M. E. LADIES AID TO GIVE PLAY AT EAST TAWAS

The Tawas City M. E. Ladies Aid will give a play at the East Tawas Methodist church Friday evening at 8:00 o'clock. The play is an old time scene in which a missionary circle meets, dressed in the fashions of 50 years ago, and conducts a meeting which leaves a good lesson for the church and provokes a half hour of laughter.

The play took so well when given recently in the Tawas City M. E. church that they have been urged to repeat it in East Tawas. A lunch will be served following the play. All for 25 cents.

TAWAS CITY SCHOOL NOTES

Prepared and Edited by a Committee of the Student Council

High School
A scholastic contest for the surrounding rural schools and the local Lutheran parochial school is being held in the high school assembly room today. It is expected that nine schools will be represented and that about forty-five students will compete. A committee of the local P. T. A. will provide dinner and supper for the contestants. Prizes for each student taking a first place and for the school securing the greatest number of points will be given out in the evening.

Preparations are being made for the annual school edition of The Tawas Herald. It is expected that this issue will be that of Friday, June 5th. The copy for this issue will be furnished largely by the students of the high school.

The high school American history class is now making a study of the Panic of 1893. It is possible to make many comparisons between that panic and the present one.

The high school expects to send representatives to the state scholastic contest which takes place at Mt. Pleasant, Friday, May 15. We trust that these representatives will do as well as those who have represented the school in this contest during the past several years.

A faculty meeting was held Wednesday evening after school.

The County Achievement Day for Boys' and Girls' Clubs will be held at the Community Building, East Tawas, on Wednesday, May 6. The Happy Sewers, the 8th grade sewing club, Miss Opal Coon, leader, and the Sew-Sos Girls, the high school sewing club, Mrs. Forsten, leader, will exhibit their work at that time. A style show with the girls modeling their own dresses will be a feature of the program. Everyone interested in this kind of work is cordially invited to be present.

The representatives of our commercial classes will leave for Midland Friday afternoon, where they will compete with pupils from Caro, Midland, Mt. Pleasant, Millington, Gladwin, Standish, and Pinconning at the annual shorthand and typewriting contest on Saturday.

The art class is making decorations for the windows of the cupboards in the English room.

MRS. PHOEBE WILLIAMS

Mrs. Phoebe Williams, age 86 years, three months and 12 days, passed away at Tawas City on Friday, April 24, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Bert Fowler, with whom she has made her home for the past 15 years.

Everyone is welcome to these meetings. Come and enjoy our programs and recreation hours.

CHILDREN RECEIVE LETTERS FROM THE PHILIPPINES

During the summer of 1930 several Friendship Treasure Chests were sent by the boys and girls of the local Vacation Bible Schools to the children of the Philippines. These chests were filled with treasures of many kinds—books, toys, letters and articles for school use. Three "thank you" letters from children of the Catubig Elementary School, Catubig, Samar, P. I., were recently received by Betty Harwood of East Tawas. A copy of one letter follows.

Catubig, Samar, P. I.
December 19, 1930

Dear School Children of the United States:
My far-away friend:

You will really surprise to receive this letter from your unknown friend. I'm thanking you for the gifts you sent us. I do not expect that I can receive gifts from my far-away friends. Our principal teacher, Mr. Andres B. Cabuenos, has distributed the gifts to each and every one of us. You know that I am far from you. I am so glad that you have given me gifts although I have not yet gone to this place. I thank you.

Your far-away friend,
Alipio Cerbito, Grade IV

AUDIENCE WILL FIND "THE BAT WHISPERS" REAL TREAT

"The Bat Whispers" will bring shouts from the audience at the State Theatre next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, not to mention screams from the ladies and gasps from the men. With Chester Morris in the featured role, Roland West, producer-director for United Artists, has contributed the most startling hour and a half of film entertainment of the year.

Each of the superb cast of players is under suspicion at various times as the dare-devil criminal who hides at city in terror. And not until the last minute is the secret of his identity disclosed. The climax is the most surprising bit of drama West has ever developed in his long list of successful productions.

FLINT LAWYER ADDRESSES EAST TAWAS C. OF C.

Attorney W. W. Blackney of Flint was the principal speaker at the annual meeting and banquet of the East Tawas Chamber of Commerce held Friday evening at the Hotel Holland. Mr. Blackney's address was very much enjoyed by all present. About 75 East Tawas business men and ladies were in attendance. D. J. Bergeron led the singing with Miss Mary Gardner at the piano.

Following the banquet a business meeting was held at which the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, C. H. Conklin; vice-president, O. W. Rowley; secretary-treasurer, V. F. Marzinski; board of directors—E. A. Leaf, O. W. Rowley, V. F. Marzinski, John Mielock, Chas. Conklin.

It was the unanimous opinion of those present that get-together meetings should be held more often.

WHITTEMORE SCOUTING

We were glad to see nearly a full attendance at a regular scout meeting held last Monday. Interest seemed to be very great in the new inter-patrol contest which has been just started. In the first event of this contest which was a compass relay, Fox patrol took first place and won the red ribbon for their patrol staff, Raccoon patrol taking second and Raven third. But any patrol might easily have won, as the score was very close. Next week will be the event in signalling, and The Ravens tell us that this time it will be a different story. And it may be if they give the Fox as good a run for first place as they did this time. May the best patrol win! It is hoped we will all show the good loser spirit as the losing patrols did this time.

And don't forget the troop hike Thursday night, down to the Porterfield, to a good place to eat and to pass those outdoor tests.

We are glad to see that Tawas Troop has reorganized and wish to extend them the glad hand to come over any Monday night at eight o'clock for a visit. We are always glad to have other scouts visit us and to visit other troops so as to get new ideas to work out in our own troop and give any help possible if we can. Come over and see us.

"DRACULA" IS STRANGE DRAMA OF "UNDEAD"

An ancient superstition, which claims that "undead" persons, hovering strangely between life and death, leave their graves on a certain night of each year, forms the basis of "Dracula," the hair-raising Universal drama which comes to the State Theatre on Sunday and Monday.

This old belief still persists in certain parts of Europe, and as the fateful night approaches abject terror seizes the peasants of the district, who cease all activities at sundown and securely bolt all doors and windows. Wolves howl in the hills—and it is claimed that these animals are in reality human vampires who are able to change themselves at will into either wolves or bats, and thus gain access to places where a human being could not penetrate.

Count Dracula is the strange vampire of this startling story, and a trail of terror and death results from his horrible influence. The picture, it is said, has been produced with such sincerity and such artistry that the spectator is apt to forget the moment that the story is what might be described as a glorified fairy tale, and to be completely carried away by the strange atmosphere of the play.

Bela Lugosi plays the title role of "Dracula" while other members of the cast are Helen Chandler, David Manners, Edward Van Sloan, Frances Dade, Dwight Frye and Herbert Bunston. Tod Browning directed.

MRS. LOUISE GNATH

Mrs. Louise Gnath, age 70 years, three months and 29 days, died Saturday, April 25, at Detroit, following an illness of two weeks.

Louise Stuhr was born December 26, 1860, in Germany. She came to the United States in 1898 and settled at Standish, Mich. On July 23, 1899 she was united in marriage to Carl Gnath of East Tawas, and a few years later they moved to the farm home in Baldwin township, where she lived until five years ago. To this union two children, a son and a daughter, were born. Her husband died in 1925. The following year she moved to Saginaw with her son, and from there to Detroit.

Funeral services were held on Wednesday afternoon from the Zion Lutheran church in Tawas City. Rev. F. A. Sievert officiated.

MRS. ALBERT DRAEGER

Mrs. Albert Draeger, age 58 years, three months and 26 days, died on Saturday, April 25, at McIvor, after an illness of six months.

Edith Stenzel was born in Prussia, Germany, December 30, 1872, and came to this country in 1890. She was united in marriage December 11, 1892, to Albert Draeger, of Sherman township, where they have resided ever since. To this union were born eight children, of whom two boys preceded her in death.

"KISS ME AGAIN" IS BRILLIANT PICTURE

It would be hard to imagine a picture which more perfectly demonstrates the possibilities of the talking screen, than "Kiss Me Again," which opens Wednesday and Thursday at the Family Theatre. In perfect balance the picture gives sparkling dialogue, the best technical work which has come to the screen so far, lavish sites, beautiful gowns and beautiful girls.

Bernice Claire, as Fifi, the little salesgirl in Madame Cecile's modiste shop, is enchanting. Walter Pidgeon is as highly effective, and gives proof of all that might have been expected of him. His highly pleasing personality is ably seconded by Edward Everett Horton, who as Pidgeon's companion at arms, furnishes much of the amusing intrigue as only Horton can do.

One of the comedy riots of the picture is Frank McHugh who takes the role of the henpecked ex-husband of Madame Cecile, proprietor of the famous Parisian modiste shop. McHugh is one of the hits of the show.

SHORE ROAD ACTIVITIES REVIEWED

Northeastern Michigan is very much interested in the development of road U. S. 23 and through the courtesy of road officials we have been informed that all the grading north of the cement road leading out of Omer to AuGres has been completed since last fall. At the present time the pavement is being laid over this same stretch of road. The contractor handling this part of the work are Whitlow and Holbeck.

From AuGres north to the Isoco county line the grading will be done by Contractor W. T. Hill of East Tawas. Up to the present time the contract has not been let on this portion of the road for the cement work.

Taking up the new road again from the Isoco county line through to Tawas City the right of way has been secured with the exception of five pieces. A "hearing of necessity" was held in the condemnation proceedings on these particular pieces on April 29th at Tawas City. This will not hinder the submitting of bids for the grading of this piece of road as they have already been advertised and are to be let on May 5th.

The present plan of the State Highway Department also calls for this piece to be paved through to Tawas City during 1931. The road from AuGres through to Tawas City will be fairly close to the Bay all of the way. At Alabaster the plan calls for the road to be built back of the United States Gypsum company quarry, then to cut diagonally across to the present county road near what is known as Christeson's corner. From there it will be built on the right of way of the old road except where it enters Tawas City.

When the Shore Road was first proposed the counties through which it was to run agreed to furnish the right of way and the state is now insisting that those counties keep to their agreement. About 60 per cent of the right of way between East Tawas and Oscoda has been given to the county but on the remainder, owners have asked more for easement than the county can pay and the state highway department is hesitating as to the advisability of starting condemnation proceedings and facing the prospect of paying large awards for possession of the right of way when other sections of the state are clamoring for roads.

Approximate distances covered by the several projects shows ten miles from AuGres to the Isoco county line, from this line to Tawas City eight miles, and 15 miles from Tawas to Oscoda.

The application of the State Highway Commissioner of Lansing, Michigan, for the construction of a fixed bridge across the AuSable river at AuSable, about 2,500 feet from the mouth, will be considered at a public hearing on the subject, to be held at the city hall in AuSable on May 8, 1931.

ISABEL OF "EAST LYNNE" GLORIFIED BY ANN H. RDING

The opening of the engagement of Frank Lloyd's Fox Movietone production of "East Lynne" at the Family Theatre Sunday, May 3, is the outstanding event in the cinema history of this locality. Of that there can be no doubt, for, in addition to the popularity and the pulse quickening elements of the story, which has, in this instance, been thoroughly modernized by Tom Barry and Bradley King, "East Lynne" boasts the most distinguished cast of stars ever assembled for a single picture, including Ann Harding, Clive Brook, Conrad Nagel, Beryl Mercer, Cecilia Loftus, David Torrence and a number of others.

Advance reports on "East Lynne" label it as an entertainment that will undoubtedly win the year's honors. It has been elaborately produced with the story given a treatment that makes it more universally appealing than ever before.

Ann Harding achieves new laurels and justifies the characterization of the screen's "greatest emotional actress." A lovelier Isabel, certainly, has never been seen on stage or screen. She lives the role every inch of the way. She radiates with an incomparable beauty and sincerity that contributes importantly to the success of the picture.

Conrad Nagel and Clive Brook give characterizations that will add much to their popularity. The latter does the outstanding work of his career as Levison. Conrad Nagel is at his best as the ambitious young lawyer, influenced by his spinster sister, who makes an outcast of his wife.

See "East Lynne"—as real as life itself.

Right—Photograph of Mrs. Blanche Rusby of Detroit, which won the $500 international grand prize in the contest mentioned above. (Photograph, courtesy of the Photographers' Association of America.)

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

AY 10 is the day this year when America honors its mothers. In accordance with a resolution passed by congress in 1914, designating the second Sunday in May as Mother's day and asking the President to issue a proclamation calling upon government officials to display the flag upon public buildings, President Woodrow Wilson issued such a proclamation, asking his fellow-citizens similarly to display flags at their homes as "a public expression of our love and reverence for the mothers of our country."

Since that time the day has been generally observed throughout the United States and there has grown up the custom of sending to our mothers letters, telegrams, flowers, candy and other gifts on that day as well as honoring them by wearing a white carnation if one's mother is dead and a colored carnation if she is still living. All of which expresses a pretty sentiment and the origin and regular observance of Mother's day in the United States are facts in which Americans take considerable pride. But to offset this pride in the pretty sentiment is an ugly fact of which many Americans are not aware. And that fact is that the mortality rate from maternity causes in the United States is the highest in the civilized world, and that 10,000 of 16,000 American mothers who die each year from childbirth causes need not die if they are given adequate maternity care!

Do you doubt that statement about the mortality rate among American mothers? If so, look at these official figures, compiled by the children's bureau of the United States Department of Labor for 1927 (the latest year for which figures for most of these countries were available) in regard to the maternity death rates, per 1,000 live babies, for the following countries:

Italy	2.6
Japan	2.8
The Netherlands	2.9
Finland	3.0
Hungary	3.0
Denmark	3.1
Czechoslovakia	3.6
Switzerland	3.7
Spain	3.9
England and Wales	4.1
Estonia	4.1
Irish Free State	4.5
Northern Ireland	4.8
New Zealand	4.9
Lithuania	5.0
Canada	5.6
Chile	5.8
Australia	5.9
Salvador	6.3
Scotland	6.4
United States	6.5

In the light of these statistics and the custom of wearing white carnations in honor of mothers who have died, some one has asked this very appropriate question, "Does it not seem that 10,000 white carnations, one for each mother who needlessly died in the last year as a result of motherhood, represent too great a toll in pain and sorrow to be paid for by sentiment alone?"

However, an answer to that question may be found in a movement which is already under way. For this year the observance of Mothers' day marks the beginning of a nation-wide educational campaign to reduce the mortality rate among American mothers so that 10,000 shall not die in vain each year. This campaign has been started by Mrs. John Sloane, president of the Maternity Center association in New York city, and it has the indorsement of high government officials.

At a recent White House conference President Hoover said, "When mothers understand the standards of care, they will demand protection." Surgeon-General H. S. Cumming of the United States public health service in indorsing the campaign as a new form of Mother's day observance has declared, "The high maternal death rate is a disgrace to our profession and I am convinced that efforts such as these will go far toward improving conditions." Similarly Grace Abbott, chief of the children's bureau, stated, "There are no more tragic deaths than of mothers in childbirth, and I feel sure that, if it were understood by the people of the United States that to a very large extent these deaths are preventable, they would be prevented."

Typhoid fever, smallpox and diphtheria have yielded to scientific control in the last quarter century, and tuberculosis has been reduced to half its toll, as almost everyone knows. But the death rate from causes connected with maternity has not been lowered at all during the period for which records are available.

Italy, Denmark and five other nations have maternal death rates less than half that of the United States, which, as has been seen, is twenty-second on the roster of the nations of the world. In many of these countries the results have been commonly achieved by legislation requiring obedience, but in the United States improvement cannot be expected by such drastic action unless there is popular opinion back of it.

"We have refused to address ourselves effectively to this problem for at least twenty-five years," says Dr. Ralph W. Lobenstein, a noted obstetrician of New York city. "If we are to improve conditions we must face them, not rationalize. The humiliating conclusion is that this national disgrace can be removed when, as a people, we set out to remove it."

"The idea of going to a physician at once," states Dr. Frank W. Lynch, a leading obstetrician of San Francisco, "may seem ridiculous to the ordinary woman. She would not think so if she realized the value of taking things in time. In nearly every hospital in the land, it will be found that most tragedies occur in women who were not under medical supervision during the period of the child's development."

"Perhaps the root of the difficulty," states Carolyn Conant Van Blarcom, in her book, "Obstetrical Nursing," "lies in the fact that childbirth, as well as the attendant suffering and death, are so familiar that they are regarded as being normal incidents in the ordinary course of affairs. One of the most dramatic of all human events, the birth of a new being, is accepted casually, almost without concern, because it is so frequent—so commonplace."

"Moreover, we are all accustomed to hearing stressed the fact that child-bearing is not a disease, but is a normal physiological function. Not so

OUR MOTHERS

With little checks against the pane
You watched the sheets of summer rain.
"And will it ever stop," you said,
(She stroked your frightened baby head).
"Do the stars—how many miles away?
Do even children die some day?
Is heaven far above the blue?"
(She answered every one for you.)
And when you left the freese's light
To go away up to bed at night,
Where shadows lurked along the wall
(Those were her footsteps in the hall).
You saw the sorrow moonlight flow
On fields of dying things below,
But far away somewhere you knew
A silent prayer went up for you.
The years live as a moment stays,
Tomorrows tinkle your yesterday;
The May wind tells where lilacs are,
A sleighbell tinkles to a star;
Now we are young—our voices call,
Now—faded portraits on the wall.
More sweet these hours with her will grow
As they pass to the long ago.
And should you speak some day to men,
"Had I my life to live again—"
"May you live now that you can say,
"I would not change a single day!"
—Thomas Hornsby Ferril.

It is also said that the man-woman has given up the profession as a painter. Above may be seen the former Einar Wegener, now Lill Elbe.

Money Rewards for Prolific Mothers

Toronto.—Along about the end of 1936 some Toronto mother is due to come into a fortune estimated at between $300,000 and $500,000 as her reward for perpetuating her race.

Under the provisions of joke-loving Charles Vance Millar's will, the tenth anniversary of the millionaire Toronto bachelor's death is to be celebrated by a banquet at which the Toronto mother who has borne the most children in that ten-year period is to be given a check representing the residue of Millar's estate.

The check should be a big one, since Millar, who accumulated a fortune through shrewd real estate deals, from his string of race horses, as a mining man, and as president of a brewing company, left only a few small bequests to some friends and to some other persons whom he didn't even know.

Four years after his death two Toronto women are the only known serious contenders for the baby raising prize.

The leader is Mrs. Florence Brown, forty-two, unless the fact that the deaths of several of her children who have been born since Millar died will count against her.

Mrs. Brown has given birth to 27 children, of whom 13 are living. The twenty-seventh was born dead only a few weeks ago. The twenty-sixth died last June.

Mrs. Grace Bagnato, a thirty-seven-year-old grandmother, is Mrs. Brown's only known competitor. However, she has been so unlucky in other things she holds no hopes of winning Millar's prize, she says.

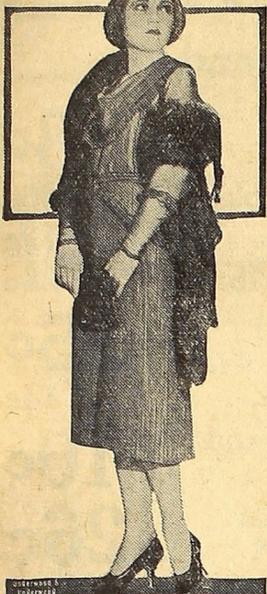

Mrs. Bagnato was married at thirteen and has borne 20 children, of whom 11 are living. Five of them have been born since the "contest" started, and all five are living. That fact may give her an edge on Mrs. Brown, if only the living children born within the time limits of the ten-year period count in the award. Her youngest child was born last October.

The matter of how the baby raising prize is to be awarded is to be decided by the executors of the will.

Millar found occasion to give readers of his will a final chuckle by including two trust companies as the executors as "they would quarrel over the fees, and thus would help to keep the handling of the estate perfectly straight."

G. R. Sproat, the third executor, regards details of the baby raising prize award as "the least of our worries," since the date of the award is six years away.

ON BEING A KING

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

"I often wish that I were king, and then I could do anything."

It is A. A. Milne's little Christopher Robin who makes the statement and who believes as do many little boys, and big ones, too, no doubt, that positions of distinction bring one freedom from responsibility and the conventions which ordinary people must respect.

If little Christopher Robin were king, as he so much desires, he would most likely find that instead of not being required to brush his hair, he would have to keep it in the most perfect order so as to set a good example to his subjects. Being king in whatever kingdom one finds himself does not often give one much more liberty than does being a slave.

Conway is the head and chief owner of a great industry which does annually a business worth a good many millions of dollars. In theory he can come and go as he pleases. He can

Cheering and Hazing

Taboo at Old Trinity

Hartford, Conn.—The student government organization of Trinity college, one of New England's oldest educational institutions, has discovered increasing sentiment among college undergraduates against hazing and cheering.

As a result, the sophomore class has announced abolition of the so-called "fresman rules," which provided for paddling and St. Patrick's day "scraps." Cheering now is regarded as "sophomore," according to campus leaders.

hold himself to no regular office hours; if a man in his employ does not please him Conway can fire him and hire him over again if he wishes. He can go off on a vacation whenever he pleases and charge the cost of it to expenses. He is king. It looks to a cursory observer that if Conway wants to take his hat off in the rain or leave his hair unbrushed, there is no one to say him nay.

But these things are only seeming. Conway is really a greater slave than the man who works for him by the hour.

It is a mistake that too many inexperienced men make that the boss or the president, or the manager or the dean, or whoever in the domain in which you work is king, can do as he pleases. No one can do so less.

Little Christopher Robin was wrong. A king is very much restricted in his activities, no matter where his kingdom lies.

Women Legislators, But Not Jurors

to pass on the acts of persons accused of violating those laws.

This unusual situation prevails because women cannot serve on juries in this state. It is the only discrimination against the sex.

In the house of the representatives of the tenth legislature, now in session, there are seven women. Dozens of bills introduced by these women will be enacted into law before adjournment.

It was a woman, for example, who drove a drastic state liquor law enforcement act—providing fifteen years' imprisonment as a maximum penalty—through the house.

Action on the liquor bill, introduced by Representative Gertrude Bryan Leeper of Phoenix, was favorable in the house. It died in the womanless senate, where it was rejected twice.

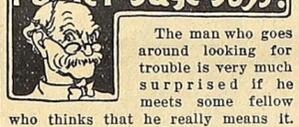

For several years women have held house seats, but one has never reached the senate, although it was attempted once by Representative Nellie T. Bush, house veteran.

Three of the seven women members are from Phoenix, the capital and largest city in the state. Four are from the "back country," giving the rural sections a margin. The smaller cities elected all their women, however, while one of the Phoenix representatives, Representative Mary Francis, was appointed to fill the unexpired term of her husband, M. J. Francis, veteran legislator and labor leader, who died suddenly during the middle of his third term.

Little attention to the jury duty discrimination is paid by women. They do not seem to care, one woman legislator putting it this way:

"Women may make, break and enforce laws. Why worry about jury duty?"

Beards Once Required Among Army Officers

San Antonio, Texas.—Beards once were required among officers of the United States army. Brooks Field officers, poring over old army orders issued in 1842, found the regulation.

Other rules of the old army prohibited officers at Fort Riley, Kan., roping and riding buffaloes, or shooting at them within range of the commandant's house.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

New York city scenery consists mainly of tall buildings, churches, museums and parks, but if you have the time you can find lovely country within easy motoring distance. There is Long Island, with plenty of beautiful places and splendid roads, which lead clear to Mantaunk Point. Or there is Westchester. And it is hard to find more attractive country than that, which lies along the Connecticut border. A fairly short trip, which always interests me, is the drive to West Point. You can go up the east side of the Hudson and cross the Bear Mountain bridge, but I like to cross on one of the ferries and go up the west side. We used to go through Englewood, where Dwight Morrow lives, but now we take the river road which runs around the face of the palisades. After a while you come to that place where there is a sort of graveyard for ships, many of them freighters which did their bit in the war, their iron sides red with rust and lying so close to each other that you could step from one to another. I always have thought that this miniature Sargasso sea would make a great setting for a mystery novel.

into the lawyer's office every once in a while, apparently to show that his gratitude was lasting. One night the lawyer's home was entered and his wife lost a valuable fur coat. The next time he saw his former client, he happened to mention the matter. The young man was much interested and asked many questions. About three days later, he came in again and said: "I think there is a chance I have located your wife's coat, but she will have to identify it and then agree to forget where it was found." The lawyer didn't like this idea, but he told his wife about it, and she certainly wanted the coat back. So she went with the young man to a place that seemed to be a furrier's establishment. She thought she could tell her coat by a silver fox collar, which had certain markings, and from other things about it. They went into a cold storage room at the back of the place, and there she saw eighteen coats with silver fox collars, hers among them. The proprietor turned it over to her without question. Now, while the lawyer does not suspect the young man of stealing that coat, he wonders just how innocent he was of the charge of which he got him acquitted.

TALES... of the TRIBES

By EDITHA L. WATSON

The Kutenai

They smoked willow bark for tobacco, they worshipped the sun, and they called their friends "bad people." These were a few of the peculiarities of the Kutenai.

They lived in northern Montana and Idaho, and north in Canada. Their tradition states that formerly they were located east of the Rockies, but the Blackfeet pushed them westward, with considerable loss of life as the unwilling Kutenai slowly and resistingly gave way. The Blackfeet having accomplished this drive, the two tribes became friends, and it was not a matter for war if a Blackfoot married a Kutenai, or vice versa. But one reminder of the old days of enmity remained—their name for the Blackfeet—"bad people."

The tribes joined in buffalo hunts, part of the meat thus obtained going to each. This matter of the division of meat has caused the dissolution of many another tribal alliance, but for some reason the Kutenai and the Blackfeet never found it a cause for quarrelling, and continued to carry on a custom which had proved dangerous to other nations without harm to themselves.

The costume and the customs of the Plains Indians were too firmly implanted in the Kutenai to be entirely displaced, when they moved across the mountains to the lake country. Buffalo meat was still a staple of their diet, but to it they now added fish, cleverly trapped or adroitly speared. Horses and firearms which replaced the bows and arrows of other days became necessities; and yet stone hammers, relics of a former age, might be found in use in the late years of the last century.

Enthologists who claim an Asiatic origin for the red race find the Kutenai bark canoe of interest. It was monitor-shaped, pointed at both ends under the water, and resembled those used in certain parts of Asia. The Kutenai also had dugouts, the common "hollow log" boat which was used by so many Indian tribes.

The greatest amusement of these people was gambling, and they might often be found noisily engaged in their favorite form of this pastime. This was a guessing game in which a bundle of sticks was divided, and an odd one or a marked one was concealed among them. The object was to guess in which bundle of sticks the odd one was hidden. Possessions changed hands with considerable frequency in the excitement of this game, as the inveterate gamblers wagered their valuables amid the loud cries of the players. The Kutenai liked to dance, also, although they were not especially rich in noise making or musical instruments.

There was a great deal to be admired in the Kutenai character. They were a hospitable and moral people, with good mental ability. The vices of the whites which have caused some tribes to dwindle and finally vanish, gained little hold on these energetic and industrious folk. Some of them could draw with considerable ability and even understand the principles of map making.

The primitive Kutenai religion was a form of sun worship. The land of departed souls was located in that glowing orb, and some day it was thought the travelers would return from the sun and meet their living friends once more. Everything was credited with a soul and reincarnation was one of their strong beliefs. The "medicine man" was a great influence in those early days, his words being heeded with solemn reverence, and it took many years to change their beliefs to those more nearly approaching Christianity.

With such ideas it is not surprising to find that these people enjoyed and appreciated the beauties of nature and delighted in the scent and color of flowers. The many practical uses of plants, also as food, medicine, and in other ways, had been discovered and utilized by the Kutenai.

Their folklore included many animal stores in which bears, birds, fish, insects, and such cold-blooded creatures as frogs and turtles played interesting parts. The coyote was the "hero" of many of these lively stories. His adventures were full of amusement and suspense—he played the most hilariously funny tricks on innocent folk, and was far away on his travels before they realized who their deceiver was.

As shown by their cultivation of the arts of peace, the Kutenai were never famous as a fighting tribe. It was no doubt due to their knowledge of this that a band of Shuswap, called the Kinbaskets, came into the Kutenai territory in British Columbia and settled down to stay. Efforts to dislodge them were frustrated by an alliance between the interlopers and the Assiniboin, who helped them to hold their position. This they managed so successfully that when the white men with their treaties of peace came into the country, they were still there.

There are 58 distinct linguistic divisions among the Indians. Many tribes could not understand each other's language, although they lived near each other. Sign language was in use between the Missouri river and the Rockies, and from Fraser river, British Columbia, to the Rio Grande. Few tribes outside this area used sign language.

German "Big Sisters" Meet Again

Three "big sisters," born in Germany, as they met for the first time in years at the docks at Southampton, England. On the left is the Berengaria which was the Imperator. Directly behind her is the S. S. Majestic, which was the Bismarck, while on the right is the S. S. Leviathan, which was formerly the Vaterland.

Historic Tree Is Given to England

'Grandchild' of Washington Elm to Be Planted at Sulgrave Manor.

Washington.—Registered on the national honor roll of the American Tree association, a "grandchild" of the famous Cambridge elm, under which George Washington took command of the American army in 1775, has been shipped to Sulgrave Manor house in England. This is the first tree registered to be planted on foreign soil and, standing as it will at Sulgrave manor, it will typify the friendship between the two nations.

The American Tree association is registering thousands of tree planters who are marking the bicentennial in 1932 of the birth of George Washington by planting trees. The memorial plan has been taken up by patriotic organizations, the Masonic fraternity, civic associations, the women's clubs, Boy Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, and thousands of schools.

Washington Ancestral Home.
This "grandchild" of the famous elm is nearly eight feet tall, and will be presented to the Sulgrave Manor board through Viscount Lee of Fareham, the chairman of the board for planting at the ancestral home of the Washington family at Sulgrave near Banbury, Oxon, England. The tree is the gift of Mrs. James H. Dorsey of the Baltimore chapter of the Maryland Daughters of the American Revolution. With the tree goes a bronze marker, giving the history of the Cambridge elm.

Charles Lathrop Pack of the American Tree association has also sent with it a certificate of registration in the American Tree association, made out to the Sulgrave Manor board. This has been sent to Viscount Lee along with American flag to stand beside the tree.

At the presentation, when the tree is planted, Mrs. Gillespie, the regent of the Walter Hines Page chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution in London, will represent Mrs. Dorsey and the Maryland D. A. R. At the planting a box of soil from Annapolis, where Washington resigned his commission as commander-in-chief of the army, will be used. Thus the beginning and the end of his generalship will be recorded at the ancestral home.

This "grandchild" of the Cambridge elm has a very interesting history. It grew from seeds scooped up in a box by a relative of Mrs. Dorsey some 25 years ago. Two children of the tree are at Mount Vernon, and another is at Annapolis.

Mrs. Dorsey has grown other trees from these seeds, and two of the grandchildren are to have a place of honor on the Mount Vernon boulevard which is to be opened between the Capitol of the nation and Mount Vernon. A cablegram just received by Mrs. Dorsey from Viscount Lee said that his board had accepted the gift with great delight, and that the planting of the tree would be a great occasion in the history of the board. Another grandchild of the Cambridge elm has been planted at the headquarters of the American Tree association on Sixteenth street, and will be marked exactly like the tree being sent to Sulgrave manor.

Due to traffic demands and old age, the original Cambridge elm has disappeared and a bronze marker in the pavement marks the spot where Washington took command of the army on July 3, 1775.

Youth Blinds Shark When It Attacks Him

Brisbane.—Sharks aren't so much, according to Stanley Roser, eighteen, who recently staged a quiet bout with one of the man-eating fish. While swimming the shark attacked him, sweeping up from beneath with a furious rush. Just as the shark closed on him, Roser extended one of his fingers and pushed it directly into the shark's eye, ending the struggle.

NEW YORK'S "RADIO CITY" MINIATURE "FUTURE CITY"

Sacrifice Air and Street Rights Worth Millions for Spaciousness and Light.

New York.—New York's busiest midtown zone will soon be the scene of the greatest adventure in city rebuilding ever attempted in America. Three great rectangular blocks, the equivalent in area of eight or ten ordinary city blocks, are now being cleared, and on this plot will rise the $250,000,000 "Radio City," a monumental group of ten buildings designed to be the future entertainment capital of the nation.

Due to the extent of the operation, the builders will, for the first time, have the opportunity to plan the proper spacing of buildings and streets so as to provide maximum light, air and convenience of traffic, the American Architect points out. The result will give the nation of today a miniature preview of the city of 50 years hence.

The project, backed by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and the radio interests, will include three great theaters for opera, dramatic and musical productions, and sound motion pictures, with provisions made in the latter for presenting television reproductions of different events when television is sufficiently developed to permit of its commercial application.

Twenty-seven radio and television studios, ranging from theater size to intimate rooms, will be incorporated in a single building. The most interesting building from a visual point, however, will be oval in shape and 15 stories in height, facing Fifth avenue in the heart of its smartest shopping zone. The tallest building of the group will rise 38 stories in the rear center of the plot and will be flanked by two other towers of fifty-odd floors.

Washington Crime Wave Is Girl and Cap Pistol

Washington.—The capital's most recent crime wave has been abruptly terminated and June Fiddlesop, the gun girl who terrorized taxi drivers, sent pedestrians scurrying into doorways and had a perfectly beautiful time, has been disarmed and sent sobbing to bed.

June, who was sixteen recently, went out for a stroll and found a pistol. She picked it up and strolled on down the street, banging away aimlessly. Half a dozen or so riot squads surrounded June and her pistol. They discovered it was a cap pistol. June was sent home.

Woman Operates Detective Bureau

Buffalo, N. Y.—If a woman asks you a question in Buffalo, beware. Perhaps it is one of Buffalo's female sleuths. Buffalo is headquarters for the only woman's private detective organization in the United States. It is managed by Miss Adelaide Jennings, who operates a chain of detective agencies throughout the country.

Critical examination of this design reveals many pleasing features. The large front porch is desirable, and, being an open porch, it does not shut off light. Then there is a convenient side porch which permits ingress and egress without going way through the

Many Pleasing Features Will Be Found in This Small House Plan

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to practical home building, for the readers of this paper. Money saved in the first cost of a home is usually money spent later on in repairs, and frequently the initial savings are far less than the after costs for upkeep. The idea of a permanent construction appeals to far-seeing people because they realize that an investment of such importance and amount as that required to build a home should not be regarded lightly. They know the correct way to figure the cost of a home is over a span of years. On such a basis a concrete home with the roof, such as illustrated here, is a sound investment of money.

Resale value is another factor that favors permanent construction. A run-down house is a slow seller and often can be transferred only at a great sacrifice. A well-built, fire-resistant and durable home is very apt to increase in value. It pays to build a home, but the largest dividends are enjoyed by those who build, not for present needs, but who build a home that is good at the end of the owner's lifetime.

Here Are Essentials of Modern Bathroom

One four-legged tub, a wash-stand and a water-closet comprised a complete bathroom a generation ago. Today so many additional appurtenances have been added that a description of a thoroughly up-to-date bathroom will contain many new ideas for most builders and planners of homes.

Furthermore, the tub, lavatory and closet combination have been so greatly improved in design and appearance that they bear little resemblance to the strictly utilitarian fixtures of a generation ago.

Legless tubs are the most in favor. They have square bases, may be recessed into an alcove or placed in a corner or against one wall, and will prevent the collection of dust wherever they are set. The tub may be white or colored, with fine metal or all-china fittings, and the valves and pipes may be also entirely concealed in the partition.

One may have faucets and fittings plated with gold, silver, chromium, or nickel. Chromium is the best for the average bathroom.

When women bobbed their hair they discovered the luxury of the shower bath. So this feature now is regarded as standard for every well-appointed home. It may be installed in a separate compartment, with plate glass door hung in a watertight metal frame. More frequently, though, an overhead shower is installed over the tub, and a plate glass shield or curtains of waterproof silk or some less costly material are hung around it.

In larger bathrooms the water closet is put in a separate small chamber. Quiet syphon-jet closets are the best that have been devised to date. Flush valves may be used if pressure permits; otherwise a low tank is the best arrangement.

In addition to the lavatory—which may be had in any material from enameled iron to tinted marble—the well-appointed bath has a dental lavatory.

The pedestal lavatory of genuine vitreous china is appropriate for the better bathroom because of the beauty of its lines and the ease with which it may be kept clean.

Other conveniences in the modern bathroom are a roomy medicine cabinet with a well-lighted mirror, plenty of china towel bars, concealed soap dishes and a scale. Many bathrooms have a dressing table of vitreous china to match the lavatory.

Such are the indispensables. An added convenience that many housewives insist on is a towel-warmer. It consists of nickel-plated hot water pipes attached to the supply system, standing on the floor or suspended on a wall, upon which towels may be dried and brought to a comfortable temperature.

It will be of material value in getting these figures to submit a working plan. Until the bidder has full, definite information before him he must do considerable guessing and to protect himself he is obliged to "guess" high, but with the working plan he can figure costs down to the smallest detail and make an absolute bid.

For permanency, beauty and reasonable cost this design stands forth as a most attractive and practical answer to the question, "How shall I build the new home?"

Foundation of House Shows Its Condition

Several suggestions that will help everyone who is contemplating the purchase of a house are made in a letter contributed by a reader to Liberty.

"Before you buy a house," he writes, "you should start with the basement and examine the walls for water stains and horizontal water lines caused by water seepage, or water standing in the basement.

"The foundation and retaining walls should be inspected for proper thickness," he continues. "A minimum width for main foundation walls below grade for a light-frame structure of one or two stories should not be less than 10 inches if of brick, and 18 inches for stone.

"Concrete walls having a sandy or clayey appearance are deficient in cement, or else are constructed of bank sand and gravel containing a large percentage of loam. Such walls should be examined for sand and loam pockets, which are detrimental to the walls' structural strength and permit the entrance of water.

"The wall plate or mud sill, which lies directly upon the foundation and upon which the floor rests, should be minutely examined for dry rot and decay. This is generally the first member of a dwelling's superstructure that goes bad."

Wax Chair Rungs

The rungs of chairs suffer particularly hard wear, as they are often marred and scratched by the sharp heels of shoes. A simple means of protecting the varnished finish is to wax these rungs occasionally. This treatment will help prevent expensive refinishing.

DAIRY FACTS

MILK FOAM DOES NOT HURT GROWTH

Experiment With the Dairy Calves in South Dakota.

The dairy department of the South Dakota experiment station, Brookings, recently completed an experiment in which it was found that milk foam fed to calves does not affect their growth or physical condition in any way. The experiment was undertaken because of the rather widespread idea that milk with foam on it fed to young calves hindered their growth and gave them the scours. Experiment station records did not reveal that any such experiment has been previously conducted. The experiment just concluded has been under way for five and one-half months and to check results the experiment will be repeated.

The six calves used in the test were taken from the college dairy herd, some of them Holstein, one a Jersey and one or two cross breeds. They were from three to four weeks old when the test was started. Three were fed skim milk with all foam taken off, while the other three were fed skim milk with the foam which accumulated in separating plus the foam taken from the other milk. In separating the milk pails were lowered from the machine so that considerable foam was formed.

Each of the six calves was fed exactly the same amount of milk by weight. At the start each received six pounds. Later the ration was increased to eight pounds and finally to ten. From four to six inches of foam stood on the pails of milk fed to three of the calves. All were given grain and hay in the customary amounts.

Every ten days of the trial all the calves were weighed and each 30 days they were measured. Frequently, Mr. Olson said, visitors came to see the calves and attempted to pick out the ones being fed foam. In no case were they able to distinguish between those getting foam and those getting milk without foam, he said.

Great Danger of Cattle Wading in Cool Streams

Back in the "dog days" it did look nice to see the cows standing knee deep in the cool stream. The farmer who had such a stream or pond that was also fit for drinking purposes congratulated himself on this feature of his farm. There are cases where cows are still suffering from one of the drawbacks of the opportunity to wade "that was so pleasant to the cows in hot weather. Cattle have developed sore feet with many aggravated cases of foot-rot. Wading in the water, particularly where there is a soft, muddy bottom, softens the feet to the point where they are easily wounded and broken by stones, brush or even very coarse grass and weeds. These abrasions afford an entrance for the germs that cause foot-rot. Where the cows have water to wade in a close watch should be kept on the feet. At the least inflammation, look for the irritating substance and remove it and nothing more will be required as a rule.

Because Illinois dairymen do not feed their cows according to production they are losing thousands of dollars annually, according to C. S. Rhode, University of Illinois.

Howard Gallagher, Richland county, Illinois, made $28.69 more profit from his dairy herd in one month when he changed from feeding all his cows the same amount to feeding each one according to production.

Feeding Cows by Scales Is Profitable Practice

Rhode pointed out that it has been found that Jerseys did best when fed one pound of balanced dairy ration to each three pounds of milk produced daily and for Holsteins and Brown Swiss one pound for each four pounds milk was best.

Cracked soy beans and soy bean oil meal are among the very best protein supplements available for dairy cows. This fact has been demonstrated by numerous experiments carried on in various states, reports Dr. C. Y. Cannon, head of the dairy husbandry work at Iowa State college, who has been looking into this matter.

Cracked Soy Beans Are Excellent for Cattle

Soy beans have been unusually low in price and there appears to be a surplus of beans in some regions. Soy beans, cracked, or soybean oil meal, have proved equal to linseed oil meal or cottonseed oil meal, according to work at the Iowa stations for dairy cows, Doctor Cannon finds.

Feeding Silage

Is it safe to feed moldy silage to cows? Some dairymen are very careful to avoid all moldy material and never have trouble that can be traced to their feed. Other dairymen are quite careless of moldy silage and they are just as free from feeling ill. This matter has been the subject of many experiments and it has yet to be demonstrated that moldy silage is harmful. It should be remembered, however, that such silage will kill a horse.

CHAPTER XIV—Continued

In this way Jeems found his wife and boy. Their story was destined to be remembered because it was a marked incident in a transition of land, people, and customs which history could not regard too lightly. Manuscripts and letters were to bear it on, until, almost forgotten, it was to remain only a whisper among a thousand others of days and years whose echoes grow fainter as time passes. The walls of the old Lotbiniere home in St. Louis street, close to the residence of the beautiful but infamous Madame de Paean, witnessed the piecing together of the story and might repeat it today if they could talk. For Jeems the few minutes after his entry in the Lotbiniere house, where he and Toinette were guided by Nancy and her father while a black servant brought up the rear with the baby, were nearly as unusual as the last moments of his consciousness on the Plains of Abraham. Inside the door, Nancy placed the child in his arms, which had not relinquished their hold of Toinette, and the discovery that he possessed a son leapt upon him. He was so overwhelmed by the emotion which followed that he did not see Hepsibah Adams as he felt his way through the wide hall to find what the excitement and crying were about. It was Hepsibah with his round, sightless face and his voice breaking with joy when he found Jeems alive under his great, fumbling hands which added—as Nancy wrote in her letter to Anne St. Denis-Rock—"a final proof that God does answer prayer."

That this God who had seen New France sink into ruin had guided their own destinies with a beneficent hand Jeems devoutly believed when Toinette told him what had befallen her after the flight from Chenusio. They were alone in her room. It was the eleventh of December, and the afternoon sun shone from a sky filled with the smiling warmth of autumn rather than the chill of winter. A few hundred yards away, General Murray was holding a review of the regiments which were soon to face Levis in his attempt to retake the city. The sound of martial music came to them faintly, and with it the distinct but softer tolling of a bell which marked an hour of prayer, and to this appeal Toinette bowed her head and murmured words of adoration taught her by the white-robed Sisterhood of Christ. Three years had changed her. Not time alone, but motherhood and the grief of hopeless waiting had made her more a woman and less a girl. At last she had believed Jeems was dead, and now she had him again, an indescribable beauty suffused her face and eyes with its radiance as the mystery of the years was unveiled.

She told of Hepsibah's capture by the Mohawks in Forbidden valley, of his escape, his recapture later by the Senecas, and of her appeals to Shindas and Tiaoga and of her failure to inspire their mercy when, blinded, he was brought to Chenusio.

"Only God could have directed me after that," she said, "for I was so desperate that I scarcely know how events shaped themselves as they did. I feared what your action might be when you returned and found your uncle had been blinded and killed, and not until I entered Ah De Bah's tepee did it strike me as an answer to my prayers that a hunting knife should be dangling by its cord in the opening. With this knife I freed Hepsibah and cut a hole in the skin tent through which we crept to the canoes, after I had given Wood Pigeon my message to you. When we were pursued and overtaken my hope died, but the depth of my despair was no greater than the joyous shock which overcame me when I heard Tiaoga's voice telling us not to be afraid but to go ashore quietly and that no harm would befall us. Shindas explained what they were about to do, for as soon as we were ashore, Tiaoga went off alone into the darkness. He told us that three days before reaching Chenusio they had learned, through facts which Hepsibah related, that their prisoner, already blind, was your uncle and my own dear friend. It was too late for them to save him, for the warriors were in bad humor and demanded the sacrifice at the stake of the one who had killed several of their number. Shindas came ahead so you would not be in the village when the prisoner arrived. As Shindas talked to us I learned that hearts as kind as any in this world beat in savage breasts, for these three men had turned traitors to the Senecas that we might live. In the light of a torch, Shindas disclosed a long braid of hair which looked horribly like my own, and drenched his scalp in fresh blood which he drew from his breast. It was a scalp Tiaoga had taken from a French Indian he had killed, and I turned faint when I saw it gleaming in the flare of the pitch pine. Then Hepsibah and I went on in the canoe. Hours later, Shindas rejoined us and said that Tiaoga had danced with the scalp before his people and that they believed we were dead. Shindas stayed with us until we came upon French soldiers near Fort Frontenac, and each day I dressed the wound in his breast."

She paused, as if revisiting what had passed, then said:

"There were a few moments with Tiaoga—alone—that night we stood on the shore, while Shindas took the blood from his wound. God must have made Tiaoga love me, Jeems, almost as he had loved the one whose place I had taken. When I found him, he was so cold and still in the darkness that he might have been stone instead of flesh. But he promised to make it possible for you to come to me as soon as he could do so without arousing the suspicions of his people. And then he touched me for the first time as he must have caressed Silver Heels. He held my braid in his hand and spoke her name in a way I had never heard him speak it before. I kissed him. I put my arms around his neck and kissed him, and it seemed that even my lips touched stone. Yet he loved me, and because of that I have wondered—through all these years—why he did not send you to me."

"Yet He Loved Me—"

Jeems could not tell her it was because he had killed Tiaoga.

As the melody of the bell had fallen like a benediction over the Plains of Abraham, so peace and happiness followed in the footsteps of the conquerors of New France. At the stroke of a pen, half a continent changed hands, and from the pulpits of the English colonies voices were raised in gratitude to God that the conflict was ended. Even the beaten rejoiced, for during the months of its final agony the heart of the nation had been sapped by corruption and dishonesty until faith had crumbled in men's souls and British presence came to be regarded as a guarantee of liberty and not as the calamity of defeat. "At last there is an end to war on this continent," preached Thomas Foxcroft, pastor of the Old church in Boston, for like a million others of his countrymen he did not foresee the still greater conflict for American independence less than fifteen years ahead. And the echo was repeated—"At last there is an end to war." Again the sun was golden in its promise. Men called the days their own, the frontiers slumbered, the most vengeful of the savages retreated to their fastnesses, women sang and children played with new visions in their eyes. These were the days of a nation's birth, when the Briton mingled with those whom he had defeated, and transformed New France into Canada. In the spring of 1761 Jeems returned to the Richelieu. Madame Tanteur,

Accumulation of Ages in Dead Sea's Flotsam

Travelers in the Holy land visiting the deepest hole in the earth's surface, that occupied by the Dead sea, into which the Jordan empties itself, are always struck with astonishment at the sight of countless numbers of palm tree trunks, heaped by the waters on its banks.

There are now no such numbers of palm groves in the vicinity, or on the banks of the Jordan, the Arnon or other rivers flowing into this sea, as would account for so prodigious an amount of debris. Any attempt at building a fire out of the mass of flotsam, results, after exercising much patience, in feeble, blue flames of no great intensity. The wood is heavily impregnated with salt from the Dead sea—Salt sea, or Lake Asphaltas as it her spirit subdued and her malice chastened, placed into his hands and those of her daughter the broad domain of Tanteur manor, which it was her desire never to see again. That the home of their future was to be built amid the scenes of a tragedy which had brought them together, and where they would feel the presence of loved ones who had found happiness there as well as death, brought to Toinette and Jeems a joy which only they could understand. For the charred ruins of Tanteur manor and of Forbidden valley were home, even to Hepsibah Adams, and when Jeems reached the hallowed ground he had left five years before, he wrote Toinette, who waited in Quebec, telling her how the hills smiled their welcome, how green the abandoned meadows were, and that everywhere flowers had come to bless the solitude and the resting places of their dead. Then he set to work with the men who had come with him, and in the golden flush of September he went for Toinette and his boy. A haze of smoke drifted once more from the chimneys of cottages in the valley lands, and with another summer the lowing of cattle and the bleating of sheep rose at evening time, and the old mill wheel turned again, and often Toinette rode beside Jeems toward Forbidden valley, sometimes with her hair in curls, with a ribbon streaming from them.

It was in this second year, when the chestnut burrs were green on the ridges, that strangers came down the trail from Tanteur hill one evening, two men and a woman and a girl. The men were Senecas, and the miller, who met them first, eyed them with suspicion as well as wonder, for while the girl was pretty and the woman white, the men who accompanied them were fierce and tall and marked by battle. They were also extremely proud, and passed the miller without heeding his command to make themselves known, stalking to the front of the big house, followed by the woman and the girl, where Toinette saw them and gave such a cry that the miller ran back for his gun. In this way Tiaoga came to Tanteur manor to show Jeems the scar his arrow had made, and with him were Wood Pigeon and Shindas and Mary Daghlen. For many years after this, until he was killed in the frontier fighting which preceded the American war for independence, Tiaoga returned often to the valley of the Richelieu, and as time went on, the pack of soft skins and bright feathers he brought with him grew larger, for another boy was given to Toinette, and then a girl, so that, with three children always watching and hoping for his arrival, the warrior was kept busy accumulating treasures for them. Once each year Mary and Shindas visited Tanteur manor, and with them came their children when they grew old enough to travel through the wilderness. Wood Pigeon did not return to Chenusio. Tokana, her crippled father, had given up his valiant struggle the preceding winter and had died. She lived with Toinette and Jeems until she was nineteen, when she married a young French landowner named De Poncey.

From one of a sheaf of yellow letters may be read these lines, dated June 14, 1767, written to Nancy Lotbiniere-Gagnon by Marie Antoinette Bulain.

"My Own Dear Nancy: "Sadness has fallen over us here at Tanteur manor. Odd is dead. I no longer have a doubt that God has given souls to the beasts, for wherever we look we miss him, and a fortnight has passed since we buried him close to the chapel yard. It is like missing a child who loved us, or more than that, one who guarded us as he loved. Even last night little Marie Antoinette sobbed herself to sleep because he cannot come when she calls him. I cannot keep tears from my own eyes when I think of him, and even Jeems, strong as he is, turns from me when we pass the chapel yard, ashamed of what I might see in his face. Odd was all we had left to us of other days—he and Hepsibah. And it is Hepsibah for whom my heart aches most. For years dear old Odd has guided him in his blindness, with a cord attached to his neck, and I believe they knew how to talk to each other.

"Hepsibah now sits alone so much, keeping away from others, and every evening we see him groping about the gate to the chapel yard as if hoping to find some one there. Oh, what a terrible thing is death, which rends us all with its grief in time! But I must not moralize or unburden my gloom or you will wish I had remained silent another month.

"It is a glorious June here. The roses . . . One wonders if the misty spots on the yellow page are tears.

[THE END.]

INDIVIDUALITY ENCOURAGED IN HAT STYLES THIS SEASON

THREE OF THE NEW SPRING HATS

HERE'S the key to smartness this season—play up originality, versatility, individuality in dress. Wear clothes that are becoming, no matter what your neighbor is wearing.

When you start out to do this, you will find that your milliner, your dressmaker, the salesperson who sells you your shoes, hats, gloves and other costume accessories, even the beauty parlor expert who waves your hair and plucks your eyebrows and recommends the tint of face powder best suited to your complexion are all working along the play-up-your-individual-self idea.

This "be pretty" spirit is particularly encouraged in the millinery shops and departments. Not for years have fashions in headwear been so flattering and so versatile. This season's displays invite you to select any type from a tight fitting toque to a huge brim or a sailor, or a poke bonnet or a picturesque profile hat, or a cunning little Watteau perked up on a bandeau, or a tricorne, or a bicorne if these best suit your style.

By way of diversity in modish millinery we are illustrating herewith three distinctive types. Comes from Paris this interesting trio. The arresting poke bonnet is of yellow straw. The feathers which trim the sides and back are brown. Never a spring in our memory has brown been so outstanding as it is this season. The present modes call not only for brown hats and other accessory touches in brown, but the use of brown with white—a white jacket and hat with a brown frock or vice versa, or in anyway that the combination may be achieved.

Has your milliner told you of the vogue for Milan straw? The emphasis placed on this fine and refined straw such a fascinating chapter to the story of evening wraps and wraps to wear over the charming lingerie afternoon gowns which are in promise for later on.

They are audacious, they are pert, they are happily frivolous are these little hip-length jackets and caped novelties made of sheer dainty velvet either in black or bright colors.

Some have touches of white fur, and some haven't. The latter make up for their lack of fur by being shirred and puffed, maybe ruffled or styled with a piquant scarf. Some are wrap-around types. Most of them are, that is if they do not take a notion to adopt flaring peplums. There's no end of novelty expressed in their sleeves. Now that summer is coming on the little cape sleeve is especially popular as it slips on so easily over the crisp organdies and frilly chiffons with which it is worn.

The models in the picture are two selected from among a multitude of intriguing types. The simple hip length wrap to the left is of sheerest black velvet lined with pale blue georgette, the sleeves are elbow length and the long ties of self-velvet are also lined with the georgette which is the same blue as is the silk net of which the dress is fashioned. Note the horizontal tucks which trav-at the very time when coarse shiny straws are so widely exploited goes to show the extremes to which millinery runs this season. The smart little tricorne in the picture is a black Milan. The velvet ribbon which trims it is in a lovely pastel blue.

The picture hat is destined to regain some of its lost popularity, this spring and summer. The model shown last in this group is a type such as a Gainsboro or a Reynolds might choose to portray. It is a baku straw, its wide brim suggesting the very new profile silhouette which features the unbalanced brim—one side wide, the other showing the hair.

Evening Wraps.

The forecast of transparent velvet for spring and summer is being realized in the cunning little jaquettes and coates which are adding to the skirt and which elaborate the bodice as well. Tuck treatments similar to this are made quite a feature of the mode.

The cape sleeves which grace the ermine-trimmed wrap are typical of the trend in the newest modes. The arrangement of the fabriclike ermine is most clever fitted as it is to the hips, the front fastening adopting the modish surplice movement.

Young girls are wearing the most intriguing velvet wraps, made with utmost simplicity with wide scarfs which tie in loose bows to one side of the neckline, their cunning cape sleeves reaching barely to the elbow. When not in black or pure white then they are in bright emerald green or perhaps coral color or some other bright hue. CHERIE NICHOLAS.

Bryce Canyon One of Utah's Natural Wonders

Bryce canyon has been described as a gigantic scallop in the Paunsaugunt plateau. One hundred miles away to the southeast is Navajo mountain. "The entire country between is a labyrinth of extremely deep canyons, flaked everywhere by castellated spires and domes," to use the words of Doctor Pack of the University of Utah, who each summer leads a party to these wonders. The canyon . . . received its name from Ebenezer Bryce, a Scotsman, who entered Utah in 1850, and in 1875 built a cabin at the mouth of the canyon. . . .

"Cameo mountains" was the name given by J. W. Powell in 1875 to weird formations like that at Bryce, where erosion of highly colored rocks shows the secrets of rocks of many ages that have been uncovered to give joy to all who behold them. These processes of disintegration are still going on; at Bryce it is possible to see perpendicular cleavage in the turrets and pinnacles. "In a few thousand years they will divide; some day they will disappear," insists a geologist.

One visitor who stood in awe on the brink of the plateau and looked off at the splendid vision spread out before him spoke of seeing "gigantic tulips on stems of stone." Another enthusiast spoke of "that beautiful garden that blossoms in columns of stone."—John T. Faris in "Roaming the Rockies."

Histories of Names

The discovery of gold at Bannockburn, in Ontario, says an article in London Answers, is a reminder of the way in which history is preserved in place names. For the pioneers who founded this Canadian township—and the neighboring one of Argyle—were undoubtedly Scots. Hundreds of years after these names may provide valuable clues to the early history of Canada. But there are some place names whose origins are "wrapt in mystery." For instance, there is a village named London on the Austro-Czech frontier. This particular village is a bit of a puzzle. Perhaps, however, it can be traced back the Romans—like our London, it is possibly a corruption of the name of a Roman settlement.

Soviet Theatricals

It is said that a spontaneous amateur theater movement has sprung up in the Soviet union. Performances take place in factory towns. Village club workers write, produce and act their own plays. There are some 35,000 of these club theaters in cities and towns and about 30,000 in villages. Troupers, known as Blue Blossoms, travel about the country, performing before local trade unions and peasant clubs. Their repertoire includes songs, acrobatics, dances and satirical sketches. There are about 10,000 of these. In the spring of 1928 there were 8,767 motion picture display places in the Soviet union.

How Much?

Thirteen-year-old Robert D., of Franklin, was greatly excited over learning to drive an automobile. Grandmother was trying to dissuade him by telling him he could not get a license. His mother, in the meantime, was telling him of the ambition of young people thirty years ago to own a fine horse and buggy, when Robert said:

"Mother, how much did a horse and buggy license cost?"—Indianapolis News.

Quick COMFORT for fretful upset children

ALL children are subject to little upsets. They come at unexpected times. They seem twice as serious in the dead of night. But there's one form of comfort on which a mother can always rely; good old Castoria. This pure vegetable preparation can't harm the tiniest infant. Yet mild as it is, it soothes a restless, fretful baby like nothing else. Its quick relief soon sees the youngster comfortable once more, back to sleep. Even an attack of colic, or diarrhea, yields to the soothing influence of Castoria.

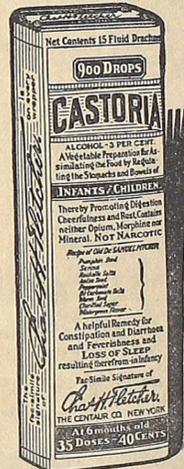

Keep Castoria in mind, and keep a bottle in the house—always. Give it to any child whose tongue is coated, or whose breath is bad. Continue with Castoria until the child is grown!

His Lucky Day

G. T. Robertson, a truck driver living near Roanoke, Va., noticed an ordinary match box lying in the underbrush while hauling cord wood. He saw the box as he passed each day. Finally, having motor trouble at this spot and wanting a match to clean the carburetor, he picked up the box. It contained $21 in bills.

THE SIGN OF AN Out-of-Town Roofer On Your House Is Nothing to be Proud Of

1.—It is a Slap in the Face to Isoco County Labor.

Many carpenters maintain homes and support families in our county. Employment has been scarce when divided among our local carpenters. Why give your work to strangers.

2.—The Sign of the Strange Roofer Generally Marks the Home of an Easy Mark for Smart Peddlers.

Some fast talking salesman has stung that homeowner for a salesman's expense and commission added to the real value of the roof.

3.—The Sign of the Strange Roofer on the Usual Composition Shingle, or Roll Roofing Job, Marks the House Owner as No Judge of Value.

He probably does not know that the number of pounds of roofing to the square when applied to the roof is the all-important distinction between different roofs. The smart salesman has probably shown him a thick sheet of roofing which looks heavy, but is applied to the roof so that it makes only one thickness, weighing about 100 pounds to the square. He believes this is better than a slightly thinner composition shingle usually used locally—not knowing that the shingle is applied so as to make a 2-thickness roof weighing 200 pounds per square or 3-thickness roof weighing 250 to 300 pounds to the square.

4.—The Sign of the Strange Roofer Marks the House Owner as One of Those Who is Willing to Pay a Higher Price to Strangers than to Their Neighbors for Comparative Articles.

We have yet to find a composition roofing job put on anywhere in Isoco county where the owner could not have purchased cheaper through local dealers and carpenters.

5.—Isoco County Carpenters and These Yards are Not Afraid of Competition.

All we ask is that you have the local roof jobs figured by local people before you sign any contracts. (You are not required to sign any contracts with us. Check up on the weight of roofing; the number of squares; the quality, and find out the advantages in buying through local people where you will have a guarantee for years. Just come to our yards and register your kicks, if any—instead of these knock-on-your-door here-today-gone-tomorrow roofing peddlers.

We do not need the assistance of any radio station at Shreveport nor from any chain store to make the above facts clear to you.

Do Not Let the Sign of the Strange Roof Peddler be the Label of Your Position as an Isoco County Home Owner.
