LOSE TO ALPENA; SCORE 6 TO 3

Tawas City journeyed to Alpena last Sunday, where the local team engaged the St. Mary's squad of that city in a hard battle. The score resulted in favor of Alpena, 6-3.

The locals outdid Alpena, 12 to 7, but several bad errors in the early part of the game gave St. Mary's a handsome margin to work with. Timely hitting on the part of the Tawas City boys was also lacking, as ten men were left on bases.

Boulder occupied the mound for the locals and went the entire game in excellent style. Although he allowed but seven hits and struck out eight men, errors on the part of his mates accounted for four of Alpena's six runs and thereby robbed him of a victory. Chrzan, Alpena hurler, struck out 11 men, but at the same time was nicked for 12 hits by the locals. However, the support given him was much better than that given Boulder.

On Sunday, June 14, Tawas City will play the D. & M. team of Bay City. The contest will take place at the Tawas City athletic field.

G. D. KING PURCHASES D. & M. LUNCH AT TAWAS CITY

G. D. King of East Tawas purchased the D. & M. Lunch from Nick Pappas on Lake street and has taken possession this week. Mr. King is a well known Tawas boy. For a number of years he has been with Kelly's store at East Tawas. He invites his friends to visit him.

Nick Pappas is rapidly completing a fine brick and cement two story restaurant building in East Tawas.

FORMER RESIDENT OF THIS CITY DIES IN OHIO

Charles Buswell, former resident of this city, died May 22 at St. Joseph's hospital, Lorain, Ohio, at the age of 74 years. Mr. Buswell had been in ill health for a number of years.

Mr. Buswell had been a resident here for many years previous to removing to Avon Lake, Ohio, and the many friends deeply sympathize with the bereaved family.

REPORT OF COUNTY NURSE FOR MONTH OF MAY

During May the county nurse made 13 prenatal home visits, 27 infant welfare, 21 pre-school and 14 home visits in behalf of school children, 17 visits to tuberculosis patients or suspects, four orthopedic visits and 19 visits to schools.

Two pre-school clinics were held. 32 pre-school children being examined by Dr. F. T. Zieske, 40 school and pre-school children were vaccinated against small pox. The following schools observed Child Health Day with a health program: Oscoda, Alabaster, Baldwin school, Hale and Plainfield township schools. The Ward school in Tawas City assisted with the Child Health program given at the May meeting of the Twentieth Century Club in Tawas City.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to take this opportunity to sincerely thank the people of Tawas City and the surrounding communities, especially my teachers and schoolmates, for their wonderful kindness shown me during my recent illness. Clair L. Thompson, Tawas City.

LUTHERAN SCHOOL WILL HOLD ANNUAL FESTIVAL

The Emanuel's Lutheran school will celebrate its annual school festival next Sunday, June 14th. It will take place near the Tawas City cemetery entrance if the weather is favorable. In case of rain, it will be celebrated at the Lutheran church property.

A special church service will be held on the grounds at 9 o'clock in the morning. The children of the school will render a program beginning at 1:30 in the afternoon. After this entertainment, contests of various kinds will be had. The following children's program will be rendered:

Song, "Awake," said the Sunshine; Welcome Address; Dialogue, Tables Turned; Song and Drill, How Betsy Ross Made the Flag; Recitation and Solo; Song, I Salute Thee Old Glory; Recitation, A Leap for Life; Dialogue, People Will Talk; Song, Clean Hands; Dialogue, A Farm For Sale; Drill, A Broom Drill; Recitation, Mending Day; Song, A Hundred Thousand Voices Shout; Dialogue, The Train to Loo-ton; Recitation, The Captain's Daughter; Song, The Warbling Notes of Springtime; Dialogue, A Practical Use for Peddlers; Drill, A Hoop Drill; Recitation, If I Were My Mother; Song, What Can the Matter Be?; Recitation, Vacation Days.

A week from Sunday, June 21st, confirmation will take place at Emanuel's Lutheran church in the English language. There will be only one service, beginning at 9:00 o'clock.

IMPROVEMENT TO TAWAS CITY PARK UNDER WAY

Tawas City park has assumed a very pleasing appearance during the past week through the efforts of the Tawas City Improvement association. The grass has been cut and trees and shrubbery trimmed. Fire places, seats and tables have been arranged through the park.

The new bath house and water slide will be erected within the next few days. The benefit show given at the State Theatre Wednesday evening to aid in paying for the bath house was a financial success. About $35.00 was cleared. Members of the Improvement Association have contributed a considerable amount toward this fund and further contributions from citizens of the city will be asked to complete the work.

These improvements will not only make the park more attractive to tourists, but will add to the pleasure of our local people who take advantage of our wonderful bathing beach.

BACCALAUREATE SERVICES FOR LOCAL GRADUATES HELD SUNDAY NIGHT

The Senior class of the Tawas City high school held its baccalaureate services at the Baptist church Sunday evening, June 7. Rev. F. S. Metcalf gave the address and the invocation was offered by Rev. M. A. Sommerfeld.

Mrs. R. A. Hamilton, pianist of the local Baptist church, played the march for the class and high school teachers. Eileen Nevanpa and Sylvia Koskie favored the congregation with a beautiful vocal duet, "In the Garden of Tomorrow," the accompaniment being played by Miss Marjorie Sage, music instructor for the local school.

The text used by Rev. Metcalf was taken from Isaiah, 30:7, "Thy Strength is To Sit Still." This thought was developed in a very interesting manner by the speaker. He spoke of different kinds of strength; that is, the strength of a crane, strength of country, the strength to overcome evil, and the strength to do good. He also developed the thought that strength was obtained by different methods; that is, the strength of a lion is in his shoulders, the strength of an eagle is in his wings, while the strength of some is obtained by "sitting still." Rev. Metcalf then showed that strength could be obtained by sitting still at the feet of the Great Teacher, by sitting still at the cross of Jesus, and by sitting still under the providence of God. These examples were applied to the lives of the graduates in the form of advice in regards to methods of living.

The front of the church was prettily decorated by members of the Junior class, in the Seniors' colors, blue and silver. The class and all concerned are to be congratulated upon the success of one of the important events of the school year.

80 RECEIVE 8TH GRADE DIPLOMAS

The county eighth grade graduates received their diplomas at the Community Building at East Tawas, Thursday, June 11. Of the one hundred five who wrote the state examination, eighty were successful.

A splendid musical program was given by the music departments of our high schools. The Oscoda high school band played while the people were gathering. Then the following program was given:

Invocation, Rev. Jones; music, several splendid selections, closing with "The Star Spangled Banner." Oscoda high school band; music, song by mixed chorus, piano solo by Lucille Lixey and two violin solos by Edward Martin, St. Joseph high school; music, Girls' Glee Club, boys' quartette, and cornet solo by Philip Giroux, Tawas City high school; address, "Preparing for Leadership," by F. A. Reagan, sanitary inspector in our four-county health unit; music, Girls' Glee Club and high school band, East Tawas high school; presentation of diplomas by Margaret E. Worden; benediction, Rev. Jones.

Our high schools are to be congratulated on their splendid work in music. The selections which they gave were greatly enjoyed by all and we thank them for giving us such a splendid program.

In his address on leadership, Mr. Reagan brought out the value of getting into school activities and being a leader. Even if a student is not physically able to enter sports he has his class honors to work for. Older people should also enter the activities of the community and if they can take the part of leader do so. Contacts made in these activities whether in school or community are of great value to all.

The State Fair championship was won this year by Bruce Burt of Grant No. 2. Bruce had a mark of 90 on the test and an average in his other subjects of 76.8. Howard Cross of Wilber No. 4 is the alternate. He had a mark of 89 on the questions and average of 72.8 in his other subjects.

Highest averages: One room school, Ruth Goodrow, Plainfield No. 6, 78; Two room school, Ruth Kattelman, Tawas No. 9, 75.4; Graded school, Doris Makinen, Alabaster, 80.

BIBLE INSTITUTE JUNE 22 TO 28

The Saginaw Bay District Institute will be held June 22 to 28 at East Tawas. Pastors and Epworth Leaguers will come from the various towns beginning south of Mackinaw to Bay City, Saginaw, and their suburban towns. Following are a few features of the program:

Morning Watch—addresses by Rev. C. E. Doty, Minister First Church, Bay City. General theme: "Wayside Adventures with Jesus."

The courses are: "The Crisis of the Christ"—a study in the life of Jesus. A required course in Bible study. Instructor: Dr. Frederic S. Goodrich, professor of Biblical literature and history in Albion College.

"Christ and the World Task"—a study in world missions. Instructor: Miss Josephine Ainsworth, general secretary, Y. W. C. A., Saginaw.

"The Message of Jesus and the World Today"—a study of present day social, economic and political conditions and institutions in the light of the teaching of Jesus. Instructor: Wesley J. Dudgeon, Minister, Midland, Mich.

"The Epworth League in My Church"—a study in the organization and administration of the local Chapter. A required course in general methods. Instructor: J. Paul Pumphrey, Minister, Freeland.

WILLIAM HAINES AMUSES IN A COMEDY ROMANCE

William Haines plays a pants presser in a tailor shop—later becomes a big business executive—does some serious dramatic acting amid much delectable clowning, and tells a typical story of American business success in "A Tailor Made Man," his new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring picture playing at the Family Theatre Sunday and Monday, June 14 and 15.

The story is an ultra-modern drama of New York. One of the most elaborate casts in a long time appears with the comedy star, Dorothy Jordan, of "Min and Bill," "Devil May Care," and other hits, plays the feminine lead as Tanya, the tailor's daughter—a demure little thing but very charming. Joseph Cawthorn, long famed for his German comedy delineations, is imitable as Huber, the tailor, and Henry Armet, a character another great piece of present work as the Bolshevik tailor's helper.

Marjorie Rambeau and Hedda Hopper are stately society women. William Austin provides some English character comedy; Hale Hamilton is the social climber's husband in the story and Ian Keith the serious "Dr. VonSonntag."

So drop everything and see this laugh of a lifetime. Also showing "Our Gang" comedy.

CAMPBELL—LESLIE

The Jas. H. Leslie home was the scene of a very pretty wedding last Thursday, June 4th, at 6 o'clock, when Miss Nyda Campbell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Campbell, became the bride of George Leslie. The young couple were attended by Waldo Leslie and Miss Alta Leslie. "I Love You Truly" was sung by Miss Marjorie Sage, accompanied by Mrs. Frank Dease. The marriage service was read by Rev. Frank Metcalf.

The home was beautifully decorated with green and yellow, and the color scheme was carried out in the dinner, which was served to 35 guests.

The newly-weds are well known in Tawas. The groom is operator at the State Theatre, and Mrs. Leslie is a graduate of Tawas high. They will make their home in the city. The best wishes of their many friends go with them.

Out of town relatives who attended the wedding were, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Campbell of New York, parents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Charters, Mr. and Mrs. John O'Farrell, Mrs. Fred Mills and Miss Lois Leslie, all of Whittemore, and Mr. and Mrs. Simon Goupil of East Tawas.

ASK FOR BIDS ON EAST TAWAS—OSCODA SECTION OF SHORE ROAD

Sealed proposals are being asked on 13.612 miles of grading between East Tawas and Oscoda on the new Shore road, according to a report from the State Highway department. Bids will be opened June 23.

Six miles of paving on the Shore road south of Alpena has been let. The Smith Paving company of Dearborn submitted the low bid, which was $141,354.08.

The contract for painting Matthew street bridge in Tawas City has been awarded. The contract price is $200.21.

HALE VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL CLOSURE

Last Sunday evening the Hale Vacation Bible school closed with a fine program given before a large crowd assembled in the public school building. The program included songs, Bible stories, flag salutes, prayers and dramatizations by the children, followed by an interesting talk by Miss Florence Latter, who has recently returned from mission work in Porto Rico.

The entire work of the school was centered about the Porto Rican project. Some fifty gifts were brought by the boys and girls and packed in a Friendship Treasure Chest to be sent to the children of Porto Rico.

The handbook of the school was especially fine. Illustrated booklets using the theme, "God's Gifts," were made by the primaries. "Advancing in Peace and Good-Will" was the Junior study, and the booklets made by the children on this subject showed much thought and careful workmanship. Soap models of "God's House" and artistically mounted pictures, as well as scrap books, were also made.

Much credit for the success of the school is due the teachers, Mrs. W. E. Glendon, Mrs. Marion Jennings and Mrs. Nellie Jennings. The enrollment of the school was 41. The expense was cared for by a generous free-will offering of $4.61.

Four vacation schools are in session this week. Mrs. Earl Daugherty and Mrs. Fred Latter are teaching at the Cottage school; Mrs. Wm. Herriman, Mrs. Ira Egan and Mrs. Fred Pfahl are instructors in the school held in the Grant Township Hall; the Misses Hazel Zurt, Isabelle King and Cella Smith are leaders at the Grant school; Rev. Metcalf and daughter, Miss Jeanne, are in charge of the Vine school.

The fine response of the local workers to the co-operation of the various school officials, and the interest of children and parents is most gratifying. Many more schools are being arranged for later dates.

STATE AGAIN OFFERS TWO DOUBLE FEATURE PROGRAMS

The State Theatre offers two double feature programs next week.

On Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday will be shown "The Devil To Pay" and "Man of the World." Ronald Colman has the featured role in "The Devil To Pay," a sophisticated comedy drama. Loretta Young provides the feminine interest. William Powell gives another breathless performance which makes "Man of the World," the second feature for the same nights, a dramatic screen sensation. Blonde Carole Lombard has the feminine lead role in this fascinating drama.

Friday and Saturday are offered "Gun Smoke" and "The Storm." "Gun Smoke" is a thrilling Western picture with a modern-day plot, and has Richard Arlen, Mary Brian, Eugene Pallette, William Boyd and Louise Fazenda in the leading parts. "The Storm" is a romantic drama of the human triangle in a snow-bound cabin in the Canadian wilds, and has Luce Velez in the featured role. William Boyd and Paul Cavanaugh head the supporting cast.

WATCH FOR YOUR NAME IN STATE ADVERTISEMENTS

If your full name appears in a State Theatre advertisement it will entitle you and your husband or wife or friend to attend any show billed in that particular advertisement. Watch the State advertisements—your name may be in this week.

20 TO GRADUATE FROM E. T. HIGH

EAST TAWAS SCHOOL NEWS

The following is the Baccalaureate service for the County Normal and Seniors, Sunday, June 14th: Processional hymn, "Come, Thou Almighty King"; Lord's Prayer; Scripture lesson; Apostles Creed; Invocation; Reverie, cello solo. R. W. Nordling; Address, "Preparation for Life"; Ray, C. E. Edinger; Music, Girls' Glee Club; Benediction; Recessional hymn, "America the Beautiful."

The following will be the program at the commencement exercises for the County Normal and Seniors on Thursday, June 18: Athalia, march, and Carmen, selection, by East Tawas high school orchestra; address by Dr. A. N. Jorgensen of Michigan State Normal College; selection by E. T. H. S. orchestra; presentation of high school graduates, Principal Stephen Youngs; presentation of diplomas, F. J. Adams, president of Board of Education; presentation of County Normal graduates, Principal Reine T. Osgerby; presentation of diplomas, Margaret E. Worden, County School Commissioner; Marcheta, Stars and Stripes Forever, mixed chorus of graduates and Juniors.

No promotion certificates will be given above the sixth grade. Any subjects in which an "E" has been received above the sixth grade will have to be repeated.

Last week the baseball team finished a fairly successful season, having won eight games and lost six. There were five freshmen and three sophomores who had regular berths on this year's squad, which makes it look bright for the next two or three seasons. In the final game the locals lost to West Branch, 6 to 5, in the most thrilling and best played game of the season.

Tuesday, East Tawas' track team lost a dual meet with Oscoda by an overwhelming score—77 to 32. No track records were broken. Gehres, Oscoda's star track man, scored 26 points, winning five firsts and one third. L. McKay, East Tawas, was high point man for the locals, winning the mile and half mile. He came within two seconds of breaking the track record for the half mile.

The following is the program for the music concert given Thursday night, June 11: Marjorie, waltz, East Tawas Junior orchestra; Violin demonstration, beginners on the violin; Dorr Juan, East Tawas Junior orchestra; Swing Song, children's chorus, including Kindergarten; Vocal Combat, sixth, seventh and eighth grades; Carmen, selection, Farcarolle and Minuet Gioso, East Tawas high school orchestra; Reading, Miss H. Hallanger; Vocal Solo, Supt. H. T. Swanson; Stars and Stripes Forever (march), Kentucky Cardinal, Chinese Patrol, Jolly Tars (march). When You and I Were Young Maggie, Spirit of American Patrol, Star Spangled Banner—East Tawas high school band.

AYRES HAS LEADING ROLE IN POWERFUL LOVE STORY

"Iron Man," starring Lew Ayres, will be the attraction at the State Theatre on Sunday and Monday.

This Universal film is considered one of the strong pictures of the season. It is a great love story from the pen of W. R. Burnett, who is also the author of "Little Caesar." Both novels were selected as the "book of the month" and have been tremendous sellers.

"Iron Man" tells the story of the rise and fall of a prizefighter. It is a powerful story, rooted deeply in American life, and with a passionate, if unusual, love theme.

Humane System Helps the Convicts

Prison Life Is Softened Under Scientific Methods, Hoover Is Told.

Washington.—The rigors of prison life of the past are being softened under humane and scientific methods. President Hoover has been informed in a letter from Sanford Bates, director of the bureau of prisons.

The murderous uprising in prisons during recent years may be avoided under this gentler system of dealing with people convicted of crime, he indicated.

The reform program which Bates outlined proposed:

New buildings, decent living conditions, improved diet, better qualified prison guards, probation and parole, and individual education of prisoners.

Because of aroused public sentiment and the co-operation of the administration, the program is already well under way, but there is much yet to be done, he reported to his chief.

"We are not yet out of the woods by a considerable margin," he said. "Our main penitentiaries are still grievously overcrowded. They are too overcrowded to permit of carrying out our program completely."

The argument that prisons might be made such nice places to live in that they would fail to serve as deterrents to crime was also considered by Bates. He took the position that punishment would not lose its sting "simply because it is constructive."

Fair Discipline.
"A prison need not have dirt, idleness, graft, and cruelty to deter persons from committing crime," he said.

"A strict program of prophylaxis, industry, education, and fair discipline with a modicum of constructive recreation will certainly not induce people to commit depredations on society."

The letter was in the nature of a report. It was requested by the President to ascertain what had been done to alleviate the situation which has aroused the country during the last few years.

Bates found there were only two problems involved: Overcrowding and the tremendous increase in prisoners as well as the reform methods of handling them. Six new federal prisons and four jails are being used, or constructed to meet the over-crowding situation, he said.

The disciplinary barracks has been taken from the War department; about $3,100,000 is being spent for Northeast penitentiary in central Pennsylvania; 1,000 acres of land has been secured at El Reno, Okla.; 3,000 acres at Camp Lee reservation near Petersburg, Va.; $1,000,000 of additional construction is being done at Chillicothe, Ohio; $2,500,000 is being spent in the Ozarks near Springfield, Mo.

Jails are being started at New Orleans, Billings, Mont., El Paso, Texas, and in the Detroit area.

Prison Camps a Help.
Relief of jail congestion by the establishment of temporary prison camps was advocated. About 1,240 prisoners now are being cared for in eight which have been started.

Regarding this method, Bates stated: "To the extent operated they have solved the problem of overcrowding and idleness. No bloodhounds, guns or walls surround these camps. A strict honor basis is maintained."

"The number of escapes from these camps has been negligible, demonstrating that a large proportion of federal penitentiary prisoners can be trusted to work out their sentences in much less secure institutions than have been traditionally thought necessary."

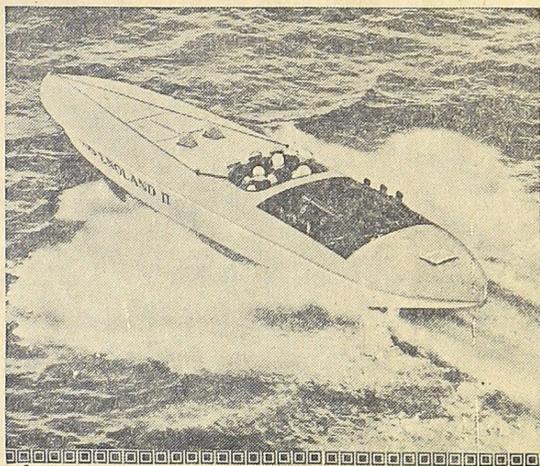

Under the new parole system, instituted by a full time board, the number of prisoners on parole has been increased from 963 on July 1, 1929, to 2,638 on March 1, 1931.

A year ago 4,102 persons were on probation, today there are 9,253.

NILE RIVER DESTROYING PICTURESQUE ISIS RUINS

Removal to the United States Suggested in Order to Preserve Ancient Structure.

Paris.—The Temple of Isis, on the island of Philae, is in danger of being destroyed by the ravages of the River Nile, and art lovers of many nations have demanded that something be done to save it.

Philae is near Assuan, Egypt, and south of Syene. It is a small granite rock fringed with rich greenery, about 1,200 feet long and 450 feet wide, almost covered with ancient buildings of architectural beauty and historic interest.

The great Temple of Isis, to whom the island was sacred, was built chiefly by Ptolemy Epiphanes and continued by his successors, especially Ptolemy III.

The processions of pilgrims approached the island from the south, were received by the priests at a flight of steps at the southwest corner and then passed into a court with a colonnade to the right and left, erected by Tiberius and later Roman emperors.

To the north stands the great pylons, or gateway, 60 feet high and 120 feet wide. This is the oldest part of the temple and bears the name of Nectanebes II, who lived about 361 B. C. Beyond is another court, with several chambers and a small chapel. Another smaller pylon gives entrance to the temple proper, at the northern end of the irregular complex of buildings, converted into a Christian church in 577.

The great dam at Assuan, completed early in this century, did not injure the ruins, but the deepening of the dam by 26 feet, carried out in recent years, has submerged them. This, however, was said to have caused no serious injuries, but rather to have above ten years of age unable to read and write, which represented 15.3 per cent of Georgia's population within that age group. The committee has reported that under the leadership of State Superintendent of Schools M. L. Druggan, the number of illiterates has shrunk to 210,736, until now but 9.4 per cent of the population above ten years cannot read and write.

The committee also reported much progress among the Blackfeet Indians in Montana. Within two weeks of instruction, 236 adult Indians between twenty-two and eighty-four years of age acquired some ability in reading and writing.

Mississippi ranked second to Georgia in progress. That state reduced illiteracy by 4.1 per cent of the population.

Open Window Started Girls on Burglary Career

East St. Louis, Ill.—Fourteen-year-old Emilie Galimat and twelve-year-old Eunice Fritsche, have confessed to a series of robberies, their career, due they say, to a housewife leaving a bedroom window open. The two saw pretty dresses hanging inside, went through the window and took them. Since then, police say, they stole a canary in a cage, radio tubes, three paper dolls, lingerie and suit cases, before arrested.

saved them at first from the inroads of weather, rains, the sun and winds, which had caused crumbling.

Now, however, rapid disintegration of hieroglyphs and small details of relief is reported, arousing concern. A wealthy antiquarian has proposed that the temple be dismantled stone by stone and transported to the United States, to be set up as of old in a safe place. Others would move it to another island in the Nile, to maintain the temple amid its ancient associations.

Unless some definite action is taken soon, it was said, there will be no way of saving the ruins from total disintegration. The historic old pile is said to be falling apart rapidly, and is doubted that it can be saved.

Balsa wood is nearly white or sometimes tinted in red, showing practically no distinction between heartwood and sapwood. It has a silky texture, is rather coarse but straight-grained and is the lightest of all woods, even lighter than true cork.

TALES... of the TRIBES

By EDITHA L. WATSON

The Wichita

The written story of the Wichita Indians begins when "The Turk," that Pawnee romancer, told Coronado that "Quivira" was a country abounding in gold.

Coronado naturally demanded to be guided to this wonderful province, which his own imaginings painted with the brightest colors, and "The Turk" led the Spaniards out on the great plains, hoping that they would be lost and would perish.

How "The Turk" was strangled to death for his perfidy; how Ysopete, a native of "Quivira," was chosen guide, and how the Spaniards reached the grass-lodges of the Wichita, the "Province of Quivira," only to turn back without gold, and disappointed beyond measure because their dreams had not materialized, is a story which is told elsewhere. But it brings us to the Wichita territory, which reached from southern Kansas to the Brazos river in Texas, and begins their history with the first recorded mention of the nation—that of Coronado in 1540.

The wonderful cities which the conqueror had expected to see were groups of conical houses, sometimes 50 feet in diameter, made of framework covered with grass, so that they resembled huge haystacks. The Wichita had large cornfields and also raised tobacco and pumpkins, probably all the "golden" treasure they had ever possessed. The people were scantily clothed, but lavishly tattooed, and were fond of holding dances. This, then, was the "Province of Quivira," whose inhabitants were laden with ornaments of gold!

After a short stay in the country which was so unlike his optimistic dreams, Coronado went back to Mexico, but he left a priest, Fray Juan de Padilla, with several companions, to undertake the first missionary work ever attempted among the Plains Indians. Fray Juan was killed about three years later, out of jealousy, because he proposed visiting and teaching another tribe.

This must have been but a passing affection for the white man's teachings. Nearly two hundred years later, when they were visited by the French commander La Harpe, they were found practicing cannibalism, preparing to eat several prisoners taken from another tribe.

The Wichita slowly moved West and South and became a Texas people as time went on. The Tawakoni, the Waco, and several other tribes speaking the same language, had confederated with them, so that they were numerous and powerful. They also finally acquired a working knowledge of the advantages of civilization. We hear of them in 1758, repelling a Spanish attack upon their main village on the Red river, which was a well fortified place; displaying the flag of France, and not lacking for arms.

Later, they asked for peace, and also requested that a mission be established in their country, but it was refused them, and they went on the warpath again.

An epidemic of smallpox swept over Texas in 1801, and the Wichita suffered great losses from this scourge, about one-third of their number dying from the disease. The Osage came from the north on raids, and the white settlers were hostile, so that until the annexation of Texas to the United States, they were constantly decreasing in numbers.

When peace was established by government treaty in 1835, the Wichita proper moved to Oklahoma, where Fort Sill now stands, later moving to Rush Springs, while the Tawakoni and the Waco remained in Texas. These tribes were later included in peace treaties and were moved onto a reservation in Texas, but the Texans were so opposed to their presence that they were taken to a temporary reservation in Oklahoma.

The Comanche, always wild, had blamed the Wichita proper for an attack upon their people by United States troops, and had sprung upon the Wichita with such venom that they fled to Fort Arbuckle, where they were given protection.

There is not much more to their history. All these wars, division, disease, and the effect which so much change and bewilderment has upon uncivilized people, had weakened the nation until it could no longer flourish. The Civil war drove them to seek refuge in Kansas, and while there they suffered severely from disease and hardships. When they returned to Oklahoma, they were assigned a reservation, but later (1902) they were given allotments in severalty, and the rest of their land was opened for settlement.

"I'll Call Her Old Glory!"

CAPT. WILLIAM DRIVER

CAPT. DRIVER'S MONUMENT IN OLD CITY CEMETERY, NASHVILLE, TENN.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THE American flag, whose birthday we celebrate on June 14, is known by a number of figurative names. It is probable that it was called "The Red, White and Blue" or "The Stars and Stripes" very soon after the first flag was made in accordance with the resolution passed by the Continental congress on June 14, 1777. "That the flag of the United States be 13 stripes, alternate red and white; that the union be 13 stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation."

The name "The Star-Spangled Banner" dates from 1814 when Francis Scott Key, watching the British bombardment of Fort McHenry, was inspired to write the poem which was later set to music and became the official national anthem. But the name "Old Glory" is a more recent one. It was just a hundred years ago that a Yankee skipper had the inspiration which resulted in that affectionate name being bestowed upon our national colors. Here is the story of how "Old Glory" got that name:

From the beginning of New England maritime history the Driver family of Salem, Mass., had been leaders in the shipping trade, not only as shipbuilders but as owners, captains and sailors of their own vessels. In the year 1831 Capt. William Driver was carrying on the family tradition. As a boy of twelve he had shipped on a sailing vessel for Europe and before he was twenty he was master of the brig, Charles Baggett, one of that innumerable fleet which sailed the Seven Seas and carried the name of Salem to every corner of the earth.

In September of that year Captain Driver was preparing to sail for a trip around the world. Just before leaving a party of his friends gathered to present him with a farewell gift, an American flag, because he was noted for his love for the national colors and what they betokened. Captain Driver was on deck to receive them and a sailor, carrying the flag, folded in triangular form, stepped forward and began a carefully memorized speech.

"In ancient times, when an ocean voyage was looked upon with superstitious dread," he said, "it was the custom on the eve of departure to roll the banner in the form of a triangle. When ready the priest stepped forward and taking the banner in hand, sprinkled it with consecrated water and dedicated it to 'God the Father, God the son and God the Holy host,' turning the point of the triangle upward at the name of each, thus calling on that unity of Creator, Redeemer and Sanctifier to bless the national emblem and prosper the voyagers and their friends. The flag thus consecrated was then hoisted to the masthead."

He then adjusted the flag to the halyards and hoisted it to its position at the masthead. Captain Driver, overcome with emotion, was silent for a moment. Then as he looked aloft and saw the flag which he loved so well floating in the breeze he exclaimed: "I'll call her Old Glory, boys; Old Glory!" And thus was the American flag christened with a new name for he was the first to use that name and by no other did he ever refer to it.

The voyage which was thus so appropriately inaugurated carried the original "Old Glory" into many harbors throughout the world and into even more during the next six years while Captain Driver sailed the seas. During one of his voyages into the Orient he had made a camphorwood sea chest, brass-bound and decorated with nailheads, in which he placed the original "Old Glory" when it was not floating at the masthead of his ship. And this flag had an even more thrilling later history than its early one.

In 1837 Captain Driver retired from the sea and went to Nashville, Tenn., to make his home, but when he sold his ship he did not sell "Old Glory." Safe in its camphorwood chest it went to Tennessee with him. On patriotic occasions and on his own birthday—St. Patrick's day, for he was born March 17, 1803—it was taken from the chest and hung to the breeze for all to see and to reverence. And Captain Driver invariably saluted it with these words, "My country, my flag—Old Glory!"

As the dispute between the North and South became more intense and the Civil war drew nearer and nearer, Captain Driver became increasingly unpopular with his neighbors in Nashville because of his outspoken devotion to his country and his flag. During the Presidential campaign "Old Glory" was displayed on a rope stretched from his home to a tree across the street but the bitterness of that campaign brought to Captain Driver's ears unmistakable hints that his flag might be stolen or destroyed, so he bought another flag for display and retired "Old Glory" once more to its camphorwood chest.

After the secession of Tennessee from the Union, the captain began to fear for safety of his flag at the hands of the Confederates. So he took it by night to the house of a Union sympathizer named Bailey and asked Mrs. Bailey and her daughters, Mary and Patience, to hide it for him so that it could not be found and destroyed if the Confederates searched his house. At the time Mary and Patience Bailey were making a comfort, padding it heavily with cotton, and thus suggested an ideal hiding place. So Captain Driver folded "Old Glory," placed it between the layers of cotton in the comfort where the Bailey girls tucked it in and sewed up the outside covering. Again at night Captain Driver took the comfort to his home and placed it in a large iron wash kettle in the attic of his home.

There "Old Glory" stayed until Union troops occupied Nashville in February, 1862. Immediately thereafter Captain Driver and a group of soldiers ripped open the comfort, took out the flag and hoisted it over the state capitol to the strains of "The Star-Spangled Banner," played by a regimental band. It remained there for hours, but so fearful was Captain Driver that his flag might even then be injured by a hostile hand that he stood guard over it day and night. In the morning "Old Glory" was taken down and replaced with another American flag. By this time it was very old, much worn and the captain feared that a strong wind would whip it to pieces.

After this "Old Glory" was always kept in the captain's house and late in his life he gave it to his daughter, Mrs. M. J. Roland of Nevada, where, so far as is known, it still is. In 1907 the flag had become so worn that Mrs. Roland placed it on a piece of sheeting and stitched it fast to the cloth to preserve it for future generations of the family. Captain Driver died March 2, 1886, and was buried in Old City cemetery in Nashville.

Just as it was a Yankee sea captain which gave to our flag its name of "Old Glory," so it was that another Yankee—a soldier, instead of a sailor, however—who took another "Old Glory" on one of the most romantic expeditions in our history. Bates was his name and he had served as color sergeant in the Twenty-fourth Massachusetts regiment during the Civil war. In 1872 Color Sergeant Bates had an idea which he proceeded to put into effect in a dramatic fashion.

At that time there was much talk in this country of the hostility of Great Britain toward the United States. Determined to find out for himself whether this talk was fostered by politicians for their own selfish ends or was a genuine antipathy, Bates resolved to cross the Atlantic, start from the northern border of England and march to London bearing aloft an unfurled American flag just as he had done on the battlefields of 1861-65. His reception by the people of England would show whether or not there was any foundation for this talk of John Bull's hostility toward Uncle Sam.

Clad in his uniform of blue, Sergeant Bates on November 5—Guy Fawkes day and the anniversary of the Battle of Inkerman—left Edinburgh for Gretna Green. At Sark bridge on the border line between Scotland and England he unfurled "Old Glory" and stood beneath it with uncovered head. Then he started on his march. That evening he tramped into Carlisle where a group of commercial travelers at the Bush hotel gave him a hearty welcome. More than that; they sent word on ahead of his strange pilgrimage and when he came to the mining towns of Penrith and Shap, great crowds of miners were on hand to cheer him.

The warm welcome given Bates there was repeated in every place through which he traveled.

The London daily press gave much space to the American soldier on December 2. A dense mass packed the Guildhall yard, where a British sergeant was carrying the English standard. Bates was borne on the shoulders of men into the crowded Guildhall, and then back to the carriage, from which he made a speech before returning his flag.

Bates' reception in London was the crowning touch to his pilgrimage. There was no longer any doubt of John Bull's friendliness toward Uncle Sam, at least so far as the common people of England were concerned

CHIC MILLINERY FOR SUMMER INCLUDES VARIETY OF STRAWS

Group of Charming Summer Hats.

EVERY sort of straw, from the new handsome rough braids which are the "talk of town" this season, to the airiest, fairest types. Every contour from the smartest of smart sailors to romantic and flattering face-framing effects, every color harmony or color contrast, thus runs the story of whims and brims as they enter the plot of summer millinery.

They're the latest and the swankiest, are the new sailors, or anything that has happened in the way of summer millinery for sports, travel or jaunty daytime wear. If you have neglected to acquire a nobby sailor, there will be something lacking in the chic of your summer wardrobe.

If you take your cue from lovely Noel Francis of Radio Pictures who is shown in this group in three poses, you will include in your collection of summer chapeaux, first of all a modish sailor. The sailor which Miss Francis has chosen and which is shown centered to the right in the illustration is one of the very new and stunning rough straws in a delectable green.

The next selection of this pretty radio star is, as shown at the top in this illustration, one of the very flattering and youthful "flop hats" of exquisite black milan—just the sort of hat which looks well with most type of frock during the sunny midsummer hours, and then milan is, oh, so smart.

Of course, with the flattery, fussy, flowery garden-party frock, one simply must wear a dressy hat with a sheer and picturesque brim. Well, here it is, to the left in the group. It is a pretty gesture which milliners are making this season in that they are working narrow hair braid in a lacy way as in this instance.

As to the hat which dainty Rochelle from 36 or 40-inch material, the circles joined with rose bias trim, which comes cut on a true bias, just the right width, in boil-fast colors, ready to apply with a row of machine stitching. First cut a perfect circle the entire width of the material from newspaper, to use as a pattern. For the opening make a slash in the printed circle from a point on the edge to the center, and bind the slash with the bias trim. For the handle use a 12-inch-long band of the cretonne bound with the bias trim. Join the edges of the band and stitch securely at the top of the slash.

Lay the right sides of the circles together with the lengthwise threads corresponding, baste and bind the edges with the bias trim, first sewing it with the circle edges, then turning over and stitching it down on the cretonne side. You will have no trouble with this step, as the bias comes already folded and creased for this very purpose. Use trim stitch thread in matching or contrasting color for the stitching. Just thread the coarsest of machine needles with the thread, also the bobbin, and sew as you would for ordinary stitching, af-

Suggestions for the Bridal Shower.

Hudson, youngest of Radio Pictures featured players, is wearing (shown last in the group) it is of feather-weight baki, bordered and banded with sheer horsehair.

For the Bridal Shower. We have left to the last minute the making of a pretty and attractive trinket which we expected to have ready for the summer bride's shower. What can we give her? Something that will surprise and be of the greatest use, and that will not cost more than a dollar, for there's the wedding, present to come, and of course, a new frock to wear to her marriage, and it's new hat time, and all that. So let's find something really useful that can be made in a jiffy, for time, like money, certainly has wings. Here are a few suggestions: There's a perfect peach of a laundry bag, called the Japanese bag because when hung it resembles a Japanese lantern. The one shown in the sketch has the upper half of rose figured cretonne, and the lower half of plain rose sa-teen. It is made from two circles cut er setting the gauge for nine to ten stitches to the inch. From the corners cut off in forming the circles you can make four hot dish corners, padded and bound with bias trim, as shown in the sketch.

Another useful gift, done the bias trim time-saving way, is the apron sketched, and made without a pattern. Simply take a square of the material, fold on the bias, cut out a circle for the neckline, shape under the arms and at the corners, as shown in the diagram, and bind the whole with bias trim. From the pieces left over you will have enough for pockets and the tie at the back.

Still another dollar idea for the bridal shower is the set of sewing bag, tooth paste, brush and other toilet article receptacle, and wash cloth bag, shown at the upper left of the sketch. These, too, are all bound in bias trim, and with a bias trim stitched motif in two colors on each by way of decoration.

DISHES THAT ARE DIFFERENT

A cream puff pastry is very simple to make, but the baking is the test of its perfection. Never remove the puffs from the oven until they feel light when lifted from the pan.

Bagdad Cream Puffs.—Heat together one cupful of boiling water and one-third cupful of corn oil. When boiling add altogether three-fourths of a cupful of flour mixed with one and one-half table-spoonfuls of cornstarch and one-half teaspoonful of salt, all well sifted together. Stir and mix vigorously until the mixture leaves the sides of the pan. Cool and add one at a time three eggs, beating well after the addition of each; now add one teaspoonful of baking powder and beat well and drop by spoonfuls on a baking sheet, shaping into circular form. Bake from 35 to 45 minutes, depending upon the size of the puff. Cool, cut with a sharp knife near the bottom of the puff, remove any doughy center and fill with the following:

Cut one-half a package of dates and one cupful of marshmallows with the scissors. Dip the scissors into water to keep the mallows from sticking. Chop one-half cupful of nuts, add one cupful of cream beaten until stiff, add a pinch of salt and a flavoring of vanilla. This amount will make one dozen large puffs.

Irish Kisses.—To one-half cupful of peanut butter add one-half cupful of dates, three-fourths of a cupful of powdered sugar and two unbeaten egg whites. Mix and beat until they are thoroughly blended. Drop by teaspoonfuls on buttered baking sheet and bake 15 minutes. This makes 18 kisses.

As the apples which have been kept in cold storage have lost some of their freshness and flavor add a half cupful of grapefruit juice to them when putting to stew, instead of water; the result will be a different and tasty applesauce.

"Biting" Remarks Natural in Contest Over Teeth

"Your money or your teeth!" was the demand and it happened, not in Chicago, but in a little Hungarian village. And the dentist was the hold-up man.

It seems that the patient, who had sent his false teeth to the dentist for polishing had not paid a bill which his mother had contracted several years previously. The dentist had bided his time, and now refused to return the man's teeth until he had paid his mother's dental bill.

The toothless man sued on the ground of "infamous abuse of professional ethics." The dentist naively countered with the statement that since he couldn't eat without money, it was only justice that the other man couldn't eat because he had no teeth. The court made several biting remarks which neither party to the suit relished.—Washington Post.

Pretty Indian Legend

The custom of sacrificing a beautiful maiden by sending her over Niagara falls in a canoe was practiced by the Indian tribes about the falls. The maiden selected paddled a white canoe, filled with fruits and flowers, over the falls. It was counted a great honor to be chosen as the sacrificial victim. Once the only daughter of a Seneca chief was selected by the gathered tribes. Her father loved her dearly, yet he showed no sign of grief. The revels continued during the whole day, and when night came and the moon rose the girl paddled her canoe toward the falls, amidst much tumult and shouting. Suddenly another white canoe darted from the opposite bank. It contained the chief, her father; the canoes met, and together they went to their death over the falls.

Anglicized Term

The word "Dutch" is an English form of "Duetsch" and related words of the Germanic tongues. Formerly it applied to all peoples of Germanic stock or language but recent usage restricts it more or less to Hollanders. The "Pennsylvania Dutch" who play an important part in the life and history of that state, and of the nation, are almost entirely of German and German Swiss descent.

High Maternity Death Rate

The maternity death rate in the United States is higher than in any other civilized country. Per 1,000 live births, 6.5 mothers are lost. It is believed that with adequate maternity care two-thirds of the lives thus lost might be saved.

There's health and happiness for children in a Michigan vacation

Have your boy or girl telephone home frequently from camp

MICHIGAN is unexcelled as a summer playground for children. Scores of summer camps dot the shores of Michigan's lakes, offering every out-of-door advantage for an enjoyable, health-building vacation.

While the children are in camp, have them telephone home at pre-arranged intervals. Occasional "telephone visits" will help prevent homesickness and will banish your worries.

Long distance rates are surprisingly low!

Safety Glass

Ford cars are now equipped with safety glass in all doors and windows at a small extra charge

$15 for the Coupe, De Luxe Coupe, Sport Coupe or Convertible Cabriolet $20 for the Tudor Sedan, Standard Sedan, De Luxe Sedan, Town Sedan or Victoria

THE Triplex safety glass windshield has always been an outstanding feature of the Model A Ford. By reducing the dangers of flying glass, it has saved many lives and prevented countless injuries in automobile collisions.

Now comes a further assurance of safety to every Ford owner . . . polished plate safety glass in ALL DOORS AND WINDOWS at slight additional cost.

The charge for this extra protection is unusually low because of large production and the development of new methods of manufacture. Simply tell the dealer when you buy the Ford that you want "safety plate glass in all doors and windows" and the car will be factory-equipped for you in that manner.

Today, as before, the safety glass windshield is furnished as standard equipment on all Ford cars without extra charge.

FORD OWNERS This announcement refers only to NEW CARS. Ford dealers are not in a position to install safety glass in the windows of your present Ford at the above prices.

NOTICE OF MEETING OF DRAINAGE BOARD

To Whom It May Concern:

Notice is hereby given that on the 28th day of May, 1931, an application was filed with James P. Baikie, county drain commissioner of the county of Arenac, asking for the laying out and designating a drainage district for the Flood Control Drain in the townships of Alabaster, Sherman, Burlingame, Reno, Grant, and Plainfield, county of Isosco, townships of Au Gres, Sims, Turner and Whitney, county of Arenac, and townships of Hill, Logan and Nichland, county of Ogemaw.

And Whereas, a certified copy of said application was served upon Robert C. Arn, county drain commissioner of the county of Isosco, Elmer E. Scott, county drain commissioner of the county of Ogemaw, and the Commissioner of Agriculture, by James P. Baikie, county drain commissioner of the county of Arenac;

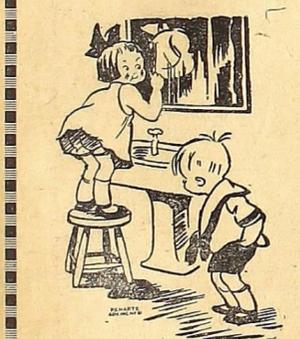

Now, Therefore, in accordance with Act No. 316, P. A. 1923, as amended by Act No. 318, P. A. 1929, a meeting of the Drainage Board of said drainage district will be held at Community Hall, in the Village of Turner, county of Arenac, on the 30th day of June, 1931, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to determine the practicability of said improvement.

Now, Therefore, all persons owning lands liable to an assessment for benefits or whose lands will be crossed by said drain, or any municipality affected, are requested to be present at said meeting, if they so desire.

Dated at Lansing, Michigan, this 2nd day of June, 1931.

HERBERT E. POWELL, Commissioner of Agriculture.

SUCH IS LIFE—Seeking Information

By Charles Sughroe

The DAIRY

CHEAP SOURCE OF FEEDS FOR DAIRY

Good Pasture and Liberal Supply of Legume.

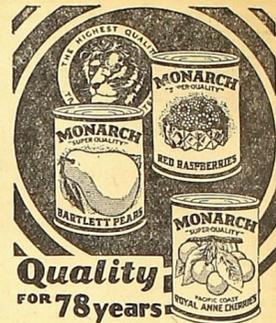

Good pasture and a plentiful supply of legume hay are the two cheapest sources of dairy feeds, especially when these are economically produced.

Records kept on four herds of 123 cows in Guilford and Forsyth counties show the average monthly feed cost a cow during the six non-pasture months to be $12.21," says John A. Arey, dairy extension specialist at the North Carolina state college. "During the six pasture months, this average feed cost for each cow was only $5.02. The difference of $7.19 was a saving due to pasture."

But, Mr. Arey also says more milk was produced during the pasture season than during the non-pasture season. The value of the extra milk was $1.11 a cow per month. The total increase in the income from the 123 cows during the pasture season was $6,724. This money, says the dairyman, represents the savings in the feed bill made possible by the use of pasture together with the small increase in income from the extra milk produced.

The area grazed by each cow according to the records was approximately one and one-fourth acres. The seasonal return per acre, therefore, was $44 reckoning the milk sold at 30 cents a gallon.

Mr. Arey says the United States bureau of dairying has conducted certain tests showing that milk may be produced economically on pasture and good roughage alone. The roughage used in the tests, however, was good alfalfa hay and corn silage. An average production of 13,056.8 pounds of milk and 461.8 pounds of butter fat was secured from the ten cows used. Many North Carolina dairymen will be skeptical of these results, 'e says, because grain is fed liberally in this state and hay very sparingly because so little is grown. The absence of pasture and home-grown legume hay is a handicap to successful dairy farming in North Carolina, Mr. Arey believes.

"Forceful Feeding" Cows

Feeding vitamin D to children by proxy, as it were, has been accomplished by adding yeast which has been exposed to ultra violet rays to the diet of cows. This is intended to increase the rickett-preventing properties in the cows' milk for the use of infants. Cod liver oil, which of itself prevents rickets in man, proved unsatisfactory in experiments on cows at Wisconsin agriculture station because it lowered the secretion of butterfat. In summer cows' milk contains more of vitamin D than in winter, so that the proper addition of irradiated yeast to the animals' daily rations in cold weather brings the needed element up to the proper proportion.

Marriage for Reform

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

There used to be a familiar saying years ago when a young woman entered into a marriage contract with a rather wild and unregenerate partner that she had married him to reform him. There was also among some the feeling that such a reform was possible though I do not now recall that any specific illustrations were brought forward to prove the case. In general, those who were led into matrimony with the purpose of bringing about their reformation kept on in the same crooked path that they had previously been following.

There is an old Norse legend of a farmer named Gudbrand and his wife who lived very happily together, the wife never trying to reform her husband.

"Now you must know," the story goes, "that this man and his good wife lived so happily together and understood one another so well, that all the husband did the wife thought so well done, there was nothing like enjoy a joke on others, but can't stand a joke at their own expense. But almost every one has some individual point of irritation. In the old days, before he had added the dignity of a club owner to the job of manager, John McGraw used to seek this point among umpires and opposing players. Usually he found it. There was an umpire whose wife had publicly belabored him with an umbrella. That was the one thing the umpire thought of in the middle of many a night, and squirmed. The first time McGraw had an argument with that umpire, he produced an umbrella from somewhere on the bench and the arbitrator blew up like a powder magazine. A trombone was the dark spot in a pitcher's life. Opposing players just about drove him off the mound by going through the motions of playing that instrument.

We call persons thick-skinned, or thin-skinned, but it was not until I talked with a specialist that I found out that skins really are as temperamental as their owners. Different skins are sensitive to various specific things. The most common examples of this are poison ivy, oak, sumac and primrose. Some skins are not affected by any of those things; some by perhaps one of them; some by all. When a patient goes to a dermatologist with some form of inflammation of the skin, the doctor frequently has a hard time finding out just what the cause may be, because it may be almost anything.

There was one case of a man who had a rash on his hands every Monday. Doctors finally discovered that his skin was sensitive to something in the rotogravure section of Sunday papers. That was a new one, even for the specialists. Some skins are sensitive to dyes; some to certain forms of wall paper; some to an ingredient used in cold cream, soothing to most skins. There are records of children with hands sensitive to such ordinary things as woolen mittens.

While it is not in the line of dermatology, doctors have found that such things as asthma and hay fever are caused by specific irritations. Many hay fever sufferers cannot stand goldenrod. I knew a man who had asthma every time he drove behind a horse. He was sensitive to the dust in a horse's coat. Doctors will tell you of a woman who had an attack of asthma every Thursday. They found that was her baking day and that she was sensitive to the ingredients of rye bread. The human body is a complicated mechanism.

Speaking of poison sumac makes me think of that story attributed to Rudyard Kipling, perhaps attributed to many others, for it is old. Anyhow, it relates that some one said that "sumac" and "sugar" were the only two words in the English language which were spelled "su" and pronounced "shu." Mr. Kipling is supposed to have replied merely: "Are you sure?"

I heard a story the other day of a man who traveled all over the world and made a wonderful collection of objects of art. Like many others, he lost his money through bad investments. When he died and executors entered the apartment where he had lived alone, they found little except a bed, a chair and a table covered with spindles, such as are used in offices. Each spindle was packed from point to base with pawn tickets.

Floyd Wilson, sensational Riverdale (Calif.) youth, is caught here by the camera setting a world's interscholastic record in the broad jump at the Fresno relays. He made a leap of 24 feet 1 1/2 inches.

Tradition of the Dr. Joseph M. Tollivar family has it the small, worn piece of wood in the silver cross is a fragment of the true cross on which Jesus Christ was crucified.

With the passing of almost a century since it came into the family, however, all documents that may have come with the cross have been lost. Tollivar now owns the cross. It was left him by his mother, a devout Catholic woman of old New Orleans, who married Angel M. Tollivar, a tobacco buyer who came to New Orleans.

Shortly after their marriage they were in New York, according to the Tollivar family tradition, and a great affliction befell the archbishop of New York, Most Rev. John Hughes. His affliction probably was what is today known as granulated eyelids, or possibly trachoma. Treatment by physicians caused him to lose his eyesight. Mrs. Tollivar invited the archbishop to her home and offered to treat his eyes with a homemade remedy, made simply with rosemary sprigs.

Tradition continues that the archbishop was healed and his gratitude had no bounds.

The archbishop presented Mrs. Tol-livar with the small silver cross, inside which was a fragment of wood, sealed with the seal of the pope, impressed on sealing wax. The archbishop told Mrs. Tollivar it had been given him by the hand of "his holiness, the pope," on a visit to Rome.

Most Rev. John W. Shaw, archbishop of New Orleans, has examined the little silver cross and its fragment of wood, but said it would be impossible to know if it was a true relic without proper documents.

it in the world, and she was always glad whatever he turned his hand to." They owned their farm, they had one hundred dollars in the bank, and they had two cows, one of which they decided to sell. Gudbrand undertook to sell the cow, but no one in town would buy her.

On the way home he met a man with a horse for which he traded the cow. As he progressed he made a succession of trades and came one after the other into possession of a pig, a goat, a sheep, a goose, and a cock. This last he disposed of for a shilling and then spent the shilling for a bite to eat.

On the way home he met a man who, upon hearing the details of his bargaining, wagered him a hundred dollars that when the wife heard the story Gudbrand would be roundly scolded. However, she, like a sensible woman, approved everything he had done.

first brought him a year of flattering attention and then plunged him into difficulties with the law, is a free man again.

The court had decided he was not guilty of defrauding an innkeeper, but the $131,000,000 inheritance supposedly left him by an Australian uncle seemingly was as far as ever from being a reality.

If he retained any hopes of eventually getting the fortune, he was keeping them to himself. His one wish, he said, was to be left alone.

"Do you still think you will get the money?" he was asked.

"I don't want to talk about it any more," he replied. "I've had enough excitement about this, and I want to forget it."

The trial that climaxed Wilson's dreams of great wealth took place before Judge Luther Youngdahl in Municipal court, where he was tried on a complaint preferred by A. L. Deike, manager of the Maryland hotel, who charged that the defendant owed $3,340.

Wilson and his wife were the only witnesses for the defense. Both declared that when the story of Wilson's fortune became known, they were persuaded to remain at the hotel. Both declared that they wanted to leave, but were dissuaded.

Wilson denied emphatically that he intended to cheat anybody.

Deike testified that he had gone to Wilson several times and asked for money to pay the hotel bill. He said the man put him off.

"He told me he was expecting money from Australia," Deike testified. "I asked him whom he was going to get the money from and he said an uncle. He gave me the name of a firm of attorneys he said was in Sydney, Australia. I cabled to Sydney and found there was no such firm. After that he moved out of the hotel suddenly."

Wilson, on the stand, recounted the story he had told on other occasions—that of meeting a stranger who told him his uncle had left him a fortune in Australia. He later moved into the Maryland hotel.

"I told the manager two months after we moved in that the bill was getting too big," Wilson testified. "I said I ought to get a job and go to work. He told me not to mind, just to stay where I was."

"I never intended to defraud anybody in my life," he added. "I intend to pay every dime I owe the hotel."

When the testimony was ended, Judge Youngdahl said he could see no evidence of fraud and pronounced Wilson not guilty.

THE STORY

At a public dance Martin Forster, a newspaper man, cuts in on Rhoda White's dance with Max Lewis, whom Martin instinctively dislikes. He overhears a conversation between Lewis and a woman, which he realizes concerns Rhoda. He recalls a "blind ad" inquiring the whereabouts of "Rhoda McFarland" and senses a newspaper story. He believes that is Rhoda's real name. She refuses to deny or admit it. However, it recalls her childhood in California. Her mother dead, she had been happy until misfortune befell her father, Professor McFarland. Associated with the blow is her uncle, William Royce. They move to Chicago, where her father is engaged in mysterious work. Rhoda takes up stenography. Her father dies suddenly, vainly trying to give her a message about "papers" in a trunk. Rhoda goes to live with a fellow worker, "Babe" Jennings. Their apartment is broken into and $500 of Rhoda's money taken. Martin learns that "C. J." of the "blind ad" is Charles J. Forster, uncle of Lewis. Rhoda admits her name is McFarland. A mysterious "Claire Cleveland" asks Rhoda for an interview. She asks Rhoda for a certain paper belonging to her which, she claims, was in McFarland's possession.

To Rhoda it was as if a buried thing had reared its head after all these years and stared at her. Ever since her father's death there'd been an unacknowledged fear in the bottom of her mind that this would happen—something like this. It had taken its first vague nightmare form when, as a child of fourteen, she'd read in the paper about another trial under the Mann act. It had been a fear of finding something that would give form and body to this nightmare that had kept her from going over the papers in the old leather trunk the day after her father died. One of the first things she had done after her flight from the hotel, up in the little hall bedroom of her first boarding house, had been to seal that trunk with strips of gummed paper all around the lid.

Her father's dying reference to his papers prevented her from destroying the thing. After the burglary she'd looked at it to make sure it was undisturbed, but at that time, preoccupied by the loss of her three hundred dollars, she hadn't thought much about it.

Up to now, until she heard Claire Cleveland pronounce the word California, she'd been able in her sensible moments to remind herself that all she'd ever seen in the trunk had been laboratory notes and diagrams, to argue that in all probability it contained nothing else, and to promise herself that some day she would open it up, go through it methodically, and make an end of her nightmare once and for all.

But now the nightmare was true. These people—certainly Claire, and probably Forster and his nephew—had their connection with her father back in the days of the horror and for some unthinkable purpose of their own, wanted the thing dug up.

She sat there frozen. It was seconds before she could even turn her eyes from the woman's horrible face.

"You know about it, don't you?" Claire was saying. "You must know something about it. Why, there wasn't hardly anything else in the papers at the time—especially the San Francisco papers. You don't want to take a thing like that too hard, dearie."

At that Rhoda managed to drag her hypnotized eyes away and turn them on her empty coffee cup.

"Of course, to hear people talk—dirty hypocrites—you'd think a thing like that had never happened before. It's happening all the time, only they don't happen to get caught. You must know yourself that a good-looking girl could get any man if she wanted him; practically any man. They're funny that way—most men are. But your father . . . I think they put something over on him. Of course," she hastened to add, "I wouldn't want to be held to anything I couldn't prove, and naturally I couldn't prove one single thing about this. But if there was a nigger in the woodpile, it was this man Forster. And you can play that right across the board. There's no way that you could get back at him that I can see, because it was all over and done with long ago. But there's one thing you can do, and that's lay off from him if he tries to come around."

Rhoda heard her move her chair back a little and that broke the spell. Glancing up she saw the woman glancing thoughtfully at her watch.

"Well, I guess I've said my say," she concluded. "And I know you must be wanting to run along. I'm going to order a taxi. I can't take you anywhere in it, can I?" She hadn't quite said her say, though, for as she rose to leave the table she added, "You won't forget to look up that paper of mine, will you, dearie?"

Despite her panic, Rhoda was able to note that this had been a clear afterthought, and not a complete one, either. Claire hadn't told her where she lived.

Rhoda went home. She didn't know how she got there. Nor did she plan what she'd do when she did. She had no clear expectation of what she'd find. But by the time she had climbed the long flight of stairs and let herself into the studio with her latchkey and flown straight up to her little bedroom in the loft and looked under the bed, she was not really surprised to see that the trunk was gone.

CHAPTER V

The Enemy's Lair

Had Claire's invitation to lunch been anything but a trick to insure her absence from the studio while it was being broken into? It wouldn't have been necessary to do that, and Claire probably knew it. Max Lewis knew it, anyhow, for Babe had told him the night he brought her home that she and Rhoda worked all day at the News, and that Doris and Isabel were off on a tour with their ballet. No, Claire had asked her to lunch in order to find out something.

What could she have found out? Not much, certainly. Rhoda was sure she hadn't told anything important. Wait a minute, though! She had said that none of her father's papers had been destroyed. There was a whole trunk full of them, she'd said, and she had sealed up the trunk. In other words, she'd volunteered the fact—fool! Silly, babbling fool!—that a sealed-up trunk was the thing to look for.

But had she said that it was in the studio? She couldn't remember having said that in so many words, but she must have admitted it by inference, since Claire had suggested coming home with her and helping in the search for the paper she wanted. Had Claire expected her to accept an offer like that? Probably not very seriously, but she might have regarded it as a chance worth taking. Anyhow, it hadn't been until after Rhoda had declined this offer—giving away her own suspicion, no doubt, hand over fist—that Claire had remembered the friend who was waiting for her to telephone him.

"Them," she'd said, though; not "him." Did that really mean there were two of them: Max and his uncle. Forster? Most likely not. Claire's hatred of old Forster had seemed real enough. It must have been Max she'd telephoned to, waiting at a telephone somewhere for Claire's instructions.

His attempt yesterday to find the papers they wanted had been unsuccessful, because he hadn't known what to look for. So he'd taken her three hundred dollars instead. Did Claire know that? She wondered. That might be worth thinking about later, but she hadn't time to follow it out now. Max had tried again today, with better information, remembering, likely enough, just where he'd seen the sealed-up trunk the day before, and had succeeded without any trouble at all. It had just happened, within the past hour, thanks to her own plain imbecility in giving everything away.

She hated the thought of telling Martin what had happened, even while she was wishing he were here at her elbow now telling her what to do. Well, couldn't she think of anything, do anything, for herself? Was she going to sit down and let that pair of crooks get away with it? They were probably up at Claire's flat now gloating over their booty, grinning about how easy she'd been.

She wouldn't call the police. She couldn't do that, with the story of her father's disgrace involved in the matter, and they knew it. That's what they were counting on. They'd been too clever for her; not Max, but Claire.

One of the First Things She Had Done After Her Flight From the Hotel.

The mere fatuous smirk on Max's beefy handsome face was enough to tell anybody that there was no intelligence behind it. He took Claire's orders, in spite of the rich uncle Martin thought he was afraid of.

Forster! The old man who had given her and Babe the ride down town in his limousine that morning. That hadn't been chance, of course. He'd been trying to find her and he'd succeeded somehow. He was playing a hand of his own in this game.

Her body stiffened under the impact of an idea. Could she use him as an ally against the other pair? Claire was afraid of him, too, she thought. She must be, to hate him like that. Anyhow, she'd done everything she could to keep Rhoda from going to him. She'd warned her in the letter against answering his advertisement, and had rubbed the warning in today at lunch. Well then, why not go to him now, as quickly as a taxi could take her to the Worcester hotel? That was where Martin said he lived. Take Claire's letter along as a bit of documentary evidence.

She got the letter out of the drawer of the writing desk, crammed it into her ulster pocket—slammed the studio door behind her and darted down the two long flights of stairs to the street. "Worcester hotel," she said to the taxi driver, who pulled up to the curb when she signaled him.

It was quite a ride—the better part of a mile, at least—and though she didn't want to chill with wet blankets the fine warm resolution that possessed her, she couldn't help doing it.

Forster might not be a desirable ally even if Claire hated him. He might be as bad as she said he was. He might have been her father's arch-enemy. There wouldn't be much satisfaction in spilling Claire's and Max's game if doing that involved delivering herself over, tied hand and foot, into the power of a man like that.

And could she spoil their game? Could she convince Forster that Claire and his nephew were conspiring against him? To what extent had Claire given herself away in the letter?

She got it out to read it, but her gaze didn't go beyond the first two lines: Claire's address written across the top. Claire's flat—or was it Max's? Was Claire his mistress? That was what the relation looked like certainly. She was that sort of woman, all right, with her story of the wicked man who had ruined her when she was a mere girl, and the confession she'd extorted from him. And now she was thinking of getting married and wanted it.

Rhoda froze again like a pointer getting wind of a prairie chicken. Had that statement been a careless bit of truth? Did she want to marry Max? And was she afraid that Forster would disinherit him if she did?

With another plunge, physical as well as figurative, Rhoda opened the front window and spoke again to the chauffeur.

"I've changed my mind," she said. "Here's the address I want you to go to." And she read him Claire's.

She hadn't a doubt she'd find the pair of them there, up to the elbows in her father's papers.

The building before which her taxi pulled up was an oddish, three-story stone house, remodeled, as its two front doors indicated, into flats. Rhoda was trembling a little as she got out, but she didn't feel afraid. And she made it sound almost like a joke when she said to the taxi driver, "Wait, please. I don't think I'll be long. But if you do hear anybody screaming for help in there, come in and see who it is."

There was a momentary delay after she rang Claire's bell—hers was one of the top flats—before the buzzer released the catch on the vestibule door, but Rhoda heard a door open at the top of the house the instant she started up the stairs. A little surprising, that was. She hadn't expected them to be eager to receive visitors just now; had wondered indeed whether they'd let her in at all. Perhaps they wouldn't when they saw who she was.

The woman alone was waiting for her. Max wasn't in sight.

"What do you want?" Claire asked sharply when she saw who it was. But almost in the same breath she tried to change her tactics, adding with an uneasy laugh, "Heavens, I didn't expect you to find my paper as quick as that!" Her color had changed under her make-up, though, in a sickly way that made Rhoda think of lead poisoning.

She must get inside Claire's door, that was the first thing to do, so she replied, not to the question but to the succeeding remark. "Yes," she said, making her voice sound as innocent and as amiable as she could, "it must seem rather sudden."

At that Claire stepped back unwillingly from the doorway, and Rhoda followed her into the rather large room that seemed to be all there was to the apartment, except for an alcove that formed an L, which she couldn't see into. That was where Max was most likely. Rhoda herself shut the door behind her.

"Well?" Claire asked. Her manner was openly hostile. Then as Rhoda, without speaking, took a deliberate look around the room, she asked again, "What do you want? What's the matter with you?"

"I've come," said Rhoda, "to get my trunk."

"Your trunk? Say, are you crazy? What makes you think I've got your trunk?" She tried to laugh, but it only showed how frightened she was.

Rhoda hesitated a little over her answer to the woman's question. If Max was in the alcove she wished he'd come out. It was hard to know where to begin unless she knew whether he was there or not.

Her hesitation seemed to anger Claire, or to reassure her, she couldn't be sure which. "Look here," she went on truculently, "you can't get away with stuff like this. I don't even know what you're talking about. Are you trying to tell me you've lost a trunk and you think I've got it?"

"Night before last, at the Alhambra, when Max Lewis told you that I was the girl all right, because my first name was Rhoda, you told him to find out where I lived."

"I told you that myself this noon," Claire broke in. "What's that got to do with it?"

"And you told him," Rhoda went on, "not to waste any time about it, because I might see Mr. Forster's advertisement any day and answer it." Rhoda could see that this bit of information started her and she went on a little more confidently. "He did find out where I lived by going home that night with Babe, and he found out that the studio was empty all day because she told him we both worked and the other girls were away. He tried to find out whether my name wasn't Rhoda McFarland, but she didn't tell him. Yesterday afternoon the studio was broken into. The burglar didn't find any papers, because he didn't know where to look. But he did find three hundred dollars of mine, and he took that. To-day," Rhoda went on, "after I'd told you that my father's papers were in the trunk and sealed up, and after you'd gone out and telephoned . . ."

"You think Max went and got the trunk, do you, and that he brought it here?"

"Yes," Rhoda said. "And I think he's in that alcove with it now."

The woman gave a vicious laugh. "All right," she said, "go and see for yourself. If you can find Max or the trunk, you're welcome to both of them. Go and look, and then get out. I've been insulted about long enough."

This wasn't the way Rhoda had expected the scene to work out. She was assailed by a sudden doubt that the trunk might not be in the alcove after all, nor Max either. She'd be in a hideously uncomfortable position if she went and looked and nothing was there. Yet she couldn't go away without looking. This might be nothing but a magnificent bluff by Claire.

"Thank you," she said, "I will go and look." But it took all the resolution she had to set her legs in motion down the room.

The alcove contained a bed, a tawdry, oriental-looking affair, too low for the trunk to be under, a couple of chairs and a dressing table, but no trunk, no litter of papers, and no Max.

"Go as far as you like," said Claire who had followed her. "Perhaps they're hidden in my closet or in the bathroom."

Rhoda was on the point of giving it up. But the bathroom door stood ajar and Rhoda's glance had gone that way as Claire finished speaking. It looked like a rather large room for its purpose. More than just a bathroom. She'd take a look, anyhow, and make sure. She was in the act of going in, but not yet clear of the door, and Claire was at her elbow, when the sharp jingle of a bell somewhere in the apartment startled them both.

That is to say, it startled Rhoda; it paralyzed Claire. Her hard blue eyes seemed to bulge right out of her head. But that lasted only an instant. With a convulsive movement Claire gave her a tremendous push that sent her staggering clear across the tiled floor to the farther wall, whipped the key out of the inner face of the door, slammed the door, and locked her in. The bell gave a second peal just as the bell clicked home.

She heard Claire open the door—the door she had come in by, Rhoda didn't doubt; there was a betraying creak to one of its hinges—but there was no sound of the heavy footsteps on the stairs that would have heralded the lugging in of her trunk. Claire must have thought it was the trunk coming, though, or she wouldn't have locked her up in the bathroom. The silence, which had lasted half a dozen seconds, perhaps, was again broken by the ring of the bell, persistent this time and prolonged. It wasn't the doorbell at all; it was the telephone.

Rhoda heard the door slam shut and the rush of Claire's feet across the room. It was odd that in her own flat she should have mistaken the bell. She'd been expecting the doorbell, that was why.

The instrument was just around the corner of the alcove. Claire said, "Hello?" and then a moment later, "Yes. Who is this? What is it you want?"

An unfamiliar voice, evidently asking of this was Miss Claire Cleveland. The stranger must have said his say pretty concisely, for after quite a short pause Claire cried out in a tone of the liveliest astonishment, "What's that? What are you talking about? Who are you, anyway?" And again,

Old Castle Garden Once Famous Pleasure Resort

The old Castle Clinton, erected during the War of 1812, just west of Battery park, was renamed Castle garden and became a famous pleasure resort, says a writer in a New York paper. At first it was a little off shore, connected with the mainland by a drawbridge, but later the intervening space was filled in and it stood on the western edge of the park.

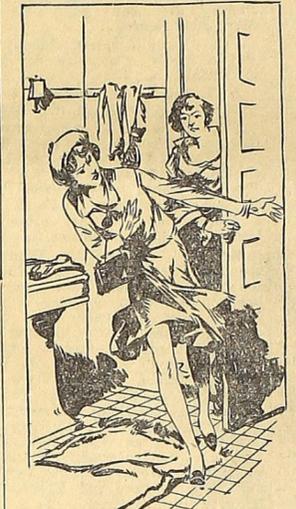

Here were held annual fairs, concerts, theatrical performances, operas and the circus. It filled much the same place in the life of the city as Madison Square garden did in after years. It was here, in 1850, that the famous singer, Jenny Lind, sang to enraptured audiences.

Part of its popularity as an amuseafter listening a little longer, "Say, are you trying to be funny?" Apparently, though, it wasn't a joke. Certainly not from Claire's point of view. For the next time she spoke her voice was raucous with anger, and what she said a mere incoherent jumble of uncompleted questions.

Right in the middle of this the person on the other end of the line must have hung up. There was a silence; a dead unbroken silence. The woman couldn't still be standing there before the telephone, yet Rhoda hadn't heard her move away. When it had lasted as long as she could endure it she began pounding on the door.

To her surprise Claire came at once and unlocked it. She herself pulled it open and they stood face to face. Whatever remonstrances Rhoda meant to make were silenced by the woman's look. She looked as if she'd forgotten that Rhoda was there; forgotten what she'd come for; forgotten almost who she was. She looked at her blankly for a moment and then with a kind of terrifying intensity, as if trying to decide whether she had, could possibly have, any connection with or knowledge of that mysterious message over the telephone.

Evidently her conclusion was negative, for with a faint shrug she turned away. "You can come out now," she said, "if you like. And go! Go home! There's nothing here that's any business of yours. And God knows I don't want to keep you here."

Rhoda didn't hesitate. The smoldering fury in the woman was not only formidable, it constituted a sort of guarantee of the truth of what she said. Rhoda went, with the best appearance of dignity she could muster. "Drive away from here," she said to the chauffeur, "but as slowly as you can, and not very far. I want to think."

Before they'd gone half a block her thoughts resulted in a question. "Could you follow anybody?" she asked.

"I could until it got too dark, unless they had too fast a car for me. Do you want to follow somebody?"

"I think," Rhoda said, "that the woman I want to see is coming out in a few minutes, and I want to know where she goes."

"Well," he said, "that's easy. I'll wait here with my flag up. You go back and slip into one of the side vestibules in this flat building where you can keep an eye on her door. She may order a taxi by telephone, or she may walk down here and pick one up."

Claire, it appeared, wasn't in a hurry. Time went pretty slowly for Rhoda, who felt like a sneak thief waiting in that vestibule, and she was on the point of giving it up when she saw another taxi drive up to Claire's door. But after that things happened swiftly.

Claire came down almost at once, got into her taxi, drove to the boulevard and turned south, down town. In another minute Rhoda, in her own taxi, was following at a safe distance. It was almost too easy to be exciting. Down the boulevard to the parkway, and then branching to the right down the park's western boundary, she saw the other taxi stop and Claire get out at the Worcester hotel.

"All right," Rhoda said to the chauffeur of her taxi. "You can stop here, 'oo. And this time you needn't wait."

She didn't know what she was going to do, in there, but it was clearly the place where things were coming into focus.

Saw-Toothed Grasses Fatal to Wild Animals

To the poet's eye a dewy blade of grass may be a "gleaming sword," but the similarity escapes the more practical eye of the elk, the deer, and the moose. These unsuspecting animals frequently learn, however, and painfully so, that a clump of grass may be only a "sheath of spears" disguised as forage.

The biological survey of the Department of Agriculture finds that the sharp, saw-toothed seed parts of the squirreltail grass and other similar grasses on the western ranges cause the death of many elk, deer and moose. The needlelike tips of the seed cases pierce the tender membranes in the animals' mouth. The jagged edge of the seed case resembles a porcupine quill, and after it has penetrated the lining of the mouth, every effort of the animal to get rid of it results only in further embedding the seed into the tissues. These injuries may become infected and lead to abscesses and eventually to death. Occasionally an animal is found dead from starvation because a great wad of grass lodged in one cheek had made it impossible for the animal to eat.

The biological survey is attempting to eradicate such objectionable grasses from the elk refuge in Wyoming and from the Sullys hill game preserve, North Dakota, where the trouble has been in evidence.

End of Mother Earth, as Scientist Sees It

A remote age when there will be no water on the hot side of the earth continuously facing the sun, while the earth's revolution around the sun goes on unceasingly is predicted by Dr. W. J. Spillman, consulting specialist of the Department of Agriculture.

"The time will come," he said, "perhaps some billions of years from now, when the earth will make one rotation on its axis while it is revolving around the sun, with the same side toward the sun all the time. At the center of that sun-swept tide, where the sun will stand directly overhead all the time, it will be boiling hot, and on the other side of the earth the temperature will be around 50 degrees below zero, and the conditions will stay that way for all time."

Jazz in Japan

Japanese jazz, founded upon the American article, has been raging in the islands of the Rising Sun. Educators and thinking persons of the country are becoming alarmed at the declining demand for the "gunka" or soldiers' war songs and the "Shokka," or Japanese school songs. Students of Japanese schools and colleges everywhere are organizing bands and orchestras, and almost every Japanese citizen goes about humming or whistling some popular air.
