TAWAS CITY SCHOOL NOTES

Prepared and Edited by a Committee of the Student Council

High School

Mr. Schreck of East Tawas and Professor Allen of the University of Michigan were high school visitors Wednesday. Both of these gentlemen gave excellent short talks concerning the practical side of the National Forest service.

Armistice Day was appropriately recognized Tuesday in the high school. Rev. F. Metcalf gave an interesting account of war times in Australia. He also brought out the idea that all the nations which fought in the World War are now making an earnest attempt to prevent future wars and that we should do our utmost to help this feeling of peace and good will.

School will close at 3:30 on Friday afternoons hereafter, rather than at 3:00 which has been the custom for several years.

There will be no school on Thanksgiving and the day following.

The students and teachers enjoyed a fire drill on Wednesday.

The first year typing class had their first standard speed test Monday. The records for both speed and accuracy were amazing.

Miss Wixson, state club leader, called at the high school Friday and gave a talk to the girls in regard to organizing a girls' clothing club. There were thirty-six girls present. We plan now to organize two clubs, one for the eighth grade girls and one for the high school girls.

The bookkeeping class has started work on the first practice set.

Almost all of the Sophomores, of their own initiative, have memorized their declamations. This fact leads us to believe there will be keen interest in the contest this year.

LACK OF TIMBER CLOSES BARKMAN'S MILLS

After nineteen years of continuous operation, the mills of the Barkman Lumber company have been discontinued and the machinery put in condition to sell. Lack of sufficient timber here for profitable operation was the cause for this move.

The original mill was purchased from Wolf, Sayer & Heller of Chicago, who had built it for manufacturing skewers. The plant was enlarged by Mr. Barkman and mill machinery installed. After operating the Hardwood mill with the late Walter Gardner for some time, this mill was also purchased by Mr. Barkman. The output of the plant was also augmented by the use of portable mills.

One of the first purchasers of automobile blocking and crating from the Barkman Lumber company was Fred Wade, son of Reuben Wade of this city. Mr. Wade was at that time purchasing agent for the Maxwell Motor car company. He later became affiliated with the Studebaker corporation.

Clark Tanner, formerly with the Barkman Lumber Co., has purchased the Tawas City depot building and will move it on the Tait property across the railroad track. The work of tearing down the Tait house preparatory to moving the depot building, will commence during the next few days.

Mr. Tanner plans to install wood working machinery in the building.

PHYSICIAN LOCATES AT WHITTEMORE

Dr. Earl A. Hasty, for the past four months with Dr. C. S. Tarter in the Sterling hospital, has decided to take up a private practice and will locate in Whittemore. He announced the opening of his office at the new location for about November 12.

Dr. Hasty is an Arenac county boy, having grown up in the towns of Standish and Sterling. In the spring of 1929 he was graduated from the medical department of the University of Michigan and then entered St. Mary's hospital in Saginaw for a year's interne work before going to the Sterling hospital. He has made many friends and gained the confidence of his practice during his active work among the people of Sterling and Standish and it is predicted that his private practice will also meet with success.

TWO POOR FISH OUT OF WATER IN "BIG MONEY"

An amusing and new twist is given the situation of "a fish out of water" in Pathe's special production "Big Money", which comes to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on November 20 and 21. There are two fish and both out of water—a penny gambler quite innocently finds himself involved in a big game, and his account of his unusual luck is practically adopted by a high powered gambler, played by Robert Armstrong. Later, Eddie persuades Bob to accompany him to a society garden party given by the daughter of Eddie's former employer, where Bob is very much at home.

Other prominent players in "Big Money" are James Gleason, Miriam Seegar, Margaret Livingston, Robert Edeson, Dorothy Christy and Robert Gleckler. Russell Mack directed.

DEER HUNTING SEASON OPENS SATURDAY

In addition to the deer licenses sold at other places in the county, 200 have been sold from the county clerk's office at Tawas City, states County Clerk Frank E. Dease.

With the opening of the deer hunting season Saturday, November 15, the law enforcement division of the Conservation Department has completed its plans for taking care of more than 70,000 hunters who will invade the northern part of the state.

As in the past years, a large crew of special conservation officers will patrol the woods with their prime duty to enforce the deer laws. Several of these special officers will be assigned to each county in the deer area, working with the regular officers.

The State Department of Public Safety is again co-operating with the Conservation Department by assigning state police to patrol duty along the main highways. The police will assist officers in inspecting all deer, tags, and licenses as they cross the Straits of Mackinac going south and will be stationed at strategic points along the southern border of the deer area in the lower peninsula.

H. C. MAASKE RECEIVES TRANSFER TO MILWAUKEE

Of interest to local readers is the transfer of Harlan C. Maaske, now employed by the Department of Agriculture in the office of the Huron National Forest here, to the district headquarters in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Mr. Maaske transfers to the Milwaukee office as purchasing agent for the Lake States District. The appointment effective November 15th.

Because of his activity in the promotion of wholesome entertainment and his connection with various local sports, we learn with regret of the transfer of this young man from our community. However, the best wishes of a host of friends go with him in his new work.

FAMILY THEATRE IS REMODELED

Many improvements have been made at the Family Theatre during the past few weeks.

This showhouse now has a capacity of four hundred. Besides increasing the capacity, the new addition has given a larger and better stage, and it will now permit the showing of vaudeville acts and plays. Special attention was given to acoustics in arranging the new stage. A finer rendering of sound and talking pictures was sought.

The improvements will include a complete redecoration of the interior. New heating, lighting and ventilation systems have been installed, the comfort of patrons being given first consideration. All new seats in the theatre are upholstered.

Several thousands of dollars have been expended in improving the Family Theatre and we congratulate Mr. Berube on its fine appearance.

ISOCO CHURCH SCHOOLS

The Leadership Training Class meeting every Friday afternoon at the City Hall, Tawas City, reports the following enrollment: From the East Tawas M. E. school—Miss Kate Dease and the Mesdames W. A. Evans, Wm. Gurler, Glenn Hughes, Jay Platt and G. N. Shattuck; from the Hemlock Road school—Mrs. Fern Allen and Mrs. Jas. Chambers; from the Tawas City Baptist school—The Mesdames Boomer Dease, Hamilton, Hatfield and Metcalf; from the Tawas City L. D. S. school—Mrs. Olive Davison; from the Tawas City M. E. school—Mrs. W. C. Davidson and Mrs. Chas. McLean. Other church school workers are urged to join the class.

"The Challenge of the Cross," a sacred drama with beautiful symbolism, is to be presented at the Reno Baptist church, Sunday, November 16th, 7:30 p. m., Eastern Standard time. The cast of characters includes the Evangel, Mrs. Harry Pelton; the Disciples, the Misses Rosemary McKay, Ruby Evans, Lois Chambers, Bessie Metcalf, Isabelle King and Alice Johnson; the singers, Mrs. Frank P. Dease, and Mrs. R. A. Hamilton; the director, Miss Hazel Hallanger. The public is cordially invited.

Junior Mark has been selected by the Tawas City M. E. school as delegate to the Older Boys' conference at Bay City, November 28 to 30.

A splendid forward step in religious education is the recent organization of a class in Bible study for high school credit in East Tawas. The class meets every Thursday from 6:30 to 7:15 p. m. in the League room of the M. E. church. Miss Hazel Hallanger of the high school faculty is instructor. The same credit is given for this course as in the case of any other high school subject for a like number of hours. The text book used is the syllabus issued by the Michigan Education Association, price 20c. The first year's study is "Great Old Testament Characters." This class is sponsored by the Isoco County Council of Religious Education, and is therefore strictly interdenominational in character. All high school students are welcome, but on account of the credit advantages of the course the attendance of seventh, eighth and ninth grade pupils is especially urged. The co-operation of parents and teachers in encouraging the attendance of the pupils is greatly desired.

MOCHTY—SCHRIEBER

The marriage of Miss Rose Mochty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Mochty, to Ashley Schriber, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Schriber, of East Tawas, took place at St. Joseph's church, Monday, November 10. Rev. E. Kirchoff performed the ceremony.

Miss Mochty was gowned in tan chiffon with velvet toque. She carried a bouquet of yellow and white chrysanthemums. Miss Gertrude Mochty, who attended her sister, wore a gown of brown chiffon velvet with hat to match, and carried a bouquet of yellow and white baby mums.

Francis Schriber assisted his brother as best man.

After the ceremony, the bridal party repaired to the Schriber home, where a sumptuous wedding breakfast was served to twenty of the immediate relatives and friends of the bride and groom. The rooms were prettily decorated with yellow and white, the bride's chosen colors. The out of town guests were Francis Schriber of Flint, brother of the groom, and the Misses Louise and Gertrude Mochty of Flint, sisters of the bride.

Immediately after breakfast the bride and groom left for a few days' motor trip through the state, after which Mr. and Mrs. Schriber will make their home in East Tawas.

OPEN NIGHT SCHOOL AT EAST TAWAS

Lincoln said, "I will get myself ready so that when the opportunity presents itself for a position, I will be able to accept it."

This is the attitude our young folks should have today. We have plenty of time for the movies, auto trips and parties, and not time for self-improvement.

Many of our great men got their start in life through a night school.

The school board of the East Tawas high school has opened a night school for those who are interested in shorthand, bookkeeping or typewriting. A low charge for tuition is made to cover the expenses incurred and not for profit. The more students, the less tuition.

E. W. Doak, commercial instructor in the high school, will be in charge of the instruction. Those interested may see him. The class will meet Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings in the commercial rooms at the East Tawas high school.

BAPTIST CHURCH

WHITTEMORE SCHOOLS FAIR IS A SUCCESS

Three years ago this autumn the Whittemore school staged the first of its annual "fairs". It was at once acclaimed as a great success by everyone as is attested to by the many similar "fairs" and carnivals held by the various other schools in this vicinity since that time.

This year the Whittemore "fair" was held on the evening of November 7, and the teachers and students became hosts to parents and friends. As Whittemore was the birthplace of the idea, she felt bound to do her utmost to parallel, and possibly to better, the success of past years. We feel she did.

At 5:30 the ladies of the Parent-Teachers Association served a chicken supper which was prepared and served in a manner to please even the most critical gourmand. A radio furnished by Charles Partlo gave music to the diners. After the supper the throng of guests divided and went to different parts of the building, each seeking enjoyment suitable to his mood. Some attended the boxing match, some the various "side shows," and others loitered before the collection of animals common to this locality. Everyone enjoyed the agricultural display.

This display was the work of the agriculture class under the direction of Mr. Switzer. Without a doubt, this year's agricultural section was the best ever staged at the "fair." The display of potted plants alone was sufficient for an exhibit, without the lavish display of farm produce. Mr. Switzer and his class are to be congratulated on their part in the affair.

The entertainment which started at 8:30 o'clock was an enjoyable affair for even those sitting in cramped positions in seats too small for them. In order that the program would not become monotonous, all monologues and dialogues were avoided, and more orchestral music provided. We are proud of our orchestra and everyone seemed to enjoy it. Mrs. Horace Powell coached the glee club and leads the orchestra.

HEMLOCK ROAD NUTRITION CLASS HOLDS SECOND MEET

The second meeting of the Hemlock Road Nutrition series was held at the home of Mrs. W. H. Moore, Tuesday, November 4. An all day meeting was held, as usual, with 17 ladies present.

The business session was in charge of Mrs. Tillie Timreck, chairman. An oral test of true and false statements was enjoyed.

The project leaders, Mrs. Minnie Nolem and Mrs. Moore, demonstrated five kinds of salads and two kinds of salad dressings. Great praise is due our leaders for the time they are giving to bring to the class so many interesting helps from the leaders' meetings.

At noon the hostess served a delicious chicken dinner. One of the salads demonstrated was served, and was enjoyed by all.

Mrs. Louise McArdle invited the class to meet with her for the next meeting, November 25, from 10:30 to 3:30.

BEAN THIEF GETS LONG JAIL SENTENCE

Vern Bowers, convicted last Friday in circuit court of stealing beans, received a sentence of 7 years to 22 1/2 years in Jackson prison. Murl Burpy, implicated as accomplice, was held over until the December term of court. Bowers was taken Wednesday to Jackson by Sheriff Chas. W. Curry.

"GOOD NEWS," MUSICAL COMEDY, A SURE-FIRE HIT

There are no tears to be shed for Bessie Love in "Good News," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's triumph of musical comedy transition, which comes to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, Sunday and Monday, November 16 and 17.

As far as we can remember, Bessie has always had to cry in her pictures. But here she is, gay and exuberant as a grasshopper—and just as lively. You'll laugh just as hard as you have cried with her for she is a cute little clown with a bag of tricks all her own.

The picturization of the famous musical success walks right away from the original stage production. It is screened upon a lavish scale, with a cast that would leave a Broadway producer breathless on Saturday night.

I'll set your feet dancing, your pulse pounding, whether you're six or sixty! It has youth—and to spare! It has Gus Shy and Mary Lawlor from the stage musical comedy that ran a year on Broadway! And Bessie Love—what a comedy riot! And Cliff Edwards—he's immense! And scores of cute co-eds and college cut-ups. You must see "Good News,"—it's the best news in years!

Remember we have plenty of seats for everyone—no waiting. Come and enjoy our enlarged theatre.

I will not be responsible for debts contracted by anyone other than myself. James Daley.

EAST TAWAS HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

A rollicking Junior party was staged at the Wood's cottage at Tawas Lake November 7. The attendance of the Juniors was nearly one hundred per cent, and many friends attended. That's the good old class spirit. Many games were played, of which the musical radio program broadcasted from station XYZ by speaker Blaine Christeson was most interesting.

About the most enjoyable feature was an act by "Doc" Klump and "Don" St. Martin. The Juniors, seemingly not having passed the age of hot dogs, roasted "weenies" in the fireplace and ended a very enjoyable evening with hot dogs and cider.

The high school is planning on sending two Juniors to Bay City to the Older Boys' Conference, November 28, 29, 30. About fifteen boys will be sent from the county. Mr. Swanson is the county chairman, with Mrs. Evans assisting with the church delegates.

The following program was the first rendered by the Dramatic Club this year with the president, Caroline Pfeister, presiding; Selection by the orchestra; reading—Helen Gottleber; song, school; song, Marilyn Haglund; reading, Lillian Askey; reading, Hetty McKay; Brass quartet—Virginia Anschuetz, Carl Johnson, Blaine Christeson; Robert Moran; declamations by Helen Nielson, Arlene Curry, Irene Warren; song, school; flag salute, school.

The regular meeting of the P. T. A. will be held next Monday, November 17. The teachers will be responsible for the meeting and will report on the Teachers' Institute which was held at Flint October 27 and 28. Reports will be divided into two parts. For next week's program the following teachers will speak: Mrs. Bigelow, Misses Courtade, Huhtala and Hallan.

The Work of the Red Cross

1. Red Cross workers at a military hospital discuss soldiers' needs.
2. Red Cross 'Grey Lady' ministering to disabled veterans.
3. Red Cross volunteers making surgical dressings.
4. Learning to give baby his bath, with Red Cross help.

local Red Cross chapter, in collaboration with other agencies interested. Wherever the problem of the disabled service man, or his family, exists to any extent, this activity of the Red Cross has proven its value.

The country, as a whole, has been comparatively free from severe catastrophes of nature such as earthquake, tornado, or flood, in the recent past. Taking advantage of the lull, Red Cross disaster relief forces are organizing through their local chapters and with the backing of state and municipal authorities, comprehensive plans for those communities in event they should be swept by some unexpected calamity requiring prompt relief measures.

No attempt is made here to list all Red Cross chapters and the communities they represent, which are prepared for disaster relief work among their people. However, approximately 400 Red Cross chapters in the midwestern area of the country are taking an active interest in this procedure. In general, substantial progress has been made by Red Cross chapters in New England, in the southeastern states, and a high degree of preparedness exists in the larger centers of Indiana, Kentucky, Mississippi, Ohio and Tennessee.

Provision is now being made to make fullest use of every modern facility. The airplane has proven invaluable on a number of occasions already, and now the vast radio communication resources of the country's amateur stations are being organized in connection with the local Red Cross chapters, to insure emergency communication in case the established telephone or telegraph systems are temporarily made useless, despite all efforts.

Still another phase of Red Cross work which is of practical use to the individual deals with his health. The various "diets" of one kind or another which have taken hold on the imaginations of a considerable number of people, not only women but men, too, prove that the subject of food in its relation to physical appearance and condition occupies a very important place in the public mind, entirely apart from the vital necessity of "just eating."

The Red Cross, through its nutrition service, has for years preached the importance to the individual of studying his food requirements scientifically to get the best results in health. It has done more than preach, it teaches; and in this modern day when every one is talking "diet" a correct knowledge of what to eat is essential to individual and national health.

In the field of national health, an important contribution is made each year by the Red Cross. Its several hundred public health nurses assigned to communities all over the United States co-operate with school authorities, with local health departments and the medical profession, in guarding and building up public health.

Instruction in individual care of the health of the sick in the home, the latter instruction intended to supplement the efforts of the family doctor in speeding the patient's recovery, are other phases of Red Cross health work.

First aid and life saving is a popular and well known science taught by the Red Cross, enhancing its value to the industrial world; to athletic departments of schools and colleges; and municipal recreational authorities respectively.

Perhaps the best gauge of the practical value of all these activities to the men and women who annually are asked to enroll as supporting Red Cross members, is the statement that approximately one person in every 120 of the country's millions of citizens has passed through some form of Red Cross instruction, such as nutrition, first aid and life saving, home hygiene and care of the sick; a rather large army of men and women equipped with knowledge which is of practical value every day, not alone to themselves but to their families and their neighbors.

It represents a very considerable percentage of the nation's people who have had beneficial contact with the Red Cross, without considering the other thousands who have benefited on occasions, as in disaster relief, or as when some Red Cross-trained one has saved a life or eased the pain of an accidental injury in the shop or home.

In the popular mind the word "humanitarianism" is most often associated with the Red Cross. A study of some of these facts will show that the particular brand of humanitarianism put out by the Red Cross is the kind which every one would like to share, not only for himself, but with his neighbors.

The annual invitation extended by the Red Cross to join its ranks, this year between the dates of November 11 and 27, is the opportunity to share the Red Cross. Its work is made possible because so many thousands feel that way about it, and join every year.

Muscular-Rheumatic Aches and Pains

DRAW them out with a "counter-irritant." Distressing muscular lumbago, soreness and stiffness—generally respond pleasantly to good old Musterole. Doctors call it a "counter-irritant" because it gets action and is not just a salve. Musterole helps bring soreness and pain to the surface, and thus gives natural relief. You can feel how its warming action penetrates and stimulates blood circulation. But do not stop with one application. Apply this soothing, cooling, healing ointment generously to the affected area once every hour for five hours. Used by millions for over 20 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses.

Keep Musterole handy; jars and tubes. To Mothers—Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

Surprise for Washington

George Washington was a lumberman. He conducted lumbering operations at different places on the Atlantic seaboard. As a lumberman, a woodsman, and a surveyor, Washington knew the value of trees. He would be surprised could he now see what tremendous depletion of our forest resources has taken place in 200 years, says the American Tree association of Washington. As a statesman, with the future of his country ever in mind he would be a most earnest advocate of the restoration of our forests wherever economically possible. He would realize that the nation must become foresighted.

To be a Healthy Woman watch your Bowels!

What should women do to keep their bowels moving freely? A doctor should know the answer. That is why pure Syrup Pepsin is so good for women. It just suits their delicate organism. It is the prescription of an old family doctor who has treated thousands of women patients, and who made a special study of bowel troubles.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is made from fresh, laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients. It doesn't sicken or weaken you. No restrictions of habit or diet are necessary while taking it. But its action is thorough. It carries off the sour bile and poisonous waste. It does everything you want it to do. It is fine for children, too. They love its taste. Let them have it every time their tongues are coated or their skin is sallow.

When you've a sick headache, can't eat, are bilious or sluggish; and at the times when you are most apt to be constipated, take a little of this famous prescription (all druggists keep it ready in big bottles), and you'll know why Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the favorite laxative of over a million women!

KEEPING THINGS DARK

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

In "Mister Antonio," you may recall the mayor of the town was a most exemplary citizen when he was at home. He walked discreetly; he went to church regularly, and in word and deed he set, before the young people of the community in which he lived, an example of virtue and probity which only the morally ambitious could ever hope to attain. It was when he went to the city where he was not known, and where he could keep things dark, that he cut loose, so to speak. He was not averse to a little liquor and a gay night or two, but he did not want anyone in his home town to find it out. He had an ambition to be thought well of, so that when he was guilty of a moral delinquency it was always behind closed doors.

It isn't what you do that really matters, a good many people seem to believe, it is what you are caught at. If things can be kept dark no one should worry. I learned to smoke when I was a boy of seventeen on the farm. My older brother hurrying to get off to a dance a dozen miles or so away offered me a couple of nickel cigars if I would run out the buggy and hitch up his horse. I accepted the offer and later smoked the two cigars without batting an eyelash. It did not make me sick, but in spite of that fact, I've never cared a great deal for smoking. I imagine that during the last fifty years I have smoked on the average as often as once in six months.

Gordon is principal of a high school in northern Illinois. One of his students, it happened, saw me once taking my semiannual smoke and reported back to headquarters. Gordon jumped me about it the next time he saw me. It was wrong he told me; I was setting a bad example to young men. He seemed shocked. "Don't you smoke?" I inquired. "Yes," he replied; "but I never let my boys see me." "Well, maybe I smoke once in a while," I replied, "but I'm not a hypocrite."

There had been some drinking following the Pi Eta dance, the neighbors had called the police and two of the fellows had been taken down to the city cooler to spend the night. Their names were in the paper the following morning, and I called the head of the house to talk over the affair.

"I'm awfully ashamed of the affair, dean," he acknowledged to me. "I did my level best to keep the fellows quiet, but in spite of what I could do they would be noisy. I hate like the dickens to have a thing like that get out. It's bad for the organization."

I admitted it, but the thing that interested me was the fact that Allen was not particularly concerned with what had happened. His concern lay in the fact that he had been unable to keep it dark.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

By WALTER TRUMBULL

There are, in Greater New York, 1,805,980 telephones. They are used for 8,000,000 calls per day. That is understandable enough, as a great part of the business of this largest city in the United States is done by telephone. There was a day when somebody in the home usually went to market. Now most of them telephone. Brokerage houses do most of their business over the wire, although lately the switchboard operators in these places of investment and chance have not been so busy. Stores, hotels, newspapers, businesses of every description find constant use for the telephone.

You don't run over to a friend's or neighbor's place any more; or, if you do, you first telephone to find out whether he is in. The working boy used to have to wait until evening to call on his girl. Now he can telephone her in his noon hour and generally does. Women make half-hour social calls over the phone. An interesting bit of news can be relayed instantly. All human emotions, which can be transmitted by the voice, travel over the wires.

I sometimes have wondered what would happen in a city such as New York if some day the telephone system suddenly were destroyed. I can think of nothing which would paralyze or isolate a city quicker. The result for a time would be panic and chaos; although the telegraph and radio might take up some of the burden.

A man who stammers tells me that he never has any difficulty in pronouncing any word if he closes his eyes. He worked that out from the discovery that he never stammered when talking in the dark.

Some one once compiled a list of persons who never had ridden on the elevated lines and headed with Litlian Russell. There are a number of persons in this town who never have ridden on the subway. One person who doesn't use the subway is Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. He is so tall

Sacrificed Offending Right Arm

Salinas, Wash.—No regret—not a particle. Only surprise that anyone should question her act.

Those were the admitted feelings of Alta Fickle, twenty, who deliberately sacrificed her right arm to satisfy her conscience. Confined to the county hospital here with her right arm amputated above the elbow, she had not emerged from the apparent religious ecstasy that impelled her to place her arm beneath the wheels of a train. To queries concerning sorrow she might feel she quietly answered:

"Sorrow? Sorrow for what?" Efforts to delve further into the motive were fruitless. Miss Fickle merely repeated what she told astounded questioners.

"My arm was offensive to me and I cut it off."

Then she told again of the "murderous impulses" which centered in her right arm, and justified her act by quoting Scriptures—"If thy right hand offend thee." Members of the girl's family—her father, Alfred, Visalla rancher, and her sister, Mrs. Edna Ricks of Tulare—attributed the act to results of a nervous breakdown, suffered by Miss Fickle three years ago.

Indian Robber Chief Laughs at Police

Bombay.—One of the most colorful characters in all of the Indian resistance to British rule is Raja Shivaji, the young Bhil robber chief of the Khandesh district, who has been the bane of 750 police in three districts for a year. This young Indian Robin Hood has carried a price of 5,000 rupees on his head for months—a reward offered by the inspector general of police in Bombay—but the money has gone a-begging.

Shivaji has become the veritable king of the jungle in the vast mountain fastnesses and wooded valleys of the Satpura range. He levies taxes on the villages and compels them to pay annual tribute. If they refuse, he raids the villages and carries away money or property equal in value to his assessment upon them.

The outstanding acts of this mountain desperado, who still holds the admiration and respect of other Indians, include the killing of a police constable during a raid about a year ago, a public thrashing administered to another policeman, and a raid accompanied by arson in a marwari's house in the village of Igatpur Taluka two months ago. All of these exploits were carried out in the most daring and sensational manner.

The slaying of the police officer came when Raja Shivaji was surprised and surrounded by a raiding party in the heart of a thick forest. The officer was the first to see the rebel chieftain and made a dash for him. Raja Shivaji at first made a sham attempt to escape, but actually concealed himself in the tall grass. When the pursuer drew close he shot him through the heart and escaped.

The thrashing took place in the presence of a large crowd gathered in a village of Peint Taluka on a bazaar day. Raja Shivaji attended the bazaar and casually heard of the presence of a head constable.

He hunted the policeman through the market place and when he confronted him, as if by common consent, the whole market place became emptied of villagers, although they remained as witnesses from the sides. The two met alone, and when Raja Shivaji had completed his thrashing he added the indignity of sticking a dried fish in the policeman's mouth by way of an outrage to his Brahmin superstition. The policeman barely escaped with his life after being forced to listen to a sermon on the iniquity of tyrannizing poor villagers.

In nearly all the villages he has kinsmen and the inhabitants are evidently aware of his whereabouts. Most of his secret haunts also are known to the natives, but not even the village children would breathe a word about them.

FOR COLDS—ALKALINIZE YOUR SYSTEM

Doctors everywhere are prescribing this new treatment for colds:

Begin when you feel a cold coming. Take a tablespoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia, morning, noon and night, the first day. Do the same second day. Then only at night. Colds reduce the alkalinity of your system. That's what makes you feel achy, feverish, weak, half-sick. Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is alkali in harmless, palatable form. It checks the symptoms of colds by restoring the alkalinity of your system. Relieves sour stomach, indigestion, gas, over-acidity. All druggists.

Boiling Water

While water is being boiled it is in motion caused by the expansion of the water nearest the source of heat. These particles rise, and the cooler and heavier particles from above move into their place, setting up what are called convection currents through the water. This process continues until all the water is at a uniform temperature.

There is better repartee than "Is that so?" but that has to serve often and often.

NEEDS FOR RED CROSS SERVICE ON INCREASE, SAYS CHAIRMAN PAYNE

Disaster Relief and Service to War Veterans Make Heavy Demands—First Aid on Highways New Plan.

Demands upon the public services that the American Red Cross is organized to give are increasingly heavy, and will continue to be so in the future, John Barton Payne, chairman, has announced.

The two major services of the society—service to war veterans and their dependents, and relief in disasters—show each year a greater number of persons helped by the Red Cross.

Pension legislation passed recently for World War Veterans, and increased allotments to all Spanish-American War Veterans, have given to Chapters and the national society many thousands of additional cases to handle, Judge Payne said.

In the past year help was given in 108 disasters. Ninety of these were in the United States, twelve in foreign possessions and six were in foreign countries.

Health activities of the Red Cross also are being extended, especially in the rural communities where all health authorities agree the greatest need exists. Red Cross, with 794 nurses in its employ, is the greatest employer of public health nurses in rural areas in the United States.

In its campaign against accidental deaths, begun twenty years ago with its life saving and first aid programs, the Red Cross now has adopted an additional program—that of combating the huge toll of life from automobile accidents on the highways.

Expenditures of the Red Cross in the past year were $4,254,796.34, of which $1,208,151.09 was spent in disaster relief, the chairman pointed out.

"The Red Cross depends upon the public for its support, through their memberships enrolled once each year in the period from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving Day," Judge Payne said.

"We do not receive any support from the Government, or through other taxation, although as the President of the United States is president of the society, and one-third of its governing members are representatives of U. S. Departments, it ranks as a semi-governmental agency.

"By joining as a member, in the local Red Cross Chapter, once each year, during the annual Roll Call, every citizen will have a part in carrying on this great humanitarian task."

Forestry in Europe
France took up forestry only when the destruction of most of her forests was followed by heavy floods and the washing away of her hillsides. Need for wood, says the American Tree association, first caused the Germans to think of forestry, for there, where winters are long and severe, fuel wood is almost as much a necessity as food itself.

Forest in Irish Glen
About 100 years ago the Tipperary, in the highest mountains, is Glen A. Glen, rich in legends and beautiful scenery. There are the mountains of the Harper of Clinch, who fell in love with the daughter of the king of the Munster fairies. A magic mist prevented his entrance into the castle, so he leaped melodiously enough to make the mountains tremble and the lakes move.

Differences in Height
The vertebral cartilages between the vertebrae of the spinal column in the human body diminish in size during the day because of the weight or pressure that is upon them. In some individuals the difference in height between day and night may be as much as one-quarter to one-half an inch.

Delicate Sarcasm

A delightful story of a certain British cabinet minister's amiability comes from a colleague. It appears that an admirer of the great man had begged an autographed photograph. The minister began writing across it: "To my very dear friend." Then he paused and asked in the charming manner familiar to all his friends: "What name did you say?"—Ottawa Journal.

CHAPTER XIV

Will and Ernestine Choose

Will was napping up a wooden box. The shelves and the table were empty. Ankle deep on the floor was a litter of papers.

"Ernestine!" He stopped, a hammer in hand, to stare at her.

"What are you doing?" she exclaimed, and then, with a little cry of horror she stooped and picked up from the rubbish on the floor, a torn picture.

"Oh, Will, how could you tear it up? It was good—it was wonderful. Why did you destroy it?" With trembling hands she tried to put the ragged pieces together on the drafting desk. He looked at her astonished, voiceless. Before her, racked against the wall, was the sketch of herself, with Elaine on her arm.

"I'm glad you didn't throw this away—oh, Will, I like it so! But what are you doing? Are you moving?"

"What do you mean, Ernestine?" he said sharply. "Did you know about this office—when have you been here?"

"Of course I knew," she said impatiently, confused to find the need for explanations, now, at this vital hour. I've known you had this office, since last spring. I knew, long before that, that you were hankering for something—some new work. You remember the night you made this picture?" She picked up the sketch of herself. "You remember? Of course you do. I knew then, that you were working. Lillian had told me she saw you in this neighborhood, and I came here the next day, and looked at all your work. Oh, Will, don't look at me so! I wasn't spying on you! You were so strange, and I was very unhappy—I had to know what you were doing. But aren't you going to work here any more?"

He laughed strangely. "Rent's due tomorrow," he said. "I decided to let it go. I'm closing this office, and I'll never open another. I suppose, since you knew I was working here, that you were worried about the cats—but you needn't have worried—I'll stay with the job. I've given up my wild ideas. We'll keep the income—that's what counts."

"Why Will," she said swiftly, "you don't think there's any conflict between your desire and mine, do you? That's what I've been saving for—all this time. I knew that you would want to quit the cats, and I've saved a great deal of money—you'll be astonished. I had to know—it was right for me to know. It's made it possible for us to build a reserve. And why should I worry about the cats? Do you think I want you to stick to the cats, if there's something bigger, something more compelling upon you? Why, Will, Will—all I want is just what you want." Suddenly she remembered her errand, with a wall. "Oh, Will, Pastano wants the money for Loring—a bribe. Loring's in terrible trouble. He'll have to go to jail, but, oh, I don't want to give them the money for him. It's your money, Will—don't give it away—don't let them take it from us."

He caught her wrist and held it hard.

"Are you out of your senses?" he asked sternly. "What do you mean—money? What money have you?"

She opened her purse and took her small savings deposit book from it. She opened the book, and put it in his hand, the total across the narrow page. His eyes were wide, incredulous. He rubbed his hand across his face.

"It's yours, Will," she said with sudden gentleness. "I have robbed you of every cent I could get from you, and I've lived as cheaply as I could, and I've banked the difference—for you."

Deep within her she heard a warning bell. She remembered that they had much to tell each other. She laid her hand upon his arm, and said in the same low tone:

"Look at me, Will."

He looked at her—his brilliant black eyes fixed on her brown eyes—he looked at her deeply, with astonishment, and suddenly Ernestine was filled with a strange power and wisdom. She passed out of self-consciousness and was controlled and guided by deep instincts and ancient nether wisdom. She moved toward Will, but her face up to his and kissed his lips.

"Will," she said, smiling up at him, her lovely face alight with feeling, her tender mouth curved in a smile of sweetness. "Will, I love you. You forget it. You ignore it—you make love a burden instead of a support. I've seen it in the depths of your artist's mind—that love betrayed and entrapped you, instead of letting you free. Haven't you thought that?"

His arm trembled a little under her hand. "Only once," he said, and his face flushed, "only once—the day after I had made that picture." He motioned to the picture she still held in her free hand. "The next day, I knew that I could not go on with my dreams, I knew I would have to quit it—that day, I felt so—it seemed as though—" He paused, stumbled on, with courage. "It just seemed to me—a woman is so sweet and warm in one's arms—so generous—so lovely; and then, suddenly, there are a house, and a car, and children, and nurse maids, and cooks, and doctors—a thousand things—just suddenly, I shouldn't have felt so—I fought it—but it got me. I'm telling you—you asked me."

Her eyes were full of tears. "I knew, Will—not just that way, but I knew—that's why I've been saving and been silent—that's why I didn't ask you any questions. But, Will, I love you. It's the biggest thing in the world to me, Will. It means to me what these pictures—what this work means to you. I'm not an artist—I'm not even artistic—but I know what your work means to you, because I love you. And when you shut me out, Will, it was for me just as it was for you when you were shut off from your work. I want you to be happy." She was solemn, young, uplifted, filled with the glory of unselfishness, her face a blurred and lovely picture seen through tears.

"Dear heart, what does the money matter? Why, Will—even more than the children—yes, though I ought not to say it—more than the children, than my people, than myself. You've told me how you felt, and I'll tell you, that for a little while, for one dark time, I was jealous of your work—of your love for it. But not any more, Will. I want you to have what's best for you; I want you to have your work. There isn't any conflict between your desire and mine, Will, or your future and mine, because I want what you want."

His face began to shine. He reached up, took her hand and held it. "Ernestine," he whispered, and stopped as she leaned forward, her head against his shoulder, her face hidden so, while she went on swiftly: "Will, I knew you were tired of the cats. Will, I spent only about a third of what you earned, last year. But you wouldn't tell me, you didn't want to talk to me, so I just went ahead, planning for the time when you would. I knew that you wouldn't want, probably wouldn't take, the money I'll have from grandmother and from papa, some day. But this is yours—it's savings from your earnings, Will. It's for your stake."

"You understood," he said hoarsely.

"Will," she said again, and now her arm was around his body, the picture up between his shoulders, "I'll tell you again—I—" "No, no, Ernestine," he said with quick passion, "you can't let me; we can't go back. Do you know what it means? A living—I think I could make that—but it will be precarious—I've been into it all with some thought. It will be years before I can make even half what the cartoons bring me. Even if I get darned good—there's not the money to be found—I've thought it all out. I've been up and down and around this problem. I've tried to save some, too. But it won't work. It's precarious—it's too scanty. I've been through it all, and made up my mind. Don't tempt me with your savings—they wouldn't last us a year."

"If we went back to the West side, back to the old house, I could do my own work, and the children and I could live on the trust fund, until you got started. You could keep this studio, and you could go to Philadelphia and to Paris and study."

"Would you—would you do that—for me? Ernestine, my wife." He kissed her, and she shook the tears from her own lashes and drew him down and pressed her lips against his eyes.

"It wouldn't be necessary for you to do that, darling," he said to her, and he laughed a little. "It wouldn't be that bad. I could make a living—and you've your trust fund, and your grandmother has promised you the house at Langley lake. No, you won't have to go back to the West side—you can keep Molly, I believe. We can manage that much, Ernestine, with good luck and good management."

"Oh, Will," she said to him, "I almost wish it would be hard like that again. I've been so lonely—longing to help you, feeling outside. What does the car and the house and the things mean if I'm cut off from you? I know I can't help you with your painting. I know that travail is yours—that's your work—your life. It must be first from her own lashes and drew him down and pressed her lips against his eyes.

I could make a living—and you've your trust fund, and your grandmother has promised you the house at Langley lake. No, you won't have to go back to the West side—you can keep Molly, I believe. What does the car and the house and the things mean if I'm cut off from you? I know I can't help you with your painting. I know that travail is yours—that's your work—your life. It must be first with you, Will. And that's right. Gifted people can't choose. But if your work must be first, to you, you can understand what love and marriage mean to me. That's my life. And if I can feel that you can go on—because I understand—"

They were both crying, his arms were around her—tight—tight. As their tears mingled and they stood together in the long embrace, the kiss that was free from passion but fraught with tenderness, the purest and holiest feeling, true married love, welled over them. It seemed to Ernestine, straining so in his arms, that for the first time she was truly wife to Will. Not only bride, bride of his body, star of his imagination, object of romantic adoration, not only the mother of his children and the keeper of his house, but wife—wife—in the deep places, the secret places of love.

"Ernestine," he whispered, after a little, and she wept afresh to hear her name so on his lips as he had whispered it when first they loved, "forgive me—that I didn't understand, that I didn't confide in you. You seemed always to have a child in your arms, a thousand needs. I felt that this other was a foe to you. I was stupid, blind. I thought you wanted the money—needed it. You were hard with me that summer before I made the cats. I didn't want to go back to that bad time again. I didn't know how wonderful you are. You're my good luck—you always were. I'll never forget it again. Oh, Ernestine, I'll do big things for you—I will."

A clock somewhere boomed two, and Ernestine started in his arms. She had remembered Loring—at last. She withdrew herself from her husband's arms and made a gesture of helplessness.

"But here's this business of Loring," she said.

"What is it about Loring?" he asked, watching her.

So with the enchantment, the throb of love still on her, she told him about Loring—about all that Pastano had said to her that morning.

"But of course," he said at once, "you must let me take the money for you—at once. Give me the slip of paper."

She gave it to him with a reluctant sigh, and he gave a whistle as he looked at it.

"How could you have refused Pastano?" he asked. "Think what it would mean to your family—to your mother. And Lillian—with Loring dragged through the mud—"

"But Will! The money's yours—it's what we've just been talking about. It's your chance."

"I don't need twenty thousand dollars," he said quickly, and then gave a laugh of pure happiness. "Why, Ernestine," he said, "if you understand—if you know what it's all about—if you can live that economically and if you're behind me, I'll take a chance on it. Give the money for Loring—we can wrangle it. After all," he added more seriously, "the understanding—the way I feel now—is worth more than the money. Let Loring have the money, we're rich. When we were young and poor we did as we liked. But after we got a little money we weren't free agents any more. The big income restricted us more than the little one. Look how Loring was bound by money! Let's let it go. After all, only beggars can choose!"

"If you'll quit the paper and go ahead with this work, if you will stick to your own dreams, I'll gamble with you," she said.

"It's done," he answered. He reached for his coat and hat, and looked at his watch at the same moment.

"We'll have to go right back to the bank. Thank God, you've got the money and don't begrudge it. Nothing can stop us, now."

And before they went out into the dark and narrow hall, they kissed again, hand in hand, simply, like children pledging a secret.

Ernestine saw Ruby Pastano near the bank entrance and, though he bowed formally and did not speak, he gave her a flashing, radiant glance, like the flash of a mirror held in the sun. She knew that he understood, from the happy countenance and from Will at her side, that they were looking after Loring.

CHAPTER XV

Some Day

But the day was not over for Ernestine. She left Will at the bank. His coat pocket was stuffed with the packet of bills the teller had given them, and her bank balance was reduced to three figures. But that didn't matter. Not a bit. She was a million times richer than she had been the day before. The bankbook figures would fatten again.

She wished she had her car, but, lacking it, she went across to Sheridan road, took a bus north, rode almost to Devon, left the bus and went to Lillian's.

Nobody answered the bell, but the door was unlocked, so Ernestine walked in. The house was silent, but she was instantly aware of the fact that some one was in it. She called, but no one answered. She went through into the kitchen. The maid's bedroom was off the kitchen and the door stood open. Ernestine went in there and saw that the room wore an unoccupied look. She opened the closet door. The hooks were empty. The maid had left, or had been dismissed.

She was still under the domination of her deep self, and, as she had been governed in Will's office an hour or so earlier by forces she did not understand, so now she went quickly up the stairs, through the silent house and into the big front bedroom where Lillian and Loring slept. The cover showed the impress of a body, the pillow had been drawn out from under the spread. She looked swiftly about and was not at all surprised to see Loring standing against the wall, behind her, one hand behind his back.

His coat collar was turned up across the back, his hair was in disorder, he was unshaved, and across one cheek was a deep imprint where his sleeve, or his pillow, had creased his flesh.

Ernestine went to him and held out her hand.

"Give it to me," she said sternly, as she might have addressed Peter.

Loring stared at her sulkily for a moment, his haggard eyes taking on a belated vitality. Then, silently, but with a shrug and a grimace, he drew from behind him a small nickel-plated revolver and put it in her hand. Ernestine crossed the room, opened the window and flung it far away into the water of the lake that breathed against the sandy beach.

She turned back to Loring, closed the window and dusted her hands.

"That's that," she said, with a gleam in her eyes. "What did you think that was going to do for you?"

He dragged himself away from the wall and sank down into a chaise-longue. With a kind of groan Loring hid his face in his hands and sat there like a broken man.

"I didn't know till this afternoon," he said. "But the grand jury—"

"That's all right, Loring," said Ernestine. "That's fixed."

"Fixed?" he said hoarsely, and looked up at her, his expression a little wild. "You don't understand. They've got me seven ways."

"Not now," she said, thinking how strange it was that he could never know about Pastano, and about the twenty thousand dollars.

"Will fixed it," she said gently. "You know, he has friends who told him. Will fixed it for you, Loring. He could—there are men downtown who would do anything for Will. He knows the ropes."

Loring's head fell forward again. "I'm a failure," he muttered. "A complete failure—and now Will pulls me out of the rubbish heap. I've been here in the house all afternoon, trying to screw myself up to do one decent thing—to get myself out of the way—before all this falls on the rest of you, and I couldn't even do this."

"Of course you couldn't. You're too perfectly healthy. You've been a fool perhaps—like the rest of us, but you aren't crazy, and only insane people are capable of self-destruction. Look, Loring, you can start again. Why, men sometimes have to start again when they're old. Lots of men fail once—or twice—and then succeed. You can start back and rebuild your father's old business. What if you have to let the house and the car go—it's a small price for a new start. Pastano will let you alone, as long as you stay off of his preserves. Lillian's got her money. Will and I are going to start new."

He looked up at her—eager to be comforted as a child is eager to be comforted—eager to believe her, coming back, slowly and painfully, from the dark places of fright and madness.

"But Lillian!" he said, protesting, arguing, as mortal man always argues, on the wrong side—"Lillian's going to have a baby—that was what sickened me on all that old business—I'd been sick of it, anyhow, and when I knew I might have a son—I had to get clear."

No Freedom of Worship Under Peter Stuyvesant

Early in his administration Peter Stuyvesant issued a proclamation forbidding the people to assemble for any religious service other than that of the Dutch Reformed church, which was the established church in the fort, writes P. B. Cole in the New York World, in telling "The Story of New York."

This law was vigorously enforced. Stuyvesant banished from the colony a Lutheran minister who had come from Holland to minister to the large number of Lutherans in the colony, and even imprisoned Lutheran parents who failed to have their children baptized in the Dutch Reformed church.

Stuyvesant's iron hand fell heaviest, however, upon the Quakers, a large number of whom had settled on Long Island, in Hempstead. In this settle-

I told her to go to New York. Last week, but she wouldn't. She's stuck to me, Ernestine. I never believed she would. I thought she was a fair-weather wife. I've always thought it. But she's been wonderful. She let her maid go, and she's been doing her own housework. She sold her car and brought me the money. She wrote to her father to let her have her trust fund outright. Now she's going out looking for a flat. That's all right—but when I thought of prison—and Lillian's baby coming in all that trouble, it seemed that the best thing I could do would be to get out. If I were gone, she'd go home to her mother, and perhaps no one would know. I'm all caved in about Lillian, about the way she's taken it."

"Why, Loring," said Ernestine, and laughed shakily. "Lillian adores you—always did. She loves you. When you've just found out how much she cares, you contemplate leaving her. What a way to figure. If that's not like a man!"

They talked a little. Ernestine sat down on the dressing table, flung her hat upon Lillian's bed and talked to him. She told him of the new plans she and Will had made. Gradually he relaxed, came back to normal. He reached up and turned his coat collar down and put up a hand and smoothed his hair. After a little he got up and shook his big body.

"I believe I'll go and shave," he said. "I'm a fright. You won't tell Lillian or Will about this afternoon?"

"Why should I tell them? It would just scare them both. Have you had lunch?"

"No, I don't think so; no, I didn't." "Neither did I. I'll go downstairs and fix some coffee and sandwiches while you're shaving."

From the kitchen she could hear him moving about; then she heard the front door open and the click of the latch. She went to the hall, and Lillian saw her. Lillian came back to the kitchen.

"You didn't answer the phone, so I came over—Lorrie's upstairs. He said he hadn't eaten"—she made a gesture to the preparations on the table.

Lillian nodded absently.

"Ernestine," she said softly, quickly, "I'm going to have a baby."

Ernestine kissed her. "I'm awfully glad."

"Did you know about all of Loring's trouble?"

"Will told me some—Loring's told me the rest—but the worst is over for him now."

"Poor kid," said Lillian. She leaned against the door a moment and smiled at her younger sister. It seemed to Ernestine that since she had last seen her, the hard surface had dissolved from Lillian.

"Isn't it funny? Now everything is different. I used to wonder how you could go ahead when things were so hard. But it's not so bad—in the thick of it, as it seems from the sidelines. Just to know the baby's coming makes all this mess of Loring's seem so unimportant—I don't care what arrangements we make. Oh, Ernestine, there have been times when I thought Loring loved you more than he did me, but these last few days he's been so sweet to me—so worried about me. He's humbled—it makes my heart ache. I can't tell you how I feel."

"I guess, I know," Ernestine answered. "It's this business of marriage—but go on up to him, darling, and get him to eat something. All this will straighten itself out."

Lillian went up the stairs. Standing in the hall, looking after her, Ernestine realized that these sorrows were blessings—these were the things that bound a man and a woman together. This would break for ever Loring's old fixed idea about herself, and Lillian's belief that she had married for her own advantage. This would leave them close together, warm, heart to heart.

She turned the gas low under the coffee-pot, spread a napkin over the sandwiches she had fixed and slipped quietly out of the house. Perhaps Will was at home, and she would eat with him.

As she walked she began to plan all the new life. Her practical, efficient mind set itself with vigor upon the new problems. The removal to the lake—the need of a studio there for Will, the possibility of adjusting their life to changeable income. But Will was so active—he would doubtless have all the work he could do, within a year or two. Some day he would be famous, and he would find the world willing to pay for beauty as well as wit.

She walked more quickly—eager to be home, the young blood singing in her heart.

Some day— [THE END.]

REFINED FURRED CLOTH COATS; VELVET FOR THE KIDS' PARTY

A TOPCOAT may be of quality-kind cloth, and it may be handsomely furred, but if it cannot lay claim to correct "lines" in the eyes of the smart world, it loses caste completely. This season's models depend emphatically on the silhouette for distinction. There is a flare and a fit to the new coats which is quite arresting, the underlying thought being to give a slenderizing appearance without sacrificing a full hemline. For young girls, fashion is coming out strong for the red coat trimmed in either black or light fur. The atterial has so victoriously established itself in the affection of grown-up fashionables, it is seeking new worlds to conquer. Which accounts for the latest news from Paris to the effect that the smartest party and "dress-up" frocks for little girls are now made of transparent velvet in rich autumn colors and also in the becoming black. Coming as it does this season, in a firmer weave and cleaning like silk, velvet is not only a delight to the child, who adores its richness, but it is a practical investment. Wherefore

This charming caped type is equally as good-looking in black, navy, jungle green, or one of the browns. The choice dress coat in the center is also made of trico broadcloth and it is lined with crepe to match. It has fancy cut insets which extend at the back from waistline to hemline in princess effect. This intricate seaming is stitched flat. The pouch collar and novelty cuffs of fine marmot fur give it a decided air of distinction. Note that the cuffs are placed above the cloth edge of the sleeves, a characteristic treatment this season.

now that we are learning how to take care of velvet properly it is not at all impractical that the younger generation should share with their elders the joy of wearing velvet.

You can see from the smiling countenances of the chic little misses in the picture that they are taking a keen delight in the fact that they are permitted to be costumed in velvet just as smartly as mother and debutante sister. Evidently these sophisticated young ladies have come to the "party" and were prevailed upon to pose for their picture just as they were about to remove their becoming headgear.

LIVE STOCK

SHEEP REQUIRE MORE ROUGHAGE

Straw, Corn Stover, Winter Pasture, Silage Help.

Suggestions to sheep men for providing roughage for their stock by buying only a minimum amount of hay, are given by L. A. Kauffman, sheep specialist for the Ohio State university.

Sheep require more roughage than grain, and roughage is necessary to prevent serious digestive disorders, he says. The short hay crop makes necessary the use of straw, corn stover, winter pasture and silage more than is normally recommended. All of these feeds may be used, he advises, but due to their character and effects some laxative, high-protein supplement such as linseed cake must be supplied.

Pasturing standing corn or stalk fields, when such are available, also will reduce the amount of hay required, Kauffman says. If the corn is to be cut, this is not advisable, he believes. Better still, he says, is corn silage, when the farmer owns a silo. Silage is a cheap and excellent roughage when supplemented with a small amount of hay and a little cottonseed or linseed cake. Three pounds of silage to one pound of hay is his recommendation.

Where grass has failed, rye may be sown in stubble to provide late fall and early spring grazing. Rye also may be sown in corn. Oats, too, may be used as an emergency hay crop. When cut in the dough stage oats hay has a feeding value equivalent to mixed hay, he says.

With oats selling at 25 to 30 cents a bushel in northeastern Ohio, Kauffman suggests to southeastern Ohio sheep men that they buy in carload lots now. Oats is an excellent growing feed for sheep, and due to its bulky character, less roughage must be fed with it.

Comparisons of Summer and Winter Rations

An interesting deduction from the self-feeding experiment in West Virginia is that heifers that make gains above normal in winter will make gains below normal the following summer on pasture. In four comparisons of three groups of heifers—one group for two pasture seasons—that were self-fed grain and given free access to roughage, the average winter gain was 316.5 pounds per head, whereas the same heifers gained only 85.2 pounds on pasture. No grain was fed on pasture. Similar heifers, hand-fed, averaged 154 pounds per head for the winter feeding periods and 190 pounds per head for the pasture season. No grain was fed on pasture. It should be remembered, however, that the hand-fed groups were well fed. It would be a mistake to deduce from these figures that poor winter feeding will be overtaken on good pasture. If a calf is stunted by poor winter rations, it cannot make as good use of pasture as the more vigorous, well fed calf.

Satisfactory Remedy for Vermin on Cattle

(By W. H. PETERS, Montana Experiment Station.)
A mixture of half powdered sabadilla seed and one-half sulphur sprinkled along the back and over the neck of the animal is a fairly satisfactory remedy for lice on cattle in the winter months. This powder need be sprinkled only lightly into the hair and it does not take very much to treat one animal.

One-eighth of a pound of sabadilla seed and one-eighth of a pound flower of sulphur would be sufficient for treating one animal two or three times. It is best to sprinkle an animal infested with lice once every four to six weeks through the winter months to keep the lice down.

Ground Wheat for Live Stock Is Satisfactory

Advisability of feeding wheat to live stock is a question which often confronts live stock feeders when the prices of corn and wheat are close together. E. T. Robbins, extension specialist at the Illinois experiment station, reports that coarsely ground wheat is worth as much or more as the same weight of shelled corn for hogs. When wheat is 75 cents a bushel and can be ground for 5 cents or less, it will pay to feed wheat instead of 75-cent corn. Cheaper corn, however, would likely be a more economical feed. Ground wheat, according to Mr. Robbins, has about the same value for other stock as for hogs.

Sort Live Stock

It is a good plan to sort live stock according to size and age and handle the groups of different ages separately during the winter. Better growth and development of young stock will result if they are given a ration which supplies more protein and mineral matter than is needed by the older animals. The young stock needs more legume hay or feeds which furnish the equivalent protein and mineral matter such as cottonseed or linseed cake or meal.

Gigantic Strides Made in Use of Esperanto

Esperanto was created by Dr. L. Zamenhof (1859-1917), who was born at Bielostock, Russia. He believed that such international misunderstanding might be removed if a common language were available, and he conceived the idea of Esperanto. By the age of nineteen he had completed the construction of his new language, but it was then subjected to scrutiny and practical tests till 1887, when he published his "Lingvo Internacia" under the pseudonym of "Doctor Esperanto." Since that time the use of Esperanto has spread rapidly, and Esperanto associations have been formed in every country. Even in the British Isles, where the importance of the movement does not appear to have been fully understood, there are supposed to be 100,000 persons with a knowledge of the language. The third universal Esperanto congress was held at Cambridge in 1907, and since then more than 1,250,000 text-books have been sold in these islands. More than 1,200 delegates, representing every country in the world, attended the twenty-second universal Esperanto congress at Oxford. Among them were a number of Icelanders.

chestra, and is doing a splendid job of both as those who heard the program will agree.

She has developed a body of singers that is very well trained and has every quality that is desirable in a glee club. Mrs. Leo Wilson trained a group to represent her room, and their dance and singing truly did credit to the room and teacher. Mrs. Duncan Valley had a group of her tots take part in the program. They went through their parts like veterans and received a big applause. Miss Albertson's room contributed a dance that was a riot of color and must have taken hours of hard, tedious work to make the paper dresses which in themselves were a sight well worth looking at. She must have experienced a thrill when she saw the success of her efforts. Miss Srackangast's speech class gave a comic play that was truly comical. This little play puts another feather in Miss Srackangast's hat.

The total receipts from the "fair" were $227.23. We have successfully staged another "fair." We wish to heartily thank everyone who has helped us to succeed. We wish you to feel that we know that to you and your efforts is due, in a large measure, the success of this year.

Every teacher, every student, every parent and every friend of the school, who, like Mr. Jobe, gave his time, his money and worked hard, did their bit toward our "fair." With such cooperation why should we not succeed? Allow me to put my feelings into a few simple, sincere words that convey much. I thank you.

Tennessee's Distinction

Tennessee is bounded by more states than any other state in the Union, says an article in Pathfinder Magazine. It adjoins eight other states—Missouri, Arkansas, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, North Carolina, Virginia and Kentucky. Kentucky, bounded by seven states, is its nearest rival in this respect. Maine is separated from the rest of the Union by a single state.

Childish Intelligence

The intelligence quotient or "I. Q." of a child is determined by multiplying its mental age by 100 and dividing by the actual age. Thus the intelligence quotient of a normal child is 100. A child with an I. Q. below 80 is rated as subnormal, while one with an I. Q. above 120 is rated as gifted. About five children in 100 will be found to be 20 below normal, and about five 20 above normal.

To the Man who 'Can't Afford' Life Insurance . . .

Do you mean that your present living expenses are such that you have no money left for insurance? Then how could your wife and children meet those expenses if you and your earnings were taken out of the picture? The Metropolitan's Whole Life policy offers you life insurance at a very low cost—lower, in fact, than the cost of any other similar insurance we know about. Why not investigate?

CIRCULATOR

The GREATER FIRESIDE

FIRESIDE'S air circulating capacity is much larger than most circulators. Through perfection in combustion the tremendous prime radiation surface of its all cast iron heating unit is given greater heating power, enabling the FIRESIDE to heat and circulate air more rapidly resulting in more frequent air changes in FIRESIDE heated homes. Cold air drawn off floor through openings in main base and louvers inside of cabinet, passes over humidifier in the vaporating, healthful, moist warm air. Ask for circular fully illustrating and describing FIRESIDE'S other patented features not found in any other circulator.
