

TAWAS CITY

Mrs. Wm. Rapp returned Sunday morning from a few days' visit in Detroit with relatives.

Harry Scarlet and Lloyd Moore of Detroit spent Thursday in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hutton were pleasantly surprised last Saturday evening when nearly 30 friends arrived about 8:30 to help celebrate their silver wedding anniversary. After a fine lunch Alfred Boomer presented Mr. and Mrs. Hutton with a large silver meat platter. The evening was spent in visiting and playing bridge.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. F. Mark spent Wednesday in Bay City.

Wait for the big dance—Spring Time Frolic, Wednesday, April 8, at Community Bldg., East Tawas. adv

Mr. and Mrs. Christ. Hoshbach and family and Paul Anschuetz attended the funeral of Donald Hoshbach in Saginaw on Wednesday of this week.

A most enjoyable bridge party was held at the American Legion on Tuesday evening, March 17, with nearly 50 present. The proceeds will go toward a building fund.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Ruckle of West Branch were business visitors in the city on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dease spent Monday and Tuesday in Whittemore.

Mr. and Mrs. John Forsten were week end guests of their parents in Ososso.

Bruce Myles of West Branch visited relatives in the city Thursday. Miss Fern Berube of Flint was the guest of her sister, Mrs. Ray Smith, over the week end.

Baptist Sunday school class No. 4 has elected the following officers: President, Vernon Davis; vice-president, George Laidlaw; treasurer, Myrton Leslie; secretary, Kenneth Smith.

Born, on Friday, March 13, to Rev. and Mrs. F. A. Sievert, a nine pound boy. He has been named Kenneth Harold. Mother and baby are doing well.

Mr. and Mrs. Neil Ferguson of Bay City were week end guests of the former's brother, Stephen Ferguson.

Mrs. Jos. Stepanski and sons spent Thursday in Bay City.

The Epworth League service will be held at the Methodist church on Sunday evening at 7:00 o'clock. C. S. time. Leader, Lulu Robinson. Subject: "What Has Jesus Meant to Others?" Our guest speaker will be Supt. A. E. Giddings.

A group of friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Borden of Tawas City last Saturday evening to help celebrate Mr. Borden's birthday. The evening was spent in playing cards and games.

TO CORRECT POOR VISION AMONG SCHOOL CHILDREN

The county committee interested in the activities of the county nurse will meet at the city hall, Tawas City, at 2:00 p. m. Monday, March 23. The committee hopes with the aid of Red Cross funds to secure the services of a specialist for the most urgent cases of poor vision among school children. The Children's Fund is to provide glasses to those unable to pay for glasses.

Dr. F. T. Zieske started immunization at Whittemore last Tuesday and will continue for three more successive Tuesdays. 212 children started immunization against diphtheria, 36 were vaccinated against smallpox, and 17 began typhoid immunization.

At present two rural schools in Iosco county are 100% vaccinated against smallpox, the McIvor school taught by Miss Isabelle King and the lower Tawline school taught by Miss Frances Klish.

TAWAS CITY SCHOOL NOTES

Prepared and Edited by a Committee of the Student Council

High School
The Senior class voted unanimously to invite Reverend Frank Metcalf to give the Baccalaureate address in June. This address will probably take place at the Baptist church on Sunday evening, June 11.

The pupils of all the departments of the school will receive report cards next Wednesday, March 25. If the report does not promptly reach the parent inquiry should be made concerning it.

Preparations are now in full swing for the general school program of Friday evening, March 20. The purpose of this program is not necessarily to make money, but rather to give the parents and patrons an opportunity to see this kind of work by the children. It is necessary to charge admission to defray the expenses. If there is a surplus of money beyond this amount it will be added to the high school fund and used to buy play-ground apparatus for the grades.

Latin II Class Entertains
At Party
On Friday evening, March 13, the Latin II class entertained, at a Roman party, the pupils in the Latin I class and, as guests of honor, Iva Carroll, Marcella Low and Irwin Schlechte, who have had two years of Latin.

A low table was placed in the English room; and, by the use of many rugs and pillows, the guests, who were dressed in Roman Roman style and were served by four

REGULAR MEETING OF P. T. A. HELD LAST THURSDAY

The regular monthly meeting of the P. T. A. was held at the high school Thursday evening, March 12. The business meeting conducted by the president, Mrs. F. R. Dease, was followed by a short but very interesting program, with Mr. Forsten acting as chairman. The program consisted of the following:

Piano solo, Ilene Nevanpaa; address on the effect of marks on the child's personality, Mrs. Anschuetz; songs by P. T. A. under the direction of Miss Marjorie Sage. The speaker of the evening was Mr. Barnes, dean of men at Central State Teachers College, Mt. Pleasant, who gave an intensely interesting address.

Mrs. Wm. Leslie was appointed chairman of the program committee for the April meeting, and Mrs. Allie Bigelow, Mrs. Alfred Boomer and Mrs. Howitson on the refreshment committee.

"PARLOR, BEDROOM and BATH"

Cast: Buster Keaton, Reginald Denny, Charlotte Greenwood, Cliff Edwards, Dorothy Christy, Joan Peers, Sally Eilers, Natalie Moorhead, Edward Brophy, Walter Merrill, Sidney Bracy. Directed by Edward Sedgwick.

One of the funniest pictures made by Keaton or anybody else. It has a cast of prominent players, some of whom are first-string stars. And Keaton hits his peak. From start to finish there are laughs, hardly a let-up. When previewed recently the audience went wild.

Buster is a mild and bashful bill-poster who becomes wealthy and the story traces his change from the bashful type to the opposite manner.

Charlotte Greenwood, the tall, lanky and comical personage of the musical stage, gives excellent support. Real comedy.
See it at the Family Theatre, this Friday and Saturday, March 20 and 21.

He's Gone

CLARK FISHERY BUILDING BURNS WEDNESDAY MORNING

Wednesday morning Wallace Clark's fish house burned. The loss included nets and other equipment in the building and was not covered by insurance. The damage is augmented by the fact that fishing season is near at hand and to replace the building and equipment requires considerable time. Mr. Clark has operated a fishery here for over 25 years.

ALBERTSON—HASTY

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Charters of Whittemore Saturday at high noon, when Miss Mildred Albertson became the bride of Dr. E. A. Hasty. The marriage vows were spoken by Rev. George Smith of the Whittemore M. E. church behind an arch of beautiful ferns.

They were attended by Jack Hasty, brother of the groom, and Miss Fern Moore of Sterling.

The bride was becomingly attired in a beautiful gown of cricket blue silk crepe and wore a corsage bouquet of sweet peas and rose buds. The bridesmaid was attired in an ensemble of flowered silk crepe and also wore a corsage bouquet of sweet peas and rose buds. Both the groom and best man wore dark suits.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clark Albertson of Rose City. She is at present a teacher in the Whittemore high school, having taught there for the past two years. She is a young lady of sterling character and highly respected and loved by all who know her.

They left immediately for a short wedding trip in northern Michigan for the week end. They will be in their new home in Whittemore which Dr. Hasty recently purchased, about April 1st.

A FLOWER SHOW

A Flower Show? Yes, why not? Right here in Tawas. When? The last week in August, 1931. Who will sponsor it? The Twentieth Century Club and The Improvement Association. What for? To create within us a greater love for the beautiful in nature, to give us a more fervent desire to make our home yards beautiful, and as a community, to work together to the end that our own little city may become, what by a little effort it can be made, the prettiest small town on the shore.

Every home in Tawas City will be expected to enter the list to compete for the prizes to be given. The flowers will be on exhibition three days for the public to enjoy and there will be no fees attached, admission being free. Begin now to plan what you will have for the exhibit.

CAMP FIRE NEWS

A series of very interesting meetings are being held by the Chickadee Camp Fire group of Tawas City. March is called the "International Friendship" month, and under the leadership of our president, Dorothy Roach, the girls are learning many interesting things about our relations with other countries. March 17 was also the 19th birthday of Camp Fire. Wednesday was "Middy Day," when most of the girls wore the Camp Fire costume of a middy, dark skirt, and a dark tie.

WATCH FOR YOUR NAME IN STATE ADVERTISEMENTS

If your full name appears in a State Theatre advertisement it will entitle you and your husband or wife or friend to attend any show billed in that particular advertisement. Watch the State advertisements—your name may be in this week.

Alabaster Is Eliminated, But Its Pluck Is Unquestioned

Alabaster, with every boy enrolled in high school in uniform, furnished an outstanding example of gameness in being eliminated by a late drive in the first round Class C tilt in the Central States regional tournament.

The "baby school" of the tournament was leading its opponent—Evert—far into the third quarter, and this was all the hard luck that Alabaster had to bask:

Three minutes before game time Thursday, four out of the nine boys on the team were not in town. Two regulars—Oates and Rollin—hitchhiked into Mt. Pleasant to arrive at just one minute of the hour, jumped into uniforms and with their hands still cold, began to play. Two other squad members—McCormick and Roiter—drove a bally car up to the gymnasium just as the half ended. At that the Midgets only lost the game, 24 to 18, when Evert went on a scoring spurt in the last two minutes.

There are only 24 in Alabaster high school, and nine of these are boys. Enoch Erickson for the past six years has been superintendent, principal and coach.

This year Alabaster won 12 games and lost six, games of the latter going into overtime. Four of the losses were to Prescott. In the Oscoda district tourney Alabaster elected to move up into Class C and in the first round whipped East Tawas, 12 to 9, and Standish in the finals, 27 to 18.—Bay City Daily Times.

IOSCO YOUNG PEOPLE'S PROGRESSIVE SOCIETY

The Iosco Young People's Progressive Society met at McIvor on March 4th. A short business session was held. The topic open for discussion was progress of the century. A reading, "Fundamental Changes," was given by Leona Ulman. A play, presented by the young people from the Hemlock, was well received.

The next meeting of March 20th will be postponed because of sickness. Our next meeting will be on April 3rd.

"PAID" IS EXCELLENT

DRAMATIC ENTERTAINMENT
"Paid," coming to the Family Theatre Sunday and Monday, March 22 and 23, is a picture version of the celebrated stage play "Within the Law." It has been successful in silent form and its appeal is still strong. The new version follows the play accurately, although there have been a few additions.

Joan Crawford proves her dramatic ability in this feature. She should be more strongly entrenched as a star as a result of "Paid." She puts over a highly commendable performance. The cast has been selected with care and Director Sam Wood has given his best efforts. We can recommend "Paid." It should not disappoint.

Although crook stories are running wild at present, this picture is individual enough to overcome any similar ideas in plot. Joan Crawford takes the well-known role of Mary Turner, who works in a department store. Although innocent of a larceny charge, the store owner has her sent to prison for three years. When she is released she is bent on revenge and she gets it. She marries the owner's son among other ways of vengeance, but finally really falls in love with him. In her escapades she manages to stay just within the law at all times. "Paid" is a good picture.

WILL PRESENT EASTER CANTATA ON APRIL 5

Sunday evening, April 5, a chorus of thirty-five voices will present an Easter cantata in the Community Building at East Tawas. This is a community program and all the churches in East Tawas are represented in the chorus, and also several of the churches of Tawas City. There will be a five-scene pageant portraying the death, crucifixion and resurrection of our Lord. The pageant is being arranged and the characters trained for the same by Mrs. C. E. Edinger. The chorus is in charge of N. Salsbery.

As this is an inter-denominational program everyone should be interested and a large attendance is hoped for. There will be no admission charge, but a silver offering will be received to defray the expense of the music, etc. Please reserve this date and attend this sacred recital at the Community Building Sunday evening, April 5th, at 7:30 o'clock, Central Standard Time.

MRS. HAROLD DYE

A dark shadow was cast over the Whittemore community last Friday when word was received that Mrs. Harold Dye had passed away at St. Mary's hospital, Saginaw, at 1:30 that morning. Death followed a serious operation five weeks ago.

A short funeral service was conducted by Rev. George Smith of Whittemore M. E. church at four o'clock Friday afternoon at Google's funeral parlors, Saginaw, before the remains were taken to New York. Interment was made in the family lot near Utica, N. Y., on Monday.

Mrs. Dye was active in all church work and other activities of the community and was loved by all who knew her. She will be greatly missed by her many friends. She leaves her husband, mother, two sisters and one brother to mourn.

The deepest sympathy of the community is extended to the bereaved ones.

TWENTIETH CENTURY CLUB

The Conservation Day program of the Twentieth Century Club proved a very interesting and instructive meeting. A paper on Michigan wild flowers, accompanied by many interesting pictures, was given by Mrs. Mabel Bigelow. Mrs. Georgena Leslie gave a paper on Michigan birds, which showed much study and careful preparation, and was enjoyed by all. We surely feel much better acquainted with our little feathered friends.

Our next program is as follows: Piano duet—Mrs. Giddings and Mrs. Prescott; roll call—an original couplet; vocal solo—Miss Sage; paper, "Modern Poetry"—Mrs. Edward Stevens; piano solo—Mrs. Giddings; vocal solo—Mrs. Horton. This meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. A. E. Giddings, March 28th.

DONALD G. HOSBACH

Donald G. Hosbach, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerhard Hosbach of Saginaw, quietly passed away at the home of his parents on Monday evening, March 16. Donald would have been three years old on Monday next. His death was caused by pneumonia after a very short illness.

He leaves to mourn his death, his parents, a brother, Harold, grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William C. Fritz of Saginaw and Mr. and Mrs. Christ. F. Hosbach of Tawas City great grandfather, Geo. C. Anschuetz of Tawas township, besides a host of other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were held from St. Paul's Lutheran church, Saginaw, Wednesday afternoon.

Erick C. Hemple vs. Ada Hemple—Divorce.

MISS ESTELLA FRENCH

Miss Estella C. French died at her home in East Tawas early Tuesday morning, March 17. Miss French was one of the pioneers of East Tawas, coming here as a young girl. She was in the employ of the Western Union Telegraph company for 45 years. She was also the first woman telegraph operator to be employed by the United States government.

The deceased was born in Whitby, Canada. She was 74 years of age in January of this year.

The funeral services were held from her home on Thursday afternoon. Those from out of the city attending the services were: Mrs. Fred Chamberlain, a niece, and a cousin, Mrs. Mae English, both of Detroit.

"THE CHALLENGE OF THE CROSS" TO BE PRESENTED AT TAWAS CITY

This sacred drama with its beautiful symbolism is to be given at the Tawas City Baptist church Sunday, March 22nd, 7:30 p. m., Central Time. The cast of characters includes—Mrs. Harry Pelton as the Evangel; Rosemary McKay, the First Disciple; Ruby Evans, the Second Disciple; Lois Chambers, the Third Disciple; Bessie Metcalf, the Fourth Disciple; Isabelle King, the Fifth Disciple; Alice Johnson, the Sixth Disciple; Mrs. F. R. Dease and Mrs. R. A. Hamilton, Singers; Miss Hazel Hallanger, Director.

This drama has been presented before more than seven hundred people in East Tawas, Bay City, Reno, Hale, Hemlock Road and Oscoda. It is also interesting to note that those taking part represent six different Sunday schools in Iosco county.

A silver offering will be received for the work of the County Council of Religious Education. The public is most cordially invited to attend this presentation.

IOSCO CHURCH SCHOOLS

An interesting Young People's Rally was held at the Tawas City M. E. church last Sunday afternoon. Both the worship service and the discussion period centered about the theme, "Jesus, a Man of Courage and of Joy."

The second of the present series of Young People's Rallies is to be held at the Whittemore M. E. church Sunday, March 22nd, 3:00 p. m., Eastern time. Mrs. W. C. Davidson of Tawas City will be in charge of the meeting.

The Council wishes to acknowledge the following receipts: From Mrs. Frances Bigelow of East Tawas, $1.00; from Mrs. E. F. Bills of Hale, $3.00; from Mrs. Lois Giddings of Tawas City, $1.00; from Mrs. Fred Richards of East Tawas, $5.00. These financial gifts will be used to advantage for the promotion of Vacation Bible schools throughout the county this summer.

Bible students will be much interested in the study, "Prophecy of the Old Testament," a course to be offered under the instruction of Rev. Metcalf. The class will meet from 7:00 to 8:45 for six consecutive Saturday evenings, beginning March 21st. The place of meeting is the City Hall of Tawas City. A tuition fee of fifty cents per person helps defray the expense of the class.

BASEBALL MEETING

An important meeting of the Tawas City baseball club will be held Monday night at 7:30 at the City Hall. Everyone interested in the local team is urged to be present.

EAST TAWAS SCHOOL NOTES

The high school last week conducted an intra-mural basketball tournament. The first bracket consisted of teams from the 5th grade boys through the 9th grade boys; the second bracket of teams from the 10th through the 12th grade. In the girls division we had teams from the 7th through the 12th. The winner of the first bracket was the eighth grade and the second bracket the 11th. In the girls' division the 9th and the 11th grade divided the honors. The preliminary and final results were as follows:

Boys (first bracket)—6th defeated 5th, 5 to 4; 6th defeated 7th, 8 to 4; 8th defeated 9th, 10 to 8; 8th defeated 6th, 10 to 3. 8th grade winner of first bracket.

Boys (second bracket)—11th graders drew a bye; 12th defeated 10th, 11 to 10; 11th defeated 12th, 24 to 18. 11th grade winner of second bracket.

Girls (first bracket)—9th defeated

APRIL FOOLISHNESS

(Copyright, W. N. U.)

The first of April, some do say, Is set apart for All Fools' Day; But why the people call it so, Not I, nor they themselves do know. But on this day are people set On purpose for pure merriment. But 'tis a thing to be disputed, Which is the greatest fool reputed; The man that innocently went Or he that him designedly sent. —Poor Robin's Almanac, 1760.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ONE of the most famous warnings of all history was that uttered to Julius Caesar—"Beware the Ides of March!" But the Ides of March, however fatal they may have been to the great Roman, are of little concern to us of modern times. Another day which will soon be here is the one when we do most of our "bewareing." That's the first of April and unless we're very alert some one is sure to make an April Fool of us.

The practical joker is with us always, but April 1 is the day when he is at his best. We may ignore the hat lying on the sidewalk (with the brick concealed under it) or the pocketbook (either nailed down or attached to a hidden string which whisks it from under our hands as we stoop down to pick it up) and then unsuspectingly accept an explosive cigar which a friend hands us or bite into a tempting chocolate cream and find it filled with cayenne pepper. We may avoid all of these familiar pitfalls for the unwary and then be "taken in" by a fake telephone call. "Mr. Lyon wants you to call him," they tell us. (Or it may be Mr. Wolf or Miss Ella Phant.) But when we call the number and ask for that person, a disgusted voice at the other end of the wire tells us "This is the zoo." Or it may be "Mr. Fish" whose telephone number turns out to be the aquarium or "Mr. Snow" at the weather bureau or "Mr. Coffin" at some undertaking establishment.

Some of the foolery, however, is on the decline. Large candy factories report that they no longer make April Fools' candy. Not that one cannot buy cotton balls disguised as sweetmeats; the obscure shops still supply them. The larger dealers, however, say that not only are calls growing fewer for such trick bonbons, but that they themselves run into the foreign substance law. Today, as every one knows, candy must pass a certain test. The pure food law has sounded the death-knell of the china baby doll dipped in bitter-sweet chocolate.

Where did this April Foolishness originate, anyway? The answer to that question is necessarily a difficult one, for this custom, like so many others, goes back so far and has developed in so many different forms in so many different countries that it is impossible to ascribe it to any one period or any one nation. There is evidence that the custom was prevalent in Asia in ancient times, tracing back to the celebration with festal rites of the period of the vernal equinox in Persia. It was the day when the Persian New Year began and was very close to the old English New Year's day of March 25. The sun was then entering into the sign of frisky Aries and on that day "the season of rural sports and vernal delights" began.

In India the Huli festival on March 31 for centuries has been a general holiday and time for jest. One of the favorite diversions consisted of sending people on long errands of fictitious import. Colonel Pearce, a British army officer and writer of a century ago, says: "High and low join in it. The late Suraja Dowlah, I am told, was very fond of making Huli fools, though he was a Mussulman of the highest rank. They carry the joke so far as to send letters making appointments in the name of persons who must be absent from their house at the time fixed upon; and the laugh is always in proportion to the trouble given."

From the Orient the custom came into western Europe many centuries ago. The ancient Romans took delight in many sorts of practical jokes in connection with their Feast of the Saturnalia and there are those who declare that the first April Fool joke was that one which Romulus and his "early settlers" in Rome played upon the Sabines by inviting them to the regular April First celebration in honor of Neptune and then carrying off by force the Sabine women.

For centuries the French have held a Festival of Fools on April 1, in which "every kind of absurdity and indecency was committed." Their term for April Fool is "poisson d'Avril," a term which means, according to one explanation, a young fish and therefore a fish easily caught. When Napoleon married Maria Louisa, Archduchess of Austria, on April 1, 1810, it gave the waggish Parisians an excellent chance to whisper among themselves that he was "un poisson d'Avril." But the classic French April Fool story is that of a young woman who stole a gold watch from the house of one friend and hid it in the house of another friend. She then turned the case over to the police. But they were sadly lacking in the imagination necessary to appreciate this joke. She was arrested for the theft and the judge, entering into the spirit of the occasion, sentenced her to jail for a year with the remark that she be discharged on April 1 the next year as "un poisson d'Avril!" Another French classic is the escape on April 1, 1700, from prison by the duke of Lorraine and his wife, who shouted back to their guards the French equivalent of "April Fool!"

April Fooling has been prevalent in Great Britain for centuries. There it mostly took the form of sending innocents upon "sleeveless errands." A boy might be sent to the cobbler's for "a pennyworth of his best stirrup oil" and then be mighty amazed when the angry shoemaker applied this "oil" to his back. Or he might be dispatched to the milk-vendor for "half a pint of pigeon's milk," to the bookseller's for "The Life and Adventures of Eve's Mother," to the butcher shop for "a meat auger" or to the bakery for "a pie-stretcher."

In northern England and Scotland this practice was called "Hunting the Gowk." An old couplet says: "On the first day of Aprile Hunt the Gowk another mile." The word "gowk" in reality means a cuckoo and was used metaphorically for fool, which undoubtedly is the origin of the modern slang phrase: "To knock a man cuckoo." There are plenty of connecting threads among all these words, "Gauk" in Teutonic is a fool, whence we get our word gawky, and "geac" in old Saxon was a cuckoo, whence is derived "geck," meaning one easily imposed upon. Remember the words of Malvolio to Olivia:

Why have you suffered me to be imprison'd And made the most notorious "geck" and gull That e'er invention played on?

Although April Fool's day appears to have ceased to challenge literary wits, there was a time in England when it brought forth observations from such scholars as Joseph Addison and that prolific and satiric writer Jonathan Swift. Swift seems to have entered into the spirit of the day and to have enjoyed the liberties granted to the practical joker on April first. He writes to Stella under date of March 31, 1713, about a jolly evening spent with two good friends "in contriving a lie for the morrow."

One of the commonest forms of April Fool jokes during past years in this country was the practice by newspapers of printing on April 1 some exciting story of an event which never happened and not revealing the fact until the reader came to the end of the yarn. There have been innumerable variations of this stunt, ranging from "scare" stories about the blowing up of the city hall and the assassination of city officials or the escape of all the animals in the zoo to more intricate stories about the discovery of buried treasure or the exhibition of some marvelous and seemingly impossible feat of skill or strength.

Some 40 years ago a Cincinnati newspaper printed a big story regarding a monster of fiendish aspect and unknown species which had been found inhabiting a cave in the hills east of the city, which had already carried off several children in its slaving jaws and had spread terror in the neighborhood. There was even a picture of the Thing, drawn from the descriptions of the two or three persons who had seen it clearly, and for malignant hideousness of aspect, that monster made all Calibans, dragons, Hurlerthombs, demons and octopi look tame.

Finally, down at the latter end of the story in very small type, so small that many readers overlooked it, was set the legend, "April 1, 1888." Even some who noticed that date didn't grasp its significance, but continued to shudder with fear at the thought of meeting the monster.

Some Philadelphians still remember the story about the big iceberg that was "being towed up the river." Thousands went to the river front to see the spectacle and then denied that they had been taken in.

A quite modern hoax is told as follows by one who was in Ireland when it "happened":

Peace, of a kind, reigned in Dublin on March 31, 1922. There was tension in the air for the Irreconcilables, who refused to recognize the truce with England, had taken over the Four Courts and were known to be preparing resistance to the terms which Michael Collins and Arthur Griffith had signed. Anything was likely to happen.

About 1 o'clock on the morning of April 1 the Morning Post of London, the paper which reflected the views of those who thought that any truce with the Irish was a betrayal of Great Britain, received a telegram from Dublin stating that the Kildare Street club had been seized by the Irreconcilables, that the members residing there had been driven into the streets in their pajamas and that this social stronghold of British aristocracy in the Irish capital had been transformed into a stronghold of the enemy.

With due solemnity and with headlines that had not been surpassed since the declaration of the Armistice with Germany the telegram was published. And that night Dublin was flooded with correspondents—American, English and French—all prepared to cover the new "war." The British cabinet was called to Downing street for breakfast, and the world sighed in dismay and mourned that the Irish, when peace seemed in sight, "were at it again."

Only a few know the true story behind the April fool telegram that started this furore. There was in Dublin at the time a Major Clarke who had served with distinction during the World war, but who had never been the same since his experiences in Flanders. They had developed in him a "sense of humor" that was peculiar. On one occasion he collected all the boots left to be cleaned outside the bedroom doors of the largest hotel in Dublin and dropped them down the elevator shaft.

He was barred from the same hotel for throwing cream-filled eclairs at the guests during dinner. And it was he who sent the telegram. He was tired of peace and he thought it would be a good joke to start the Anglo-Irish struggle again. And, strange to say, he nearly accomplished his object, for the suspicious Irreconcilables thought the wire had been sent by the Free State government as a bait. But they were not yet prepared. The break did not come for almost three months.

of the TRIBES

By EDITHA L. WATSON

The Cheyenne

A band of Cheyenne in full panoply must have been one of the finest sights of the plains. We can imagine them as they rode along:

armed with their deadly bows and arrows, lances, and stone-headed clubs, carrying circular buffalo-hide shields, and above all, every part of their outfit, even to hoods on the ponies' heads, richly ornamented with beading, quillwork, and feathers.

A Cheyenne village, too, must have been interesting, for the conical tipis were painted with scenes of battle or the chase. There were large herds of horses, kept nearby for fear of raiding enemies—and this was a perfectly legitimate fear, as no doubt most of these very horses had been acquired by the same method.

Although typical of the plains tribes, the Cheyenne were not always horse-Indians, hunters of buffalo. It is said that they once lived in Minnesota and on the Missouri river, where they were an agricultural people and made pottery. The Chippewa, however, began to press the Sioux, their neighbors, westward, and the Sioux crowded the Cheyennes until finally they found themselves upon the plains, and adapted their lives to the changed environment.

The travois aided them in their travels; a network lashed on two poles, which were tied to a pony and dragged behind on the ground. And when rivers must be crossed, the "bull-boat," of buffalo hide stretched on a frame, proved practicable. From this it will be seen that the Cheyenne were a versatile race, who found means of doing what necessity dictated.

Now, however, a change came upon them. Drifting west and south, they came to a fork of the Platte river, in South Dakota, where they settled. Perhaps, had they stayed there, they might have cast back into their past, and brought forth the old arts of agriculture and pottery making, to modify the nomadic, hunting life they had adopted.

In 1832, however, Bent's fort was established on the Arkansas river in Colorado, and a large part of the tribe decided to move into the vicinity of the new fort. This ended the tribe as a whole, as it split definitely by treaty, and became the Northern and the Southern Cheyenne.

The character of these people, to this day, is proud, contentious, and brave to desperation, and the division of the tribe did not mitigate their warlike tendencies in the least. The Kiowa, who resented the encroachment of the Southern Cheyenne, furnished this branch with foes for eight years, when peace was finally declared. In 1853, the Southern Cheyenne went so far as to make a raid into Mexico, but this ended disastrously, as they lost all but three men of the war party. They kept a prominent place in border warfare, and this caused constant loss among their warriors. The Chivington massacre and a battle with Custer in 1868 further weakened them, and after the outbreak of the southern tribes in 1874-5, they surrendered, and were placed on a reservation in Oklahoma.

In 1901-2 the lands of the Southern Cheyenne were allotted in severalty, and they are now American citizens. It is said that they are decreasing in numbers; peace evidently does not agree with them.

The Northern Cheyenne have had almost as eventful an existence. They joined with the Sioux under Sitting Bull, and were active in Custer's last fight. Later in the same year, another battle with the whites under Mackenzie caused them to surrender. They were sent to the reservation in Oklahoma, but they were unhappy there. The "fighting Cheyennes" were not fond of peace, although bound to observe it, and, too, that part of the country was strange to them. They made several attempts to escape; in the winter of 1878 a band composed of some 98 men and 146 women and children made a desperate effort to get away. They were pursued almost to the Dakota border, and in the fight lost about 40, mostly warriors, including one of their leaders. The captured runaways were taken to Fort Robinson, Nebraska, and here they made a second attempt, in which 32 more of their people were killed. Little Wolf, one of the leaders of this enterprise, managed to get away and about 60 of the Northern Cheyenne followed him.

They were never content with their Oklahoma homes. Let the Southern part of the tribe accept them—the Northern division would still fight. After much unrest they were finally moved to their present home in Montana, where they are slowly increasing and seem to be content.

Tree That Has Changed Maps

Cinchona, Source of Quinine, Has Given 300 Years of Service to Man.

Washington.—Cinchona, source of quinine, whose 300 years of service to civilized man was recently celebrated, has probably done more than any other tree to change the map of the world, according to a bulletin from the National Geographic society.

"The bark of this once unknown tree that grew wild in the forests of South America has made habitable to white men thousands of tropical areas that formerly were death traps," says the bulletin.

"The powerful enemy that cinchona fights so successfully is malaria. Before the discovery of cinchona and its action, little could be done to combat 'ague,' 'marsh fever,' and 'jungle fever,' as malaria was called. It attacked tens of millions of persons in the tropics and the warmer and moist regions of the temperate zones, and caused millions of deaths. It is believed by some historians that malaria, nurtured in the marshes of the Campagna, had an important part in bringing about the fall of Rome.

"In Greece, too, this energy-sapping disease is supposed to have played an insidious role; and there are some who explain the passing of the mysterious Maya civilization of Central America as a surrender to the joint attacks of malaria and yellow fever.

Malaria Dangerous Enemy. "It was when white men began to live in the tropical countries that they came to realize that malaria (or the various aliases under which it passed) was an exceedingly dangerous enemy. Many of the early colonists in Mexico, Central and South America, India and the East Indies died of the disease. And then the tropics at least partially squared their debt by furnishing the one drug so far discovered that can successfully combat malaria.

"The cinchona tree was first found growing wild in forests on the mountain slopes of Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, and Bolivia. Tradition has it that the value of the bark in treating malarial fever was first discovered when some fever-stricken Indians drank from a pool into which a cinchona tree had fallen, and were cured. "Medicine made from cinchona bark was first used in treating white sufferers from fever in northern Peru (now Ecuador) about 1630. After it saved the life of the Countess of Chinchon, wife of the viceroy of Peru, in 1638 its fame grew rapidly. It is to this happy cure that the tree owes its name, for in honor of the countess, Linnaeus named it Cinchona, inadvertently dropping the first 'h.'

"The powdered bark was soon afterward introduced into Spain and other parts of Europe where it was known as 'Countess powder' and 'Jesuits' powder.' The latter name was attached to it because much of it was taken to the Old World, distributed by members of the religious order returning from America. In England it was advertised as 'Feaver Bark.' A marked demand developed and within a century or so the shipment of the bark from northwestern South America became an important industry. The demand for more and more bark resulted in the destruction of all cinchona trees in reasonable reach of civilized centers, and there seemed danger that the trees might be exterminated.

Java Now Center for Cinchona.

"But the world had become so dependent on the bitter drug from cinchona that botanists and merchants and statesmen combined to save the industry by transplanting it. Plants and seeds were collected about the middle of the Nineteenth century (in many cases secretly) and transported to India, Ceylon, and Java. The industry failed in Ceylon, but Java is now the world's chief producer of cinchona with India second in importance. Relatively small quantities of the bark are now exported from South America.

"By Nature's strange chemistry there is manufactured in the bark of certain species to the cinchona tree a substance—quinine—that is sure death to the tiny microscopic parasites that, living in the blood, cause malaria. The drug also has a preventive effect, so that it is indispensable to both sufferers from malaria and those who will be exposed to the disease. The Indian government finds quinine so important that it maintains extensive groves of cinchona, fosters its growth by private horticulturists, and operates factories in which quinine is extracted from the bark. Finally the

Woman Practices Dentistry at 92

Pomeroy, Ohio.—Dr. Amy L. Whaley, believed to be the oldest practicing woman dentist in America, recently celebrated her ninety-second birthday.

She passed the state dental examination in 1857, and when her husband died in 1913 she took charge of his business.

Doctor Whaley employs a registered dentist, a laboratory expert and an office assistant, but she personally supervises all work.

Youth Has Fun on 15 Cents, but Goes to Jail

Bradock, Pa.—With only 15 cents to spend and an indomitable desire to be amused, Leonard Yerec, nineteen, demonstrated that the high cost of fun can be ridiculously low.

Yerec, who lives in Bradock, went to a nearby town. With one nickel he ordered a taxicab sent around to 827 Washington avenue. With a second nickel another cab was sent, and the third jitney brought the Bradock fire department with $50,000 worth of fire-fighting equipment to the front of his home.

About this time a neighbor looked out and put in the last call. It was for the police. Yerec was given 30 days.

Connecticut Man Has Second Silver Wedding

West Haven, Conn.—Former Police Chief Robert French, seventy-two, has just received the felicitations of his 16 children and nine grandchildren on the occasion of his second silver wedding anniversary. French's first wife, who bore him all the children, died soon after celebrating their twenty-fifth anniversary. He remarried.

This Seems to Make Flying Quite Safe

Here is the airplane of a new type, designed by Albert A. Marrill and successfully tested at the Glenn Curtiss airport on Long Island. Apparently it cannot dive, stall or spin, and the pilot, cutting off the power several hundred feet in the air and taking his hands from the controls, landed it gently and slowly.

NEW INSTRUMENT MEASURES WITHIN .00004 OF AN INCH

Optical Coincidence Gauge of High Accuracy Perfected by Government Expert.

Washington.—A new instrument which makes measurements so accurately that it is apt to be out not more than four hundred-thousandths (.00004) of an inch one way or the other and does it without touching the parts being gauged, has been developed by Dr. I. C. Gardner, of the United States bureau of standards here.

It is called an optical coincidence gauge. One eyepiece which will magnify 85 diameters, prisms to change the direction of sight and adjusting lens make up this novel instrument. The operator looks into the eyepiece, focuses it, by careful adjustment makes two points, the distance between which is being measured, appear to be in almost the same spot. He then reads on a scale the distance between these spots accurate within four hundred-thousandths of an inch. The instrument is so ruggedly constructed and so easy to operate that such accuracy is reached in routine measurements.

One application of this long distance measuring is the finding of the exact size of a piece of casting which has just been poured from molten metal and before it has cooled enough to be touched.

If the optical gauge is fitted with a periscope system, measurements can be made far in the interior of hollow castings where it would be impossible or very difficult to take a mechanical measuring instrument.

Even the thickness of a coat of paint can readily be found with the new optical gauge. The diameter of a precision grinding wheel or lathe can also be accurately determined without stopping the machine.

Slotted Wing Device to Reduce Airplane Crashes

East St. Louis, Ill.—An airplane safety device predicted to eliminate 80 per cent of air accidents, is the invention of Jean Francis DeVillard, candidate for mayor of East St. Louis.

According to the inventor, the device is a slotted wing with bifold flaps. The slots are located on the entering edge and the flaps on the trailing edge. They will operate automatically.

"This device," DeVillard said, "will prevent a tail spin, stalling of plane, and nose dive. It will float a plane at 30 miles an hour. It is impossible to float a plane at the present time.

"Equipped with the slots, the plane will take off in 40 feet and land in 25. The landing speed will be 18 miles per hour as compared to 40 now," DeVillard claims.

WHITE SATIN UNITES WITH BLACK FOR FORMAL GOWNS

Superbly Styled Evening Gown.

PERHAPS the most significant gesture of the mode at the present moment is that which has to do with featuring startling contrast. No matter from what angle the theme is approached, whether it be from a color standpoint, or a matter of combining different weaves, the style program whether for day or evening blends the accent on contrast.

The superbly styled satin evening gown in the picture interprets the trend to striking contrast at its best. Katya Sorina, the young Russian dancer who has been signed up to appear in radio pictures, wears this dress to perfection. The haute couture of Paris continues to do wonderful things with satin in the evening mode, the latest movement being to contrast black and white as instanced in the handsome gown portrayed.

The dress with a light top, whether it be formal or informal, offers infinite opportunity for putting the law of contrast into practice. The afternoon black or navy frock with an almost waist-deep lace yoke is the darling of present-day fashion. The finer and more exquisite the lace, the better, alencon being the favorite. For evening lace in two colors gives a new and enchanting aspect to the contrast theme. A ruby-colored lace frock, for example, has a pale pink yoke, or a frock of black lace is topped with flesh-colored lace.

Another channel of expression for contrast effects is the jacket costume, which may be as formal or informal as occasion demands. For evening it is ultra smart to wear a little jacket which contrasts the dress. The bolero or hip-length jacket of velvet, either in black or a delectable bright hue, is especially highlighted in the mode. Very new and very lovely is the little lace jacket which contrasts its color to the frock over which it is posed.

In the sports realm this contrasting of jacket and skirt or jacket and one-piece dress, is done to a finish. Plaids and stripes with plain compete with bi-color and tri-color combinations.

One of the smart coats shown for spring wear is this jaunty model in the picture. It is of checked material in varying shades of brown. It is distinguished by a very new and ingenious self-fabric scarf neckline. It is belted smartly; flaunts a novel cuff on the sleeve, boasts a single large square rever, and is in fact an exponent of ultra-modish fashioning.

consequence, the coat models which are really new abound in styling details of the cleverest sort. Interest centers especially about unusual neck lines which are part collar and part scarf, being a two-in-one proposition. So to speak. It adds zest to the mode that these arrangements are adjustable—supposed to be worn most anyway that is becoming.

SUFFERED PAIN —
DETROIT, Mich.—"During my early married life I would suffer so much distress and pain each month that I would have to be in bed several days. The pains would extend down into my limbs. I would be very weak and nervous afterward. I wrote to Doctor Pierce for advice. Then I took a few bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and Medical Discovery. These medicines corrected my trouble and restored me to health."—Mrs. H. Ebbage, 5430 23rd St. Dealers.

VOL. I MARCH 20, 1931 NUMBER 46

We have just received a car of salt in barrels, 25 lb., 50 lb. and 100 lb. sacks.
Every publication uses this at least once a year!—Mary had a little skirt, A dainty bit—and airy! (It didn't show a bit of dirt—) But gosh! how it showed Mary!

We are handling the Wolverine fertilizer. We can save you from $3.00 to $6.00 per ton. This is a Michigan fertilizer, made by Michigan people at Lansing.

This is the time of year when we can call laziness spring fever,—and get away with it.

Feeds we carry: Whole kettle-dried corn, cracked corn, ground oats, scratch feed, corn and oat chop, bran, middlings, wheat screenings, Hexite.
The opening of the spring baseball season reminds us that baseball is sort of a hit-or-miss way of making a living, isn't it?
We have Mason's and hydrated lime on hand at 50c per sack.
Somebody in here the other day made the wise observation that nothing is ever gained in a heated argument except possibly a black eye or a bloody nose.
We can't all be great, but most of us can be useful—and nobody who is useful is a failure in our estimation. Isn't that right?

Just received another car of the famous Hexite.
"You knew that chess player in the apartment next to mine? Well, he moved yesterday."
"Is that so? How long has this game been going on?"
The early bird, we notice, often gets his own breakfast, too.

OAKLAND-PONTIAC DEALER

It is a pleasure to announce our appointment as Oakland-Pontiac Dealer in this community, not only because it gives us the opportunity to sell and service these two fine cars but because it reflects Oakland's confidence in our organization.

"MAKING NEW FRIENDS AND KEEPING THE OLD"

We look upon Oakland-Pontiac's principle, "Making New Friends and Keeping the Old" as one of the most constructive steps in the motor car business. The guiding spirit of Pontiac-Oakland—to make every car so well that it will inevitably make a friend—will guide us in selling and servicing these two fine cars.

Kindness Wins Nurse Deserved Fortune

Providence, R. I.—The will of the late Mrs. Josephine Orom Peirce of Cranston stands. Miss Mary Adamson, trained nurse who cared for Mrs. Peirce during her last years, will receive nearly $40,000.

The nurse was given a $20,000 legacy and named as residuary legatee.

Curtis Eames Hill, investment banker of this city and a cousin of Mrs. Peirce, contested the will on the ground that Mrs. Peirce, because of her physical condition, was not competent to execute the will which was dated November 5, three days before her death.

The case was tried before a jury last May, but the jury failed to agree. It was to have been tried again, but a settlement was reached on the eve of the trial.

The trial before Judge O'Connell in Superior court created interest because of the character of the witnesses on both sides.

Court attaches asserted that all the witnesses were "remarkably truthful and that no attempt was made to bolster either side through the aid of truth stretching."

Miss Adamson, it developed, was given the legacy because of her kindness to Mrs. Peirce.

Mrs. Peirce and her husband, who died several years ago, were New Yorkers and came to Cranston to live when Mr. Peirce retired from business. Their fortune was estimated to exceed $150,000, but dwindled during the last years of Mr. Peirce's life and for the two years following his death.

At that time Mrs. Peirce, according to the testimony, called upon her cousin, Curtis Eames Hill, for assistance. She left the management of her estate in his care and through his handling of it the estate was enhanced nearly $15,000.

PRAISE

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

Should one be praised for doing things well? The Good Book does not seem to encourage it always. The man who has kept the entire law has done only what was his duty to do, and so is entitled to no particular commendation, we are told. Why should a man be praised for doing what he ought to be expected to do?

However that may be, I have always enjoyed a little praise when I have done something difficult or well. It stimulates me to greater effort; it kindles my imagination, and often makes it possible for me to do something even better than I had done the first time.

Praise does not always act as a stimulant, however. I recall two brothers whom I once had in class when I was trying to teach English composition. They were both headed and both lazy and temperamental. If Walter did something good and you told him about it, he would break his neck to do better. Not so with George. If he were praised he preened his feathers, as it were, and sat contentedly and lazily in the sun. Praise stagnated him. If he were as good as I had said, he saw no reason for being any better. It made him self-satisfied.

The effect of praise often depends upon the source from which it comes, and the infrequency with which it is given.

It is said of G. F. Swift, the former head of the great packing establishment of Swift & Co., that he never praised anyone. He held that praise weakened a man, inhibited his ambition and set for him the ultimate aim of his effort. He rewarded successful effort by promotions or raises in salary, but he seldom if ever told a man in so many words that he had done any piece of outstanding work.

He held that praise tended to make a man self-satisfied, it led to an overestimate of his worth, and slowed him down in his efforts. When he thought a man had stuff and possibilities in him, he called him into the office and pointed out to him his faults.

Maybe that's the best way to stimulate a man, but I like a little praise once in a while.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

By WALTER TRUMBULL

General Gatley, first with the Thirtieth and later with the Forty-Second division in the World war, made his reputation long before, in the Philippines, as the commander of a mountain battery. He would take his guns apart, pack them on mules, and transport them to heights seemingly impossible for field guns to go into action. One day a supply mule, attracted by something in the valley, straggled its neck too far over the edge of a mountain trail, lost its footing and plunged many hundred feet to the rocks below. The then Captain Gatley strode to the edge, looked down at the dark spot that was the defunct mule, and said, "Serves you right, you inquisitive son of a jackass!"

His men tell countless stories concerning him. After he went to the Rainbow division, an artillery officer who had been up observing fire, told me that one night, in the dark of a front line trench, he stepped on a sleeping figure rolled in a blanket. From the language which ensued, he knew it was the general, although he couldn't figure out exactly how an artillery brigadier happened to get there. But General Gatley was likely to be anywhere, except at the rear.

One of General Gatley's slogans was that a military encampment was no place for dogs, yet he once had a dog to which he was devoted. It was a brindle bulldog, named Wop by the soldiers, given to the general by Col. John S. Hammond, now vice president of Madison Square garden, who served with Gatley all over the world. Knowing how the general felt about dogs, Hammond tried to keep Wop out of sight, but, as preparations were being made for a practice march, Gatley caught sight of him. Colonel Hammond supposed he had lost his dog and so he had, but not as he thought. The general said to him, "If that dog should happen to ride in the rear of the mess wagon, I won't see him. Understand?" Colonel Hammond understood, but later had a fight with his tentmate over the dog, which was addicted to eating toothbrushes and pajamas. By way of settling the matter, General Gatley promptly had Wop removed to his own tent, and finally Colonel Hammond officially relinquished all claim to him.

Once General Gatley told me that he was about to advance me in rank, but, knowing well that my amateur standing as a soldier would never be open to question, he added, "Just because I am doing this, don't get the idea that you are any gol darn Napoleon." Only the general never said "gol darn." Finally he sent me with an advance detachment to France, for purposes of study and observation. We were on a practice range at the time and the general was quartered in a little wooden shack. It was night when we left and he had put in a hard day. Going to say good-bye to him, I found him in bed, with only that warlike red head of his showing above the covers. I thanked him and told him I would do my best. Rearing up on his elbow, he bellowed at me:

"What the hell do you think I am sending you over there for?"

But, as I left him, he called after me, "God bless you, boy. Take care of yourself." That was why men would follow General Gatley. When he died recently, they blew taps over a soldier with a brave and kindly heart.

I talked recently with a girl, blind from birth, who had been abroad. She told me some things concerning Europe I had never seen, and many I had never heard. Her impressions were extraordinarily accurate and colorful; a strange thing to say of one who does not know color, but true. Except for what she sees through another's eyes, places to her are things of sound, scent and touch, and each is clearly differentiated in her mind.

Criminals Unafraid of United States Law

New York.—Criminal violence in the United States is still on the increase. Figures gathered by William L. Cheney, editor of Collier's Weekly, show that the total number of homicides has gone up more than 33 per cent in 16 years.

In 1912 the death rate due to homicide was 6.6 in every 100,000 of population. In 1928 the rate was 8.8, or exactly a third higher.

"Criminal violence causes far more deaths today than fifteen years ago," says Mr. Cheney. "The increase is an evidence of an appalling breakdown in respect for the law."

Laws More Drastic.

"During these same 15 years, laws in this country generally have been made more drastic. The so-called Baumes laws of New York are typical. Penalties have been added to penalties. If furious severity had power to prevent crime we should have become a law-abiding people.

"The truth is that severe penalties seldom deter criminals from violence. The explanation is that juries and judges will not inflict punishment which seems too rigorous. Rather than apply the law they will liberate the prisoner.

"The criminal does not fear uncertain punishment. If there is a chance to escape paying for his crime, the potential criminal will gamble on getting away. In this country the chances favor the criminal."

Homicide on Increase.

In thirty-one large American cities 2,419 homicides were reported in 1929. The rate was 10.1, much higher than for the country as a whole.

The increase in the number of homicides in the big cities between 1900 and 1929 was nearly fourfold, while the increase in the rate for each 100,000 of population increased from 5.1 to 10.1, almost double. New York reported 425 violent killings and Chicago 401 in 1929.

Only Nine Pay Penalty.

Yet in 1928, with 401 killings in New York City alone, the entire state of New York convicted only 118 killers and of these criminals only 9 were executed.

The experience of every country which has successfully controlled its criminal problem shows that swiftness and certainty of punishment, rather than severity, actually deter potential criminals from crime.

For many years Great Britain has had a remarkable record in preventing crime. While 425 killings occurred in New York in 1929 and, in Chicago, 401, London had only 10.

The British actually enforce capital punishment. Sentimental pleas for mercy go unheeded. The murderer pays with his life for his crime if he challenges British justice.

High School Girl, Aged 17, Makes Flight Alone

Seattle.—With only eight hours of flying at an aviation school, divided into four hours a year ago and four hours this winter, Miss Lela Newman made a solo flight of half an hour, achieving the triple feat of making a perfect takeoff, landing and the record of the youngest flyer ever to solo in the Northwest.

Miss Newman is only seventeen, and her father, Maj. Bill Newman, operator of the Newman Flying school, believes she is the youngest girl solo flyer in the country.

She is a student at the Franklin high school and president of the Franklin High School Aviation club and member of the Women's National Aeronautical association.

She comes naturally by her bent for the air, as her father has a background of 15 years of flying. He was a member of the British air forces during the World war, with two years of service in France, where he won distinction.

Miss Newman figured in the news recently when she made her first parachute jump September 21 last, averting a serious accident by skillfully steering the "chute" away from high tension wires into which she was falling.

Old House Proves Gold Mine to Its New Owner

Gatesville, N. C.—A "gold mine" has been found by C. E. Smith, a farmer, near here, but it is not in the ground. It is in an "old house."

The old house standing on Smith's farm happened to have been built and furnished back in 1775.

Shortly after Smith bought the farm, antique seekers began fairly swarming down on him and the ramshackle old house. He already has sold enough antique furnishings—mantels, locks, doors, windows, window blinds, staircase and what not—to pay off the mortgage on the farm.

Industrial Soviet City

Designed by Americans

An American engineering firm is building a complete city, covering 3,000 acres and costing $60,000,000, on what used to be swamp land near Nizhni Novgorod in Russia. When it is finished, about a year from now, the city will house 50,000 persons. Most of them will work in a vast factory from which 150,000 motor cars and trucks will be distributed over Russia each year.

This gigantic undertaking, the American Review of Reviews says, is part of the Russian five-year plan now so much in the public eye. The construction work is being done by the engineering firm headed by W. J. Austin of Cleveland, who has had an opportunity to observe at first hand the progress of the Soviet attempt to turn Russia from an agricultural to an industrial nation in a few years.

Whether the country can be ranked out of its medieval habits and trained in the ways of Twentieth century efficiency within five years is a question Mr. Austin cannot answer, but he is sure that the transformation will be effected in part at least.

However efficient the workers may prove to be, there is no doubt, the article says, about the facilities for living and working with which they will be equipped.

The factories, in which it is understood that an American motor company is not financially interested although it is giving technical advice, are the last word in modern American production units. And the living quarters, four-story apartments, are steam heated, lighted by electricity and fully American in every sense.

To keep clean and healthy take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They regulate liver, bowels and stomach.—Adv.

What should women do to keep their bowels moving freely? A doctor should know the answer. That is why pure Syrup Pepsin is so good for women. It just suits their delicate organism. It is the prescription of an old family doctor who has treated thousands of women patients, and who made a special study of bowel troubles.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is made from fresh, laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients. It doesn't sicken or weaken you. No restrictions of habit or diet are necessary while taking it. But its action is thorough. It carries off the sour bile and poisonous waste. It does everything you want it to do. It is fine for children, too. They love its taste. Let them have it every time their tongues are coated or their skin is sallow.

When you've a sick headache, can't eat, are bilious or sluggish; and at the times when you are most apt to be constipated, take a little of this famous prescription (all druggists keep it ready in big bottles), and you'll know why Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the favorite laxative of over a million women!

Tiaoga and his warriors moved slowly. They were like bronze men without flesh or emotions. Their heads were high, their bodies straight, their jaws set hard as they stalked at a death-march pace between the columns of their people. Jeems fell into this rhythmic movement as the mouth of the torch monster began to swallow them. And then with eyes that became flame-like pools of fear and exhaustion Toinette saw that not a hand gave a sign of rising against them. The torches coughed and flared, but not a spark touched their skins in passing. No eyes gleamed hatred at them. No fingers clenched, no hand was raised. The things she had heard in the land of her people were lies. The Indians killed in war but they did not torture. They did not pull out eyes and thrust sticks through quivering flesh. They were men and women and children like all other men and women and children. These truths she thought she had discovered for herself.

But one thing she did not fully know. She might have learned it had she caught the low-voiced whisperings which followed the passing of the warrior: "She is Tiaoga's daughter—she is the spirit of Soi Yan Makwun returned to us in the flesh—now our good fortune will return—the sun will shine—light and laughter will come—for Soi Yan Makwun is here, out of death to live with us again!"

They crossed a field of darkness toward the fires, and when they came among them Tiaoga was marching in Jeems' place and Jeems had disappeared. She had not sensed his going or Tiaoga's presence, and before she knew that Jeems was no longer among the warriors, she found herself standing alone with the Seneca chief, the people gathering in a circle around them. Tiaoga began to speak. His voice renewed her confidence as she searched for Jeems. He was describing the success of their gods in restoring Silver Heels to her people. It did not take long for Tiaoga to tell his story. His voice rose. His scuffed and bitter face assumed a strange gentleness, and Toinette knew that Jeems was safe though she could not see him. She waited, trembling, and at last Tiaoga was finished and stood for a moment with upraised hand amid a great hush—then spoke a single name, Opitchi. A girl, the Thrush, sprang forward, and as she came Tiaoga took the slave collar from Toinette's throat and crushed it into the earth with his moccasined foot. A murmur ran through the circle. Tiaoga stood with his arms folded across his breast, and Toinette felt the hands of the Thrush drawing her away.

They paused at the edge of the circle, and for a little while no one moved or spoke. Then there was a break in the ring behind the Seneca chief, and through it came Jeems, escorted between Shindas and another warrior. Toinette gasped and almost cried out. There was an amazing change in Jeems. He was stripped to the waist and painted in stripes of red and yellow and black. His face appeared to be cut in crimson gashes. His thick blond hair was tied in a warlock from which streamed a feather showing he had killed a man. At Tiaoga's command there advanced from the circle an old man with a wizened face and white hair and a younger man whose form was bent almost double because of a deformity. Behind these two came a little girl. The old man was Wuskoo, the Cloud. The younger was his son, Tokana, or Gray Fox, a name of which he had been proud in the days before a tree fell on his tepee and crooked his back, when he was the fastest runner in the tribe. Tiaoga spoke again. He exulted in the fortune which had sent another son to Wuskoo, a son with a white skin and a strong body who would care for him and who would be a brother to Gray Fox. With his thin and quivering hands, Wuskoo took the slave collar from Jeems' neck and stamped it joyously into the ground while the broken Gray Fox raised a hand in brotherhood and friendship. There was something so wistfully sweet in the big dark eyes of the little Indian maiden that Jeems drew her to him and put an arm protectingly about her. It was then Toinette left the Thrush and ran to him, so that all saw her held in his painted arms, with Wanonat, the Wood Pigeon, a happy partner in the moment when Toinette proudly and a bit defiantly told Chenusfo and through it the whole Seneca nation that this was the man to whom she belonged.

Like a flood burst loose from a dam, the night of feasting and rejoicing began. It was preceded by a combat among the dogs in which Odd established his right to a place among the four-footed citizens of Chenusfo. After a time he found a scent on the beaten ground that led him to the tepee which had been prepared for Toinette. Here he found Toinette and the Thrush, whose name—a long time ago—had been Mary Daghlen.

It seemed to Jeems that from the beginning his freedom among the Senecas was as great as if he had been born of their blood. Gray Fox took him to the tepee of his father, which was to be his home, and food and drink were brought to him. Then he was left alone, for even the delighted old man whom Tiaoga had honored by the gift of a son could not be kept away from the celebration which was in progress. The thought came to Jeems that no impediment had been placed in his way if he chose to steal off into the night and disappear. The ease with which he might have set out on this adventure was proof of his helplessness. Like the others, he was a captive forever. There was no escape from Chenusfo unless one accepted death as the route.

He did not think of escape because its desire possessed him. He was measuring his world and adjusting himself to its limitations with emotions which were far from unhappy. With Toinette, he could find here all that he wanted in life. Tiaoga and Shindas knew that she belonged to him, and the people of Chenusfo were now aware of it. His heart exulted and his spirit rose with the chanting of the savages. What difference did it make that they were buried in the heart of the forests for all time? He had Toinette. She loved him. Chenusfo would not be a sepulchre. Their love would transform it into a paradise.

He was eager to see Toinette again, and began to seek for a place where he could clean himself of the colored clay plastered on his face and body. With his clothes, he went to the river, and after a thorough scrubbing returned fully dressed with the eagle feather still in his hair. His weapons had been given to him, and these he carried boldly when he joined the Indians. The triumphal fire was blazing, and as soon as the hungry town had fed itself, the scalp dances would begin. The scalps were already suspended on the victory pole in its light. Children were playing about them. The fine dark hair of one was so long that they could reach the tresses with their fingers, and when they did this they shrieked with ecstasy. Among them was a white-skinned boy of seven or eight who laughed and shouted with the others.

Jeems found an opportunity to have a word with Shindas and learned that Toinette and Opitchi were together. Shindas could not tear himself from the martial dignity which was expected of him until the warriors had told of their exploits in the scalp dance, so Jeems went alone and found Tiaoga's tepee and the smaller one near it in which were Toinette and the Thrush. It was lighted by a torch, and he drew back among the dark boles of the trees and waited. At the end of half an hour, Toinette and Opitchi came out into the illumined forest. For a little while they stood under the gnarled limbs of the trees which cast shadows from over their heads. He did not reveal himself until Opitchi's form disappeared among the pools of light and darkness as she went toward the fires. Then he advanced, calling Toinette's name softly.

Her appearance surprised him. She was not the ragged and disheveled young woman who had arrived with Tiaoga's men. Mary, the Thrush, had dressed her in the prettiest raiment left by Silver Heels. There was something about the long yellow feather, the fillet of scarlet cloth, and the boyish closeness of her dress which made Jeems give a wondering cry. It was as if they had come to her from an obscure and distant past and had always belonged to her. He had dreamed of this lovely wilderness princess; through years of boyhood hopes and plannings he had built up worlds about her, and in those worlds he had fought for her and had adventured with her where he alone was her champion and her hero. He had carried gifts of feathers to her—feathers and fawnskin and a piece of cloth like that which she now wore in a crimson band about her forehead!

To him it was the precious red velvet, there in the glow of the moon. He opened his arms, and Toinette came into them.

CHAPTER X

For half an hour Jeems was alone with Toinette. Then Mary Daghlen returned, and with her came a messenger who took him back to the dances where they were beginning about the scalp-fire. He was not embarrassed by the critical eyes upon him. The wildness of the night entered his blood, a heat set blazing by the joy of his possession, and as he chanted the Seneca victory songs with the others, Toinette was in his heart, and words she had whispered to him under the oaks repeated themselves until they dulled his senses and blinded his eyes to everything but their import. As soon as God would let them bring it about she would be his wife. She had said that! So he danced. He shouted at Tiaoga's side. Toinette, horrified at first, saw him in his madness. Then she began to understand. But not until he took his turn among the warriors and danced alone in the light of the fire, chanting his story in the language of his adopted people, did Opitchi—translating what he said—let her know fully the daring of her lover. Jeems' story began with his earliest thoughts and memories of her. He told of their homes in the country of the Richelieu, of his dreams and hopes. He described the passing of moons and the growing of his love and how death had come with the Mohawks from the south. Then he came to the finding of Toinette, their flight, the triumph of his love, his fight with the scalp hunter at Lussan's place, and their capture by Tiaoga and his warriors. He praised these warriors. They were not like the Mohawks, who were sneaks in the night. The Senecas were clean and swift and brave. He was proud to be a brother and a son among them. He wanted this people to respect him, and he wanted them to love Toinette whom Tiaoga had honored by taking as his daughter. For Toinette belonged to him. She wanted to be his wife. She wanted to bear his children among the Senecas.

He stopped at last and thanked God that Hepsibah Adams had made it possible for him to do this thing in the light of the fire at Chenusfo. A murmur of approbation stirred the people. It rippled and died out as another warrior took his place.

Long after midnight the revels ended, and Chenusfo grew quiet. For a time, he looked at the stars and the changing shadows of the moon through the open door of Wuskoo's tepee. He entered sleep as if going into a long avenue of golden colors. Only happiness rising like a flower from the ashes of a torture that was gone could have made it like that. His mother seemed a part of it, her voice a glad melody somewhere in the radiance which embraced him. In the avenue of gold, he saw Wood Pigeon smiling happily between his mother and Toinette. Then he sank into deeper sleep.

This was the beginning of the strange life of Jeems and Toinette in Chenusfo which Colonel Boquet, afterward major general and commander in chief of his majesty's forces in the southern department of America, described as "an episode of fact which is difficult of belief and astounding in the new viewpoint which it and others of a similar kind give us of savage life."

State Boundaries Long Matter of Disputation

For a great many years the boundary between the colony of New York and Massachusetts was in dispute. The government of New York maintained that the eastern limit was the Connecticut river, basing its claim upon a Dutch title. The Massachusetts government claimed territory westward as far as the Hudson river. For the purpose of establishing this claim the Boston government in 1650 made a grant of land on the Hudson river below Fort Orange and in 1672 sent John Payne to New York to solicit permission to pass and repass by water. He was most courteously received, but the claim was never recognized. The dispute finally reached such a stage, resulting in riots, etc., that it was submitted to the lord commissioners of trade of England, and George II in 1757, by royal order in council, determined the boundary, granting the territory to New York. This was still not acceptable until 1773, when commissioners from New York and Massachusetts met and finally decided the boundary according to the present lines.

Virtues of Economy

Economy, wrote Doctor Johnson, is the parent of integrity, of liberty, and of ease, and the beautiful sister of temperance, of cheerfulness and health.

DAIRY THE DAIRY

GIVE DAIRY COW PROPER FEEDING

Liberal Ration Increases the Milk Production Later.

Giving the dairy cow a good start by proper feeding throughout her dry period is a sure way to help her freshen in a desirable condition, says C. L. Blackman, dairy specialist at Ohio State university.

A cow beginning her lactation in low condition, he states, may produce less than 70 per cent as much milk as she produces when she freshens in good condition. Apparently cow freshening in low condition produce less than their possible capacity throughout the entire lactation period.

Progressive dairymen who keep records and study their cows have learned this fact from experience. Blackman points out. They have found that the most profitable feed is that fed during the dry period.

As soon as the cow is dry she should be fed according to her condition. If she is in good flesh, very little except a good legume hay and silage, or pasture, need be given during this time. However, if she is in poor flesh it is best to feed liberally. Instead of a high protein ration the dry cow requires one that is light and laxative.

If a high quality legume hay is available, he suggests that the ration contain 400 pounds of corn or corn and cob meal, 200 pounds oats, 100 pounds wheat, 100 pound wheat bran, and 100 pounds linseed oil meal or soy bean meal.

If only poor roughage, such as timothy hay, oat straw, or corn stover is available, it is usually best to increase the oil meal or soy bean meal by 50 per cent.

Drinking Cups Increase Cow's Yield of Milk

A dairyman recently said that of all the improvements that he had put into his dairy farm the one which brought him the most returns in actual dollars was drinking cups for his cows. Another dairyman found by actual figures that the drinking cups not only saved a lot of work, but have also greatly increased the milk production of his herd. Every farmer who has drinking cups knows that cows, like people, drink more often when the supply is convenient, particularly when they are eating. At least four pounds of water are required for each pound of milk produced, so that any increase in consumption of water is usually followed by a correspondingly larger milk yield.

Silage Increases Milk and Butter Production

A survey of dairy herds in a large section of Pennsylvania showed that a cow fed on silage produced 150 gallons of milk more per year than when the silage was withheld. At 20 cents a gallon this amounts to $30 more per year. For a ten-cow herd the increased profits amount to approximately $300 in a single year.

Another extensive survey carried out by the Minnesota Cow Testing association showed that silage-fed cows produced a larger quantity of butterfat per cow, resulting in the production of 70 pounds more butter per year. At 42 cents a pound this amounts to an annual increased profit of $30 per cow.

Dairy Hints

There is no best breed of dairy cattle.

The rock-bottom essentials of a good dairy barn are that it be clean, well ventilated and well lighted.

Niggardly feeding of good cows is mistaken economy; likewise, liberal feeding of poor cows is just as poor practice.

Proper feeding, culling, and management of the average dairy herd, combined with breeding for high production, will give the highest dairy returns.

Breeding records eliminate guess work as to calving dates and permit the dairyman to dry up the cow a reasonable length of time before she is due to freshen.

For tillable pasture land that has gone to weeds, breaking may be best; this to be followed by a fall nurse crop for the pasture grasses after a cultivated crop in the spring and summer.

Grubs are beginning to show in the old crows by this time. It is recommended that stockmen look for them so as to remove them from the cows' hides. The grubs may be removed as soon as the hole is cut through the hide by gently pressing it out.

Comparing corn silage with corn fodder for feeding dairy cows, experiments conducted by the North Dakota experiment station revealed that the cows on trial produced 4 per cent more butterfat on silage than on fodder.

For COLDS

We all catch colds and they can make us miserable; but yours needn't last long if you will do this: Take two or three tablets of Bayer Aspirin just as soon as possible after a cold starts. Stay in the house if you can—keep warm. Repeat with another tablet or two of Bayer Aspirin every three or four hours, if those symptoms of cold persist. Take a good laxative when you retire, and keep bowels open. If throat is sore, dissolve three tablets in a quarter-glassful of water and gargle. This soothes inflammation and reduces infection. There is nothing like Bayer Aspirin for a cold, or sore throat. And it relieves aches and pains almost instantly. The genuine tablets, marked Bayer, are absolutely harmless to the heart.

Cuticura—assurance of a good, healthy scalp.

The regular, consistent use of Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Soap is assurance of a healthy scalp. Let the shampoo be preceded by an application of Cuticura Ointment (if there is dandruff or skin irritation); then shampoo with a strong sudso, or with a soft soap made by dissolving shavings of Cuticura Soap in a little hot water. You will be pleased with the healthfulness of your scalp.

MOTHERS ARE LEARNING USES OF MAGNESIA

From the beginning of expectancy until baby is weaned, Phillips' Milk of Magnesia performs the greatest service for many women.

It relieves nausea, heartburn, "morning sickness," inclination to vomit; helps digestion. Its mild laxative action assures regular bowel movement.

Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is better than lime water for neutralizing cow's milk for infant feeding. All drugstores have Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in generous 25c and 50c bottles. Always insist on the genuine, endorsed by physicians for 50 years.

Can't PLAY Can't REST—child needs Castoria

WHEN a child is fretful and irritable, seems distressed and uncomfortable, can't play, can't sleep, it is a pretty sure sign that something is wrong. Right here is where Castoria fits into a child's scheme—the very purpose for which it was formulated years ago! A few drops and the condition which caused the trouble is righted; comfort quickly brings restful sleep.

Nothing can take the place of Castoria for children; it's perfectly harmless, yet always effective. For the protection of your wee one—for your own peace of mind—keep this old reliable preparation always on hand. But don't keep it just for emergencies; let it be an every-day aid. Its gentle action will ease and soothe the infant who cannot sleep. In more liberal doses it will effectively help to regulate sluggish bowels in an older child. All druggists have Castoria; it's genuine if you see Chas. H. Fletcher's signature and this name-plate:
