CARRIERS MET AT HALE FRIDAY EVENING

The annual meeting of the North-Eastern Michigan Rural Letter Carriers Association was held at Hale Friday evening, May 22, with a fine representation of carriers and their wives present.

The banquet, held in the Masonic Temple at 6:30 p. m., was served by the Hale O. E. S., after which a fine program was given, interspersed with many jokes by Postmaster R. D. Brown, acting as toastmaster, all of which were greatly enjoyed by those present.

The program consisted of several selections by the orchestra, a piano solo by Laura Johnson, short talks by the two Hale R. F. D. carriers, John D. Webb and the association president, John H. Johnson, and a reading by Mrs. Johnson.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Hoyt of Bellevue, Michigan, were guests of the meeting and responded to Toastmaster Brown's introduction with splendid addresses. Mr. Hoyt is secretary of the State R. L. C. A., and Mrs. Hoyt is president of the State Ladies Auxiliary.

At the close of the banquet, business sessions were held by both organizations and officers elected for the following year.

The R. L. C. A. officers are: President, Carol Martin, West Branch; vice-president, Frank Hayes, West Branch; secretary, Archie Colby, Tawas City; treasurer, Arthur Johnson, Whittemore. Delegates to state meeting were: Martin of West Branch and Harris of Roscommon.

The Ladies Auxiliary officers are: President, Mrs. C. Martin, West Branch; 1st vice-president, Mrs. Seth Thompson, Whittemore; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. Chas. Beardslee, Tawas City; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Wm. Church, Rose City; delegates to state meeting, Mrs. Martin of West Branch and Mrs. Johnson of Hale.

The next meeting of the association will be held in Mio in July.

ASK FOR BIDS TO CONSTRUCT PAVEMENT IN EAST TAWAS

Bids have been asked by the State Highway Department for the construction of 1.136 miles of concrete pavement in East Tawas, that portion of the Shore road which goes through the city.

Work on Isosco county's portion of the Huron Shore road assumed major proportions Tuesday when the contractors, Pickett & Goodwin, placed a large amount of road building machinery in operation. Grading began at Matthew street, Tawas City, extending to the new bridge at the mouth of Tawas river. Where the Tawas river in a bend approaches the new road near the Trudell Fisheries, the stream was straightened to give the proper width of road bed for the pavement.

Plans for expediting securing of the balance of the right of way for the new concrete Huron Shore Highway south of Alpena, much of it along the route of the present South Shore road to Ossineke, have been made. The fifteen mile concrete highway project from Alpena to Roe's corners means the expenditure of approximately $350,000 to $400,000 for labor and materials in that immediate area during the coming summer. The building program is in three parts: one from Alpena to Bay View Beach on the South Shore, a second from Bay View Beach to a point just south of Ossineke, and a third from that point to Roe's corners, where the new road will join the present U. S. 23.

Poor Little Wild Flowers

MRS. L. COLBY

Another pioneer of Isosco county answered the last call Tuesday evening of this week when Laura A. Colby, wife of L. Colby, passed away at the family home in this city, at the advanced age of 83 years, seven months and 18 days.

She had been in failing health for several months, at the home of her son, Elmer, in Flint, but returned to her own home six weeks ago where she gradually failed until she peacefully fell asleep in death.

Laura A. Haskill was born in New York state November 8, 1847, the daughter of Warren and Margaret (Jones) Haskill. While still a small child she came to Michigan with her parents, living for a time in Jackson county and at Plymouth, and in 1865 her parents took up a homestead in Tawas township.

Mrs. Colby took up teaching as her vocation in life, and taught successfully in Chesaning, Oakley, Plymouth, Leroy and Williamston, as well as many schools in Isosco county, among them being the Laidlawville, Grant, Townline and Vine schools. Many of the substantial older residents of this community owe to her their first school training.

While teaching the Vine school, she married, on March 16, 1884, Lafayette Colby, and they hewed out of the wilderness a farm in Tawas township where for 24 years they made their home. Here their three sons, Zenas E., now of Saginaw, Archie of this city, and Elmer of Flint, were born. Twenty-three years ago they came to Tawas City where they have maintained their home ever since, though for several years their winters were spent with their son, Elmer, in Flint.

Beside the aged husband and three sons, there are left to mourn her passing, seven grandsons and one granddaughter, a brother, Henry Haskill of Webberville, and a sister, Mrs. Mary Oliver of California, also survive.

Funeral services will be held this (Friday) afternoon at 3:15 at the Baptist church, Rev. Frank Metcalf officiating. Burial will be in the family lot in the Tawas City cemetery.

NEWSPAPER TALKIE HAS STRONG APPEAL TO WOMEN

During the long run of the piece as a Broadway stage hit, it was discovered that women are among the first to applaud "The Front Page," that fast-moving newspaper thriller which comes to the State Theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

"The Front Page," originally written for the stage by those "badboys" of Chicago newspaperdom, Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur has been brought to the screen by Howard Hughes, of "Hell's Angels" fame, and Lewis Milestone, director of "All Quiet on the Western Front." It is realistic to a degree, and reveals the fascinating human interest side of newspaper life, and the dramatic exploits of reporters, who stop at nothing in their loyalties to their papers.

An unconventional love-story is woven into this dramatic tale of backstage newspapering. When Hildy Johnson, a star reporter, desperately in love with a girl, tries to quit the newsgathering "racket" so he can turn "respectable" and settle down, and his managing editor refuses to let him because he is too valuable a reporter, you have situations which appeal to every real human instinct. Torn between sympathy for the girl's impatience with Hildy, and admiration for Hildy's newspaper loyalty, women in the audience have a fine emotional time.

WILL OBSERVE MEMORIAL DAY

A fine program has been arranged by Jesse C. Hodder, Post, American Legion, for Memorial Day exercises at the Tawas City cemetery. Rev. Frank Metcalf of the Tawas City Baptist church will be speaker. The following program will be given:

Réveille at 7:00. Assembly at billet at 9:00. March to cemetery. Exercises by school pupils. Address by Rev. Frank Metcalf. Roll call. Military memorial rites. Salute by firing squad. Taps. Decoration of graves.

A meeting will be held this evening (Friday) at the billet for the purpose of making wreaths. Legion members, their wives and all others interested in the making of these wreaths are requested to be present.

Audie Johnson Post No. 211, American Legion, of East Tawas, will hold Memorial Day services at the cemetery at 9:30 slow time. Legion members will meet at post headquarters and will leave the hall at 9:00 o'clock slow time.

COWAN BUYS BASS LAKE

Arthur F. Cowan has purchased 240 acres of land containing the beautiful Bass Lake, centrally located and surrounded with lovely pine shade. The bathing beach circles the lake with a wide stretch of white sand. This property is located two and one-half miles from Hale and five miles from the AuSable river.

Mr. Cowan will develop this property, realizing the future need of the tourist, and plans an aviation field, etc. A free camping ground with boats and bath houses will be ready this season.

The lake has excellent bass fishing, and a hearty invitation is extended the public to make this their recreation grounds.

Mr. Cowan has been very successful in the development on Sand Lake since 1924, having built the rustic hotel and caring for the tourist both at camp grounds and hotel. He has a wide circle of friends who predict success in his new location.

INTEREST GROWING IN EVANGELISTIC CAMPAIGN

The evangelistic campaign now in progress at the Baptist church is growing in interest and attendance daily. Every afternoon at 3:30 Evangelist Harry Beckman conducts a booster meeting for boys and girls. At 7:30 p. m., a happy half hour for young people, followed by the evangelistic service.

The cartooning is proving a big feature in the campaign. The evangelist makes quick sketches on his cartoon board while a song is being sung.

The subject for Friday night is "The Man Who Was Afraid of His Wife." Saturday is "Precious Promise Night." On Sunday night the entire service will center around "The Old Rugged Cross," with a cartoon, solo and message symphonizing together. Monday is designated as special music night.

CARL F. KRUEGER

Carl F. Krueger, 88 years and one day of age, died Wednesday, May 27, at the home of his son, Carl Krueger in Wilber. Old age was the cause of death.

The deceased was born May 26, 1843, in Germany. In 1869 he was united in marriage to Bertha Look. To this union five children were born, two boys dying in infancy. The family came to the United States in 1892 and first located in Ogemaw county at Prescott. Two years later they moved to Tawas City and resided here since. His wife died in 1910.

Surviving him are, three children, Carl Krueger of Wilber, Mrs. Ida Steinhart and Mrs. Bertha Felske of Omer.

Funeral services will be held Sunday afternoon from the Emanuel Lutheran church at 2:15 o'clock. Rev. W. C. Voss will officiate.

MISS EVELYN JOHNSON

Miss Evelyn Johnson, daughter of Fred Johnson of Pontiac, died Monday, May 25, at the age of 19 years. Miss Johnson was born in Alpena on January 3, 1912. She has made her home with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Johnson, since the death of her mother 18 years ago. She attended the East Tawas school.

The funeral will be held on Friday (today), with burial in Greenwood cemetery. Rev. W. C. Voss of Tawas City will officiate.

Those who have come to attend the funeral are, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Johnson of Detroit, J. W. Johnson of Pontiac.

NORMA SHEARER FEATURED IN "STRANGERS MAY KISS"

Clever Norma Shearer is here in "Strangers May Kiss," at the Family Theatre Sunday and Monday, May 31 and June 1.

This is Norma's first picture since she became a mother, and it's her finest picture to date. That's going some, as "The Divorcee" won many of the honors that were floating around last year, but Ursula Parrott develops her characters more logically and Norma's work in some scenes is superb. Rarely has one been as gorgeous as our Norma while treading the primrose path.

An extremely modern girl refuses marriage, because her knowledge of married life has been false and disappointing. After giving her favors without benefit of clergy, she learns she has cheapened the thing she most prized. After much suffering, both she and her lover grasp the deeper significance of the marriage vow. Sounds trite, but Director Fitzmaurice keeps it absorbingly entertaining throughout.

A splendid supporting cast, in which Neil Hamilton and Robert Montgomery share equal honors. Montgomery wins much sympathy and Hamilton gains new laurels. Irene Rich appears in only one sequence, and cannot be forgotten throughout the picture. Marjorie Rameau is charming.

The picture is bound to please. See it sure.

NOTICE

The Board of Review of Tawas Township will meet at the Township Hall, on Tuesday, June 2nd; also on Monday and Tuesday, June 8th and 9th.

Ferd. Schmalz, Supervisor.

LOSES TO FAST BAY CITY TEAM SCORE 5 TO 9

Tawas City met with no success Sunday in its engagement with the D. & M. team, a fast aggregation from Bay City, and was forced to content with the small end of a 9 to 5 score. A wet diamond slowed up the game considerably. The contest was called at the end of the eighth due to rain.

Twirling for the local team was divided between Zink and Brown. Neither was able to any great extent to stay the bats of the Bay City boys, who nicked them for thirteen safeties. Emmie, the visitors' pitcher, retired 11 men by the strike-out route, and went the entire game easily. Although the locals gathered 11 hits off him, they were spread out in such a manner that they meant the least number of runs. Lack of timely hitting was the greatest factor in the locals' defeat.

Sunday, May 31, will see East Tawas and Tawas City again cross bats. Nothing less than a hard battle is expected, with interest at a high pitch throughout. In the past these teams have put up some real games, and contests between them this year should be no exception. Admission 25c.

The school at Hale opens Monday, June 1, and will meet for six consecutive afternoons, from 1:30 to 4:00 Eastern Standard time, closing with an achievement program Sunday evening, June 7.

The children will meet at the Greenwood school from 2:00 to 4:30 Eastern Standard time for five days a week for two weeks, beginning June 1st.

The daily program for these schools includes stories, songs, games, Bible and missionary studies and interesting hand work. Children everywhere are enthusiastic about attending. Parents are asked to cooperate by making it possible for their boys and girls to come. All children of school age are welcome. Further announcements of the opening of other schools will be made next week.

MCLAGLEN FILM OPENS AT FAMILY THEATRE TODAY

Opening of the Indian lands in the Dakotas for settlement by the whites is the epochal highlight of the Fox Movietone production, "Not Exactly Gentlemen," which features Victor McLaglen and Fay Wray and directed by Benjamin Stoloff, opening today at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, for two days.

"Not Exactly Gentlemen" is based on one of the most romantic periods in American history, that following soon after the Civil War and it is likewise a gripping story of the struggle of two youthful lovers, played by Fay Wray and David Worth, for land.

Historically accurate portraits of three bad hombres of that period are played by Victor McLaglen, Lew Cody and Eddie Gribbon.

Loveable outlaws they might well be called for though they are killers with a price on their heads, they prove to be the guides and protectors of the youthful lovers.

Incidentally they actually fight their way through the picture and for those who love real human action, the view of McLaglen battling a dozen in a gambling saloon to rescue the girl, is a treat for tired eyes.

INDIAN BURIAL GROUND
(After Painting by Capt. S. Eastman)

THE little town of Ignacio, on the Ute reservation in southern Colorado, is astir. It is May 24, the anniversary of the burial of Ouray. Beneath a simple cement headstone, made by the hands of the Indians themselves, lies their last great chief. Ever since his body was removed to this grave in 1925, Utes from all the bands in Colorado and Utah have gathered yearly to honor him with memorial rites.

It is hard to tell whether this is a custom patterned after the white man's Memorial day or not. It is true that only six days later, we who read these lines will pay tribute to our dead. There will be parades and speeches, and flowers and flags will deck the resting places of our soldier and sailor departed, while elsewhere in the cemeteries wreaths and bouquets will symbolize our tender recollections of kinfolk and close friends.

There are few communities in our country which have no sort of services. On this day, from coast to coast, the American people give special thought to those who have entered upon the Great Adventure. But if the ghosts of those other folk who lived here before us look back and see us, they understand what we are doing, for once, long ago, the red-skinned people held their day of remembrance, too. It was not always on the same date, across all the country. Sometimes it was twice a year; sometimes many years elapsed between the days set apart for the dead, according to the tribes which observed the custom. But none the less the Indians before us, in their own way, was sometimes very much like ours, honored their beloved dead.

The Pueblos call them "Those-who-have-gone-before." To their minds the next world is very much like this, but the departed are closer to those Above, and may intercede for the living. They come back, also, not in the luminous robes and with the trumpets and slates of seance-spirits, but in the persons of certain living tribesmen who, when they have donned the grotesque masks of their ancestor-worship rites, seem to acquire something of the power of those whom they are representing. They come back, also, in the quiet hours when their children are immersed in thought, and give advice and counsel.

It is only fitting, then, that the Hopi should hold ceremonies in their honor, when their representations walk through the villages and hear the supplications of their living children. It is a queer sort of Memorial day, true, but it is conducted with real reverence and love, and who can ask more? What a beautiful faith this is, which does not admit of death separating the living and the dead, and which holds these symbolic "family reunions" in token of that faith.

Even with this belief, however, it is impossible for loving hearts not to grieve at the loss of dear ones. Thus we hear Hopi wailing on the anniversary of a death, and if there has been an epidemic which took a number of the tribe, an official anniversary is fixed, and observed with sorrow year after year.

So, too, the New Fire ceremony sees the Zunil matron, dressed as if to meet beloved friends, weeping softly to herself as she casts food into the fire on her hearth. This food is for the ancestors and for those who died in the past year, but if we could see into her heart we would surely find some beloved one enshrined there, of whom she thinks especially as she makes her offering.

The first anniversary of a death was the one most widely observed. Then the widow could put off her mourning, and the bereaved family could take up every-day life again. The official time of sorrow was passed at the end of this year. But who, be he Indian or white, can say to the mourner, "Do not weep longer; do not grieve further"? The sorrow of death makes a lasting impression on the heart, which cannot be erased at the end of a year.

Anniversaries come as naturally as the seasons themselves. Fall comes, and those who are left behind remember that at the Green Corn feasts their loved ones were merry. Thus, the Tunica guardians of the cemeteries reminded those who had corn and beans that the time had come to offer them, and the people gladly gathered parts of their harvest and placed them on the graves.

If, as the Indians believed, the next world is so much like this, why should not the departed spirits return on these anniversaries to partake of the spiritual essence of the food and mingle a little while with those beloved ones who had not yet joined them? Pere Sebastian Rasles, who wrote an account of the Illinois tribe long ago, spoke of their holding dances that were "a token of their sadness at the death of the most important men of their tribe. It is by these dances that they profess to honor the deceased, and to wipe away the tears of his relatives." During these dances, it was thought, the spirits of the departed ones came and danced also, enjoying themselves as they had once done in the flesh.

Here we find again the great unlikeness of thought between white man and Indian. Standing between the graves, placing flowers on them, listening to the prayers and speeches which seek to recall the dead to us, we would shudder at the idea that they stood by us, admiring the flowers and hearing with appreciation their eulogies! Yet the Illiniwak found only pleasure in this thought, as if some dearly-loved ones had returned from a journey to be among them, and the fact that they were invisible did not make them fearsome or less welcome to the feast in their honor.

Indian burial mounds were not forgotten by their tribesmen, even though they moved far from the place where their people were interred. No less a person than Thomas Jefferson, speaking of a mound near Monticello, related that "a party passing, about thirty years ago, through the part of the country where this barrow is, went through the woods directly to it, without any instructions or inquiry, and having staid about it some time, with expressions which were construed to be those of sorrow, they returned to the high road."

The Oneida often visited a mound near Richfield Springs, N. Y., saying that it was the burial place of one of their chief men. The old chroniclers omitted to state whether these visits were performed with any memorial ceremonies, but judging from what we have learned of other tribes, we believe that there must have been something of the sort.

A strange Sioux memorial custom was that of "keeping the ghost." A lock of hair from the head of the deceased person was made into a roll with cloth and various articles of value. This was kept for a year or so, and other presents collected, when the friends of the dead person assembled to hold ceremonies. At this time the gifts, together with small pieces of the lock of hair, were distributed. This ceremony was sometimes repeated.

Another memorial observance which corresponds slightly to our custom of erecting headstones over the dead, was that described by Adair as follows: "To perpetuate the memory of any remarkable warriors killed in the woods, I must here observe that every Indian traveler as he passes that way throws a stone on the place. . . . In the woods we often see innumerable heaps of small stones in those places, where, according to tradition, some of their disgruntled people were either killed or buried." Each heap is increased, he goes on to say, as a lasting monument in their honor.

No discussion of Indian memorial observances would be complete without a description of the strange custom of the Assiniboin, Mandan, and some other tribes:

These people did not inter their dead, but placed them on scaffolds or in trees. In time the bones of the deceased were all that was left, and these, perhaps, fell on the ground as the scaffolds or platforms, weather-beaten and old, gave way. The relatives gathered and buried the bones, all but the skulls, and these they placed "in a circle in the plain," says Father De Smet, speaking of the Assiniboin, "with the faces turned toward the center. They preserve these with care. . . . The Indians call the cemetery the village of the dead. They visit it at certain seasons of the year, to converse affectionately with their deceased relatives and friends."

Many travelers of the early days have observed and commented on these circles of skulls, and we are given pictures of them in many of the old volumes. It is only natural that such a strange custom should be misunderstood. Some of those early observers did not realize what real affection prompted the preservation of these relics of the dead, and hence we read the scornful note that "several skulls were kicking about on the ground."

Catlin observed this same custom among the Mandan, and goes on to tell us that each skull was placed on a bunch of wild sage, which was renewed as often as necessary. "There is scarcely an hour in a pleasant day, but more or less of these women may be seen sitting or laying by the skull of their child or husband, talking to it in the most pleasant and endearing language that they can use (as they were wont to do in former days) and seemingly getting an answer back."

This custom may seem a revolting one to us, but to the Indians it was a natural and common observance. Indeed, to the white men who knew these people well, their strange ideas grew less fantastic, and Catlin remarked, as he noted the Mandan women "visiting" with the skulls of their loved ones, "There is something exceedingly interesting and impressive in these scenes." Indeed, they recall to us the famous vault under the Capuchin convent, where the bones of monks who have died are used to make patterns on the walls, and the skulls stand in rows. Travelers have remarked that the monks who showed them these strange designs appeared to know many of the skulls, and could relate their names and something of their histories. It was noteworthy, also, that they had no horror of the grim vault, but looked forward serenely to their own time of departing, when their skulls also would help to decorate the walls, and some later brother of the order would name them and tell their stories.

So it is with the Indians. Not all of them, of course, regarded death without dread, but surely those of whom we have been reading did not recoil at the unavoidable step. True to their beliefs, they went out bravely. The "Happy Hunting Grounds" of the Plains people beckoned; the Underworld of the Pueblos waited for their return. And they believed with firm conviction that they would know about the memorial ceremonies, and be able to share, with the beloved living, in the rites.

Whether we agree with them or not, it was a pleasant sort of faith. And although our own beliefs have gone in a far different direction from theirs, sometimes, still we unite once a year to recall the virtues and to honor the memories of Those-who-have-gone-before.

TALES... of the TRIBES

By EDITHA L. WATSON

The Acoma

Breathing a prayer to Santiago, patron saint of Spain, the four Spaniards leaped from the rocky mesa to the valley, 357 feet below.

Acoma.

It was late in the sixteenth century. The mesa was the site of the rock city of Acoma, and the four Spaniards were all who remained of Juan de Zaldivar's troop of 30 soldiers.

The trouble began with the coming of the white men, in 1540. Alvarado, a leader under Coronado, was the first to set eyes on the sky-city, even then a strongly held place, almost inaccessible to any but the sure footed natives.

Espejo visited the pueblo in 1583, and Onate in 1598. It is evident from what transpired after this visit, that the high handed Spaniards had conducted themselves with their usual intolerance, and the people of the rock decided to endure no more from their rude visitors.

The winter after Onate's visit, Zaldivar and his men came to the pueblo, and the Acoma, who had made their plans, greeted their visitors with apparent friendliness. Lulled into false security, the Spaniards became separated into groups, when suddenly their hostile hosts fell upon them with the intent to kill them all.

All but the four who made the dangerous leap were killed; one of these landed on the rocks below and died, but the remaining three fell in the sand, and made their way to the Spanish camp in the valley, where fear of their horses (which the Indians believed were man-eating beasts) kept the enraged Acoma from pursuing them.

Zaldivar's brother Vicente decided that the death of Juan should not go unavenged. Hence, only a month after the Acoma had driven their enemies from the rock, they found 700 more Spaniards at its foot, determined to wash out the memory of that previous battle with Indian blood. A desperate fight ensued which lasted three days, and the Spaniards succeeded in killing about half of the tribe, and partly burned the pueblo.

This marked the subjection of the sky-city people, beaten and diminished in numbers because they had resented the invasion of the white strangers. They knew in their hearts that they had done no wrong in defending their city, yet their bravery had been unrewarded—they were vanquished, and the conqueror ruled them with a mallet fist.

Thirty years later, a priest, Fray Juan Ramirez, came alone to bring the Christian faith to the sullen, hopeless Indians. It is said that they were unkind in their reception of the brave Spaniard. In fact, legend relates that they threw him from the rock, but that, like the soldiers of Zaldivar's army, he was miraculously preserved, and returned to them unresentful and gentle as ever. His patience and cheerful disposition, so like their own former selves and so unlike the grim conquerors, finally prevailed over them. Under his guidance they even built a church, and for 20 years Fray Juan taught them, as best he could, that all white men were not hostile to them, and that One had died for them as for their conquerors.

Came the year 1680 of the great Pueblo rebellion, Fray Juan had left them long before, and his successors had not possessed the key to their hearts. The Acoma struck with the other tribes, killed the missionary and razed the church. But this rebellion, too, was put down, and Acoma, after 19 years of revolt, surrendered forever.

They built another church, then, the same that crowns the rock at this day. The great timbers were carried more than 20 miles, and adobe was hauled laboriously up the steep mesa to make this wonderful building. What was in their hearts as they toiled, we wonder? Perhaps they worked with tongue in cheek, believing (as every tribe has believed) that the day of liberation, no matter how long delayed, would dawn at length. Perhaps, instead, they had bowed to what seemed inevitable, and were trying to make the best of it. It is certain that none among them ever dreamed of the tourists who drive out to see them, and the aviators who fly (perhaps not unlike their mythic thunderbird) above their heads.

The Acoma are changed, today—there is no more need of war, and they are a peaceable and friendly folk. Yet the visitor who knows their story may feel that he is treading on ground once reddened with Spanish blood as well as Indian, and that an interesting chapter of southwestern history has been written on the rock mesa of Acoma.

In most Indian tribes, the name of a dead man was not spoken for some time after his death, and if necessary to say it, it was changed slightly.

The Choctaw believed that a tribe west of them had blue lips. If a person tried to kill one of these people he became insane.

Science to Determine Human Character

Atlanta, Ga.—Intelligence tests are based upon unestablished theories, but in the examination of human physiognomy specialists finally will be able to ascertain the mental and moral characteristics of all human beings, Gov. L. G. Hardman of Georgia believes.

So convinced is he that a study of physiognomy, particularly of finger prints, will result in the definite determination of character and criminal tendencies that he has recommended legislation and the establishment of a special chair at the state university to study the subject.

For several years he has carried on correspondence and read reports dealing with his theory, and in that time has written scientists of Great Britain, France, Italy, and German for their viewpoints.

Now the governor believes his theory has been proven correct. "I have had the finger prints of ten patients at the state insane asylum sent to an Ohio expert," he said. "The reports definitely establish that there is a relation between the prints and the criminal or insane characteristics of the patients."

"There must be definite relation between the loops and whorls of a person's fingertips and the corresponding cells of his brain, which are connected with his fingers over a nervous system."

Physicians, or alienists, allow their own feelings to influence pronouncements of mentality, according to the governor, but physiological records, once acquired under the law which he desires, would be for authentic use whenever the individual examined came into later contact with the law.

As an example of inaccuracy in describing character, the governor declared that citizens from a Georgia county gave positive and reliable testimony that a certain man could not have committed a series of criminal attacks in Atlanta. Yet four women positively identified him as their attacker, and it was necessary to allow the electric chair to take its victim. The man had already been convicted.

"An examination of his physical characteristics by one who knew how to interpret would prevent any doubt about his possession or lack of criminal tendencies," Governor Hardman said.

Resourcefulness

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

"Necessity is the mother of invention," the old proverb says, and I suspect there is truth in the statement. I have myself invented a device which no one before me seems to have thought of because perhaps no one has before been quite in the same physical situation that I am in. I was in a hole out of which I needed to extract myself and hence the device. But often I am not so successful; the need arises but the way to meet it does not readily occur to my mind.

I ran onto the statement not long ago: "Some people would grow poor on a mountain of gold, while others would make a good living on a rock." Evans was really a very bright boy. Whatever was assigned to him to do he did well—far better than the average in fact—but he did not know how to get a job. He had been in college two years when his father came to see me.

"I don't know what's the matter with George," he said. "He's a good worker and he is willing to work, but so far he has not gotten hold of anything. He doesn't seem to know how to sell himself."

And yet George was familiar with the town and with the conditions of living. He knew where there were jobs and yet he did not seem to have an idea of how to get one. I got him into a place and the man for whom he is working says he never has had a more faithful or a more efficient man.

Now it was quite different with Quin. Quin was a thousand miles from home. He had never before been within the limits of a college town. He was an Irishman, as his name suggests, fluent speech, quick to see an opening, and ready to meet an emergency. He hadn't been in town a half hour before he had a job, and he had it even before he presented the letter of introduction to me from Fowler asking me to help the boy.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS—By John Hix

Expect Big Results From Wilkins' Trip

Paris.—Scientific data of the highest value in the forecasting of world weather conditions may be expected as a result of the submarine polar expedition of Sir Hubert Wilkins and his Nautilus party.

Such is the view held by General Delcambre, chief of the French national weather office.

The general is particularly interested in that phase of Sir Hubert's studies which will have to do with meteorological and magnetic conditions. He said: "First of all, let me say that in undertaking this enterprise Sir Hubert Wilkins shows himself genuinely ambitious. From the meteorological standpoint, it is unquestionable that his daily observations will be of the greatest value.

"Let us think of the polar regions, both North and South. It is there that are born and developed atmospheric phenomena that are absolutely unknown and the knowledge of which would be most precious.

"All geophysicists of the different nations are working to establish the program and organization of a polar and equatorial year to be realized in 1931-33 through a series of observations which, it is hoped, should make us better acquainted with these regions so fundamental in the realm of geo-physics.

"The daily observations will necessarily be most difficult, having to do with the direction of the winds, their velocity, with the temperature, hydro-metric conditions and barometric conditions.

"Sir Hubert Wilkins is a pioneer in a great undertaking in the polar regions, and, as a soldier and meteorologist, I extend to him my cordial best wishes in his difficult and dangerous mission."

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

By WALTER TRUMBULL

New York never can remain constant. Through its sea gate ever pours new metal for the melting pot. Into its railroad stations flow ingredients from North and South and West. This means fresh viewpoints, temperaments, ideas, internal change. But the change is also external. You never can turn your back on New York and return to find it the same. It was only a few weeks ago that I left this city for the stone crabs of Miami, the pompano of New Orleans, and the beefsteaks of Chicago. Yet I walk out on my terrace for a returning view of my front lawn, which somebody nicknamed Central park, and the first things that catch my eye are five new skyscrapers, which have shot up like stalks of asparagus. Two rear their heads over in the direction of the East river. One stands a few blocks to the north, seemingly on the corner formerly occupied by the Majestic hotel. The other two are in a southeasterly direction. The first of these I don't mind, as it is growing behind the Heckscher building, but I resent the second one deeply. This one is sprouting on a direct line with the Chrysler building, and threatens to obstruct my view of that chromium tower which, after the sun has set, still flames with an Alpine glow. Another thing I notice is that they have completed the mooring mast on the Empire State building. By day, it looks a bit like a swollen finger, pointing at the sky. At night, when the beam of a floodlight strikes it, the effect is ethereal and beautiful.

Skyscrapers are the outgrowth of the human mind, but do not resemble human beings in their outward growth. The last thing we see of a human being, as archeologists will tell you, is the skeleton, which is the first thing we see of a skyscraper. Gaunt and empty, they rear themselves against the sky, always, until they attain their final growth, keeping several stories ahead of their epidermis, and obtaining their internal fittings only upon completion. You always can tell when their skeletons are done by the flag the ironworkers fly from the topmost beam. At last, lights glow in what were vacant eyes of glass and you know that another skyscraper has come to life.

It is comforting to know that under existing conditions they never can build any skyscrapers in Central park. Our view of the trees, the motorcycle police station, the grass, the fat ladies on horseback, the shrubs, the park gardener with his team of horses, the bowling green, the children's playground, the lakes with sailors in row-boats, the croquet court, and the sheepfold, is safe. Since we have been away, the park has increased in population. I noticed there are a lot of new and rather wobbly baby lambs for the traffic officer to wave safely across the road, while long lines of automobiles stand chattering impatiently.

You will find the real representatives of the unemployed sitting on park benches, reading newspapers, or standing on such streets as Sixth avenue, looking hopefully at the notices posted in front of employment agencies, but the sidewalks of Broadway are thronged by day and night with those who apparently live without working. All afternoon that solid crowd fills the sidewalks from building line to curb. There you see persons of every size, color and nationality. I sometimes wonder where they came from and where they are going. Few of them appear to be in a hurry. If you are in a hurry on Broadway, you take to the street and get shouted at by annoyed taxi drivers.

The apple sellers are still with us, but they look more prosperous and cheerful. What began as a temporary expedient has apparently developed into a steady job. They have a new brand of apples, darker red and more tempting. Fifth avenue, too, seems to have responded to the magic of spring. It is crowded with handsome cars, and the shops, to me, seem fuller than they did at Christmas time. Perhaps business feels again the stirring of the sap.

Dodge Old Age

Have weariness, "nerves," and sleeplessness made you old in the prime of life? You can recover youth—and hold it—in spite of the passing years.

All you need to do is to help Nature keep your vitality. Perhaps your system lacks certain valuable elements, which Fellows' Syrup will restore. Soon you can eat, work, play, and sleep—as heartily as when you were twenty-one.

After the first few doses you become more cheerful and energetic. Your stamina increases. Ask your druggist for the genuine Fellows' Syrup, which physicians have been prescribing for years.

Too much game is what is the trouble with the Olympic peninsula, vast wilderness stretch across Puget sound from Seattle, according to F. S. Mavis, United States forest service worker. Roosevelt elk, a distinct species indigenous to the peninsula, are protected by the law. As a result, the animals are multiplying so fast grazing land is disappearing, Mavis asserted.

Hair's Growth After Death
Certain claims have been made that in rare cases hair has been proved to have grown after death. The United States public health service has stated there are no authentic records of such cases. The widespread belief in this growth is held to be caused by the shrinking of the skin toward the roots of the hairs, giving an appearance of hair growth. The same may be said with regard to growth of nails.

Bricks Never Imported
Wilstach says it is a pleasing but improbable tradition that bricks were brought from England for building in Virginia. There was an abundance of excellent brick clay here and no reason for importing brick. The tradition probably had its origin not in the fact of the place where the bricks were made but in the trade phrases "Dutch brick" and "English brick." These terms referred to sizes. Dutch brick were small and English brick large.

More People, Speedier Money
The more densely populated a locality the more rapid will be the velocity of circulation, because there will be readier access to people from whom money is received or to whom it is paid. A lady who has a city house and a country house states that in the country she keeps her money in her purse for weeks, whereas in the city she keeps it but a few days.

Telephones Extend 2 Miles Below Ground in Mine
Telephone service has been extended into the air, to airplanes in flight; to far-off continents; and now almost two miles down into the crust of the earth. At the Red Jacket copper mining shaft of the Calumet and Heckla Consolidated Mining Co. of Calumet, Mich., a telephone system 9,000 feet beneath the surface has been recently placed in operation. The installation of the telephone system in the very depths of one of the world's deepest copper mines has already saved much time and trouble in getting messages to and from foremen down below.

Freash Old Styles
Women had no monopoly of meaningless and ugly styles in the time of Queen Elizabeth, says an article in a Boston paper. Men, too, were tightly laced into wasp waists. Their legs were free, but their necks were held by a stiff ruff and the whole upper half of their costume was furbelowed and frilled until it was anything but a practicable garment.

THE CUSTOM SEDAN, $859.00

If you . . . like most people . . . prefer a car that is neither the cheapest nor the most expensive, but rather a happy medium, you will find the Pontiac the kind of car you like at the price you want to pay

THE COUPE, $749.00

THE 2-DOOR SEDAN, $749.00

THE CONVERTIBLE COUPE, $819.00

Things to note when you drive the new Pontiac

The moment you step into this car you will begin discovering pleasant things. First, how easily Pontiac handles—answering your lightest touch. The slender steel-and-rubber wheel invites a "finger grip"—and that's quite sufficient. You use little effort in braking or clutching.

You'll remark the quick getaway . . . the rapid acceleration . . . the smoothly sustained speed. Pontiac has a 60-horsepower engine so ample in size that it need never be overworked. Hence it stays smooth.

You'll experience a new riding ease. Springs are deep; cushions agreeably form-fitting, of course. But more important, Pontiac's chassis is cushioned with live rubber at more than 40 points.

You'll sense extra security in Pontiac. The famous Fisher Body wood-and-steel construction is snugly insulated against outside cold, heat, and dampness. Cowl and windshield pillars are built in one piece—a leak-proof, rattle-free construction. The first touch on the big brakes tells the story of unusual stopping power.

You'll find the Pontiac interior tastefully fitted, appointed, finished. Rich long-wearing mohair or whipcord in the closed cars—select leathers in the open models. In all, an atmosphere of fine craftsmanship pleasing to your pride.

Summing up, you'll agree that Pontiac Six is indeed a happy medium—the kind of car you want at the price you want to pay.

*Other body types, in addition to those shown, are the Sport Coupe at $789, and the 4-Door Sedan at $819. One important step in reducing your cost of car ownership is Oakland-Pontiac's policy of equipping its cars ready for the road. The prices you note above are for cars delivered and equipped in East Tawas. The prices include front and rear bumpers, four hydraulic shock absorbers, five wire wheels, and extra tire, tube and tire lock. Wood wheels optional at no extra cost.

The telephones of the United States are served through a total of 83,110,000 miles of wire. The great bulk of this wire mileage belongs to the Bell System, as the connecting companies own 6,706,000 miles of wire and the non-connecting companies 156,000 miles. The Bell System wire mileage comprised, at the beginning of the present year, 62,867,000 miles of exchange wire and 13,381,000 miles of toll and long distance wire. Little of this Bell System wire mileage is now in open wire; only 7 per cent on January 1, 1931. On the same date 66 per cent of the Bell wire was in underground cable and 27 per cent in aerial cable.

on the INSIDE FACTS
For Your Protection Make These Comparisons Before You Buy Your Tires

UNDERNEATH the surface is where you get the cold truth about tire values. It's the inside of the tire—the method of construction and the quality and quantity of materials—that determines its Stamina, Performance, Safety, VALUE. You can no more tell the quality of a tire by its outside appearance than you can tell the character of a man by the kind of clothes he wears.

We have arranged to show you cross sections of Firestone and special brand mail order tires. You can come here and make your own comparisons, uninfluenced by any sales propaganda. We urge you to thoroughly check every vital point—rubber volume, weight, width, thickness, and plies under the tread. Then buy accordingly—ON FACTS AND FACTS ALONE. Against the various claims presented about different tires, isn't this the most logical suggestion ever made to you? Could there be any more positive way to definitely determine which tires offer you the most for your money? There can be no question or controversy when you get the FACTS yourself.

Double Guarantee—Every tire manufactured by Firestone bears the name "FIRESTONE" and carries Firestone's unlimited guarantee and ours. You are doubly protected.

*A "Special Brand" tire is made by a manufacturer for distributors such as Mail Order Houses, oil companies and others, under a name that does not identify the tire manufacturer to the public, usually because he builds his "first line" tires under his own name. Avoid Complaint

Complain as little as possible of the wrongs done you; for, commonly speaking, he who complains sins, because self-love always makes us believe the injuries done to us greater than they really are.

THE STORY

At a public dance Martin Forbes, a newspaper man, cuts in on Rhoda White's dance with Max Lewis, whom Martin instinctively dislikes. He overhears a conversation between Lewis and a woman, which he realizes concerns Rhoda. He recalls a "blind ad" inquiring the whereabouts of "Rhoda McFarland" and senses a newspaper story. He believes that is Rhoda's real name. She refuses to deny or admit it. However, it recalls her childhood in California. Her mother dead, she had been happy until misfortune befell her father, Professor McFarland. Associated with the blow is her uncle, William Royce. They move to Chicago, where her father is engaged in mysterious work. Rhoda takes up stenography. Her father dies suddenly, vainly trying to give her a message about "papers" in a trunk. Rhoda goes to live with a fellow-worker, "Babe" Jennings.

Babe sang out a rather knowing hello to the two of them, but, even if it was late, came on unhurriedly.

Rhoda called back over the intervening heads, "Martin's coming to supper with us tonight," and then with a nod vanished into the entrance to the building.

The implication he'd perceived in that last remark of Rhoda's disturbed Martin so much that he forgot to be polite.

"Look here," he said to Babe as she came up, "did that bird Lewis that I introduced to you last night find out where Rhoda lived from you?"

"You two make a pair, all right, you and Max. It seems you both went gaga about Red last night. Why, Max took me home, and since I told him she and I lived together, I suppose he knows. Why shouldn't he?"

"He was too d-d anxious to find out, that's all. He's a bad boy if I know one when I see him. How much more did you tell him about her?"

"Why, we talked of little else, dearest," said Babe. "He wanted to know all about her, and I tried to be accommodating—like I am now. Look here, who elected you Red's guardian? I've known her about seven hundred times as long as you have and I'm not trying to get her in 'dutch with anybody."

He didn't know what to say to that, but the look in his face must have answered for him, for with a complete change of manner, she went on. "What is it, Marty? Is there anything wrong with him? Do you know anything about him?"

"No," he told her, as they entered the building together. "But I think he's up to something queer and I'm going to try to find out what it is. And if you happen on anything that gives you a line on it let me know." He thought she hesitated as though she had something on her mind, but all she did was to nod assent and say as she walked off that they'd see him for supper tonight about seven.

Martin's own day's work was yawning for him in the local room, but he didn't go there. He went into the "morgue" instead, on the chance that he'd find there some scrap of information about Max Lewis. The search was much better rewarded than he'd expected it to be.

Max had had his promenade in the public eye by virtue of a breach of promise suit for one hundred thousand dollars that had been brought against him by a chorus girl. He had written her the usual half-dozen imbecile love letters. All that gave them interest, either to the public or to the chorus girl herself, had been the fact that Max, though it wasn't clear that he had any property of his own, had a vested right, so to speak, in an authentically rich bachelor uncle who might be expected to come down and settle the girl's claim.

The only direct find for Martin in the mess was the uncle's name and address. It was "Charles J. Forster," and he was spoken of as a capitalist with large oil interests in various parts of the country—Charles J. Forster, "C. J." That practically tied it up, but not quite. Not well enough for Martin, who was a good reporter. He went downstairs, stopping on the way to copy the want ad in the personal column for the address of Rhoda McFarland.

"I think I'm on a story," he told Snow, in charge of the advertising file. "If I'll promise to be discreet about it, will you find out for me who the X-203 is who's been running this ad?" Snow thought he might do that and went off to look it up, coming back within five minutes with the name written on a slip of paper. X-203 was C. J. Forster, just as Martin had thought he would be. His address was the Worcester hotel.

The next step would be to interview Mr. Forster and try to persuade him to tell why he was advertising for Rhoda McFarland. This was a step he didn't want to take without Rhoda's permission. So he made his way to the local room and went to work for the newspaper.

At half past five that night he arrived at the address Rhoda had given him and paused for a survey of the premises from the outside. It was a remodeled dwelling with a converted basement which was now an antique shop, and a first floor, guessing from the sign painted on the glass, that housed a dressmaking establishment. It served some commercial purpose during the day, anyhow, but it was now dark. It must be a rather lonely place at night, he thought.

Something had happened in the studio; at least something had happened to one of its tenants since he'd seen them that morning. He sensed it the moment they let him in, and he grew surer he was right as time went on. There was no lack of cordiality about their welcome. They were trying hard, he saw, to keep up the festive spirit of a party. They'd got up a really good supper—creamed sweetbreads with fried bacon was the foundation of it. The studio was an attractive place to live in, once you'd got inside the door, and it was plain the girls were proud of it. But tonight something had gone wrong. It might, of course, be nothing more than some small domestic quarrel that had flared up between them, but it didn't seem like that.

All that Rhoda betrayed was a lack of the buoyancy he'd felt in her last night and again during their brief encounter this morning. He noted that when he and Babe were keeping things up between them and she went, so to speak, off duty, she seemed to be listless and depressed. As for Babe, she seemed to be bursting with something. She was excited and she was trying to be mysterious.

Martin found him if getting rather imaginative. One minor episode while they were at supper made him wonder whether he was imagining the whole thing.

The bell rang from downstairs and the rather nondescript visitor whom Babe admitted announced himself as a name-taker for the new city directory. He wanted to get the names and occupations of everybody who lived in the apartment. Babe recited them while he wrote them down in a little leather bound notebook. He had to have Rhoda's name spelled for him.

There was no real reason for doubting that he was what he pretended to be, yet Martin did doubt the man almost to the point of asking him to show his credentials. Also he thought the man turned a rather penetrating look on him. But he didn't want to do something officious every time he was with Rhoda, nor to do anything tonight that would add to her disquiet. It was probably nothing but imagination.

It wasn't, though, imagination that something had happened to upset the girls. Babe eventually gave that away completely. It transpired that she had a fairly heavy date at nine o'clock and she seemed worried over the idea of leaving Rhoda in order to keep it. She even offered, in what she meant for a confidential aside, to break this date so that Rhoda, if Martin went home early, should not be alone in the studio.

Rhoda vetoed the proposal with a vigorous shake of her red head and the cloud over Martin's spirits lifted as he realized that she meant to let him stay on and have a visit alone with her after Babe had gone.

The last thing Babe did before, in full panoply, she left the studio was to go to Rhoda and hug her. "Don't you worry any more about it, precious," she said. "Something nice is going to happen soon that'll make you forget all about it. I've got a hunch about that that's strong enough to bet money on."

Martin bit down the question he wanted to ask the moment Babe had really gone and said something nice about her instead: what a good loyal sort she was. "Oh, she is!" Rhoda assented with a shaky laugh. "But she's about as easy to see into as a goldfish bowl. She promised she wouldn't let you suspect that anything had happened here, and she's gone off now without the faintest idea that she's given anything away." Before Martin could think of anything appropriate to say to that, she went on, "I'll tell you what it was: there was a burglar here this afternoon."

"Did he get away with anything—important?" His choice of that word seemed to strike her but she didn't comment upon it then. "He got three hundred dollars of mine," she said. She went on in response to Martin's start of astonishment, "I'm ashamed to admit I was so silly as to keep a lot of money like that in cash in my room. I'd had it a long time and I thought it was safely hidden."

Martin asked if they had any idea when it had happened or how the man had got in.

"It would be an awfully easy place to get into any time during the day," she admitted ruefully. "The dress-making people like to leave the outer door unlocked so that their customers can come right up. Our door wasn't broken, but I suppose a burglar could have picked the lock easily enough."

"Was the three hundred dollars all he took?" Martin asked.

"Wasn't it enough?" she countered with a sober smile.

He was afraid it was thin ice, and he didn't want to get her angry with him again, but he ventured to answer, "No. That is, I wasn't surprised at the burglary but I was surprised that he took money. Haven't you missed anything else? A document of some sort, or a letter—or perhaps a photograph? I'm just guessing, you see."

She remarked, "I don't think you're exactly guessing. You're thinking about Mr. Lewis and the things you heard that woman telling him, last night. But I haven't any document or any letter—I mean I haven't lost any—and I don't own any photographs, except of Babe and Doris and Isabel."

"I was thinking about Lewis," he confessed. "I know a little more about him than I did last night. I wanted to find out what he was up to, especially after Babe told me he'd taken her home last night and asked her a lot of questions about you."

He saw her face flame at that and he thought she held her breath while she waited for him to go on. "He isn't what anybody would call a valuable citizen but, at that, he doesn't seem like the man to break in here and steal your three hundred dollars. He wrote some indiscreet letters to a chorus girl once, and she sued him for a hundred thousand. Probably she wouldn't have done it if he hadn't had a rich respectable uncle she hoped would buy her off. His name's Charles J. Forster. He lives at the Worcester hotel. Did you ever hear of him?"

Apparently she attached no importance to the question for she answered it with a mere absent shake of the head. Her thoughts were somewhere else.

"I want to tell you one other thing I did this morning, Rhoda," he went on, and this brought her focused inquiring look back to his face. "I got them to look up, in the want-ad file, the real name of the man who's been advertising for the address of Rhoda McFarland. It's the same man, Charles J. Forster.—'C. J.' do you see? The man they were talking about last night."

The flash of incipient pain he'd seen in her face changed to a look of mere perplexity before he finished speaking. "But I don't know who he is!" she told him vehemently. Then, suddenly intent, she asked, "Did you do anything else?"

"There was only one thing left to do, and that was to look him up and ask him why he was advertising—for her. And—and I didn't want to do that unless you said you wanted me to."

"You might have asked him," she said. "After what I told you last night you might have argued that it was no affair of mine what you found out about—her. But I'm glad you didn't. Please don't do it, Martin. Let me tell you a little, and then don't try to find out anything more."

"I'm Rhoda White now but I used to be Rhoda McFarland. The only person who'd try to find me would be my uncle, William Royce. Mr. Forster must be working for him. He frightened me so when I was a little girl that I've never got over being afraid of him. He was cruel to my father and wanted to take me away from him then. We ran away so that he couldn't."

"I was only sixteen when my father died and I was afraid that if Uncle William heard about it and knew where I was, he'd get me, then. There wasn't any one else, you see. So I changed my name and pretended I came to Chicago from Denver, and got a job on the News."

"And, Martin, I've loved it. I've loved it all. The whole two years. I've been happy. And I don't want anything changed. You won't do anything to change things, will you?"

She was looking rather blurred and he blinked in order to see her better. "No, I won't do anything you don't want me to," he said. Then he did a little rudimentary arithmetic. "If that was two years ago you're only eighteen now."

"Do you mind?" she asked him seriously.

"No," he said, "I don't mind at all." After a while she said, "You must have worked awfully hard today, to have found out all that about Max Lewis and the chorus girl. How did you do it?"

"It was all in the 'morgue,'" he told her. "It took about ten minutes."

She'd been working for the paper two years and she didn't know what the "morgue" was. Martin, with a true reporter's pride in the whole news-gathering side of the organization, told her all about it. He was startled when a sudden movement of hers, a sort of shudder, roused him to look around into her face. "What's the matter?" he gasped.

"I think it's horrible," she said shakily. "It means that there's no—forgiveness at all. Anything that anyone has ever done—or that people think he has done—is kept there, waiting to be got out and told all over again. Anyone who wants to go and open a drawer can find it. And they call it the 'morgue.' Martin, I didn't know anything could be as cruel as that!"

"But you've got it all wrong," he protested. "A newspaper doesn't keep a 'morgue' for the purpose of intimidating people with their pasts. Nine times in ten the file's used for writing handsome obituary articles. When a man dies they want to be able to tell how important he's been."

But nothing he could say on the subject seemed to change her feeling, about it. "Let's try to forget about it," she said at last.

On his agreeing to that—and he'd have agreed to almost anything just then—she pushed her advantage a little further. "Let's forget about everything that's mysterious and depressing, will you? Will you agree that the burglar was just a plain burglar who was perfectly satisfied with my three hundred dollars, and that Mr. Forster and Mr. Lewis were only trying to find me—to settle a bet, or for some silly reason like that? And then, Martin, will you take me somewhere for the rest of this evening where we can dance?"

"You bet I will," he said. "I'll agree to the whole program—for the rest of the evening—if you'll let me say just one thing first."

She considered this request a little dubiously, but finally said, "All right; just one, though."

"If you're really eighteen years old . . ."

"I really am," she interrupted, "—almost. My birthday's in two weeks—October thirty-first; Halloween, it is." "Hurrah!" he said. "We'll have a party! Well then, on Halloween you'll come of age and you'll have no more reason to be afraid of your uncle than I have. He'll have no more authority over you than he'll have over the king of England. And even in the meantime I don't see that he could do very much. That's all. Now let's go to the Alhambra. And heaven help Leander Higgins, or anyone else who tries to cut in on us tonight!"

Downstairs in the tiny vestibule she noticed that there were some letters in their mail-box. The postman had come, she remembered, while they were so excited about the burglar that they both forgot to go down and get the mail. She didn't want to be

Simple Old Method of Evading Penalty of Sin

Every one unacquainted with old English customs is interested by the story of the Sin-eater in Mary Webb's novel, "Precious Bane." Sin-eaters did not constitute a religious sect. They were employed in some counties of England and in Wales in connection with funeral rites. Their office was to eat bread and drink ale which had been placed on the bier, and thus symbolically take upon themselves the sins committed by the deceased person. Having done this, the sin-eater pronounced the "ease and rest" of the dead person and asserted that to procure this he had pawned his own soul. There were not wanting men to perform this rash office, but it was not so rash as might appear; for the sin-eater could see to it that the same means of acquiring impunity was invoked for him at his decease, so that no matter what accumulation of sin he had made himself re-bothered with it now, though. All she wanted to do was dance.

She forgot the letters again when she came home from the Alhambra, but Martin remembered them and went downstairs with the key to bring them up. When he came back he'd merely said, after looking at her a minute, "Good night, Rhoda," and gone away, although the idea of a kiss had hung palpably between them for an instant. She wouldn't have minded his kissing her good night, but she got a real thrill out of the fact that he didn't, although he evidently wanted to. She realized that when he did kiss her he'd mean more by it, and there was a touch of real Scotch thrift about Rhoda that appreciated the economy.

It was the same quality in her that made her put off letting herself drift away into a pleasant day-dream over the hours just passed until she should have finished her evening tasks and got into bed. Otherwise she wouldn't have looked at the letters at all.

One of them was addressed, in an angular feminine hand she didn't know, to her, "Miss Rhoda White." It was with a rather indifferent feeling of perplexity that she sliced open the envelope. But with her first incredulous stare at what was written on the stiff folded sheets of notepaper it contained, she felt a frightened wish that Martin hadn't gone home, for the thing began: "Dear Miss McFarland."

She was trembling so that she went over and sat down on the couch before she read any further. She felt as if things were closing in on her somehow; the way a bird feels, perhaps, when the beaters are driving it toward the wall behind which a man is waiting with a gun.

"I hope I haven't frightened you, beginning like that," she said, "but you do not know me—you may never have even heard of me—and I wanted to make sure that you would read this letter, because it is important to me whether it is to you or not."

"I am going to ask you a great favor. It has got nothing to do with money. I have got money enough, thank heavens! to put this through even if it costs a whole lot. But I am simply desperate for something I am sure you can help me find. It was a paper that I asked your father to take care of for me when I was working for him in his laboratory."

"It makes too long a story to tell this way and I want you should have my whole confidence in this matter. Will you come to lunch with me tomorrow in the Tip-Top Inn? I will be there from twelve o'clock on, at the table to the right of the door in the Dutch room. I will be wearing a black hat and a dark blue dress."

"Yours most sincerely,
"CLAIRE CLEVELAND."

"P. S. I want to say this in addition. I think it will be as much for your advantage as mine if you come. The man who treated me so shamefully is the same man who played a mean and treacherous trick on your father and practically ruined his life in order to make himself rich; and I think if you and I work together we can force him to make things right for you as well as for me—at least as far as money can make anything right. Let me warn you of one more thing, and I hope it is not too late. Do not answer any communication of any sort from any stranger until you and I have had our talk. I have reason to believe he now has designs on you, too. You may not have found out yet what some men can be like, but believe me (not slang) I know!"

"Yours, CLAIRE."

Pets in Wide Variety Found at Army Posts

Old-time regulars in the Philippines hold to a fixed opinion. "Put a soldier on a desert, uninhabited island, leave him there six months; and when you go back to pick him up you'll find the man with a package of homemade cigarettes, a deck of playing cards, and a dog." Herbert E. Smith, writing in the United States Army Recruiting News, says that the affection of regulars for dogs—and vice versa—is proverbial. He states that there are few army garrisons today which do not own a wide variety of canine population of diverse sizes, shapes and lineage.

Although dogs may come first in the list of preferred mascots, they are by no means the only barracks and camp pets of our service men. Second in popularity to the dogs are the common or alley breed of cats. The choice of the mascot usually depends upon the location of the army unit. Along the northern tier of states, at such posts as Fort Missoula, Mont., and Fort Snelling, Minn., one will come across some of the wilder species. A coyote was once conducted into the mascot service by some experimenting Fort Missoula soldiers, but the draftee did not take kindly to the life and soon decamped. A bald eagle, taken sorely wounded and tended carefully at Fort Snelling, also went "over the hill" after a short time.

Bird Refuge Wiped Out by Jap Plume Hunters

Laysan island, a tiny raised bit of land some 800 miles west of Honolulu, a paradise for naturalists 30 years ago, is now a barren waste. George C. Munro, in Asia Magazine, relates conditions there in 1891, when this little island was dark with birds of all kinds, many of them new to science at that time. Huge black frigates, with a seven-foot spread of wing; little white terns, or love birds—rarest of the seabird inhabitants, albatrosses, curlews and miller birds, the two latter species being moth eaters; red honey eaters; finches, which were so tame that they would sing while held in the hand and allow themselves to be fed by the person holding them; teals, rails, petrels, and six other species of sea birds.

In 1909 Japanese plume hunters settled there and killed off the birds by the acre, it might be said, since they cleared several hundred acres. Probably not less than one million birds were destroyed before the plunderers were stopped in January, 1910. In 1911, it was reported that some rabbits taken to the island, had increased so enormously as to threaten extermination of plant life and consequently of the insects and land birds. Certain species of the plants had been destroyed; the miller bird already was much reduced in numbers and so was the teal.

Eyeshade Useful When Light Is Not Perfect

The eyeshade, symbol of the ancient bookkeeper, was given a boost by Dr. Paul J. Pontius, attending surgeon at Wills Eye hospital, in a bulletin issued by the County Medical society. "Lights," he said, "should be arranged to avoid crossed rays. That is the direct rays of light and the reflected rays may strike the eyes from different angles, causing strain and suffering. Light should come over the left shoulder and illumine the work in order to be restful. If this is not possible, wear an eyeshade to eliminate crossed rays." Persons with defective vision are better mentally and physically when the strain is corrected, he said, and many children thought stupid are really suffering from defective vision.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Compact and Economical Design
Just Right for Small Family

Floor Plan.

By W. A. RADFORD
Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to practical home building. For the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as editor, author and manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 407 South Dearborn street, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

Here is a cottage type bungalow, very small, very compact, but offering a large amount of living accommodation at a very low cost. In the first place, being but 26 feet square, this home may be built on a small lot and still leave a comfortable margin of space for light, air and privacy between it and its neighbors on either side. The square plan is, of course, the most economical one possible, giving the greatest amount of floor space in proportion to the amount of wall and roof construction. And in the case of this particular house, the design is such as to take full advantage of every inch of the available space. This is a four-room house with the living room serving also as a dining room, an arrangement which has been gaining wide popularity in recent years with the demand for better utilization of space. The separate dining room is, from this point of view, a large waste, for it is used but a very small portion of the day. With the arrangement shown here it is possible to provide in this small cottage two bedrooms of a very comfortable size, and each provided with a good closet. Between the kitchen and one bedroom is the bath, and all of the rooms open onto a central hall space which occupies but a small part of the total floor area even though it must also accommodate the basement stair. In exterior appearance this little home is particularly pleasing. This is due, in large measure, to the roof lines which have been so handled as to avoid the flat appearance which detracts from so many small homes of this type.

Color Can Make Drab
Home Place of Beauty

More than ever before it is being realized that color can transform an uninteresting home into a place of beauty and cheer; that color can help make a room feel warm or cold; that color, wisely employed, can give brightness to a hallway that is dark or modify the effect of sunlight in a room that is overexposed.

And the base of color schemes of the various rooms in usually the floor—heretofore restricted in hue to a few variations of the natural color of the wood.

A new method of finishing maple flooring has made possible the employment of color in the floor. This uses an acid stain process developed recently by the Maple Flooring Manufacturers' association in co-operation with the industry generally.

The process may be used by any painter of ordinary skill, using the stans and varnishes recommended by the association. It imparts to northern hard maple a variety of delightful transparent permanent finishes, and their application brings out the delicate grain of the wood, creating a distinctive type of floor beauty never before achieved.

In the application of the process the stain is covered by one coat of lacquer and two of finishing varnish. Some of the colors adopted by the Maple Flooring Manufacturers' association include spanish brown, early American, autumn brown, silver gray, dove gray, royal blue, pastel green, orchid and an ebony black.

Equipment of Kitchen
Must Be Up to Date

In a recent house-planning contest in which 6,000 "ideal" plans were submitted the judges were unanimous in their report that the kitchen is the most carefully studied part of each plan.

As a matter of fact, the average housewife spends 76 per cent. of her waking hours each day in the "engine room" of the home. No wonder she is willing to forego a Queen Anne front if she has to pay for it by having a Mary Ann back.

Ideally, the kitchen should have a central location in the house, for easy access to all other parts. And in order to save miles of walking during the preparation of the thousand meals each year, it must be as small as consistent with the equipment which must be placed there—a minimum of, say, 100 square feet for the average home.

One of the most effective means of cutting down needless steps is the proper "routing" of the day's tasks by the arrangement of permanent equipment and labor saving devices.

The before-meal work must progress along a path that does not cross and recross itself, and the after-meal work should travel along a similar short, direct path.

Those same plans also indicated what the judges referred to as "the tremendous demand for built-in features." The walls were fairly lined with permanent furniture. Built-in equipment which folds up is especially popular, as it has the added advantage of leaving the floor space free between times.

The ironing board which folds up into the wall has become an indisputable part of every housewife's plans. A close second is the folding breakfast table to which we draw up the gayly painted Windsor chair when the waffles are ready. Both of these are to be had ready-made in desirable sizes through lumber dealers. The ironing board, especially, occupies such small wall space that it can be put into practically every kitchen.

But when planning the house—that is to be it is well to go into the matter of fold-ups and other permanent furniture in advance, and make our plans conform to the standard sizes in which these things are available. This foresight will save unnecessary cost.

Sanitary finish and appearance of the kitchens is a sine qua non. That does not necessarily require that everything be painted a flat white, like a hospital. Sunshine is a germicide, too—one of the best. The kitchen ought to have plenty of windows, with cross ventilation if at all possible. The matter of making the kitchen attractive and cheerful while making it sanitary is one of the most important subjects to consider.

Interior Stairs Can Be a Point of Decoration

The stairway is the largest single item of interior woodwork about the average modern home.

Both from utilitarian and decorative aspects it serves probably the most important functions which any feature of the interior is called upon to perform. The architectural style of the house itself is often indicated or reflected in the design of the stairs.

Many builders in past times have apparently regarded beauty in stair work as a matter of size; the larger the newels and balusters the more handsome the work. Modern taste inclines to the smaller, more delicately molded forms which made our early colonial stairs such faithful representatives of individual craftsmanship.

VACATION STYLE PROGRAM PICKS
PRINTS FOR SMART SPORTSWEAR

AS THE program stands for vacation times just ahead, it is prints for sports ensembles, prints for the simple little daytime frock, prints for the beach ensemble and for the more formal hours, there is a flattery, filmy print for every festive occasion.

Should one entertain even the slightest suspicion that maybe the mode is overdoing the printed theme, along comes some zealous mind with a perfectly new idea of design and we find ourselves thrilling all over again at the sight of prints such as we have never seen before.

A recent gesture in the way of prints which are "different" is a series which take for their motif the tallest skyscraper building in the world, the two diagrams in the lower right corner in the picture give some idea of how the artist captured the spirit of the colossal structure and put it into print in the fabric realm.

There is no doubt as to the adaptability of novel modernistic prints to sports modes. An interesting feature about this season's smartest daytime prints is that the majority of them stress a single color against either a white or a dark background, thus emphasizing striking contrast.

For the ensemble in the picture, which consists of hat, parasol, two-piece dress and matching shoes the designer makes one of the new skyscraper prints the medium from start to finish. This ensemble stands for a movement which is characteristic of present-day fashions—that of making the dress and its accessories of the same material. Especially do we see this influence reflected in the voguish tweed costumes which top the tweed coat, suit or frock as the case may be with a jaunty beret of the identical tweed.

The little daytime frock in the tiny sketch to the left at the top of the illustration also employs one of the novel empire prints, so called from the name of the tall building which inspired its patterning. It is in bright red on a white background but it might just as well have been in green or in blue and white. Notice that fine knife pleating borders the blouse, the wide collar and the sleeves. These little pleatings are the rage this year. The pajama ensemble sketch to the right is in striking black and white.

slips are in fashion for little folks. A dot-embroidered organdie posed over yellow taffeta accents its color scheme in that little ruchings of the taffeta edge the sleeves and a sprightly peplum.

Which reminds us—tiny ruchings are proving a very popular trimming feature. You can have the ruching frayed or picoted and pleated at any establishment where such work is done or if the material is sheer, it can be hemmed on the sewing machine.

A party frock for the older girl displayed among juvenile fashions poses pale blue mousseline over a taffeta slip the same shade. Its minaret tiers are edged with a dainty ruching made of the self fabric.

Failure is in a sense, the highway to success, inasmuch as every discovery of the false leads us to seek earnestly after what is true, and every fresh experience points out some form of error which we shall afterward carefully avoid.—John Keats.

WHAT TO EAT

When making gravy without browned flour, add the flour to the fat and stir until well blended, then add the liquid and a teaspoonful of caramel to give the gravy a little more brown color.

Molasses Biscuit.

—Mix and sift two and one-half cupsful of pastry flour with one-half teaspoonful each of soda and salt, one-eighth teaspoonful each of ginger and cinnamon, a grating of nutmeg, three tablespoonfuls of shortening are now added, and when well mixed add three-eighths of a cupful of buttermilk and three tablespoonfuls of molasses. Pat half an inch thick and cut with a small cutter. Bake in a hot oven ten minutes. These are served with butter and marmalade.

Lemon Tarts.—Make a rich pastry and bake in fancy-shaped tins about two inches deep. Crimp the edges of the crust and fill with the following: Mix four tablespoonfuls of cornstarch with one-half cupful of cold water and add to one and one-half cupfuls of boiling water, stir and cook until thick. Beat the yolks of four eggs, add two cupfuls of sugar, one tablespoonful of butter, the juice of three lemons and the grated rind of one. Cook over water until smooth and thick enough to stand up in points when stirred with a spoon. Fill the shells and cover with the egg white beaten stiff with five tablespoonfuls of sugar added. Bake in a moderate oven until a delicate, crisp brown.

Mock Duck.—Take a two-pound steak two inches thick and split to hold the dressing. Season well on the inside with salt and pepper. For the dressing take two cupfuls of toasted crumbs, two slices of diced cooked bacon, one-half teaspoonful of salt and pepper to taste, add one egg slightly beaten, two chopped onions, a half teaspoonful of sugar, a bit of garlic and one-half cupful of water or any good broth. Stuff the steak and tie securely with a string. Sear all over until brown. Cook in a dutch oven slowly until tender.

Lizard Teaches Lesson

Chuckwallas are gentle and easily handled, and make interesting pets if captured and kept in comfortable quarters with a satisfactory food supply. We know too little of the habits of even our common wild neighbors, and these dwellers in the desert could teach us many things that we do not understand, says Nature Magazine. For instance, if we could eliminate the waste of our bodies by means of dry uric acid instead of by drinking quantities of water, it would be very convenient at times, and we might go for months without drinking water. Apparently none of the cold-blooded reptiles suffer from the heat, and many thrive in the hottest parts of our low desert valleys, basking on rocks so hot that one can hardly bear to touch them with the naked hand.

Queer-Looking Crocodiles

Some of the queerest-looking crocodiles in the world have been received at the British zoo. They are of the kind known as gharials, and came from Borneo. They are most fantastic in appearance, as their alarming-looking, well-armed jaws are drawn out into long, narrow snouts, swelling at the tips. They are the giants of the family, often growing to be well over 20 feet in length. They have the true crocodile teeth, these being set in a straight line and interlocking, the fourth tooth on either side of the lower jaw meeting a notch in the upper jaw.

Highlights of Chase House

The Chase house at Annapolis, Md., was built in 1770 by Edward Lloyd. A three-story, boxlike exterior in Flemish bond, it contains a monumental stair hall lighted by a Palladian window on the first landing. The carved interior detail is lavish and beautifully executed. There is a very lovely marble mantel in the parlor. It is now the Chase home for the aged.

Exploding Toad Legend

Dr. Leonhard Stejneger of the Smithsonian institution says that toads for the purposes of hibernation dig holes in the ground or crawl into fissures of rocks. Occasionally such specimens are found after blasting operations, and the conclusion is hastily drawn that the toad had been living inside the solid rock.

Glad to Leave High Office

It is proof that Jefferson was not reluctant to relinquish the office of President. On this subject he wrote to his friend, Dupont de Nemours: "Never did a prisoner, released from his chains, feel such relief as I shall on shaking off the shackles of power."

Two Forms of Happiness

As obtaining the love of valuable men is the happiest end of this life so the next felicity is to get rid of fools and scoundrels.—Pope.

Yes, Better Than Fresh Peanuts

MONARCH PEANUT BUTTER is really better than fresh peanuts because the bitter germ or "heart" and all the "skin" are carefully removed. To begin with, only the finest selected Virginia peanuts are ground so smoothly and evenly that Monarch Peanut Butter makes a most delicious spread for bread. Children say, "Monarch is the best Peanut Butter," and children are good judges. More than 250 Monarch Super-Quality Foods are sold and guaranteed by 50,000 Independent Grocers.

Patriot
It was a beautiful Sunday morning. Simpson, having finished reading a paper printed with an invention made in Germany, set out with his wife for the meeting house of a faith founded in Palestine. Contemplating the beauty of the land, which had been discovered by an Italian in the employ of a Spanish sovereign and musing on the liberty it possessed thanks to the help of a French navy, his bosom swelled with pride. "Thank God," said Simpson fervently in a language imported from the British Isles, "I am a 100 per cent American."—Life.

DETROIT-WINDSOR TUNNEL

Canada is an interesting country! It is modern as tomorrow! Yet it retains much of the old atmosphere of the "mother-country!" There are excellent hotels and restaurants; its smart shops display unusual merchandise of English manufacturers. But it is the "old world" charm which appeals particularly to American tourists! The Border Cities of Canada lie just across the river from Detroit—only 3 minutes from downtown via the Detroit-Windsor Tunnel—a mile-long, light and airy boulevard, the world's first international automobile tunnel. No visit to Detroit is complete without a drive through the Tunnel.

Directions to the Tunnel:
From the corner of Detroit's two most important avenues, Woodward and Jefferson, drive one block south and one block east. You can't miss it! Tunnel Busses leave every few minutes from Cadillac Square opposite the City Hall.

Wiped Out Snake Litter
While a farmer on the Vet river, in South Africa, was felling a tree, he saw a large puffadder crawling over his foot. He jumped back in time and killed the reptile with a blow of the ax. The next moment the grass was teeming with young ones. The farmer soon accounted for the whole litter, and when he counted the lot he found that he had destroyed 29 snakes.

final exams which will take place during the last week of the school year. All pupils above the fourth grade are expected to take these examinations.

After losing three straight games our baseball team finally came out of its slump by defeating the St. Joe nine Friday by a score of 7 to 2. In making seven runs, our boys got eight hits off A. Zaharias, St. Joe pitcher, who struck out six and walked four. Allan Herriam, who hurled for our boys, allowed two hits, walked three and struck out 15 in the seven inning game. Albert Zollweg and Allan Herriam, with two hits apiece, were the batting stars of the game.

Our tennis tournament got under way Tuesday: Jack Mark defeated Earl Davis 6-2, 6-1; William Leslie defeated Glen Barnes 6-2, 6-2; and Alvin Chelger defeated Robert Hamilton 8-6, 6-1.

The East Tawas public school planted trees on the Washington Memorial Highway Wednesday afternoon. The program was as follows: Selection by the band; response for the class of 1943, Elaine Pierson; for class of 1942, Robert Ford; 1941, Leah Pelton; 1940, Margaret Moss; 1939, Roberta Schreck; 1938, Arlene Leaf; 1937, George Staudacher; Song, "Tree Planting"; response for class of 1936, Rosamond Sanderson; for class of 1935, Kermit Gurley; 1934, Faye Gurley; 1933, Jane Weed; 1932, Vivian Harwood; 1931, Ruby Evans; response for Normal class of 1931, Gifford Turner; response for P. T. A., Mrs. Fred Adams; selections by the band; master of ceremonies, Alfred M. Gurley.

The Senior class, accompanied by Miss VanHorn and Mr. Youngs, enjoyed their annual skip day. They visited Houghton Lake, Lake City, and Traverse City. All enjoyed the drive out from Traverse City toward the "Old Mission," where we saw many cherry orchards, cottages and homes built in the wooded section along the East Bay. During the course of the afternoon many pictures were taken. They also visited the asylum, but with some difficulty managed to keep the crowd together. The class arrived home safely, and are grateful to the owners of the cars for their use during the trip.

Aged Letters in Door
 Business letters mailed during the Nineteenth century, some 64, 65 and 67 years ago, were found in an old-fashioned double-paneled front door when workmen removed it from offices in Manchester, England, recently. The missives had lodged in the space between the panels, behind which was the letter box. They were addressed to H. Barbour & Company, a thread company, which was merged with another firm many years ago.

Saxophone Inventor
 There was a famous family of Belgian musical instrument makers named Sax. The inventor of the saxophone belonged to this family and his name was Antoine Joseph Sax, known as Adolphe Sax. He was born at Dinant, Belgium, November 6, 1814, and died in Paris, February 4, 1894. In 1845 he took out a patent for the saxhorn. On June 22 he registered the saxophone.

Price of Selfishness
 The only happy people are those whom we see more concerned about the happiness of others than about their own well-being and convenience and advancement. Selfish people never know contentment.—Hamilton Elye.

Personal "I. Q."
 The intelligence quotient or "I. Q." of a person is determined by multiplying the mental age by 100 and dividing by the actual age. Thus the intelligence quotient of a normal person is 100. A person with an "I. Q." below 80 is rated as subnormal, while one with an "I. Q." above 120 is rated as gifted. About five persons in 100 will be found to be 20 below normal and about five 20 above normal.

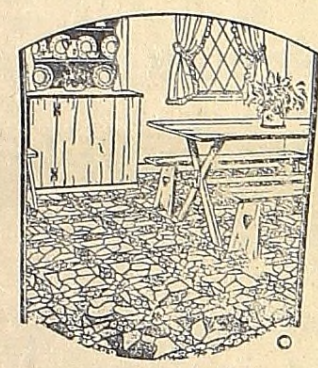

Business Good Will
 Crowell's "Dictionary of Business and Finance" defines "good will" as the evaluation placed upon the reputation, patronage, drawing power and other intangible advantages possessed by a business concern in operation, including name and good disposition of its customers. The purchase value of good will is based on the average annual net profit for a period of years.
