TAWAS CITY SCHOOL NOTES
Prepared and Edited by a Committee of the Student Council

High School
The Senior Civics class was given a standard test in the subject on Wednesday. No one fell within the lower 10% of correct answers obtained from the results from different sections of the United States.

The Senior class has decided to have a speaker and a few class parts the same evening. A speaker has not been secured as yet. Commencement will probably take place Thursday evening, June 11th.

You should note elsewhere the general school program for Friday evening, March 20th. It will begin at 8:00 o'clock. Admission, 35 and 15 cents. The net proceeds will be used for the High School Fund and to purchase play material for the grade pupils.

A couple of young men appeared at school this week representing that they were students at the University of Michigan, working to secure a scholarship to that institution by taking subscriptions to magazines. A recent communication from the Registrar of the University informs us that no one by the names given has attended school there.

Seventh and Eighth Grades
We are now studying Michigan history. The text we are using is "The Story of Michigan," by Claude S. Larzelere.

We are learning a new song, "The Minuet," by W. A. Mozart.

The seventh grade is starting to study Africa.

The eighth graders are reading "Shipbuilding," by Henry W. Longfellow.

Ward School
We are practicing for our part in the school show to be given next week.

There are now eight names on our Dental Honor Roll. We hope to earn a banner for our room before the end of the term.

We are all interested in keeping our "Health School" as nearly complete as possible. Failure to keep clean or brush teeth removes winning door, or bell from the school.

ALABASTER WINS CLASS C CHAMPIONSHIP

Alabaster high school won the beautiful silver trophy which goes with the class C championship last Saturday night at the district basketball tournament held at Oscoda. Alabaster, under the leadership of Supt. E. R. Erickson, annexed the championship as the result of a brilliant 27-18 victory over the Standish high school quintet.

After trailing Standish at the end of the third quarter, 13 to 14, Alabaster broke loose with an attack of flashy passing and shooting to tally 14 points more before the sound of the final gong. At the same time they held Standish to two field goals, thereby clinching the class C title.

Alabaster displayed a type of basketball throughout the tournament that thrilled both friends and foes. The rousing, enthusiastic applause for its clean, smooth playing and fine sportsmanship testified to the popularity of this winning team.

CLASS D CHAMPIONSHIP WON BY OSCODA

Oscoda won the class D championship trophy by defeating Prescott in the final by a 27 to 19 score. Oscoda, like Alabaster in class C competition, grabbed the title as the result of a rally staged late in the game. After lagging behind Prescott at the half, 12-13, and when at the end of the third period it was still nobody's game, they opened up with an attack that the Prescott boys were not able to cope with.

Oscoda high may properly feel proud of its squad. Composed of a practically new personnel, a winning team has been developed in the course of a year's time that merits the praise of the sports public in this section and elsewhere.

OVER 1300 ATTEND TOURNAMENT

An attendance of over 1300 at the tournament was distributed over Thursday, Friday and Saturday, the three days of the meet. Receipts did not come up to previous high marks, probably due to the fact that less schools were entered in the tourney this year. Interest, however, was not lacking, as every school entered in this event gave a demonstration of basketball and spirit that may be classed A-1. Much credit is due the referees, George Weingarden and C. C. Coulter, for the excellent manner in which they handled the games.

T. S. Nurnberger, tournament manager, compliments all schools, players, officials and fans for their splendid spirit and the fine attitude showed throughout the tournament.

That Alabaster and Oscoda were popular winners was proved by the enthusiastic manner in which the final results were received. The best wishes of the entire district go with them when they compete at the regional tournament at Mt. Pleasant this week end.

A complete list of the line-ups for both elimination and final contests played at Oscoda follows.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Patterson of Saginaw and Mrs. Joe LaRue of Bay City attended the funeral of Mrs. J. A. Graebner on Thursday.

Miss Louise Bird spent the week end in Detroit.

The Rookie

MRS. VINA GRAEBNER

Mrs. Vina Graebner passed away Monday, March 9, at her home in Saginaw, after suffering for several months from cancer. The remains were brought Wednesday to the home of her brother, Thos. Curry, of East Tawas.

Vina Curry was born January 25, 1879, at Tawas City, and spent most of her life in this vicinity until her marriage to Arthur J. Graebner of Saginaw on December 2, 1922.

She is survived by her husband, A. J. Graebner, her mother, Mrs. Catherine Curry, two sisters, Mrs. M. H. Barnes of this city and Mrs. Arthur Staudacher of East Tawas; three brothers, Charles and Waldo Curry of Tawas City and Thomas of East Tawas.

The funeral was held Thursday afternoon from the Episcopal church, Rev. C. E. Edinger officiating. The remains were laid to rest in the Curry lot in the Tawas City cemetery.

Out of town relatives who attended the funeral were: Mrs. P. J. Misener of Ypsilanti, Mr. and Mrs. John Bunion, Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Fahnenman, Mrs. J. C. Graebner of Saginaw.

"REMOTE CONTROL" LOUD SPEAKER!

A neat blend of comedy, mystery and thrills are packed into the Sylvia Thalberg-Frank Butler edition of "Remote Control," at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, Sunday and Monday, March 15 and 16. William Haines is his rollicking self and gives a better than ordinary portrayal of the clowning radio announcer who, behind his blatant exterior, does some fast thinking.

John Migan develops his part of a villainous heavy artfully, while Charles King, as the proprietor of the radio station, and Mary Doran, furnishing the love interest, handle their roles capably.

The plot of "Remote Control" is unusual, and has been adapted to the screen with intelligence. The story involves the use of a radio station by a gang leader ostensibly to give occult advice to radio listeners—he poses as a medium—but actually to direct the activities of the "mob" he rules.

There is a kidnapping, a robbery and a bank burglary. All are well done.

Dialog is unusually smooth. There are clever and laughable lines as well as tense ones. Benny Rubin and Roscoe Ates are brought in to help Polly Moran and Haines to lighten the heavy plot and they furnish laughs at intermittent intervals.

MAY IDENTIFY SKELETON FOUND AT ALABASTER

Mrs. Herman Roth of Bay City, after examining Thursday the two watches and clothing found with the skeleton last week in the United States Gypsum company barn at Alabaster, felt sure that it was her brother-in-law, a former resident of Sebewaug whose whereabouts had been unknown for several years. One of the watches had been purchased at Sebewaug about 18 years ago and it is sought to have the identification verified by the jeweler who sold the watch.

TWENTIETH CENTURY CLUB

George Washington was the topic of the Twentieth Century Club for February 28th. A reading was given by Mrs. Boomer, "Mary Ball Washington's Mother." A paper on Mount Vernon was read by Mrs. Giddings, who in her visit to that shrine caught its message to each American, passing the message to her listeners. Mrs. C. E. Edinger gave an impressive and thoughtful talk on "Washington, the Christian," showing how in every crisis his Christian heritage and training sustained him and controlled his acts to the lasting benefit of his country and countrymen. Mrs. R. Curry read "The American's Creed." Mrs. Bing read from an old paper announcing Washington's death. Roll call was responded to by quotations from Colonial heroes.

"A LADY SURRENDERS" ONE OF BEST TALKIES

Comedy, drama and pathos will be meted out in pleasingly balanced portions to audiences Saturday and Sunday at the State Theatre, when Universal's all talking version of John Erskine's novel "Sincerity," under the screen title of "A Lady Surrenders," makes its debut here.

The new feature, which is one of the best to grace local screens in some months, features Conrad Nagel with Rose Hobart and Genevieve Tobin and Basil Rathbone.

Following the novel with unerring adherence to facts, "A Lady Surrenders" tells the story of a bored wife, a good-looking and well to do husband and a school-girl friend of the wife.

As the husband of a sophisticated novelist who is bored by married life, Nagel gives a brilliant performance. Nagel is seen as a bed manufacturer and a devotee of duck-hunting, and his performance is marked by his usual sincerity, and his love making is full of spirit and understanding.

Genevieve Tobin scores a hit as the authoress' friend who happily understands the misunderstood husband and marries him when he is cast loose by his spouse.

Rose Hobart, as the wife who writes a bitter article on marriage which leads to complications culminating in her departure for Paris in search of a divorce, gives a performance which should assure her future in talking pictures.

Mrs. Ira Horton and mother, Mrs. Mary Murphy, attended the funeral of Patrick Hogan of Alpena on Thursday.

MRS. ALBERT BLEAU

Mrs. Albert L. Bleau, aged 47, died in St. Joseph Mercy hospital, Pontiac, on Wednesday evening, March 4, following an illness of twelve days of pneumonia. Mrs. Bleau was formerly Mary E. Kinney, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Kinney of Alabaster.

The deceased was born in Alabaster, Michigan, February 4, 1884, and had lived there all her life until two and one-half years ago, when the family moved to Pontiac.

Those left to mourn her loss besides her husband are: Five daughters, Mary Blanche, Katherine, Genevieve, Alberta and Frances Margaret, and one son, John G. A son, Joseph, preceded her in death about seventeen years ago.

Funeral services were held from St. Michael church, Pontiac, at eight thirty Saturday morning, Rev. John H. Flaherty officiating. The remains were then brought to St. Joseph cemetery, East Tawas, for burial. Rev. E. A. Kirchhoff officiated at the grave.

Besides the husband and family, the following friends and relatives accompanied the remains: Frank Binder, Jr., Allan Binder, Miss Kathleen Brennan, Miss Grace McCue, Mrs. Harry Shaver, son, Jack, and daughter, Grace, all of Lansing, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Bleau of Port Huron, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Bleau of Alpena, Miss Marv Ellen LaBerge of Bay City, John Landey, Lyde B. Stevens and Martin Groux, all of Pontiac.

The following relatives attended the funeral in Pontiac: Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Duggan, Mrs. S. J. Guyette, Frank Durrain, and James Flynn, all of Detroit, Mrs. Mary Shover, Mrs. F. Fuller, Mrs. Kathryn Haley, Mrs. J. L. Carroll, Mr. and Mrs. William McCue, Mrs. A. L. Goodrich and son, Frederick Misses Georgiana and Lucille Shaver, all of Lansing, Mrs. Lavery of Ferndale, Harold Duggan of Stratford, Ontario, and Mrs. Frank Flynn of Bay City.

COLUMBIA SUGAR PLANT WILL NOT OPERATE

The Columbia Sugar company of Bay City in a communication to Fred C. Latter of Reno township said that they would not operate this year. A considerable quantity of sugar beets have been grown during past years in the Whittemore district and this move on the part of the company will allow the farmers no opportunity of growing them there this season.

FARRELL TEAMED WITH O'SULLIVAN IN COMEDY

As clever and entertaining a screen offering as has come this way in many weeks is "The Princess and the Plumber," which opens at the Family Theatre March 17, 18, 19. Excellently enacted by a distinguished cast, the story concerns a young American plumbing engineer who goes to Daritzia to look over the heating equipment of a castle, and falls head-first into a gay little romance with the lonely princess of the country. The many unexpected obstacles that arise and the unique solutions of them make a film thoroughly delightful. Charles Farrell and Maureen O'Sullivan are splendid in the title roles, while H. B. Warner and Joseph Cawthron also contribute noteworthy portrayals.

WILL IMMUNIZE CHILDREN OF SHERMAN, RENO, BURLEIGH SCHOOLS AGAINST DIPHTHERIA

T. Zieske of Health Department No. 2, assisted by Miss Myrtle Cowgill, the county nurse, will give the treatments. It is hoped that parents of pre-school age children will also bring them in for treatment as it is at that age that diphtheria is more easily contracted and more fatal.

"THE LION AND THE LAMB" THRILLING ENTERTAINMENT

Thrills, romance and stirring situations are the highlights of E. Phillips Oppenheim's mystery thriller, "The Lion and the Lamb," which was adapted to the screen by Columbia Pictures and will be shown at the State Theatre Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week.

The story revolves about the activities of the Lambs, an organization of gangsters headed by a smooth and ruthless individual called Tottie. To desert the Lambs is a crime punishable by death. Thus, when Dave, otherwise the Earl of Lemstershire, is forced to take vows of allegiance to this disreputable organization, things begin to happen. To insure his loyalty, the Lambs establish their victim as a criminal by registering his fingerprints on a knife used in an actual murder. They furthermore force him to take active part in a robbery. Dave's efforts to extricate himself from the clutches of the Lambs and prove his innocence to the girl he loves, supply the rest of the action of the film.

The cast, including Walter Byron, Carmel Myers, Miriam Segar, Raymond Hatton and Montagu Love, give creditable performances.

Investigation proved that the certificate had been stolen and it was returned to its rightful owner.

Seek Scientific Data in North

Two Polar Expeditions Under Mawson and Wilkins Are Ready to Go.

London.—The polar exploration season has opened. Sir Douglas Mawson has one in active execution; so has Sir Hubert Wilkins. Both are expeditions involving tremendous expense and also demanding great organizing ability.

Unlike the explorers of the old days, they need to be fitted with something more than stout hearts and warm clothing. The tales of the tremendous pluck and valor of the intrepid explorers are by far the more thrilling, while present-day hard, scientific trips are often never dilated upon.

These brave venturers do not sail the frozen seas of the North or South poles just for the honor and glory of sticking "Old Glory" or the "Union Jack" on a hitherto uncharted bit of frozen rock and ice.

All Kinds of Experts. The small ships are staffed with every kind of scientific expert. Naturally there are the navigators and engineers, but in addition there are fishery experts, the ornithologists, geologists, geographers and zoologists.

A landing is made on some new piece of territory, the flag is planted, scientific navigating calculations are made by the ordinary navigators and the rest of the investigators set about their allotted tasks in their own peculiar ways.

The mountains will attract the geologists. Every mound and hillock will be subjected to a minute orographic examination.

The river beds—if any—will be examined by them, samples taken and careful data kept. Samples will be taken with great care for more minute examination by other experts at home.

Meanwhile ornithologists have been collecting and studying the birds that inhabit the land, while the zoologists have been making similar pertinent and exhaustive inquiries into the animal life. From this the purely mineral potentialities are calculated and the prospect of their commercial exploitation is considered.

Mineral Prospects. The mineral prospects and possibilities of the Arctic and the Antarctic are as yet an unknown quantity to the world's scientists.

Perhaps, according to a British colonial office expert, the economic value of the minerals and animal and fishery life of the frozen continents will within our generation be as much an open book to the world in general as any building lot near any big city.

It is expected that then will begin the national rivalry as to ownership. Perhaps the League of Nations will appoint a polar land committee to decide some matters. The chief exploring countries at the moment are the United States of America, not a league member; Great Britain and the Scandinavian countries.

The latter have produced perhaps the most successful of all explorers in the Antarctic. But it has not been an empty glory for them. They have managed to corner most of the whaling industry.

For generations they have reigned supreme in this enterprise and they have to thank their exploratory seamen for this.

INVENTS WAY OF PUTTING SUNLIGHT TO USE IN FOOD

Thirty-Year-Old Cincinnati Professor Perfects Use of Ultra Violet Ray.

New York.—A thirty-year-old scientist of the University of Cincinnati has perfected a process for putting vitamin D into foods, and for sterilizing foods.

He is George Sperti, and patents covering his invention have been sold by the university to the General Foods Corporation of New York. Profits go to the university for further research.

Professor Sperti applied the quantum theory of physics to biology. One of the most important applications of the scientist's discovery is the action of ultra-violet light in forming vitamin D. He explained his invention to Chester Morton, who writes about it in the Review of Reviews.

"Years ago milk contained a pretty good quantity of vitamin D," said Professor Sperti. "Cows ate green plants which contained this quality and they themselves were out in the sunlight much of the time. Today, however, there is so much smoke and dirt in the air, even in the country, that cows no longer get the same amount of sunlight. Also, they are sometimes fed artificial food and as a result milk no longer contains a sufficient quantity of the vitamin.

"Yet when milk was subjected to the ordinary ultra-violet ray the experiment was not successful, for while the vitamin was produced it was also destroyed, and undesirable changes in taste and odor occurred. Now the wave length of light at which the vitamin is produced is different from that at which it is destroyed and also from that at which other undesirable changes take place. By filtering the ultra-violet rays we can keep the beneficial ones and shut out the harmful. In this way milk can be made to contain vitamin D."

Arkansas County Has Cars, Engine for Sale

Walnut Ridge, Ark.—A white elephant in the form of a black engine, eight red box cars, and a crimson caboose is on the hands of Lawrence county officials.

The engine and cars were seized when the Frisco railroad refused to obey the demand of Lawrence county to construct sheds at Hoxie.

Following the decision of the Arkansas Supreme court in favor of complainants, who asked that the railroad company build the sheds, the Frisco refused to pay fines totaling $7,800 and fees of $8,000 demanded by the prosecuting attorney, and the county seized the train.

Bids were opened recently for the purchase of the engine and cars. Only 50 cents was offered. And Lawrence county still has a "white elephant" for sale.

When Funston Captured Aguinaldo

GEN. FRED FUNSTON

GROUP OF MORO CHIEFS

FILIPINO CONSTABULARY

EMILIO AGUINALDO

EMILIO AGUINALDO

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THIRTY years ago America had a new national hero. He was "a little man with a slight limp; a little man who weighs less than a hundred pounds, with a Vandyske beard and a sense of humor that bubbles in him like the effervescence of wine." His name was Frederick Funston and his "mad-cap enterprise," as he himself called it, put his name on the lips of millions. For Funston had captured Emilio Aguinaldo, the leader of the Filipino insurgents, the most talked-of man in the Orient, if not in the whole world at that time, who for three years had been leading some 70,000 American troops and native auxiliaries a merry chase from one end of the province of Luzon to another. On March 23, 1901, the chase came to an end when, through the daring and the strategy of the little Kansan, this wily native leader was taken prisoner.

Insignificant though Funston may have been in appearance, few men's lives had been packed as full with adventure as had his when he sprang into fame almost overnight. He was born in Ohio in 1835, the son of a first lieutenant in the Union army, who in 1867 moved to Kansas when Frederick was two years old, where he was elected to the Kansas state legislature and later elected and repeatedly re-elected to congress.

Young Funston was educated in Iola, Kan., attended the University of Kansas for two years and then went to work as a newspaper reporter, first at Fort Smith, Ark., and later on the Kansas City Journal.

During the summer of 1896 he attended a mass meeting in New York called to arouse sympathy for the Cubans who were struggling to throw off the yoke of Spain. Funston became interested in the cause of Cuban liberty and offered his services to the Cuban Junta. After drilling recruits under its direction, he joined a filibustering expedition and aided in delivering to General Gomez the first Hotchkiss guns owned by the Cuban revolutionists. Two weeks later he was placed in charge of these guns as captain of artillery.

During his 18 months in Cuba Funston took part in 22 engagements and so fearful was the execution wrought by his guns (five pieces, including a pneumatic dynamite gun, the first ever used in battle) that the Spaniards set a price upon his head. At the battle of Samal his lungs were pierced by a Mauser bullet and while he was recovering from this wound his hip was injured by his horse falling upon it during a cavalry charge. This was followed by an attack of fever and with his health broken Funston attempted to reach the coast and escape to the United States.

He was arrested by the Spaniards but succeeded in convincing them that he was a deserter from the Cuban army (after swallowing the passport which would have betrayed him) and although they at first sentenced him to a firing squad and a stone wall, he was finally freed and sent to the United States. This was in 1890 and the next few years Funston spent on the lecture platform.

At the outbreak of the Spanish-American war he organized the Twentieth Kansas Volunteers a regiment similar to the Rough Riders, of which he was made a colonel. His regiment was ordered to the Philippines and in November, 1898, he joined Gen. Wesley Merritt at Manila and aided in the capture of the capital.

It is at this point that Aguinaldo comes into the picture. The early life and ancestry of this leader is cloaked in mystery. He is said to have much Spanish blood in his veins from which came his intelligence, his courage, his military ability and his political acumen. When in August, 1898, he declared himself president of the revolutionary government of the Philippines and general in chief of its army, he called himself Don Emilio Aguinaldo y Famy. He was even then dreaming of independence for his native land, after the Americans had defeated the hated Spaniard and these dreams led to the insurrection against the new masters of the islands.

Almost from the beginning of the insurrection Funston had been in the field against Aguinaldo's followers. His strict discipline had not made him especially popular with his soldiers, but after the affair at Murillo river in April, 1899, he had their unbounded respect. There he found the bridge across the river destroyed and a strong force of insurgents on the other side to resist a crossing by the Americans. Selecting 20 of those who volunteered to accompany him, Funston swam the river, drove the enemy back and took 80 prisoners. A few days later, with only 45 men, he crossed the Rio Grande at Calumpit on a raft, and after a desperate fight drove 2,500 of the enemy from an entrenched position. For this feat he was promoted to brigadier general of volunteers.

Throughout 1899 and 1900 there was constant fighting but always the leader of the insurgents eluded capture. Sometime during 1900 he seemed to have dropped out of sight entirely but in January, 1901, from his hiding place in the province of Isabela, Aguinaldo sent out a letter denouncing the subjugation of his country and the oaths of allegiance to the United States and ordered certain insurgent forces in southern Luzon to join him at the rendezvous in Isabela. The messenger entrusted with this letter surrendered to an American lieutenant in February and upon securing the information so long desired, General Funston determined upon a daring plan for capturing Aguinaldo. Going to Manila to lay his plans before his superiors, Generals MacArthur and Wheaton, he finally gained their consent to the attempt. Taking with him Capt. H. W. Newton and Russel T. Hazzard, Lieuts. Oliver P. M. Hazzard and Burton J. Mitchell and a company of 80 Macabebes who spoke the Tagalog language, he was landed on a beach south of Casiguran in the province of Principe on March 13, 1901.

Aguinaldo's messenger and the Macabebes scouts were to pass themselves off as a detachment of insurgent Tagalogs who had captured the five Americans and were taking them as prisoners to Aguinaldo. The position of Funston and his companions was a dangerous one. Everything depended upon the faithfulness of the Macabebes. Should they turn traitor to the Americans, it meant certain death. But they remained faithful and after a fatiguing and dangerous march of seven days and nights, the party reached a point eight miles from Palanan, Aguinaldo's hiding place. A message, stamped with the seal of General Lacuna, an Aguinaldo supporter, which had been found among the papers handed over by the insurgent leader's messenger, was sent forward to Aguinaldo and a prompt response was received, welcoming the party. The Americans and their fake Tagalogs hastened forward. Funston himself was not present at the actual capture. That he entrusted to a Spaniard, Iazaro Segovia, and a detachment of the scouts. The story, as Funston told it later, follows:

"Running up the bank toward the house, we were met by Segovia, who came running out, his face aglow with exultation and his clothes spattered with the blood of the men he had wounded. He called out in Spanish: 'It is all right; we have him.' We hastened into the house and I introduced myself to Aguinaldo, telling him that we were officers of the American army, that the men with us were our troops, and not his, and that he was a prisoner of war. He was given assurance that he need fear no bad treatment. He said, in a dazed sort of way: 'Is this not some joke?' I assured him that it was not, though, as a matter of fact, it was a pretty bad one on him. While naturally agitated, his bearing was dignified, and in this moment of his fall there was nothing of the craven."

In after years Aguinaldo was loud in his praise of Funston for the audacity and skill of his plan, saying that only by the stratagem used could he have been captured. The news that Aguinaldo was captured was flashed to the United States and was hailed with delight as the sign that the long and weary war against the insurgents was over at last. President McKinley on March 30 commissioned Funston a brigadier general in the regular army and had it not been for his untimely death in 1917 it is probable that he would have been commander in chief of the A. E. F. when the United States entered the World war. His only part in that great conflict was to give his name to a training camp in Kansas where thousands of men received their training for "over there."

The DAIRY

ELDERLY HOLSTEIN STEADY PRODUCER

Beauty Segis De Kol Is Winning Renown.

Although just an "ordinary" pure-bred Holstein cow worth on the block about $50 at present butcher's prices, Beauty Segis De Kol, owned by the Upper Peninsula experiment station of Chatham, Mich., has become famous throughout the state of Michigan and her sturdy production and reproduction year after year are winning renown for herself and her unbroken string of living descendants throughout the nation.

Beauty is the sole survivor of a number of cows purchased for the establishment of a foundation herd at the Chatham station in 1914. At that time the Upper Peninsula was largely undeveloped and animals of rugged constitution were required. Soon after her purchase, Beauty dropped a heifer calf that is still in the herd and she and her descendants have produced more than 70 calves of which nearly two-thirds have been females. In the station herd are some 30 head that are descendants of Beauty that include living daughters, granddaughters, and great-granddaughters. Twenty-nine male descendants of Beauty have been in service and twenty-six of them are in nine different counties of the Upper Michigan peninsula.

No advanced registry records have ever been made on Beauty, but the station herd was put under the Holstein herd test plan and she is credited with a herd test record by the Holstein-Friesian Association of America with 11,772 pounds of milk containing 379.4 pounds of butterfat on three daily milkings in 299 days, and this record was begun when fifteen years old. Cow-testing records and the barn milk sheets indicate that she has produced in her lifetime a total exceeding 150,000 pounds of milk and 4,600 pounds of butterfat since she first freshened back in 1915. Her best record, according to the barn milk sheets, was made in 1920 when at seven years of age she produced 15,184 pounds of milk containing an estimated total of 455.52 pounds of butterfat. Her best C. T. A. record, begun when fourteen years old, amounted to 12,548 pounds of milk containing 376.38 pounds of butterfat.

Dairy Profits Largely Under Operator's Control

A great many dairymen give a lot more attention to the price of butterfat than they do to the cost of producing it. Price, of course, is an important factor and is worthy of consideration, but the cost of producing a pound of butterfat, taking dairy farmers as a group, varies a great deal more on different farms than the price thereof, even under the most favorable market conditions. This is a well known fact among progressive dairymen, but apparently not among the rank and file of those who milk cows regularly. On that account it is a matter worthy of emphasis—worthy of much thought and study.

From a summary of the yearly records of hundreds of thousands of cows belonging to herd improvement associations, the disadvantage of maintaining low producing cows has been brought out in a very striking manner—in a way that should make the owners of that class sit up and take notice. More than that—it ought to cause them to do something about it.

Dairy Facts

Unless a farmer has an abundance of hay made from alfalfa, the clovers, soy beans, or other legumes for his cows in milk, it is difficult to make profit.

A pen of calves that consumed only four gallons of water daily when it was kept before them at ordinary temperatures, drank 15 gallons daily when fed warm after feeding.

There is no question but alfalfa hay is one of the very best if not altogether the best and most valuable roughage available to the cattleman and the dairyman in particular.

Good cows fed well and properly cared for will return profits even under adverse conditions. Join the local cow testing association so the ability of each cow may be determined.

Get the most from purchased grains by feeding dairy cows 16 per cent protein mixtures with alfalfa and clover hay, 20 per cent with mixed hay, and 24 per cent with timothy.

Only 2½ per cent of all the cows of milking age in New York state are on test in dairy, herd, improvement associations or dairy record clubs.

In 1930, New York dairymen had 364 herds that averaged 300 pounds of butter fat; in 1929 there were 308 such herds.

When a farmer feeds all of the cows in the herd about the same amount of grain, some are underfed, some are overfed, and others get about what they should have.

NOVELTY EFFECTS IN STRAWS POPULAR FOR SPRING WEAR

ONE CANNOT get away from plaids and stripes and color contrasts and novelty effects of all sorts—they are in the very air, even in the millinery realm where the new and extremely popular straws are as novel as genius can devise them.

The two-or-more color idea, which is being so conspicuously featured in fabrics for the costume, is reflected throughout the new straws whether they be in the form of braids, bandings or bodies. It is possible to get as smooth or as rough a straw as one may wish, and many of the bands and braids used for the initial spring hats have high-lustered cellophane interwoven with them.

Outstanding interest centers about gingham and plaid straw effects with tweedlike versions presenting an arresting theme for the smart suit hat. Such combinations as navy and white, black and beige, and also red and white, are in the lead.

Ribbon trims have come in to their own again and the use of clever feather novelties is exploited by all the best milliners. The hats in the picture are highly representative of what's what for wear with midday's chic jacket-suit or new spring coat.

The first model is one of the new novelty straws of fine satiny finish in a tweedy patterning. You may vision it in brown and beige, navy and white, or black and white. Its one-side long brim and its ribbon trim in striking two-color contrast are significant as to style trends.

Note the amusing little feathers sprouting out from the center of the crown of the hat to the right at the top. Back-crown trimmings such as this are very smart.

Again a tweedlike straw for the center hat, this time with a novel arrangement of ribbon the pleated crescent-shaped frill at the back solving the problem of an ungainly hairline at the nape of the neck.

The last model is made of wide banding formed of red and white straw together with black cellophane. This striking color contrast being typical of the effects which prevail both in fabric and in straws.

fastening and the belt which styles this short jacket, for they are details of outstanding importance. For frocks as well as coats, jackets and the blouse, diagonal effects are being played up in every conceivable way. The same may be said in regard to the big square lapels which register full on the new style program.

Referring again to the color question, while there is no doubt that the present mood is for vivid effects which have to do with startling contrasts, at the same time there is no lack of interest in carefully conceived combinations which artfully blend related tones and tints.

The program for spring records such unusual color alliances as navy, white and gray, or brown, pistachio, green and yellow, also black, white and red, white brown, turquoise and pale beige is quoted as one of the most successful tricolor effects of the season.

Trimming the smart woollens with plaid or stripe is also made a feature of the new modes. Usually it is a novel scarf which says "it" loudly with color, with the jacket lining and other details uniting in a chorus of plaids or stripes or whatever the motif may be. Perhaps the message of color contrast is most frequently relayed in the costume with a jacket of an entirely different color.

This vogue is smartly expressed in terms of plaid for the shirt topped with a jacket in solid tone, either black navy, red, dark green or brown. Quite unusual, brown for spring, but Paris designers are exploiting it.

Attention is especially called to the single large square lapel, the diagonal

Stunning Semi-Tailored Costume.

Fashions are tremendously interesting this spring. Not for many a season have the details which style the costume been so versatile, so refreshingly original and so altogether charming.

If accent is placed on one phase of the mode more than another, the emphasis falls on color. Whether your taste runs to the conservative or the bizarre, fashion demands that the color scheme of your costume down to the slightest accessory be worked to a nicety.

For the stunning semitailored two piece in the picture, beige with brown is the chosen theme. A beige woolen of spongy weave is the material, brown, flat caracul is the fur which travels diagonally across the short jacket, and the story of this perfect spring outfit concludes with a hat of brown felt and dainty kid shoes in the identical shade of brown.

Attention is especially called to the single large square lapel, the diagonal

WOMEN SHOULD LEARN USES OF MAGNESIA

To women who suffer from nausea, or so-called "morning sickness," this is a blessing. Most nurses know it. It is advised by leading specialists: Over a small quantity of finely cracked ice pour a teaspoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. Sip slowly until you are relieved. It ends sick stomach or inclination to vomit.

Its anti-acid properties make Phillips' Milk of Magnesia quick relief in heartburn, sour stomach, gas. Its mild laxative action assures regular bowel movement. Used as a mouth-wash it helps prevent tooth decay during expectancy.

Muddled

Jennie Lee of Los Angeles declares it must all be a matter of environment. For instance, on a visit to Gilman Hot Springs she overheard a young man say to his girl friend:

"I'm going over and take a mud bath and after that we'll go for a stroll in the moonlight. Okay?"

"Stroll with you after your mud bath?" repeated the girl, "now don't get sentimental."

"The modern girl does not regard herself as merely something to be eventually possessed by some man," declares Rupert Hughes. "Life for her has become a fifty-fifty proposition, as made clear by the young lady when her boy friend proposed. 'Will you be my life partner?' he burbled in the time-honored manner. 'How much capital can you put in?' demanded the modern miss, producing her own bankbook."

Cold in Head, Chest or Throat?

RUB Musterole well into your chest and throat—almost instantly you feel easier. Repeat the Musterole-rub once an hour for five hours... what a glorious relief!

Those good old-fashioned cold remedies—oil of mustard, menthol, camphor—are mixed with other valuable ingredients in Musterole to make it what doctors call a "counter-irritant" because it gets action and is not just a salve.

It penetrates and stimulates blood circulation and helps to draw out infection and pain. Used by millions for 20 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. Keep Musterole handy—jars, tubes. All druggists.

To Mothers—Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

Deserved Employment

Mizue Hiasa, a laborer, found employment at Osaka, Japan, after walking 200 miles from Tokyo, carrying his four-year-old child on his back. A newspaper publisher published his picture and a brother he had not seen for eight years recognized it. The brother's employer gave Hiasa a job.

Modern Method

Clark—Does your milkman sell "milk from contented cows"? Davenport—No, he sells milk from cheerful faucets.

In trying to look prosperous, one has to be careful not to look merely loud.

How you feel in the morning tells the real story

THAT'S the time you should feel like whistling and singing. Your muscles should itch to tackle the day's work. Your mind should quickly solve the problem that baffled you the afternoon before. Don't let your health slip away so that a night's rest falls in its natural recuperative powers. When you awaken with a "dragged out" physical or mental feeling, heed those bad symptoms. That's the time you need a dependable tonic to help restore your old time energy. Try a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which is sold by druggists.

VOL. I MARCH 13, 1931 NUMBER 45

WE ARE INFORMED—By a reliable authority that if she kisses a baby on the cheek, she's a young girl; if she kisses its mouth, she's an old maid; if she kisses the back of its neck, she is a mother.

We are handling the Wolverine fertilizer. We can save you from $3.00 to $6.00 per ton. This is a Michigan fertilizer, made by Michigan people at Lansing.

Speaking of the expression, "clean as a hound's tooth"—why is a hound's tooth cleaner than a bull dog's, for instance?

We're Referring This to V. F. Marzinski:—

Agent: This policy would protect you, too, in case your wife should die.

Mr. Henpeck: But in that case I wouldn't need protection.

Feeds we carry: Whole kettle-dried corn, cracked corn, ground oats, scratch feed, corn and oat chop, bran, middlings, wheat screenings, Hexite.

Blessed are the poor and ignorant. They don't feel un^obligation to raise the bedroom window every night.

We have Mason's and hydrated lime on hand at 50c per sack.

Just received another car of the famous Hexite.

A little boy, according to a friend of ours, stumbled on a pile of empty tin cans on his first visit to the country. He examined them; discovered they were old condensed milk cans and called, "Daddy, come quick—I've found a cow's nest."

Some day we're going to learn all the words to "My Country 'Tis of Thee."

"Dear," said the poet, "I think we'd make a good couplet."

"Well," sighed the girl, "don't think I'm averse."

Diseases Caused by Mind

We should be surprised if, suffering from rheumatism, we went to a doctor and, instead of being given medicine, we were told to cease our cynicism and the rheumatism would depart. Yet that may be the procedure shortly, for it has been established that certain diseases are caused by the action of the mind—the thoughts we think, and the feelings and emotions thereby raised.

More than 73,000 miles in a New Ford

THE substantial worth of the new Ford is reflected in its good performance, economy and reliability. Its stamina and endurance are particularly apparent in sections where bad roads and severe weather put a heavy extra burden on the automobile.

In less than a year a new Ford Tudor Sedan was driven more than seventy-three thousand miles over a difficult route. The operating cost per mile was very low and practically the only expense for repairs was for new piston rings and a new bearing for the generator.

The car carried an average load of 1200 pounds of mail and was driven 250 miles daily. "The Ford has never failed to go when I was ready," writes one of the three mail carriers operating the car. "The starter did the trick last winter even at 34 degrees below zero. The gas runs about 20 miles per gallon. At times I pull a trailer whenever I have a bulky load."

Many other Ford owners report the same satisfactory performance. Every part has been made to endure — to serve you faithfully and well for many thousands of miles.

SUCH IS LIFE--The Good Boy

 "You have to believe in happiness—It isn't an outward thing. The spring never makes the song, I guess. As much as the song the spring. Aye, many a heart could find content. If it saw the joy on the road it went. The joy ahead when it had to grieve. For the joy is there—but you have to believe."

CHOCOLATE DAINTIES

Chocolate in various forms has always been a most popular confection, dessert, cake or cake filling. As nearly everybody likes chocolate one may satisfy the taste of any as regards the kind of cake. From loaf to drop cakes, simple or rich, they always find a glad welcome.

Chocolate Caramels.—Put two and one-half tablespoons of butter into a saucepan, when melted add two cupsfuls of molasses, one cupful of brown sugar, and stir until the sugar is dissolved and when the boiling point is reached add three squares of chocolate grated, stirring constantly until the chocolate is melted. Boil until a firm ball is formed when a little is dropped into cold water. Add one teaspoonful of vanilla and turn into a buttered pan to cool.

Chocolate Custard Pie.—Line a pie plate with pastry, flute the rim and fill with the following: Beat the yolks of three eggs slightly, add one-half cupful of sugar and continue beating, add one tablespoonful of soft butter, the same of flour, three-fourths of a cupful of milk and two squares of melted chocolate; flavor with vanilla and bake. Spread with a meringue made of the egg whites and one-half cupful of powdered sugar. Return to the oven and brown.

Chocolate Cup Cakes.—Take one-half cupful of shortening, add one cupful of sugar and cream, add one and one-half cupfuls of flour with two and one-half teaspoonfuls of baking powder finely sifted alternately with one-half cupful of milk, add two beaten yolks of eggs, three squares of melted chocolate, one-half teaspoonful of salt and one teaspoonful of vanilla, before the milk and flour is added. Fold in at the last the well beaten whites of two eggs. Bake in small gem pans.

Vergil More Than Match for "Devyls of Hell"

There are several stories telling how Vergil became acquainted with the "devyls of hell." According to one German legend, Vergil was one day digging in his garden when he came upon a glass filled with what appeared to be wriggling earthworms. But a voice came from the glass begging Vergil to open it and promising to teach him many arts. "Teach me the arts," replied Vergil cannily, "and I will break the bottle and set you free." So they taught him all they knew, and when he opened the bottle, 72 devils crawled out and disappeared.

In another version, a single devil promised to give Vergil the magical book of Solomon if he would release him from the bottle. Vergil did so, but, frightened by the size of the liberated spirit, tricked him into returning to the bottle in the same way as the fisherman in the "Arabian Nights" tricked the jinn. "Surely you can't make yourself as small as the bottle again," said Vergil. "Easily," replied the devil, and to prove it, returned to the flask. Vergil promptly put in the stopper and kept him prisoner forever. —Baltimore Sun.

German Pronunciation

In Germany there is no standard of pronunciation that is acknowledged and absolutely followed by the mass of intelligent people. The so-called standard of some people is the pronunciation of the stage, which again is divided into the pronunciation of tragedy and comedy. In the latter, of course, is heard the more natural pronunciation of everyday life. The sectional differences are very marked, but in general there is a North German and a South German pronunciation.

Arkansas National Park

Hot Springs National park, opened in 1921, is located in the middle part of Arkansas. It is one and one-half miles in area. There are 46 hot springs said to possess healing properties, and 19 bath houses under government supervision. The land was reserved by congress in 1832 as the Hot Springs reservation to prevent exploitation of the hot waters.

Pride and Pluck

The Grand Duke Boris said in an interview on his arrival in New York: "We Russians, when we consider Russia's plight, have to be as plucky as the street musician. A street musician was cheerily blowing 'Christmas Awake' on his cornet on Christmas day in a driving snowstorm. The snow fell fast and furious, a bitter wind blew, and as the musician tooted away a pretty girl passed. The musician looked down at his feet, buried in the snow to the ankles, and then he said to himself: "Oh, thank heaven for this deep snow! My shoes are split and full of holes, but she can't see them."

Horrors of Russian Prison Camp

Heisingfors.—A young specialist in agricultural science who recently managed to escape from the North Russian timber lands arrived here recently and described conditions there. The prisoners in the camp to which he belonged had to live in a wooden shed, the roof of which consisted of loose pieces of wood covered with mud. When the snow melted, or when there was rain, black, muddy water dripped constantly on the sleeping workers, who then had to get up at 5 a. m. to start their work, soaked to the skin. Their clothing consisted of rags, entirely insufficient to protect them against the cold of a nine-month winter.

Only One-Fourth Criminals. Of the prisoners about one-fourth were criminals and the rest were guilty of political offenses. Almost all of them were forced to work in the forests. The work was set on a task basis, the usual assignment consisting of cutting, trimming and piling 35 logs a day. Strong and well-trained young workers managed to get through their task in 14 hours, but the average time was 18 hours. In the morning when going to work each man received 800 grams of moist bread, which was almost uneatable, and no other food was issued until the day's task was finished. On returning to their shed the prisoners were given a little soup, made from salt fish, and some hot water to drink.

Almost daily some workers would fail at his task. Such unfortunates were beaten with sticks, or put under arrest in an icy cellar, stripped of all clothing but their shirts. Or else they would get no food at all and be sent out to do the task the next day. Those who were subject to such punishments of course were completely exhausted, but this was not accepted as an excuse for failure. Fresh punishment was applied on the following days, so that these slaves were actually being slowly beaten to death.

Epidemics Kill Thousands. Refusal to work resulted in immediate execution. The same refers to attempts to escape. Once three peasants endeavored to get away. The chekists, on skis, followed their tracks, shot them from behind, and brought the bodies back. The three naked and mutilated bodies were deposited for three days outside the threshold of the shed, so that all workers had to step over them.

No wages or other remuneration was paid to these workers. On account of the miserable conditions all kinds of epidemics were raging, killing thousands. If at any time a prisoner survived a three-year term a fresh reason for continued punishment was invented so that hardly anyone who had been sent to these slavery districts had a chance of getting out alive.

In the famous Solovjetsk district, near the island of that name, there were eight divisions with 50,000 prisoners each. Thus there were 400,000 slaves in the district, and in the Archangel division the figure was certain to be above this, the escaped prisoner said. Altogether, therefore, there are well over 1,000,000 slaves working in the Soviet lumber camps.

Getting One's Name Into the Paper

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
 Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

When I was fourteen or so I became acquainted with the editor of our local newspaper. The editor was a shrewd young fellow who was mainly concerned in increasing his circulation at a minimum cost and in developing an interest in advertising among the local merchants. He thought it might be helpful in the accomplishment of the first purpose if he featured the celebrities and near celebrities in the rural neighborhood from which I came by appointing me as his weekly correspondent from that community. I was to receive the newspaper free of charge for my services together with a supply of stamped envelopes and print paper upon which to write tirades and tragedy of the locality.

I was a novice in the art of journalism. I knew, of course, that births, marriages, deaths, cyclones, and other disasters of irregular occurrence should be recounted and I was familiar with the conventional phrases in which these stories should be told, but it was a healthy and a quiet community and I knew that these outstanding events would be of comparatively rare occurrence. "What shall I write about?" I inquired. "Nothing happens very often where we live." "What people want most," the editor replied, "is to see their names in the paper. Get in the names. Look around and see what the neighbors are doing, and if possible what they are doing well, and speak about it—but always names correctly spelled and with the right initials. Nobody will forgive you if the name is wrong." I learned, slowly, I suppose. Houses were being painted and hedges trimmed, and grain harvested, and people coming across the township to spend Sunday with an old neighbor. There were simple social functions—parties and singing school and spelling bees and occasionally some one would die or get married and give me a chance to spread myself journalistically. It was the names which counted. The editor was right.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

By WALTER TRUMBULL

When the Grand Duchess Marie of Russia, now in business, arrived in the United States, her baggage consisted mainly of a guitar and a Russian typewriter. Some friends, who were away from the city, had arranged to give her the temporary use of their eleven room Park avenue apartment, which was furnished, but destitute of servants. The first morning, other friends sent a maid around to cook her breakfast, but the second morning she had to do it herself. This was well enough, except for the fact that she had never before seen a gas stove or coffee percolator. She got the elevator boy to light the gas stove, but the coffee was a failure. After that, they got her a maid recently landed from Finland. The grand duchess could speak seven languages, but Finnish was not one of them. The maid could speak one language, and that was Finnish. The maid had a husband who spoke English, so when the Grand duchess wished to communicate with her, she wrote a note to the husband and the maid took it home to have it translated.

The titled Russian, a very good looking woman, always will remember her first meeting with a New York policeman. She doesn't know exactly what he expected, but she evidently impressed him favorably. Looking her over, he exclaimed: "So you're a grand duchess! Well, you're not so bad."

John Mulholland, the magician, tells me that when you use thousands of packs of new cards, you occasionally find a pack which has been incorrectly assembled. Giving a performance recently, he allowed a member of the gathering to select a card from a freshly opened deck and then asked him if he was sure he knew what card he held.

"I certainly do," said the spectator, "and you should know, too. There is another just like it on the bottom of that deck." And it was true. The deck contained two jacks of spades.

Battling Disease Among Eskimos

Sydney, N. S.—The Eskimos of the Canadian Arctic are today reasonably immune from the threat of racial extinction, which has confronted them in recent years.

Originally a hardy race, the Eskimos' health deteriorated rapidly after their first contacts with white civilization, due to their adoption of the softer foods used by the whites. Medical experts of the Canadian government spent most of last year in the Far North, however, and now on their return announce that the health of the natives has been reasonably safeguarded once more.

An outbreak of influenza took a heavy toll of life in several Eskimo settlements last summer, but blood tests, taken by the medical men, resulted finally in checking the ravages of the plague.

Dr. L. D. Livingstone, chief medical health officer for the Canadian department of the interior, on the return of the government patrol ship Beothic, after a 9,000-mile voyage through Arctic wastes, tells a stirring story of life in the land of the midnight sun, and of the task of safeguarding the health of both the natives and of the Royal Canadian mounted police detachments.

Doctor Hugh A. Stewart, another member of the expedition, tells of making a 950-mile journey by dog team to Pond's inlet, a trip which took 52 days, and which has only twice been accomplished by an unaccompanied white man. A week after starting on his trek he was forced to return to his starting point when his tent was torn to ribbons in a blizzard, and for two nights his only shelter was the rags of the tent. At the present time points as far north as Pond's inlet are in perpetual darkness, Doctor Stewart states. The sun just shows as a red rim above the horizon, creating a twilight effect similar to that of the dawn hour; and then sinks again.

Gold Mining "Camps" on Banks of Blue Danube

There's a gold rush going on today near the town of Gyor in Hungary. Some one noticed that the Danube near Gyor wasn't blue and beautiful at all, but yellow and muddy. So peasants from the vicinity proceeded to the Danube, set up camps there, and are washing the water vigorously. Strange to say, some gold has actually been found—three grains to one cubic meter of Danube mud. The peasant camps are busy and engineers are investigating.

The Plains of Abraham

By James Oliver Curwood

He was heavy with doubt when the march was resumed, for he saw the bitter souls hidden in the breasts of the warriors. Hepsibah Adams had made him see the truth, and he knew these men owed nothing to the people of his race except loss and shame. Many times he had thought that, if fate had placed his fortunes among them, he would have hated with the grimmest of their hatred. The freedom and pride which were once the heritage of their wide domains were no longer the controlling factors in their existence. Their wars had ceased to be wars which gave birth to forest gods and epics of unforgettable heroism. Their star was setting, and with its decline the white man had transformed them into common killers, and in this new calling it made small difference to them whether they slew enemies or those who posed as friends, as long as the skins were white. So the nobility which Toinette saw in their captors was poisoned for Jeems by what was concealed within their hearts. The greatest of all hates was not the hate of a man for a man, but the hate of a race for a race, and he knew that at a word from Tiaoga the men about him would be turned into fiends. Most of all he feared Tiaoga, for Shindas had told him that Tiaoga's father had been killed by a white man and his son by an English Mohawk.

Whatever their fate was to be, this day would bring it. He was sure Toinette could not keep up the pace much longer, and he strengthened himself for the moment when the Seneca chief would find himself compelled to give a decision. That Tiaoga had claimed her for his daughter gave him hope, but if in her frailty Toinette was condemned to die, he was determined that she should not die alone.

It was not long afterward that the warriors observed Tiaoga limping slightly. This sign of physical difficulty increased in his walk until, furious because of his weakness, he drove his hatchet head-deep into a tree and paused to bind a piece of buckskin tightly about the ankle he had wrenched. Progress was slower after this. It continued to slacken as the afternoon waned, until the hand of a spiritual guidance seemed to be working for Toinette. It was useless to attempt a concealment of her condition. Her strength was gone. Her body was racked as if it had been beaten. Another mile and she would have sunk to the ground, glad to have an end to her torture. But fate, and Tiaoga's hurt, intervened to save her. They came at last to a hardwood plain in which was a pigeon roost.

Tiaoga spoke to Shindas. "We have been a long time without meat, Broken Feather. In a few hours there will be plenty here. We will feast and then sleep and will not travel again until morning."

Then Shindas knew the truth, but his countenance did not change. He soon had a chance to speak to Jeems.

"For the first time I have discovered my uncle to be a great liar," he said. "His ankle is as sound as mine. It is for the little fawn he has pretended a hurt and stops here for meat. She is safe. He will not kill her."

When Jeems translated this Toinette bowed her head and cried softly. Tiaoga saw her. Crumpled on the ground with Jeems' arm around her, she looked like Silver Heels, with her long black braid falling over her shoulder. No one was conscious of the strain at his heart as he came toward her. Warriors, wide-eyed, saw that he did not limp, and in his attitude was a tigerish defiance of what they might think. He paused before the girl and dropped his beaverskin blanket at her feet. Toinette looked up through tears and smiled again as a strange softness stole over the savage face. He gazed at her steadily, as if he were seeing a spirit, and said:

"The soul of Soi Yan Makwun has come to abide in you!"

Soi Yan Makwun was Silver Heels. Tiaoga turned away, and his warriors knew that his decision had been made. There would be no haste after this in the direction of Hidden Town. On a couch made of the beaverskin and armsful of balsam boughs which Jeems had carried from the creek bottom, Toinette rested while the Indians prepared for the evening feast. She smoothed and rebraided her hair as she watched them, and although every bone in her body seemed to have an ache of its own, she felt a sensation of complete relaxation stealing over her for the first time since the tragedy at Tonteur manor. The mental ease which came to soften her environment embraced her in such a stealthy way that she was unconscious of the moment when her eyes closed in complete surrender to the exhaustion which was claiming her.

Jeems returned from one of the fires bearing a stick on which a dozen of the cooked pigeons were spitted. He did not awaken Toinette, but after he had finished his meal, he broiled another dozen of the pigeons until they were as brown as chestnuts and stored them away with a roasted lily root and a few artichokes.

For two hours the cooking continued, and when it was finished, with the night's kill ready for future use, Tiaoga's warriors wrapped themselves in their blankets and lay down to sleep. The camp was soon in silence, and for a long time Jeems sat meditating upon the changes which had come into his life within the space of two days and nights. That everything was gone and that he and Toinette were the only ones left of those who had so recently made up their world seemed a monstrous exaggeration of fact. Toinette, sleeping quietly, forced the truth upon him, and from the racking visions of his thoughts he turned to her with yearning to hold her closely in his arms. Her face was of childlike loveliness in the glow of the stars. So complete was her fatigue that dark dreams did not mar the solace of her unconsciousness. When the night was half gone, he made a pillow of balsams, and before he fell asleep he drew Toinette's hand to him gently and pressed his lips against it.

Dawn, another day, then night again. The journey was no longer impossible for Toinette. When she neared exhaustion, camp was made, and when she awoke the march was resumed. Tiaoga called her Soi Yan Makwun, and the warriors regarded her with kindlier eyes. As the days continued and they witnessed her courage, their hearts grew warm toward her, and at times their glances revealed an admiration and friendliness which were never in Tiaoga's.

These days served also as the bridge across which Jeems and Toinette were passing into a future that was all their own, and the poignancy of the loss they had suffered was mellowed by these newer aspects so vital to themselves. The world they had known was a fabric which had crashed in ruin about them—a desolation out of which another existence was building itself. As the deeper solitudes of the wilderness claimed them, this feeling became a bond which nothing could break. Wherever they went and whatever happened, they would belong to each other, for death might separate but it could not destroy.

On the fourteenth day, Tiaoga sent a messenger ahead. That evening he sat on the ground near Toinette, and Jeems translated what he said. Tomorrow they would reach Hidden Town, and his people would be expecting them. There would be great rejoicing because they had taken many scalps and had not lost a man. They would honor her—and Jeems, accepting them as flesh of their flesh and bone of their bone. Toinette would live as his daughter. Silver Heels' heart would live in her song. She would be of the forests—forever. That was the word he had sent ahead to Chenusio. Tiaoga was coming with his daughter.

He stalked into darkness, and for a time Jeems and Toinette were afraid to speak the thought which was choking at their hearts.

"Your children and your children's children."

That night Toinette lay staring at the sky with sleepless eyes.

CHAPTER IX

Guarded like a precious jewel on all sides, a hidden town literally as well as in name, Chenusio was one of the greatest of the strange social centers of the Indians to which prisoners with white skins were brought to be adopted by their captors. That such places existed was a fact which had but recently gained credence in both the English and French colonies. Not until 1764 was Colonel Boquet to free the "white" population in the first of these mystery villages, and then the deliverance which he brought about resulted in less of happiness than of tragedy, for the life and associations which he disrupted in the name and claim of the Colonies had their roots as far back as the third and fourth generations. Hearts and homes were broken as well as prisoners' shackles.

Chenusio was the Rome of a wide domain in that period of its history when Jeems and Toinette came with Tiaoga and his warriors. In it were three hundred people, and at full strength it numbered sixty fighting men. It nestled at the edge of a large meadow which the river embraced in a horseshoe curve and its center was a stockaded stronghold with long houses, storage buildings, cabins, and tepees sufficient for the entire population in times of stress.

The Senecas had vineyards and fine orchards of apples, cherries, and plums, and they also grew tobacco and potatoes on a considerable scale. In the cornfields and growing from the

Long Line of "Caesars" in Annals of Old Rome

Caesar was the surname of a renowned branch of a line of Roman patrician generals with the forename Julia. They claimed descent from the sons of Aeneas, the mythical Iulus.

Sextus Julius Caesar, a praetor in 208 B. C., is the earliest by that name to be mentioned in history. No direct male descendant was left to bear the name of the great Julius Caesar. Octavius, whom he had adopted and who later became the Emperor Augustus, took the name. The name passed, also through adoption, from Augustus to his immediate successors, Tiberius and Caligula. The use of the name was continued by Claudius and Nero, although they were not Iulii. When Nero was killed, the use of Caesar as a family name was discontinued and it became the title of the reigning emperor. The title Caesar was used later to designate especially the heir presumptive, although it continued to remain part of the imperial title. It is from the title Caesar that those of the former Russian czars and German kaisers were derived.

When the season was good, Chenusio lived in comfort during the long winter months. The granaries were full, large quantities of dried fruits were in the storehouses, and underground cellars were stocked with apples, pumpkins, potatoes, and squashes. When the season was bad, Chenusio drew a belt tightly about its stomach for five months of the year. For three of these months it starved.

This was a bad season. Spring frosts had killed the early vegetation and had blackened the buds of apples and plums. The corn was so poor that, after roasting time, only enough was left for the next year's planting, and beans and potatoes had suffered until there was less than a third of a crop. But the people of Chenusio wore no appearance of gloom on the day when Tiaoga and his triumphant warriors were to arrive from the east. Tiaoga's messenger had brought the news that not a man had been lost in their invasion of the territory of their enemies. This was unusual, and it put fresh courage into the hearts of those who had seen the year go against them. Tiaoga's homecoming with the spoils of war was an augury which more than discounted empty cellars and granaries.

As a part of these spoils, they knew Tiaoga was bringing a daughter to take the place of Silver Heels.

This convinced them that fortune was bound to smile on them again. They had loved Soi Yan Makwun. With her death had come bad times. Now the spirits would give them an easy winter, and next year would see the earth flowering with good things.

Chenusio made ready for the feast. There were still plenty of early things and a supply of late green corn packed away in husks and kept for this occasion.

The last day was long for Toinette. It had begun at dawn, and though Tiaoga halted his men at intervals to let her rest, it had not ended with dusk. Darkness came before they reached a plain on the far side of which was a hill. Beyond this hill was Chenusio. They could see the glow of a great fire lighting the sky.

Toinette forgot her exhaustion at this sign of the end of their journey. She observed that some one took from Jeems the scalp of the man he had killed, which he had tried to conceal from her eyes under a flap of buckskin. Then she saw all of the scalps taken by the Senecas fastened like dangling fish to a slender pole which was carried on the shoulders of two men, the hair of one of these scalps reaching almost to the ground. With the scalp carriers in the lead, they came to the hill at the edge of the plain and looked down on the valley of Chenusio.

At Tiaoga's command the men bearing the scalp-laden pole had gone ahead, and now Tiaoga followed with his men in single file. Toinette and Jeems were midway in the line. Wide slave collars of buckskin had been placed about their necks, and Jeems was stripped of his weapons. The warriors did not hurry. Their step was slow and steady, and not a man broke the silence with a whisper or a word. A sea of torches advanced. It rolled in and out of hollows like a flood, then came to a level place and formed two streaming lines of fire. The scalp bearers reached these a hundred yards ahead of Tiaoga and his men. Toinette could see them enter the light of the torches, and in these moments the voices of the savages rose to the heavens. Tiaoga paused, and not until the scalp bearers had paraded their grisly burden the entire length of the gauntlet of flame did he proceed again.

Toinette felt stealing over her a strange faintness of body and limb. Stories which she had forgotten, stories she had heard of the Indians from childhood, stories that had sent shivers through the hearts of a thousand homes along the frontiers all crowded upon her at once. Wild tales of appalling torture and vengeance, of stake and fire and human suffering. She had listened to them from her father's lips, from passing voyageurs, had heard them in the gossip of the seigneurie. And she remembered by name this ordeal which awaited them. It was Le Chemin de Feu—the Road of Fire—through which they must pass. Others had died in it. Roasted by pitch-filled torches, blinded, killed by inches. So she had been told.

HISTORY'S MYSTERIES

Unsolved Riddles That Still Puzzle Authorities Here and Abroad

Who Killed Charles Lefarge?

"MURDER will out," declared the old adage—but, like many sayings of this kind, the statement is manifestly refuted by a large number of mysteries upon the record books of the police in all parts of the world and, of these, there are few which are more baffling or mysterious than the story of Marie Capelle, granddaughter of the famous duke of Orleans—Philippe Egalite.

At the age of twenty-three this girl, wealthy and beautiful, entered into what was commonly termed a "marriage of convenience" with Charles Lefarge, went to live at his country home, "Les Glandiers." As both the participating parties were wealthy, the wedding created a considerable amount of talk throughout France and it was freely stated that the marital relations between the young couple were not as happy as they might have been, owing both to the interference of the mother of the groom and the fact that the bride was in love with another man. These reports, however, grew less frequent as time passed and there were evidences of happiness about the grounds at "Les Glandiers."

Finally, as her husband was on the verge of leaving on a business trip to Paris—accompanied by one of his foremen named Denis—Mme. Lefarge made a will leaving everything to her husband and he, in turn, executed a similar document, bequeathing all his property to his wife in the event of his death. Some two weeks later, Lefarge received a letter from his wife stating that she was sending him a cake which she desired him to eat at midnight, at which time she would also eat a piece and think of him. Immediately after eating the cake, Lefarge was taken ill and, still accompanied by Denis, returned home. During the sickness which followed, Lefarge was continually attended by his wife, although both his mother and the foreman, Denis, were also frequent visitors at his bedside. It was the latter who, as the testimony afterwards developed, purchased a quantity of arsenic at a local chemist's, though he declared that Mme. Lefarge had told him to get it in order to destroy some rats that had infested the old house.

After an illness of only a few weeks—during which the younger Mme. Lefarge insisted that a famous specialist be summoned, only to be over-ruled by her mother-in-law—Lefarge died and the report rapidly spread throughout the countryside that the young widow, then only twenty-four years of age, had poisoned him in order to get his fortune and to be free to marry her former sweetheart. Medical investigation failed to show any traces of arsenic but, in spite of this, Marie Lefarge was arrested.

While she was awaiting trial another angle to the case developed in the charge made that the alleged murderer was responsible for the theft of a number of valuable jewels belonging to a certain Marquise de Liautaud, a friend who had visited at Les Glandiers a few months previous. Marie Lefarge denied any knowledge of the theft, but stated that the marquise had disposed of the stones in order to save herself from blackmail, a statement which was not believed by the jury which convicted her of stealing her friend's gems. At the trial for murder which followed Mme. Lefarge was also found guilty and sentenced to the guillotine, a decree which was later commuted to life imprisonment.

The next development in the case came twelve years later when the Marquise de Liautaud confessed that she had sold her jewels precisely as Marie Lefarge had claimed and that the imprisoned woman was not guilty of this charge—a declaration which was used as a wedge to reopen the entire case and eventually resulted in the release of the widow with a reversal of the verdict of the murder case. But the mystery surrounding the death of Lefarge was never cleared up, despite the fact that two of the most eminent criminologists of the day declared that he had been killed by Denis, the foreman, while other authorities were inclined to the belief that the elder Mme. Lefarge had had a hand in his sudden illness and that she had been responsible for sending him the cake which resulted in the first attack. No more arrests were made, however, and the "affair Lefarge" was allowed to remain as one of the unsolved mysteries of the French police.

Transparent Metal

Sheets of metal so thin one can read through them have recently been made by Dr. Carl Mueller of Berlin. These are made by plating the material on some substance which may later be dissolved away. It would require 2,500,000 of these sheets to make a pile an inch high. Because they are nearly all surface, a strip containing no more metal than would be in a wire one-twenty-five-hundredth of an inch in diameter will carry enough current to light several lamps, whereas the latter would be melted instantly. Perhaps this may result in cheaper electrical conductors, and at present it may find, in addition, use as radio speaker or phonograph diaphragm, as it is very light and highly elastic. Films of this sort already have been made of iron, nickel, gold, platinum and silver.

Sore THROAT

"First Aid—Home Remedy Week" Coming

Chicago—First Aid-Home Remedy Week, Sterling Products' "better merchandising and greater advertising baby," celebrates its tenth anniversary March 15-21. Druggists everywhere will co-operate. "Fill That Medicine Chest Now!" is the slogan of action. The National Association of Retail Druggists sponsored the event in 1922, and with the National Wholesale Druggists' Association and National Association of Retail Drug Clerks have, with other organizations, massed their energies for success of this movement for the abolition of much needless suffering and often the salvage of life.

Dr. W. E. Weiss was first to okay the idea as a splendid aid to preparedness for unexpected illness or accident. This is stressed as sensible insurance for immediate relief.

The every-spring festival of sales is a fixture of housecleaning time. Sterling Products is giving a tenth anniversary surprise party to every druggist in America—for the Dominion as well as the States endorse this idea of a more intensive advertising effort in Drugdom. Replacing the old streamers there has been adopted a colorful poster representing a filled medicine chest displaying the slogan of each past success: "Fill That Medicine Chest Now."

Aerial Studio for Africa

Built specially for the photographing of an area of 68,000 square miles in Northern Rhodesia, an airplane is soon to be put into commission. The machine is literally an aerial photographic studio. It can be flown at a height of 20,000 feet and remain at this altitude for seven and one-half hours while the pilot and photographer map the country below. As most of the flights will be over a wild country the plane has two engines so that if one fails the other will carry the machine to safety.

Castoria corrects CHILDREN'S ailments

WHAT a relief and satisfaction it is for mothers to know that there is always Castoria to depend on when babies get fretful and uncomfortable! Whether it's teething, colic or other little upset, Castoria always brings quick comfort; and, with relief from pain, restful sleep.

And when older, fast-growing children get out of sorts and out of condition, you have only to give a more liberal dose of this pure vegetable preparation to right the disturbed condition quickly.

Because Castoria is made expressly for children, it has just the needed mildness of action. Yet you can always depend on it to be effective. It is almost certain to clear up any minor ailment and cannot possibly do the youngest child the slightest harm. So it's the first thing to think of when a child has a coated tongue, is fretful and out of sorts. Be sure to get the genuine; with Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the package.

Titles of Authority
Mr. was originally the abbreviation of master in the Sixteenth and Seventeenth centuries in England. Mister is merely a corruption of the pronunciation of the same word. It was used as the prefix for anyone below the rank of knight. Mrs. is an abbreviation for mistress; originally one who had care or authority over servants. Miss. is derived from the same word.

Natural Reservoir
The cactus plant's ability to store water against a long dry spell is attributed to the absorbing power of its roots, lack of evaporation from its surface, and the glue-like quality of its water storage cells.

Won Over Detractors
Originally the term "Gothic architecture" was applied in contempt by adherents of the classical school, which accepted the Romanesque style. They considered the pointed arch barbarous and grotesque, therefore, Gothic. It soon made a place for itself and was widely employed throughout Europe in the construction of cathedrals, churches and abbeys.

Ideas of Worship
The various modes of worship which prevailed in the Roman world were all considered by the people as equally true; by the philosopher as equally false, and by the magistrate as equally useful.—Edward Gibbon.

You Wouldn't Have Time for All This Reading

Every American wants to know more about the building of his nation than the schoolbook histories tell him, but few of us have time to pore over the many volumes necessary for that. The illustrated feature articles by Elmo Scott Watson which appear regularly in this paper offer an answer to that need. You will find in them a wealth of interesting information on little-known chapters in American history—fact stories more fascinating than fiction.

TO SCHOOL CHILDREN:
Teachers find these articles helpful in classes. Some students are making scrapbooks of them. Tell your teacher and your classmates about them!

These articles also cover other fields—popular science, sports, industry, the fine arts and literature; in fact, every phase of American interest. This newspaper considers itself fortunate in being able to give its readers such articles as these by one of the leading feature writers of the country today. Tell your friends about them if they haven't seen them yet.

Bulls Used in the Arena
Bulls used in bull fights in Spain are of well-known lineage and reared in special establishments. The best bulls are worth from $200 to $300. About 1,300 are killed annually. In many of the bull fights as many as a dozen at a time may be employed. It is also estimated that 6,000 horses are used annually in Spain for this amusement.

Legal Term
Detinue, in legal parlance, is an action whereby one who has absolute property rights in goods seeks to recover from another who has possession and refuses to redeliver them.

Wishing for the Moon
Have we any right to laugh at the child's wish for the moon? No wish could be more natural; and as for its incongruity—do not we, children of a larger growth, mostly nourish wishes quite as innocent—longings that if realized could work us only woe?—Lafcadio Hearn.

contest, the game ending with Alabaster on the top end, 12 to 9. Our front offensive line displayed a poor brand of ball. They seemed to have been extremely nervous and were unable to hold on to the "pill." Time after time they dropped the ball when they were in scoring range. Their passing was wild. They either passed the "apple" too high or too low, too fast or too slow, sometimes into the hands of the Alabaster men. Even on top of all these faults our boys played a good game. The guards are certainly to be highly commended for their great defensive work. Any time a team can hold its opponents to four field goals is a sign of some playing. It was anybody's game until the final whistle blew. In the closing minutes of the game, when the score was 10 to 9, a field goal either way would have won the game. Alabaster played a wonderful passing game. They were more accurate, very seldom passing the ball away. Their boys played at top speed throughout the game. All in all, it was a fine game, most of the fans being satisfied except that our team lost. But when a team has played hard, fairly and cleanly, and loses—and are good losers—there is no better stamp for good sportsmen.
