had paid for his funeral and left a small balance, which was soon eaten up by the heavy expenses of the mother's illness. Will asked for a raise and got five dollars. At length he was forced to borrow from Mr. Poole, although Ernestine told him she could get money from her father.

"Money!" he burst out passionately. "I don't want any Briceland money! We wanted something real from them. Money's all they have."

"You'll have to increase your earnings, Will."

"It takes time. And I intend to do it on my own job, not in your father's office. Your folks must understand that."

"Lillian says beggars can't choose," she said.

"This beggar chooses," he warned her.

Will's mother began to mend a little the third or fourth week, although she was desperately ill. One day she asked Ernestine how they were managing, and Ernestine confessed that they had had to borrow.

"The Troy street house is in my name," said Mrs. Todd. "Tell Will the deed and all are in his father's box—tell him to have some real estate office sell it. I'll sign the deed—it will be more than enough for my illness."

"But, mother, when you are better, you will need your money."

"I'll not be better. And I'd like to have the nurse all the time now."

So the house was sold, and the few thousand dollars they got for it certainly made a remarkable difference. The doctor brought them a resident nurse. Ernestine and Will agreed that they should spend Mrs. Todd's money only for the expense of her illness.

On the day that Lillian was married Mrs. Todd was able to sit up, and Will consented to go to the wedding. The church was filled with flowers—the bridesmaids made a rainbow—Ernestine had pleaded the excuse of mourning for taking no part in the ceremony. The pews were filled with old familiar faces—the ushers were young men Ernestine and Lillian had known always. Everything was very beautiful and formal, and Ernestine realized that mamma would have liked such a wedding for her.

She was glad afterward, that she had gone, for the weeks and months just passed had been so hard for her that the beauty of her own romances had become a little dimmed. But when she heard the marriage ceremony again, when she stood by Will and watched her sister marry Loring Hamilton, she remembered every word and every kiss of her own marriage day—its storms and turmoil, and she looked at Will, at his clear strong face, at his lean bony body in the shabby suit, at the big square hands resting on his knees, and the richness of her love for him welled up in her like a great tide that would and must carry everything before it.

DAIRY

MORE TESTING OF COWS IS NEEDED

Nine Pertinent Dairy Improvement Pointers Given.

More testing of dairy cows is needed for economical production, according to Jas. W. Linn, extension dairyman, Kansas State Agricultural college, in stressing the value of dairy herd improvement association work. What such work means to dairymen the specialist sums up under "nine pertinent dairy improvement points."

It brings about a greater realization of the difference in relative ability of various cows within our dairy herds;

It demonstrates the economy in feeding cows as individuals; seeing that the better cows are liberally fed, good cows are fed on pasture, and that the principles of feeding are made common knowledge;

It emphasizes an appreciation of the fact that sires vary in their ability to transmit milk and butter fat production;

It aids in the culling of the poorer cows;

It increases the value of the good cow;

It causes the pure bred breeder to be more selective of his breeding animals;

It stresses testing for economical production and not maximum production;

It puts business methods in dairying; and,

It is helpful in taking the knowledge of better practices to neighbor dairymen.

Manure and Rotation to Reduce Cost of Dairying

Not all the virtues of dairy farming are wrapped up in good herds of well fed cows. Successful dairy farming requires the constant practice of crop rotation including a legume in order to supply the herd with the proper feeds. Much manure is produced annually which, on well managed farms, is put back in the soil for the benefit of succeeding crops. Were it not for rotation of crops and manure, the crop yields on our dairy farms would not be what they are today.

In this connection some interesting data is available from the Missouri station. Corn grown continuously on the same land without manure or other fertilizer averaged 20.9 bushels per acre over a 30-year period. In a rotation of corn, oats and clover without manure or other fertilizer, the corn averaged 32.6 bushels per acre. In a three-year rotation of corn, oats and clover with manure, the corn averaged 43.4 bushels per acre over a 30-year period.

Manure and rotation with legumes are valuable means of reducing the costs of producing milk.

Speed of Separator Is Cause of Variations

(By JAMES V. LINN, Extension Dairyman, Kansas State Agricultural College.)

Causes most common in bringing about a variation in the test of cream are speed of the separating machine, temperature of the milk, and amount of flush water used. Cream from a normal turning of the separator will result in a 39.7 per cent fat while a three-fourths normal speed will deliver cream of 35.5 per cent fat. The lower the temperature of the milk the higher will be the per cent of fat in the cream. Milk at 120 degrees F. will produce a 24.5 per cent cream; at 90 degrees F. a 30 per cent cream, and at 75 degrees F. the cream delivered will be 43 per cent. As the volume of fat separated is lowered, any increase in the amount of flush water will cause a more rapid lowering of the fat in the cream.

Shortage of Water and Feed Works Hardship

From feed and water only can a cow make milk. Shortage of either works a hardship on the good cow. Half-filled cows produce half-filled pails. Feed the good dairy cow during the 45-day "short feed" period enough roughage and grain, to keep up production so that it will not drop below the normal drop, due to the advancing lactation period. It is tremendously difficult to "bring back" the milk flow, due to decreased feed supply, after it has fallen below the normal and natural drop that is always expected after the cow has been in milk some time. The better way is to "feed up" the best producing cows in herd on enough good feed to maintain a profitable and abundant milk yield.

Water for Dairy Cow

A man who has had experience only with cattle raised for beef will be astonished if he undertakes to carry the water for a day to a high producing dairy cow. It might teach him a lesson, however, that would be valuable if he ever decided to keep dairy stock. The milking cow requires a large amount of water indeed because the milk itself requires a considerable amount and further, a high milking cow is of necessity a heavy fed animal.

ASPIRIN

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS

GENUINE Bayer Aspirin has been proved safe by millions of users for over thirty years. Thousands of doctors prescribe it. It does not depress the heart. Promptly relieves

Headaches, Neuritis, Colds, Neuralgia, Sore Throat, Lumbago, Rheumatism, Toothache

Leaves no harmful after-effects. For your own protection insist on the package with the name Bayer and the word genuine as pictured above.

Aspirin is the trade-mark of Bayer manufacture of monoaceticacidester of salicylic acid.

New Sugar Cane in Florida

A large type of disease-resistant sugar cane introduced from New Guinea is being grown experimentally in Florida.

Why is it that intuition so often "analyzes down" to mere suspicion?

Acidity

The common cause of digestive difficulties is excess acid. Soda cannot alter this condition, and it burns the stomach. Something that will neutralize the acidity is the sensible thing to take. That is why physicians tell the public to use Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this delightful preparation can neutralize many times its volume in acid. It acts instantly; relief is quick, and very apparent. All gas is dispelled; all sourness is soon gone; the whole system is sweetened. Do try this perfect anti-acid, and remember it is just as good for children, too, and pleasant for them to take.

Any drug store has the genuine, prescription product.

Status for Living Men

Spain has become so enthused over the dramatic and other works of the Brothers Quintero that, although the men are still alive and only middle-aged, statues to their honor have been erected in Seville. Among the more recent plays of the Brothers Quintero is "El Centenario," which has just been translated into English.

Restless CHILDREN

CHILDREN will fret, often for no apparent reason. But there's always Castoria Harmless as the recipe on the wrapper; mild and bland as it tastes. But its gentle action soothes a youngster more surely than a more powerful medicine.

That's the beauty of this special children's remedy! It may be given the tiniest infant—as often as there is need. In cases of colic, diarrhea or similar disturbance, it is invaluable. A coated tongue calls for just a few drops to ward off constipation; so does any suggestion of bad breath. Whenever children don't eat well, don't rest well, or have any little upset—this pure vegetable preparation is usually all that's needed.

The Story of a Real American

PLENTY COUPS AT THE TOMB OF THE UNKNOWN SOLDIER

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ON NOVEMBER 11, 1922, when the Unknown Soldier was enshrined at Arlington cemetery, among the high officials and other dignitaries who took part in that impressive ceremony, was the figure of an Indian chief, resplendent in buckskin, scalp shirt, fringed leggings, beaded moccasins and a magnificent war bonnet that swept to the ground. As he stepped forward to place on the white marble tomb a war bonnet and a coup stick, he said in his native tongue, "I feel it an honor to the red man that he has taken part in this great event today because it shows that the thousands of Indian soldiers who fought in the great war are appreciated by the white man. I am glad to represent the Indians of the United States in placing on the grave of this noble unknown warrior this coup stick and war bonnet, every eagle feather of which represents a deed of valor by my race. I hope that the Great Spirit will grant that these noble warriors have not given up their lives in vain and that there will be peace to all men hereafter. This is the Indian's hope and prayer."

This chief who was chosen as the representative of all the Indian tribes to place the red man's tribute upon the grave of the Unknown Soldier is known among his people, the Absarokees, as Aleei-chea-ahoooh, meaning "Many Achievements." But the white men who call the Absarokees Crows, he is more commonly known as Chief Plenty Coups, perhaps the best known Indian in the United States today. For that reason one of the outstanding biographies of the year is the book "American," published recently by the John Day company, for it is "The Life Story of a Great Indian, Plenty Coups, Chief of the Crows," as he told it to Frank E. Linderman through the medium of an interpreter and the sign language in which both Plenty Coups and Linderman are adepts.

"American" is not the first Indian autobiography but it is outstanding because it is the story of a genuinely primitive Indian. When Plenty Coups was born in Montana in the late '40s his people were still living their normal nomadic life in the days before the buffalo herds were swept away, and these wild horsemen of the plains were almost untouched by any contact with the whites. His early life was lived under tribal conditions, but little changed over a period of hundreds of years; in his early manhood he witnessed the first conflict between the two races with their inevitable climax of the subjugation of the red and the domination of the white and his declining years are being passed in an era which is seeing a century of history concentrated in a decade. So in a sense the life story of this Indian chief is an epitome of 300 years of American history, from savagery to civilization, from a wilderness to the industrial age.

Plenty Coups has remained a boy all his life and the naturalness of childhood is reflected throughout his story "What are your earliest memories?" Mr. Linderman asked him and the old man smiled. "Play," he said happily. "All boys are much alike. Their hearts are young and they let them sing." And in his telling of the events of his boyhood and his training at the hands of the elders of the tribe, there is food for thought by the white man who believes that men of his color are superior in any way to men whose skins are red.

No doubt it will be a shock to most white men to realize that in the eyes of the Indians white children are so disgustingly ill bred.

CHIEF PLENTY COUPS WITH HIS LIFE STORY

CHIEF PLENTY COUPS WITH HIS LIFE STORY

So profiting by the example and the instructions of his elders, Plenty Coups' boyhood was spent in the kind of play which was the beginning of his education in physical development, in plains and wood craft and in strict self-discipline of body and mind. He and the other boys played at making war, and with great eagerness he looked forward to the day when he might go out on the first war party and have the chance for that distinction so much desired by all prospective warriors—counting coups. This might be accomplished in one of several ways. He might strike an enemy with his coup stick, bow or quirt, before otherwise attacking him, or take his weapon while he was still alive. He might count coups by striking similarly the first of the enemy's dead or his breastworks under fire or by stealing horses from the village of an enemy. Unlike the white man's idea it was not so much an honor to be wounded in action. When a warrior who had been wounded donned an eagle feather to commemorate the event, he must stain it red, and such a feather was esteemed less highly than one which bore the distinctive markings showing how a coup was counted.

Plenty Coups' young manhood was filled with innumerable skirmishes between the Crows and their traditional enemies, the Sioux, the Cheyennes, the Arapahoes and the Blackfeet. His first real contact with the white men came when he enlisted as a scout with General Crook and served valorously with that officer in the great battle with the Sioux on the Rosebud. For Americans with their traditional love of "good sportsmanship" there is an interesting example in Plenty Coups' attitude towards his enemies. In nearly every case in which he tells of a foeman whom he fought and killed, he ends the story by adding gravely, "He was a good man, that Sioux, and a brave warrior."

But the opinions of the white man expressed by this old warrior is not such comfortable reading for those who fondly believe that the white race is superior to all others. But is good, perhaps, for the exaggerated self-esteem of the "conquering white" to read these words of Plenty Coups and reflect upon them with an honest mind: "They spoke very loudly when they said their laws were made for everybody; but we soon learned that although they expected us to keep them, they thought nothing of breaking them themselves. . . . (Their priests) said we might have their religion, but when we tried to understand it, we found that there were too many kinds. . . . this bothered us a good deal until we saw that the white man did not take his religion any more seriously than he did his laws, and that he kept both of them just behind him . . . to use when they might do him good in his dealings with strangers. These were not our ways. We kept the laws we made and lived our religion. We have never been able to understand the white man, who fools nobody but himself. . . . Now, too late, we know that the white man is not wise. He is smart, not wise, and fools only himself."

To read Plenty Coups' story is to realize that he deserves the characterization of a "great American" by whatever standards, either white or red, he may be judged. A part of his greatness lies in the adjustment he made between his people and ours, in his patience, his diplomacy and his firmness which saved the Crows from the tragic fate which overtook other Indian tribes. Of them he says: "We saw that those who made war against the white man always failed in the end and lost their lands. Look at the Striped-Feathered-Arrows (Cheyennes). Most of them are living where they hate the ground that holds their lodges. They cannot look at the mountains as I can, or drink good water as I do, every day. Instead of making a treaty with the white man and by it holding their country which they loved, they fought. Ah! how those warriors fought! And lost all, taking whatever the white man would give. And when the hearts of the givers are filled with hate their gifts are small.

"The Cheyennes and the Sioux, who fared a little better, have always been our enemies, but I am sorry for them today. I have fought hard against them in war, with the white-men more than once, and often with my own tribe before the white men came. But when I fought with the white man against them it was not because I loved him or because I hated the Sioux or Cheyennes, but because I saw this was the only way we could keep our land—and it was my dream that taught us the way."

Although Plenty Coups talked freely about his early life, even to the intimate details of his dreams and all the other elements which make up the mysticism of the Indian—a rare occurrence for the red man to bare his soul to the white man—his book tells little of his life after the passing of the buffalo. The descent into poverty and dependence upon the white man's bounty broke his spirit. "When the buffalo went away the hearts of my people fell to the ground and they could not lift them up again," he says. "After this nothing happened. There was little singing anywhere." And those mournful words are a fitting requiem for the whole race of red men.

Future Fighting Planes

Marvels of Efficiency
Airplanes are now able to climb to greater heights than ever before, and the air battle of the future—if there is one—will be fought eight or ten miles above land, out of the range of anti-aircraft guns. Designers have been compelled to revolutionize the airplane to enable pilots to live at such a height, and the cockpit of these machines will be totally enclosed. The cabins will be electrically heated and the pilots will wear specially heated clothing to withstand the cold. Air will be provided from cylinders of oxygen, fed through a small mouthpiece. Great care is being taken over this item, and accurate experiments will have to be made, for should the supply of oxygen fail the pilot would lose consciousness in mid-air.

Brought Business to Life

At Hickory Flat, Miss., crepe hanging on the door of the J. C. Simpson grocery store attracted pedestrians and window shoppers to enter the store and inquire as to the death in the grocer's family. "Who's dead?" they asked. "Oh, just business, that's all," said Simpson. Thereupon the shoppers undertook to revive business by making purchases. Simpson later removed the crepe.

Hand-Picked Wheat

To insure having seed available for certification, Roy Weber of Iredell county, North Carolina, hand-picked four acres of wheat.

Would Fill Much Space

If Betelgeuze were in our solar system it would occupy all the space within the orbit of the planet Mars.

MILL WORKER BENEFITED

Picked Up After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Towanda, Pa.—"I was working in a silk mill and got so tired and rundown that I weighed only 89 pounds. I was not well enough to do my work. As soon as I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I began to pick up. After being married for thirteen years, I had a baby boy and the next year I had another boy who now weighs 37 pounds and is healthy as a bear. The Vegetable Compound has helped me in a dozen ways and I hope others will try it too."
—Mrs. C. B. JOHNSON, Webb Street, R. D. #6, Towanda, Pennsylvania.

Took Mankind Long to See Value of Chimney

Stoves are not very old. The three-legged specimen which Mr. Ford has added to his Americana attained antiquity quickly, even though generations have already arisen who only feel heat and never know the joy of watching red coals fade behind the draft or of seeing orange isinglass glow in darkness—that friendly welcome home of the old-time sitting room. There was something benevolent about a portly baseburner, something lively about the reassuring snap and crackle of the little wood stove in the bedroom on mornings when the pitcher on the washstand was half full of ice. They do seem now to belong to a far-off day, and yet it was uncounted ages before the invention of the chimney followed the discovery of fire—before, so far as we know, any solution of the problem of having fire without smoke was even sought. Rome had hot water heating in some baths, but no chimneys in the home.

Auto Company in Luck

A wallet containing $748 belonging to a New Haven automobile company, reported missing to the police of that city, was found on the running board of a company car that had been driven all over New Haven for three days by one of the company's employees. It is thought that the money was dropped on the running board of the machine shortly before the employee was to take it to the bank for deposit. In three days of exposure the wallet was not stolen, nor did it drop off.

Freak in Rose Growing

Mrs. Ruby Martin, Roanoke, Va., has grown two roses of distinctly different colors in bloom on the same twig of the same rosebush. Roanoke Rose society representatives found and described the phenomenon as a bud mutation or "sport." The bush is of the "Frau Karl Druschki" variety, sometimes known as the American White Beauty. The two blooms grew on a nine-inch stem and had individual stems of three inches each.

Her Name Was Lena

A stout woman drove up to a filling station. "I want two quarts of oil," she said.
"What kind, heavy?" asked the attendant.
"Say, young man, don't get fresh with me," was the indignant response.—The Wheel.

Office Boy—Do you doubt his word, sir?—Hallfax Chronicle.

Market's "Hard Spot"

Strength in a portion of the stock market as a result of considerable buying is called a "hard spot."

Chinese Aid Women Workers

Emancipation of women in China has been extended to the post office. Authorities hope to fill certain clerical positions with women workers. The new plan grants women the right to compete with men in open examination for post office positions.

Getting Ahead

"Is Mr. Dustin Stux a promoter?"
"Not exactly. He's the man who always manages somehow to get promoted."—Washington Star.

PRESCRIPTION

Really Helps Bowels

Don't you want this way of making the bowels behave? A doctor's way to make the bowels move so well that you feel better all over! Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin doesn't turn everything to water, but cleans out all that hard waste clogging your system. It cleans you out without any shock, for it's only fresh laxative herbs a famous doctor found so good for the bowels, combined with pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients.

A doctor should know what is best for the bowels. Let Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin show you how soon you can train the bowels to move freely, every day, the way they should. It's wonderful the way this prescription works, but it's perfectly harmless; so you can use it whenever a coated tongue or sick headache tells you that you're bilious. Fine for children, too (it tastes so nice) and they ought to have a spoonful the minute they seem fretful, feverish, or sluggish, or have a sallow look.
You can get the original prescription. Dr. Caldwell wrote so many years ago; your druggist keeps it all ready in big bottles. Just ask for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and use it always for constipation.

Mrs. Karl VonSmuda and Miss Rosalie Steinhurst arrived Thursday from Newark, N. J., for a couple of weeks' visit with their father, A. Steinhurst.
Mr. and Mrs. Milo Walker returned Monday from Lansing.
Born to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bowland of Saginaw, an 8½ pound son on September 12. He has been named Robert Lee. Mrs. Bowland was formerly Edna Wendt, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Wendt.

The Dorcas Society will meet at the home of Mrs. Wm. Rapp on Tuesday evening, September 23. All members are urged to be present.
Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Ferguson returned Thursday from Warton, Canada, where they were guests of the former's brothers.
Mrs. John Swartz, Jr., and Howard Swartz were business visitors Thursday in Bay City.
Edw. Stevens of Detroit is spending the week end in the city.
Leon Belknap and family of Pontiac spent the week end with his mother, Mrs. H. M. Belknap.

hard to take the positions of the four boys who graduated and the one who did not return to school this year. We have a game scheduled with the Isoc County Normal team for Thursday, September 18. Five former T. C. H. S. boys are now playing for the normals.

The English four class has finished the study of Beowulf.
Seventh and Eighth Grades
All of us appreciate the new piano which has been purchased for the grade rooms.
The seventh grade class has received new history work books. These are different from those used in the seventh grade last year and offer a more interesting study of history. This week was spent in studying early explorations and the poem "Columbus," by Joaquim Miller.

Our art class made containers for work accomplished throughout the year. Some made very attractive envelopes.

The eighth grade grammar class is studying the rules concerning debating, and is collecting material for a debate to be held early next week in class.

Fifth and Sixth Grades
Richard Ziehl has been absent because of illness this week.

The sixth grade arithmetic class is beginning the study of decimals. In geography some interesting work was done on the study of cotton in the United States. A report was given by Effie Prescott which gave us some very good facts.

The fifth grade geography class is making a trip to South America. We have visited a rubber and a coffee plantation. Special reports were given by Lucille DePotty and Marguerite McLean.

The Wide-Awake Club is checking up on health rules and making personal inspections each morning.

Third and Fourth Grades
We were all delighted to find on Monday morning that our room had been re-painted. We think we have a very nice room now. To make our room still brighter, we have made an apple orchard poster.

Our caterpillars have nearly all gone to bed for the winter in their cozy cocoons.
This week the following people were elected to take care of these duties: Library, Charles Cecil; to pass waste basket, Vernon Blust; to inspect the aisles, Robert Fitzhugh; policeman in the boys' hall, Eugene Wegner; policeman in the girls' hall, Ruth Clark.

Primary
We like our new readers very much. The second graders have read three stories and the first graders have finished reading the first one.

First to Map Moon
The first map of the moon was made by Riccioli in 1650.

ton, Carl Johnson, James Dillon; Junior Garden Clubs—John and Thelma Sherk, Violet and Mildred Harwood, Wayne Pollard, James Helton, Mark Sedgeman, Nina Schanbeck, Arthur and Elizabeth Roper, Faye and Kermit Gurley, Achey June Scully.

The following people entered in the manual training exhibit: Howard Evans, Earl Bennington, John Stewart, Edward Schanbeck, Francis and Henry Dorey, Edward Doak, Harry Ross, Oliver Alverson, Hosea Bigelow, Harold Colby, Violet Bielby and Lillian Sedgeman.

The prize money when received will be distributed among the individuals who entered. This is the first attempt at agricultural exhibits by the school as a whole in the recent years and it is hoped that more interest can be developed and a larger showing for 1931.

The following are the members of the high school band: Cornets—Virginia Anschutz, Carl Johnson, Marian Haglund, Harry Hill, Mark Sedgeman, James Dillon; Trombones—Albert Siegel, Howard Durant, Phyllis Martindale; Clarinets—Fred Wilson, Vivian Harwood; Baritone—Charles Bonney, Blaine Christeson, Robert Moran; Bass—Walter Klump; Drums—Edward Doak, Squire Wood.

The following are the members of the high school orchestra: Helen Turner, Fred Wilson, Albert Siegel, Phyllis Martindale, Blaine Christeson, Squire Woods, and Virginia Anschutz.

The following people are taking lessons on string instruments: Helen Merschel, Rosemary Hickey, Rosemond Sanderson, and Achey June Scully.

Those intending to take lessons on wind instruments are meeting the latter part of the week.

The following are the people who have entered in the high school tennis tournament: Fred Wilson, Edward Doak, Charles Edinger, Donald St. Martin, George Roach, John Stewart, Oliver Alverson, Alfred Johnson, Charles Bonney, Harold Colby, Squire Wood, Edward Klenow, Thomas Curry, Edwin Davis and Blaine Christeson.

East Tawas high's strong baseball team defeated St. Joe of Tawas City at the new athletic field last Monday, 11 to 4. Don St. Martin yielded only four hits, and struck out eleven in the seven-inning contest. George Roach packed East Tawas' big bat pounding out a home run and a double in three trips to the plate. The fielding of Klenow and Kasischke was a big factor in the victory. Ross did a brilliant bit of catching behind the bat. The playing of Zaharias and Lixey stood out for St. Joe.

Score by innings:
1 2 3 4 5 6 7—R H E
E. T. .... 4 0 2 1 4 0 —11 9 3
St. Joe ... 0 3 0 0 0 1 0—4 4 3

The primary department of the M. E. church school has filled a Friendship Treasure Chest to be sent to the children of the Philippines. On Sunday the chest and its contents will be on display during the church school hour. Under the leadership of Miss Betty Harwood, the primaries will conduct the Worship Service, using the "Friendship" theme.

See the musical comedy, "Miss Bluebonnet," East Tawas Community Bldg., October 3 and 4.

Dr. and Mrs. R. C. Pochert and children, and Mr. and Mrs. John Burgeson left Friday (today) for a visit at Superior, Wisconsin.

Mrs. Fred Wilkins of Alpena spent Thursday in the city with her mother, Mrs. Carrie Brown.

Mrs. H. Grant and son, Wallace, spent Sunday at Alpena.

Mrs. C. A. Bonney of East Tawas and Mrs. E. Moeller of Tawas City spent Thursday in Bay City.

Mr. and Mrs. Oren Misener of Alpena spent Sunday in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Stewart spent a few days in Bay City and Saginaw. They returned home Wednesday.

Mrs. J. Reinke and two children left Wednesday for a week's visit in Detroit with relatives.

Mrs. Chas. Hewson left Thursday for a week's visit with relatives in Detroit.

Miss Selma Hagstrom left on Wednesday for Saginaw on business.

The members of Audie Johnson Post and Auxiliary, American Legion, expect to have their building completed by Armistice Day. Work is again in progress. A number of East Tawas businessmen have given toward the work. If everyone would give a small amount the building would soon be completed. It is hoped that the people of East Tawas will take an interest in this. The building was deeded to the post through the kindness of Reuben Wade and Mrs. J. Legacy. Mr. Wade is the last remaining member of the local G. A. R. post, former owners of the building. Jay Platte and Russell Anderson are live wires and their work on the building is appreciated by the post. Wm. DeGrow has given brick for the new chimney which will be built by Leslie Nash. This is in addition to all the other help Mr. Nash has given to the good cause.

Sunday Meditation
A good dinner may make up for a poor sermon, but we never have known a man who was content with a poor dinner because he had listened to a good sermon.—Exchange.

Locust Post
The 17-year locust is about one inch long when full grown and is marked with black and yellow.

Bread on the Waters
A good deed is never lost; who sows courtesy reaps friendship, and he who plants kindness gathers love.—Basil.

Expression of Contempt
"To show the white feather" is synonymous with "to show cowardice." The proverbial expression arose from the circumstance that a white feather in the tail of a gamecock is a certain sign that he is not thoroughbred.

U. S. Paper Currency
The paper money of the United States is printed only at the bureau of engraving and printing, Washington. The mints of the United States make no paper currency.

Snow Huts Warm
Eskimo huts are made of snow, and as long as there is a supply of blubber to fill six or eight lamps, the place is so warm that the children go about naked.

Thinking and Speaking
"To think quickly," said Hi Ho, the sage of Chisatown, "is valuable. To speak slowly is more so."—Washington Star.

With Pen or Pencil
The expression "longhand" is used for ordinary writing as opposed to shorthand, typewriting or printing.

Hair on Human Head
If your hair is red you have about 90,000 hairs on your head; if black 103,000; if brown 109,000. For one person with red hair there are nearly forty with brown.

Add Business English
Exotic words have a way of fastening themselves in the popular mind; and what we dread now is that executives in conference when you call will hereafter be in "consultative session."

Looks Like a Fireplace Heats Like a Furnace

The Greater FIRESIDE Monogram Circulator

Finished in beautiful, colorful (patented) Cast Tile Enamel

Who does not long for a fireplace in the home? CAST-TILE enamel finish of the GREATER FIRESIDE is an exact reproduction of a charming tapestry brick fireplace. It lends distinction to your home and brings alluring fireplace cheer to your living room. Strikingly attractive in any home setting, CAST-TILE enamel is a secret and patented process that can not be used on any other circulator. Its colorful beauty makes ordinary music box and furniture design type of circulators appear dull and monotonous. CAST-TILE Enamel's colorful beauty is everlasting. It won't scratch, chip or crack. Does not show dust or finger prints. It is exceedingly difficult to describe its unique beauty. Add distinction to your living room with a colorful FIRESIDE. Come and see it, or ask for circular showing actual color reproduction.

And we take pleasure in showing the reproductions of a few of these styles.

We are pleased to recommend the choice of these garments to our clientele, especially to those of you who are looking for a garment in the newest mode without being extreme in style.

The excellent workmanship incorporated into these garments will give you many seasons of hard wear.

The furs have all been selected to give satisfaction, in variety of types and shapes to make these garments very attractive. Many others are on display. May we suggest an early visit?
