MEET SUCCESS SECURING RIGHT-OF-WA

"We are meeting with hearty co eration in the matter of securing operation in the matter of securing right-of-way for the new Shore Read," said County Engineer J. N. Sloan on Thursday of this week. "A large percentage of the own-ors of property through which the road is to run have either signed or indicated a willingness to sign the agreement, turning over the 200 feet necessary for the road free of cast to the county excenting that of cost to the county excepting that the county moves all fences to the new locations and all timber goes to the property owners.

"A great many have asked the nuestion, 'why is it necessary for the light-of-way to be 200 feet in width?' The answer is that this width is the Federal Government and state specfication for all Federal trunk lines in this section, and cannot be changed. The reason for this is for uture widening and snow removal.

"When completed, this scenic high-yay will be the most beautiful shore highway in Michigan, and unlike the west side shore roads, most of it uns in full view of the waters. The shore roads on the west side give tourists a chance to see waters over but a small portion of oute and only a small portion has accessible beaches, while practically all the shore line through this coun-ty is the best of resort beach.

"Any help we can get from the ocal citizens with influence toward cetting the tardy signers will be appreciated because it must be recognized that time is a big factor in this proposition."

Kellum as the guardian of his daughter, Anna Kellum, the judicial act not only revived memories of the sensational romance of a Pittsburgh heiress but also set free the imps of gossip that once so bedeviled the peace of Andrew Carnegie and his clan.

The signing of the decree, whereby a nine-year-old girl was taken from her allegedly cruel and drunken father, was something more than the routine procedure of the Connecticut court. In fact, it was the curtain being lowered on the drama of elope ment, staged 20 years ago, in which the chief roles were played by Elizabeth Lauder, a niece of Andrew Carnegie, and Medford R. Kellum, a downand-out sailor and fishing guide of Florida. She was not happy.

Love Match Fails.

What transpired in a New England Probate court over the custody of a wee slip of a girl, who is destined to be one of the richest young women in the United States, was an admission from beyond the grave that a love match with a tramp sailor was imprisonment instead of a happy romance.

In October, 1930, Elizabeth Lauder Kellum, daughter of the late George Lauder, and the divorced wife of Medford R. Kellum of Tavernier, Fla. dled, leaving among other children, a daughter, Anna. The child had been named as one of the beneficiarles of an estate worth $50,000,000. It was part of the huge fortune which had its origin in the steel works of Andrew Carnegie.

While upon her death bed the mother left instructions that her daughter, Anna, the youngest of her children, should be placed under the legal guardianship of her sister, Mrs. Harriet L. Greenway, New Haven, wife of Dr., James C. Greenway, head of the department of health in Yale university.

Father Loses Her.

After a brief hearing, Judge Gilson deposed the father as legal guardian of the child and in his stead appointed Mrs. Greenway, who, by the way, is an aunt of Polly Lauder Tunney, wife of the retired pugilistic champion.

It was the testimony of James Williamson Bain of Miami, Fla., foster father of Kellum, that really led to the change in the child's guardianship. This witness said Kellum was an unfit person to have charge of a nine-yearold daughter, because he was addicted to intoxicating drink and erratic in his general conduct. The hearing also brought out the fact that Kellum, while under the influence of drink. was inclined to be extremely cruel. Kellum was not in court, nor was he represented by counsel. In a letter addressed to the Probate court he protested, however, against any order deposing him as guardian of his daughter. He also requested that, in event of a removal order being issued, it should not be made permanent.

It was brought out during the hearing that the father of the child hailed originally from Virginia but that since early boyhood had led a wandering existence up and down the South Atlantic coast and along the Mexican gulf border.

The marriage, January 15, 1910, at Miami, Fla., between the beautiful young heiress and the sailor was the culmination of a romance which had its beginning in 1907, when George Lauder, Sr., chartered a boat from Kellum, as well as hiring the latter as a guide for tarpon fishing among the lower Florida keys.

Paid Her Ardent Court.

During the winters that were to follow, especially that of 1910, Kellum paid ardent court to the daughter of his employer. At the time, Elizabeth Lauder was more than 25 years the junior of the romantically inclined sailor and fisherman. The family looked upon the attentions paid the charming and vivacious girl as nothing more than the friendship of age for youth.

During the latter days of February. 1910, old George Lauder peremptorily told his daughter, Elizabeth, that he was closing his Florida home. But the girl balked at leaving Miami and offered one excuse after another as to why the family should postpone its return home.

"Why won't you go home?" demanded her father.

"Because I am married to 'Med,' and wish to remain at the side of my husband !" was the astounding reply. For three years, she confessed, Kel lum had been professing his love for her. Eventually, she had grown to ad mire and esteem the sailor and fishing guide. This feeling was later to ripen into love, the cuimination of which was that the two stole off to Miami, where they were made man and wife by a justice of the peace.

He's Wealthy Today. There was nothing for the Lauder Carnegie clan to do but accept Kellum after it was learned there was no way to annul the marriage.

Despite the fact that he was the husband of one of the richest young women in the United States, if not the world, Kellum was not altogether an idler. Some of the wealth that came to him through marriage he invested in Florida real estate and made a few millions of his own. And most of the money he made he kept, and so today he can be accounted a man of wealth.

As a result of his cruising about the high seas, Kellum became enamored of Honolulu and there established a magnificent estate. The blood of the sea was, however, in his veins. Within a short time after his descent upon Hawaii he was again plowing the waters. Once more he heard the siren call of the South Seas, and thither he journeyed, this time in a four-masted barkentine. This craft was to prove his passport for entry into the select and scientific circles of Honolulu.

Rift in Marital Lute.

He outfitted the barkentine for a scientific expedition. With a group of Hawaiian scientists, he penetrated, under the auspices of the Bernice P Bishop museum of Honolulu, many of the then inaccessible spots of the Pacific

Shortly before this expedition signs of a rift in the marital lute of the Kellums began to be quite noticeable to their friends. In November, 1828, Mrs. Kellum, after eighteen years of married life, much of which had been stormy, obtained a divorce in Reno. She died last October, leaving an estate worth $50,000,000 and a little daughter to inherit it.

At Tavernier, Fla., Kellum is now residing. He spends much of his time fishing.

D. A. R. Remembers Hero 150 Years After Death

Columbia City, Ind .- Col. Augustin Mottin de La Balme, the man who attempted to duplicate George Rogers Clark's revolutionary war feats, has been recognized as a hero 150 years after his unsuccessful expedition against Detroit. A monument was erected on the spot of the massacre by Columbia City Daughters of the American Revolution.

"Colonel La Balme, a Frenchman who had been inspector general of Continental cavalry, decided to attack Detroit in 1779," said Mrs. J. F. Brenneman, speaker at the monument unveiling.

"The French at Kaskaskia, a post on the Mississippi captured earlier by Clark, promised to assist in the expedition, so La Balme, with 103 French Canadians and some Indians, started out. "In northern Indiana they were to be reinforced and they plundered a Miami village of British sympathizers while waiting. Shortly afterward a band of Indians formed for retaliation, attacked La Balme's force and killed every man."

Tanks in a Wood Covered by a Smoke Screen

First of New Navy Fighting Planes

Fifteen fast Boeing wasp-powered fighting planes, which reached a speed of 350 miles per hour in a 10,000-foot vertical power dive and which will be used as deck fighters and diving bombers by the naval air service, were deliv ered in Seattle, Wash., to the airplane carrier Lexington by the Boeing Air plane company on its contract for 46 airplanes of this type. They are said to out-speed the navy fighters of any other nation. Special flotation bags keep the plane afloat if forced down at sea. These fighters carry machine gun and bombs.

Walter Christie, automotive engineer, waving from the circular door of his new super-tank, which was demonstrated to military authorities at Linder N. J. The tank can attain a speed of 75 miles an hour on an open road. With the caterpillar tracks it can speed across any rough country at 45 miles an hour. It possesses 5%-inch armor and carries a one-pound cannon and 30caliber machine guns with 2,100 rounds of ammunition.

U. S. CUSTOMS MEN SEIZE $56,000 WORTH OF DOPE

uard Sees the Mysterious Pack-ges Dumped Into Sea and Contraband Is Recovered.

San Francisco,-The biggest oplum au' of the year in the port of San rancisco was made recently by Unitd States customs agents after a cusoms guard had seen five mysterious ackages tossed into the bay from one the lower forward portholes of the apanese liner Asama Maru of the ippon Yusen Kalsha line. Ching ung, a Chinese cabin steward, conessed to ownership of the narcotics, alued at $56,000, after hours of grilling, and Wong Ching, a steerage cook, suspected of complicity, was also held. The cache was brought to the surface with grappling hooks some hours after it was consigned to the bay and was found to contain 350 cans, each containing one tael or a fraction more than six ounces of narcotics.

The cache was divided into five packages of seventy taels each, carefully wrapped in canvas sacks improvised from overall pant legs and linked together with heavy cord. The discovery of the smuggling attempt was dramatically made by P. V. Scholl, a customs guard on night duty at the stern of the Asama, While standing at his post at about midnight he saw flickering flashes of light at the forward end of the ship and hurried down the pier to investigate. Though the lights had disappeared when he reached the ship's prow he was just in time to see the packages go over the side from a porthole and splash in the water. Scholl made careful note of the spot of their submersion. In the morning the bay bottom was dragged and the contraband was brought up. Search of the ship for the smugglers was conducted by H. H. Harris, special investigator. A key belonging to Ching Yung in a cabin from the port of which the narcotics were believed to have been thrown, turned suspicion on him. Other evidence gathered implicated Wong Ching.

Mayflower Millstones Are Placed in Museum

Hastings, Neb .- A pair of worn millstones, reputed to have been brought to this country on the May-flower, recently have been placed in the Hastings museum. The stones were obtained from the McConnell family of Kearney, in whose possession they have been for many years. For years the stones did service in an old Pennsylvania mill near Philade'phia. They ground much of the meal used by the Continental army during the Revolutionary war and were still in service during the Civil war. Mc-Connell moved to Nebraska and homesteaded in the vicinity of Polle in the early seventies. B. J. Olson of Kearney, curio collector, heard of the old stones and persuaded the McConnella to have them sent to the museum.

Gen. Albert Sidney Johnston

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

BRUARY 3 is the anniversary of the birthday of two American soldiers whose careers afford some striking similarities and some equally striking differences. They bore the same family name, yet were not related. They were graduated from the same military school, both achieved distinction as Indian fighters, both attained high ranks in both the United States army and the Confederate army, yet one rose to the heights as a military leader only to be cheated of his reward by death, while the other lived to see his fame as a soldier end in something of an anti-climax. The two were Albert Sidney Johnston and Joseph Eggleston Johnston.

Albert Sidney Johnston was born on February 3, 1803, in Washington, Ky., the son of a Connecticut country physician and was graduated from the United States Military academy, eighth in his class, in 1826. He was assigned to the Second infantry and served as chief of staff to Gen. Henry Atkinson in the Black Hawk war in 1832, Resigning from the army in 1834, he was a farmer for a short time near St. Louis, then in 1836 joined the all the Confederate forces in the West The fall of Fort Henry and Fort Donelson to the Union forces under Foote and Grant followed and the new leader fell back to Murfreesboro where he began reorganizing his troops. Then he moved to Corinth, Miss., the key of the defense of the railroad system in the lower Mississippi valley, where by April 1, 1862, he had about 40,000 men, poorly armedand badly supplied. Grant, commanding the right wing of the Union army, was concentrating at Pittsburg Landing on the Tennessee river with some 40,000 men and Buell was rapidly approaching with 40,000 more. With a Napoleonic flash of genius Johnston decided to beat the enemy in detail and to attack Grant before Buell could arrive.

On April 3 he started on his 25 mile march to Pittsburgh Landing but he was delayed by bad roads and did not arrive until the 5th. At a council of war General Beauregard, his second in command, protested against an attack and advised a return to Corinth. Johnston overruled him and on Sunday morning, April 6, he led his army to the attack. It was a complete surprise, for Grant was not even on the field.

Gen. Joseph E. Johnston brevetted lieutenant colonel and colonel and during the next fifteen years performed various duties in the West (including that of acting inspector-general for the Utah expedition commanded by the other Johnston-Albert Sidney) which led finally to his commission of quartermaster-general of the United States army. Johnston resigned from the army when Virginia seceded, was commissioned a major-general of volunteers by Virginia and with Robert E. Lee organized the soldiers who poured into Richmond to defend the capital of the state. Next he was appointed commander of the army of the Shenandoah and led it to the aid of General Beauregard when McDowell attacked on July 21, 1861, at Manassas. Johnston outranked Beauregard and took command so that he is credited with the victory at Bull Run. The next month he was appointed one of the five full generals authorized by the Confederate congress (among them Albert Sidney Johnston) but was placed fourth on the list. Johnston protested against this, since he felt that his high rank in the United States army when he resigned should have placed him first on the list, and in this he was justified by a previous congressional act. This protest is said to have been the beginning and cause

HINTS FOR HOMEMAKERS

Caramel is a favorite flavoring with large majority of people. It is equally as good as flavoring for meat sauces, soups and made dishes, as in desserts and ice creams. It may be quickly and easily prepared as follows: Melt a cupful of granulated sugar slowly in a smooth omelet pan and cook until it becomes a rich brown, being careful to avoid scorching. Pour in a cupful of boiling water and stir until a thick sirup is formed. The caramel may be kept indefinitely if kept covered or bottled. Ink stains on the fingers can be removed by rubbing with a cloth moistened with household ammonia. Rinse the hands in clear water afterwards. Lemon juice and sunshine is an excellent remover of rust spots on linen or white fabrics.

When it is necessary to use boiled water for drinking it will taste better if it is poured back and forth from two pitchers, giving it more air. Use a lump or two of sugar instead of starch when washing fine laces. An easily prepared mushroom sauce which adds tremendously to the attractiveness of a broiled steak is prepared thus: Mix in a frying pan one tablespoonful each of butter and flour, stir in gradually one cupful of brown stock; when boiling point is reached add one cupful of mushrooms, salt and pepper to taste, a tablespoonful of mushroom catsup, with a teaspoonful of caramel. When white stains on polished wood surfaces cannot be removed by a cloth dampened in alcohol, use powdered pumice mixed with linseed oil to make a thin paste. Rub over the spots until they disappear. Wipe off carefully with a soft cloth dampened with furniture polish.

A quick relish may be made for an occasion by chopping cooked beets with celery and cabbage and a tablespoonful or two of freshly grated horseradish root, sugar, salt and a little vinegar or lemon juice to taste.

Poor Economy to Substitute Feed for Shelter.

Feed given the datry cow should be used for milk production and body maintenance rather than as a substitute for proper housing.

"When cows are unduly exposed to bad weather, a large part of their ration is used to keep their bodies warm, leaving only a small portion for milk production." asserts John A. Arey, dairy extension specialist at the North Carolina State college. "Every effort should be made to keep the cows comfortable during the disagreeable periods. If this is not done, profits will be reduced. It is poor economy to substitute feed for shelter at any time."

'r. Arey believes the cow stall should be well lighted, nicely bedded and properly ventilated but free from air currents. He says he has seen many cow barns and sheds in the state of such poor construction that they afford little protection against the cold winter wind. The sides of the barn or shelter should be made tight with the air being admitted through properly located windows.

The practice also of requiring cows to wade through mud and ice to secure drinking water is expensive. This kind of exposure chills the cow's body and prevents her from drinking the amount of water needed for good milk production. A cow weighing from 800 to 900 pounds and producing about 30 pounds of milk a day needs from 80 to 90 pounds of water each day. She will not drink this amount unless it is convenient and of medium temperature, says Mr. Arey.

Practical Dairyman Is

Admirer of Modern Barn The modern dairy barn is as far removed almost from the old cow stable in use a third of a century ago as is mechanical power from that furnished by a yoke of oxen in pioneer days. A well - ventilated, well · lighted barn equipped with a concrete floor, adjustable stalls that can easily be kept clean and in strictly sanitary condition, truly is an inspiration to the practical dairyman. With proper ventilation, not only can the foul air be removed, but also the excess moisture that used to accumulate in the old stables. This means better herd health and more economical use of feed by the cows. Plenty of sunshine and fresh, pure air are two of the most important factors not only for the health of the cow, but also for the conversion by her of feed into milk

Although entering the Texan army as a private he rapidly rose through all the grades to the command of the army and in 1838 President Mirabeau Lamar of the Lone Star republic made him secretary of war. The next year he led a campaign against hostile Indians and in two brilliant battles defeated them and drove them out of Texas. Next we find him a planter in Texas but at the outbreak of the Mexican war he was in the field again as colonel of the First Texas rifles. This regiment soon disbanded but Johnston continued in the service and was inspector general of Butler's division at the battle of Monterey. Although Gen. Zachary Taylor called him "the best soldier he ever commanded," and his superiors recommended him for an appointment as brigadier-general, he was passed over (for political reasons) and again retired to his farm.

There he lived in poverty and neglect until President Taylor in 1849 suddenly appointed him a paymaster in the United States army and six years later President Pierce appointed him colonel of a new regiment, the Second cavalry.

In 1857 he was placed in command of the expedition to restore order among the Mormons in Utah, who were in open revolt against the government. By a forced march of 920 miles in 27 days, he reached his little army of 1,100 men, to find them lost amid the snow-filled defiles of the Rockies, with the temperature at 16 below zero, their supplies cut off by the hostile Mormons and their starving teams their only food. By an extraordinary display of energy and wisdom Johnston led the army safely into winter quarters and by using equally commendable diplomacy he put an end to the rebellion without a drop of blood being shed. For this exploit he was brevetted brigadier-general and a short time later placed in command of the department of the Pacific.

Loyal to the army and the nation, the coming of the Civil war brought the deepest distress to Johnston. But when Texas seceded he resigned his commission-but he regarded his command as such a sacred trust that he concealed his resignation until he could be relieved-and went at once to Richmond where in September, 1861, he was placed in command of

The struggle lasted all day and was proceeding successfully just as Johnston had planned. The Union army was being crowded into an angle between Snake creek and the Tenessee river and was facing annihilation. About 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon Johnston, while leading a charge which crushed the left wing of Grant's forces, fell with a mortal wound. Beauregard, with enough daylight left to complete the victory, vacillated and ordered the attack to cease. That night Buell's army came up and the next day the Confederates were driven from the field. Had the bullet which struck down Albert Sidney Johnston reached another target, the history of the Civil war might have been vastly different.

Unlike Albert Sidney Johnston, who was a Southerner of Northern ancestry, Joseph Eggleston Johnston was a Southerner of the Southerners. He was born in Cherry Grove, Va., on February 3, 1807, the scion of a Virginia family which had been in this country for nearly 200 years. He was graduated from West Point in 1829 in the same class that gave Robert E. Lee to the army and commissioned a second lieutenant in the Fourth artillery. With the exception of service in the Black Hawk war in 1832, most of his first six years in the army was spent in garrison duty at various posts along the Atlantic seaboard. But in 1836 he became aide-de-camp to Gen. Winfield Scott in the war with the Seminole Indians in Florida and won.a brevet as captain for gallantry in action when troops under his command fell into an ambuscade, from which Johnston extricated them skillfully. On this occasion his uniform was perforated with no less than 30 bul-In 1842-43 he was again in lets! Florida serving against the Seminoles.

In the war with Mexico he was at the siege of Vera Cruz and in the battles of Cerro Gordo, Contreras, Molino del Rey, Chapultepec and the attack on the City of Mexico. He was severely wounded at Cerro Gordo and again at Chapultepec, where he was the first to plant regimental colors on the ramparts of the fortress. For his gallantry at Cerro Gordo, he was of the hostility towards him shown by President Jefferson Davis throughout the war. The quarrel between the two men, according to Allen Tate in his recent biography of Davis, "was to outlast the Confederacy and have a paralyzing influence upon its career."

After the Battle of Seven Pines in 1862, at which Johnsto'n was seriously wounded, Davis replaced him in command of the Confederate forces in the East with Gen. Robert E. Lee and the eclipse of Joseph-E. Johnston as an outstanding military leader began. The next year he was sent to take command of the Department of the West. "Johnston was one of the three or four best soldiers in the South," writes Tate. "But he tended to avoid assuming responsibility; he was touchy and quarrelsome; and his instinctive dislike of offensive warfare had, inconsistently enough, undermined the President's confidence in him since his retreat up the peninsula before McClellan in the spring. In the end, Davis' lack of confidence may have been sheer dislike; Johnston had not handled him, in his rancorous letters, with kid gloves. So, when Johnston went west his instructions were a little vague

 Both Davis and Johnston have their ardent partisans in the historic dispute between the two and it seems impossible to arrive at any conclusion as to who was most to blame. But the net result was disaster in the West which further weakened the "Lost Cause" and contributed its share to the downfall of the Confederacy. It fell to his lot to play a leading role in the last military scene of the great tragedy which befell the American people between 1861 and 1865. Just as he had been in command at the first major engagement of the war, so was he in command when the last important armed forces of the Confederacy laid down their arms, On April 26, 1865, Johnston surrendered his army to General Sherman on the same terms under which Lee had surrendered to Grant.

After the war Johnston was president of a railroad in Arkansas, president of an express company of Virginia and agent for various insurance companies. In 1877 he was elected to congress from Virginia and ten years later he was appointed United States commissioner of railroads by Previ dent Cleveland. He died in 1891 (@ by Westera Newspaper Union.)

This tendency on the part of the Bataks is probably the reason why libraries are not usually furnished with Batak literature, because very few agents could be induced to look for rare works within reach of people with such ideas. Indeed, the Cleveland public library is probably the only library in the world to possess a pustaka.-Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Inn's Many Famous Guests

The Lion inn at Shrewsbury, England, still popular with tourists, has entertained famous persons for more than a century. There George IV danced before the battle of Trafalgar and there Paganini once played. De Quincey spent a night at the Lion and Disraeli was there in his early days. In 1838 Charles Dickens, accompanied by "Phiz," was accommodated at the inn and wrote to his daughter of "the strangest little rooms" and 'how the windows bulged out over the street as if they were the stern windows of a ship." The ballroom, designed and decorated by the Adam brothers, is still used for dancing.

Back to the Library

A young patron at the West Indianapolis public library was explaining why he had not been taking out books for some time.

"Well, you see," he said, "my brother used to buy lots of magazines and I'd read them. But he went 'goofy' and got married and don't buy 'em any more."

Circular notes are notes or letters of credit furnished by bankers to travelers. With the notes the traveler is given a "letter of indication" bearing the names of foreign bankers who will cash the notes upon presentation.

If for any reason it is impossible to give the colostrum to the calf, it should be given one ounce of castor oil shortly after birth and before it is given any food. After that the calf may be given milk from any cow if the mother's milk is not available.

Give Cows Free Access to Water to Help Yield

Giving cows free access to water any time they want it, increased milk yield 6 per cent and the butter yield 12 per cent. Cows which had access to water took a drink an average of 10.3 times in each 24 hours and drank over 18 per cent more water than cows which were fed exactly the same but watered outside. These are the results of tests conducted by C. Y. Cannon of Iowa State college. They indicate that there are thousands of dairymen who could greatly increase their profits by using drinking cups.

Dairy Facts

Water is the cheapest and one of the most important dairy feeds, if we can class it as a feed.

When several small calves are kept together small stanchions are a great convenience at feeding time.

Where skim milk is left on the farm the raising of calves is comparatively simple if supplemental feeds are used.

About 87 per cent of milk is water. For plenty of milk, don't forget to give the cow all the water she cares to drink.

Cows give more milk if milked three times a day instead of twice. In observed cases the increase has been from 10 to 25 per cent.

The life of an average woven wire fence when posts are replaced and the fence is restretched, is 18 to 27 years, according to estimates made by 146 Iowa farmers.

THE TAWAS HERALD

By WALTER TRUMBULL

If you stop and calculate how many [persons pass through the big railroad stations of New York every day, you can figure that running them is something of a business. There are, for example, the lost property departments. If you leave anything in a pullman car, it is turned in to a special department. If you lose anything in a day coach, or in the stations themselves, it is turned in somewhere else. Thousands of articles are lost; hundreds are returned. Great storage rooms, on the lower levels of the stations, are filled with various things, waiting for their owners to come and claim them. Everything that can be carried outside of a baggage or freight car is there. * * *

I asked the custodian of one of these lost property caches whether men or women, as a rule, were most forgetful. He told me that it was about an even thing. Then I asked him what articles were most frequently forgotten. He said that the most common things left behind probably, were umbrellas, coats, bags and hats. Hats are something fairly new in his experience. He charges the sudden influx of headwear to the fad that has been developed for going bareheaded. That was started by college boys and their elders took it up. A man who never wears a hat in the country, puts one on to come to town, chucks it up in the rack and forgets it.

The peculiar thing about bags is that many persons do not remember where they left them. They will declare they left a bag at a ticket window. Then one of the plain-clothes operatives in the station goes on a still hunt. He first looks where the owner claims the bag was left. Then he covers the station in a fashion taught by long experience. The news stands, the telegraph desk, the telephone booths, often bring results. One woman asserted she had left her bag at a ticket window, only to have it found in a hotel adjoining the station.

The lost property departments of the stations always check up with adjoining hotels. * * *

You might not think that travelers would leave their false teeth in trains, but it is a common occurrence. The teeth hurt them, they take them out, wrap them in a handkerchief and put them in a pocket. Later, they pull out the handkerchief, the teeth drop on the seat, and there they stay. Papers and tickets often drop out of pockets or handbags. A man who redeems a ticket must make affidavit that he was the purchaser. This doesn't appear to bother some persons. There is many a ticket that never finds its way back to the rightful owner.

Some individuals always are losing things. These repeaters come to be well known to the lost and found department. There is one woman, a commuter, who loses her handbag on an average of once a week. When she doesn't lose the bag, she loses something out of it. Men are likely to leave wrist watches in washrooms. They also leave knives, pencils and on parlor or sleeping cars. Sleeping cars also produce pajamas, purses and wallets. Many travelers have a habit of slipping a wallet inside the pillowcase. A lot of them leave it there. * * *

Enough spectacles and eye-glasses are left behind to start a store. You might think that a person who used glasses would miss them, but it isn't so. Musical instruments, books, briefcases, vanity boxes, soap dishes, razors, hair brushes, combs, overshoes, rings, pins, necklaces, pipes, portable phonographs, all are left behind.

* * *

I tried to check up on common honesty. It seems that 85 per cent of such articles as bags and coats are returned. When it cames to pencils, pens and umbrellas, the average drops to about 50 per cent. Such articles seem to lack individuality. The finder frequently walks off with them. After all, one fountain pen looks pretty much like another. Tickets also are a bad risk.

Marital Mixups Leave Reno Cold

Reno, Nev .- Almost anything in the matrimonial line can happen in this gay little city-and frequently does. Nuptial entanglements of the most singular nature are often found and are viewed with good natured tolerance by the townsfolk. There is, for example, the case of an insurance agent who has been married 19 times and is on the most friendly terms with practically all of his exwives. This man is not attempting to establish a matrimonial record, it just happens. The affairs of one couple were so involved they both came here to straighten them out. The pair engaged adjoining apartments and told neighbors they were here to divorce their respective spouses with the intention to marry each other. She cooked his meals and they chummed dence period which is necessary. When the residence was established she secured a divorce from her husband, her companion here was granted an annulment of his marriage, and the two married each other again. It was learned she had married a second time under the belief her former husband was dead, and then found he was still alive, so to avoid embarrassment and make everything legal, they came to Reno.

But perhaps the most curious marital entanglement is that concerning two families who still live in perfect harmony directly across the street from each other.

The husband of the first family fell in love with the wife in the second and yet each loved their own children. there being two children in the first and three in the second. So the huspens. Jewelry is almost always left around together during the 90-day resi- band divorced his wife, who was per-

The two couples exchanged spouses, the man of the first family taking one child with him and the mother in the second family taking two children with her. The children all play together and attend the same school

Kilmainham Jail Now

Merely Historic Relic The Kilmainham jail, Ireland, which has played a prominent part in Irish history, has been abandoned finally as a place of detention and handed over to the Dublin county ccuncil for other disposition. The graves of two men executed there after the Phoenix murders in 1882 are indicated by stone slabs now overgrown with weeds, and marks on the wall testify to the spot on which the leaders of the Easter 1916 uprising met their death. Frank Teeling, while awaiting execution there after the killing of fourteen British officers in November, 1920, was rescued from the jail under dramatic circumstances. Charles Stewart Parnell's room is still pointed out, and a white stone set in the wall shows where the scaffold was erected for the execution of Gen Thomas E. Burke, Irish-American officer, who came over to take charge of the Fenian forces in Tipperary more than sixty years ago. On the prison walls are the names of John Dillon, Thomas Seaton, William O'Brien and William Redmond, father of the present Irish M. P., who fell fighting in Flanders in 1917.

British Inheritance Laws

The British law of primogeniture is still in force. Under this law all real estate goes to the eldest son except for the dower right of the widow, which expires at her death. In the case of money, a man may leave his money where he wishes with the exception that he cannot divert from the estate any money proceeding from that source. In the event of a man's dying without will leaving money alone, it would be divided among the children, subject to the dower right of the widow.

Midsummer Traveling

The dust, heat and humidity of railroad traveling in summer will be removed by a new system which cleans and tempers the air. It is calculated to cool a car from 10 to 15 degrees below outside temperature on the hottest and most humid day. Since it also removes excess humidity from the air, the effect on the passengers will be even more refreshing and cooling than the thermometer indicates, while excessive chilling will be avoided.

McDonald believes that the animal became encased in the Columbia glacier and slowly was carried to the sea with the movement of the Glacier island in the past centuries.

Reports of the animal or reptile were regarded dubiously here until investigating parties went to the island to view it. Many were of the opinion that the report was the outgrowth of some native's superstitious imagination. Dr. Charles E. Bunnell, president of the Alaska College of Agriculture, at Fairbanks, was requested

Men of letters in this vicinity were at loss to explain what kind of animal or reptile it was. Dinosaurs were not known to have reached Alaskan regions. No trace of one ever has been found there.

The description of the creature was given in detail by McDonald, who said it was 24 feet long, with a 14-foot tail which started at the rib section. The body back of its head to the end of the rib section was 6 feet long; head, 59 inches long; snout from end to center of the forehead, 39 inches; width midsection, 11 inches; circumference, 29 inches; the length of the vertebrae in center, 7 inches; vertebrae consists of three blades, top blade, 14 inches long, side blades of 12 inches each.

Continuing McDonald reported a flipper was found on each side of the body behind the head measuring 40 inches long and 8 inches wide. The flippers, he said, have three joints with five fingers; the width of the skeleton at the widest part was 38 inches. The skeleton was estimated to weigh 1,000 pounds. No sign of teeth was found. The flesh on the body resembled horseflesh; its head was much like that of an elephant.

Only a small portion of the body had meat on it.

he said to me that during 30 years he did not recall that he had ever directly received a word of praise from his superior officer. He knew that if he were ever called to the president's office it would be that he might have pointed out to him something that was wrong. The president never called anyone to commend him. He didn't believe in praise. His theory was that a man should do his best, and, having done that, he had done no more than should rightly be expected of him, and so was entitled to neither praise nor recognition of any sort. If his men did well they were never told so, but they knew that if they were not working up to the standards which he set, the fact would be called to their attention.

It isn't at all strange that there was head during all these years, and yet, discontent in his organization, that he was disliked, and that those from whom he should have co-operation and sympathy and love even gave him none of these things.

It was the king in one of Milne's poems, a man of simple tastes, he claimed, who asked for nothing special excepting that he liked a little butter with his bread. He wasn't satisfied with being merely fed. He could easily have been properly nourished with the bread that was furnished him, but he wanted something that gave zest and taste to his eating. The most of us feel the same way about work. It is praise well spread on which furnishes the butter to the common bread of toil with which our days are filled. Without it we work with less enthusiasm, we grow discontented and restless.

I know another man quite unlike Sanders' boss, and very much more successful. When one of his men does a good piece of work he tells him so. More than that, he generally writes him a note so that his words of commendation may be reread and re-enjoyed and then taken home to the family that they, too, may get pleasure from the complimentary words. He thanks men when they do him a service; he recognizes efficiency and loyalty and effective service, and he does so freely and ungrudgingly. He never takes credit to himself for what others have done. His men adore him and would work their fingers to the bone, if need be, to win his praise. (C), 1931, Western Newspaper Union.)

THE STORY

With his English wife, Cather-ine, and son, Jeems, Henry Bu-lain, French settler in Canada in 1749, cultivates a farm adjacent to the Tonteur seigneurie. As the to the Tonteur seigneurie. As the story opens the Bulains are re-turning from a visit to the Ton-teurs. Catherine's wandering brother, Hepsibah, meets them with presents for the family. To Jeems he gives a pistol, bidding him perfect himself in marksman-bie. ship. Hepsibah fears for the safety of the Bulains in their isolated position. Jeems fights with Paul Tache, cousin of Toinette Tonteur, whom they both adore. Next day Jeems calls at the Tonteur home and apologizes for brawling in front of Toinette. The Tonteurs go to Quebec. Four years pass. War between Brit-ain and France flames. Jeems returns from a hunt to find his home burned and his father and mother slain. He goes to the seigneurie and finds the manor destroyed and Tonteur and his servants dead.

-11-Against this clouding of his senses he felt himself struggling as if swimming in an empty space. He picked up his hatchet and his bow and rose to his feet. He had not lost sound of the mill wheel even when Toinette's sobbing had seemed to be at his side. It was crying at him now, but before he turned toward it his eyes rested on Tonteur's wooden peg. It was half cut off, a mark of grim humor on the part of a butcher. The mill wheel was forcing his attention to that fact. "Look-look"-it said, and then repeated the old song, calling him an English beast.

He faced it in a flash of resentment, not because of the wheel alone but on account of what lay at his feet and what he knew he would find nearer to the walls of the manor. His mind was hurling anathema at the wheel. He wanted to tell it that it lied. In this hush of death he wanted to cry out that he was not of the murderous breed who had sent the killers. Proof was over there, in the valley which at last was well named. His mother. His father. His Uncle Hepsibah, Not one of them were dead by its hand. He had been left alive-by chance. That was proof. The wheel was wrong. It lied.

He looked at Tonteur again, strengthening himself to go a little farther and find Toinette. He knew how it would be. Toinette's young body, even more pitiful than his mother's. He forced himself to turn toward the smoldering walls. / Toinette-dead His father might die, and Tonteur, and all the rest of the world-but these two, his mother and Toinette, inseparable in his soul forever, the vitab

If the hatchet had found a brain, it would have been Toinette's. She faced him as he came, holding the musket which she had fired through a slit in the wall as if she still possessed faith in its power to defend her. Her eyes had in them a touch of madness. Yet she was so straight and tense, waiting for death, that she did not seem to be wholly possessed by fear or terror. Something unconquerable was with her, the soul of Tonteur himself struggling in her fragile breast to make her unafraid to die and giving to her an aspect of defiance. This courage could not hide the marks of her torture. Death had miraculously left her flesh untouched in passing, yet she stood crucified in the mill room. Expecting a savage, she recognized Jeems. The musket fell from her hands to the floor with a dull crash, and she drew back as if retreating from one whose presence she dreaded more than that of a Mohawk, until her form pressed against the piled-up bags of grain, and she was like one at bay. The cry for vengeance which was on Jeems' lips broke in a sobbing breath when he saw her. He spoke her name, and Toinette made no response except that she drew herself more closely to the sacks. Odd's toenails clicked on the wooden floor as gers relaxed about the helve. With a cry of triumph, she raised it, but before the blow could descend she sank in a crumpled heap upon the floor. Even then her almost unconscious lips were whispering their denunciation.

He knelt beside her and supported her head in his unwounded arm. For a moment it lay against his breast. Her eyes were closed, her lips were still. And Jeems, sick from her blows, remembered his mother's God and breathed a prayer of gratitude because of her deliverance.

Then he bent and kissed the mouth that had cursed him.

CHAPTER VI

Propiet in

Toinette was alone when she awoke from the unconsciousness which had come to ease the anguish of her mind and body. It seemed to her she was coming out of sleep and that the walls which dimly met her eyes were those of her bedroom in the manor. That a truth whose evidence lay so horribly about her could be reality and not a dream broke on her senses dully at first and then with a swift understanding. She sat up expecting to see Jeems. But he was gone. She was no longer where she had fallen at her enemy's feet. But Jeems had made a resting place for her of empty bags and must have carried her to it. She shivered when she looked at the musket and the stain of blood on the floor. She had tried to kill him. And he had gone away, leaving her alive!

As had happened to Jeems, something was burned out of her now. It had gone in the sea of darkness which had swept over her, and she rose with an unemotional calmness, as if the tower room with its dust and cobwebs and store of ripened grain had become her cloister. Passion had worn itself away. If a thought could have slain, she would still have wreaked her vengeance on Jeems, but she would not have touched the musket again that lay on the floor.

She went to the head of the stairs and looked down. The son of the English woman had left no sign except the drip of blood that made a trail on the steps and out of the door. Exultation possessed her as she thought how nearly she had brought to the Bulains the same shadow of death which they and their kind had brought to her. The thrill was gone in a moment. The red drops fascinated her, painted brightly by the sun. Jeems Bulain-out there with her dead! The boy her mother had tried to make her regard with bitterness and dislike from childhood-a man grown into an English monster! She struggled to bring back her power to hate and her desire to kill, but the effort she made was futile. She fol-sparks which had kept his own heart beating-how could they die while he lived? He advanced, pausing over one of the slaves, a woman almost unclothed, inky black except the top of her head, which was red where her scalp was gone. In the crook of her arm was her scalpless infant. White, black, women, babies-the loveliness of girlhood-it made no difference. Jeems scanned the earth beyond her, and where the smoke lay in a white shroud he saw a small, slim figure which he knew was Toinette. Another young body might have lain in the same way, its slenderness crumpled in the same manner, a naked arm revealed dimly under its winding sheet of smoke. But he knew this was Toinette. The dizzying haze wavered before his eyes again, and he put out his hand to hold it back. Toinette. Only a few steps from him. Dead, like his mother.

Odd went ahead of him halfway to the still form and stopped. He sensed something Jeems could not see or feel through the smoke mist which undulated before their eyes. Warning of impending danger confronted the dog, and he tried to pass it to his master. In that moment, a shot came from the mill, and a flash of pain darted through Jeems' arm. He was flung backward and caught himself to hear echoes of the explosion beating against the forested hills and the wheel at the top of the mill screaming at him. He answered the shot by dropping his bow and dashing toward the mill. Death might easily have met him at the threshold, but nothing moved in the vaultlike chamber he had entered, and there was no sound in it except that of his own breath and his racing heart. Odd went to the flight of narrow steps which led to the tower room and told Jeems that what they sought was there. Jeems ran up, his hatchet raised to strike. He must have been an unforgettable and terrifying object as he appeared above the floor into the light which forced its way through the dusty glass of three round windows over his head. There must even have been a little of the monster about him. He had left some of his garments with his mother and father, and his arms and shoulders were bare. Char and smoke and the stain of earth had disfigured him. His face appeared to be painted for slaughter and a greenish fire glittered in the eyes that were seeking for an enemy. Blood dripped to the

Specialists Seeking to Extend Use of Honey

Ancient literature, telling of the adaptions of honey to suit the varying tastes and needs of past centuries, provides clues which scientists are now following to revive old uses and to develop the present possibilities of the product.

The early Romans in their writings often mentioned the honeybee and honey. Among the products they mentioned frequently are water honey, salt-water honey, water mead, rose honey, honey foam, and honey vine-

The United States Department of Agriculture is studying the chemical properties of honey and methods of inducing chemical changes in it that will open the field for new honey products. Specialists are perfecting methods of making honey candy, and some manufacturers already have secret processes for making this confection. Many housekeepers now use honey to sweeten beverages, cereals, and cakes and generally in cooking. It is also used as a sirup on waffles and hot cakes. Eminent physicians proclaim that honey contains the most beneficial of the sugars.

"I WAS hurt when Betty called me old-fashioned for using a wash-board. But now I'm so grateful to her for telling me about Rinso! It saves me so much work on washday. I don't scrub or boil any more vet I get whiter, brighter clothes than ever! Now I wouldn't think of using any soap but Rinso!"

Keeps colors bright

In Rinso's thick, creamy suds dirt loosens—soaks out. No scrubbing. That saves the clothes—saves mending — keeps colors bright and newlooking.

Even in hardest water, Rinso gives twice as much suds, cup for cup, as lightweight, puffed-up soaps. Lively, lasting suds. Wonderful in washing machines too; the makers of 39 famous washers recommend Rinso.

The vines are said to be vigorous and productive with the fuuit very uniform in shape and

When placed alongside the common American forcing type, Geneva won immediate preference even at much higher prices.

NEW ROAD MAINTENANCE BILL IS INTRODUCED BY

REP. FRED C. HOLBECK

"House Bill No. 25 and No. 26, which was introduced by me Janu-ary 27th, is the culmination of three ary 27th, is the culmination of three years of effort to find a way to relieve the small home owners, and especially the farmers, of part of the load of taxation that he has been laboring under, and it has for at any time within six months afits final object the complete main-tenance of all highways in the State out of the gas tax funds," said Representative Fred C. Holbeck in c. cc.munication to the Tawas llorald this week.

"This bill provides that the county shall take over all the township roads within a period of five years, 20% each year, and to provide money for the counties to do this work with. $2,000,000 is given the counties the first year, $2,500,000 counties the first year, $2,500,000 the second year, $3,000,000 the third year, $3,500,000 the fourth year, $4,000,000 the fifth year, and $4,000,000 each year thereafter.

"It is not expected that the counties will improve all the roads taken over each year. In fact, I suppose there are some roads that never wil be fully improved, but it is expected that the counties will be able to im-prove a certain mileage each year, as money is available, until all the roads that really need improving will be taken care of.

"The money provided in this bill will be apportioned to the counties in proportion to the non-improved ileage, and will be in addition to the monies now being received by the counties, out of the Weight and Gas tax. Our northern counties ought to receive between $30,000 and $35,000 the first year out of this special fund, and this amount will be increased each year until the fifth year, when the amount received ought to be around $70,000 and $75,000, and according to the of the bill, this amount will continue to come to each county cach year thereafter.

"At the end of five years, on ac-count of there being no township roads, there will be no more need of raising money for highway pur-roses by the townships. Of course, the counties will still have the right to raise money for road purposes and undoubtedly will exercise this right for a few years, or until fur-ther provision is made to pay the whole maintenance cost out of the Cas Tay.

Gas Tax. "If this bill can be made law, and I believe it will be, it will be a mighty big stroke towards lowering taxes, especially in the rural com-munities."

twenty ball and roller bearings

EVIDENCE of the high quality built into the new Ford is the extensive use of ball and roller bearings. There are more than twenty in all - an unusually large number. Each bearing is adequate in size and carefully selected for the work it has to do.

At some points in the Ford chassis you will find ball bearings. At others, roller bearings are used regardless of their higher cost. The deciding factor is the performance of the car.

The extensive use of ball and roller bearings in the new Ford insures smoother operation, saves gasoline, increases speed and power, gives quicker pick-up, decreases noise, and gives greater reliability and longer life to vital moving parts.

Other outstanding features that make the new Ford a value far above the price are the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield, silent, fully enclosed four-wheel brakes, four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves, three-quarter floating rear axle, Rustless Steel, the extensive use of fine steel forgings, and unusual accuracy in manufacturing.
