Historic Island Now Gambling Resort

Paris .- On a Mediterranean island where Caesar and Cicero lived two thousand years ago, frantic gamblers from all over the world foregather nightly in ultrasmart new palaces of chance which have been built under Signor Mussolini's orders to give Italy a new gaming field in opposition to the French Riviera.

The island is Rhodes, in the Dodecamese group, off the coast of Asia Minor and on the direct route from Italy to Egypt and the far east. The idea of the vast new playground created there on the ruins of part of the ancient Grecian empire is to afford a stopping off place for rich American and British travelers to India, or around the world.

Rhodes is of age old antiquity and Homer makes frequent mention of the island and of Caesar and Cicero's lives there. Sultan Mohammed II also lived there, but if any of these great men of the past could come back they would hardly recognize it with its sea front lined with glittering white casinos and other pleasure palaces. Many of the ancient buildings still remain, affording a strange contrast between the cultured past and feverish present of the gaming paradises. The palace of the Knights of Jerusalem still exists, the ramparts, the cathedral, Mohammedan mosques which recall the period of Turkish domination exist alongside the shimmering modern concrete gambling

Italy has owned the island since the end of the Libyan war and it was the scene of much bloodshed in the Middle Ages when the Turks first seized the spot at the cost of 100,000 Turkish lives. In pre-Christian times the city of Rhodes itself suffered severely from earthquakes and most of its 3,000 gigantic statues built under the Greek state were thrown down.

Among these statues was one of the seven wonders of the ancient world, the monument to Helios, the spick and span promenades on the Colossus, which was the Greek name

Talking to Yourself at Twenty

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

"What would you give," a friend asks me, "if you could talk to yourself at twenty?"

be able after twenty-five or thirty or forty years of experience with the practical things of the world, after having knocked about having failed and having succeeded, to be able to sit down quietly and give yourself advice at twenty, to point out shoals to be avoided, rocks to steer clear of, opportunities to seize, chances for improvement and advancement which might have been taken. I have been sitting here thinking it all over since the question came to me, and there is a strong appeal in the thought; I'd surely like very much to do it. I should prefer, however, to sit down and talk things over with myself at fifteen rather than at twenty. At fifteen the imagination is awake, emotions are keener than at any other time of life. What would I say to myself at fifteen if I had the chance?

I thought very little of the care of my body when I was fifteen. I should give myself a straightforward sensible talk on taking care of the teeth and the hair because twenty or forty years later they are so necessary to good health or to good looks, and it would be so easy to keep them if we began early enough. I should say a good deal about eating.

I never had so much leisure as between fifteen and twenty, nor so much pleasure perhaps. I should not advise myself to cut down on the pleasure, I think, for pleasure is the rightful heritage of youth, but I should point out how to so much better advantage the leisure might be used. I might have been much wiser than I

A small girl was talking to her mother concerning an uncle, whose wife had died and who had married again. She couldn't quite understand how she came to have a new aunt. Her mother tried to explain matters. "If you died," said the little girl, 'would father marry again?"

A bit upset, the mother said that was a question she couldn't answers that the child would have to ask her

"Well," said the little girl decidedly, "I certainly hope he would. I wouldn't care to be without a mother.'

Many chimneys in old houses have no fire lining, and their walls are built only one brick in thickness, the inside of the flue plastered with mortar. This kind of chimney remains tight for a time, but after a while the heat makes the mortar dry, it falls out of place, and an uneven flue results. This single brick joint between the hot flue and any surrounding woodwork is the cause of many fires.

Insurance companies claim that defective chimneys and sparks on the roof are responsible for nearly 20 per cent of all fires in homes. This shows that good chimney construction is as important as a good fire resistant or fireproof roof in the modern home.

to discover its strength or its weakness is to use the "smoke" test. Build a smudge fire at the bottom of the flue, and then when the smoke begins to flow freely, close it tightly. If the smoke escapes into other flues or through the chimney walls, it indicates that there are openings which must be closed before the chimney is

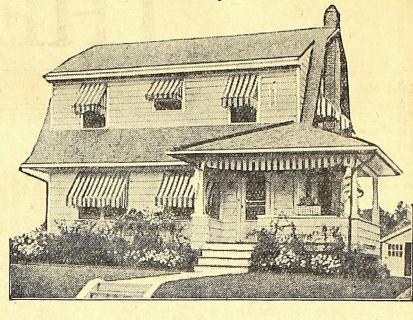

Remember that with chimneys, as well as many other things in life, appearances are deceitful. On examination many a chimney is found to be an acute fire menace. It is much cheaper to reballd a chimney, or build it correctly in the first place, than to bulld a new house!

So many houses are being built these days without front porches that many will welcome a design offering a front porch with all the summer evening comforts that it suggests, as an outdoor living room during the hotweather period. Additional warmweather comfort is suggested by the striped awnings which, protecting the windows from the direct rays of the sun, may be drawn up out of the way when cooler weather makes the warmth of the sun more welcome.

front elevation and directly into one end of the large living room which occupies nearly half of the lower floor space. At the opposite end of this living room is the stairway leading directly from the room to the upper floor instead of from the hall as seen in most houses.

The almost square plan of this house indicates maximum floor space and minimum building cost, a point which it is well to remember when planning a home where finances are limited and space is at a premium. In this case it makes possible, within the overall dimensions of 26 by 24 feet, a large living room, ample dining room and kitchen, on the first floor and three roomy bedrooms with goodsized closets and a comfortable bathroom, on the second floor.

In spite of its simplicity, this house possesses a most pleasing appearance due largely to its excellent lines, its cheerful awnings, and the well-selected and placed shrubbery which sur-

Poor Flooring Will Show Cracks in Short Time

Flooring of imperfect manufacture is likely to warp or develop cracks; it does not give the dependable service you expect from your floor and the very best workman cannot make its appearance all that is desired by the builder. Home builders should be sure that the lumber they buy will require a minimum of carpenter work of planing, sawing and sorting.

One of the most popular floor boards is oak, which may be laid in an irregular manner with boards of alternate widths to give an antique effect. It displays nature's beauty in grain and construction, blending over the entire lustrous floor expanse.

Oak lends dignity to any room; it harmonizes with woodwork and with furniture of whatever period. It is the proper background for rugs. It is permanent. Time only improves its mellowness. It is easily kept in perfect condition; is cleanly and saves housework. The cost is negligible compared with temporary floor coverings.

CHAPTER VI

Stealing an Idea

Martin had got one thing out of his otherwise barren encounter with Rhoda that morning, and this was his day's story for the paper. At least he wouldn't have got it if he hadn't been standing at the curb to see the limousine that Babe and Rhoda arrived in drive up. The license plate on that car caught his eye and fixed itself in his mind by virtue of a small oddity that he noticed about it. It was a four number arrangement of nines and eights which would make just as good sense upside down as right side up, only it would make different sense.

Probably it was his exasperated determination to dismiss Rhoda and her wrong-headedness and her red hair completely from his mind that caused this notion of an inverted license plate to fructify swiftly into the amusing sort of tale of misadventure that he specialized in. It was what the editor liked, and the fact that he made it up out of whole cloth didn't matter

When It was done, since he knew it was good, he found himself in a placable enough humor to turn back to the Rhoda incident and consider dispassionately what had gone wrong with it.

Under his eye, as he sat musing, was the scribbled sheet of scratch paper on which he'd drawn the license plate right side up and upside down in figuring out his story. It had been a handsome car, all right, that the girls had had a ride in, even if they had had to sit on the little folding seats. Rather comic, that was, now he thought about it. And a bit queer, too. What had the old billygoat stopped his car for, if not for the sensation of having a nice young thing sitting close beside him?

He was still staring at the license number of that car. Suddenly, under an impulse too fanciful to bear arguing about, he decided to look up the owner. It wouldn't do any harm to find out who the old bloke was.

When he found a few minutes later that the car was registered as the property of C. J. Forster he felt for a few seconds as if he must be a victim of a practical joke. What the devil!

He telephoned up to Rhoda's department to find out if or when she'd gone out to lunch and when, if they knew. she was expected back. When they told him she wasn't coming back that afternoon at all, he crammed on his hat, squirmed into his overcoat as he ran downstairs, and storted out for the Tip-Top inn.

Martin, considering his plan of action on the way over, had decided to wait in the lobby until Rhoda came out. He hadn't yet settled down to his wait on the sofa-he was at the cigar stand buying some cigarettes-when a woman came up beside him and bought a telephone slug. He'd been a reporter long enough to repress the start her voice gave him, though it was a voice he knew, and he checked his impulse to turn and look at her, much as he'd have liked to. He never had a really good look at her. Luckily she'd never seen him at all, nor heard his voice. On the strength of that reflection he bought a telephone slug, too, went into the next booth to hers, dropped his nickel and called his own telephone number, which, of course didn't answer.

He hoped he'd be able to hear what she said. If she'd left Rhoda in the middle of their lunch to come out and telephone, it was likely to be something interesting. The sort of voice she had rasped right through the thin partition wall of the telephone booth. He hadn't got there in time to hear what number she called; indeed he was barely in time for the beginning of her conversation, for she'd got her party at once. Some one, he guessed, who'd been waiting for the call at the instrument.

"Yes, of course it's Claire," Martin heard her say. "Were you expecting a call from somebody else? Now listen, Max: you'll have to go and get it yourself. I can tell you how to find it. Listen. It's in a trunk. Everything; all the dope. . . . I don't know, but you can tell because it's sealed up. Don't try to open it. Bring it right along. The whole thing. Bring it right up to the flat and wait for me if I ain't there. I'll see that you have plenty of time but you don't want to waste any. . . . Why, of course you'll do it. It's easier now than it would have been yesterday because you know what to look for. . . . For Pete's sake, don't go yellow now when I'm putting it right in your hands. All right. Good-by."

Martin stayed in his booth until he'd seen her go back into the restaurant. Then he came out and turned a little uncertainly to the telephone directory. Max wasn't in it, he knew, for he'd tried to look him up. Rhoda had told him the woman's last name though: Cleveland, that was it. He'd gathered from the talk that the pair were living together. Probably that's where Max was now.

His thoughts were racing as he turned the pages of the directory. He'd have to be quick, but he mustn't waste time making any false moves. He couldn't have misunderstood the purport of the woman's message. Heavens, he'd seen the trunk himself. That little hat trunk under Rhoda's bed with the lid gummed down with strips of paper-to keep the moths out, he'd thought.

Here the address was-Claire Cleveland. That was one of those streets out near the Alhambra. That's how she'd happened to see Rhoda turning in. Lucky, just now, it was so far out. He could get to Rhoda's flat before Max could, provided Max was starting from out there. And Rhoda's flat was the place for him to go. Just what he'd do when he got there wanted a little thinking about. But he could decide that in the taxi, He'd done quite a various lot of more or less unlawful things since he'd begun being a reporter, but housebreaking hadn't been one of them. It looked now, though, as if that was what he had to do. He couldn't hope to deal with Lewis except from inside Rhoda's

He hoped he had the start of Max. It might turn out a little awkward if he were digging away at the lock when Max came up the stairs. And it would be just like him to come armed with a gun and, if he were desperate enough, to use it.

Would he be shrewd enough to guess, the question was, that Martin was as much a lawbreaker in that flat as he was? It might turn out an ugly sort of encounter if he did. Was there any way to avoid it? Suppose he stole the trunk, got away with it before Max arrived, and left him to search in vain. No. that wouldn't do. He couldn't be sure of getting clean away. He might meet Max on the stairs. And even if he did get away he'd have no means of guarding or of warning Rhoda. She might come in and find Max there.

No, he'd have to break in and then he'd have to trust to luck to being able to bluff Max out. Max hadn't liked the job very well, himself. That had been plain enough from the way the woman had talked to him. Then, she'd spoken of his being yellow as if it were a phenomenon she was acquainted with.

But why had Max been eager to do the job yesterday? Martin sat forward on his seat and thumped his knee with his fist. Max had tried it yesterday, that was why. He'd gone there in defiance of Claire's orders looking for "it"-whatever it was. He hadn't found it and he'd been afraid to tell Claire. But then it was he who had found Rhoda's money and taken it. That was a queer thing for a rich man to do.

His taxi turned the corner of Rhoda's street and he dismissed his train of thought with a jerk, though he was aware he hadn't quite got to the terminus. A hundred yards up the long block and, as well as he could guess, right in front of Rhoda's number, another taxi was pulled up at the curb. Had Max got here ahead of him after all?

"Pull up here and wait a minute," Martin told his chauffeur. It was not. he was aware, the heroic order to give. but, being no hero, only a thoroughly pragmatic reporter, he required time

If Max was already in the flat there was nothing to be gained by following him. Even unarmed, Max could beat him to a pulp and would be able to identify him, besides, as one of Rhoda's allies. Call a policeman? That was no good, either. Police intervention meant a story in the papers. And this, for some reason he could only half guess, was a horror to Rhoda.

But was that Max's taxi? There was no chauffeur in it, though the motor had been left running. The obvious inference was that the chauffeur had been tipped to go in and carry out luggage, such as a trunk.

Would Max have the nerve to ask a ! taxi driver to assist him in his burglary? Well, he might if he were smart enough. Martin had just reached that point in his speculations when they were confirmed by Max's emergence from the doorway, accompanied by the chauffeur lugging the trunk.

Martin said to his chauffeur, "That's the man I want. And I think I know where he's going, but I can't be sure enough to risk it. Follow him, will

It made him feel frightfully cheap to give an order like that. But the heroic alternative offered no chance at all of success. He could think of nothing better than to tag along, make sure where the trunk went, and try to invent some way of bluffing this pair of conspirators out of their booty up in Claire's flat after she'd joined Automatically, of course, he'd been watching the other taxi. Now as they approached the drive he was astonished to see it turn south instead of north; down town instead of up. That wasn't the way to Claire's flat. Yet her instructions to Max had been explicit that he take it there. Was Max starting something on his own account?-betraying his ally? Or had he observed that he was being followed and was he trying to throw off pursuit? "I'm a reporter for the News," Mar-with the trunk is a peach of a story if I can get it. He isn't going where I thought he would though."

"Probably going to one of the depots, isn't he, with that trunk?" the chauffeur suggested.

"I believe you're right," Martin agreed. "If he is, the story is even better. But I've got to find out where he's going."

Their quarry showed no signs of consciousness that it was being followed. Its destination proved to be the Union hasn't, he'll stop and get it half way down the ramp. If he has he'll go all the way down to the lower level."

Evidently Max hadn't his ticket, for his taxi stopped half way down, pulling up a little beyond the entrance to the concourse. But the person who left the cab to buy the ticket was the chauffeur. Max apparently didn't want to leave his precious trunk until it was safely checked.

Martin slipped out of his cab and followed the chauffeur boldly up to the ticket window and stood at his elbow while the man bought a ticket and a lower berth, the number of which Martin noted, to New York on the Pennsylvania limited that afternoon. He returned as inconspicuously as he could to his own taxi. The other cab had already started down the ramp.

At a safe distance Martin followed and saw Rhoda's little hat trunk checked, saw Max drive away-unchecked, d-n him!-with, no doubt, what was left of her three hundred dollars in his pocket. Those identical twenty-dollar bills that Martin had seen paid for the ticket had been very likely a part of the hoard in her bureau drawer. And he had stood looking on and not done a mortal thing! Well, what could he have done? What could he do now?

One thing he'd better do, without loss of time, was to pay off his taxi while he could. He'd left the paper, in his haste this noon, without stopping to get some money that he needed. After he'd paid the sum the meter had been adding up so industriously, and tipped the driver he had just sixty cents left-and you could have bought him, as he stood at the curb watching the cab drive away, for just about that.

The obvious duty before him was to telephone Rhoda at the studio and tell her what he had seen happen. The only plan in his mind was that he and Rhoda go around together to the city hall and swear out a warrant for Lewis' arrest, along with a writ of replevin for the trunk, and then be on hand with a plain-clothes man when Lewis came to the station to take the train. There was time enough for that and it would be easy enough-except for the one fact that Rhoda herself would veto the plan.

He hadn't the faintest doubt of that. He remembered how she'd looked last night when he had been telling her about the "morgue"; they dug into that only, he had said, when something in the current news called for a reference to it. He didn't know-he'd deliberately avoided trying to find out -what file it was she was afraid might be looked into nor, exactly, what sort of secret it contained, but he remembered the deep earnestness in her voice when she'd begged him not to tin told his driver, "and that chap try to find out any more than she had told him and not to do anything that might change the life she'd been so happy in during the past two years.

He had been drifting aimlessly along the street in the general direction of his newspaper office, though he had no conscious reason for going back there, and presently he found himself standing outside a little movie theater, staring in a sort of trance at the lurid poster on its billboard. It represented the so-called eternal triangle, a guilty pair surprised by the man's virtuous wife. She was defending the sanctity of the hearth with a small revolver and you could see from the way they cowed before her that "It depends on whether he's got his they recognized the cogency of her ticket," the chauffeur told him. #### CHAPTER VII

How the Plot Worked Out

The simple, but really rather thrill ing one-act play which had its only performance at a few minutes past five that afternoon in the concourse of the Union station, paid no royalties to the stark screen drama which was being exposed six times daily in the little movie theater.

The theft of that plot was the only crime that Martin had to commit that day. Strictly speaking there was no audience, for Martin did not dare come close enough to hear the lines, and Babe Jennings, who heard everything, was herself one of the important

Babe had undertaken the part, though at short notice, with enthusiasm, once she'd convinced herself that Martin had not gone suddenly mad and after she had got the main lines of the scenario through her head. She had dashed out to the studio in a taxi -all expenses were guaranteed by Martin-and, thanking goodness that Rhoda wasn't there to have his messages passed on to her, made a toilet as much like a million dollars as her street things ran to.

Her major resplendencies were calculated for the evening, of course, but even in her lesser glory she looked good to Max Lewis when he caught sight of her in the station-good enough to be going to Hollywood. He told her that while he sentimentally prolonged their handshake.

Her answer to this remark about Hollywood was that she was headed for a better place than that. She was starting off on the limited to the big town. She burst into raptures about her trip. "What are you looking so funny about?" she concluded, closing in on her victim. "Are you going to hate to lose me as much as that?"

"I'm not going to lose you at all. Max told her. "That's the joke. I'm going to New York on the limited, myself. What car are you in? Let's see your ticket."

Babe cheerfully gave credit to Martin that this property was in place. She'd never have thought of the detail herself. She opened her handbag and got out one of those railway envelopes that they enclose tickets in It had some stuffing in it too. But it didn't require to be opened, for on the face of it was written in indelible pencil, "Pennsylvania Limited-5:30-Car 408, Lower 10."

She held it out for him to see with out, however, letting go of it. "Let's see yours," she said excitedly.

He got a similar envelope out of his breast pocket, but it had no car and berth numbers written on it and he had to get out his pullman tickets for a look. She saw that he had a trunk check in the envelope.

"Why, Max," she cried, with a squeal of excitement, "we're in the same car! Look-408! Can you

"I'll tell the world you can't," he proclaimed enthusiastically. "Look here, Babe, what do you say? Can I swap my lower for the upper in your section?"

"Well," she told him judicially, "you never can tell till you try."

Out of a corner of her eye Babe thought she saw where a woman stood watching them. "Max," she said, sharp and low, "is that your wife looking

But he looked, and she, looking up at him, saw his face drain to the color of an unbaked pie. The woman swept down upon them and stood glaring from one to the other. "'Babe,' eh?" she said with a ferocious grin. "I thought so." She didn't say it very loud, though, Evidently she didn't care about attracting a crowd, herself.

"You yellow dog!" she went on to address Max. "Trying to double cross me, were you, and get away with a skirt? Well, you aren't smart enough, see? Give me the check of that trunk. "I tell you there wasn't any trunk," he asserted frantically. "I went to

Tons of Red Sediment

in Downpour of Rain

Frederick Chapman, paleontologist

of the Australian commonwealth, has continued his observations on red rain in southeastern Australia which he began in conjunction with H. J. Grayson in 1903. On the night of December 31, 1927, after a strong northerly wind had carried thick clouds of dust over Victoria and blown the finer particles southward over Bass strait, there were heavy but irregularly distributed falls of red rain. Mr. Chapman estimated the amount deposited in Balwyn, a suburb eight miles east of Melbourne. at 51% tons to the square mile: the commonwealth meteorologist, H. A. Hunt, estimated the deposit at 24 tons to the square mile. The red dust on this occasion was exceptionally sticky, as the innumerable diatoms-nitzschia and cocconeis-still contained their endoch rome. The red stains on leaves and flowers in the gardens were retained for days and even weeks. The impressions on glass indicate that each raindrop was coated by a thin film of the dust. On November 3, 1920, after a northerly gale, showers of red rain fell at 7:00 p. m. and after 9:00 p. m. The amount of the red sediment collected in a vessel in Mr. Chapman's garden indicated a fall of 64 tons to the square mile, or, if it had been equally distributed over Victoria, a fall of nearly 6,000,-000 tons in that state. Both the minute reddish flakes of sediment and the diatoms and sponge spicules show that the material had been derived from the arid regions in the northwest of Victoria and in central Australia.-Nature Magazine.

Ton for ton ... mile for mile Chevrolet six-cylinder trucks cost less to operate

To place your hauling on a minimum-cost basis-and keep it there-put Chevrolet six-cylinder trucks to work. Leading firms everywhere are practicing this sound economy. They are finding, by experience, that Chevrolet trucks give a lower transportation cost than any other trucks of equal capacity.

Take fuel consumption. Chevrolet has definitely disproved the old theory that a six uses more gasoline than a four. Because of modern, efficient engine design, Chevrolet sedan deliveries are frequently giving 20 miles to the gallon or better; and Chevrolet 11/2-ton trucks are making records that are relatively just as high.

Then there is the matter of upkeep. On account of the ruggedness of Chevrolet bodies and chassis, service expense is held to the absolute minimum. "20,000 miles without opening the engine for service," "Always on the job," "It just goes and goes and goes" are typical remarks of Chevrolet six-cylinder truck operators. And from the standpoint of long life, many a Chevrolet speedometer reads 50,000 miles or more, yet the truck is still giving reliable service at low cost.

In picking out a motor truck, it's wise to buy as big fleet operators are buying—choose six-cylinder Chevrolets. A wide variety of Chevrolet-built bodies is now available. And delivered prices of Chevrolet trucks, complete and ready for work, are based on low chassis-cost and low body-cost, plus only reasonable charges for handling and financing.

Chevrolet 1½-ton chassis with 131" wheelbase $520 (Dual wheels optional, $25 extra) 1½-ton chassis with 157" wheelbase, $590 (Dual wheels standard)

Commencement Exercises Held

Thursday, June II

The Commencement exercises of the Tawas City High school were held Thursday evening, June 11, at the State Theatre. The ciass of 1931 consisted of three boys and seven girls,—Irwin C. Schlech e, Alvin M. Cholger, William R. Leslie, Beulah Mae Hilts, Delta M. Leslie, Mary Ilizabeth Metcalf, Alvera E. Goedecke, Marcella M. Low, Lola Muriel Harris, and Iva Mae Carroll.

Someone has said that every history must deal with the past, tell of the present, and look to the future. This is to be a history, that of the Class of '31, so in it must be told each of these things.

There is always much more to tell of the past, so it is with the past I shall begin.

We entered High School on the fifth day of September, 1927. We were an army of twenty-one strong, ready, as we 'hought, to conquer anything that came our way. This accustomed to high school life, and the strongness having worn away, we settled down to become as one with the rest.

We were very wise that first year and soon after we had organized with Miss Crosby as our advisor we began to think of ways to become rich.

It happened that there was visiting in town at this time a tiny man, by name Elmer O'Dell, whose fame was known all over the countryside. He agreed to help us by advertising a picture show for us. It did certainly help and a great crowd came to see the picture and

The numbers by the High School Boys' Quartette and the High School Girls' tette and the High School Girls' to make excuses and when we were Glee Club were well rendered, showing the effect of systematic training. Mr. Myles, secretary of the Board of Education, presented the diplomas to the members of the class. He praised the efforts of the students and faculty as indicated by the returns from the contests with other schools in which representa-

Mr. Misner had a pleasing delivery and developed his theme in an interesting and thoughtful manner. He showed that the problems of the near future must be solved by the young people who are now being graduated from the high schools of the nations, and that the "footprints on the sands of time" seem to indicate greater problems than the ones of the past. Mrs. Misner is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Barnes of this city, and so we were particularly pleased to have Mr. Misner participate in our Commencement program.

This was only made possible by the while there is much to say in regard to why this mode of dress should not be followed at graduation time by high school students, it certainly does lessen the expense of the occasion, and irrespective of the financial condition of their parents, places all of the graduates on the same level.

Another fact worthy of notice is of a large number of friends.

The Bacca'aureate service was held at the local Baptist church, Sunday evening, June 7. Reverend F. S. Metcalf gave the address, and Reverend M. A. Sommerfield offered anything that came our way. They finally decided on the pro—we would go. The boys went around and told all the rest of the Seniors that we were going and to meet at the Schlechte home as soon as possible.

At about eight o'clock we were all there—even Mr. Giddings. Muriel, Marcella, Iva and Irwin rode in Mr. Giddings' car. Delto, Alvera, Alvin and I rode with Bill.

Alvin was sitting in the lack seat in the grades, and a class in art to the juniors and seniors of the high school.

Much of the work in music in the high school was done by means of organizations which met to quite an extent after the close of the regular school cay. These groups consisted of a beginning orchestra, a Boys' Glee Club, a Girls' Glee Club, and a Male Quartete. They furnished music for many of the special chool functions during the venu.

We stopped at Otsego Lake for lunch, which by the way, was a picnic lunch. It was cold and damp, but we didn't mind. We were happy and having a wonderful time. I am sure everyone's appetite was satisfied. Poor Alvera—she was teased and kidded because she as so much, but she didn't seem to mind because she kept right on eating. When we were packing the things to go home we started putting the things we liked best in our car and, of course, those in the other car objected. The ones who could run the fastest and hold on the tighest were the ones who got what they liked. Our car seemed the most fortunate.

We finally got started and went in to Gaylord. While driving through we spied a fen cent store and immediately we made Bill stop the car so we could do some shopping. We all bought something to remind us of Gaylord, and then we left it behind in the dust.

EAST CROSSROADS, COLORADO By ROBERT HAMILTON

Along the "main" and only street of this small western town, East Crossroads, are situated a general store and post office, a black-smith shop, another general store, and, on sides of the dust covered 'highway," a few squalid dwellings.

looks short until he stands beside someone else and then it can plainly be seen that he stands well over six feet with his shoes off. He is partially bald, but what hair is left is a coal black color; he has a Roman nose; a wide mouth filled with a perfectly good set of store teeth, although no one suspects it; large friendly, black eyes, set far apart a long, 'hick neck; broad shoulders; a deep, broad chest; and long, powerful arms and legs. He seems to have been poured into his dark brown suit as it fits so tightly that he has never yet leaned over without a heavy casuality in suspender buttons. His feet are encosed in a pair of brown shoes which, as he often declares, "would make a good pair of pontoons for one o' them new-fangled airyplanes."

The black-smith shop is ruled by a man who is a counterpart of his vounger brother except for the discent advantage over his relative.

The second general store is run by a little, short, dried-up, bewhiskered, old man who is so mean he will not let the only dog in town sit down in the shade of his store. while the poor, flea-infested brute digs out a few of his numerous inhabitants.

In a moment, half a dozen shout ing, dusty cowboys are riding noisily down the street to the accomhorses, the creak of saddle leather, the snort of their impatient mounts, and their own harsh voices They ride up to the hitching rail in front of the store, and, swinging out of their saddles, race in and demand of Skinny the strongest drink in the house which he does, with a crash and rattle of glasses as they lide down the shining bar, followed hy a bot'le of the strongest in the store—ginger-ale! The men accept this with groans and ask where there is something fit to drink, but are placated when told that the prohibition agent had been in to inspect the drinks and all of the other stock had been destroyed and more has not yet arrived. The men accept this excuse and spend the next hour arguing about everything that their active brains can think of.

The interior of the store is crowded with merchandise of various types. In the one showcase are several kinds of tobacco, both chewing and smoking, pipes, cigars, and cigarettes, and several small articles of everyday use. Along the right wall is piled much miscellaneous hardware. Above this pile are hung three saddles of the kind used by the cowboys, and some long ropes, known as lassos. are sold while the dry agents are in the vicinity of the town. SENIOR CLASS RETURNS
FROM THREE DAY TOUR
The Senior class of Tawas City
high school arrived home Tuesday evening from an interesting three day tour of the Straits of Mackinac, Canada, and the western par of Michigan. Mrs. G. A. Prescott Jr., gave them kindly consent to act as chaperone for the trip.

They set out early Sunday morning and Mackinaw City was reached by noon and by few citable.

by noon, and by four o'clock had crossed the Straits and arrived in Sault Ste. Marie. Monday was spent in seeing the Canadian Soo, after which a long ride was taken in Ontario to see the beautiful Crystal Falls. Then began the journey to lower Michigan and the lovely drive along the shore of Lake Michigan Monday night was spent in Petoskey. Tuesday afternoon they arrived in Traverse City, and with a special permit were shown through the state hospital and the insane asylum. asylum.

"In the Desolate Land Sleuth Has Some and Lone-"

month occurred a tragedy which shocked the whole country as had, perhaps, no other one since the assassination of Abraham Lincoln. On June 25, 1876, Gen. George Armstrong Custer, a dashing cavalry leader during the Civil war, attacked a big village of Sioux, Cheyenne and Arapahoe Indians, strung along the banks of the Little Big Horn river in Montana. When the battle was over Custer lay dead and around him lay the bodies of 212 men and officers, the entire personnel of five companies of his regiment, the Sixth cavalry. Several miles away six other companies were besieged by the Indians on the bluffs overlooking the river and it is possible that only the timely arrival of the forces of Generals Terry and Gibbon two days later saved them from the fate which had overtaken their commander and their fellow troopers.

But it was not until July 4, 1876, when Americans everywhere were engaged in a joyous celebration of the hundredth anniversary of the founding of the nation, that word of this disaster came like the proverbial bolt from the blue to stun the public with its ill tidings and to cast a pall of sorrow over the centennial festivities. Logically, the news of the tragedy should not have surprised the Amerfcan public, for by that time it should have become accustomed to the blundering policy of our government in its relations with the Indians-a policy of allowing itself to become involved in unnecessary wars with the red man, of underestimating both the desperation of his resolution not to submit tamely to white domination and the strength which he could assemble to resist that domination, and of sending a totally inadequate force of soldiers to subdue the hostiles after they had gone on the warpath.

Early in the history of the Repub lic we had learned a bitter lesson of the folly of sending an insufficient force, insufficient in both numbers and experience, against confederated tribes of hostiles, when the expedition against the Indians of the Old Northwest ended in St. Clair's defeat, the worst disaster suffered by a white man's army since the days of the unfortunate Braddock. But that lesson was forgotten until the series of failures experienced during the longdrawn-out wars with the Seminoles in Florida served to recall it. And again our government was short of memory, so when Gen. Henry B. Carrington was sent to garrison and hold a chain of forts along the trail to Montana in the heart of the Sloux country, it turned a deaf ear to his pleas for more men. The result was that Lieut. Col. W. J. Fetterman marched out from Fort Phil Kearney one cold day in December, 1866, with 81 men and none of them came back alive. The "Fetterman Massacre" or "Fort Phil Kearney Massacre," socalled-though the student of frontier history, if he recognizes the word "massacre" at all as the correct one for this affair, is less inclined to blame the warriors of the great Sioux chief, Red Cloud, than the government officials who ignored Carrington's requests-horrified the country for a short time, but within ten years it had forgotten this, just as it had other Indian disasters, so the time was ripe for still another tragic chapter. And the hero of it was George Armstrong Custer, the "Boy General" of Civil war days.

Several factors have entered into giving the tragedy of 55 years ago such enduring fame while greater ones have been forgotten. One of them is the striking personality of the leader who died there-Custer, the "Beau Sabreur of the American Army," the "Last of the Cavaliers," as he has been called by a recent biographer, a man of vivid personality, the hero of a "success story" of the kind dearly beloved by Americans. Not only had he been an unusually successful cavalry leader in the Civil war, but his Indian campaigns in Kansas and Oklahoma in 1867-68 had added to his reputation and perpetuated the tradition of "Custer luck." So when this outstanding Indian fighter fell a victim to the Indians at last and did it in such dramatic fashion, it was only lowed those three to start upon their natural, perhaps, that it should make ! an impression upon the public mind which more than half a century has not erased.

GEN. GEORGE A. CUSTER

Of the irony of fate which overtook this dashing cavalryman, Frazier Hunt, the biographer previously referred to, has said: "To the millions of plain Americans he is remembered not as a commander of a dashing and victorious division of cavalry that captured 10,000 prisoners and 65 battle flags from a gallant and stubborn foe (during the Civil war), but as an Indian fighter, who with a handful of troopers eleven years later galloped to a tragic death. He had fought Lee and Stonewall Jackson, Jeb Stuart and 'the gallant Pelham'-great and remembered soldiers-but it was the naked Sioux warriors of the plains who sent him to deathless fame. The gods of battle have their own inscrutable way of making heroes."

If Custer needed the aid of others besides the gods of battle to help make him a hero, he found them in the persons of the government officials who had forgotten Fetterman and his 81 men. For in the last analysis, responsibility for what took place on the Little Big Horn goes back to them. Custer himself, during a conversation with General Carrington early in 1876, in regard to the proposed campaign against the hostile Sioux and Cheyennes, remarked that 'It will take another Phil Kearney massacre to bring congress up to generous support of the army." Although, from his experience on the plains, he knew full well of the task that lay ahead of the army, he little realized how true his prophecy was nor that he was to make the same sacrifice that Fetterman had made.

The general plan of the campaign was to have three army columns converge from different directions upon the section in Wyoming and Montana where the hostiles had taken refuge after their refusal to stay on the reservations set aside by the government for them. One under General Gibbon was to come eastward from western Montana; another under General Crook was to advance northward from southern Nebraska; and the third under General Terry was to proceed westward from Fort Abraham Lincoln in what is now North Dakota. The principal trouble with this plan was that it didn't work. It didn't work because the combined three forces were not large enough for the task ahead of them, even though the government had thought it might be large enough, especially since the Indians, instead of waiting for the three armies to concentrate upon them, made use of some Napoleonic strategy, unconsciously, perhaps, and by operating "on interior lines" attacked two of the columns in severalty and defeated them in detail. Then, too, it didn't work because in reality one department of the government was allied with the Indians, instead of with the army. For it was the inefficiencyto be extremely charitable-of the Indian department which permitted the Indians to go into the field much better armed than the soldiers of Crook and Gibbon and Terry, and which al-expeditions grossly underestimating the strength of the hostiles.

A ROLL CALL OF HEROES

From the beginning the results of the campaign were unsatisfactory. Gen. J. J. Reynolds of Crook's command attacked the village of the Sioux chief, Crazy Horse, on March 17 and fought a sharp engagement in which all the honors rested with the latter. Three months later on June 17, Crazy Horse fought Crook's force to a standstill at the battle of the Rosebud and halted his forward progress indefinitely. A short time before this Terry and Gibbon successfully joined forces on the Powder river and on June 17 Major Reno of Custer's Seventh cavalry, which formed the principal part of Terry's command, went on a scout which took them within 40 miles of where Crook was having his fierce battle with Crazy Horse, Terry and Gibbon were surprised at not finding any Indians. They did not realize that the hostiles were busy elsewhere fighting the battle which paved the way for their victory on the Little Big Horn.

Then on June 22 Custer was sent to scout a trail that Reno had discovered and this led him to the banks of the Little Big Horn and his Waterloo. The story of that battle in its main outlines is a familiar one-how Custer, marching rapidly, reached the Little Big Horn sooner than was expected, how he discovered the great Indian village and, not realizing the numerical strength of its warriors nor the fact that they were flushed with a feeling of victory over having stopped Crook, how he decided to attack at once without waiting for Terry and Gibbon, who were to be on hand for a battle, if Custer found the Indians, by June 26; and finally how adopting the tactics which had brought him victory in other fights with the Indians, he made the fatal division of his command into three parts, one led by Major Reno, one by Major Benteen and the third by him-

Under the circumstances, the result was almost a foregone conclusion. Reno made his attack, was met with a fierce resistance and, outnumbered, was driven back to the bluffs across the river, suffering heavy losses as he retreated. Benteen, following the route designated for him, got into impossible country and gradually worked back toward the route taken by Reno so that he arrived in time to help that officer hold his own against the whooping savages who were swarming about him. Meanwhile Custer and his five companies, not knowing that his plan of battle had already been broken up, rode on to his death. For the Indians, having put Reno out of the fight, concentrated on Custer and within a short time had done him and his men to death.

That story has been told and retold countless times. Over it has raged many a bitter controversy and around it has sprung up a great mass of tradition, myth, misinformation and just plain "bunk."

Collection of Souvenirs of Noted Crimes Most Complete in World.

Kansas City.-In a water-front saloon in Shanghai 18 years ago an angered Chinese coolie threw a knife at an American sailor. Merle A. Gill, 6900 Kensington avenue, now a nationally known criminologist, was the sailor marked for death.

He saw the lethal blade poised in the Chinaman's hand. He felt his time had come, for coolies seldom miss when they flash their long knives. But Gill was not destined to die at the hand of that Chinese assailant.

As the knife was drawn back for the throw, a shipmate of Sailor Gill drew his service revolver and shot the coolie through the head. He dropped to the floor lifeless as his blade sped through the air and barely grazed Gill's head.

Starts a Collection.

Gill picked up the knife and carried it with him as he and his shipmate fled back to their ship. It started Gill on his hobby of collecting souvenirs of violent death and crime. In 15 years of police work, which has followed his retirement from the navy, he has acquired an extensive collec-

A room in Gill's residence just south of Swope park has been set aside for his strange collection. It is a museum of unusual interest, especially for the student of criminology. From all parts of the country law enforcement officials and collectors of crime souvenirs come to Kansas City to see Gill's col-

It has been exhibited at the convention of peace officers' associations in many states. Efforts now are being made to induce Mr. Gill to show his collection at the World's fair to be held in Chicago in 1933.

Plenty of Variety.

The nooses which have hung famous criminals, the revolvers carried by such notorious gunmen as Jesse James, Cole Younger, Henry Starr and Sam Carr, pictures of virtually every gang killing and nationally publicized crime, mementos of the careers of Billy the Kid and other early day bad men are included in his grim and fascinating collection.

The most important department in Gill's museum is a collection of handcuffs, leg irons, strait jackets and other devices for shackling prisoners. Gill claims that his collection is the most complete in the world.

Gill is the inventor of several different types of handcuffs used by police departments and sheriffs throughou the United States. For many years he was a manufacturer of police equip-

Although he has made and patented various types of shackles, Gill has speclalized in the manufacture of handcuffs. That specialization started him to collecting handcuffs. More than 100 pairs are included in his collection.

Has "Oregon Boot."

One of the treasures of the collection is half of an old wrought-iron handcuff made in England in 1620, the year the Mayflower landed at Plymouth Rock. The other half of that ancient relic now is in the Guild hall museum in London.

Gill also owns a pair of heavy handcuffs used in the old Linclon county jail in Texas when Billy the Kid was confined there in 1879. An old "Oregon boot," a peculiar type of leg iron, made in 1876, is another feature of his Leg irons used on the battleship Maine, an old handmade iron prison lock used on the Leverett street jail in Boston for more than 100 years, thumb screws, hand mitts and types of shackles obsolete for generations are included in the collection.

Gill's grim collection represents the expenditure of thousands of dollars and more than a decade of travel and research. The monetary value is difficult to estimate, he explained, for many of the pieces could never be

For more than five years Gill was a special agent for the United States Department of Labor, investigating the activities of I. W. W.'s and Communists. He traveled widely through out the country and made friends of peace officers in scores of cities. He holds police commissions in hundreds of counties throughout the Middle West. He is a member of the Peace Officers' association of Missouri, Kansas, and Oklahoma, and of the International Association for Identification.

A Simple Trick.

In his study of handcuffs and development of shackles from which escape is impossible, Gill has learned all the tricks of escape artists. With a small piece of wire, such as a stick pin or a paper clip, he is able to escape from virtually all types of shackles. He has demonstrated various methods of escape to thousands of police officers to show them how to forestall escape of clever prisoners.

"It is comparatively easy for a dexterous prisoner to escape from the type of handcuffs usually carried by policemen and sheriffs," he said. 'Many peace officers have lost their lives because they do not know how to keep dangerous criminals shackled.

"A few months ago the chief of police of a Kansas town told me he had a pair of handcuffs from which no one could escape. I called his bet just to show him he had too much confidence in handcuffs.

"I permitted him to search me thoroughly for anything I might be carrying to pick the lock, and then he locked the cuffs on me with my hands behind my back. He left me alone

Uses Well-Known Trick.

"I never told him how I escaped, but I merely utilized one of the simplest tricks used by criminals. Before I visited that chief of police I attached a small piece of bent wire to the instep of my foot with adhesive tape. Although he searched me thoroughly he never found it.

"By stepping through my shackled arms and getting the handcuffs in front, of me, I was able to remove my shoe and sock, obtain the piece of wire and unfasten the lock. When one knows just how to do it the unlocking of almost any handcuff with a small piece of wire can be done quickly and easily."

Gill can talk for hours of interesting experiences he has had as federal agent, detective, and policeman. He is a finger-print expert as well as an authority on locks and shackles and he has aided many police departments in capturing criminals by the finger-print method.

Proud of Collection.

Gill is particularly proud of his unusual collection, and he shows it willingly to visitors who are interested. He knows the history of each object in his museum. Each piece has a long and fascinating story. Thrills and shudders are wrapped around many of those grewsome relics.

There is one piece in his collection which has real beauty, however. It is a .38 caliber Colt's automatic pistol of polished blue steel, which was made especially for him, primarily for exhibition purposes. It has a matched mother-of-pearl handle studded with amethysts and emeralds and all the metal surfaces are covered with elaborate hand engraving. Gill avows it would be almost a pleasure to be shet by such a beautiful gun.

Tuberculosis in Cattle Cut by Federal Efforts

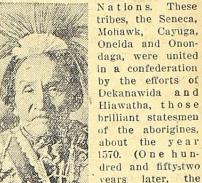

Washington .- A marked decline in tuberculosis among cattle and swine slaughtered in federal inspected plants has been reported by the Agriculture department since systematic efforts to eradicate the disease were begun.

There has been a great deal of talk. the report from the department said, about the manner in which cattle react to the tuberculin tests, but records show that only .2 per cent of the cattle which react to the test do not have tuberculosis. The other 99.8 per cent which react to the test have in a cell for a few minutes and when ! proved to be tainted with tuberculosis.

TALES... of the TRIBES By EDITHA L. WATSON

The Iroquois

The first successful League of Nations was that of the Iroquois, also known as the Five brilliant statesmen of the aborigines, about the year 1570. (One hundred and fiftystwo years later, the Tuscarora were admitted to the Iroquois. league, which was known from then on as the Six Nations). All the Iroquois tribes were much alike in their customs. Kinship was traced exclusively through the female blood, and the women controlled many of the political and legal situations. The lodges and their furnishings were the property of the women, and so were the children. All lands, including the burial grounds, also were theirs. Since women were the owners of so much of the tribal property, it followed that the councils, even that of the league itself, while composed of men, really only represented the women and their rights.

The penalty for killing a woman was twice that for killing a man. Women possessed the right to forbid their sons to go on the warpath; they kept close watch on the affairs of their tribe, and guarded the treasury, with a voice in the disposal of its contents. The feminists of today may point with pride to this great confederation as the protype of their desired civilization.

In each tribe certain classes of persons held the position of chiefs, and there were three grades of these, whose functions were defined by the tribal laws. The confederation was an enlargement of the tribal government, which created new rights and duties, yet adhered closely to the precedent set by the separate tribes.

The sensible laws and principles of the constitution of this confederation were due, in a large measure, to Dekanawida, a Huron, who appears to have been a man far in advance of his time. Hiawatha, a Mohawk, was the one who undertook the enormous labor of putting Dekanawida's principles into practice. The story of these two men almost passes belief, because of the time in which they lived, the obstacles they were compelled to surmount and the brilliance of their final anchievement for the Iroquois confederation will stand forever as a wonderful example of aboriginal government.

When the Europeans first heard of the league it was already a powerful one, and as soon as contact with the whites enabled them to obtain firearms, the Five Nations began to conquer their neighbors on all sides and to extend their territory. They were blocked by the Cherokee on the south, and the Chippewa (who were also expanding) on the west. In fact, the Chippewa finally forced them to withdraw from part of the country they had conquered, the peninsula between Lake Erie and Lake Huron.

The Canadian Indians to their north were resisting their advance also, and when Champlain joined them and held the leagued tribes back, he created in the baffled Iroquois most bitter enemies of the French. From this time on the French had cause to know the strength and the venom of these Indians, who, as they had become allied with the English, had powerful back-

The French, realizing not only that these were dangerous enemies but also that they would be friends worth having, tried every means in their power to change their attitude. The missionaries were charged to befriend these Indians and to try to alter their enmity, and were successful in some individual cases. A good many from the Mohawk and Onondaga and a few from the other tribes, withdrew from their people and formed settlements of their own on the St. Lawrence river. These people, known as the Catholic Iroquois, were friendly to the French, and took part with them against their former tribesmen. The league tried, time after time, to win them back, but finally gave them up as traitors who would not reform.

When the American Revolution began it was decided among the Iroquois to let each tribe make its own choice of action. The league had always been friendly with the English, so that they all, with two exceptions, joined their friends in the struggle. The Oneida (the most cruel and least tractable of the Iroquois tribes) and part of the Tuscarora remained neu-

After the war those of the league who had been allied with the English were settled on a reservation in Ontario. Those in the United States, except the Oneida, were given reservaions in New York, while the Oneida went to Green Bay, Wis., near which place they settled.

SECRETS OF NEW BRITISH WARSHIPS ARE REVEALED

Larger Torpedo Tubes an Innovation in Battleships Nelson and Rodney.

London.—Features of the battleships Nelson and Rodney, which have hitherto been one of the navy's most jealously guarded secrets, have recently been revealed.

Each of these ships has two tubes for discharging 24-inch torpedoes, the largest in existence. Beyond their diameter no particulars of these gigantic "tin fish" can be disclosed, but it may be taken for granted that in range and explosive power they are quite unique. Britain's earliest torpedoes were of 15-inch diameter with small explosive charge. They were not only limited to range and speed but were decidedly erratic, and almost as dangerous to friend as foe. Later the diameter was increased to 18 inches, and guncotton torpedoes of this size were largely used by British submarines during the war.

They were not entirely reliable and many a British submarine captain, after maneuvering for hours to get a shot at a German warship, had the mortification of seeing his carefully aimed torpedos run wild. When hits were secured on big German vessels, their robust underwater protection generally saved them from mortal in-

In the fighting at Jutland British destroyers fired 21-inch torpedoes, some of which got home with spectacular results. The battleship Pommern, hit abreast of the magazines, went up in one tremendous explosion.

Toward the end of the war the Germans produced a 23.7-inch torpedo for the special purpose of arming an "iron division" of 12 big destroyers. These were to have formed the spearhead of the high sea fleet's light building of these superdestroyers was delayed, and the projected action did not come off; the new torpedo was never tested. Since the war new types of torpedo have been evolved both in Britain and in other countries, but as far as is known the British navy is the only one to possess a 24-inch "fish." As smaller torpedoes are now priced at $15,000 apiece, the cost of these huge and complicated weapons must be staggering.

VARIETY IN THE MENU

For a luncheon menu after preparing the salad of crisp lettuce, french pineapple, sprinkle it with a handful of good nuts-peanuts, almonds, pecans or hickory nutsany nut will be good and supply the protein which is needed for the wellbalanced menu. With a slice of whole wheat bread and a glass of milk, this makes a good meal. Creamed Finnan Haddie. - There should be one and one-half cupfuls of the fish, flake or break into small bits, after soaking in water. Remove all bone and skin. Make a white sauce as usual, add the fish and simmer for ten minutes. Halve crosswise large, fresh, green peppers and remove the seeds and veins. Scald with boiling water and drain well. Fill with the creamed fish, cover with buttered crumbs and place the peppers in gem pans to hold their shape. Bake ten minutes or until well heated and the crumbs well browned. Salmon, tuna or cooked fresh fish well seasoned may be used in place of the haddie. Garnish with riced, hardcooked egg and chop the whites and use as a border around the edge of the pepper for a more fancy and nutritious dish.

French Potato Soup .- This has appeared before, but is such a favorite that one hopes to find a few new ones to become its advocates. Slice a large potato or two, an onion or two-one may vary the proportions depending on the number to be served. Slice the onions and put them to cook in two tablespoonfuls of butter. When a golden brown add them to the potatoes which are covered with boiling water, cook until soft. Season, add hot milk and serve.

Use the fruit left in the bag when draining for jelly to make jam. If carefully looked over and the fruit is fresh, it will make most acceptable jams. By adding an orange, a few nuts, one will have a nice tasty con-

Michigan Court Crier In 1833, before Michigan had become a state, the sessions of the Supreme court were held in the territorial capitol building. The crier of the court was Isaac Day, familiarly known as "General Day" or "Field Marshal Day." He was a large, portly man. One afternoon during the session of court a severe thunderstorm occurred. While the general sat in somniculous quietude, leaning on his ivory-headed staff of office, gently snoring, an interlude to the raging tempest without, a tremendous peal of thunder jarred the building and startled all its inmates. The general, awakening, sprang upon his feet and, giving a heavy rap on the floor with his staff, cried out in a tone little lower than the thunder, "Silence!" The effect was irresistible, and for a time the court and bar were convulsed with laughter,-Detroit Free Press.

Ancient English Oak Cowthorpe oak is said to be the oldest in England, observes the Montreal Family Herald. Records say that it is about one thousand six hundred years of age. Taking root near the great Roman road, some three miles from Wetherby, it became one of the mightiest oaks in England. On one occasion 100 children gathered in its hollow trunk. In 1842 the tree was estimated to contain 74 tons of timber, the trunk was 60 feet in circumference, it was 43 feet high, and its main branch 50 feet 6 inches long. But where once (it is said) boughs spread over half an acre, there remain only its huge gaunt limbs. Every spring, however, green leaves still appear among the topmost branches, and workmen are doing what they can to keep the giant alive for a few more vears.

Eskimos live in and all around the city of Nome in the Seward peninsula, Alaska. This area is one of the most thickly populated areas of the coast, but the Eskimos live all along the coast of Alaska and Canada, on the Alaska peninsula in the southwest to Greenland in the northeast.

Photographic Fact

Brunettes are easier to photograph than blonds. Shadows and dark tones are what count in pictures. Blonds offer less contrast to the camera. Light hair, eyes and skin blend into each other.

Illiterates Barred

"SPORTSY" SHOES FOR SUMMER OUTSTANDING FASHION FEATURE

Correctly Shod for Summer.

tion is turning in the direction of handsome "sportsy" footwear. The smartest sports shoes are eyeleted this season. Which is to be expected since most everything else on the summer style program from millinery to footwear has eyelets. Even our pocketbooks, our gloves and our belts are being eyeleted nowa-

With her stunning white kid-angora frock the young sportswoman shown at the top in the picture is wearing a pair of ultra-smart perforated oxfords, just the sort every style-wise woman will be wanting as summer advances. High-style points to be observed in this costume are the wide belt, the tri-color scarf and the small soft white hat, knitted caps of this type being in the spotlight of fashion at this moment.

Other sports shoes which keep in step with the mode are those of white buck with dark kidskin combinations. The outstanding note about shoes of other sheer cottons as quaint and lovely has been revived, the really and truly summer girl bids fair to grace the landscape with her adorable presence as she did in the long. long ago.

The story of what designers are doing with these dainty flattering materials reads like a tale of romance. Not for summers and summers have such beguiling, feminine, fluttery frocks been in promise as have registered on the style program for the coming months.

Crisp and ever youthful-looking organdie is especially making a farflung challenge to creative genius to do and to dare. An example of the alluring and unique things which designers are doing with organdie is set forth in the illustration. They are motifs which have been cut out of black lace, those decorative florals which you see silhouetted against the white background of this winthis type is the generous use made of | for yourself, this clever idea of trim-

the black, brown or navy kid, which | ming white organdie with black lace? contrasts the white. The young woman seated in the foreground of the picture is wearing shoes of lates model. Take note of the very low heels, which is a characteristic feature of footwear designed for young moderns whose needs are being made a special consideration by designers and dealers this season. Her sleeveless jacket is bright red.

A high style note for summer in shoes which are refreshingly new and different is the sandal. During the coming months the center of attraction promises to be sandals which range from sports types to ultra evening modes of the most fanciful conceptions. Sandals with vamp sections made of straps in combinations of black patent and white kid, also in brown and white combinations, will be smart for sports and general daytime Charming for dressy yet conservative wear are the new sandals which are made of exquisitely fine and soft navy or brown kidskin. As to the very elaborate evening sandals, the feet of the ancient Greek goddesses were encased in no more artistic and picturesque types.

Reminder of the Past. Now that the vogue for organdie. dotted swiss, embroidered batiste and Another effect which is more charming than words can tell is that of gay wool yarn embroidery on white organdie. Flowers in realistic colors are worked either in borderings or clusters. It is a thought which should prove intriguing to the woman who can embroider, and one does not necessarily have to be an expert with the needle for the work is quickly and easily accomplished, and best of all, it is very effective.

Among the newest trimming treatments is one, the inspiration for which comes from the picturesque custom which the romantic Hawaiians follow of decorating those who visit their shores as well as themselves on festive occasions with wreaths, leis as the natives call them. Dame Fashion has appropriated the idea to the extent that not only the formal evening gown is now trimmed with garands of flowers made of the material which fashions the dress, but many of the most charming daytime and garden-party frocks reflect this influence. Wherefore if you are making up organdie, finish the neckline or border the edge of its cape-collar with a row of flowers hand-made of self-
