

Air Lines Now Belt the Globe

Planes Are Carrying Mail to All Parts of World on Regular Schedule.

Washington, D. C.—A visiting Eskimo, a tropical Uganda native, or a South Sea islander, can now send an air mail letter from the United States to his home land, and most of the journey will be in airplanes flying on regular schedules.

Announcement that a British air mail line has established regular service between Cairo and Lake Victoria, which soon will be extended to Cape Town, directs attention to the amazing development of an industry that dates from the World war.

Routes of Flying Postmen.

Except for two gaps, the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, commercial air lines now belt the globe," says a bulletin from the National Geographic society. "Not only do they encircle the world, but flying postmen interlace its inhabited areas with crisscross lines and, in some cases, with parallel routes. Time-table planes carry letters, parcels, passengers and freight between the shores of all the seas except the Antarctic, and over all the continents, also excepting the Antarctic.

In all there were 172,000 miles of commercial airways in regular operation during 1930, according to a survey made by the aeronautics division of the Department of Commerce, and of this mileage more than nine-tenths carried air mail. The routes of the world's aerial mailmen would, if linked end to end, encircle the earth more than six times. In the United States 417,505 passengers, more than the population of Indianapolis, Ind., were carried on scheduled lines. Air mail amounted to $324,000 pounds, the aggregate weight of eight large freight locomotives.

A world accustomed to the deliberation of railroad construction has to rub its eyes to keep pace with air progress today. Airways need no costly bridges, tunnels or fills. It might be said, briefly, that airway engineers draw a dotted line across the map, promoters sign on the dotted line, and presto! a few days later planes are operating over it!

The United States, one of the first countries to have regularly scheduled air mail service, is the holder of many 'firsts' in commercial aviation. America has the greatest airway mileage within its own boundaries and it has also the greatest mileage outside its own boundaries, giving it world leadership in commercial lines by a wide margin. In Newark, N. J., it now has the busiest air port in the world, with eighty scheduled arrivals and departures daily. That means a time-table plane every 15 minutes during the 24 hours. America has more cities with direct air service than has any other country.

France Our Nearest Rival.

"American lines reaching down into Central America, the West Indies and South America, and in other scattered parts of the world, bring the United States total up to 49,000 miles. America's closest rival today is France, whose lines reach across Europe and Asia to Saigon, in French Indo-China, and down the coast of West Africa to Senegal, where fast mail boats connect with the French South American air systems. Under the tricolor 18,000 miles of airways were flown last year.

Germany's mileage, more than 12,000 miles, is third. Most of the German lines are confined to her own boundaries, and all of them are within Europe.

The Dutch have the longest air mail line in the world in the recently opened Royal Netherland Air Navigation company's route to Java, in the South seas. For 10,000 miles modern 'Flying Dutchmen' hurdle deserts, jungles, mountains, plains and seas fortnightly between Amsterdam and Batavia. Affiliated Dutch companies carry the line some 600 miles farther east to Surabaya, Java, and plans are being considered to extend it to Darwin, North Australia, linking it with Australia's widespread air mail system.

Three Races East.

"Three European nations are pushing eastward into Asia above old caravan trails which fell into disuse with the discovery of water routes to the Far East. To date the three have co-operated. The Dutch and French use the same route, as far as Rangoon, Burma, but they run their planes on alternate weeks, and each carries the mail of the other, sharing expenses and profits. The English, flying a slightly different route, have extended their lines to New Delhi, India's new capital.

"The Dutch planes, starting at Amsterdam, travel across central Europe, Istanbul, Baghdad, Karachi, Calcutta, Rangoon, Medan (Sumatra) to Batavia. The French line begins at Marseilles, jumps the Mediterranean sea to Syria, and, between Bagdad and Rangoon, duplicates the Dutch route. From Rangoon the French line continues eastward to Bangkok, Siam, and Saigon, French Indo-China. The week the French line is idle French air mail is carried on the Dutch planes; and the week the Dutch line does not run mail from the Netherlands is put aboard a French plane at Marseilles.

"The English operate independently the line that was first to reach India. In Europe this route extends from London across central Europe to Athens, Greece, and across the Mediterranean to Cairo. It then turns eastward and follows a series of ancient water holes across the desert to Bagdad. The next stage is the same as that flown by the French and the Dutch to Karachi. Regular service on the British commercial line ends now at New Delhi, the capital of India, but an extension is projected to Singapore, Australia, and New Zealand. An experimental British air mail flight is being made this month from London to Australia, via India, Singapore, and the Dutch East Indies.

Farthest-North Air Mail.

"If all the air services under the Union Jack were grouped together the British Commonwealth of Nations would be second in mileage, with some 28,100 miles. The units, however, prefer to make their own reports. The four leading divisions are: Australia, 9,000 miles; Great Britain, 8,100 miles; Canada, 7,000 miles and British Africa, 4,000 miles.

"At least a dozen different companies operate commercial airways in Canada. The longest of these is the 1,800-mile route extending over the northern wildernesses from Fort McMurray in Alberta to Aklavik, and Hershel Island, on the Arctic coast.

"South America is completely ringed with commercial airways, with three different lines running parallel to each other down the east coast from Natal to Buenos Aires. Every country and foreign colony in the continent has regular air service.

"Soviet Russia claims 18,000 miles of commercial airways in operation in the Union this year, with lines running east as far as Lake Baikal in central Siberia, and south to Teheran, the capital of Persia. An Arctic line to northern Siberia points along the Yenisei river has just been blazed by a plane using skis. China's airways connect several of the largest cities of the country, including Peiping, Shanghai, Hankow and Canton. Mexico's air lines reach from the United States border at Brownsville and El Paso, to Guatemala and Yucatan. Airplanes will supplement dog teams on 14 of the 25 star mail routes in Alaska next October."

Cleveland Is in Field Giving Speedy Divorces

Cleveland, Ohio.—Cleveland is the latest entrant in the "divorce while you wait" race. Record times are being made by other divorce mills, but Cleveland's bid for popularity is the "10 minute divorce."

Domestic Relations Judge Samuel H. Silbert has set a pace of six divorces an hour, 18 every day between 9:00 a. m. and noon. He devotes the afternoon to hearing divorce cases, which are contested, and, being more difficult, they take as long as 40 minutes each.

In the "10 minute" divorces Judge Silbert not only finds time to give decisions but also to hear from the husband or wife the marital difficulties leading up to divorce action.

Unusual Pear Tree Flourishing in Iowa

Fort Madison, Iowa.—Ed G. Doby claims to have a pear tree which is unique in horticulture. The tree is more than 50 feet high. It produces a crop of from 25 to 50 bushels. But the harvest is a fruit about the size of a man's fist, round, and without the characteristic protruberance near the stem which marks all other pear species. The tree is about 100 years old, and none now living knows its origin.

24 EGGS AT A MEAL MODEST REPAST OF NEW JERSEY MAN

He Prefers Them Brown-Shellled, but Enjoys Them Raw or Cooked Any Style.

Fort Lee, N. J.—Walter T. Heckman is one heck of a man when it comes to eating eggs.

Twenty-four eggs at a clip are mere hors d'oeuvres before a man-sized meal to this big egg and appetite man of New Jersey.

And that's why Mr. Heckman scoffed long and loudly at the claims of that man in Colorado Springs who hails himself as the egg-eating champion with a record of two dozen.

"Heck," said Mr. Heckman, "I can beat him with two hands tied, after a good dinner of a whole side of pork and sauerkraut. Two dozen eggs! I've drunk off three dozen before you could say, 'Cock-a-doodle-do!'"

Hard-boiled, soft-boiled, all around the shell, the only kind of egg Mr.

Heckman doesn't eat is dyed and blown Easter eggs. Fried or raw, sugared or salt, yellow and white, the only part this terror of the barnyard doesn't eat is the shell.

Mrs. Heckman just can't keep her egg-eating husband in eggs, although she buys a gross at a time. Down Main street Mr. Heckman makes the rounds each day, beneath the highly pigmented portals of the chain stores. There he takes eggs, makes a small incision in one end with his penknife, drums on the shell and the egg bout is on.

Sometimes he makes holes in a dozen at a time, and taking two in each hand, lightens the third box before the clerk has finished itemizing the bill. White leghorns, pullet or cracked.

"But it's the brown ones for me," he said. "You get a good brown egg and you got something. I would give a dozen of your pale-faced, scrawny, select white eggs for one brown egg with a fine, sun-tan complexion."

Mr. Heckman pushed his chair back from the breakfast table where a dozen shells, empty, discarded, lay like a graveyard of bleaching bones. A bowl held another two dozen, unopened, unravaged. They would do for lunch.

"Some day you'll kill yourself eating so many eggs," said Mrs. Heckman and shook her head.

"Oh, that was just a few," demurred Mr. Heckman, showing his plate away.

"Few? You just swallowed 12."

"Wait a minute," said Heckman.

"Those two are cracked. They won't keep. I better eat them. You don't want to see them go to waste, do you?"

THE ARKANSAS RAZORBACK

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

HERE are eight states in the Union with nicknames related to birds or animals, presumably because they are so characteristic of those states that a person invariably thinks of them together. They are the following:

Arkansas, the Bear state.

Delaware, the Blue Hen state.

Iowa, the Hawkeye state.

Louisiana, the Pelican state.

Michigan, the Wolverine state.

Minnesota, the Gopher state.

Oregon, the Beaver state.

Wisconsin, the Badger state.

But it is a curious fact that in addition to every state having a popular nickname, there are some states which have symbols that are in no way connected with the nickname. If they were connected, whenever you thought of Arkansas, you would think of a bear. But the fact is that whenever you think of that state, the chances are that there rises to your mind the image of one of those lean, lanky porkers with its long snout and high, sharp backbone which gives it the name of razorback. For the razorback, descendant of the pigs which the Spanish explorer, De Soto, brought to America and which escaped to the woods and ran wild for generations, is Arkansas' native hog and as such has become that state's symbol rather than the bear.

Time was when the razorback was such a familiar figure in the Arkansas landscape that it became a part of those "popular legends" which are responsible for fixing in the public mind certain ideas, as often erroneous as not, about the people in some one state or some section of the country. Hence the tradition of the "Ozark hill-billy" whose "shiftlessness" has been perpetuated in the famous "Arkansas Traveler" story. And a similar story in which the razorback figures is this one:

Traveler Through Arkansas (observing a razorback scratching itself against a post)—Your hogs seem to be troubled with the mange.

Ozark Hill-Billy—Mange nuthin', stranger. That there is a razorback and he's just stroppin' himself!

So while it may be true that the razorback hog was once the most distinctive domestic animal in Arkansas, modern farming and modern live stock raising in Arkansas have largely done away with him and he is more of a relic and a tradition than a living fact. The tradition has been preserved, however, by the athletic teams of the University of Arkansas which have become widely known as the "Razorbacks," especially since an Arkansas football star made the All-American.

In fact, such has been the widespread interest in college athletics in recent years that the mascots and nicknames of athletic teams, especially those of the state universities, have done much to fix in the public mind a certain state symbolism, even though it may not always agree with that suggested by the "official" state nickname. Outstanding examples of those which symbolize both the state and the college athlete are the "Wolverines" of the University of Michigan, the "Gophers" of the University of Minnesota and the "Badgers" of the University of Wisconsin.

In that connection there has come

TALES... of the TRIBES

By EDITHA L. WATSON

The Dakota (Sioux)

The ideal Indian—superb of physique, mentally keen and alert, and with a high standard of morals—is best typified by the Dakota, now known as the Sioux.

The magnificent people dominated all the surrounding tribes, with the exception of the Chippewa, with whom they were continually at war. This powerful tribe in its expansion pushed its neighbors slowly away, and the pressure even affected the Sioux, who resisted valiantly but nevertheless retreated gradually in a southwestward direction, driving before them the Cheyenne and the Kiowa. In this manner they reached the Black Hills country, and here they settled.

The Dakota was not exactly a confederation, yet it was made up of seven council fires, consisting of eight divisions, each of which is well-known in history—and with good reason. From their first mention in the Jesuit Relations of 1640, the Sioux tribes have been liberally included in accounts of the country. Their efficient fighters, who feared nothing, swept across the plains like prairie fires, as brilliant and as destructive. They made "good copy" even in those days. The early historians also found much of interest to write about in the persons of the Sioux; for instance, Wanotan, a Yankton chief, was described in 1823 as being dressed in a splendid robe of whitened buffalo skins. He wore a necklace of grizzly bear claws, and his leggings, jacket, and moccasins were of white skins ornamented with human hair.

In later years, when the struggle against white supremacy reached its height, the movements of the Sioux tribes were a matter of intense interest.

The Teton, who had moved farthest west, were the principal division of the Dakota people. This great "tribe" was composed of seven others, of which the Hunkpapa, Minicoujou and Sishasapa were the last Sioux to go on reservations. These tribes even defied the "Great White Father," and insisted that they did not want gifts, but the right to go to war and take scalps, as they had always done. The Ogallala, another Teton tribe were the terror of the frontier.

It was said of the Teton tribes that they had "all the Indian virtues of bravery, cunning, treachery, and hospitality." They were foes to all but each other. These wild, independent people held their land against the whites as long as they could, and it is impossible not to admire them.

The Sioux uprising of 1862 shows plainly to what lengths these people would go. Little Crow and the Mdewakantons (who had come into more intimate contact with the whites than any other band) tried to wipe out the settlers in Minnesota, and 800 whites were killed in this war, in which several of the Sioux tribes participated. Some of the most horrible cruelties known to history were committed by the Indians at this time.

However, not all the Sioux were so malignant. It was a Yankton chief who warned the Minnesotans of the impending uprising, and saved hundreds of lives thereby.

When gold was discovered in the Black Hills the miners who crowded into Sioux territory precipitated a fierce outbreak. We cannot blame the Sioux for resenting the invasion of these uncouth and conscienceless men, but, for the good of the growing states, they had to be subdued. Almost the final battle of this period was Custer's famous "last stand" on the Little Bighorn, June 15, 1876, which has attained such a prominent place in the history of the West. Sitting Bull, Hunkpapa chief, was the medicine man of the Indians on this occasion.

The so-called Sioux uprising of 1890, during which Sitting Bull was killed, was the result of the "Ghost Dance" excitement. It is alleged that the Indian agents on the Sioux reservation were utterly incompetent, and the lack of promised rations, a serious matter for people accustomed to rove as they would to provide for themselves, was perhaps the underlying cause of the outbreak. Hunger and fear are very real sensations, and when in their trouble the Sioux heard that a revelation had been given, their excitement led to the outbreak.

This revelation from the God of the red men foretold a new dispensation, when the whites would be driven out, and the Indians would attain their former status. The songs and dances, which the prophet gave induced a hypnotic condition, and in these trances the Sioux became once more the magnificent lords of the land.

The awakening was harsh. Sitting Bull, whose strong personality had imbued his tribesmen and kept them in a fever of unrest, was dead, and Gen. Nelson A. Miles rode into the picture. His was also a strong personality, and he had trained troops at his back.

TWEED COAT AND BERET SETS FOR TRAVEL AND TOWN WEAR

NEVER has fancy pictured or genius devised a more practical and smart-looking outfit for the feminine globetrotter than the coat and beret set which is made of handsome matching tweed. Go motoring, go traveling by train, or aboard steamship or hiking along picturesque paths or dashing hither and thither about town, if you are asking "what to wear" so as to look swagger and well-groomed from morning to night, the answer is given in the coat-and-hat set which is here pictured.

The new tweeds of which this coat-and-beret ensemble and those of a similar type are fashioned are indescribably soft and agreeable to the touch, being of a spongy, porous weave which makes them delightfully wearable. Their color schemes are no small part of their glory. The tweed illustrated is in black, white and red.

The manner in which the colors are handled in the bright tweeds which are now so vogueish is most interesting. Usually there are three colors, one color being given predominance. In these combinations, brown effects are greatly stressed since fashion attaches such importance to brown both for spring and the summer season. Such alliances as brown with beige or white together with orange or navy are exploited. Tweeds of a green tone are highlighted also in late modes.

In the styling of the tweed travel coat, slenderizing lines are adhered to and the belt of self-tweed is seldom omitted. Often a jaunty capellet is added which is that shallow it drops just over the top of the sleeves. Adjustable scarf collars and rever necklines also individualize the tweed at the top of the group pictured. It is typical of that which is to be during the coming months. It is set back from the face via a bandeau in very sophisticated fashion. The white flower-like pompon at one side of the underbrim adds charm to the picture. A perfect hat, this, to top the black lace frock with which it is worn.

There's no doubt about the hats that are coming being the kind women love to wear. The demure maiden to the left in the picture seems to say in her self-complacent pose that she has found the very hat she wanted. We are sure that you will agree with her that the shapely leghorn which tops her curly coilure is exactly her type. Which good fortune, by the way, extends to all this season—that of being able to find millinery tuned to the features, the hair and the complexion of the individual.

We would call attention to the two velvet bows which weight this graceful leghorn brim down on one side. They carry an important message in that they emphasize a vogue which is outstanding this season—that of a Chic Outfit of Gay Tweed.

These tablets do not depress the heart. They do nothing but stop the pain. Every druggist has Bayer Aspirin in the pocket size, and in bottles. To save money, buy the genuine tablets by the hundred. Don't experiment with imitations.

Old Tanks Put to Use

At last a use has been found for part of the equipment around abandoned stamp mills and ore smelters, relics of boom days in the vicinity of Tombstone, Ariz. Farmers are buying the galvanized water storage tanks and converting them into water tanks for ranch use. The average nine tank may be made into two 5,000-gallon water tanks.

WOMEN SHOULD LEARN USES OF MAGNESIA

To women who suffer from nausea, or so-called "morning sickness," this is a blessing. Most nurses know it. It is advised by leading specialists:

Over a small quantity of finely cracked ice pour a teaspoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. Sip slowly until you are relieved. It ends sick stomach or inclination to vomit.

Its anti-acid properties make Phillips' Milk of Magnesia quick relief in heartburn, sour stomach, gas. Its mild laxative action assures regular bowel movement. Used as a mouth-wash it helps prevent tooth decay during expectancy.

Has Private Gas Well

Seeking relief from an average monthly gas bill of $300, J. C. Cerezo drilled a well in the rear of his group of apartments and electrical shop at Kansas City. He brought in a well gauged at approximately 100,000 cubic feet a day. Henceforth he expects to use his own gas in his buildings.

coats, which being made entirely of self-fabric are in a class all their own. To take the place of fur fashion looks to the silk scarf of lively color to wear about the neck. The smartest way is to tie it close up about the throat in ascot fashion, and even newer is the scarf tied in a sprightly butterfly bow.

As to gloves, footwear and hand-bag, these accessories are depended upon to accent the color scheme.

Comes an Era of Brims

Stands now the world of fashion at the threshold of an era of brims as graceful and as picturesque as fancy ever pictured. Summer afternoons will find the fair sex looking its loveliest in airy, dainty dresses topped by millinery of the flattering type pictured.

In the array of entrancing new models which are wide of brim, hats of sheer and lacy straws predominate. These are manipulated ingeniously, which leads to their fascination. Note the beguiling black lace straw model

Bilious, Tired, Felt Dull

LEROY, Mich.—"I have been troubled with constipation for a long time, not so much of late, thanks to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and the Pleasant Pellets. I feel they pulled me out of the rut. I was bilious, tired, nervous and felt dull, also suffered with sick-headaches now and then. I was advised to take the 'Golden Medical Discovery' as it would get the organs to functioning right, and it wasn't very long before I was in better condition than I had been for a long time. It is a fine tonic."—Mrs. Wilford Williams, R. 2. Sold by all druggists.

touch of velvet on the chapeau. Your milliner will tell you that velvet ribbon is a very smart trimming.

The black-and-white formula is carried out "to the queen's taste" in the final model of this enchanting millinery trio. It is a thin white hair body, its generously wide brim and crown elaborated with a floral patterning traced with delicate embroidery done with strands of silky black straw. There is a bandeau of white velvet ending in a flattering bow at one side.

Everywhere in the realm of hats there is rejoicing in that millinery is "real millinery," this season. Flowers, ribbons and feathers say that it is. The early spring fashions have come as a prologue to a flowery program which not only promises flowers on milady's chapeau, but adorable details are planned, such as trimming the neckline or the edge of a little shoulder cape with flowers to match those on the hat.

Chevrolet

has struck a popular new note in motor-car styling

Many factors have contributed to the remarkably widespread popularity of the new Chevrolet Six. But no feature has been more strikingly evident in the enthusiastic public reception of the car than its smart new style.

Fisher Body craftsmen, with their background of fine-car designing, have made this new Chevrolet an exceptionally attractive automobile.

The long hood, low-slung body lines, sweeping fenders and massive wire wheels strikingly suggest the car's fleetness and power. And the appeal of Chevrolet's beauty is made more pronounced by the fact that all models are available in a variety of color combinations.

Interiors, too, are unusual in every way. The upholstery is carefully tailored. Seats are roomy, deeply-cushioned and invitingly soft. And the tasteful interior fittings lend a final note of charm.

In fact, the new Chevrolet Six is such a thoroughly fine-looking automobile that it has become a very popular choice with every type of buyer. You find it not only the smart family car, but the smart personal car as well—a worthy companion to the expensive automobiles of the two- and three-car household.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

By WALTER TRUMBULL

Should you be in Miami beach in the morning and in the vicinity of a certain hotel, you might stand on a strip of green grass and whistle. Then, if you knew the proper window, you might look up and see, rising between sill and lowered shade, a most majestic forehead stretching well toward the back of the head. A stranger might at first suppose that this fine example of human architecture in the shape of a dome belonged to Charles Dana Gibson, but those acquainted with the locality instantly would know that it was the property of Walter Donaldson who just at present is the author of more popular song hits than any composer in the business. It was Mr. Donaldson who wrote "Making Whoopee," "My Blue Heaven," and "Little White Lies." The last mentioned, even I can hum with a fair amount of accuracy. I learned it from a young niece who visited me and played it on an average of fifteen hours a day.

Walter Donaldson is a peculiar type for a man in his business. His idea of personal publicity is to go around with all the noise and assertiveness of a shadow. If you corner him, he will answer questions in a quiet voice and may even be induced to tell you how he happened to write some of his songs. But he is happiest if you put him in a room with a piano and just let him sit and play to himself. There may be a noisy crowd in the room, but that doesn't disturb him. He just doesn't listen.

Critics make fun of novelists who lean too heavily upon the "long arm of coincidence," but I can tell you a true story, which any novelist would consider too improbable to use. Walter Donaldson and John Golden had never met. As you may know, John Golden was a song writer before he became a theatrical producer. That he was a successful song writer is evidenced by the fact that his total royalties from "Poor Butterfly" amounted to about $80,000. Gene Buck, Ray Hubbard and other mutual friends were determined that Donaldson and Golden should be brought together. A tournament of the Artists and Writers Golf association, held on Long Island, seemed to be an occasion on which the men could be brought together.

sons seemed to be in just as much of a hurry as Mr. Golden. Finally he managed to get out into the street with the crowd and then he sought earnestly for a taxicab. He hailed many, only to discover that they were occupied. At last he sighted an empty one, only to have somebody beat him to it by a couple of steps. He heard the fare tell the driver to go to the Park Central hotel. Without any more formality Mr. Golden pulled open the taxicab door and scrambled inside. "Hey, you!" exclaimed the first man in, "what's the big idea?" "Just a minute," said Mr. Golden. "I've tried my best to get a cab. I heard you tell the driver to go to the Park Central and I've got to get to my theater. Just a couple of blocks from there, in a hurry. I'm opening a play there tonight. If you will let me ride with you, I'll pay for the cab or pay my share of it, whichever you prefer."

"What's your name?" said the man. "John Golden." "Well," said the man, "you can ride. I've been hearing about you all day. I'm Walter Donaldson." Mr. Donaldson had gone to the golf tournament, won it, and then come in to see the fight. Out of a crowd of 30,000 persons, these two had picked the same cab. And critics talk about coincidence.

It seems as though the longer it takes us to express our opinion of them. Guess that's human nature.

To Rush Work on Federal Building

New York.—To expedite building projects of the federal government and thus help to relieve unemployment, the Treasury department has recently placed construction work totaling $130,000,000 in the hands of private architects throughout the country and will soon add projects costing $200,000,000 to this total, according to Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Heath in a statement made in the American Architect.

utilize private architects. Heretofore practically all of this work has been done by the office of the government's supervising architect, which will continue to provide plans for projects less than $500,000 and the smaller standard jobs and to supervise all construction.

constructed can be adopted to such projects, thereby saving much time in the preparation of drawings and specifications. For this reason projects of this character are generally handled in the office of the supervising architect. Also, experience has shown that the plans for extension and remodeling projects can be handled more expeditiously in that office, all data relating to the existing buildings being on file there.

THE DULL CHILD

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK, Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I have been put into circumstances at one time or another when I was forced to tell parents some very disagreeable, not to say tragic, things over a period of years. I have had to do with stealing and forgery and suicide and accidental drowning, and drunkenness and lesser and so more frequent irregularities, and I have had to be the first one to communicate these things to the parents of the young people concerned. I may have shrunk back from the unpleasant and difficult task, but if so it was but for a moment; I have braced up and broken the news in as frank, direct and sympathetic way as I could devise. The situation which I have disliked the most was when such a communication had to be made over the telephone. Telephones were never intended for the transmission of such personal messages.

The one thing which I have not yet found a satisfactory way of saying to a parent is that his child is stupid—is in fact not mentally capable of doing the work which he has undertaken to do. I can announce frankly that the boy is lazy, indifferent, unwilling to work; I can say that he has bad habits and go into detail as to what these habits are; that he has done this or that which is contrary to law and good morals, but I have not yet developed the courage to say that the child is incapable.

Fortunately such cases are rare, but they do exist. In most instances the hopelessly dull child drops out of school before he finishes high school. He shows an inclination to do manual rather than intellectual work, and his parents yield to the pressure which he applies to give up school. But there are cases where pride and ambition blind the parents' eyes, where possibly influence keeps the child in school, and finally forces him into college, for the work of which he shows neither interest nor ability. It is very hard to convince parents under such circumstances that there is not some thing radically wrong with college else their son would be making more rapid advancement.

The DAIRY

CLEANLINESS IS OF IMPORTANCE

Quality of Product Determined by Handling.

A large amount of poor cream on the market could be avoided if more care was exercised in its production and handling. Milk as it comes from the cow is clean but it always picks up a few bacteria. The way in which the dairy man handles this milk from the time it is taken out of the dairy barn until it is delivered to the consumer determines the quality of the cream. Cleanliness should begin with the barn and the cows. A clean, properly drained yard, and a clean barn, from which the manure is removed daily, will do a great deal toward producing quality milk and cream. Clip the cows' flanks and udders and keep them clean. Remove milk from pails immediately after milking each cow and do not allow it to stand until milking is completed. Keep the can covered tightly. Milk with clean dry hands and use a small crock or covered pail in order to avoid off-flavor, seed, hay, dirt and disease after milking. If your pasture contains onions, garlic or ragweeds, it is better to take the cows out about six hours before milking them.

One of the very important things is to keep cream cool. Cool warm cream before adding it to the supply can. Sell the cream often. Lastly, sterilize all utensils with clean boiling water or a chemical disinfectant. It is a mistake to expect chemical disinfectants to completely sterilize in a few minutes milk or cream containers which have not been properly scrubbed. A stiff brush is very effective in washing utensils.

Home Grinding of Feed Versus Custom Grinding

In many sections of the country farmers are purchasing their own grinding outfits and are no longer hauling grain to the grist mill and then back home, according to time immemorial custom. It has been stated that a good cow will eat an average of 2,000 pounds of grain per year. Perhaps half of this will be bran, oilcake, gluten, etc.—material that does not require grinding. The amount of home-ground feed to grind for a 10-cow dairy, therefore, would be about 10,000 pounds yearly. Add 30 per cent for young stock, etc., and the farm requirement for grinding would be 13,000 pounds of grain yearly. With a five-horse power motor the time required for this grinding would be 20 minutes each week; for a 20-cow farm, 40 minutes weekly, and so on up the line. It would seem, therefore, that the time saved by home grinding would be an important item, especially when we consider that, with proper arrangements, the grinding could be done while the operator goes on with other chores. The cost of grinding at the custom mill is usually 10 cents per hundredweight, or $13 for a 10-cow farm and other sizes in proportion.

Eliminate All Reactors to Save Valuable Stock

No dairy farmer can afford to keep a herd infected with Bang disease (contagious abortion) and stand the loss in milk production, the loss of calves and have the other troubles which accompany the disease, states Dr. Robert Graham, University of Illinois veterinarian. There are veterinarians everywhere who are qualified to make necessary tests to weed out infected cows and determine whether the disease is prevalent in a herd. The diseased animals should be eliminated and sanitary practices used to prevent a recurrence, he points out.

Dairy Hints

Steel stanchions and stalls have proved themselves more economical than those of wooden construction. They are easier to keep sanitary and are far more durable.

While cream separators, to outside appearances, look the same as those of a few years ago, marked advances have been made in assuring easier running qualities and cleaner skimming under farm conditions.

Do not reduce grain feed for cows in the flush of production, even though prices paid for milk may be lower. It is better to weed out the poor cows in the herd and continue to feed the good ones up to production capacity. This practice reduces milk costs.

Subjecting for five minutes to temperature of 200 degrees or more will do a very good job of sterilizing milk equipment.

Feeding utensils must be kept very clean and sunning daily helps in keeping the calf well. Watch carefully for lice on calves.

Efficient dairy cows will return a profit on grain fed even when the pasture is good. A small quantity of summer grain keeps up the milk flow and bulks up the cow for winter.

WOMEN: watch your BOWELS

What should women do to keep their bowels moving freely? A doctor should know the answer. That is why pure Syrup Pepsin is so good for women. It just suits their delicate organism. It is the prescription of an old family doctor who has treated thousands of women patients, and who made a special study of bowel troubles.

It is fine for children, too. They love its taste. Let them have it every time their tongues are coated or their skin is sallow. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is made from fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients. When you're a sick headache, can't eat, are bilious or sluggish; and at the times when you are most apt to be constipated, take a little of this famous prescription (all drug stores keep it ready in big bottles), and you'll know why Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the favorite laxative of over a million women!

All entrants in the second year shorthand events were disqualified, the copy being so difficult that no one was able to transcribe with less than ten per cent of error.

COUNTY NORMAL

The class expects Mable Earhart back Monday after an absence of several weeks.

The Normal classes were guests at the Central State Teachers College at Mt. Pleasant last Thursday and Friday. Everyone reported a good time. There were thirty-one county normals from Michigan present, with a total enrollment of 724.

Thursday afternoon regular classes were observed by the visitors. In the evening the music department presented the opera, "The Pirates of Penzance," for our entertainment.

Friday morning was taken up by demonstration classes of the various grades. We attended regular assembly just before noon on Friday and heard an excellent lecture on "The Meaning of Life." Friday afternoon tea was served by several student classes. A lecture by Miss Wofford of South Carolina stressed the importance of rural education.

In the evening the guests were given a complimentary banquet. The evening was spent at the auditorium, everyone enjoying the play, "A Day in the Rural School," given by the rural education department. We arrived back in town Saturday afternoon, tired but happy.

Nearly everyone has finished his practice teaching now.

The boys have organized their baseball team. They "brought home the bacon" in their first game, defeating the East Tawas high school, 3 to 1.

The Normal class assisted Miss Worden during the county achievement day, held at the Community House on Wednesday.

In the special period the class is studying Michigan birds. Each must be able to identify at least fifty birds by their calls and songs, also their color.

FORD BRAKES ARE UNUSUALLY EFFECTIVE

Reliability and safety due to simple design and careful construction

ONE OF the first things you will notice when you drive the Ford is the quick, effective action of its four-wheel brakes.

They are unusually safe and reliable because they are mechanical, internal expanding, with all braking surfaces fully enclosed. This prevents mud, water, sand, etc., from getting between the band and drum and interfering with brake action.

Other outstanding features of the Ford are the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield, four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers, aluminum pistons, torque-tube drive, more than twenty ball and roller bearings, Rustless Steel, reliability, economy, and long life.

You save when you buy the Ford and you save every mile you drive.
