FARRAND ON PROBATION; IS FINED $200.00

James A. Farrand was sentenced Tuesday by Judge Herman Dehnke. Farrand had been charged with arson, but due to mitigating circumstances Farrand was placed on probation for five years with a bond of $1000.00 and fined $200.00 which included costs. Judge David Davison, to whom Farrand was ordered to report once each month, was appointed probation officer by the court.

A power of the court was used in an unusual way by Judge Herman Dehnke when Alex McKay appeared Wednesday before him for sentence. McKay had been convicted Tuesday of a violation of the liquor law.

After a conference with Judge Dehnke and Prosecuting Attorney Stewart, McKay was placed on the stand and when questioned, he stated that he had intended to plead guilty to the charge against him, but that his attorney, Leo J. Goodwin of Detroit, had advised him to plead not guilty. Attorney Goodwin came into the courtroom just at the time McKay took the stand and Judge Dehnke requested him to take a seat and listen to the statements made by McKay. After a further questioning of McKay, Judge Dehnke cited Goodwin to appear before the court April 23 and show cause why he should not be judged guilty of contempt of court. This may show a way of handling cases where flagrant perjury has been used to defeat the ends of justice.

McKay was ordered to appear before court April 23 for sentence.

In the cases of Downing et al vs. Edward M. Immerman of Oscoda the jury brought in a verdict in favor of the plaintiffs. The total award was $1699.00.

TAWAS CITY SCHOOL NOTES

Prepared and Edited by a Committee of the Student Council

High School
We reported last week that Paul J. Misner, of the Michigan State Normal College of Ypsilanti, would give the Commencement Address in June. Mr. Misner informs us that his topic will be, "Footprints in the Sands of Time."

The musical comedy, "Cupid-Up-to-Date," has been postponed from Friday evening, April 17th, to Tuesday evening, April 28th. Remember the date!

Miss Dinwiddie, a representative from the Michigan State Library, Lansing, is here this week to reorganize and re-catalogue the high school library. The books will be moved from the cupboards in the English room, to the room that has been used for stock for the past few years. Much benefit should be derived by the students because of this reorganization and new location.

School will be closed Friday of this week, because of the fact that the day is "Good Friday."

Plans are under way to hold another scholastic contest among the seventh and eighth graders of the surrounding rural schools in the high school assembly room, Friday, May 1st. The plan will be about the same as that of last year. A prize will be given to each student who secures a first place in a subject, and also one to the school that secures the most points.

The Seniors will hold a bake sale Saturday afternoon, April 11th, at one of the local stores. This will give the housekeepers a chance to secure many goodies, and the class a chance to secure some of that much needed article—money. All should remember the date!

Baseball practice will begin next week.

Seventh and Eighth Grades

The seventh grade is studying South America in geography.

The eighth grade is studying "The Early Days of Detroit" in the Michigan History.

We are studying Shubert in music. Primary Room

We are making preparations for an Easter party.

The first graders are reading a new book.

The second graders are learning a poem about April Showers.

JOE E. BROWN IS FAVORITE OF NEW MOVIE PUBLIC

To become a prominent motion picture comedian is a real and very profitable cinematic distinction in an event, but to become the leading comedian in talkies, and to do it in the course of two years is the achievement of Joe E. Brown, who is starring in "Going Wild" at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, Sunday and Monday, April 5 and 6.

Funnier than "Top Speed," Brown's greatest comedy achievement to date, "Going Wild" is a sure-fire audience entertainer and liberally interspersed with catchy songs.

Brown plays the role of a "boomer" newspaperman, broker and on his way to Florida, paying his fare by playing poker. He is mistaken for a famous aviation author with the same initials, and finds the band turned out to meet him at the station. Does he take it big? Well, you know Joe E. Brown!

Laura Lee, who made her debut in "Top Speed," also plays the feminine comedy lead in "Going Wild." Don't miss this big comedy show.

IOSCO POMONA GRANGE MEETS AT WHITEMORE

The Iosco county Pomona Grange met Friday afternoon at the Whitemore high school. After several numbers by the high school orchestra which were much appreciated, James Gorsline, agricultural agent of Arenac county, gave us the workings and results of 4-H club work in his county. This year they have 43 clubs with over 400 members.

The value of this club work can hardly be over-estimated. Let us not overlook this activity and let our neighboring counties get too far ahead of Iosco.

Ball-O-Fun—Mrs. Marion Daugharty, Corrigan school, Whitemore; Miss Isabelle King, McIvor school, Tawas City.

First Aid Kits—Miss Effie Hompstead, Whitemore.

WILL DISCONTINUE THE WARD SCHOOL

At a meeting of the board of education held Saturday it was decided to discontinue the ward school. This move was made by the board to economize in expenses and it was thought that the benefits derived from the school did not warrant its cost.

The board tendered the teachers a renewal of contracts for next year.

EMANUEL LUTHERAN EASTER SERVICES

"Now upon the first day of the week, very early in the morning, there came Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of Jesus, and Salome, unto the sepulchre at the rising of the sun, bringing sweet spices which they had prepared, that they might come and anoint Him. And when they looked they saw the stone rolled away from the sepulchre. And they entered in, and found not the body of the Lord Jesus. Behold, two men stood by them in shining garments. They said unto them, Why seek ye the living among the dead? Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified; He is risen; He is not here; behold the place where he laid Him. Remember how He spoke unto you when He was yet in Galilee? And they remembered His words." Luke 24—Mark 16.

In commemoration and for spiritual meditation of this great, joyful wonder, arrangements for three Easter services on Easter Sunday have been made at Emanuel's Lutheran church, Tawas City. Early in the morning at 6:00 o'clock an English Sunrise service will be held. The Bible text for consideration in that service will be Luke 24:34, "The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon." Every person attending this service will receive an attractive Easter cross containing an appropriate Easter scripture verse, which may be nicely used as a bookmark. At 9:30 the German Easter service will be held, in which a sermon on the same text, Luke 24:34, will be held. A special unique feature of all our Lutheran services is the hearty singing of all the ancient Lutheran church chorals by the entire congregation. In the evening at 7:00 o'clock the school children of the congregation will render their Easter program, which will consist of singing of Easter hymns and recitations of Easter messages by about fifty children under the direction of teacher William Woltmann, principal of the Christian day school. Services are scheduled on Central Standard time.

Everyone is cordially invited to attend these Easter and all other services and assured to be heartily welcome. "O come, let us worship and bow down; let us kneel before the Lord, our maker." Ps. 95:6.

Summary of services on Easter Sunday—
6:00 a. m. (C. S. T.)—English Easter Sunrise Service.

Court of Health Posters—Miss Lucille S. Gackstetter, East Tawas; Miss Wenona Gibson, Keystone school, Whitemore; Miss Elsie L. Neumann, Laidlawville school, Tawas City; D. Snyder, Tawas City.

To each child selling ten or more seals, a bangle pin was presented.

IOSCO CHURCH SCHOOLS

Receipts for the council work include one dollar each from Miss Margaret Fitzhugh of Tawas City and Mrs. W. J. Grant of Oscoda.

Approximately 250 people assembled in the East Tawas M. E. church last Sunday evening for the presentation of "The Challenge of the Cross." The free will offering amounted to $11.78. The musical numbers preceding the drama were much enjoyed, and included two selections by the M. E. choir, one number by the choir of the Finnish Lutheran church, a duet by Mr. and Mrs. Sherk, and a solo by Miss Selma Hagstrom. The next presentation of the drama is to be given at the Alabaster church on Good Friday evening.

Word has been received from the committee on World Friendship Among Children that the project for 1931 is the sending of friendship treasure chests to the children of Porto Rico. The first project of the committee was the sending of 18,000 doll messengers of friendship to Japan in 1927. The entire Japanese nation was stirred with joy and with friendly sentiments for America. In 1928, nearly 30,000 friendship school bags were packed as symbols of good-will for the children of Mexico. They helped to promote mutual appreciation and friendship between the United States and Mexico. The third project was with the Philippine Islands. The symbols used were friendship treasure chests. Some 28,000 chests were sent, filled with treasures of many kinds—books, toys, letters, and articles for school use. The children of Iosco sent friendship school bags to Mexico and friendship treasure chests to the Philippines. A great need has arisen in Porto Rico, and with it has come an opportunity to show friendship in a practical way to a people in dire distress. It is therefore suggested that our children send friendship treasure chests packed with symbols of good will to let the Porto Rican children know that we are their friends.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to express my heartfelt thanks to the many friends who so kindly stood by me through my recent trouble. I also hold no ill will to the few enemies who through misinformation wanted me sent to prison.

It is my endeavor to live up to my parole to the last letter.

Jan. A. Farrand.

MEMORIAL WILL BE DEDICATED DURING JULY

The beautiful bronze memorial to the pioneer lumbermen of Michigan which in the near future will rise on the banks of the AuSable river near Tawas City as a lasting tribute to the men who carved Michigan from the wilderness, soon will be ready for shipment to the site and subsequent erection. William B. Mershon, Sr., of Bay City, leader in the project, said recently:

Mr. Mershon recently visited the New York studios of the sculptor, Robert Aitken, and saw the progress of the work. Within a short time it will have advanced to the point where the casting of the big bronze figures can be carried out, he said.

Erection of the monument on its massive bronze base is expected to start as soon as weather permits in the spring, Mr. Mershon said, and it is expected to have it ready for dedication about July 1.

Mr. Mershon has just been informed that the federal government has dedicated the spot chosen for location of the monument to that purpose, it being situated in a national forest, and that relocation of a short section of road nearby has been carried out in order to increase the amount of room available for the memorial.

PROGRAM OF CANTATA TO BE PRESENTED SUNDAY EVENING

Following is the program of the cantata, "The First Easter," by Ira B. Wilson, to be presented at the Community Building, East Tawas, Sunday evening, April 5th:

Benediction—Rev. C. E. Edinger.

"ABRAHAM LINCOLN" GREAT AMERICAN FILM SPECTACLE

No American film spectacle produced within the last ten years can rival the stupendous "Abraham Lincoln." D. W. Griffith's United Artists feature based on the life of the Emancipator, showing at the State Theatre next Friday and Saturday, April 10 and 11, with a matinee Saturday, April 11.

No deliberate selection of superlatives can justify the magnitude, the expense and historical accuracy which features this greatest and most genuinely "Griffith" picture since "The Birth of a Nation" started the world with its pathos and romantic realism.

In the matter of cast alone the production rightfully lays claim to a record which may never be surpassed. The principals—so called because of their characterization of high historical personages—total 112 of the stage and screen's most capable players.

It is claimed for this picture that no expense was spared in securing the exact type desired to play a certain role. Absolute resemblances were required in 90 percent of the selections of players. This strict adherence to historical exactitude made many demands on the treasury of the producers, but the result has more than justified expense in this direction.

"HELL'S ANGELS" LAVISH DRAMA OF THE AIR

"Hell's Angels," the most expensive and most talked about film-drama of all time, will be the deluxe attraction at the State Theatre on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, April 5, 6 and 7.

Howard Hughes, the 25 year old producer and director of "Hell's Angels" has shattered all records in time and money spent on a single picture. His prodigious outlay is discussed wherever films are shown, and fans everywhere are eager to view the first multi-million dollar talkie.

Ben Lyon, James Hill and Jean Harlow are co-featured in the leading roles and are supported by such well known players as John Darrow, Lucien Prival, Jane Winton, Douglas Gilmore, Lena Malena, and others.

Approximately 137 aviators, and as many mechanics, including nearly every stunt flyer and ex-war ace available in America, participated in the sky action of "Hell's Angels," which alone required 18 months to record.

EAST TAWAS SCHOOL NEWS

Grades from Kindergarten to 8th are asked to remain on the playgrounds until the last bells before school, 8:25 and 1:10 C. S. T. The latter time will take effect from April 6th until the close of school.

School will begin again Tuesday, April 7th.

Mr. Youngs is attending the National Education Convention which is being held at Detroit April 1, 2, 3 and 4.

All Seniors are having their pictures taken at the Brown Studios, East Tawas. The boys are lucky in not having to visit a beauty parlor beforehand.

Dr. Ketchik, Children's Fund dentist, has left for Oscoda county after a stay here of three months. He will be back again in September. He completed dental work for forty-one children and accented twenty others for the honor roll from the first eight grades.

Civics classes attended court this week.

Lucille Klump has entered school to brush up on her stenography.

Two college students, home for the Easter vacation, who visited school this week were John Hill and William Pinkerton.

East Tawas high's baseball enthusiasts started their spring training this week. Some 20 candidates for the team are working out. The team this season will be built around a veteran infield. To date the outfield has only one certain member and the other two positions are hotly contested for. The coach is looking over some pretty slim material to do the twirling for the team, and unless our experienced "heaver" from last year reports for practice, East Tawas high is going to be extremely weak in this department. The "Indies" face one of the toughest schedules in history this spring, in spite of the fact that two dates are not yet definitely filled. The season will be opened Friday, April 17, when East Tawas will meet St. Joseph of the same town. The definite arrangement of games will be announced later.

WANTED—100 head either fat cattle or feeders. Call or write D. I. Pearsall, Hale.

The Come-back of the Old Time Fiddler

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
 SHORT time ago a Montreal newspaper printed an article under the title of "Our Canadian Folk-Dances" in which Kathleen Redman Strange, the author, said: "If you ever have watched a group of country people engaged in a 'square' dance, you will readily understand why I regret the passing of these old-time favorites from the floors of our present-day country dance halls."

"As recently as ten years ago these square or group dances were an integral part of our western country life. Today the modern tendency for jazz is crowding out the old-time fiddler and the old-time dances. The old-time fiddler cannot play the new dance music, though he can play the old irresistibly. The consequence is that not only the fiddlers, the 'callers,' and the old rhymes themselves, but also the people who know how to dance the figures are disappearing."

If this Canadian woman had crossed the boundary line into this country and visited various places in a number of different states she might have discovered that mourning over the "passing of the old-time fiddler" is still a bit premature. If, for instance, she had gone into the Catskills in New York she might have made an interesting discovery, as witness the following from the New York Sun:

Having explored the Catskills, Mary Elizabeth Osborn has recorded in American Speech some of the results of her observations on the square dance.

"The neighbors gather in the 'front parlor,' the barn or, corrupting touch for the true antiquarian, in the garage. The fiddler calls the figures; he is dictator of the dance; he 'has been known to stop fiddling and scold the dancers if the figure is not being performed quite swiftly enough or evenly enough to meet his approval.'"

Whatever the dance may be, says this historian, there are introductory and closing steps that are always the same. The opening figure is ordered thus:

- "Head couples,
- Right and left.
- Half promenade;
- Ladies change,
- Balance four,
- Allemand left,
- All promenade."

The closing figure is directed in this fashion by the master of festivities:

- "Ladies to the right and swing,
- Balance to the next;
- Gents to the right and swing,
- Balance to the next;
- Allemand left,
- All promenade."

In "Captain Jinks," a favorite dance, the figures are performed with enthusiasm to these quadrains, the "flying lady" is frequently lifted bodily from the floor and swung in the air with right good will:

- "First lady swing with Captain Jinks;
- Now with the one that never drinks;
- Now with the one that carries the chinks,
- And now with the dude of the ballroom.

Richmond, Va.—For the first time in Virginia's history the old lyrics of a forgotten cry that came to America with the first colonists, are to be heard again, when the picturesque valleys and hollows of the Blue Ridge mountains surrender their mountain bards, April 14 to 17, of this year for the first Virginia music festival, to be held at Charlottesville. Above is shown a group of the old fiddlers getting in a bit of practice for the coming festival.

And back with the left; Join your partner. And balance four in a line; Swing to places And promenade all."

This is an aspect of life in the Catskills, the summer boarder does not know. Our author says that in the villages the square dances are falling off somewhat in popularity, but on the farms they are as greatly enjoyed as they were a generation ago. Jazz leaves the guests apathetic.

It was only a year or so ago that the Kansas City Star chronicled the fact that "ten old-time fiddlers, five from north Missouri and an equal number from the southern section of the state, will saw it out December 30 at Jefferson City for the state championship. The winner will receive a large loving cup. The contest is expected to take all night." And the Rolla (Mo.) Herald reported that "the Ozarks have radio and free rural mail delivery; they have automobiles and roads but refuse to abandon the old square dance where the fiddler plays the 'Arkansas Traveller' and 'Turkey in the Straw' and at the same time calls the dance figures in verse.

A year or so ago a South Dakota editor, commenting upon the revival of the old-time dances in that state, was moved to the following reminiscence of an earlier day:

In the spring of 1879, I witnessed my first frontier dance. A new store building was to be dedicated with a dance. There was room for three "sets" of four couples each to dance at once and the musician and caller was Dume Evans. Just what Dume was a contraction of I never knew. His music didn't appeal even to my unpracticed ear, but his unique and poetic improvisation as he "called" to his own fiddling impressed me more than the movement of the dancers. When the sets were full, Dume's fiddle and also his voice came into action. He always sang in a droning monotone, keeping time also with his foot. The opening was always the same, "Slute yer partners."

By this time his eyes were closed and his voice had risen to a sort of rhythmic wail:

"First couple lead to the couple on the right. "Lady in the center an' three hands 'round; mind yer feet fellers, don't tromp on her gorn."

"First lady swing out and second lady in; three jine hands and circle agin. "On to the next couple, hoe it down; three jine hands and caper 'round."

"Third lady to the center; give your honey a whirl, lead to the next with your best girl. "Grab your honies, don't let 'em fall, shake your hoofs and balance all."

"Ringtail coons in the trees at play; grab your partners and run away."

"Buffalo gals are a comin' out tonight; first couple lead to the couple on the right; jaybird scoldin' up in a tree; gents stand around and ladies do-se; if you catch a yeller jacket let 'er go; ladies stand back and gents do-se-do. On to the next and do it some more; make them cow hides hit the floor."

"Back to your places that-away; grab them heifers and all chaw hay."

Or it might be in a sort of reminiscent and sentimental vein that he would call:

"First gent lead to lady on yer right and watch yer 'step now, mind yer: back to yer place and swing that gal, the gal yer left behind yer."

Dume's physical endurance apparently was as inexhaustible as his power of improvisation. Hour after hour the old fiddle would screech, and hour after hour the voice of the fiddler would drone on while his foot kept time without intermission. Of course there were occasional periods of irrigation, though Dume never seemed to be effected by his potions, and when at last the dance broke up it was near the hour of blushing morn.

Similarly a writer in the Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal told of old-time dances and old-time fiddlers in that state as follows:

Some of the old-time Kentucky fiddlers had more of a variety of tuneful breakdown melodies in their repertoire than others, but there was one accomplishment in which fewer excelled. That was the calling of the dance figures, which some of them could do in an original and novel way.

The figures of the old-time square dances were called off in the quaint vernacular couched in loose rhyme, and the variations that took a wide range occasioned much merriment. Following is a sample of one of the characteristics dance calls of the period:

"Slute yer partner and let her go; Balance all and do-se-do. Swing yer gal and run away; Right and left and gents sashay. Gents to right and swing or cheat; On to next gal and repeat. Balance next and don't be shy; Swing yer pard and swing her high; Bunch the gals and circle round; Whack yer feet until they bound. Form a basket and break away; Swing around and all get gay. All gents left and balance all; Lift you hoofs and let 'em fall. Swing yer opposite, swing agin; Ketch the sageshen if 'ou kin. Back to pardner, do-se-do; All jine hands and off you go. Gents salute yer little sweeties; Hitch and promenade to sees."

The time-honored square dance, or quadrille, included other figures, one of them being called "bird-in-the-cage." Others were made up and interpolated, such as "Swing Yer Long Cornstalk," which had its origin in Arkansas. Usually the dance "caller" of other days had a foghorn voice and he contributed much to the "shindies" of the period that often lasted until daylight before the final strains of "Home, Sweet Home" broke up the party.

All of which offers rather conclusive evidence that it's not yet time to write "finis" to the old-time fiddler and his dance tunes. He will hold sway at the Virginia music festival at Charlottesville this month, according to the information accompany the picture shown above, and judging by reports of fiddlers' contests in other parts of the country which have appeared in the newspapers recently, it seems likely that he will pursue his "calling" for some time yet to come.

The DAIRY

NEW BARN PLANS FOR DAIRY COWS

Designed for Farmers Having Less Than 6 Animals.

New plans have been designed by the agricultural engineer working with the dairy extension office at the North Carolina State college by which cow stalls and stanchions of lumber may be built at home by those who wish to remodel old barns to house dairy cattle.

The plans have been designed in response to many requests from persons having a few cows and no place to keep them. Using these plans, barns, stables or sheds may be made sanitary and convenient for handling a small dairy herd.

A. T. Holman, agricultural engineer, who designed the new plans, says they are intended for the small producer having less than six cows. This class includes the family cows and the small herds from which sour cream is sold. The plans are not recommended for those in the dairy business and producing milk on a comparatively large scale.

Mr. Holman says one of the best features of the new set of plans is the low cost of construction. Only one sack of cement and about 450 board feet of lumber are needed to build stanchions and stall for three cows. The average cost of the materials used should be around $3 for one cow.

FOR COLDS—ALKALINIZE YOUR SYSTEM

Doctors everywhere are prescribing this new treatment for colds: Begin when you feel a cold coming. Take a tablespoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia, morning, noon and night, the first day. Do the same second day. Then only at night. Colds reduce the alkalinity of your system. That's what makes you feel achy, feverish, weak, half-sick. Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is alkali in harmless, palatable form. It checks the symptoms of colds by restoring the alkalinity of your system.

Museum Has 18,000 Flies Of the approximately 40,000 known species of flies the national museum has specimens of 18,000. Alfalfa hay is an important dairy feed because it contains a relatively high amount of protein and calcium.

One of the surest ways of helping solve the feed problem and incidentally to aid the whole dairy situation, is to cull out the low producing cows. When the daughters of a bull come into production, that bull will soon be proved to be either a valuable breeding animal or just so much soup meat.

Newly freshened cows should not be fed heavily at first. A warm bran mash is very beneficial immediately after freshening. Ground oats, bran, and oil meal can be fed later.

Italian and perennial rye grasses are quick growing grasses and are well suited to be a part of a good many pasture mixtures, one of their advantages being that they act somewhat as a nurse crop until the slower growing grasses get a foothold. When makes a good dairy feed in amounts up to one-third of the entire grain mixture. It should be rolled or coarsely ground and mixed with bulky feeds, such as bran or oats, in addition to enough protein feed to balance the ration.

Stomach Troubles Headache and Dizziness If your stomach is sick, you are sick all over. If you can't digest your food, you lose strength, get nervous and feel as tired when you get up as when you went to bed. For 10 years Tanlac has restored to health and activity many thousands who suffered just as you do. Mr. Daniel Vinciguerra, of 6200 Stiles St., Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have not had a dizzy spell or a headache since taking Tanlac. My nerves are in better shape and I can enjoy a good night's sleep."

Let Tanlac help you too. It corrects the most obstinate digestive troubles—relieves gas, pains in the stomach and bowels, restores appetite, vigor and sound sleep. Tanlac is made of roots, barks and herbs. Costs less than 2 cents a dose. Get a bottle from your druggist today. Your money back if it doesn't help you.

"Con Men" in Detroit Begin Career Early

Detroit.—Two eight-year-old "confidence men"—neither of whom was distinguished by the slicker's mustache prevalent among such gentry—are being sought by police for bringing confusion to the birthday party of Robert Wellman, seven, and a lesson in sleight of hand to Jamie Allen, four.

As a result of the trickery of the eight-year-olds he was $1, good for exchange at any confectionery; Robert is shy one birthday present, and Jamie sits home brooding over a marble containing one apparent and derogatory nick.

To trace the legend of "the deal" to its beginnings, one must start with the illness of Jamie's baby sister. As a result, his mother, Mrs. J. S. Allen, was confined to their home and was unable to purchase a birthday offering. Since no child feels comfortable at a party unless he can present his host with a token of esteem, Jamie was given a dollar bill which had been placed in an envelope.

Jamie, glistening in holiday splendor, put out for the Wellman home a few doors away. In front of his home he was intercepted by two older youngsters, one of whom was described as "a smooth talker" with an eye as cold and glistening as the marble in his pocket.

Their purported conversation went in the following vein: "Dressed up," declared the discerning "con man," "You must be going some place."

"A birthday party," confided the affable Mr. Allen.

"So! So!" stated the owner of the marble. "Then you must have a present."

"Quite right, my friend," Mr. Allen declared, "and what a present. Look."

At sight of the dollar the conversational member of the confidence team brightened. "A dollar," he sneered. "Probably full of germs. Whoever heard of such a present. Tsk! Tsk! Now for one caught in your predicament I have an immediate remedy, guaranteed to cure all colds, coughs and ailments kindred to the human race."

His accomplice nudged him and whispered, "The wrong spiel."

"So! So!" continued the monologist. "Now right in my pocket reposes the cure for any embarrassment which might arise."

And before the young Mr. Allen was sure what so many words were about, the dollar had been transferred to the owner of the marble. Mr. Allen went on his way juggling the marble.

Later came the shock. The young Mr. Wellman was already the possessor of a marble, one entirely intact, the young guest learned.

A few minutes later Mrs. Allen ob-

Famines

While famines are less frequent today because rapid transportation moves food when needed, millions have died from hunger in other times. Nine million Chinese perished in 1877, and over a million more in 1902. Eight hundred thousand died in India in 1837, over a million in 1865, and almost as many in 1900. Floods, injurious pests, lack of rain, and war were responsible.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

By WALTER TRUMBULL

Charles Hanson, Towne and Gene Tunney, during the cold spell we had before the latter went to Europe, were walking from the hotel where Tunney was staying, in the direction of dinner, at one of the smarter Park avenue restaurants.

Through the dusk ahead of them trudged a man to whom they paid no attention until he suddenly staggered and plunged forward on his face. That is not exactly accurate, because he didn't plunge, but seemed rather to fold up gently and then spread himself upon a sidewalk grating. Towne and Tunney didn't know whether he was drunk, drugged, hurt or ill, but when they stooped above him, there was no scent of liquor and, if his clothes were old, they were neat.

He was pale and seemed to be in a faint. When Tunney lifted him, with the strong muscles of the athlete he still is, Gene was surprised to find how light he was.

He carried the man into the foyer of an apartment house and Charlie Towne sent a hallboy for a near-by doctor, who came at once. He looked the man over. "Just a case of malnutrition," he said. "This fellow has been starving." He gave him some sort of stimulant.

As the man's eyes opened, the first thing he saw was a stranger, who happened to be bending over him stuffing ten dollars in a pocket which appeared to have been empty for some time. He couldn't have known where he was, or how he got there; but he did know that fact.

"When did you eat last?" demanded the stranger.

"Oh, I don't know," said the man weakly, "three or four days ago. But aren't you Gene Tunney?" And the interest of finding himself talking to a heavyweight champion, even a retired one, seemed to rejuvenate the man more than any measure taken by the doctor. Mr. Towne and Mr. Tunney wished to send him to a hospital, but he insisted that he felt a lot better and that all he needed was a little food. So they saw that he got that, and then went along to their dinner.

But, before they parted from the man, there was something that Tunney wished to know. I might say that he has one of the keenest pair of blue eyes I ever saw in stock. Not much gets past them.

"When you fell," he said, "your right hand relaxed, and something slipped from it and dropped through the sidewalk grating. Do you mind telling us what it was?"

"Why, no," said the man, a bit hesitantly. "It was a rosary. You see, I've been out of work for quite a while, and—"

They saw. A fellow of thirty; pretty hungry; a little desperate at served the scion of the family, seated on the front steps, brooding.

Police were invited by Jamie's parents to aid in the search for confidence men.

Stratton's Boy

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I was over at Stratton's town making a speech or doing some other ineffective thing when I had a call from Stratton, whom I had known slightly years ago, asking me if I would not come out to his business plant and see him. He had a boy about whom he wanted to talk to me.

Stratton has had a dramatic and an erratic career. He started business thirty years or so ago on nothing, has made more than one sizable fortune and has as many times been on the rocks. Just now he looks prosperous and is running a business valued at eight figures at least, though how much of it is paid for it would be difficult to say. He lives extravagantly and is said to have a wife and daughters with social ambitions and with ability and willingness to spend whatever Stratton makes.

I had heard something of the boy, too. He had been to a half dozen secondary schools from some of which he had withdrawn voluntarily because the management was not to his liking, and from others he had severed his connection at the urgent request of the authorities in charge.

"He wants to go to college," Stratton confided to me, "but I haven't the least idea what he will do when he gets there. He's never worked in high school, and I'm afraid he won't when he gets to college."

"There isn't much chance," I said, not very encouragingly.

"I'm going to be frank with you," Stratton went on. "His habits are bad. He runs around with a wild lot of young people, and he comes home at two or three in the morning hardly able to stagger upstairs. The stuff they drink now is awful, you know that. I talked to him pretty rough the other night. It's really the first time in his life that I've given him a straight-from-the-shoulder talk. I think maybe it will do him good."

The boy was nineteen, and had been going a pretty rapid pace for years, and yet this was the first time that the father had had any serious talk with him. It seemed pretty late to me to begin.

Chemists Seeking Future Uses for Coal

Washington.—Despite widespread use of water power, petroleum and other sources of energy, coal will remain the major source of steam and steam-electric power.

Such is the conclusion of H. M. Hoar, author of a study issued by the Department of Commerce. His findings are based on technological processes of control which have taken place in recent years.

The fact that the coal industry as a whole is in a depressed condition is laid by Hoar to the fact that the fuel has been utilized more efficiently by new processes, that other sources of power are coming into broad use, and that foreign nations are now making efforts to produce enough coal to meet their own demands.

"Technology of the utilization of coal," Hoar declared, "has advanced more rapidly in the last few years than at any time in its history. Lignite is utilized for steam raising purposes; gas is made from coal or from oil; and in Germany motor fuels have been recently obtained from the distillates of coal."

These new developments, Hoar points out, have resulted in large savings in coal consuming industries.

"The electric utilities, for example, have been enabled to reduce the amount of coal necessary to develop a kilowatt hour from 3.2 pounds in 1919, to 1.76 pounds in 1923, a reduction of nearly 45 per cent," he explains. "The railroads, which absorb about a quarter of the total fuel consumption in the United States, and the iron and steel industry have been effecting similar savings."

While a large amount of coal will continue to be employed in the generation of heat and power, Hoar declares, an increasing part of its value in the future will be found in its chemical properties. Already one-fifth of the annual output of bituminous coal in this country is being subjected to chemical processing.

No Births or Deaths for Town During 1930

VOL. I APRIL 3, 1931 NUMBER 48

According to one of our lady customers, modern women have trouble keeping their skirts pulled down, but their problem is as nothing compared with the art of wearing bustles.
Big Cut in Feed Prices: Corn, 95c per bu.; cracked corn, $1.80 per 100 lbs.; oats, 45c per bu.; ground oats, $1.50 per 100 lbs.; corn and oat chop, $1.70 per 100 lbs.; scratch feed, $1.80 per 100 lbs.; Hex-ite mash, $2.75 per 100 lbs.; bran, $1.50 per 100 lbs.; middlings, $1.65 per 100 lbs.; chicken wheat, $1.80 per 100 lbs.; screenings, $1.40 per 100 lbs.; Hex-ite, $1.80 per 100 lbs.
We carry Huron Portland cement, ivory finishing lime and Mason's lime.
We have definitely made up our mind not to go around biting sharks now that Beebe has discovered that sharks are harmless except when attacked.
If It Isn't Telling—A Tawas City father tried this the other night: He set a Big Ben alarm for 11:15, slipped it behind the davenport—and it worked like a charm. The young man took the hint and his hat and his leave quite suddenly.
Grimm alfalfa seed, $14.00 per bushel.
Stop us if you've heard this one—
"You wife reminds me so much of my elder sister."
"She reminds me a great deal of her first husband."

MICHIGAN BELL TELEPHONE CO.

Anne Campbell, well-known and beloved Michigan poetess, has caught the romance so often associated with the telephone and has expressed it charmingly in the following lines, reprinted by special permission of the author and of The Detroit News, which published the poem November 13, 1930. (Copyright, 1930):

Long Distance Telephone
Over the lonesome miles, your voice meets mine in space,
And in a few short sentences you say
Enough to pull the sun out from his hiding place
And turn my nighttime into glorious day.
In days gone by beneath the window of his love,
The troubadour sang goldenly and long,
His chosen lady listened from her room above,
And drifted off in slumber to his song.
Now in a few crisp phrases flung across the wire
You tell me all that warbler could impart.
The telephone has grown to be the modern lyre
From which the lover sends his singing heart.

FORD SAFETY

Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield has saved many lives in collisions

EVERY new Ford is equipped with a Triplex shatter-proof windshield. This is made so that the glass will not fly or splinter under the hardest impact. It has saved many lives and prevented injuries in many automobile collisions.

This shatter-proof glass windshield is just one of many features that make the new Ford a value far above the price. Others are the silent, fully enclosed four-wheel brakes, sturdy steel body construction, four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers, more than twenty ball and roller bearings, extensive use of fine steel forgings, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves, torque-tube drive, three-quarter floating rear axle, Rustless Steel, and unusual accuracy in manufacturing.

In addition, you save many dollars because of low first cost of the new Ford, low cost of operation and up-keep, and low yearly depreciation.

Old Automobiles Turned Into Steel

400 Ancient Equipages Are Wrecked and Sent to Furnaces Every Day.

Detroit.—Bound for the maw of a roaring, open hearth furnace through which they will pass to live again as new steel, nothing can be quite so pathetic looking as the hulks of once proud automobiles moving slowly forward on the disassembly line of a great automobile factory to be wrenched, rent and torn for the last bolt or nut that can be put to some useful service elsewhere.

From Appersons to Westcotts—cars of makes long since forgotten—the line stirs the imagination to wonder, for instance, what notables may have ridden in that old gray hearse with its owner's bas-relief monogram still shining brightly through the junk yard grime, or what young lovers courted in that "nobby" roadster, its stern emblazoned with a picture of an ocean liner, a lighthouse and a sailing vessel.

Four Hundred Wrecked Daily. Scores of men scattered along a disassembly line have been wrecking old cars at the rate of 400 every eight hours since last year, solving a problem as distressing to municipal authorities and property owners as it has been vexing, incidentally, to automobile dealers.

What such a wholesale wrecking program means in the removal from the highways of motor menaces to life and limb, in the elimination of the unsightly junk piles that litter the landscape, and in the conversion to new usefulness of materials that would otherwise go to waste, is obvious.

The derelicts hauled from junk piles or the old cars received in exchange for new automobiles are purchased from Ford dealers at a uniform rate of $20 a car. There is no restriction as to age, condition or make of car and the only requirements are that each must have some semblance of tires and a battery and that the cars must be delivered by the dealer to the plant.

Thus far the program has been confined to the Detroit metropolitan area and no less than 60 different makes of cars, many of them long since out of production, have been wrecked, the dealers hauling them to the plant five, six or even seven on "long-reach" trucks.

Nothing in the old wrecks that were once abandoned in vacant lots or left to rust on junk heaps is thrown away. Three conveyors, hundreds of feet long, in the open-hearth building of the Rouge plant are utilized carrying steel scrap to the furnaces or carrying toward the salvage department materials other than steel to be put to varied uses.

Everything Used. As the derelicts move slowly along the conveyor a squad of wreckers attack them from all sides, tearing off fenders, bumpers, headlights, batteries, wheels and other exterior parts, while another group is removing the upholstery and interior fittings.

The glass which is still intact and can be cut to size is used to glaze windows in buildings about the Rouge plant, and the rest is sent to the glass factory to be remelted. Floor boards are sent to packing departments to be used as crating or box material.

The cotton and hair in the upholstery are separated, baled, and sold. Cloth and covers of all kinds, the leather from roof, sides, and seats are sent to sewing machines nearby to be transformed into aprons and hand-pads for workmen or buffing and polishing wheels. Gasoline tanks are crushed and baled for the ultimate recovery of terne steel.

Within slightly more than two hours after the old car is first dragged onto the conveyor it is completely demolished and the frame, crushed by a gigantic 20-ton press, is being rammed into the furnace. Aside from the myriad uses to which the parts and materials of such wrecked cars are put the salvaging process has thus far produced more than 20,000 tons of high-grade steel.

Germans to Honor the War Horse

Woman Motorist Thrashes Policeman

London.—Police Sergeant Sheehan stopped a car and advised the driver that the rear plates on the auto were not adjusted properly. It was all right with the driver, but the woman with him, Mrs. Marjorie Kenworthy, who was his wife, objected. She got out of the car and administered a good beating to Sheehan.

Bullfighters Migrate; Sure Herald of Spring

Madrid.—Just as the northward migration of the birds indicates that spring is near, so the return from Mexico of the Spanish toreros serves as a reminder that the 1931 bullfighting season now will soon begin.

Meanwhile the managers of the various plazas are going the rounds of the ranches where fighting bulls are raised, picking the bulls which will perform later. The Madrid plaza has already contracted for the purchase of nearly all the bulls it will need, and although the bulls from Salamanca will be in the majority, there will be more Andalusian bulls in action than last year.

This news has been received with pleasure by the old-time fans, who like to see the live, nervous Andalusian bulls keep the bullfighters on the que vive.

GRAY WITH NAVY IS SMART COLOR SCHEME FOR PRINTS

ONE spots at a glance the prints which have this season look. In the first place, their color schemes are so entirely different. There's something strikingly original in the alliance of gray with navy, with black, with green and with brown which occurs in the really new prints. This presence of gray is made an outstanding feature throughout the print program for spring and summer.

Then, too, there is a clarity and a simplicity of design about this sea-wardrobe of hats will include as many of one as the other this season. Smart millinery goes from one extreme to another in this matter of brimmed and brimless, a fact which the group pictured confirms. Sans brim means according to the modern interpretation of the term, especially from the standpoint of the smart Parisienne, as tiny a chapeau as fancy might picture. It must be worn just right, too—set way back on the head at a jaunty angle, showing lots of hair. You get the idea son's prints which individualizes them. The motifs are made to stand out very definitely against their backgrounds—silhouetted as it were. This is due, to a great extent, to the fact that for the most part the florals and figures are widely spaced, one from another. It may also be ascribed to the tendency to print in solid single color or rather, to be explicit, to print the motifs in flat monochromes.

One of the Striking New Prints

One of the striking new prints fashions the dress in the picture. It has a navy blue background with leaves in two shades of gray, and flowers in cherry color. Flying squirrel trims the sleeves of the wrap-around jacket.

This costume is a symphony in gray and navy even to the hat which is of soft gray straw, its trimming of gray, navy and cherry velvet ribbon draping gracefully around the crown, over the back, ending in a small flat bow at the nape of the neck. Tri-color com-

The charming little green knitted straw toque at the top of the group is also an original model from the French capital.

To the other extreme goes the hat with a brim, for when millady's hat is brimmed this season it is apt to be very, very brimful, and likely to grow more so with the advent of summer. The two broad-brimmed models shown here foretell the trend of brims to picturesque effects and to wider, widest dimensions.

The girlish straw body centered to the left has the typical shallow crown which lifts the graceful broad brim from the forehead, revealing a charmingly arranged coiffure. This rough lightweight straw is in pale green, and it is banded with a ribbon to match.

Note the handsome necklace which adds a fine finesse to this handsome costume. It is an exponent of the new crusader costume jewelry, which being in swedish silver accents the gray note in a most flattering manner.

TALES... of the TRIBES

By EDITHA L. WATSON

The Zuni

In that shadowy past which is so long ago that only legend reminds us that it was at all, an Indian people came from the northward and settled in the Zuni valley. Later, from the West came another people, and these joined the first settlers. This was the beginning of the Zuni tribe, which is one of the most interesting tribes of the Pueblos.

Zuni.

At the dawn of their recorded history, they were living in seven cities, which were known of as far south as Mexico. Perhaps Indian traders, journeying to far places with the products of their villages to exchange for the shells of the coast or the parrot feathers of the South, told of their seven cities, and, as has always been the custom of travelers, exaggerated a little. At any rate, these vague rumors reached the ears of Fray Marcos de Niza, who made his famous exploration trip in 1539. He listened to all that the Indians along the way could tell him about "Cibola" (Zuni), and finally saw one of the vilages from a neighboring hill, but instead of entering the settlement, where he might have been disabused of his notions, he returned to Mexico with a great narrative of the magnificent "Kingdom of Cibola." The Indians along the way had assured him that this was a wealthy country, and that its seven cities were filled with gold and precious stones. Hence, Coronado, the next year started North to explore this unknown land of which so many glowing tales were told.

The Pueblos had a way of sending messages by fleet runners, whose speed and endurance were the wonder of the Spaniards. News reached the first Zuni city (Hawikuh), of the coming of these strangers from the South, and of their warlike tendencies, and upon its receipt the Zunians became active, with the result that after storming the town, the Spaniards found that women and children, and most of the movables in the place, had been taken away. The mesa stronghold of Taaiyalone (Corn Mountain or Thunder Mountain, as it is variously known), which commands the Zuni country, was their refuge, and the warriors who had defended Hawikuh fled there also, leaving a deserted and empty pueblo to the disappointed invaders.

Coronado found that the "Kingdom of Cibola" was a small country containing seven pueblos, all within four leagues, the largest of which contained 500 houses, and that the immense treasure of rumor was a sorry myth. In fact, he wrote that Fray Marcos had "said the truth in nothing that he reported."

Zuni at this time must have been at its zenith. There are no records of more than the seven pueblos, and history shows that these dropped into oblivion one by one, until six of them have become uninhabited ruins.

Forty years after Coronado's disappointment, Chamuscado visited the tribe, and in 1583 Espejo went to Zuni. He reported that he found there some of the Mexican Indians who had been with Coronado, and that there were but six cities, so that evidently one had been abandoned since Coronado's time.

Three Spanish priests established a mission at Hawikuh in 1629, and this was the first mission in the "province of Cibola," although one had been attempted previously. In 1622, the Indians killed two priests, one who had been sent to them, and one who was passing through Hawikuh on his way to another tribe. Fearful of consequences, their refuge in all troubles, and lived there for three years.

In 1670, an enemy tribe raided the village of Hawikuh, burned the church and killed the missionary. This town was probably not reoccupied after the raid, and by the time of the Pueblo rebellion of 1680, the Zuni were living in three towns, two others beside Hawikuh having been deserted.

The rebellion of 1680 was participated in by almost all the Pueblos, the day being set and plans made, and the news spread by runners. The Zuni were as active as the rest, and after killing the missionary who remained among them, they once more hurried to Taaiyalone, and made it their home for twelve years, until Diego de Vargas reconquered the country in 1692. After this, Zuni was one city. It was rebuilt on the ruins of Halona, on the Zuni river, one of the original Seven Cities of Cibola.

Even yet, there was unrest among them. Once more a missionary was killed, and once more the mesa stronghold was their refuge. However, peace was finally concluded, and from 1713 on there was not much to record in the history of Zuni. For some time it was entirely abandoned by the white people, and became a thoroughly Indian town again, but in later years the United States government established a school and built extensive irrigation works, so that the Indians began to become educated in the white man's ways of peace.

Aged War Veterans

Daniel C. Dakeman was the last pensioner of the Revolutionary war. He died 86 years after the close of the war at the age of one hundred and nine years, eight months and eight days on April 5, 1893. Hiram Cronk was the last surviving pensioner of the War of 1812. He died on May 13, 1905, at the age of one hundred and five years and sixteen days. Owen Thomas Edgar, last surviving pensioner of the Mexican war, died in Washington, September 3, 1920.

Narrow Thoroughfare

The narrowest street in the United States is said to be Treasury street in St. Augustine, Fla. It is 6 feet 1 inch wide. This street was shown as a street on the map of St. Augustine in 1737, and called Treasury street because the old treasury was on the corner of this cross street and St. George street. Carriages used to drive through it, and a stone was placed at the entrance on Bay street to prevent this. The old treasury building is still standing.

Not Much Difference

The words fort and fortress are often used interchangeably. In the United States all permanently garrisoned places, whether fortified or not, are termed forts. In fortification fort is usually applied to a work entirely inclosed by defensible parapets. Fortress generally designates a fortified city or town, or any piece of ground so strongly fortified as to be capable of resisting an attack. It is a permanent fortification.

Famous American's Nickname

"Old Man Eloquent" was one of the nicknames of John Quincy Adams during the latter years of his life while he was a member of the house of representatives. Milton applied the phrase to Isocrates, the famous Greek orator, who is said to have died of mental shock and grief when he learned that Philip of Macedon had defeated the Greek allies at Chaeronea.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Hero's Resting Place

George Rogers Clark is buried in Cave Hill cemetery in Louisville, Ky. General Clark founded the city of Louisville in 1779 after returning from his military expedition to the Northwest. He spent most of his declining year in Louisville, Ky., and Clarksville, Ind., across the Ohio river from Louisville. This town was also founded by General Clark.

Had Enough of the Sea

On account of a shipwreck in his teens when he was emigrating from England to South Africa, Mr. Clark of Boshof, Orange Free State, made his way inland, and vowed that he would never cast eyes on the sea again. He settled at Boshof, where he built up an extensive general dealers' business, and left a large fortune at his death.

The expression "mutual admiration society" was probably coined by Oliver Wendell Holmes. The phrase appears in "The Autocrat at the Breakfast Table."

HEADACHE

When you feel a headache coming on, it's time to take Bayer Aspirin. Two tablets will head it off, and you can finish your shopping in comfort. Limbs that ache from sheer weariness. Joints sore from the beginnings of a cold. Systemic pain. The remedy is res. But immediate relief is yours for the taking; a pocket tin of Bayer Aspirin is protection from pain wherever you go.

Get real aspirin. Look for Bayer on the box. Read the proven directions found inside every genuine Bayer package. They cover headaches, colds, sore throat, toothache, neuralgia, neuritis, sciatica, lumbago, rheumatism, muscular pains, etc. These tablets do not depress the heart. They do nothing but stop the pain. Every druggist has Bayer Aspirin in the pocket size, and in bottles. To save money, buy the genuine tablets by the hundred. Don't experiment with imitations.

CUT TOES OFF DEAD SO THEY COULDN'T COME BACK

Prehistoric Skeleton Found in Hungary Shows Mutilation of Feet Before Burial.

Chicago.—However much they may have loved him, when a man died among a certain tribe which inhabited part of southern Hungary in neolithic times, his comrades did not want him or his spirit to come back. At least, so it appears from a skeleton of a prehistoric inhabitant of Hungary which has arrived at Field Museum of Natural History, for the toes of both feet were cut off at the first joint before burial.

That this was a custom among the man's people is indicated by the fact that several other skeletons excavated from the same burial mound reveal the same treatment of the feet. From this fact, Henry Field, assistant curator of physical anthropology at the museum, suggests that these people, who lived some 7,000 to 10,000 years ago, believed that by mutilating the feet they could prevent departed souls from walking back to frighten or annoy their survivors.

The specimen received at the museum comprises not only the human remains but the complete grave with the original earth in which the skeleton was found. It represents the neolithic or late Stone age. With it are two prehistoric pottery vessels and part of a wild boar tusk which had been buried with the deceased. The skeleton is of a man about thirty-five years of age when he died, according to Mr. Field. It is of great scientific importance, as it is the only practically complete human skeleton representing this period of neolithic culture which has reached the United States.

The skeleton lies in the opened grave in a flexed position on its right side. Except for the missing toes it is an almost complete and perfect specimen. The skull is remarkably preserved, and the complete skeleton form a welcome addition to the anthropological collections of the museum. The original excavators in Hungary had buried only a small part of the skeleton, and then cut out the solid block of earth containing it and sent it to Chicago in this form. Final excavation was completed at the museum by Mr. Field, assisted by Bryan Paterson.

But this happier spirit could not endure long with the people. Death had settled on them heavily. No word had come from Tiaoga and his warriors. There were whisperings that they had been annihilated in battle and would never return. Anxiety grew into fear, fear into certainty. The grimness of a tragedy darker than the sable robes of the priest hovered over Chenusio.

In their happiness, Jeems and Toinette did not feel the undercurrent of change about them. Their abiding place became a home whose roots spread so securely that death could not have torn them up. The cloud of the tragedy through which they had passed was a curtain vaguely soft and distant behind them; they thought of it, they talked of it, and dreams sometimes awakened Toinette to find comfort in Jeems' arms. But its memories did not wound so deeply. The spirits of Tonteur and of Jeems' mother drew nearer to them each day, strengthening with invisible chains the love which bound them. It was the Thrush who first made them see what was happening about them. As days and weeks passed without word from Tiaoga, the fear that Shindas was dead clutched her with an evil hand. She began to avoid Toinette and kept to herself. The hardness which had settled in the faces about her came into her own. She was a changed Mary Daghen. She was Opitchi the Seneca.

It was this change in the one she had come to regard as a sister which startled Toinette into a realization of the situation which was gathering about her and Jeems, and she was now destined to witness in all of its savagery that streak in Indian character which arouses hate and the desire for vengeance in the face of adversity at the hands of human enemies. Jeems marked its rising symptoms. He was no longer greeted with friendliness. Men were sullen and aloof, and women tolled without their usual chatter. Death and misfortune had ridden too hard, and human nerves were at the breaking point. Chenusio was like a handful of powder ready for the touch of fire.

Then came the lightning flash. It was an afternoon late in May when Shindas appeared in Chenusio. He was alone. His arms and shoulders were hacked and cut and some of the wounds were scarcely healed. A scar lay across his cheek. Hisoccasins were in tatters, and his eyes held the ferocious light of a wolf that had been hunted. He made no effort to soften the news of which he was the bearer. He had come from the border of the Cayuga country as a messenger from Tiaoga and was many hours ahead of his comrades. Tiaoga was returning with nine of his thirty warriors. The others were dead.

This tragedy was a cataclysmic one even for a tribe of the most warlike of the Six Nations. Nothing had equalled it in Seneca history for generations. Twenty were dead out of thirty—the flower of Chenusio—the very sinew of Tiaoga's people!

Shindas waited until his words sunk like barbs of iron into the hearts of the men and women about him. He waited until there seemed no relief from the despair which settled over them, and then slowly gave the names of those who had been slain by their enemies. A white man had killed three of the twenty warriors. He was a prisoner now—with Tiaoga. They had put out his eyes so that he could not see. They had built a fire around him in which it had been their intention to see him die. But in the last moment when the flames were scorning him Tiaoga had pulled the blazing fuel away with his own hands in order that the people of Chenusio could witness his writhings at the fire stake.

After this one might have thought that mad men and women and not a grief-stricken people filled Chenusio. For hours the lament of the women did not die out. Still Toinette saw no tears. Her horror increased as she observed the preparations for vengeance; the rigging of a hole and the setting in it of a tall stake, all by women's hands; the gathering of pitchy fuel by little children and their mothers; the transformation of friends she had known into fiends whose eyes filled with hatred when they looked at her. She tried to hide from these things in their home and to keep Jeems with her. Shindas came to them. He had a command from Tiaoga for Jeems. It was that Jeems should go to the village of Kanestie seventy miles distant and bear news of a war party from that town. Shindas gave him the message and saw that he departed with it. He was no longer a brother. He disclosed no sign of pleasure when he learned that Toinette was Jeems' wife. Mary Daghen found him so grimly changed that he frightened her.

Toinette remained alone. No one came to see her except Wood Pigeon, and the afternoon following the day of Shindas' arrival the child ran in with wide eyes to tell her that Tiaoga was approaching. They were standing at the head of the waiting lines when Tiaoga and the remnant of his band came over the hill and across the fields. Shindas had said there was to be no physical demonstration against the prisoner, who was to be kept strong for torture at the stake. Toinette shivered. It was a different homecoming this time. The people were like tigers holding their passions in leash. There was something demonic in the faces of the children. Even the eyes of those whose loved ones had escaped death held only the deep-seated fire of hatred. Tiaoga came. His face was like a mask of rock as he passed so near that Toinette might have touched him. The prisoner followed. His clothes were torn from the upper part of his body. He was a powerfully built man with great hands and wide shoulders. On each side of him walked a warrior, for he was blind and needed guidance. His empty eye sockets, hidden by drooping lids, gave to his round red face the appearance of one walking in a ghastly sleep. Yet he was not overcome by the enormity of the catastrophe which had befallen him, nor did he betray fear of what lay ahead. He sensed the presence of the people and held his head high as if trying to see them. It was a bald head.

Toinette swayed backward and struggled in a moment of darkness to keep herself from falling.

The prisoner was Hepsibah Adams.

CHAPTER XI

No one but Wood Pigeon observed the faintness which came over Toinette. Some force had drawn a smothering curtain about her making it difficult to see or breathe. When the shock passed, they were standing alone with the mob closing in behind Tiaoga and his single captive. Its pent-up emotion burst loose in a pandemonium, and amid the excitement Toinette went back to the cabin which Jeems had built near Tiaoga's tepee.

At first she had regretted the absence of Jeems, but now she was glad he was gone, for the increasing tumult in the village, the chanting of death songs by the women, the screaming of children, and the yelling of savages who were working themselves into a frenzy of rage about the fire which would soon receive its victim terrified her with the growing conviction that nothing could save his uncle. If Jeems had been there, she knew he would not have seen Hepsibah Adams put to death without a struggle fatal to himself. This thought, together with the reflection that it was a fortunate chance which had sent him away, strengthened her determination to help Hepsibah, and she watched with Wood Pigeon until she saw the chief enter his tepee. Then she hurried to him, with Wood Pigeon and Odd following her.

Tiaoga's greeting held no promise. The Seneca folded his arms across his breast and regarded her calmly, revealing no gentle aspect as he spoke a few words in acknowledgment of her visit. That his prisoner bore the same relationship to Jeems which he bore to Shindas and that the man about to die was loved by Silver Heels brought no surprise or hesitation to his face. He waited patiently for her to finish, then shook his head and pointed through the door to the shadows gathering in the path of the setting sun. He stated coldly that the prisoner must die. His people demanded that the spirit of the white man who had slain three of his warriors be destroyed in flames. They would wait until it was dark, which was the tribal custom. Then the prisoner would be brought from the tepee in which he was lying bound, and the fire would be lighted.

If it were her desire, she might talk with Jeems' uncle, Tiaoga said. He was looking into the twilight when he made this concession. The Indian women at the farther end of the village were chanting more loudly as darkness came on.

Tiaoga spoke again. He was growing late. The captive was in Ah De Bah's tepee, near the river, and the Tall Man and Shindas were guarding him. He watched her depart with Wood Pigeon and Odd. Then she might have seen a change in him, a change which came when he knew he was alone.

Toinette was breathless when she came to Ah De Bah's home, which the hunter had set apart from the others. The Tall Man stood motionless before the door with a rifle in the crook of his arm, and Shindas sat on the ground near him. Both saw her coming. She paused a few paces from them with her mind struggling against a chaos of uncertainty and dread. What could she say to Hepsibah Adams? How could she help him when Tiaoga and Shindas and Ah De Bah were eager for his death?

Shindas spoke a word to the Tall Man and advanced toward her. He seemed to have expected her, and pointed to the tepee. Ah De Bah did not look at her as she entered. Neither appeared to notice Wood Pigeon or the dog.

She found Hepsibah stretched out like a dead man, and knelt on the earth at his side. He was scarcely conscious of her presence until she touched him. She felt the buckskin cords at his wrists; then her hand found his sightless face.

Bending low over the doomed man she whispered:

"Hepsibah—Hepsibah Adams—I am Toinette Tonteur."

Shindas waited with Ah De Bah as the gloom thickened about them. After a time, they saw Wood Pigeon going toward the circle of fires. Shindas stopped her, and in answer to his question she told him Toinette was weeping beside the white man and that the dog was with her.

A fresh outcry told them that at last the time had come, and Ah De Bah went to the tepee and held back the flap. He spoke to Toinette, calling her Sol Yan Makwun. There was no answer. He spoke again and entered. After a brief interval, his voice rose in a demand for Shindas, and the young Seneca answered it. Ah De Bah was hunting like an animal in the blackness. The tepee was empty. Toinette and Hepsibah Adams were gone.

Shindas did not speak. There was no light to reveal his face as he went to the edge of the river and saw that a canoe was gone. He grunted his wonder when the Tall Man joined him. The canoe had been launched within fifty paces of them, and they had not heard a sound. Words of self-abasement fell from Ah De Bah's lips. He and Shindas were like two children, and every man and woman in Chenusio would taunt them because of the ease with which the escape had been made. But the missing canoe could not be far distant. The fugitives, one of them blind, could not possibly succeed in their flight. The night would see the white man given to the stake, and now that Silver Heels had proved herself a serpent in the tribe and a traitor to Tiaoga, she would probably die with him.

Ah De Bah made queer sounds in his chest as they ran to Tiaoga and the expectant people with him. He was not so calm as Shindas when they arrived. It was Shindas who announced the deception of the stranger whom they had accepted as the true spirit of Sol Yan Makwun. Tiaoga was coldly and terribly still. His face changed before their eyes. The furrows in it grew deeper, and it became as hard as stone in the fields. Then words came weighted with the decision of death, rising until they swelled in a passion that was like a fire consuming everything in its path. He declared that his honor and the honor of his people lay in his hands. He called on Shindas and Ah De Bah to go with him to recapture the fugitives, for this was a duty imposed on him first of all. Before the night was much older, the fire stake should have its triumph. He had forgotten the blind man, for a man without eyes was already dead. He would give to the flames the white girl who had betrayed them.

Tricky Criminals Keep Law Officers "on Edge"

Growing a beard, dyeing the hair, and staining the face and hands with a mixture of butternut oil, nuggall, and permanganate of potash, are old-time dodges that have often been very useful to the hunted man. Stained with the above mixture, a fair-skinned man becomes as swarthy as a Spaniard or Italian; it once made a burglar "on the run" so confident that he actually had the audacity to sell ice cream within a stone's throw of Scotland Yard. Perhaps the most recent dodge for criminals who are anxious to give a wide berth to the police is going on the sick list. Hospital authorities in London and the provinces are much perturbed by this new and deplorable form of trickery. At one London hospital the suspicions of the doctors were aroused by the arrival in the course of one week of several individuals who, according to their own story, were in terrible pain, but whose ailments the medical men were quite unable to diagnose. The surprising speed with which these mysterious "patients" recovered at the end of a few days convinced the doctors that there was "something up." Inquiries were made, and it was learned that at least two of them were badly "wounded" in connection with a motor car theft.—London Times.

First Use of Telephone

On October 9, 1876, the first reciprocal conversation over a telephone was held over an outdoor line, two miles long, between Boston and Cambridgeport, Mass. On March 10, 1876, Professor Bell had made himself heard by Watson in another part of the same building.

The KITCHEN CABINET

"Good housekeeping is not necessarily good home-making. Spotless floors may grace a house, not a home. Real living means comfort, happiness and growth."

THIS AND THAT

Nowadays with the loveliest of linens and laces for the table, so many up-to-date hostesses save the wear and tear on these pieces for more state occasions, and for one's intimate friends the delightful colors in crepe tissue are used for cloth and napkins. It is such a saving on both the linen and the nerves, for if an accident occurs a fresh crepe cloth may be quickly placed with no damage to either the feelings of the hostess or guest.

One may buy just the note of color in napkins and tablecloths that may be carried out in the refreshments, table decorations of flowers and glass or china.

The new china of bone, unbreakable though quite expensive, may prove in the long run most economical. The intriguing colors on the creamy plates are most exquisite. Many hostesses use the large dinner plates for the cover plates, matching with cup and saucer and perhaps the butter plate. Then glass is used for salad plates and other table accessories may be the usual silver. In this way one's table may be furnished without buying a whole dinner set.

Garnishes should be featured as much as possible. Not only are they appealing to eye but they serve as appetizers and in many cases supply the body with mineral salts greatly needed.

Ham Sandwich de Luxe.—Chop cold cooked ham fine, add prepared mustard. Beat three eggs, add a cupful of milk and mix well, add a bit of salt. Spread the ham on bread, make sandwiches and cut into triangles. Fry in hot butter after dipping into the egg mixture. Serve this dish for luncheon with hot coffee.

The ordinary deviled ham when spread on buttered bread and covered with a thin slice of cheese, then browned in the oven, makes a most unusual combination.

To keep the family happy and well nourished, one must be constantly alert to find new combinations.

South Dakota's "Lost Lode"

Finding of the "Lost Lode" in the Black Hills of South Dakota recalls the way in which trace of this tremendously rich fissure of gold was lost more than 30 years ago. Frank Welsh, a cattleman, was hunting deer near where gold first was discovered in 1874. He sat down on a rock to rest and idly began breaking a piece of white quartz. Suddenly the quartz split, revealing a nugget of coarse gold.

He hurried back to Custer and was grubstaked by Matt and Jack Daly to work the claim. Welsh knew nothing about mining, but he found the quartz vein, rigged up a primitive crusher and washed out about $50 a day. But he cut across the vein, instead of following it, so finally he had to quit. While he had been getting gold out of it he had turned down $60,000 for the claim.

Safest Way

Remembering the "Be Prepared" motto of his Boy Scout days, a cautious young man about to become a benedict begs the Florence Herald to advise him. "Is it not safest," he asks, "to tell your wife everything?" "By all means, son," sagacitates the sage of the sanctum, "but tell her before some one else does."

"Low Germans"

The inhabitants of the Netherlands are chiefly of the Low German race, which is composed of three branches—Frankish, Saxon and Friestian. The term "low" is applied to this section of the world because it occupies the low region near the North sea.

Possibly

Sometimes we suspect the award of championships is a bad thing. The greatness of the game of draw poker is due in considerable measure, we think, to the fact that no annual championship is determined.—Kansas City Star.

Cullinan Diamond Supreme

The largest and in most respects the most remarkable diamond ever found is the Cullinan diamond. It weighed 3,024 1/4 carats, or 1.37 pounds, and measured 4 inches by 2.5 inches by 1.25 inches.

Safe Driving

You cannot drive the horse. Pleasure, with the single rein of desire. There must always be the corresponding rein, Lawfulness, then with the pair, your horses will run straight.—Exchange.

Cut Your Own Pattern

If one really wishes to be superior in mind and character, he must follow the ideals he has set for himself, and not follow those of the mass.—American Magazine.

You, too, can now have whiter washes—easily!

HERE'S a hard-water soap that practically does the wash for you. Loosens dirt so all you need to do is rinse. Clothes soak so white, you don't need to bother about boiling. This way saves the clothes. Washes them much, much whiter, too. Safely.

Cup for cup, Rinsol gives twice as much suds as lightweight, puffed-up soaps. Thick, lasting suds—even in hardest water. And no softener needed! Great, either in tub or machine. The makers of 38 famous washers recommend it. Get the BIG package. Try Rinsol for dishes—it loosens grease like magic.

Big Irrigating Project

The Coolidge dam is located across the Gila river, about nine miles south of San Carlos, Ariz. It will store water for the irrigation of 100,000 acres of land—50,000 acres in the Gila river Indian reservation and 50,000 acres in Pinal county, Arizona.

She Followed Directions

Husband (at dinner)—This dessert does not seem to be a success. Young Wife—I'm sure I followed the directions, dear. The recipe says to beat the whites of two eggs until stiff, and I'm so stiff I can hardly move.

Wakeful restless CHILD needs Castoria

WE can never be sure just what makes an infant restless, but the remedy can always be the same. Good old Castoria! There's comfort in every drop of this pure vegetable preparation, and not the slightest harm in its frequent use. As often as Baby has a fretful spell, is feverish, or cries and can't sleep, let Castoria soothe and quiet him. Sometimes it's a touch of colic. Other times it's constipation. Or diarrhea—a condition that should always be checked promptly. Just keep Castoria handy, and give it promptly. Relief will follow very promptly; if it doesn't you should call a physician.

All through babyhood, Castoria should be a mother's standby; and a wise mother continues it in more liberal doses as a child grows up.

Overlooks Bills

"I have nothing but praise for the work of my tailor."
 "So he's told me."

When a man slaps you on the back it means that your back looks friendly—and that's something.

Grayling Wiped Out

Michigan, which at one time was noted for its graylings, now reports them practically extinct.

Sickness has to nearly kill some men before they can learn to live properly.

Readily obtained at any drugstore, the genuine easily identified by the Chas. H. Fletcher signature and the name Castoria on the wrapper like this:

CASTORIA

Something New!! A Shaving Cream
 that is also A Skin Tonic!

Cuticura Shaving Cream fills a long-felt want. Containing the delicately medicated, emollient properties of CUTICURA, it produces a rich, creamy lather that remains moist throughout the shave, softens the beard and at the same time soothes the skin. And what a wonderful after-shave feeling! A skin that is cool and refreshed, free from any tense, dry feeling.

At your dealers or sent postpaid on receipt of 35c.
 Address: Cuticura Laboratories, Malden, Mass.

HEMLOCK

The Hemlock road nutrition group entertained their husbands and families at a banquet Tuesday evening,

March 31, at the Grant town hall. Over 100 people were present. A fine social evening was enjoyed, together with games and dancing. Mrs. Lucy Allen was presented with a lovely gift of remembrance from the group. We are sorry Mrs. Allen will be unable to be with us at our meetings next year, but wish her success in her new field of labors. Mrs. Chas. Brown spent Tuesday night in Tawas City with her cousin, Mrs. James Leslie. Miss Stella Katterman spent Tuesday night in Tawas. A large number from here attended the James A. Farrand trial at Tawas City. Township treasurer Mrs. Celia Watts settled with the township board on Tuesday. Mr. Dempsey is here calling on old friends after spending the winter with his children. Robert Watts has now more than 30 gallons of maple syrup. Mrs. Nelson Ulman of Tawas spent Sunday here. Mrs. Emery Germain spent Wednesday with Mrs. V. Sawyer. Mrs. Mable Decker of West Branch spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Durant. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brown are enjoying a new radio. Theodore Carpenter left for Cheboygan, where he expects to work with his brother-in-law. Sixteen of the Jolly Friendship Club members of Whittemore, Logan and Reno surprised Mrs. Charles Brown on Friday night, Sunday being her birthday. Four tables of progressive pedro were played. Those winning prizes were, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Youngs, Mrs. John Bowen, Mrs. Popp, Will White, Russell Binder. Mrs. Brown was presented with a beautiful birthday cake from Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Frockins. A very pleasant time was enjoyed by all. Donald Anderson and Leonard Bowen of Whittemore were callers here on Saturday. Some from here attended the party at Geo. Kendall's in Reno on Friday night. Dewey Bamberger and sons, Dewey and Billie, and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Farwell of Saginaw, Nellie Farwell of Detroit were callers on Mrs. E. W. Latham on Monday. Mrs. Arthur Popp and daughter, Ella, of Logan spent Monday with Mrs. Ed. Youngs. The nutrition party held at the town hall on Tuesday night was well attended.

No. 1 Continued from the First Page

Mr. and Mrs. John Forsten left Thursday for Holland, where they will visit the former's parents over Easter.

Mrs. H. J. Keiser and Junior spent Tuesday in Bay City. Miss Helen Gates visited relatives in Flint over the week end.

The north end of this city was the scene of six movings this week. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Murray have purchased the former Main home from W. C. Roach and moved in Wednesday. A Howitson moved into the Murray place. Mr. and Mrs. Clark McCormick have moved to Long Lake, where they will make their home. L. L. Davis, resident engineer for the new state highway, will occupy the McCormick home. Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Swartz, Jr., and family have moved in with Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Duffy. Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Schreiber have rented their home and will live with the former's mother.

Baseball's Beginning

Baseball began officially with the organization of the Knickerbocker club in September, 1845, and the first baseball match ever played took place between rival nines selected by that club at Hoboken, N. J., June 10, 1848. At the end of four innings, the leading nine had made the requisite 21 runs and were declared winners.
