TAWAS CITY
WINS FROM NATIONAL CITY

Tawas City completely snowed under the National Gypsum nine last Sunday at the local athletic field by a score of 21 to 8.

The contest was close during the first five innings, the score then being 5 to 4 in favor of Tawas City. In the sixth the locals started their hitting spree by collecting four runs. Another score was added in the seventh, followed by nine in the eighth frame and two in the ninth.

In order to bring up their total to 21 runs, the locals collected 21 hits during the course of the game. "Happy" Swartz and Musolf were the leading sluggers of the day. Swartz connected for two home runs, one at the expense of Franks and the other off C. Curry. The first came in the eighth with the bases loaded and the other in the ninth with one on. In addition to the two circuit blows, he collected a double. Musolf had to his credit five safe hits out of six trips to the plate, of which two were doubles. DeCou also had two doubles to his credit.

Boulder pitched very good ball for the locals. Although he allowed the National Gypsum boys ten hits they were scattered throughout the nine innings. Eight men succumbed before him by the strike-out method. Franks, who started for National, was less fortunate. Although he struck out seven, nineteen hits were collected off him in the seven and two-thirds innings he was on the mound. C. Curry, who relieved him, allowed two hits during the remainder of the game.

For the amusement of fans has been scheduled a game between the Tawas City Businessmen and the Tawas City Independents for next Sunday at the local athletic field. Old time diamond stars are included in the businessmen's line-up, assuring those attending a contest that will range from comedy to real baseball excitement. This will be the last game of the season, fans—so don't miss it. Game called at 2:00 o'clock. There will be no general admission price, but a collection will be taken up during the game.

WERTH—KRUEGER

The marriage of Margaret Werth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Werth of Hubbard Lake, to Leo Krueger of Saginaw, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Krueger of East Tawas, took place Thursday, September 18, at the Salem Lutheran church of Hubbard Lake. Rev. E. Appel performed the ceremony.

The bride wore a gown of white satin and lace, her long veil held in place by a cap of lace studded with rhinestones and seed pearls. The bridal bouquet was fashioned of tea roses and baby breath. Miss Ruth Werth, sister of the bride acted as maid of honor and wore a gown of pink georgette and lace. The bridesmaids, Miss Beulah Krueger, sister of the groom, and Miss Gertrude Kauer, wore yellow and green georgette respectively and carried arm bouquets of roses.

The bride's cousin, little Marjorie Grauss of Detroit, made a dainty little flower girl gown in a charming hand made frock and carrying a basket of sweet peas and baby breath.

The groom was attended by his two brothers, Lewis Krueger of Saginaw and Harry Krueger of East Tawas, and Arnold Werth of Alpena, cousin of the bride.

The funeral services were held Wednesday from St. Joseph's church. Rev. Kirchoff officiated. All of his children were present with their wives and husbands. Other relatives from out of the city were Oliver Gauthier of St. Thomas, Ontario, and Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Aubuchon and son, Kemp, of Detroit.

FEATURED AT FAMILY

Which is more to be prized—wealth or respectability? This question has been answered many times, but seldom in so dramatic a fashion as in "Common Clay," the offering which comes to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, next Sunday and Monday, October 5 and 6.

Constance Bennett enacts the feminine lead in this vivid picture, that of an unmarried mother seeking justice for herself and her baby. The gripping and unexpected climax is based on her choice between a large sum of money and a name for her child.

Lew Ayres has the masculine lead opposite Miss Bennett, and Director Victor Fleming selected a distinguished supporting cast for the picture including Tully Marshall, Matty Kemp and Beryl Mercer. This picture has made a record hit wherever shown. Don't miss it. Shows at 7:00 and 8:30. Attend the matinee Sunday at 3:00. Admission 10c and 30c.

IN MEMORIAM

So much we cannot comprehend, so much we can't explain; But let's have faith God is our friend despite our times of pain. And let's be glad for memories sweet of her we loved and lost, with faith that we again shall meet when life's divide is crossed.

Gone from us one year October 2, 1930, and sadly missed by the family.

VETERAN D. & M.
RAILROADMAN
DIES SATURDAY

Leonidas Gauthier, veteran railroad man, died Saturday at his home in Tawas township after an illness of about six months. Mr. Gauthier had been an employe of the Detroit & Mackinac railway for nearly 40 years, retiring from service July 1, 1929.

Leonidas Gauthier was born September 4, 1865, at Chertrook, Ontario. He came to Tawas City when 18 years of age. His early days here he spent in the lumber woods, becoming an employe of the railroad and was in continuous service until last year. In August, 1903, he was united in marriage to Josephine LaVaette. To this marriage eight children were born, five of whom, with the widow, survive him.

Leonidas Gauthier, Jr., Mrs. Josie McCardell and Jule Gauthier of Hazel Park, Mrs. Rose Aubuchon of Tawas City and Adolour Gauthier of Fendale.

STARS RAZZ EACH OTHER

IN FRENCH LEGION

Jack Holt and Ralph Graves, having "fizzed," kidded and fought each other under the sea and in the air via "Submarine" and "Flight," now transfer their activities to a new locale in Columbia's sensational dramatic offering, "Hell's Island," which is scheduled to come to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Thursday and Friday, October 9 and 10.

Messrs. Holt and Graves portray two adventurous Americans serving in the famous French Foreign Legion. Dorothy Sebastian is seen as the vivacious miss, who forms the apex of the triangle which transforms a carefree friendship into a bitter enmity. The transition of the plot graduates from light comedy to grim drama building up to a climax of powerful intensity.

Spectacular scenes of the campaign of the Foreign Legion of France against the warlike Riff tribes provide action of the most thrilling kind.

PRINCESS WATASSA IN IOSCO COUNTY

Miss Gladys Morse, "Princess Watassa" health teacher on the staff of the Michigan Tuberculosis Association, is giving a number of programs this week in Iosco county schools. She visits the schools dressed in Indian costume, and tells Indian health legends demonstrating the value of fresh air, sunshine, plenty of sleep, and inclusion of fresh fruits and vegetables in the diet.

Miss Morse's programs are given without cost to the schools, being financed by the Michigan Tuberculosis Association through funds raised in the sale of Christmas seals. She shows that good living habits are the best preventives against tuberculosis, as well as other diseases.

Sunday evening an illustrated talk on mission lands. The sermon will be accompanied by many beautiful pictures.

DEDICATE 200
ACRE FOREST
LAST SUNDAY

One hundred members of the Flint Junior Chamber of Commerce, their wives, and a delegation of teachers from the Flint public schools visited the Huron National Forest on Sunday, September 28, and enjoyed a most interesting day.

The delegation arrived at the Holland Hotel at East Tawas at 10:00 a. m. and were met by a committee of businessmen and their wives, who welcomed them and assisted in conducting them through the Beal Nursery, the fish rearing ponds at Silver Creek, and then to the large tree planting camp on the Huron National Forest. Here a committee composed of George and Charles Bigelow, Alvin Misner, and George Vaughn had prepared a noon-day banquet. The day was chilly, and when the delegation arrived at the planting camp the long tables in the dining room were ready to receive them. The two large hotel ranges had made the large building comfortable and the members gathered around the long tables to eat hot dog sandwiches, home baked beans (prepared by the ladies of East Tawas), dll pickles, fried cakes, fresh Lake Huron smoked white fish, ice cream, and coffee. Members of the Kanotin Club of East Tawas helped to serve the banquet, and in all it was a very merry meal.

After the noon-day luncheon, Harry Black, father of the Kiwanis Plantation that has been initiated on the Huron forest was master of ceremonies, and introduced those who took part in the program. The speakers were Charles D. Crawford, president of the Flint Junior Chamber of Commerce; Elmer Eichinger, inspector of the plantation of trees which the Junior Chamber of Commerce is planting on the Huron forest; T. E. Marston, manager of the East Michigan Tourist Association; H. N. Butler of East Tawas; and R. G. Schreck, supervisor of the Huron National Forest.

After the program Supervisor Schreck conducted the party through the plantations. To many of the delegation this was merely another trip, but to others it was the first time that they had ever seen the forest, and they were much astonished to see at first hand what the Federal Government is doing in Michigan. The plantations were a marvel to everyone. It was possible to see trees from a few inches high to those that were planted in 1910 and are now more than twenty feet in height.

T. E. Marston of the East Michigan Tourist Association furnished the meal for the occasion. It has been through Mr. Marston's efforts that such meetings and occasions have been made worth while.

IOSCO COUNTY NORMAL NOTES

Several of the Normal students motored to Ann Arbor Saturday to see the opening football game of the University of Michigan for the year. They brought back a very interesting report of both games.

The class has ordered their class rings through the local dealer.

Both the boys and girls interested in school and elected a manager for each. George Lomas is the boys' manager and Mr. Younsr is the coach. Esther Osrberby was chosen for the girls' manager, but no coach has yet been selected.

The class in story telling is growing proficient only some find it difficult to face the class and crow like a rooster.

Ethel Schramm has discarded her crutches and is able to walk again, after receiving a severely sprained ankle while playing games.

Memories of Columbus in the Nation's Capital

Landing of Columbus
Painting by John Vanderlyn in the Capitol

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ON OCTOBER 12 we celebrate the four hundred and thirty-eighth anniversary of the landing of Christopher Columbus on the shores of the New world, and insofar as the daring voyage of this Genoese sailor led eventually to the foundation of the United States, it is appropriate at this time to inquire how, in addition to the annual celebration of Landing day, we honor his memory. What memorials to Columbus, for instance, are there in the Capital of the nation which bears his name in its personification of "Columbus?"

The visitor to Washington, who goes by train, sees one of the greatest monuments ever erected to the memory of Columbus the moment he steps out of the Union station there. On the plaza in front of the station is the nation's formal tribute to the Italian navigator—the magnificent Columbus fountain by Lorado Taft. The outstanding feature of the fountain is a stone shaft about 45 feet high, surmounted by a globe which forms the background for the statue of Columbus, who stands upon the prow of a vessel, with arms folded in an attitude of meditation. The figurehead of the ship is a beautiful female figure typifying the spirit of discovery.

On each side of the shaft are massive figures representing the New and Old worlds. The New world is an American Indian, reaching over his shoulder for an arrow from his quiver. The Old world is typified by a patriarchal Caucasian of heroic mold and thoughtful mien. The globe at the top of the shaft suggests the influence of Columbus on the growth of man's knowledge of the shape of the earth. It is supported by four American eagles, standing at the corners of the top of the shaft, with wings partly extended. On the rear of the shaft is a medallion representing Ferdinand and Isabella of Spain, the patrons of Columbus's voyage of discovery, and the group of figures is completed by two enormous lions which crouch on pedestals at the ends of the balustrade.

The plan for erecting this memorial was started by a fraternal order, the Knights of Columbus, who solicited contributions from the various councils of the order throughout the country. To the large amount of money which this organization raised was added an appropriation of $100,000 by congress and the work of erecting the memorial was given to a commission composed of the chairman of the senate and house committees on the library, the secretary of state, the secretary of war and the supreme knight of the Order of the Knights of Columbus. The commission selected the plaza in front of the Union station as the site for the memorial and adopted the design submitted by Daniel H. Burnham, architect of the Union station and member of the National Commission of Fine Arts, and Lorado Taft, sculptor, both of Chicago.

The Capitol contains two striking reminders of Columbus. In the rotunda is the magnificent painting by John Vanderlyn, an American artist and pupil of Gilbert Stuart, which depicts "The Landing of Columbus." This picture is so well known that it needs no further description here. In the lobby of the senate gallery is the painting of another scene in the life of Columbus by another American artist. It is "The Recall of Columbus" by A. G. Heaton, a descendant of the famous painter, Rembrandt Peale. This painting, completed in 1833 from studies made in Spain, was sold to the United States government and copied by engraving on the 50-cent stamp of the Columbian series, issued to commemorate the World's Columbian exposition at Chicago in 1893.

This painting represents the historic scene on the Bridge of Pines, two leagues from Granada, when Columbus, having been refused the financial aid of King Ferdinand for his expedition, was riding sadly away from the capital, only to be overtaken by a messenger from Queen Isabella, who had decided to give her aid even though her husband would not. In the picture Columbus, sitting on a little white mule, has just been given the queen's letter by the richly-dressed messenger who has dismounted from his fine steed and is bowing impressively as he hands the all-important document to the future discoverer of the New world. It was the turning point in the career of Christopher Columbus and as such, the preservation of this historic scene in a painting deserves a place among the other pictured "great moments in American history" which adorn the walls of the Capitol.

In addition to these memorials to Columbus in Washington, there is in the Library of Congress a collection of original documents and rare books relating to the discovery of the New world which are of almost incalculable value and which form the most direct link of the United States with the valiant sailor who made it possible for this nation to be. They constitute a unique "literary memorial" to Columbus and the headlines of them all is the Columbus Codex which has been characterized as a "document of the highest historical importance and which will be better appreciated as time goes on."

To understand the historical importance of the Codex is necessary to review briefly certain facts about the stormy life of Columbus, especially those which brought this document into existence.

In 1490, while he was on his third voyage to America, his enemies at home in Spain were doing all they could to bring about his downfall. They succeeded in turning King Ferdinand, who from the first had not been nearly as enthusiastic concerning the venture as was his queen, Isabella, against Columbus. And even the queen seemed either disinclined to defend him, or was helpless to do so.

So Columbus, who had returned in 1493 from his first voyage as a national hero, now came home in irons and in disgrace. But almost as soon as he had arrived, Ferdinand and Isabella experienced a change of heart. Columbus was immediately set free and received an invitation to visit the king and queen, which he did and was warmly received. He told the royal pair of his adventures abroad and received commendation.

However, he was not so successful in gaining restitution and property to which he was entitled. The best he was able to do was to secure a declaration from the throne fixing the extent and manner of restitution. The result was disappointing. More complications continued to pile up.

Columbus expected to leave soon on a fourth voyage. With his privileges, rights, grants, and even his Spanish citizenship imperiled, he took steps to prevent, if possible, their loss. The result was the Columbus Codex.

On January 5, 1502, he called into consultation two alcaldes, or city judges, and several notaries. They drew up and had transcribed a statement of the explorer's rights. Several copies were made, these to be deposited where they could be safely preserved. Thus Columbus hoped to protect himself against his enemies.

Thirty-five documents were included in this Codex. They were the discoverer's charter as an admiral, viceroy and governor general, his warrant, granted by Isabella, authorizing him to equip ships, to share in the expense and profits of the voyage to India, to adjudicate and distribute lands, and letters from various dignitaries expressing appreciation of his services.

Of the four copies of the Codex made in 1502, three are known to exist today, including the one in the possession of this country. One went to the republic of Genoa. Today it is highly treasured by the municipality, being contained in a bronze bust of Columbus in the municipal palace.

The other copy was misplaced after 1670. But in 1880 it turned up in Paris. It is believed to have found its way there when Napoleon ordered all archives deposited in the French capital in 1800, and documents were sent from all parts of Europe. Restitution was later made, but the Codex apparently was overlooked. It is in Paris today.

The fourth copy, which is unaccounted for, was on paper rather than parchment. It went to Don Alonzo Sanchez de Carvajal, who soon after left for Hispaniola. The documents disappeared and may have been destroyed, for they have never yet been brought to light.

The story of how America came into possession of its copy of the Codex is a romantic one. In 1818 Edward Everett, the gifted New England orator, was rummaging through an old book shop in Florence, Italy, when he came across the manuscript of about 80 pages in characters which appeared to be those of Columbus's time.

In 1823, the Codex at Geneva was published and Everett discovered that the manuscript in his possession coincided precisely with those in the Genoese volume.

After Everett made this statement in 1824 the manuscript again dropped from public notice and apparently was forgotten by all concerned. About 1850, Justin Winsor, engaged in his monumental "Life of Columbus," wrote to Dr. William Everett, whose father, Edward Everett, had died, asking whether he might inspect the relic. Doctor Everett was unable to locate it at that time, but in 1897 it came to light in the locked lower part of a bookcase which had remained undisturbed after his father's death.

Still its adventures before reaching the safe custody of the American government were not at an end. Once after being sent to London for the inspection of experts it lay in its wrappings on a table in the Everett home when the room in which it was was swept by flames from which, however, the precious document was seemingly miraculously spared. It was finally sold to the Library of Congress by Doctor Everett for a sum which was nominal compared with what it would have commanded in the open market.

But the Codex is not the only treasure of Columbiana owned by the American people and preserved in their great library in Washington. Ancient books of only a few crudely printed pages which first told of his great achievement are also included in the collection. Columbus landed at Lisbon upon his return from the first voyage on March 4, 1493, and under date of March 14 he dispatched to Gabriel, sometimes called Raphael, Sanchez, or Sanxis, treasurer to Ferdinand and Isabella, his famous letter, written aboard his caravel, reporting his discovery of the New world. The Spanish ambassador to Rome at that time was Cardinal Bernadino Carvajal, and on July 19 his eminence delivered before Pope Alexander VI an oration concerning this event which was printed in Rome, presumably by Plantin, in that same year. This was the first wide heralding of the momentous discovery and a copy of this rare book is among the treasures of the library.

The library also owns the first printed biography of Columbus. This is found in its copy of the first polyglot edition of the Scriptures, printed at Genoa in 1516. The story of the life of the discoverer appears in it as a marginal note to the 19th psalm. (By Western Newspaper Union)

Reports Floating Island in Pacific

Norfolk, Va.—A "floating" island, inhabited only by birds, and another not visible two years ago, were discovered by Capt. J. O. Evans of the British steamer Pareora and his crew, according to a report made by Captain Evans on his arrival in Hampton Roads. His ship has just returned from a long cruise to the Society Islands, Solomon island and various other islands in the South seas. The Pareora, out of England, has been away from home six months and has been steadily on the go.

"It was on April 15 at noon that we discovered the 'floating island.' It was in the Pacific near the Society Islands," said Evans. "There were no signs of human life, but there were great flocks of birds swarming over the place. There must have been a thousand birds at least in the flock we saw. We did not get close to the island because we did not know how deep the water might be. "The island appeared to be only a few feet above the water. In some places it looked as if the water had been breaking over its shore lines. "We also sighted the Tonga of the Friendly Islands, which was entirely submerged two years ago. It is now 600 feet above the surface of the sea. There is no life on this island either, except birds. I presume if anybody wanted to live there they might be frightened for fear that the island might again be claimed by the sea, from which it came. "At Solomon island we had a run-in with the head hunters. They attempted to get fresh with my crew and we took three of them into custody. We gave them into the custody of the civic authorities, but they were permitted to return to their haunts with a warning they must be good. "The Tonga island appears to be shielding a volcano. When our ship passed it we could see smoke. "The other island which we sighted near the Society Islands we called the Floating island. I don't know anything about where it came from nor how long it will remain visible."

The DAIRY

BARBED WIRE IS MENACE TO COWS

No Animal Will Be More Quickly Hurt by Cuts.

In a recent survey results were presented showing that a very high percentage of current fence sales are barbed wire. And unfortunately this is particularly true in dairy regions—just the place where woven wire is most needed. The prevalent idea among dairymen is that barbed wire is an adequate fence for dairy cattle, and that they cannot afford to buy woven wire.

Since the passing of the heyday of the horse, the dairy cow is the most valuable animal unit on the farm. She represents a larger unit investment and a larger return per unit than any other class of live stock. No other animal is more unprotected against the tearing and cutting of barbed wire and no other animal will be more quickly and thoroughly ruined by barbed wire cuts.

There may be times when the pastures are short and the alfalfa or corn or oats across the fence will look particularly inviting to Bossy. No barbed wire fence, however well constructed, will stand for long against the pressure of a heavy cow reaching for the second row of corn or another inch or two of alfalfa or clover. Unless the farmer is unusually careful to frequently stretch and repair the fence, Bossy will sooner or later break through and will be fortunate, indeed, if tests or udder are not badly torn and cut. From a standpoint of economy through longer life, woven wire is cheaper than barbed wire fence for dairy cattle, but when a valuable cow is made a candidate for the packing house through barbed wire cuts, the loss becomes heavy indeed. A prominent and successful dairymen recently said that he would not consider raising dairy cattle without woven wire fence, and that the loss sustained annually from barbed wire cuts is more than enough to cover the cost of woven wire fence.

Barbed wire, of course, is necessary above the woven wire to prevent the cows from reaching over the fence. Important, too, is the spacing of the barbed wire. The first wire should be not more than an inch and a half above the woven wire, else the cow is likely to get her head between the woven wire and the first strand of the barbed.

Drinking Cups for Cows

Increases Dairy Profit

Providing dairy cows with free access to water in drinking cups in the barn increases the milk and butter fat production, according to results of an experiment at Iowa state college the past winter. Dr. C. Y. Cannon, head of the dairy husbandry department, announced the results at the recent meeting of American Dairy Science association stating that cows given free access to drinking cups produced 6.14 per cent more milk and 12.12 per cent more butter fat than those offered water twice a day at outside drinking troughs. The cows getting water from the cups drank 18.37 per cent more water than when watered outside.

It was also reported that cows having free access to water in the cups cleaned up their feed better than those watered outside. Cows having access to the cups drank an average of 10.3 times during the 24-hour period. The above results would indicate that thousands of dairymen could profitably install drinking cups and a water system under pressure which would not only pay for its cost, but also remove much of the drudgery from their tasks.

Cost of Cooling Milk on Many Dairy Farms

Milk cooling has just recently begun to be regarded as an expense on most farms. In the past, it has often been simply a question of how much ice was needed and since the ice was stored at home during the winter months, cost was seldom considered. However, with the development of dairy, poultry, live stock, and farm management systems which fill up the entire day the year round, the matter of labor cost must be considered. This, combined with the fact that mechanical cooling is becoming so popular, is causing careful study in many cases, of the actual cost of milk cooling. In some cases, it will undoubtedly still continue to be cheaper to use ice, although mechanical cooling is certain to replace ice very rapidly in a great many sections.

Good Producing Cow

A good milk producing cow is usually thin in flesh. She is also thin-skinned. She cannot endure exposure, but needs to be kept in warm quarters to be comfortable. Even under shelter she can make but little use of corn stalks as a part of her feed. She needs plenty of digestible feeds all the time. This is true whether she is in milk or in a dry condition; when she is not making milk, feed should be given her liberally for its building qualities.

YOUR LINENS ALWAYS LOOK SO BRIGHT AND SNOWY MRS. CROSS

How she gets such snowy washes

There's really no secret about it, my dear. Everyone knows Rinsol washes clothes much, much whiter. Not only that, but it saves hard work. I never scrub any more; I let Rinsol soak out the dirt. My clothes come so white, I don't even bother about boiling. I think Rinsol is wonderful."

Drawing Back Pay

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

The king was very ill in one of Kipling's tales of India, and his life was despaired of. They were discussing the situation—the convict and Mahmud, and weighing the possibilities of his getting well.

"He will live," the convict remarked. "He saved the life once of a man I knew. I live. Why? Because a man may draw back pay, as it were, for his good deeds. I dug my captain, who is now colonel, out of some ground that fell upon him in France. It was part of the work. He said nothing—nor I. But seven years after—when I was condemned to death, he spent money like water on lawyers and such witnesses as would testify for my sake. It was back pay."

He was right, for the king got well. I have known many who, long after the act was committed, received back pay for their good deeds. It is true that in one way or another men usually suffer for their evil deeds. Retribution is pretty sure though it may be long delayed, and so, too, in this world, and it may be in the next, the reward is likely to come often unexpectedly for the good that we do.

I went to Frazier's funeral a few weeks ago. He was eighty-six, and he had retained his strength and his faculties until within a week of his going. I had seen him only a few days before his death and he was as alert and as enthusiastic about his work as a boy. His retention of all his faculties was back pay for the life he had lived. He had had no dissipation. He had avoided narcotics all his life; he never overate. He had disciplined his emotions and his body and as a result he had the most delightful old age that I have ever looked upon. It was back pay with interest. The kind act has its own reward. Goodness and unselfishness and sacrifice are ultimately not forgotten. I am convinced. Bread cast upon the water does return even though it may be after many days.

Mrs. Gordon, when I first knew her, seemed to be playing pretty completely in hard luck. She had a pleasant girlhood with little hardship until she married Gordon. He was a handsome irresponsible ne'er-do-well, who left her after they had been married ten years, with four children on her hands, and nothing upon which to support them but the efforts of her own hands.

She was a sportsman, who never uttered a word of complaint but set at her task with courage and determination. Some way she got the children educated—grade school, high school, and college. I saw her in her old age drawing the back pay for the work she had done years before. She had leisure, she had comfort—luxury, in fact, and more than that she had the love and the attention of her children who through her declining years were trying to pay her back for the sacrifices she had made in their behalf. "Allah does not forget," the Hindu says.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

By WALTER TRUMBULL

The Empire Trust building, on the old Waldorf site, is rising rapidly to the sky and the new Waldorf is taking form, but those of us who came to New York some time ago never will cease to miss the old Waldorf Astoria that Bolt and Oscar made famous. Kings stayed there; presidents visited there; the old ball room, at dances or dinners, saw every leader of society, finance and politics within its walls. The Dutch Treat club held its annual dinners there. Before prohibition, the Waldorf bar was almost like the sidewalk tables of the Cafe de la Paix. Sit there long enough and you would see the world go by; although many of its citizens stopped a while. There are hundreds of hotels in New York, but not one of them has the atmosphere of that old hostelry at Thirty-fourth street and Fifth avenue.

There are other vanished landmarks which have their place in the book of memory. The Astor house oyster bar where you sat on stools

Envy!

To Reconstruct Moscow's Famous Red Square

Washington.—Russia's "Red Square," the scene of glamour and tragedy, is to be reconstructed, according to a report of the National Geographic society. In back of a high board fence the work of turning the temporary wooden mausoleum into a permanent resting place of stone is already under way. Smooth flag stones will replace the ancient cobbles and permanent reviewing stands are to be erected. Formerly the scene of public executions, of imperial proclamations and martial parades, of bloody revolutions, it now resounds with the tramp of the Red army and the footfalls of Soviet workers. High above the Kremlin wall rises a great clock tower, built the year before Columbus discovered America. Opposite this historical structure are the Trading Rows with their arched sidewalks, around which the people in all walks of life gather. Women in felt boots, clerks in leather jackets, officials, usually well dressed, with their brief cases under their arms, laborers in their dirty sheepskin coats, slipped girls dragging hand carts behind them offer a glamorous contrast.

Vendors cluster around the gates leading to "Red Square," offering all manner of articles and making sections of the square into virtual outdoor department stores.

At night an open forum is established in the square. Unimportant Soviet speakers gather little knots of listeners about them to explain details of the Soviet plan of government, and oftentimes the square is filled with a mass of people while the government leaders proclaim the doctrines of the revolution through mammoth loud speakers. With the work of reconstruction now started, all of this glamour is at a standstill, until with a new and even greater "Red Square" is completed, it can begin anew.

VOL. I OCTOBER 3, 1930 NUMBER 22

Here lies the body of Jim Lake, tread softly all who pass. He thought his foot was on the brake when it was on the gas.

We are selling scratch feed at $2.10 per 100 lbs.; winter wheat bran, $1.90 per 100 lbs.; flour middlings at $2.20 per 100 lbs.; meat scraps, $5.00 per 100 lbs.; oil meal, $3.50 per 100 lbs.

"How do you like my dress, Tom? Dad got it for my eighteenth birthday."

"Certainly worn well, hasn't it?"

Just when we think we can make ends meet someone comes along and moves the ends.

It's all right for a man to wear his BVD's the year 'round, if he doesn't go around bragging about it.

We have some 32% Hexite to mix with your grain after grinding that gives an 18% to 22% protein feed for feeding.

"Johnny, what is an island?"

"An island is a place you can't leave without a boat."

We are selling Hexite at $2.00 per 100 lbs. It pays to feed Hexite, as you get from a third to one-half more milk and cream.

We are paying 40c per bu. for Cracked corn for $2.45 per 100 lbs.; coarse corn meal, $2.45 per 100 lbs.; corn and oat chop, $2.10 per 100 lbs.

"You've a large family to support, Mr. Brown."

"Yep, and if they wasn't all makin' their own livin' I don't know how I'd manage it."

"How fast can your car go?"

"Oh, about 300 billboards an hour."

WILBER No. 1 SCHOOL NOTES

We have an enrollment of thirty-five pupils. Our new beginners are: Ruby Thompson, Alden Phelps, Arlene Greene and Audrey Olson.

We are very sorry to hear of the illness of Mary Goings, who attends school in Latty, Ohio.

Our school and Baldwin met at Wilber No. 4, Fractional, to hear Princess Watassa. She told us about the earlier life of the Indians and she also gave us many health rules. We are sure we will benefit by her talk.

The primary grades made a harvest poster for the month of September.

Little Rosemary Ostroske and Harold Cholger visited our school on Tuesday.

Anthony Ostroske entered school last week.

The sixth grade is reviewing fractions.

The following pupils were neither absent nor tardy during the month of September: George, Arlis and Colletta Callahan, Fred, Bill and Jean Claire Nonenpregor, Alice, Joy, Edith, Ruby, Marjorie, Dorothy, Norton and Pearl Thompson, and Anthony Ostroske.

Visitors are always welcome.

Methods in Fur Collar

There are several methods that can be followed to get moths out of a fur collar. A simple one is to place the fur over a warm radiator or on top of a lighted gas oven with a very low flame. The moths will come to the surface and may be brushed off. Place the garment in the sun for several days.

STATE OF MICHIGAN

The Probate Court for the County of Isosco.

At a session of said Court, held at the Probate Office in the city of Tawas City, in said county, on the 18th day of September, A. D. 1930.

Present: Hon. David Davison, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the Estate of Peter Vancia, deceased.

George E. Kelly having filed in said court a petition praying for license to sell the interest of said estate in certain real estate therein described.

It is ordered, that the 11th day of October, A. D. 1930, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at said probate office, be and is hereby appointed for hearing said petition, and that all persons interested in said estate appear before said court at said time and place, to show cause why a license to sell the interest of said estate in said real estate should not be granted.

It is further ordered, that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Tawas Herald, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

DAVID DAVISON, Judge of Probate.

Telephone Increase in Past Decade Outstrips Growth in Population

According to figures of the U. S. Census Bureau, the population of this country on April 1, 1930, was, in round numbers, 122,698,000. On January 1, 1920, the corresponding figure was 105,710,000, and the increase in population during the intervening decade has been 16.1 per cent.

On April 1, 1930, there were approximately 20,170,000 telephones in the United States. On January 1, 1920, there were but 12,668,000 telephones. The increase in telephones during these 10 years has been 59.2 per cent, or almost four times the percentage of increase in population.

SHERMAN

Mrs. Geo. Hart of Midland was called here last week by the illness of her daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Pierson of Grant visited relatives here Sunday.

Mrs. Jos. Schneider and Mrs. Peck Ross autoed to Tawas City Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Dedrick and family spent the week end at Harrisville.

Mrs. T. Kilbourne and son of Reno visited her daughter's school here Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Mark and baby, Mrs. John Kavanaugh and Mrs. Adam Keller, all of Bay City, visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Schneider Sunday.

Wm. Curti- of Whittemore was a business caller in town Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Davis and family moved back to their farm near Hale this week. Mr. Davis worked at the National Gypsum plant for the past three weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Sokola attended a sale near Sterling Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Ross and children of Flint spent the week end with relatives here.

Leo and Lawrence Jordan, Floyd and Harvey Schneider, who were working in Flint all summer, are home for an indefinite stay.

Wayne Mark was a business caller at Turner Wednesday.

Wednesday afternoon was a big day at school District No. 5, at which Miss Avis Kilbourne is teacher. All of the children and teachers of the other four schools came to the school, also Miss Worden and the county nurse of Tawas City and Princess Watassa of Lansing. The latter gave a lecture on hygiene, using the Indian method as illustration. She stressed the points of fresh air, proper food, and cleanliness.

Take Time to Eat

Never hurry children when eating. Children who bolt food suffer from indigestion. Food properly masticated is easily digested.

His Part

The would-be talker actor did have a powerful voice—but that was all there was in it. But he got a part—playing the howling of the tempest in the wreck scene—Vancouver Province.

THE STORY

Renewing a childhood attachment, Ernestine Briceland, of a wealthy family, is attracted by Will Todd, newspaper artist. Her sister, Lillian, urges her to break off the affair, but Ernestine refuses. A runaway marriage follows. Loring Hamilton wins Lillian's consent to become his wife. Will and Ernestine begin their married life in humble surroundings. John Poole, Will's best friend, gives a birthday party for Ernestine at Ruby Pastano's resort. Ernestine and Will have their first quarrel as a result. Will's father dies suddenly. Lillian and Loring are married. Will's mother dies almost immediately after Ernestine's baby is born. Changes in Will's office fail to bring advancement. Ernestine again is looking forward to motherhood.

CHAPTER VIII—Continued

Ernestine had asked John Poole to come down for the two Sundays they were at the lake. She had come to love the man as much as Will did, and had grown into the way of ignoring his bad habits. He was admirably sober the first Sunday he came down to them, and Will and Poole spent the day in the wood path and on the water, making ridiculous sketches in the sand, carrying Peter about with them.

But the second Sunday was a day of misfortunes. Ernestine was ill and could scarcely rise that morning, and it seemed to her that Will was impatient and unsympathetic.

Loring telephoned that he had stripped his gears and put the car in the garage. He would have to come on the train, and Ernestine realized with dismay that John Poole would be with him. Lillian brought the two from the station in her car. John Poole was already fuddled with drink and elaborately polite, and it was easily seen that Loring was in a state of nervous exasperation. His face was flushed, his brow furrowed.

"I've got to go right over to Pastano's to see a man that's coming out there today," he said to Lillian as soon as they had had Sunday dinner.

"If you are going to see Ruby, I'll go with you," said Mr. Poole. "I have a most important matter to discuss with Mr. Pastano. Most important. He has a nephew—yes, I know—as Will laughed—"he has forty-seven nephews—but this is a most particular one. This boy is to study modeling. He is to be the exception—an artist in a family of clever criminals. I'm to see Mrs. Pastano about him. I'll go with you."

He rose and took a familiar hold on Ernestine's arm.

"Will can take you over in the boat, after while," Loring said. "I must hurry, and Pastano can't talk to both of us at once."

"No, I want to go with you," insisted Mr. Poole.

Loring no longer made the faintest effort to conceal his disgust.

"Your desire is unrequited," he said, and Will laughed and came around the table to his friend and boss and took hold of him.

"You're coming with me, you old war-horse," he said. "You're drunk. I'll wager you haven't done a lick of work all week. We'll go over to see Ruby after while. Loring doesn't want you, John, so come along with me."

John Poole turned and detained Ernestine who was trying to escape.

"You don't want me?"

"No," said Loring nervously. "I've had enough of you—too much. I don't ever want to see you again as long as I live."

"Come outside and fight with me, and I will beat you, and then we'll go to Pastano's—together."

Loring was furious. "I won't fight with you—you old fool!—Will, for G-d's sake, take him off me. Why did you bring him down here, anyhow?"

"Don't be so hard with him," said Will, smiling wanly. "He's got a little money—he might come in handy some day. You've changed your mind about friends of mine before—Pastano and Wiston, for instance."

Loring turned to Lillian who stood, silent and grave, by her table. "If this is what I am to expect here it's the last Sunday I come down."

Will flushed. "So Ernestine is intruding now?" he said slowly. "Perhaps you have already consummated your intention of cheating her out of her privileges in this house as elsewhere."

"Anybody could cheat Ernestine," exclaimed Loring. "She was cheated once and for good when she married you. She ruined her life then, and now she must endure anything because she lacks protection and is handicapped to boot."

Will took a step forward, his big hand raised, and though he still smiled his face was evil. He spoke low and rapidly, and with an indescribable effect of vituperation.

"You great big stuffed shirt—you imitation you safe-player and bribe-taker, you! You covet! Do you think I don't know what's the matter with you?"

There was a pause which lasted indefinitely. Loring had swollen to rage, and then he had collapsed, until he stood looking at Will with a dreadful, haunted face.

It was strange, Ernestine thought afterward, that none of them felt, even then, that Loring was afraid of Will. There was some other element which gave Will tremendous advantage. Before the blaze in Will's eyes, before his cursing breathless phrases, Loring fell into a strange dejection. The two men looked at each other in the stillness that swirled around them all. Will turned at last to Ernestine.

"Go get your things, kitten, and get the baby ready," he said in a gentle voice. "We'll all go back together. I'll go to the hotel and get a taxi to take us to the depot. We can get the afternoon train. Gather your things up again, John."

With tears running down her face, Ernestine obeyed him. Loring went off, cursing under his breath, and Mr. Poole followed him to shout unheeded threats and maledictions. Lillian helped Ernestine to get ready, both of them crying.

"It's the end," said Ernestine. "We can never see each other again now. Our lives are separated indefinitely, and Lillian is thinking, 'What will mamma say?'"

"I'll call you up, when I get in town. Write to me, Ernestine. Don't let them tear us apart—"

"My life is with Will—yours with Loring," said Ernestine, and wept afresh, trying to stem the tears, trying not to care, but feeling the nervous, uncontrollable necessity for weeping.

In the train, going back to Chicago, she still cried now and then. "Why does Loring hate us so?" she asked at last in a low tone. "Especially me? Why does he hate me? He seems to want to wound me, to strike at me. He's done it before. But I've never harmed him. Why does he hate me, Will?"

"Hate you?" exclaimed Will, and looked at her strangely, his dark bright eyes searching her pale face for guile. "He doesn't hate you, Ernestine. But forget him—I'm glad something has happened. They've only made us unhappy, anyhow."

It was nice to be home again. Ernestine went about her little house with a feeling of comfort and joy.

Will was not due at the office until the end of the week, but on Monday, as Ernestine was finishing up a washing for the baby, he got dressed to go downtown. As she kissed him goodbye and watched him go, then turned back to the routine of home, Ernestine felt a sense of well-being blot out yesterday's turmoil. She resolved not to think about it, nor to worry.

It seemed to her that Will had barely had time to go to town and come back again before he stood in the kitchen doorway, his eyes upon her with such a look in them that she gave a little cry and her hand flew to her throat.

"Will—what's happened?"

He put his hat down slowly. He hung his head, unable to speak to her, but at last he got it out.

"I've lost my job."

"Will—"

He said no more.

"Tell me—what happened?"

"Craps."

Ernestine sat down weakly in a chair by the kitchen table and gave a foolish-sounding laugh.

"Unarm, Eros—" she exclaimed and grinned at him. "I'm glad. You would never have quit, and now you'll get a job where they'll appreciate you."

"Ernestine!" he said, and choked. "I'll make good for you—I will! You'll see—some day."

Mr. Poole had not been at the office when Will was dismissed by Mr. Wiston. It was some days before he learned the details and gave them to Ernestine. The fellows had all surrounded Will with affectionate greeting on his arrival in the office unexpectedly. They had at once planned to eat supper in a crowd. Somebody produced dice to determine immediately who would have to pay. They squatted on their heels in a close ring between the sloping desks, and Tommy Tucker cried a fierce schoolboy "jiggers" at them. Will held the dice, and he straightened up and turned about boldly rattling the cubes in his big hand, and faced Mr. Wiston.

Mr. Wiston made quick work of him, almost, it seemed to Will, or so he said, as though he were glad of the chance. Within ten minutes after his arrival, Will walked out of the Sun office, his possessions, done up in a paper package, under his arm, while half a dozen indignant but futile youngsters mourned after him.

But John Poole would not have it. "You fire my help and you fire me," he told Wiston, and he left bag and baggage.

Nobody had thought of this. Mr. Wiston reprimanded with him, but nothing would satisfy John Poole except Will's reinstatement, and that Wiston would not concede.

So Will had added to his own anxieties a sense of responsibility about John Poole, of concern over Ernestine's break with that part of her family which was in or near Chicago.

Mr. Poole let it be known in newspaper circles that he and his assistant were available, but to his astonishment he had no offers. He was old, he had been identified with the Sun for many years. The Sun's rivals were busy developing their own artists and establishing them. It was only a year or two longer, it was said, for John Poole, and anyhow he would probably be back at the Sun within a month.

It was dull in Chicago that summer. Mamma was still in Europe, and Ernestine felt that she could not confide in Lillian about Will. There were times when she was frightened about her own health. She felt faint in the heat. She could not eat at all. She had not felt this way before Peter was born, but then she had been strong and well. She couldn't understand this—her feet were swollen until she could not wear her shoes. Mrs. Schluss and Mrs. Pryor expressed their anxiety. Only Will, engrossed in his own troubles, was unaware of her frailty. She presented to Mr. Poole and to Will a superb calm, and a facetiousness that was easier for her than tragedy.

Will found some work for an advertising agency, which he brought home to do. He might have taken one of the jobs papa had offered him from time to time, but papa was in Europe and Loring in charge of his affairs.

Ernestine could not forgive Will for playing baseball in the streets with John Pryor and a half a dozen other half-grown boys, when he came back from his fruitless jaunts after work. "He doesn't care," she thought, and longed to wound him, to strike through his carelessness. She grew almost morbid—"Perhaps he'll have reason to waken—to understand that life's a job for a man."

Will took five dollars, almost the last of their cash, one morning early in August and went out, looking very clean and spruce, and with the light of adventure in his eye.

"I'll find work today, or stay out till I do," he told Ernestine and kissed her on both cheeks.

Peter clung to him ecstatically.

"Peter loves Will the better," she thought, pressing any thorn at hand against her heart. After he was gone, she went to her trunk and got out the bankbook she had obtained that day two years ago, when she had come out here and found Will's father dead. Here was a secret source of supply of her own. She looked at her bank balance. It was enough to pay for herself and the new baby, if she went into a two-bed ward, as Doctor Grey had planned for her. This was her money. Will would have to manage for himself and Peter. She decided to go and get the money and have cash in the house if anything happened. But she would not let Will know she had it.

She put the small bankbook on the dining room table and went about the clean and tidy house, washing dishes, setting the rooms in order.

There was a long letter from mamma in the morning mail. Ernestine did not finish reading it, for she had to go and lie down on her bed, seized with such pain that she could scarcely forbear crying out. She felt within herself no light at all, no buoyancy, no spark of life. She was dull, leaden, submerged. She felt she ought to make some effort to resist this spiritual inertia but she was too ill. She wondered if her child would be born too soon. This thought goaded her into action. She rose and gathered from her trunk Peter's little baby garments, long since washed and mended and laid away. She made the things she might need for the baby into a bundle and put it in her dresser drawer. She would get her money. She would arrange her own affairs—with competence. When the call came, she would be ready.

But she must rest first. She made herself a pot of fresh tea, asked Mrs.

Schluss to look after Peter, and at length in the early afternoon she started off on the long walk to the street car.

She rode interminably, withdrawing her spirit from the concussion of the heat waves that came up from the stone pavement into the street car. Walking in a mist she reached the bank and went inside. She opened her purse, but found among its contents no bankbook. Like a picture in a dream she could see the leather square of it on the dining room table in the little house. She had left it at home.

If she had been in normal condition she would have realized that it was quite possible for her to establish her identity at the bank. She had made many small deposits. The teller would have remembered her. But as she stood in disappointment, the world grew black before her eyes, and for a straining moment, fully conscious but blind, she stood in silent terror.

The blindness passed, and she picked up her purse and went out of the bank, turned, half instinctively, toward Mrs. Bennett's. A strange girl was at the door, a colored girl who rolled her eyes at Ernestine.

"Miss Bennett's out, ma'am. Will you wait?"

Ernestine left without a word, and went back to the boulevard. The darkness, the blindness was coming down on her again. She felt that she was going to faint. She could not hold on any longer—there was nothing with which to cling—she no longer cared.

The great bulk of the bus was moving down toward her—gigantic, menacing. She felt that it would crush her, and moved back a little on the sidewalk, her horrified eyes fixed upon the monster which seemed to swell and grow, and then, strangely, to rise from the pavement and to turn slowly and gracefully about in the air. She knew it was delirium, she knew that the bus could not act that way. But her knowledge could not pierce her fear of confusion. And then the bus lunged at her—the blindness came down again, and Ernestine, alone and very ill, fell down upon the pavement of the boulevard with a soft and plaintive moan.

CHAPTER IX

Loring Finds Ernestine

It was nine o'clock when Lillian reached Chicago from Langley lake in obedience to Loring's frantic telephone call. She turned the car into Erie street, as Loring had instructed her, and stopped before Mrs. Bennett's door, her hands falling from the wheel of the car with nervous weariness. She went up the stairs quickly, her heart full of repressed terror for Ernestine. She could not imagine what might have happened to her. It wasn't time surely for her baby. Loring had been brief and unsatisfactory over long-distance.

The door was opened by a colored maid who stared in silence.

"Is Mrs. Bennett in? I'm Mrs. Todd's sister. They told me to come here—"

The girl gave a squawk and threw her hand up over her mouth and rolled her eyes at Lillian.

"Can you tell me where Mrs. Todd is?" asked Lillian sharply.

"Lawd, Miss. Wish I cud. Nobody knows. But you better c-min and talk to Miz Bennett. She kin tell you the fac's."

Trembling seized Lillian, but she followed the girl in silence to Mrs. Bennett's sitting room, and in a moment found herself confronted by a plump little woman whose face was gray and ravaged. Lillian looked at her with pleading eyes, afraid to trust her voice. Her throat was dry and closed.

"Please—where is she? What has happened?"

"We don't know. We can't find her."

"Tell me—please."

"She's not been well—you knew of course that she was expecting another confinement?"

Lillian nodded, realizing that she was ignorant of the date.

"Well, since Will's been out of work, she's not been well."

"Will out of work? I didn't know that." Her heart was shaker with remorse. Will out of work, and Ernestine ill, and she had known nothing of it—playing bridge and golf and swimming at the lake.

"But where did she go? Who was with her last? What happened?"

Mrs. Bennett tried to be coherent. "She left her little boy with a neighbor and went out alone, early in the afternoon. Evidently she intended to go to the bank, for Will found her bankbook lying on the table. We can't find out whether she was at the bank or not. No one noticed her, and she did not withdraw any money. But she came here about four. I was out and she left, but the maid said she looked as though she were going to drop then. That's the last that's been seen of her. Will got home about three, and he began to worry because Ernestine had not told him she was going out, and

Daring Aviation Feat of Twenty Years Ago

Hanging like a huge kite 3,000 feet above the Chicago municipal airport, a cabin monoplane, with Howard Stark, airman pilot, at the stick, recently remained stationary for almost an hour. A mile-a-minute gale was blowing at that altitude, and by throttling down his motor Stark kept the speed of his plane equal to that of the wind so that it hovered over one spot. The feat recalls the so-called "suicide flight" in 1910 of the daring French airman, Hubert Latham. At an air meet at Blackpool, England, Latham took up his small plane in an 80-mile gale. The frail craft reared and plunged, carried by the force of the wind, in what early air enthusiasts still remember as the most thrilling flight they ever witnessed. Latham, who had been told by doctors that he had only a few months to live and who took up flying to get the most thrills out of his last days, landed safely.

When Food Sour

Lots of folks who think they have "indigestion" have only an acid condition which could be corrected in five or ten minutes. An effective anti-acid like Phillips Milk of Magnesia soon restores digestion to normal.

Phillips does away with all that sourness and gas right after meals. It prevents the distress so apt to occur two hours after eating. What a pleasant preparation to take! And how good it is for the system! Unlike a burning dose of soda—which is but temporary relief at best—Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

Next time a hearty meal, or too rich a diet has brought on the least discomfort, try—

So it's the first thing to think of when a child has a coated tongue, is fretful and out of sorts. Be sure to get the genuine; with Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the package.

Castoria corrects CHILDREN'S ailments

WHAT a relief and satisfaction it is for mothers to know that there is always Castoria to depend on when babies get fretful and uncomfortable! Whether it's teething, colic or other little upset, Castoria always brings quick comfort; and, with relief from pain, restful sleep.

And when older, fast-growing children get out of sorts and out of condition, you have only to give a more liberal dose of this pure vegetable preparation to right the disturbed condition quickly.

Because Castoria is made expressly for children, it has just the needed mildness of action. Yet you can always depend on it to be "Wherever she was she would have come home to Peter, as Will argued, and I agreed with him. Will was nearly distracted—the men quarreled bitterly, and Mr. Hamilton called up Ruby Pastano and the papers, and organized a search—of course, people in the city go off and are delayed and don't get home on time. But, you see, now it's nearly ten and we haven't heard anything of her. Mr. Hamilton has notified the police. They'll find her—unless—"

"What do you mean?" cried Lillian sharply. Her hands were shaking so that she could scarcely hold her purse and gloves.

"Well—your husband—Mr. Hamilton, he's got the idea that she may have destroyed herself. But Will says no—she wouldn't do that."

"Will is right. Ernestine wouldn't do such a thing."

"But pregnant women get wonderful queer notions in their heads," insisted Mrs. Bennett dolefully. "Mr. Hamilton was nearly wild. He told Will that he had killed Ernestine—it seemed hard for Will to hear, but he brushed it away like nothing." She paused.

City Dweller Need Not Fear Loss of Hearing

A woman's club bulletin, just out, has an article on noise. The customary sort of article by somebody or other who prophesies that because of the pressure of city life, subway roar and rivet-gang symphonies our senses are degenerating. He expresses his sad belief that in another 20 years Manhattanites will be as myopic and deaf as the stone lions in front of the library.

We are not alarmed, no; only bored. Nobody with sense believes anything like that. The Solomon islanders, who listen for drums 100 miles off, are supposed to have the acutest ears in the world. Maybe, but New York has a million persons who can detect in the loudest din a click that indicates trouble in their auto engines.

The Patagonian can see an ostrich head at the distance of 85 miles. But it would blind him to pore over this page for an hour, and he would see nothing but a blur. Yet a short-sighted proofreader, peering through thick glasses, could spot a single error on it in a few seconds.

It would be nearer truth to say that man's senses are exactly now as they were in the Stone Age. And there is something to be said even for the subway roar. In war time we do not become shell shocked so easily.—New York American.

English Philanthropist

Between 1858 and 1868 Josiah Mason built up a great orphanage at Erdington, England, at a cost of about $1,500,000. For this he was knighted in 1872. He was born at Kidderminster in 1795, began selling cakes on the street at the age of eight and later taught himself to read and write while serving as a shoemaker's apprentice. Finally he became a manufacturer of steel pens and built up an enormous business. He added to his fortune by gold and silver plating and copper and nickel smelting. He gave $1,000,000 to Mason's college, now a part of the University of Birmingham.

Boxwood in America

The early settlers brought boxwood to America and used it extensively. Many of the estates of the colonial gentry from Philadelphia southward record the early American era of the box, and its mute testimony declares that there was time and money and refinement to spare in those families of the old aristocracy who chose to express their artistic temperaments in their garden designs.

SATIN MORE POPULAR THAN EVER; GAY PLAIDS FOR SPORTS WEAR

YOU never can tell as to fickle fashion's moves. There's this matter of satin, for instance. One would have thought that it would have been granted a leave of absence this season, seeing that it has been so continuously appearing on the style program. On the contrary, satin is more popular than ever. The chic of satin for immediate wear is asserted not only for the frock, but the suit tailored of this material is one of the outstanding items for fall.

The interesting thing about this vogue is that all sorts of satin are ap-answered most gaily in terms of bright handsome plaids. Just such stunning outfits as the plaid jumper dress with wrap to match as shown in the lower picture promise a season or colorful modes for the sportswoman and the schoolgirl.

Paris proclaims the smartness of plaid throughout daytime fashions, showing no partiality between cotton, rayon, silk or woolen weaves for the blouse to be worn with the autumn suit or for the town, travel, school or sports frock. French couturiers are even making the blouse to be worn with the cloth suit of plaid gingham. All signs point to a predominance of plaid costumes at forthcoming fall outdoor events. The sports enthusiast at the golf tournament or in the grandstand at the ball game will be dressed to the occasion in just such attractive plaid as is here shown. This jumper dress is made of blue and yellow plaid raitine, a material being particularly practical for hard usage in that it is sturdy of weave and, best of all, washes to look like new. Black buttons on this frock emphasize by way of contrast the bright colors of the plaid. The pockets are bound in black patent leather, which is also the material of the narrow belt.

The long-sleeved shirt-blouse is of yellow wool jersey. When topped with the little fitted plaid jacket this proved by stylists. That is, both shib and dull satin is favored. Black is most important. The stunning gown in the picture bespeaks the handsome styling being given to satin for afternoon wear. The dainty yoke and the puffs at the wrist are beaded, for beadwork is recognized as a leading trimming touch this season.

Many of the new satin dresses sound the black-and-white note in that they are detailed with white satin trimmings worked with that air of newness which immediately attracts the eye. Much of the charm of the "last minute" frocks is right at the sleeve, in that it usually displays novel treatment in answer to the call of the 1930 mode. When not black with white, the satin gown, then turquoise and black is almost sure to be the alternative.

An occasional midnight blue or a deep brown sometimes varies the program of black satin for the daytime frock, either in crepe-back weave, or of highly lustrous heavy texture.

As to the tailored jacket-and-skirt suit of black satin, the smart set has adopted it as the costume ideal for practical daytime wear. Women who pride themselves on being style-wise

are wearing these natty lustrous tailors with handsome fur neckpieces and intriguing blouses and the effect is stunning.

Then, too, most every Paris cable stresses the smartness of satin for evening wear. Panne satin, which is very lustrous, evokes considerable interest.

Gay Plaids in Favor. As far as the golf field, the tennis court and the campus are concerned the what-to-wear question is ensemble becomes a striking outfit for the shopper. The college girl seeking a fetching suit to wear here and there will make no mistake in selecting a model fashioned along these lines.

Shrubs, Trees and Flowers Add to Appearance of This Cozy Bungalow

By W. A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to practical home building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as editor, author and manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 407 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

In order to get the best effect with any home, its design should be such that it fits in with its surroundings. For instance, where there is plenty of shrubbery and some trees a house similar to the one in the accompanying illustration blends itself admirably to such surroundings. This bungalow has the exterior appearance of the home which is built in the woods. When set on a lot where there is a background of trees or enough trees to surround it, it makes a most delightful small home.

Cozy seems just the word to describe this bungalow. The snubbed gables and dormers effectively break up the low roof expanse and the al-

An Ideal Small House Suggested by Architect

The problem of obtaining a small house that, while of reasonable cost, is convenient to live in and pleasing to look at, is discussed by Benjamin F. Betts, noted architect and editor, in Better Homes and Gardens.

Prototyping that the design of small houses is all too often viewed in the light of obtaining the most in size for the least money, the Better Homes and Gardens writer states that cost, plan, materials, construction and appearance are all elements that must be considered. The usable area of a house should be from 70 to 75 per cent; no house can be 100 per cent efficient, for about 25 or 30 per cent must of necessity be given over to outside walls, interior partitions, stair and hall space, bathrooms and closets. Halls should be as small as their practical use will permit, and homemakers should avoid placing the stairway to the second story in the living room. Generous closet space is desirable but often represents a needless amount of waste space. For instance, a wide closet about 22 inches deep is more practical than a narrow closet 3 or 4 feet deep. Bathrooms are often made larger than necessary or at least planned with more wall space than is economical to build. No bathroom, in a small house, advises the writer, need exceed 40 square feet in area, and can even be made as small as 25 square feet. The dining room, considering area, is the most expensive room, and may be used as a living room also. Cheap materials are not an economy since the labor cost to install them remains the same or may be more than when materials of good quality are used. Cheap materials also result in costly repair bills later on. Sound construction is real economy. Saving in space can be effected by making the ceilings as low as 7 feet 4 or 6 inches. This saving in story height helps the exterior appearance. An important element that is too frequently overlooked is the harmonious relationship that should be preserved between the exterior and the interior of a house.

The long-sleeved shirt-blouse is of yellow wool jersey. When topped with the little fitted plaid jacket this ensemble becomes a striking outfit for the shopper. The college girl seeking a fetching suit to wear here and there will make no mistake in selecting a model fashioned along these lines.

Then, too, most every Paris cable stresses the smartness of satin for evening wear. Panne satin, which is very lustrous, evokes considerable interest.

As to the tailored jacket-and-skirt suit of black satin, the smart set has adopted it as the costume ideal for practical daytime wear. Women who pride themselves on being style-wise are wearing these natty lustrous tailors with handsome fur neckpieces and intriguing blouses and the effect is stunning.

long. On the opposite side of the hall at the front is the dining room, 10 feet 6 inches by 12 feet, and back of that is a large kitchen 12 feet 3 by 9 feet 6 with the breakfast nook adjoining. On the side wall of the living room is an open fireplace and directly opposite on the outside wall are double french doors, which open into a sun porch, which is 7 feet 6 by 13 feet.

Out of the entrance hall run the stairs to the second floor where there are two large bedrooms, one being 11 feet by 19 feet, and the other 14 feet by 11 feet. Both of these bedrooms have alcoves at the front made possible by the dormer windows set in the roof. There is a large bathroom opening off the hall at the head of the stairs.

An examination of the floor plans which accompany the exterior view of the house shows the arrangement of the rooms and the size of each one.

This is a very fine design for the family which wants a small cozy home of artistic appearance and will be unusually attractive set on a lot where there is an opportunity for planting of shrubs and flowers and where there are some trees.

Takes Some Time to Make Home Real Comfort Spot

It takes months, often years, to give a house or even a room the atmosphere of livableness. That means that subtle something that is as indefinite in words as charm.

It is there, or it is not, and some houses, apartments or rooms never have an air of having been lived in. They are cold, uninviting, though they may be lavishly furnished; perhaps they are produced by mere money and perhaps they are the result of loving care and much foresight and much sacrifice.

Our habitations take on the personalities of the people who occupy them. So you see, just money isn't enough to make a livable home. There must be the comfort of each one of the family considered; there must be real living to make the home.

A living room should first of all contain colors that blend and melt into a perfect whole. The chairs should be placed near well-placed lights, and low tables or stands close by for books. A sofa long enough for a tall person to recline full length is a valuable asset in this perfect living room, for even a short rest to the weary man of the house before the evening meal is a wonderful relaxation.

There should be many bookshelves, and there should be a desk equipped with paper, envelopes, blotters, new pens or a desk fountain pen, stamps, a pair of scales, time tables and telegram blanks. It can be but little realized what these accessories mean in an emergency.

An open fire makes for comfort. In fact, some one has said that the fire place is the soul of the home. The fire things of iron, brass or bronze are delightful adjuncts.

Shingle Walls Haven't Smooth, Combed Lines

Shingle-covered walls do not have the smooth, combed, horizontal lines of walls protected by siding. They give a more picturesque texture. The vertical joints continually counteract the importance of the horizontal courses, and if the lower edges of the shingles are laid in an irregular manner the horizontal and formal appearance of the wall will be completely eliminated.

Small Roof Leaks Are Often Most Baffling

A leak, once started, will often baffle the best of repair men. It keeps getting worse. By and by a large area has to be stripped and resingled to prevent the leakage that in itself may not cover one square foot. Stopping one leak counts for little, as new ones start operations without warning. Cheap shingles are expensive.

Trace Negro Spirituals to Christian Teaching

For several years Prof. N. C. J. Balanta, a native of West Africa has been engaged in an effort to trace the sources and history of negro spirituals. His findings were recently published by the commission on interracial co-operation. The spiritual now in vogue is based on primitive African rhythm, but its present form and development are due largely to Christianity. "Christianity," says Professor Balanta, "was the force that breathed life into the unattractive musical talent of the African in his new environment. Far from his native land, despised by those among whom he lived, knowing the hard taskmaster, feeling the lash, the negro seized Christianity, the religion of compensations in the life to come for the ills suffered in the present existence. The result was a body of songs voicing all the cardinal virtues of Christianity—patience, forbearance, love, faith and hope—through a modified form of primitive African music."—Pittsburgh Courier.

Cheap Ice for City

A natural ice well, 172 feet underground from which crystal clear blocks of ice can be cut in hottest weather, is occasioning much interest at Rapid City, S. D. The well is located at the gypsum plaster mill at Black Hawk, seven miles north of Rapid City. In digging for gypsum at the plant, workmen sunk a shaft at the end of which a large hole was excavated in taking out gypsum. This filled with water to a depth of eight feet which freezes in summer and is coated with thick ice.

To Get Their Own "Gas"

A Colorado plant has begun the manufacture of a slot machine appliance which enables motorists to fill their own tanks at gasoline stations. The customer simply inserts the hose in his tank, puts in his coin and the automatic electric pump does the rest, giving him the correct amount of gasoline measured to the ounce.

Few Insect Fighters Able to Defeat Spider

The wasp and the hornet may be reckoned as formidable foes, but it would appear that the spider, for his size and weight, at least, is equal to anything he may come across. In a recent experiment a spider was pitted against a wasp in an inverted tumbler. The wasp scored the first point, hitting off one of its opponent's legs; but in the next round the spider got in an ineffective bite, and the wasp died in a few minutes. Two other contests followed, and in each the spider came off victorious. The strong feature of the spider is its agility, and even in the un congenial environment of a tumbler it evades attack with apparent ease. With the added advantage of a web, which provides not only lines of retreat and attack, but also serves to entangle and embarrass the enemy, the spider is a foe whom even the boldest spirits in the insect world hesitate to attack.

Italian "Rescue Train"

The Italian government has equipped a special rescue train to serve in emergencies, such as earthquakes, volcanic eruptions and landslides. It is designed to give first aid, establish radio or telegraph communication and to reopen damaged railroad lines.

Dubl-Way Patented HEATING SYSTEM found only in The Greater FIRESIDE Monogram Circulator

Natural laws of heating are just reversed from a standpoint of comfort. The ordinary circulator follows the natural way of heating the room from the top down. The ideal way of heating is from the bottom up. Patented DUBL-WAY HEATING SYSTEM, built in front of FIRESIDE, comes nearer to the ideal way of heating than any other. It has nine heat flues. Five flues circulate warm air, four flues are perforated and deflects intense heat from the front into room towards floor. The combined effect of heat deflecting power of RAINBOW HOT BLAST (another patented feature) and the radiating efficiency of patented DUBL-WAY HEATING SYSTEM makes the FIRESIDE an ideal floor warmer. Ask for descriptive circular.
