100 PEOPLE ENJOY PARENT-TEACHERS MEET

Approximately one hundred people attended the February meeting of the local Parent-Teacher Association which was held at the school building, Thursday evening, February 12. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Dease. During the business session, two communications from the State Parent-Teacher Association were read. One communication dealt with the "summer round up" for children, and the other with the matter of sending delegates to the state convention and payment of dues to the state organization. It was decided to carry on the "round up" as last summer, and the secretary was instructed to forward dues to the state treasurer. The matter of sending a delegate to the state convention was postponed for consideration at the March meeting.

At the conclusion of the business meeting, Mrs. Horton took charge of the meeting, and the following program was presented:

Singing, High School Girls' Glee Club; Reading of Article of Founder's Day, Mrs. Dease; Reading Contest, representatives from Seventh and Eighth Grades; Address, Dr. Ketchik; First Aid Demonstration, Miss Cowgill; Singing, High School Boys' Quartette.

The girls of the glee club sang two songs, "Sundown" and "One Fleeting Hour," and were heartily applauded. The reading contest proved to be an interesting and somewhat novel event. Jean Robinson and Patricia Braddock secured first and second place, respectively, for the seventh grade, and Mildred Quick and Annie Metcalf for the eighth grade. Dr. Ketchik stressed the importance of the care of children's teeth, bringing out the old adage, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." He also spoke of the importance of caring for the first teeth of the child, in spite of a general opinion to the contrary. The "sixth year molar" was discussed, and shown to be the first of the permanent teeth. Miss Cowgill was assisted in her first aid demonstration by some of the Boy Scouts and Campfire Girls, and held the interest of all. This was the first public appearance of the boys' quartette, and judging from the amount of noise made by the audience at the close of the first song, it was a most welcome appearance.

After the program had been completed, a social hour was enjoyed, and much praise is due the social committee for its efforts.

The grammar room was represented by the most parents, and so it was given the custody of the statue for another month. The next meeting will be Thursday evening, March 12. Mr. Forsten has charge of the program, and the refreshments will be taken care of by Mrs. Tuttle, Mrs. Giddings and Mrs. Moore. Better prepare to attend.

HOTEL IOSCO NARROWLY ESCAPES BAD FIRE

Fire of unknown origin started at about two o'clock Wednesday morning in the Hotel Iosco, but was extinguished before it did any great damage.

The opportune return at two o'clock of Scotty McDonald, salesman for the Roach Motor Sales, who lives at the hotel, prevented what might have been a bad fire. McDonald, while preparing to go to his room, smelled the odor of burning wood. He awakened the owner, E. J. Martin, and pulled the fire department fire alarm. After a search was made, the fire was located in a partition between a bedroom and a room formerly used as the kitchen on the ground floor.

A hole was broken through the plaster and the contents of a hand fire extinguisher turned on flames. A second extinguisher had secured, and while the smoke had become so thick that it was suffocating, McDonald played on the flames until the fire was under control. The fire department quickly arrived but it was then unnecessary to use water.

SENIORS SECURE TALKIE OF FAMOUS BOOK

The Senior class of the local school has secured the picture, "Eyes of the World," taken from the tremendously popular story by Harold Bell Wright, and will show it to the public three evenings of next week; that is, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, February 24, 25 and 26. More than one million and a quarter copies of this book have been sold to date. The two main parts are played by John Holland, who played opposite Lupe Velez in "Hell Harbor," and Una Merkel, D. W. Griffith's sensational find in "Abraham Lincoln." The price of admission will be forty cents for adults and fifteen cents for children under twelve. The net proceeds will be used to defray the cost of Commencement. This is a good cause and a good picture, and merits the patronage of the Tawas City people. Come!

TAWAS CITY SCHOOL NOTES

High School
Don't forget the Senior benefit show, "Eyes of the World," Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings of next week. This picture is taken from the famous book by that name written by Harold Bell Wright. Admission, 40c and 15c.

The advanced Civics class had their first series of tests Wednesday composed by the company which publishes the text. As these tests have been used by many students throughout the United States, each can easily tell his relative standing. We are not cognizant at the present time of the results, but will be able to give them to you next week.

Plans are being made for a general school entertainment at the State Theatre on Friday evening, March 20. This is an entertainment in which all departments of the school will participate, and consequently one in which many parents will be interested.

The February meeting of the local P. T. Association was well attended. An excellent program was furnished by the program committee, and the social committee also did itself proud. The grammar room, having the most parents present, received the statue for the succeeding month. The next meeting will be held Thursday evening, March 12. All should prepare to come.

The second year typing class prepared the programs for the oratorical contest.

HALE CHAPTER, O. E. S., HOLDS VERY ENJOYABLE VALENTINE PARTY

The Valentine party of the Hale Chapter, O. E. S., held on Thursday evening of last week was an enjoyable affair and well attended. The hall was prettily decorated in Valentine colors. Large red hearts numbering the tables were suspended from the ceiling. Fifteen tables of progressive pedro were played.

Lunch was served at 12 o'clock, followed by the heart clinic conducted by Dr. Cupid Valentine and three attendant nurses. After comparison of the charts prepared by the patients, further examination was made by the large chart method. Prizes were awarded to those who located closest the normal line, Mrs. J. H. Johnson and Clarence Peck. Those farthest away were Mrs. Forrest Streeter and Ted Thompson. First prizes in pedro were awarded Mrs. Clarence Peck and A. E. Greve; consolation, Mrs. J. H. Johnson and Mr. Peter.

The Misses Olive Greve and Dorothy Brown, assisted by the Misses Elaine Lucas and Olive Streeter, composed the committee in charge. They were dressed in white, with white head bands decorated with a red heart.

Mr. and Mrs. Seth Thompson of Whittemore, Mr. and Mrs. George Christie of Prescott, Mr. and Mrs. Dum of Port Huron, and the Misses Pauline Hay and Ruth Moore of Rose City were noted among the out-of-town guests.

LUCE-KUNZE

Elmer Kunze of East Tawas was united in marriage to Miss Gertrude Luce of Saginaw on Saturday, February 7, at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Harry Anker, in Saginaw. Rev. Montanas performed the ceremony.

Mrs. Kunze is prominent in club and business circles in Saginaw. She was active in the Business and Professional Women's Association and the Catherine Daniels Federation of Clubs. She has been connected for some years with the Consumers Power company in Saginaw.

Out of town guests at the wedding were, Mrs. Rose Anker of East Tawas, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Black of Bay City, and Mrs. J. K. Swanson of Minneapolis, Minn.

After a wedding trip in Florida, Mr. and Mrs. Kunze will make their home in East Tawas.

TWENTIETH CENTURY CLUB

The annual meeting of the Twentieth Century Club was held at the City Hall on Saturday, February 14, with the president, Mrs. Braddock, presiding. Election of officers was the order of the day, with the following results:

President, Mrs. Emmelle Mark; First Vice-President, Mrs. Mae Dease; Second Vice-President, Mrs. Muriel Horton; Secretary, Mrs. Jessie McLean; Treasurer, Miss Lottie VanHorn; Delegate to Federation, Mrs. Elizabeth Tuttle.

At the close of the business session, a delicious lunch was served by Mrs. Elizabeth Tuttle. The next meeting of the club will be held on February 28 at the City Hall.

GRETA GARBO HAS ALLURING ROLE IN "INSPIRATION"

The Greta Garbo of languishing loves, of exotic boudoirs, of passionate glamour—the Garbo who knew so well on the silent screen, comes back to us with more power than ever in "Inspiration," her new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring vehicle which comes to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, Saturday and Sunday, February 21-22.

This glittering new talking picture, ably directed by Clarence Brown, eclipses her previous vocal efforts and, in the opinion of this reviewer, stands as the greatest triumph of her career. Hers is a human characterization, devoid of the slightest artificial ring, lifting the role of the Parisian demi-mondaine to dramatic heights.

Robert Montgomery furthers his hold on screen popularity by his splendid work opposite the star. Lewis Stone heads the supporting cast in his usual capable manner. He portrays the role of a staunch friend to whom she comes in a moment of sorrow. Splendid work is also done by Marjorie Rambeau, Beryl Mercer and John Miljan.

If it is possible to increase the number of Garbo fans, "Inspiration" is the picture that will do it, for it contains that certain something that makes people forget they are sitting in a theatre. This actress remains unique among them all.

CELEBRATE 50TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Giles W. Teed, pioneer settlers of Plainfield township, Iosco county, celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary last Friday, February 13th.

Giles W. Teed of Ionia county was married to Miss Ida Barber of Linden on February 13, 1881. They lived in Ionia and Montcalm counties for five years after their marriage, then moved to Iosco county, in 1886, arriving on Thanksgiving Day.

The country was then new, and Plainfield had few settlers at that time, but with the courage so characteristic of our early pioneers, they bought land covered with green timber and carved a home from the wilderness. Theirs was a real home, a place people loved to visit, and where teachers of that early day loved to board because all who entered there were as one family and made to feel at home. Later Mr. Teed bought and partly cleared another farm, erected buildings, and this is now their home.

They were instrumental in organizing the first church in Hale, and have been active workers during the forty-five years they have lived in that vicinity.

Owing to the illness of Mrs. Teed, the event of their anniversary could not be celebrated in the usual way, but the happy couple were the recipients of over seventy cards of congratulations from friends far and near, one coming by air mail from California, also numerous gifts, including twenty dollars in money, fifteen of which was in gold, presented by the Dorcas Society of the Hale Baptist church and other friends, showing the esteem in which they are held here and elsewhere.

Their hearts go out in grateful appreciation to all those who so kindly remembered them on their fiftieth wedding anniversary.

BING MAKES BOWLING SCORE LAST WEEK

Eugene Bing scored 278 at bowling last week, a high mark at the local alley which will stand for some time. Dr. C. F. Smith, Wm. Hatton and Scotty McDonald placed scores above the 200 mark during the week ending last Saturday.

Dr. Smith is leading this week with a high of 222. Mrs. C. F. Smith is leading the ladies with a score of 107. Cash prizes of $2.00 for high at ten pins and $1.00 for five pins are offered each week. A box of candy is given to the lady making the highest number of points.

EARLY CALIFORNIA FILM AT FAMILY NEXT WEEK

Richard Barthelmess and "The Lash" company worked on location near Calabasas, California, for several days shooting exterior scenes of the First National Vitaphone romance of early California, which comes to the Family Theatre next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

The village of Spanish Gulch as described in the novel by Lanier and Virginia Bartlett was reproduced on a large scale and it is the locale of much of the spectacular action of the story.

It is on this location that 1,500 head of cattle were used. A stampede in which the cattle crash berserk through Spanish Gulch is one of the smashing episodes of "The Lash."

Barthelmess, enacts the role of a proud Spanish don who adopts banditry in order to fight his people's oppressors. It offers him a role of color, romance and dash.

NATIONAL GYPSUM DOWNED BY EAST TAWAS MERCHANTS

The East Tawas Merchants downed the fast National Gypsum five on Wednesday night at the Community Building to the tune of a 24 to 18 score. The Nationals started the scoring and led until the second quarter, when the East Tawas boys grabbed the lead and held it throughout the remainder of the contest. Youngs and Norris were tied at scoring, each sinking ten points. They were followed closely by Noel, who accounted for nine of his mates' points.

The same evening saw the Whittemore and East Tawas high school boys and girls compete. Whittemore girls bested East Tawas girls in the first of these games with a 16 to 8 score. The boys' contest was a bitter battle which extended into one overtime period, and resulted in favor of East Tawas. Score 21-19.

TWO-THIRDS OF RIGHT-OF-WAY SECURED

About two-thirds of the property owners have donated the right-of-way for the Shore Road and this is expected of all where the damage is small compared to benefits.

This road does not cost the taxpayers or abutting property owners anything. This fact is quite a contrast to the building of a pavement in a city or even a Covert road when those abutting same are assessed heavily. We mention this to call your attention to the fact that while the county and the state do not want to see anyone damaged, they do not expect the tables to be turned as in some cases where instead of co-operating, the property owner assumes it is his duty to collect a little money.

NANCY CARROLL AGAIN GETS BIG DRAMATIC PART

When Nancy Carroll appeared in "The Devil's Holiday" at the Paramount Theatre in New York early last summer, the metropolitan newspapers were as one in citing her capabilities as a remarkably talented dramatic actress.

This public appreciation of her gift for the more weighty type of character-portrayal led Paramount to decide upon "Laughter" as her next dramatic release.

"Laughter" comes to the State Theatre next Sunday and Monday. It is an original story written by Douglas Doty and Harry D'Abbadie D'Arrest.

In the play Nancy is seen as the wealthy girl who marries a very wealthy old man, her "second choice" after her young lover forsakes her in favor of an exciting trip to Paris. Upon his return to New York her "first love" becomes a pal to Nancy's husband but slyly attempts to make advances to her. The dramatic and thrilling events which follow are the high points of interest in this powerful show.

The part of the philandering young lover is played by Fredric March, the capable young leading man who deserted the stage for the talkies about two years ago and who has since achieved considerable distinction as a portrayor of emotional roles.

Others in the cast of "Laughter" are Glenn Anders, famous for his work in "Strange Interlude" on the Broadway stage; Frank Morgan, star of "Topaze," Broadway legitimate success; Diane Ellis, Leonard Carey, Worthington Romaine, and others.

I. O. O. F. HOLDS BENEFIT FOR JACKSON HOME

Last Saturday evening the local Odd Fellow and Rebekah lodges met in joint meeting to dedicate their Valentine talents in a benefit for the Odd Fellows home at Jackson.

A banquet was served by the Rebekah branch at 6 o'clock with a record attendance. At 7:30 the Samaritan Triplets from Detroit, accompanied with a bill of attachment, entered and, contrary to the statutes made and provided, convulsed the large gathering with their funny antics and bewildering wit. It had been previously announced that the Samaritan Quartette, composed of Herbert Brennen, Everett Phipps, Ivan LaFontaine and Roy Geist, would be the entertainers, but owing to the severe illness of the last named gentleman, it was necessary to quickly re-arrange their part, hence the notorious triplexes, the first three men named.

Past Grand Master Hanson gave a short address on the Odd Fellows Home, telling in detail of its workings and thanking the local folks for their continued interest in this worthy endeavor.

Bruce McDougall, a member of the Grand Lodge By-Laws committee, delivered greetings from the Detroit area. Mrs. McDougall gave a fine greeting from the Samaritan ladies, and Wayne Reise told the Tawas people how much he enjoyed being present as the "steering" member of the visiting delegation.

George Klump, of the Tawas Marvell company, presented the local lodge a large and beautiful Valentine plaque as a memorial to the late friend and brother, A. J. Merschel, which was accepted in behalf of the lodge by Ernest Cecil, Noble Grand.

Register of Deeds F. F. Taylor, the oldest Odd Fellow along the shore, being a member for 48 years, presented John Goodall, with his twenty-five year emblem in well chosen words.

In a guessing contest Miss Edith Davey won the prize for at last solving that old and debated question, "How Old Is Ann?"

The members of the organization are now planning new things, one outstanding feature being the tentative visitation in the spring by the Third Degree staff of South Haven lodge. Willis Harrington, an old Tawas boy, will be with them. These prospective visitors from the "grape belt" of Michigan will be loyally entertained, and in return they promise action. At that time the Samaritan Quartette have promised to return with more wit and humor.

EAST TAWAS SCHOOL NEWS

Arithmetic drills by eight members of the second grade in charge of Miss Una Evensen featured the opening of the P. T. A. meeting on Monday evening. This was followed by "How the Story Grew," by Miss VanHorn's Dramatic Club. Both were very well received by the audience which filled the high school room. Miss Applin gave a report of the work of the committee on undernourished children. Thirty-five children under the sixth grade are having milk and graham wafers served each day. The cost to each child is fifteen cents weekly. Four out of this number being unable to pay, are cared for by the P. T. A. Alfred Gurley and Ruby Evans presented their views on the use of leisure time by the high school boy and girl. Ralph Harwood presented the view point of the young man out of school. Some very interesting points were brought out by the speakers, one of which was especially apt. Fraternal organizations support recreation rooms, bowling alleys and pool tables for the members but, in general, the young boys of the town have access to the public recreation rooms only. The discussion which followed showed a keen interest in the subject had been aroused among those present. A committee was appointed to look into the matter of arranging for recreation rooms for the young people.

The Board of Education and their wives, and the teachers enjoyed their second social function of the year in the American Legion hall Tuesday evening. The event started with a dinner, after which the radio and games were enjoyed. Even members of such an organization can forget their dignity and play like youngsters when the occasion demands it. Prizes were awarded for the various events. One of the objects of this organization is to forget the business of running a school and to get better acquainted through social activities. Twenty-four members were present.

Displaying clever ball handling, accurate shooting, plus extremely tall mer. Alpina Central was able to down the East Tawas basketeers.

Little Churches

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Let others sing of the ancient cathedrals of the Old world or the mighty structures, dedicated to religion, which are rising in some of the great population centers of this country. Mine be the theme of the "little churches" which are scattered throughout the United States, little white-painted frame churches that you find standing on a small plot of ground along some country road; little red brick churches, tucked away on some village side street; quaint little old churches which date from the earliest days of the communities in which they stand; little churches wherever they may be in which there is no man-made architectural magnificence to divert the mind of the worshiper when he comes into them from the busy world outside to commune with the Great Unseen.

Tourists may gaze in wonder at the splendor of metropolitan skyscraper churches, but it is doubtful if any of these great buildings will have the place in the hearts of so many people as does a little church out in Iowa. And that is because for more than 60 years a song familiar to thousands invites one to "Come to the church by the wildwood, Oh, come to the church in the vale." The Little Brown Church of song and story is located in northeastern Iowa, in the beautiful valley of the Red Cedar. It stands today among the same giant pines that were there when it was built back in Civil war days, in the wildwood which made the setting and provided the inspiration for the carol.

As a matter of fact the song, variously known as "The Church in the Wildwood" and "The Little Brown Church in the Vale," was not written about any church specifically. Its author, Dr. W. S. Pitts, a native of Wisconsin, received the inspiration for the song while on a visit in Iowa. He wrote the song at his home in Rock county, Wisconsin, but it was sung for the first time publicly in the now-famous Little Brown Church in the Vale, in Bradford, Iowa, two miles northeast of Nashua. How he came to write the song and how it came to be applied to this particular church and to make it famous is told in Doctor Pitts' own words, in a historical booklet, published by the Little Brown Church, as follows:

"One bright afternoon of a day in June, 1857, I first set foot in Bradford, Iowa, coming by stage from McGregor. My home was then in Wisconsin. The spot where 'The Little Brown Church' now stands was a setting of rare beauty. There was no church there then but the spot was there waiting for it. When back in my home I wrote the song, 'The Little Brown Church in the Vale.' I put the manuscript away.

"In the spring of 1862 I returned to Iowa and settled at Fredericksburg, inasmuch as my wife's people were there. In the winter of 1863-4 I taught a singing class in Bradford. We held our school in the brick building known as the Academy. In the years 1859 and 1860 the good people of Bradford were determined to build a church. I will not take time to tell of the trials, the disappointments and the successes that followed; suffice it to say, by the early winter of 1864 the building was ready for dedication.

"While I was holding the singing school, near its close in the spring, the class went one evening to the church. It was not then seated, but rude seats were improvised. My manuscript of the song I had brought with me from Wisconsin. It had never been sung before by anyone but myself. I sang it there. Soon afterwards I took the manuscript to Chicago, where it was published by H. M. Higgins. It won a speedy recognition locally and with the years won its way into the hearts of the people of the world.

"Soon after its publication the church at Bradford (which had been painted brown for want of money to buy better paint, some say) became known as 'The Little Brown Church in the Vale.' Under the circumstances what is more natural than the little church at Bradford, painted brown, and the song should be wedded and known as one and the same. Some people may try to rob the little church of its fame but as long as it stands it will be known as 'The Little Brown Church in the Vale.'"

At the time the Little Brown Church was built Bradford was a thriving town and the largest settlement in that part of the state except Dubuque and McGregor. Of the times, Rev. John K. Nutting, the pastor under whose ministry the building was erected, wrote: "We lived well. My salary was paid in products, at prices of which I could not complain. Wheat was 36 cents per bushel—mill close at hand. Best cuts of beef, 6 cents per pound. Potatoes never more than 25 cents per bushel—at planting time in the spring often given away. Other farm products were valued on the same scale. In winter, carcass pork, frozen, could sometimes be secured for 1 cent per pound. A threatened thaw would generally overwhelm the parsonage with 'spare-ribs.' Many (I with the rest) had sugar camps in the forest and made our own sugar. Others raised sorghum."

The church grew, and as a kind of by-product came Bradford academy. The school was housed better than the church, in a fine brick structure. Beginning in a small way, the school grew and did notable work, elevating the standard of education in the region around, so that at one time it was said that no territory of equal size in Iowa could claim so many people with a college education.

In 1868 the long-hoped-for railroad came and passed Bradford by, touching at Nashua two miles away and across the river. Bradford, the largest town for many miles, gradually became a town of the past, while Nashua grew to the dignity of a population of 1,000. Where Bradford once stood, the land was turned into farms.

The Little Brown church survived, however. This was on account of Doctor Pitts' song, mainly, for after it was taken to Chicago and published, jubilee singers took it up, concert companies carried it all over America and Europe, and it was heard in Australia, New Zealand and South America. For 20 years it was one of the popular songs of the country.

For some years after this the song was little in evidence, like the church. Then about 25 years ago the song had a revival of popularity and again began to be heard widely at religious meetings throughout the country.

Meantime, following Bradford's change from a town into open country, the Little Brown Church was abandoned. But the need of a place of worship caused it to be reopened and it was restored as nearly as possible to the way in which it was built. Thus for more than a quarter of a century it has been a real country church.

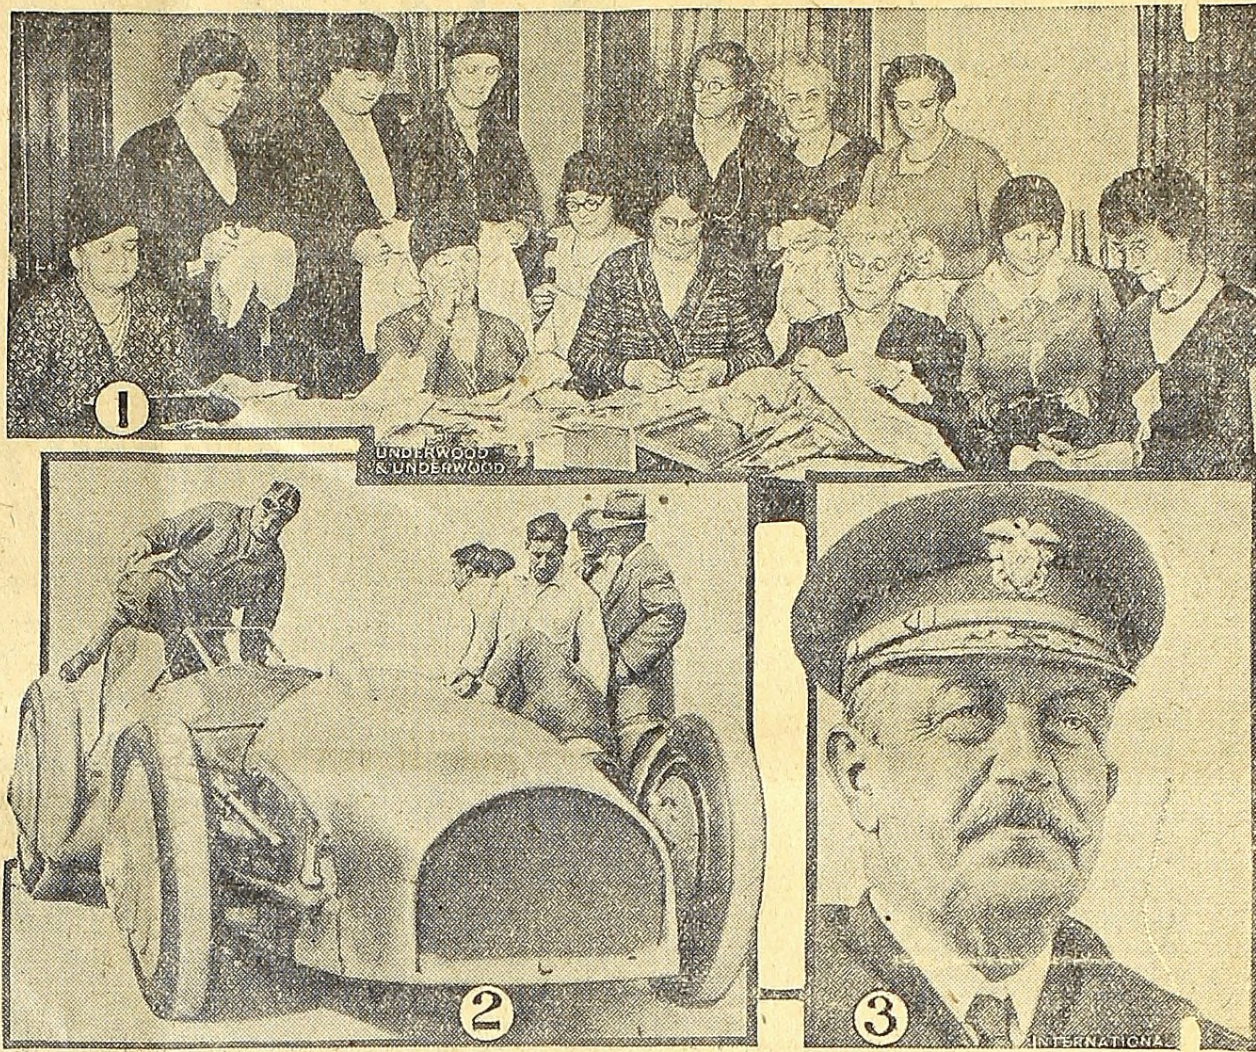

A little church which sprang into fame within recent years is a quaint old Quaker meeting house in Sandy Spring, Md., 20 miles from Washington, and it came into prominence when President Herbert Hoover attended services there. There was a particular reason for his going to that church. The President's biographers tell how Herbert Hoover is a descendant of Andrew Hoover, a stalwart colonial pioneer, who "held farms in the uplands of Maryland," meaning the vicinity of Sandy Spring. It was in this meeting house, built in 1817, that earlier generations of the Hoovers worshipped.

Off the coast of New Hampshire is a little church which is unique. It stands alone on Star Island, Isles of Shoals, ten miles from the mainland, which is said to be the only island in America dedicated entirely to religious services. Built in 1800, after the wooden meeting house was destroyed during the Revolution for fuel, this stone structure for 130 years has been the scene of worship by mothers, sisters and sweethearts, praying for the safe return of their loved ones, fishermen at sea.

At ten o'clock each night when all is hushed, the pilgrims place themselves in column formation. Lighted candles, encased in glass shades and swung from handles like lanterns, are passed out to them. Then the column silently winds its way up the rock-strewn path to the top of the hill where the little gray stone church with its old-fashioned pine pews, its cracked bell and the metal codfish on the belfry, stands. There by the dim light of the candles, the pilgrims inside the church and outside—for it is not large enough for all—bow their heads in prayer. Then voices are raised in the words of some appropriate hymn and after this brief service the column moves slowly down the hill again.

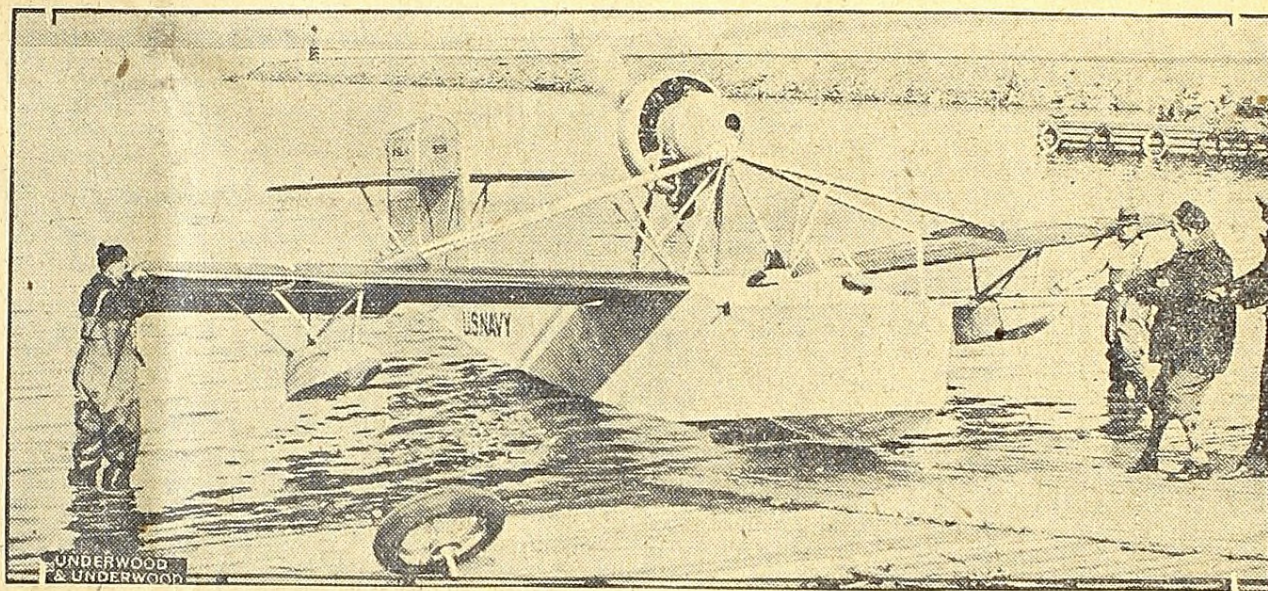

In naming the little churches there is one which should not be passed by without mention. On the top of Mount Casino, some two miles south of Covington, Ky., on the Highland pike, is what is said to be the smallest church in the world, since it is capable of accommodating a congregation of not more than three persons! This small brick structure was built in 1890 by some brothers of the Benedictine order, who used it as a shrine during the years they were engaged there in the making of sacramental wine. During the years of its use it contained an altar, the usual church candles, a crucifix and pews for the accommodation of three persons. But it is no longer used as a church, though still owned by St. Joseph's parish of Covington. It is now merely an out house, of the estate on which it is situated. (© 1931, Western Newspaper Union.)

Plan for Canal Across Nicaragua

Amy Engineers Chart Best Route and Sites for Locks and Dams.

Greytown, Nicaragua.—An American canal across Nicaragua, long a dream of shipping men and political and military strategists, will pass through a further planning stage this summer when United States army engineers will complete a thorough survey of the route and report an construction problems and probable cost, says the New York Times.

For months the engineers have been living in tropical jungles, dodging disease and watching out for insurrectionists while their diamond drills have been biting into the earth to show them where to put their dams and locks. Their survey, one of the most exhaustive studies of a canal problem ever made, has been based upon the experience gained through the building of the Panama canal, and upon the great increase in engineering technique since the Panama canal was completed.

The building of a canal across Nicaragua was considered feasible long before the shorter cut across Panama was begun; in fact, a private American company began construction there as long ago as 1887. There was a time when the United States came close to authorizing a Nicaragua canal, but—so it is said—a volcano began to smoke about that time and the government was persuaded to turn to the Panama route. Now the Nicaraguan project is again to the fore, because it is contended that the Panama canal will eventually be unable to handle all the ocean traffic between the Caribbean and the Pacific.

Safeguard for the Future.
The Panama canal can be improved to increase its capacity from 30,000,000 tons of traffic annually to 45,000,000 to 50,000,000 tons or perhaps slightly more, and it is not expected that so much tonnage will pass through it for ten or twenty years; but even now there are periods—such as when the fleet passes through—when the canal approaches seem crowded. A new canal would, it is asserted, provide indefinitely for the future, and would also give an alternative route in case of war and the destruction of now existing means of quick communication between the oceans. The effect of a Nicaraguan canal on the trade and development of the Central American republics, it is also predicted, would be beneficial.

The present survey, which has been carried out by Maj. Daniel I. Sultan, has been going forward with such precision that the topographical work has been completed and only some drilling remains to be done. Lieut.

Gen. Edgar Jadwin, chairman of the interoceanic canal board, and Sydney B. Williamson, senior civilian member of the board, will soon inspect the work.

It is understood that the San Juan valley route will be selected as the best. Although it is seven miles longer than the Desadeo route recommended by the Admiral Walker commission thirty years ago, it is believed to be more economical; the estimated cost of the canal by the valley route would be about $700,000,000.

Length of Valley Route.
The length of the canal proper by this route would be 172 miles. From Brito, the western terminus, the line of the canal would follow the valley of the Rio Grande to the western continental divide, 152 feet above the sea, which would be crossed by a cut. A flight of three locks, each 1,200 feet long and 125 wide, arranged as a unit at the western end of the cut, would raise ships to the level of Lake Nicaragua, which for working purposes (it varies with the seasons) is considered as 110 feet above the sea.

From the continental divide, the canal would follow the valley of the Las Lajas river to Lake Nicaragua, thus completing the first sixteen miles of the journey. The lake, an expanse of about 2,700 square miles, deep enough to afford navigation by ocean steamships in most of the portion affected by the canal project, would be utilized for seventy miles by the ships, the last fourteen of these miles being dredged to afford sufficient depth. It is estimated that 9,300,000 cubic feet of water would be drawn from the lake for each ship transit through the locks.

From the eastern end of the lake the route would be along the San Juan river, which is 119 miles long from where it leaves the lake to where it reaches the Caribbean at Greytown. In that distance the stream falls 102 feet from mean low lake to mean low sea level. In the upper fifty miles navigation is hampered by four rapids. By constructing a dam at Conchuda dam-site, fifty miles from the lake, the obstacle of these rapids could be overcome and the level of the lake raised five to seven feet to provide better navigation.

Lengthening the Lake.
The Conchuda dam-site has received favorable consideration. The spillway of a dam built there must be capable, according to a recent official statement from the army engineer headquarters at Granada, of discharging at least 100,000 second feet of water. The effect of the dam would be to add fifty miles to the lake portion of the canal route as well as provide a deeper channel.

The locks to carry the ships from lake to sea level on the Atlantic side would be three in number and of the same dimensions as those on the Pacific side, according to present plans. Together with excavations, they would carry the canal about thirty-six miles below the Conchuda dam.

After leaving the canal, ships would merely continue along the San Juan river to Graytown and the Caribbean. The south bank of the river, for a considerable distance, forms the boundary line between Nicaragua and its southerly neighbor, Costa Rica. Above twenty-five miles above Greytown the river divides, the bulk of the water flowing southeastward through Costa Rica as the Colorado river and only about one-tenth reaching the sea near Greytown as the San Juan river. In the event of the erection of a dam, a considerable portion of the Costa Rican jungle on the southern bank would have to be flooded.

Larger Locks.
The locks to be recommended by the Jadwin board are a great deal larger than those suggested by the Walker commission, which were to be only 85 feet wide and 800 feet long. In rejecting the Walker recommendations, the present engineers are not reflecting on those findings, made when conditions and engineering technique were different. This fact was pointed out by Maj. Gen. Lytle Brown, chief of engineers of the army, in a memorandum he prepared recently for the shipping board in Washington.

The army engineers at Granada likewise referred to the change in conditions during the last thirty years. "Larger ships and the greatly increased commerce that will use the canal require bigger and better harbors," their statement explained. "Locks must be larger and will require more extensive rock foundations. Curvature must be reduced in every way consistent with economy and sound engineering."

Monument on Grave in Honor of Mine Burro

Fairplay, Colo.—"Prunes," a burro that hauled ore in Colorado mines for 62 years, has a monument built over his grave on Main street here.

The aged burro, whose patient footsteps plodded through the history of Colorado, was shot recently when he lost all of his teeth, and became too feeble to eat.

He was buried with ceremony, and popular subscription erected a monument over the grave.

Modern methods have all but eliminated the burro from the mines of the states where once they were employed by the thousands.

KNITTED STRIPES AND NAVY SERGE THE STYLE FOR SPRING

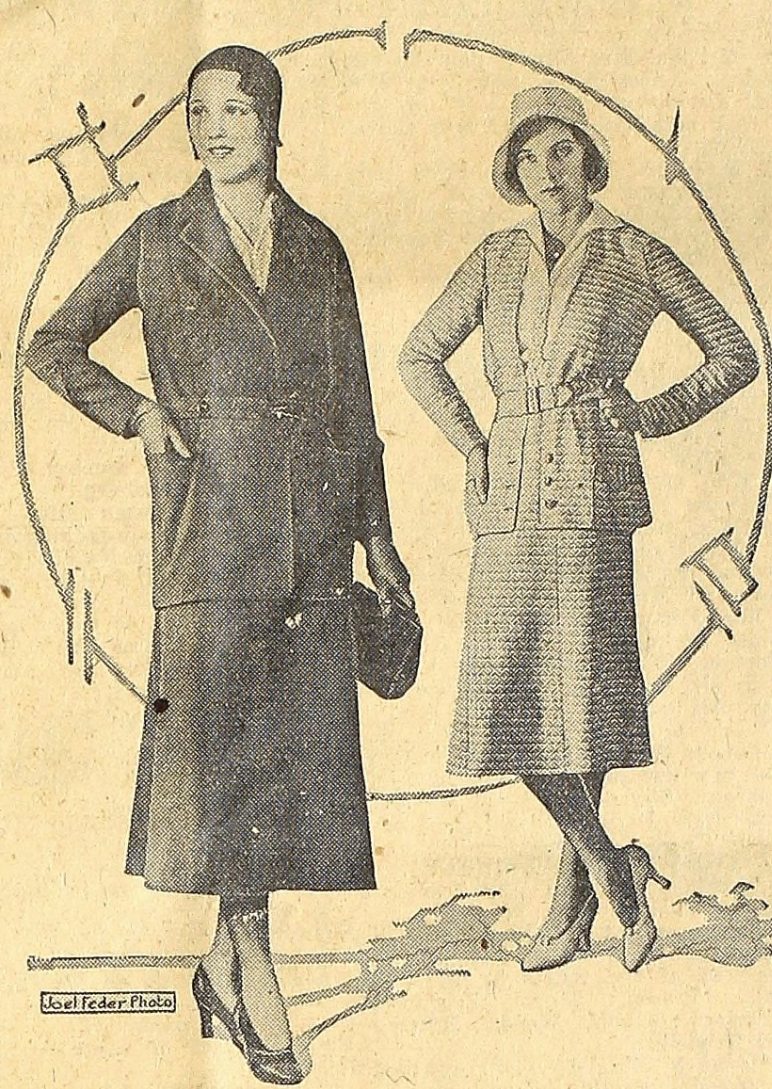

GOING suit hunting, are you? Yes, of course you are, that is if you have been tuning in on the message being broadcast throughout the world of fashion today, which declares that "the suit's the thing for spring."

Now that it is decided that your spring costume is to be a swagger jacket suit, the next question is as to whether it shall be knitted or tailored of some one or other of the new smart woolsens. Take a chance on either and you play safe.

If a fallueur of cloth is your choice, jot down on your shopping memoran-less pointed yoke made of flat crepe which employs a striking tri-color combination—orange, pistachio green and cream white. The jacket is tailored, the smartest styles copying the lines of the lumber-jack blouse.

Velvet Here to Stay.
The persistence of velvet in the spring mode, a fact emphasized at every recent style display of importance, is making a decided impression in the world of fashion. That velvet, from this time forth, will stay with us the year round, is a fact which none in da a reminder that a decided revival of navy blue is the forecast for spring. Not only does this apply to the tailored suit but to fashions in general. A whole range of blues are highlighted in the new fabrics with special accent on navy with white.

Evidently in creating the new styles for spring and summer the shoemaker and the hatmaker and the costume designer have held counsel as to this matter of navy blue. As a result of their "get-together" program it is a perfectly easy matter to match up one's navy cloth suit with a stunning chapeau, the same being true in regard to footwear for all the leading booteries are making a feature of dainty navy kid pumps also strap types.

The young woman in the foreground of the accompanying illustration proves that she is properly style-minded in that she decides upon a navy serge suit for spring developed along simplest lines. Her selection of accessories is faultless—a matching blue felt hat, fine navy kid pumps with tiny bows and a pocket-book also of navy kid.

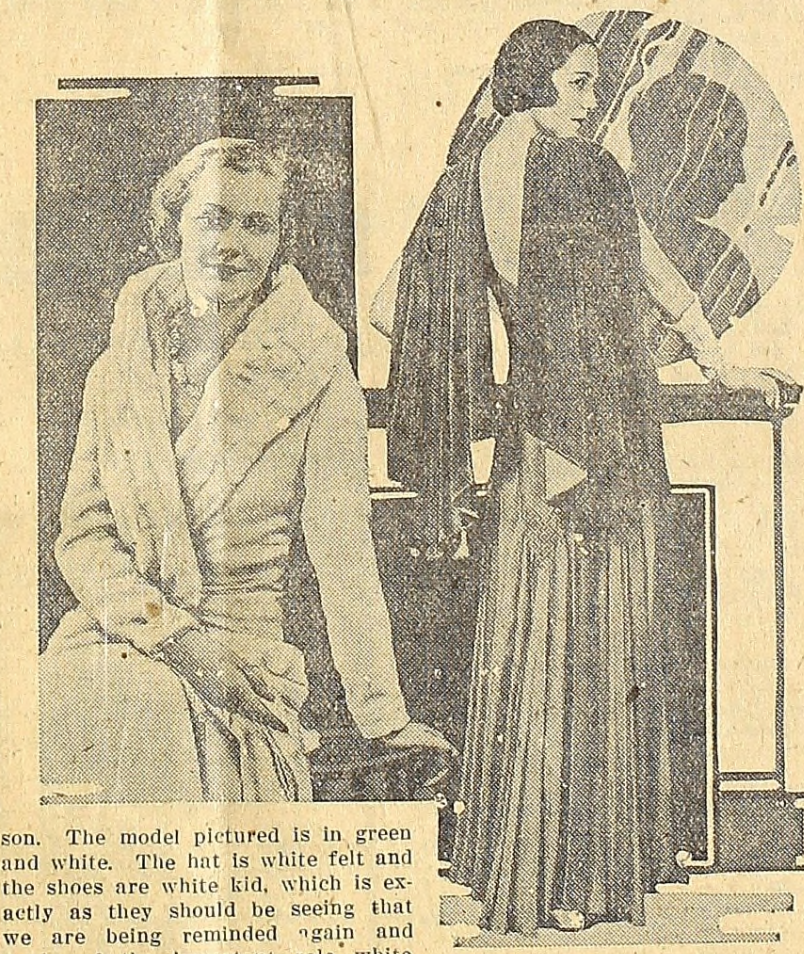

AS to the knitted suit, it is coming out boldly in favor of stripes this season. The model pictured is in green and white. The hat is white felt and the shoes are white kid, which is exactly as they should be seeing that we are being reminded again and again of the important role white footwear and white headwear is to play during the forthcoming months.

It is significant that both the cloth jacket and the knitted one are belted. All through the style program special emphasis is being placed on belts of every description.

Suits made of jersey compete with knitted and tailored cloth types. Correctly speaking, they are ensembles which include a sleeveless one-piece dress, the deep yoke being of cool silk crepe, topped with a jacket of the jersey.

Frocks of velvet-brocaded chiffon are among the new offerings, and they are too attractive and beautiful for words. For the dressy costume blouse this exquisitely sheer velvet-patterned material is proving an ideal medium.

Simple and Inexpensive Implement House That Will Protect Machinery

By W. A. RADFORD
Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all problems pertaining to the subject of building work on the farm, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as editor, author and manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on the subject. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 407 South Dearborn street, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

Storage of farm machinery in the open where it is prey to the weather is much more expensive than building an implement house or an implement shed, such as shown in the illustration. It is often said that more farm machinery rusts out than wears out. It will not have a chance to rust out if it is stored under cover after being properly cleaned and the metal parts painted or greased.

The implement shed illustrated is 50 feet long and 16 feet wide. Two sections are open at the front, but may be supplied with sliding doors. The third section is enclosed and has a concrete floor, thus making a modern garage for the storage of the automobile or tractor, or both. This building is simple to construct, as will be noted by the cross-section of the garage, while the balance of the building is supported by posts set on concrete footings. Good matched lumber is needed for the siding, while the frame of the structure is of 2 by 4 studs.

The roof may be covered with any of the materials used for the purpose. The plan shows lightning rods installed, which is good protection against fire caused by lightning.

The construction of this sort of a shed is so simple and the cost of construction is so little that no farm has any need of doing without such protection for implements. The design is also one which may be enlarged merely by extension in case it is not large enough to provide for all of the farm machinery or in case more machinery is purchased later. Each section can be considered a separate unit and more units may be added as required.

Boiler Made for Every Fuel and Heating Load

Round boilers and square boilers, boilers with vertical sections and boilers with horizontal sections, steel boilers and cast iron boilers, boilers with copper tubes and boilers with cast iron flues—that's what the radiator heating industry is offering to the public today.

There is a boiler today especially adapted to every heating load, every type of chimney, every condition of firing, and every fuel.

Years ago there was only one kind of boiler—a round boiler, like the popular model of one of the inexpensive cars, this boiler was sold all over the world, and its total sales ran into the millions.

While many other types of boilers are made today, the round boiler is still produced in large quantities for installation in smaller residences. It is not, however, the same boiler that was made years ago. It has been improved in its construction so that it is more efficient than its predecessor and it has responded to the esthetic demands of the present vogue for color and beauty in utilitarian objects.

The chief difference between the round boiler and the square boiler is that whereas the former has its sections piled on top of each other like pancakes, the latter has sections which stand upright. There is, in the case of the square boiler, a front section, a rear section, and from two to a dozen in between. The grate is, of course, rectangular.

Round boilers consist of a base casting, firepot casting, and one to five sections set one upon the other over the fire-pot.

Steel boilers for small homes are built of steel plate with seams electrically or otherwise welded or riveted and caulked. Nearly all steel boilers are adapted equally well to solid fuels or oil. The combustion chamber occupies all or part of the lower portion of the boiler and is lined with firebrick. Between it and the outer shell, usually, is a water space which extends up to the top of the boiler.

While some cast iron boilers may be used for either coal, oil, or gas and most steel boilers may be used for either coal or oil, there are some steel boilers that are built especially for gas and some intended exclusively for oil.

The manufacturer of one of the oil-fired boilers, for instance, has departed radically from conventional boiler design. Since an oil burner generates a tremendous amount of heat in a short time, this boiler designed especially for an oil burner has copper tube sections, small flues, and a scientifically designed combustion chamber. This boiler is also suitable for use with a gas flame.

The advantage of the copper tubing is said to result from the rapid conductivity of copper and from the fact that the use of this metal permits the boiler to break the water into smaller sections than is possible in cast iron construction.

Prevents Waste

If your heater is old and worn out, you are paying the coal dealer a lot of money which might better be applied toward buying a new heater. It will soon pay for itself and then go on saving money.

Gay Colors in Kitchen Make It Livable Spot

Every woman knows that it's now as unfashionable to have an unattractive kitchen as it is to wear an out-of-date frock. There's something quite Cinderella-like in this room, for it suddenly lost its drab appearance and became one of the gayest places in the home.

So popular, in fact, has the kitchen become that the young people even have their parties there. Not merely the well-known "raiding the ice box" expeditions, either—but jolly supper parties, where every guest prepares some special dish.

Certainly it behooves the homemaker to keep her kitchen more sparklingly clean than ever, and to decorate it as charmingly as she can. She can first give her kitchen woodwork, doors, window frames—and cupboards, too, if she wishes—a riotously gay coat of paint. Waxing will then protect the bright color from dirt and the inevitable kitchen spattering. She can easily make curtains to harmonize with the color scheme from checked gingham, ruffled voile or organdie. The smart new pots and pans, pitchers and bowls now available will also add sprightly touches of color.

Linoleums may be chosen in shades to match her kitchen decorations. Whether the flooring is linoleum, wood or tile, it will last longer and be far easier to keep clean if waxed and polished. Gas ranges and cabinets may also be protected from dirt and grease by a light waxing. In fact, there's an old saying, "neat as wax," which might have been meant for kitchens, so useful is that preparation in keeping the kitchen immaculate.

To help make the kitchen inviting, there are many little decorative features which any woman can easily achieve. Use gayly painted shelves for cookbooks.

Spanish Architecture Most Popular Today

"The last decade in this country has seen an amazing renaissance in architecture," writes Helen Bishop in Arts and Decoration Magazine. "Following the revulsion against the ugly frame house of the nineties with its ridiculous wooden battlements and turrets there was a return to the Colonial type of house with the simple lines—a style which might be called one branch of native American architecture. Following that came a wave of interest in what is known broadly as the Mediterranean type of dwelling, particularly the house of decided Spanish feeling, a style which is as native to Florida and California as the Colonial is to the northeastern seaboard states."

Warm Tones in Room With North Exposure

An important general rule which should be followed in planning the color scheme for any room is as follows: Use warm tones in rooms with north or east exposure and cool shades in those which face south or west. The warm colors are red, yellow and their variations, and cool colors are blues, greens and gray. This rule guides the homemaker in selecting the dominant colors, but small contrasting accents in shades of the opposite type may be introduced.

Ice Plane Racing Is Newest Winter Sport

In Worcester, Mass., 14 enterprising young men have constructed what they call ice planes, and their races are affording a lot of sport and excitement. The planes are equipped with motor cycle engines which drive the propellers. They are streamlined in airplane fashion, but minus wings and are built in all shapes and sizes in line with the construction principles of the builder.

DUELING IS CHIEF SPORT IN GERMAN UNIVERSITIES

Little Worry About Professionalism and Over-Emphasis There, Says Observer.

New York.—Football rough-housing like that which strained relations between Harvard and Princeton does not worry the German undergraduate of today, nor is there talk of over-emphasis and professionalism like that which followed the recent football season here. The chief German university sport is dueling. It is a strictly amateur affair, but for damage done it far surpasses the accidental kicks and bruises of football.

So reports a Yale senior, Gibbs W. Sherrill, who spent his last summer vacation at Heidelberg university. Intercollegiate duels are unknown, he writes in the Review of Reviews, the matches taking place between individual members of the "Korporationen," which correspond roughly to the American Greek-letter fraternity. "The antagonists stand still in their tracks, squarely facing each other, only a blade's length apart," writes Sherrill. "The target is the opponent's head and face—never his body. The judge looks sternly around the company and immediate silence ensues—a silence which lasts without a break throughout the entire duel."

"The voice of the challenger's second snaps out: 'Anslage—fertig—los.' A click of the blades meet and the duel is on. Four times the blades flash and then each second swings up. The armored arm to cover his man. The judge inspects the duelists for any cuts, which must be tallied to determine later if the encounter has been won with honors."

"Again the sharp command drops the seconds to their knees, out of the way of the swirling blades. But before the required four passes are completed the seconds interrupt the fighting, for a strangely swift stream of blood is pouring down a blanched cheek. It is the boy's first duel, and he has not yet learned to regard this blood flow as unimportant."

Duels usually last 40 rounds, Sherrill declares, though affairs of honor go to 60 or even 100 rounds.

THE BOY IN THE KIDDY KAR

There's a bouncing lad in a busy town,
His face is fair, his hair is brown,
He's as pure and bright as the morning star,
This bestest boy in his Kiddy Kar.
Search this world from base to roof,
Seek the fount of eternal youth,
Travel space both near and far,
But no lad like the boy in his Kid- dy Kar.
When the robins come and days grow bright,
With his Kiddy Kar he'll take his flight,
Donned in his bunny suit and cap,
To the humble home of his old grandpap.
The bugs and bats will flit and flee
As he sails down past the elm tree,
The dirt he'll churn like boiling tar,
As he comes "smilin' thru" in his Kiddy Kar.
Ye neighbors' hens a warning take,
Your necks and legs he sure will break,
Sneop 'round at will but do not bar
The path he takes with his Kiddy Kar.
Julius, Ma Puss and Mary Lou
He sure will put you in a stew,
Your howls they'll hear both near and far
From the bumps you'll get from the Kiddy Kar.
The neighbors' kids will hop and bound
To see him sailing 'round and 'round,
The sport and glee we must not scar
For this gallant youth in his Kiddy Kar.
Bust the cats, the hens, the old duck and drake,
Let gravelstones fly and window- panes break,
Your O. K. my boy, sky-high above par,
Full speed, lusty lad, in your red Kiddy Kar.
No rapture more sweet my proud spirit feels
Than the sound of the grind of those little wheels,
Your sweeter to me, my boy kid, by far,
Than the other boys riding a red Kiddy Kar.
His daddy's true love, his mother's glad joy,
His grandma's trump card, his His grandma's good boy,
His uncle's delight and shining bright star,
Is this wonderful lad in his swift Kiddy Kar.
The problems he'll meet, the Lord only knows,
When he quits the red car and older he grows,
May they all be as sweet as they surely now are
As he scoots here and there in his fleet Kiddy Kar.
Beds, springs or mattresses. You can have the benefit of a complete selection. Barkmans.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

By WALTER TRUMBULL

Although, in this age of machine transportation and machine guns, most of the larger animals are disappearing, there still are horses in New York. I do not mean the pets of the equine species, ridden by generals, policemen, or weight reducers in Central park, but the horse in its natural state, attached to a wagon or truck. You find them down on West street, around the market section, pulling milk wagons, and coming across the bridges from Long Island truck farms, or, in summer, dragging a wagon full of bright and potted plants. I can remember when there were ordinances providing that, if any horse showed alarm at an automobile, the owner of the gas-buggy must pull to the side of the road and stop his motor. And it was no light thing to stop a motor in those days of cranking. The chances were good that it might require an hour to get it started again. But now the horses do not mind machines. They have become resigned.

There is one apple seller in New York who still considers the horse a dangerous beast. This enterprising example of the unemployed decided to go into the chain store business, so he selected opposite corners on Forty-first street and set up a box of apples on each. To these boxes he attached empty tin cans. Thus customers at the unoccupied station could help themselves and drop the money in the can, cafeteria fashion. A lone horse and wagon was stopped by the traffic light beside one of the boxes on which the apples were piled. The apple seller was on the opposite corner, completely shut off by the moving traffic. The horse reached out and helped itself to apples, neglecting to put any money in the tin can. The driver was improving the short rest by reading a tabloid. Only the apple seller saw what was going on and there was nothing he could do about it.

It was at a corner of Eighty-first street that I saw another horse waiting for the light to change. It was in the front rank of halted traffic and a teacher was crossing the street with a horde of small pupils. When the driver, a countryman, saw some of the city children look at the horse a bit apprehensively—they probably never had been that close to a horse before—he immediately grew important.

"Go right ahead, lady," he called. "Go right along, children. It's all right. Cross right over. Whoa!" he shouted suddenly, with such vigor that he scared a couple of children out of six months' growth and almost roused the horse, which had crossed one front foot over the other and was sleeping peacefully.

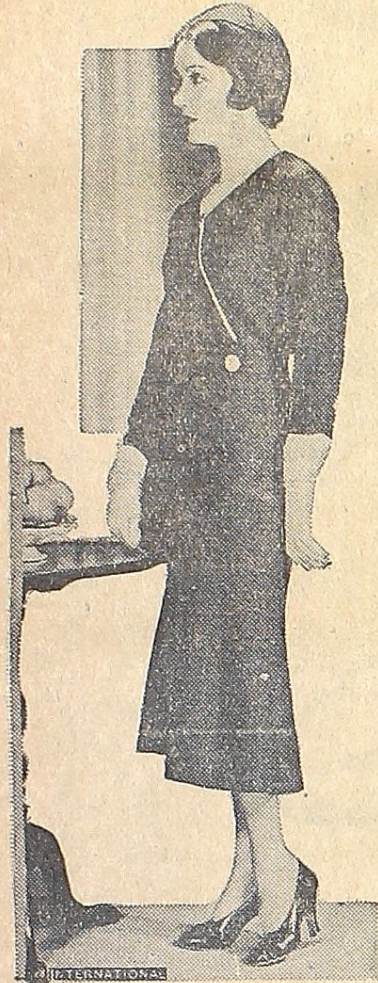

The crossing was made in safety, the light changed, and the driver threw the horse into first speed ahead by slapping it lustily with the ends of the reins. I should judge that horse could remember when Cleveland was President.

If I were a stage star and wished to get some publicity, I'd not have my jewels stolen or make a parachute jump. I'd merely drive a tandem or four-in-hand down Fifth avenue from Fifty-ninth street to Washington square.

There is a purser on a ship, which runs out of New York down the Atlantic coast, who is spending any spare time in improving his education. He is taking some correspondence courses, but the manner in which he studies French is to tune in to French lessons given over the radio. Some day he hopes to transfer to an ocean liner and get to Paris. He intends to be ready for that experience.

Variation in Rainfall

The largest annual rainfall of record was 8.05 inches in Assam, India, and the smallest .03 of an inch in the West African coast. Variations in rainfall are caused by the height of a given area above the ocean, distance from the ocean, whether the land is barren or wooded, and other less important factors.

Cannibals Block Gold Shipment

San Francisco.—A fighting scientist, now on the high seas en route to New Guinea, told a fascinating story of untold wealth in that cannibal-infested country before sailing from this port on the Matson liner Sonoma.

To the narrator, E. W. P. Chinnery, Australian anthropologist, fighting padhunters is an everyday matter in remote sections of the South Seas.

New Guinea is an Australian mandate, and it is Chinnery's duty to explore the interior with a view to bringing the savage tribes into the fold of civilization so that some of the wealth in the inaccessible interior may be exploited.

At present copra is the leading industry of New Guinea, but mining of gold may soon surpass it if Chinnery's projects are successful.

"There is no more interesting place in the world than New Guinea," Chinnery stated before the sailing. "Its wealth is untold. There are hills in the interior of almost solid gold, yet the country is so wild as to make mining operations extremely hazardous."

Chinnery outlined some of the difficulties which confront mining men who seek to reap some of the interior country's natural wealth.

Although the richest gold mines are located only thirty miles from the coast, they are eight days' journey on foot. Mountain peaks 13,000 feet high must be scaled to reach the gold fields.

In the unconquered sections, the scientist declared, there dwells a savage race of cannibals known as Papuans. If their spears and arrows bring down a foe he will be found on the Papuan menu that evening.

Chinnery has headed many parties into the jungles of the interior. His expeditions are always equipped with modern firearms, which have more than once saved him and his companions from the soup kettles.

His methods of "converting" the savages to friendship are unique. After defeating the natives in battle, doctors treat the wounded, gifts are exchanged and confidence in the white man is implanted.

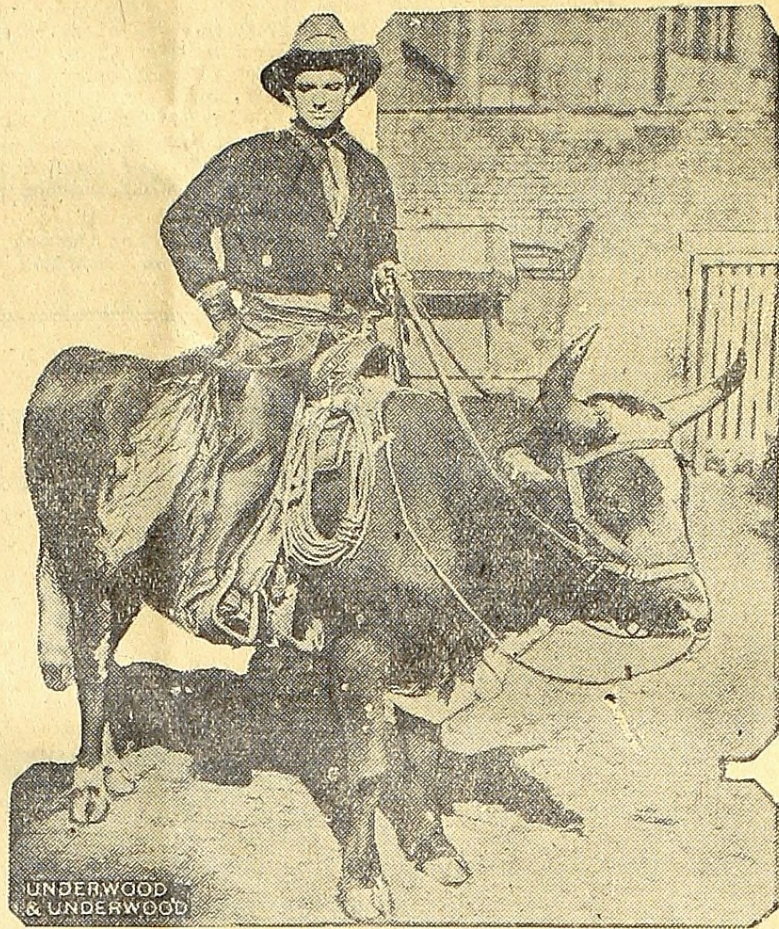

Once routed in battle, the savages are quick to fall in line, Chinnery declared. Their friendship is won by the care the whites give them and the savages quickly learn the white man's various codes of morals and social relations.

Mining interests, impatient at the necessarily long time that Chinnery's civilizing process takes, have resorted to airplanes to carry equipment to the mining region, but the dangers are many and it is predicted that it will be many a day before gold can be safely brought out of the hills in large quantity.

Crosses Country on Back of Bull

All his life Ralph Sanders, a long, gangling cow hand from the Texas plains, had wanted to ride a bull in a really big way. And now his ambition has taken him all the way to New York astride a 1,000-pound animal of Mexican antecedents. Ralph is shown on Jerry, the bull that carried him to New York from Brownsville, Texas, in 254 days.

Leaves Small Fortune to Pet Cat

Los Angeles.—Mitzie is far from being one of those "suffering cats" you hear about—if money means anything.

For Mitzie, an eighteen-year-old cat, was remembered to the extent of $15,000 in the will of its late mistress, Mrs. Maude F. Ide of San Gabriel, also known as Dr. Maude F. Cain.

Of an estate valued unofficially at half a million dollars, Mrs. Ide provided that the valuable home in San Gabriel and $15,000 be placed in trust "for the purpose of providing upon said premises a home and proper care for my cat, Mitzie, in case it survives me, so long as it shall live."

Mitzie has a whole room to herself—with a four-poster bed. The room is located on the second floor and from there a catwalk extends down to the flower garden, where the feline heiress rests contentedly.

The will provides that the home and cat be cared for by Miss Pauline

Personal Prejudice

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

Bascom had a letter in his hand when he walked into my office. An unopened letter it was, too, but it was evident from the handwriting and from the address in the corner from whom it had come.

"I have a letter from Anderson this morning," he said, holding out the envelope. "I haven't read it yet, but I know even before I do so that it will make me mad."

Bascom had a prejudice against Anderson. He disliked the man no matter in what role he was playing and he had no special reason for doing so. It was just that whatever Anderson did was wrong in Bascom's eyes.

Clayton didn't like butter, or at least he said he didn't. The mere mention of the word would give Clayton nausea. He could scarcely sit at the table comfortably if the butter plate was in sight. If you told him that something he was eating contained butter he would push back his plate and call the meal finished. And yet if he were not told of the presence of butter he would eat with relish anything that contained it. It was not the taste of butter, or the odor of it, which he disliked—it was just the idea and for this absurd prejudice of his he could give no adequate excuse.

There came to me in the mail this morning a list of fifty words representing organizations, ideas, and nationalities.

"Read through the list of words and phrases tested below," I am told. "Consider each one not more than five seconds. If it calls up a disagreeable association, cross it out."

I was a little surprised—I was even annoyed to discover how many of these words called up distasteful and displeasing reactions in my mind.

Shelton has a strong prejudice against secret societies. He never belonged to one; he knows nothing about their rituals or their serious purposes; he could not bring up a single instance, if called upon to do so, which would throw discredit upon one of these organizations or its members, but still he doesn't like 'em he says, and so when his boy went to college Shelton's only piece of advice to his young heir was not to join anything.

Prejudice, I suppose, is pretty largely the result of ignorance. If we knew people and places and organizations and institutions better we would have fewer prejudices. Reading and travel and association with people and things are sure to break down our prejudices and make us more considerate and broader minded. If some one could once get Shelton into a secret society he might be made to see how simple and harmless most of them are.

Relatives and friends of the testator were remembered with legacies from $500 to $25,000. A friend, Otella Kuschke, 1020 S. Citrus avenue, Los Angeles, will get the residue of the estate.

Act of Kindness Brings Big Financial Reward

Fifteen years ago three men were making their way across the American continent aboard a fast freight when one of the trio produced a gun and attempted to rob his two companions.

The two victims were an elderly man and a youth, Richard O'Neil. The latter, just out of college, was making his way west in quest of employment. Through the pleading of young O'Neil the small savings of the elder man were returned by the bandit, who took only the "stake" of the collegian.

The holdup man dropped off the train and the old man and the lad continued on to the western terminal of the train's run. The incident was forgotten by the collegian in his subsequent experiences.

Some time later O'Neil joined the military service. In the course of events he found himself a member of the Fifteenth infantry, at Tientsin, China. A good soldier, he became a corporal in Company I.

Recently a friend in the States sent him a clipping from an American newspaper in which he, Corporal O'Neil, was named as the heir to a $21,000 estate. It had been left to him by his elderly companion whom he had befriended 15 years before.

Corporal O'Neil is now receiving the congratulations of his buddies in the Fifteenth.—Army Recruiting News.

Popularity of Furs

Mother and daughters spent more than $150,000,000 for fur coats in the United States in 1929, a census report of the fur trade discloses. Factories, producing the coats, numbered 2,765, of which 228 were in Illinois. Men spent only $3,569,238 for fur coats (for themselves) in the same period.

Odd Family Situation

At Panama, Okla., William H. Haggard, census enumerator, found an unusual situation. Three brothers who married three sisters were found residing in the same house. Each family has two children, and in all three instances one child was born in Arkansas and one in Oklahoma. The three families, the enumerator was told, have never quarreled.

"They see the place is deserted, and unless they find some sign of us, they won't come nearer," he said. "Look, Toinette! There is a white man among them with a prisoner's collar around his neck—"

His words were cut short by a sudden movement among the watchers, as if a command had stirred them to life again. The man in the lead, with three eagle feathers in his tuft, stalked alone into the clearing, a tall and sinister figure burdened only with his weapons and a warrior's diminutive traveling pack—a giant who was red and black and ochreous yellow in his war paint, and at whose belt hung a bundle of scalps in which the sun played and danced with changing lights as he moved. Toinette closed her eyes that she might shut from her vision the grisly trophies of a warrior's success. When she opened them again, two score warriors in single file were following in the footsteps of the leader and passed within a hundred feet of what once had been Lussan's home, casting furtive sidelong glances as they went. In more than one belt, fresh scalps shone in the sunshine, and two white men and a boy with their hands tied and prisoner thongs about their throats walked in the line.

Not until the trees on the other side of the clearing had swallowed the last of the Mohawks did Toinette's straining eyes turn to Jeems. There had been no sound in the passing of the red scourge, no cautious voice, no clatter of wood on steel, no crackle of brittle grass or weeds under four-score moccasined feet. "Where their tracks lay in the grass, one might have thought that three men had traveled instead of forty. And the world was dead behind them. Crows did not return to the meadow, and the blue jays had flown into safer distance. The woodpecker had gone to a farther stub. Even in the old house there was no longer the scurrying and squeaking of mice—no sound but the tumultuous throbbing of three hearts, two of them human and one a beast's."

It was then Jeems spoke. "I swear there was a white man—a free white man—in that painted crowd, and long hair was hanging from his belt," he said. "I saw his blond head and lighter skin, but thought my eyes were lying to me," replied Toinette. "An Englishman," said Jeems. "A murderer for money such as my Uncle Hepsibah told me about." "And yet—he might be French." They stood looking into each other's eyes, she of the aristocracy of Old France and he of the New world's freedom, and her hands rose slowly to his face as his bow and arrow fell to the floor. For the first time she raised her mouth to his.

"Kiss me, Jeems—and pray a little with me in gratitude for the mercy God has shown us!" The thrill of her lips lay for a moment against his. "I am sorry for everything in the world," she said. Some of the softness and beauty of boyhood returned into his face as she drew herself from his arms and he descended the creaking stair ahead of her. They did not go out at once, but stood near the lower door, listening for sound and watching for something to move.

"They are gone," Jeems finally said. "But there may be stragglers behind, and it is safer not to show ourselves too soon." It was easier for them to talk after this. Quite calmly, as if looking back on a distant thing, Toinette told Jeems of the tragedy of Tonteur manor. Her mother, he learned, had left for Quebec two days preceding the coming of the Indians. Toinette expressed her thankfulness because of this, but no great gladness was in her voice. She could not remember in vivid details all that had happened, it had been so sudden and overwhelming like a stream of fire engulfing a black night. Peter Lubek with Djeskau, and Heloise, his young wife, had come to stay with her. Both were asleep when the savages attacked in the early morning, and she was of the opinion that most of the killing was over before they were fairly awake—and before any guns were fired. Then came shots and her father's voice roaring through the big house. They were out of their bed when the seigneur came in and told them to dress and keep to their room. She did not know what had happened until she looked out of her window, and then she saw what seemed to be hundreds of naked savages running about. She rushed after her father, but he was gone. When she returned to her room, Heloise had disappeared and she did not see her again. She could hear screaming and terrible cries, and dressing hurriedly as her father had commanded, she disobeyed him by going downstairs, calling for him and for Heloise. The front part of the house was filled with flame and smoke, and when she turned to the servants' quarters she was cut off by fire and there was no response to her cries. It was then she thought of the mill which she had often heard her father say was impregnable against both fire and guns. She descended into the cellar and went from it through a short underground passage to an outdoor cavern made of soil and stones, in which they kept fruit and vegetables during the winter. She hid herself in this earthy place, and then dared to raise the surface door a little. The worst must have been over, for she could see only a few Indians about, and everything was on fire. There was yelling in the distance where the savages were attacking the farmers' homes. When she ascended from the cavern, she stumbled over the body of old Babin, the miller, who had fallen with a musket in his hands. She took the musket and went to the mill, and after that she did not see an Indian about the seigneurie. Sickness overcame her, and she was half unconscious in the tower room. Later, looking through one of the narrow windows, she saw four men come from the south. She was sure they were white men, but was afraid to reveal herself because their appearance was so terrible. They were like monsters, remaining only a little while to look at the dead. Now, since she had seen the white warrior among the Mohawks, she was even more positive that she belonged to the war band and that she was fortunate to have kept herself concealed. When she found that Babin's musket was loaded, she regretted that she had not used it to kill one of the murderers. That was why, mistaking him for another straggler, she had fired at Jeems.

One might have expected excitement in her narrative, but it was told quietly as she looked from Jeems across the clearing. It was a recital of fact without the embellishment of pathos or drama, and Jeems remained silent for a time when it was ended. Then he told of his visit to Lussan's and of his race home and what he found there. He spoke of Hepsibah. "He must have discovered the Mohawks on the far side of the valley and started the fire which he had always told me to expect. After that, he tried to reach us and they killed him." "He may have escaped," suggested Toinette hopefully. Jeems shook his head. "He would have come to us. He is dead."

His voice possessed the unemotional certainty with which she had referred to her father and Heloise. There was no possibility of his uncle being alive. He repeated that belief, and added that their salvation was little short of a miracle. But now, he thought, their way would be clear to friends farther down the river. The Indians could not have gone many miles in that direction, for evidently they were hurrying back before Baron Djeskau learned of their presence in the French country and set out forces to cut them off. It did not occur to Jeems that the baron and his men might have been defeated, as was true in that very hour.

He produced apples and a pair of purple-topped turnips from the provision pouch which he wore at his belt, and they ate these as they waited. Meanwhile, he told her what they must do. They would be forced to spend a night in the woods, but he was sure he could make a comfortable place for her.

He walked ahead instead of at her side when they began their journey. Jeems carried an arrow fixed to the string of his bow, and suddenly a fire caught it and it slipped from his fingers and fell to the ground. He was stooping to recover it when a terrified scream from Toinette brought him erect.

Not more than eight or ten paces from them stood a painted and half-naked savage whose intention had been to make his way toward the abandoned house. He was an appalling figure, and during the few seconds in which they faced each other Jeems recognized in him the white-skinned scalp hunter he and Toinette had seen with the Mohawks. At this discovery there shot through him a flash of relief, but a second glance showed him a fiend more dangerous than an Indian, one of the merciless butchers who hunted human hair for the price his own people had set upon it. A blue-eyed Indian! How often had he heard his uncle curse their breed! Beasts more cruel than tigers, demons set loose and paid by English money until their sport as well as their livelihood became an orgy of ambush, murder, rape, and fire! Here was one of them. The man was greased and painted, but he was white. His warlock was light and his eyes were small and blue. He carried a gun, a knife, and a hatchet, and at his belt was a woman's hair, and with it another scalp that must have been taken from the head of a child.

So, quickly did Jeems see these things that the echoes of Toinette's scream had scarcely died away before their meaning pressed itself upon him. The savage possessed a moment of advantage, and as Jeems made a movement to whip an arrow from his quiver, the scalp hunter swung his gun to fire. Seeing the hopelessness of his position, Jeems sprang forward and hurled his useless bow at his enemy. This and the impact of his body came at an instant when the other let the hammer of his flintlock fall, and with the explosion of the gun the lead from its barrel flew wild. The scalp hunter had seen only a boy and a girl, and a vision of easy victims had leapt to his mind. Now he found upon him an antagonist of unexpected strength and ferocity. In the first few seconds of the fray, neither had a chance to draw knife or tomahawk, and with all the pent-up madness of his body and brain Jeems struck at his enemy and clutched his slippery throat as they crashed to earth together. For a space Toinette's horror-filled eyes could scarcely tell which was one and which the other; and Odd, snarling white-fanged at their heels, was unable to become a partner in the conflict. Then, with a powerful effort, the scalp hunter freed himself and sprang to his feet, drawing his tomahawk in the act. As he prepared to use his weapon, Odd vaulted for his throat, and the blunt head of the hatchet met him in midair, striking with such force upon his head that he fell a limp and inert mass to the ground.

A cry of triumph came from the bleeding lips of the Frankenstein, who saw victory within his reach, for he now regarded the youth, who was on his feet with a hatchet in his hand, as an insignificant obstacle between himself and the pallid-faced loveliness of the girl whom chance had so fortunately placed in his way. This cry, disguised by guile and habit, betrayed only a trace of the white man. It was guttural exultation of one lost to all the obligations of blood and race, a cry loosed not so much by heat and passion as by the promise of what he saw as his eyes appraised Toinette.

Toinette had possessed herself of the empty gun and stood at Jeems' side, prepared to fight. Jeems was so near that his arm pressed against her and he gave a sidewise thrust which sent her headlong among the bushes. In this same movement he hurled his hatchet at the scalp hunter, who was slowly advancing. As the other dodged to avoid the hurtling missile Jeems snatched one of his scattered arrows from the ground and ran to his bow. Toinette saw what happened then. She saw the slim, beautiful figure of Jeems drawn as tensely as his weapon in the pathway. She saw the painted monster descending upon him. She heard the musical twang of the bowstring and saw a silvery flash—a flash which passed in at one side of the blue-eyed Indian and went out at the other, a flash which fell to earth a score of paces beyond, a bloody and broken arrow that had done its righteous work.

"Plagues" of Past Ages Practically Wiped Out

Leprosy became prevalent in the Dark Ages. The scourge of the "black death" inaugurated the quarantine; but civilization had discarded all the other disfigurements of the Dark Ages before it relieved itself from the recurrent visitations of epidemics which made their appearance throughout Europe in those centuries. As late as 1798 smallpox was as common as measles, and little more than a century ago cholera claimed one in every hundred of New York's population. In 1873 yellow fever was epidemic in 19 states, which was half of them. It has been only since Louis Pasteur's experiments between 1857 and 1885 laid the foundation for the isolation of germs and the development of antitoxins that specific treatment has been possible. Patient observation has followed research in tracing the causes of epidemics to their sources. In this brief span of a few generations many historic plagues have become words of vague meaning; and yet, they unquestionably would be more rampant in this age of travel and commerce than they ever were before but for the vigilant and effective public health agencies on guard everywhere.

How to Escape FLU

- 1 Avoid so far as possible the places where flu germs are most likely to be spread; overcrowded cars and public meeting places; overheated, stuffy rooms.
- 2 Be careful of close contact with others and beware of all coughers and sneezers; breathe through the nose, get fresh air, but avoid drafts or chilling.
- 3 Get lots of rest. Eat plenty of citrus fruits. Keep the bowels open. Take extra precaution to keep in good physical condition, so your system will have high resistance against germs.
- 4 Above all, avoid catching colds. They lower your resistance to the flu germ. Ward them off. At the first sign of any cold, take Bayer Aspirin and remain indoors if possible until your cold is gone. If you have a sore throat, dissolve some Bayer Aspirin tablets in water and gargle; this will relieve the soreness and reduce the inflammation.
- 5 If you have any reason to suspect even a touch of flu, call your doctor at once.

Fisherman "Hooked" by Shark Lives to Tell It

Catching a fish does not draw much attention, but when a fish catches a fisherman and carries him down to the depths of the sea, the fisherman has a yarn worth spinning. Simon Powers of Ontario, Calif., went deep-sea fishing. A companion hooked a large shark and was colling his line on deck. Powers' foot got entangled in the line and the shark drew him overboard. The line zipped out until some one on deck tied it to a post. The shark started to go places and Powers went with him until he succeeded in kicking himself free. He hobbled to the surface and was rescued more dead than alive. According to rescuers, Powers at one time was 40 feet below the surface.

Quick COMFORT for fretful upset children

ALL children are subject to little upsets. They come at unexpected times. They seem twice as serious in the dead of night. But there's one form of comfort on which a mother can always rely; good old Castoria. This pure vegetable preparation can't harm the tiniest infant. Yet mild as it is, it soothes a restless, fretful baby like nothing else. Its quick relief soon sees the youngster comfortable once more, back to sleep. Even an attack of colic, or diarrhea, yields to the soothing influence of Castoria.

18 to 9, last Friday on the local floor. Fans say that the game was one of the fastest and the best played this season, with both teams going at top speed throughout. Alpena started out with a field goal on the first tip-off play, but that was the last gift shot that any member of the Alpena team got that evening. All the rest of their points were made after a hard struggle. Defeat by such a small score at the hands of this large school does not appear to look very bad. The last home game of the season is to be played here February 27 with Harrisville.

Two field goals in the closing minutes of the final period enabled the East Tawas girls to defeat the fast Alabaster girls. This made two straight victories for the girls. They displayed a fine passing game, and, coupled with the accurate shooting of Irene Warren, managed to obtain 26 points while they held Alabaster to 21. The prospects are certainly bright for next year, as most of the girls will be back, and there are some promising reserves coming up from the eighth and ninth grades.

COUNTY NORMAL NOTES

The critic room entertained the Normal Friday afternoon with a Valentine party.

Many of the students are absent this week on account of sickness. Professor Jorgenson of Ypsilanti visited us last Friday. Many of the students attended the P. T. A. meeting Monday night. The discussions on what to do with leisure time were reported to have been very interesting. The model lesson taught by Miss Evenson shows how pleasure can be had by playing games in a mere arithmetic class.

The class has decided on the play, "Nancy Anne Brown's Folks" for its annual play which will be presented April 4 and 5.

For the past three weeks the class has been giving reports on United States and Canada. The beautiful scenery that has been described and shown in pictures brings forth the Wanderlust instinct. The class has decided to "see America first."

The Normal basketballers lost two games at Prescott last Friday evening, the girls going down to defeat to the tune of 25-2, and the boys 26-8. For a while the boys' game was very close. The first half ended in a tie. Lomas was high point man for the Normal, making six points. All the boys played a hard game, but were slightly handicapped as one player was absent and the Prescott floor was much smaller than they are accustomed to.

HOW PARENTS MAY HELP CONTROL COMMUNICABLE DISEASES IN SCHOOLS

By Myrtle Cowgill, County Nurse

Iosco county has been particularly free from communicable disease this winter with the exception of chicken pox, but it is always well for the parents to know the important part they may play in prevention and control of communicable disease.

1. Look your child over every morning before he leaves for school, and be sure that he is well.
2. If your child has a headache, sore throat, or skin eruption, or if he shows signs of a beginning cold, he should be kept at home. A sick child should be put to bed, and other children should be kept away. If the illness seems at all serious a doctor should be consulted.
3. Instruct your child to report promptly when he is not feeling well. This is especially important if the child feels sick at school.
4. Your child should be protected against such diseases as diphtheria and small pox.

5. Provide your child with a clean piece of cloth which he may use to cover his mouth and nose when coughing and sneezing, as a protection to other children.

Note—Since some mothers and fathers do not always realize the significance of beginning symptoms of illness, any parent who has this knowledge will be doing a kindness to the child if they pass on this information to the home concerned. Prompt medical attention should be advised.

Used Every Day in Bridge

Our Mr. Ripley reports that "smajsmrmljmeboatejvpenvgtavjras" was the word used by Galileo to hide the secret of his discovery of Saturn. And, as near as we can recall, a lady bridge player the other night used the same word to hide her discovery that her partner had reneged and that the opposition, instead of going down one, would make the contract.—Arkansas Gazette.

WHITEMORE

Again Rev. George Smith preached a fine sermon. He is still in the series of the "Remarkable Conversions of the Bible." His discourse was based on Luke 7, 36 to 50. He certainly gave us some very fine thoughts to think about. Speaking of the woman's tears he said: "Tears carry up the soul as the flood carried up the Ark." "Tears are the sweat of the soul laboring under sorrow." His contrasts between the woman and the Pharisee were splendid—The Pharisee—"No water"; the Woman—"Her tears"; the Pharisee—"No kiss of salutation"; the woman—"She kissed His feet"; the Pharisee—"No cooling ointment"; the woman—"Precious ointment for His feet." You can see at a glance that Rev. Smith both knows and preaches the Scripture. Come and listen to him.

"Candle" Coal?

Cannel coal burns with a bright, candle-like flame, and it is probable that the name is a corruption of candle coal. This coal is found in Kentucky, Ohio and Indiana, and some believe that it is a product of an accumulation of animal as well as plant remains. The same kind of coal is found in Scotland, where it is called parrot coal.
