

TAWAS CITY

Felix Stepanski of Bay City spent Monday in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Vuillemot of Flint were visitors at the Sommerfield home Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. William Simpson of Mount Pleasant, Nova Scotia, were week end visitors with Mr. and Mrs. A. G. McCormic, Mr. Simpson and Mr. McCormic had not seen each other since boyhood—51 years ago.

Miss Mable McCaskey, teacher in the New York City schools, came Sunday to spend the summer months with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McCaskey.

Mrs. B. Galbraith and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Galbraith of Detroit are spending the Fourth of July holidays here. Ervin Galbraith of Pinconning is also spending a few days here.

Meet old acquaintances at the big celebration at Sand Lake July 4th. Sports for young and old, dancing, baseball.

Mrs. A. A. McGuire and Miss Elsie Neumann returned Friday from the Michigan State College at Lansing for a visit over the week end. Mrs. McGuire and Miss Neumann are attending summer school.

It has been reported that the government may engage Jack DeCou for research work in the science of ballistics and high explosives. Mr. DeCou completed a successful experiment in high explosives this week at the Beatrice creamery.

Mrs. Otto Smith of Detroit is visiting her mother, Mrs. C. Johnson, this week.

Rev. W. C. Voss and Rev. E. E. Kasischke attended a conference for Lutheran pastors at Plymouth several days this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. E. Darrow of Saginaw spent the week end with friends in the city. Miss Brown accompanied them home for a visit.

Mrs. M. E. Friedman of Detroit is spending a few days with her son, Hymie.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lorenz entertained relatives from Flint and Detroit over the week end.

Junior Mark, Earl Davis, Vernon Davis, Arnold McLean and Clifford Roemer will entertain Monday at Camp Hailey, Boy Scouts camp at Hale.

Mr. and Mrs. Irving Steinhurst, George Steinhurst and Miss Beatrice Lotter of Elkton visited at the Steinhurst home here several days this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Beardlee returned Tuesday from a ten day motor trip through Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Bielby of Hale and Miss Grace Anderson spent Monday with Mrs. Will Brown.

At a meeting of the board of education held Monday evening the contract for re-roofing the school building was given to C. E. Tanner. The building will be re-roofed with colored asbestos tile.

The baseball game between Tawas City and Rogers City scheduled for last Sunday was called off on account of rain. This week end the locals play two games—engaging East Tawas, at East Tawas July 4th and the Berdan Broad Co. nine of Bay City at the local athletic field Sunday, July 5th.

Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Prescott and sons of Cleveland came Wednesday for several weeks' visit at their summer home here.

Oral E. Anker and children and mother, Mrs. Sylvia Anker, of Williamston, Michigan, are visiting friends at Tawas City and vicinity. Mr. Anker formerly was a resident of Grant township.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Horton were week end visitors in Detroit.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Curry, a 9½ pound son on Thursday, July 2nd. Mother and babe are doing nicely.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Waterbury returned Friday morning to Cleveland after visiting in Tawas City for a few days. While in the east this summer Mr. and Mrs. Waterbury visited Mr. Waterbury's birthplace, Phelps, New York. Mr. Waterbury's father, the late J. M. Waterbury, published the "Phelps Citizen." Mr. Waterbury, later, became editor of the Bay City Daily Tribune. He also established and published The Tawas Bay Advocate, one of Tawas City's early newspapers.

BAPTIST CHURCH

The baptismal service on the lake shore last Sunday afternoon was very impressive. Twelve young people followed their Savior into the baptismal waters. Last Wednesday evening twenty new members were received into the fellowship and membership of the church.

There will be another baptismal service later. Several people have made requests for baptism.

10:00 a. m.—Morning service. C. G. Wilkins, of the Anti-Saloon League, will speak.

11:15 a. m.—Bible School. Theme—"The Gift of the Holy Spirit."

2:00 p. m.—Young People service. There will be an evening service during the months of July and August.

5000 SPORTSMEN ATTEND MEETING

Residents of NorthEastern Michigan Thursday heard Governor Brucker, John Gillespie, of Detroit, and William H. McKeighan, of Flint, among the guests of honor at the first annual meeting of the Bay-Straits League speak from the same stage. Neither Gov. Brucker nor Mr. Gillespie recognized the other on the platform, but the crowd estimated at 5,000 fishermen, hunters and resort property owners from 17 counties of the northeastern section of the state, after waiting a full hour, with the thermometer registering 92 degrees, for the appearance of the Governor, gave full approval to the messages of "hopefulness and financial help" promised Northern Michigan by all of the speakers.

Secretary of State Frank D. Fitzgerald, Councilman Philip A. Callahan, Detroit, Conservation Director George R. Hogarth, Rep. Arthur C. MacKinnon of Bay City, Ben East, outdoor editor of the Booth newspapers, and Herman N. Butler, of East Tawas, president of the league, addressed the audience which was one of the greatest and most important conservation meetings ever held in Michigan.

Albert W. Black, Bay City attorney, introduced the speakers. Mr. Fitzgerald spoke briefly on the natural resources of this section and pointed out that all that was necessary to find the goodness in a man and the benefits that follow his deeds was to take him fishing or hunting. Mr. Hogarth pledged the efforts of the Department of Conservation toward making the north country more attractive to tourists and asked for the co-operation in this program of all who make this territory their home.

Mr. Gillespie, billed as a great Detroit sportsman, offered a plea to keep Northern Michigan a recreational paradise and pledged that, in the event the State was remiss in the financial duties, the sportsmen of Southern Michigan will provide sufficient money to keep it going. This was considered by many in the audience as a dig at Gov. Brucker's program of economy in conservation finances.

Councilman Callahan brought a message of good will from Detroit and declared that the recreational advantages of this section of the State were unparalleled. He urged the residents to take advantage of this capital. Mayor McKeighan spoke about sportsmanship, declaring that it not only applies to hunting and fishing, but also to the actions of every day life.

Gov. Brucker declared the only promise he had made during the campaign for Governor had been fulfilled in the appointment as a member of the State Conservation Commission of Phillip K. Fletcher of Alpena. He expressed disappointment over the action of the last Legislature in not approving a nine-member Conservation Commission instead of the present seven-man board.

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOLS

Five Vacation Bible schools have been held in Iosco county to date. The Vine school recently closed with a most interesting program of songs, Bible stories, recitations, and a presentation of the Laws of American Citizenship, a course studied by the Juniors during the school. In spite of heavy rain, a remarkably large percentage of parents attended the final program.

The Greenwood and Grant schools combined in a splendid program held at the Hemlock Road church. The handbook done by these groups was of special interest—the work books exemplifying "Laws of American Citizenship," made by the Juniors; "Stories of Jesus" and "God's Gifts" by the Primaries.

The East Tawas Vacation school opens Wednesday, July 8th, while Monday, July 13th has been set for the beginning of the Tawas City school.

WILL ROGERS IS RIOT AS "CONNECTICUT YANKEE"

Will Rogers scores a new screen triumph in his latest Fox Movietone comedy production, "Mark Twain's Connecticut Yankee," which shows Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at the Family Theatre.

Rogers reaches the very peak of his powers as a comedian in his fellow humorist's masterpiece. There is never a dull moment from start to finish and the laughter is continuous.

Rogers naturally carries the lion's share of the comedy, but his supporting cast, which includes Maureen O'Sullivan, Frank Albertson, William Farnum and Myrna Loy, is unusually excellent.

"A Connecticut Yankee" marks the high water mark for David Butler, the director, far exceeding all his previous productions in magnificence, imagination and fast movement of action and dialogue.

TAWAS GOLF COURSE

Green fee, 50c; good for all day. Season ticket, $10.00 per player. Children under 16 years, half rate. The player who has the lowest score on Sunday will be admitted free the rest of the week. This applies to ladies and gentlemen. But you will have to have a caddy. Frank Brown, secretary, Tawas Golf Club.

One Flag, One Nation Evermore

LIXEY FISH COMPANY BOAT BURNS THURSDAY MORNING

The "Genevieve," a fish boat belonging to the Lixey Fish company, was burned at 6:30 Thursday morning when about one-fourth mile out in the bay. James Heric was blown from the cabin into the bay by an explosion of gasoline. Harris Lixey and Orville Cunningham were forced to jump into the water by the flames. Heric suffered severe burns about the head and shoulders. A pond net on board was badly damaged.

The burning boat was towed back to the dock where the East Tawas fire department extinguished the flames with the chemical engine.

ROACH MOTOR SALES HAVE NEW PLYMOUTH ON DISPLAY

The new Plymouth is now being unveiled in the salesrooms of the Roach Motor Sales.

This new Plymouth is radically different from all cars in one very fundamental aspect. It embodies a new engineering principle which has been called "floating power," and which, it is stated, eliminates all feeling of engine vibration in the new Plymouth. In floating power the Plymouth engineers developed a two-point (front and rear only) suspension, allowing the engine to rock or oscillate freely and thus dissipate its own vibration.

Combined with floating power in the new Plymouth, is the industry's recent innovation—free wheeling—as standard equipment. Free wheeling is an accredited development. It is, however, an unlooked for thing that it should so quickly be incorporated in standard specifications of any car in the lowest price field. The Plymouth free wheeling unit provides for dash board control whereby you can either avail yourself of free wheeling or drive the car as if it did not carry this unit. Control is as simple as the operation of the choke button. With Plymouth free-wheeling the driver can free-wheel in all forward speeds and can shift speeds forward without using his clutch pedal.

Shifting, also, is refined in the new Plymouth by the design of the new transmission. It is called "easy-shift transmission," because it permits shifting from second to high and back again at 35 or 40 miles per hour without clash of gears.

STATE TO SHOW ANOTHER WHEELER-WOOLSEY HIT

In its double bill for Wednesday and Thursday of next week the State Theatre offers "Cracked Nuts" and "Brothers."

In "Cracked Nuts," the famous "nut" comedy team, Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, run wild. They bring laughs with practically every appearance with practically every line. The stars have never been seen to better advantage. Dorothy Lee, rapidly becoming one of the most clever, engaging and capable ingenues on the screen, lends admirable support.

Bert Lytell, prominent screen star of the silent film days, scores a most astounding success in "Brothers." It played on Broadway and toured the country for eighteen months. Lytell is shown in the original dual portrayal which proved such a sensation during its stage run. Opposite him in the leading feminine role is Dorothy Sebastian.

CARD OF THANKS

We want to thank our many neighbors and friends for their many acts of kindness and the floral offerings extended to us at the time of the death of our little boy, Owen. Mr. and Mrs. Bert Chrivia and family.

HOLBECK-McNITT BILL DOES NOT ENTIRELY RELIEVE TOWNSHIP RESPONSIBILITY

While the money available will maintain township roads better than the townships were maintaining them before, it does not provide for the building of new roads. If a road not on the county program for improvement is to be taken over for first class maintenance it will be necessary for the townships to have the road built. It is not possible to obtain first-class maintenance on a narrow dirt trail for this presents too great difficulties in cleaning snow, laying dust and even in keeping the roadbed smooth. Before the townships get full benefit of the new bill a large amount of mileage must be constructed. The townships are not being relieved because the bill says if it is desirable to construct highways the townships shall pay their portion of the cost, the limit being three mills. If all of the roads are taken over the only tax burden the townships will have for roads is for construction.

Under the terms of the bill the road commission makes out a program of construction and submits it at the October session of the supervisors, specifying the amount the county-at-large and the township should pay. The supervisors may approve or disapprove such a program or division of costs.

"DAYBREAK" TELLS AN ALLURING STORY

"Daybreak," which will be shown at the Family Theatre Sunday and Monday, July 5 and 6, is an intensely interesting presentation of the personality of Ramon Novarro. It presents him as an officer of a Viennese regiment before the war, a gay dashing adventurer in love. The story, delightfully done by the sophisticated Dr. Arthur Schnitzler, rises from charming comedy to the very heights of drama, based on a light love affair which turns serious. Novarro, as Lieutenant Kasda, is splendidly supported by the talented Helen Chandler of "Outward Bound" and "Dracula." Other players who give excellent accounts of themselves include Jean Hersholt as the "other man," C. Aubrey Smith as a general, William Bakewell, Karen Morley, Kent Douglas and Glenn Tryon.

"Daybreak" brings back a Ramon Novarro our audiences have not seen since "The Student Prince"; a Novarro with a monochrome and a Teutonic haircut; a Novarro very different from the very Spanish gentleman of "In Gay Madrid" and "Call of the Flesh." It is a picture you will not want to miss.

Shown with a Laurel & Hardy comedy, "Chickens Come Home."

NOTICE OF ANNUAL SCHOOL MEETING

The annual school meeting of District No. 7, Tawas City, and fractional of Tawas township, will be held Monday evening, July 13, at the high school building at 7:30. Central Standard time for the purpose of electing two trustees for a term of three years, and for the transaction of any other legal business that may come before the meeting.

John A. Myles, Secretary, Board of Education.

HUNDREDS ENJOY TAWAS BATHING BEACH

Hundreds have flocked to the Tawas City Park bathing beach during the past few days to get relief from the extreme heat. It is said that the crowds enjoying the new slide and fine bathing were the largest in years and consisted principally of people living within the county. A considerable number of people from Detroit, Flint and other cities have pitched their tents in the park to enjoy our beach and hospitality.

The new bath house has been completed and the water slide is in operation. M. H. Barnes has built a pier and boat house at the old Prescott dock. Several new motor boats have been placed in the bay during the past few weeks.

FREE MOVIE SHOWS FORD AUTO PLANT

A sound motion picture graphically portraying the story of the Ford Motor Company and its widespread activities will be exhibited free of charge in a special Ford exhibit to be held at Tawas City at the Jas. H. Leslie Ford sales room on July 7 and 8. The show will be open to the public at 8:00 p. m.

The picture, entitled "A Tour Through the Ford Factory," will show the gathering of raw materials, their arrival at the Rouge plant in Dearborn, Mich., and the numerous interesting stages through which they pass in the process of making Ford cars and trucks. It is, in short, an education in the extent and meaning of modern volume production.

While an unseen voice explains each scene, the audience is taken on a tour of the plant, through the great blast furnace building where ore is converted into iron; into the open hearth building where the iron becomes steel and is poured, a white hot liquid, into moulds; into the blooming mill where the steel ingots are made into bars; and into the rolling mill in which the long bars of white hot steel are reduced to definite sizes. Forty kinds of steel, each of a composition to serve a definite purpose, are used in the Ford car and truck.

The picture shows also the manufacture of glass in an endless unbroken strip, a process developed by Ford engineers; the machine shops in which parts for the car are manufactured; the pressed steel building with its gigantic presses; in which by-products are recovered and the coke ovens and other units to the extent of millions of dollars annually.

Throughout the picture one sees literally miles and miles of conveyors which take much of the manual labor off the backs of men. There are conveyors carrying newly arrived materials into the plant, others taking parts from one building to another, and, of course, the final assembly line, that famous conveyor on which the parts are put together to form the completed car.

BIDS IN ON SHORE ROAD IN IOSCO COUNTY

Lewis Garavaglia, of Detroit, was low bidder on 13.612 miles of grading and drainage structures on U. S. 23, Iosco county, Huron Shore Road, when bids were received at the district highway offices. His bid was $94,697.04.

Leon D. Cooley, Hastings, was second low, asking $98,995, and George Henning of Tawassaw, was high with a bid of $156,665.50.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERVICES

Sunday, 10:30 a. m., E. S. T.—Subject: "God." Ladies Literary Club Rooms, East Tawas.

WILL COMPLETE MEMORIAL SOON

Some fine day in the next few months three men will travel down the Thompson Trail in the Huron National Forest—they will come to a stop at the end of the trail, will shift their feet, and then take up their stand to look forever down on the waters of the AuSable river.

Those "three men" will be the nine foot figures of bronze that are to constitute the memorial to the pioneer lumbermen of Michigan.

Stationed there at the gigantic "Y" where the Thompson Trail breaks to form divergent roads, the monument is sure to arrest the attention of every passerby and direct the imagination to the glory that was Michigan lumbermen's.

That the project has arrested nation-wide attention the following article in an issue of the Christian Science Monitor just received by the East Michigan Tourist Association amply demonstrates.

"How would you like to open your morning's mail and find an invitation from people you had never heard of to design a $50,000 memorial?"

"This is the experience that came to Robert Aitken a little while ago. You can see what he did—the model for the Pioneer Lumberman Memorial monument to be erected in Huron National Park, Michigan.

"Everything in the monument is to be correct down to the tip of the heavy with which the stalwart riverman manipulated the floating logs; the 'staged,' or shortened trousers of the lumberjack and the slouch hat of the 'land-looker' who spied out the line of the district."

The sponsors of the memorial are descendants of the old pioneer lumbermen. Foremost among them is William B. Merschon, lumberman of Saginaw, R. G. Schreck, formerly supervisor of Huron National Forest and John W. Blodgett of Grand Rapids.

Clay models and plaster casts had to be made. When the final cast is ready, fireproof so that molten metal shall not harm it, and the metal is poured, the statue will be complete.

"The memorial will stand at the junction of three roads with its back to the AuSable river. The ground falls away steeply behind it, and one may look uninterruptedly past it to the distant eastern horizon."

"Mr. Aitken shows his riverman as a young Scandinavian Thor with a peavey for his thunderbolt; the land-looker is earnestly considering how to choose the ground so that the felled trees may be got to the water with the least trouble, and the lumberjack has no thought but how the next month of the forest should be made to fall."

"In the next few months the memorial will be ready to take up its vigil on the banks of the AuSable river. When it does finally go there, many passersby who heretofore may have thought of the lumberman as a mere landgrabber and despoiler of forests, will gain a somewhat different conception of him."

RUCKLE—FREEL

The marriage of Miss Elvalee Ruckle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ruckle of Whittemore, to Russell Freel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Freel of Tawas City, was solemnized at the Fremont Avenue Methodist parsonage, Bay City, Saturday afternoon, June 27, with Rev. J. W. LeVan officiating.

Both young people are well known in Tawas and Whittemore, and their friends wish them a long and happy wedded life. Mr. and Mrs. Freel will make their home at Whittemore.

"SEED" SCREENED AS BIG PICTURE WITH STELLAR CAST

The management of the State Theatre announces the booking of one of the big pictures of the year. This is "Seed," from the famous best selling novel by Charles G. Norris, which has been filmed as a super-production by the Universal Studios, where last year's biggest film, "All Quiet on the Western Front," was made. "Seed" will be shown at the State on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

A remarkable cast has been assembled for "Seed." It is headed by John Boles, who appears for the first time in a straight dramatic role, the first production also since the advent of the talking picture in which he does not sing. Opposite Boles is Genevieve Tobin, who recently came to the screen from the stage, and scored an immediate success in "A Lady Surrenders," following it up with equal success in other Universal productions. Still another feature player is Lois Wilson, long one of the world's favorite screen performers. Her work in "Seed," as the wife and mother, won her a long term contract with the Universal company.

The necessities of the story call for five child players, and their contribution to the picture is said to be one of the highlights of the production. In fact, the performance by little Dickie Moore, only six years old, has been called by critics the most extraordinary ever given by a child.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of Frank Lanre—Oh Lord, Thou hast but taken One year ago today. My kind and loving husband To rest in peace with Thee. His Loving Wife.

On July 4, These Presidents —

THOMAS JEFFERSON
Died July 4, 1826

JOHN ADAMS
Died July 4, 1826

JAMES MONROE
Died July 4, 1831

JAMES A. GARFIELD
Lay Stricken by an assassin, July 4, 1881

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
IT WAS the Fourth of July, 1826. In Quincy, Mass., ancestral home of the Adams family, John Adams, second President of the United States, lay dying. From Washington, D. C., John Quincy Adams, sixth President of the United States was hurrying—if that word can be applied to the laborious progress of a stage coach over the inadequate highways of that day—to his father's bedside. About noon the dying man opened his eyes at the sound of ringing bells and booming cannon which drifted into the open window. Mrs. Clark, his daughter-in-law, bent over him and in answer to the unspoken inquiry in his eyes reminded him that it was the Fourth of July, the fiftieth anniversary of American independence. "It is a great day," he said, "it is a good day."

About one o'clock in the afternoon he spoke again. "Thomas Jefferson survives," he said, but the last word was indistinctly and imperfectly uttered. After that he spoke no more. He could not know that at the very moment when he was saying "Thomas Jefferson survives," the sage of Monticello was breathing his last in far off Virginia.

The death of these two men on the day which they helped make famous also ended a most unusual friendship and a famous correspondence. This friendship and this correspondence is also one of the unique and most human bits of American history. In those stirring days of 1776 they, as members of the Continental Congress, were associated closely in one of the greatest adventures of history—that of producing a document which would either result in the establishment of a new nation or, in case military force failed to make good that document, in their becoming unsuccessful rebels and perhaps ending their careers on the gallows. The choice of drafting that document lay between them, and Adams, in his autobiography, gives the following reasons why Jefferson was chosen for that work.

"Mr. Jefferson had been now about a year a member of congress, but had attended his duty in the house a very small part of the time.

"It will naturally be inquired how it happened that he was appointed on a committee of such importance. There were more reasons than one. Mr. Jefferson had the reputation of a masterly pen; he had been chosen a delegate in Virginia in consequence of a very handsome public paper which he had written for the House of Burgesses, which had given him the character of a very fine writer. Another reason was, that Mr. Richard Henry Lee was not beloved by the most of his colleagues from Virginia, and Mr. Jefferson was sent up to rival and supplant him. This could be done only by the pen, for Mr. Jefferson could stand no competition with him, or anyone else, in elocution and public debate.

"The committee had several meetings, in which were proposed the articles of which the Declaration was to consist, and minutes made of them. The committee then appointed Mr. Jefferson and me to draw them up in form, and clothe them in proper dress. The subcommittee met, and considered the minutes, making such observations on them as then occurred, when Mr. Jefferson desired me to take them to my lodgings, and make the draft. This I declined, and gave several reasons for doing so:

"1. That he was a Virginian, and I a Massachusettsian. 2. That he was a southerner man, and I a northerner one. 3. That I had been so obnoxious for my early and constant zeal in promoting the measure, that every draft of mine would undergo a more severe scrutiny and criticism in congress than one of his composition. 4. And lastly, and that would be reason enough, if there were no other, I had a great opinion of the elegance of his pen, and none at all of my own. I therefore insisted that no hesitation should be made on his part. He accordingly took the minutes, and in a day or two produced to me his draft."

When the Revolution ended successfully, and the Republic was established, they became political enemies—Adams the Federalist and Jefferson the Republican. In the Presidential campaign to select a successor to Washington, Adams came out victorious only to be swept aside by the people in favor of Jefferson four years later. In 1812 through the entreaty of their mutual friend, Benjamin Rush of Philadelphia, a correspondence began between them in which their warm mutual esteem was evident.

In this correspondence they unburdened their hearts and minds to each other. And what an amazing correspondence it was! Some of Adams' letters to Jefferson run to 3,000 and even 4,000 words and to these Jefferson responded in kind. One of the most touching of them all is Jefferson's last letter to his colleague. Deploring the interruption but asking permission for his grandson, Thomas Randolph, to pay his respects to Adams on a visit to Boston he said:

"Like other young people he wishes to be able in the winter nights of old age to recount to those around him what he has heard and learnt of the heroic age preceding his birth, and which of the Argonauts individually he was in time to have seen. . . . It was the lot of our early years to witness nothing but the dull monotony of a colonial subservience; and of our riper years to breast the perils and labors of working out of it. Theirs are the halcyon calms succeeding the storm which our Argosy had so stoutly weathered. Gratify his ambition then, by receiving his best bow. . . ."

Five years later. It was the Fourth of July, 1831. Again the bells were pealing and the cannon booming. But in New York city they were suddenly stilled for James Monroe, fifth President of the United States, lay dead in his home on Prince street, far from the scenes of his youth in the hills of old Virginia, and far from his beloved home "Ash Lawn" near Charlottesville. It was from the University of Virginia there that he had marched away as a young lieutenant to win the approval of his fellow Virginian, George Washington, on revolutionary battle fields. And when at last he had retired from a long and distinguished public career as an ambassador to foreign lands, as a member of two President's cabinets and finally as President himself, he had come back to Ash Lawn to spend his declining years, only to be forced by debt to sell it and make his home at last in New York city.

Fifty years later. It was the Fourth of July, 1881. In a darkened room in the White House James A. Garfield, President of the United States, lay stricken by the bullet of an assassin. Two days previously on July 2 while he was standing in the Baltimore and Potomac railroad station, Charles J. Guiteau, a disappointed office seeker whose diseased brain was responsible for his terrible act, had shot down the President. For several weeks Garfield lingered between life and death until it was thought best to move him to Elberon, Long Branch, N. J., where it was felt that he might regain strength more rapidly. At first the change seemed to benefit the President but his strength had been sapped by the prolonged illness that the end came at last on September 19, 1881.

But July 4 has not always been a day of deaths for Presidents. On July 4, 1872 there was born in a farmhouse near Plymouth, Vermont, a boy destined for occupancy of the White House. Calvin Coolidge was his name.

Buried Wealth Is Again Sought

Arkansas Takes to Trails in Search of "Lost Louisiana Treasure."

Fayetteville, Ark.—The quest for the "Lost Louisiana Treasure" has begun again. The backhills of Franklin county, Ark., are being methodically searched for a "tracer" which may lead to that famous cache which has challenged venturesome spirits in the Southwest for more than a century. Hillmen in faded blue overalls are again taking up the old romantic quest with pick and shovel. And as this search for old treasure is renewed, new legends of buried wealth are in the process of being born. Traditionally skeptical, thousands of the backwoods people have had their distrust bolstered by the recent failure of 147 Arkansas banks. Thousands of back country depositors have been left penniless. As one obvious result a new regime of money-burying is beginning, and it will probably continue for years to come. So an entirely new crop of countryside treasure lore is due to come into being.

The Spanish Legend.

Hill-country treasure tales usually fall into one of three definite categories: stories of Spanish treasure and piracies; stories of backhill highwaymen and desperadoes, and tales of misers or thrifty countrymen who did not "confidence," banks.

Spanish gold is a theme much in men's minds today, and the newly organized attempt to recover the treasures of the lost Louisiana mine illustrates the potency of this type of treasure legend. The legend of the lost Louisiana is prevalent in many parts of the South and Southwest; and, while its details vary considerably with persons and places and with the patience of the listener, the gist of the yarn is pretty much the same.

It all started back when the Spaniards pillaged Old Mexico. The story says that a fleet of Spanish galleons, all heavily laden with gold and silver acquired from the fabulously rich mines of Mexico, was set upon by a squadron of privateers. The Spanish vessels, hard pressed, turned and anchored in a hidden arm of the Mississippi some miles above New Orleans.

Indian Miners Enslaved.

There the conquistadores heard rumors of more gold—of Indians who worked mines somewhere among the hills far to the north. So the Spaniards abandoned their ships, loaded the treasure upon rafts and plied upriver in quest of more. Treasure hunters by profession and fascinated by word of additional treasure, the Spaniards were resolved to find the Indian mines. This they did, according to the story, somewhere among the hills which lie beyond the confluence of the Arkansas river and Big Mulberry. Indians were digging gold from quartz ledges which overlooked the mountain river. So the newcomers captured the mines, enslaved the Indians and forced them to labor in their own mines.

But the venture proved unprofitable. Scant gold was forthcoming from the new holdings. Supplies ran low and neighboring Indians were hostile. News of the Louisiana purchase came and of a United States protectorate; American troops were being stationed at various of the river ports. So, according to the story, the Spaniards decided to retire for a time. They buried their treasure in a mine shaft and sealed it well. Then they murdered the enslaved Indians, marked the treasure site, unmoored their rafts and set out downstream again, hoping to reach Mexico, and also to return later and reclaim the wealth of the lost Louisiana. But they never came back. The stories go that their band was beset by attacking Indians and that the survivors suffered a still more terrible death from swamp fevers.

Explorer Finds Field of Ice in British Columbia

Montreal.—Discovery of an immense and accessible ice field of about 350 square miles in the Bridge river district of British Columbia is reported by Maj. F. V. Longstaff, of Victoria, B. C., who, with two Swiss guides, explored the region. He believes it will become an important scenic attraction. In his opinion it surpasses the famed Columbia ice field.

It provides the source of several large rivers, among them the Squamish, Bridge, Whitewater, Lilloet, To-bamand and Southgate. On or near the ice field the explorers noticed a dozen mountain peaks about 10,000 feet high.

The distance from the nearest point of the motor road in the Bridge river valley to the gravel flat of the main glacier is 45 miles by the river trail, the explorer said.

Old Bay Mare at 32 Is Able to Earn Oats

Wautoma, Wis.—R. H. Gustin has a bay mare that is thirty-two years old, yet is still doing its full share of farm work whenever three horses are needed. Mr. Gustin has had the horse since it was five years old and intends to keep it as long as it lives.

Wins $50,000 Verdict for Injury to His Toe

Washington.—Because he can no longer pirouette seven times Alberto Kellman Ferreyros, known to his public as De Lima, has been awarded $50,000 damages in a suit against the Fox Theaters corporation.

A jury journeyed to the Fox studio here and watched a film of Ferreyros dancing in a Greenwich Village cafe ten months after his injury in an elevator at a Fox theater. The dancer admitted authenticity of the film, but said he could no longer dance as well as before the second toe on his left foot became crippled, and the jury believed him.

Incubator Hatches Egg; It's an American Eagle

Burbank, Calif.—An egg, speckled and about the size of a goose egg, was found by workmen employed on construction of a road in Little Tujunga canyon near here. Amid much speculation as to the kind of egg it was, the men took their find to the Best O'Care hatchery. After a month of incubation a fluffy white eaglet, national symbol of American liberty, picked its way from the shell.

Priests Exhort Fish to Protect Mankind

Tokio.—Recently a boat with Shinto priests put out to sea near Shimonooseki and performed a service for the benefit of the fugu, or globe fish. This fish, whose meat is esteemed a succulent morsel by the Japanese, is at the same time highly poisonous unless carefully prepared. The priests exhorted the fish to refrain from hurting mankind.

TALES... of the TRIBES

By EDITHA L. WATSON

The Kiowa

At the extreme head of the Missouri river, in Montana, lived a tribe known as the Kiowa. This was a long time ago, when white men were a stranger tribe.

Matters did not go well with them. There were wars with their Indian neighbors, and perhaps internal dissension, and finally they started to move to the southeast.

This brought them in contact with the Crow, and here, instead of doing what we would expect, and declaring war upon each other, the tribes formed an alliance. The Black Hills, where they then were, was a wonderful region for Indians, and they no doubt hoped to find a permanent home here; but the Sioux were moving westward into the same country, and the Kiowa were no match for their trained warriors. So they moved still farther south, keeping to the edge of the mountain country, and the Sioux drove the Cheyennes and the Arapahoes behind them, harassing the Kiowa as they went.

The Arkansas river was finally reached, but this was the land of the Comanche, who had moved southward from Wyoming some time before, and who claimed the territory south of the Arkansas as theirs.

It would seem as if there were no room for the Kiowa anywhere. Wherever they went, some one was there to drive them out. But now they had become rather desperate; they had wandered far enough, and it was imperative (if they expected to remain a tribe) that they settle. At first, the rival tribes fought for the right to stay. Neither wanted to give up the pleasant valleys where herds of buffalo roamed and life was easy. Finally they decided that there was room for both, and the Comanche and the Kiowa became allies.

This country was greatly to the liking of the Kiowa, and these new friends had the same hearts as theirs. To the southward were the frontier settlements of Mexico and Texas. The Texans had taken the best hunting grounds of the Comanche, and this was a bitter remembrance to that tribe. The white people were steadily moving closer, and the Kiowa resented that. Now that the two tribes were united, they felt that they could more effectively discourage unsought neighbors. At least, they would try.

The Kiowa became noted as the most bloodthirsty of the prairie tribes. They set a record for killing the whites that could not be equalled in proportion. Their war parties traveled as far south as Durango, Mexico, spreading terror as they went, and throughout the land they were dreaded.

This reputation lasted, in some measure, long after their treaty with the government in 1837. The raids were not stopped, though they were considerably curtailed. The embers of the fire were smouldering and every so often they would burst again into flame. In 1862 the government agent assembled the Indians and warned them that punishment would follow further repetition of their mischief. But they had heard this before. Dohasan (the second Kiowa chief of that name) answered him defiantly as follows:

"When my young men, to keep their women and children from starving, take from the white man passing through our country, killing and driving away our buffalo, a cup of sugar or coffee, the white chief is angry, and threatens to send his soldiers. I have looked for them a long time, but they have not come."

Trouble still brewed in the camp circle of the Kiowa, but the white men were rapidly growing in numbers and in strength. Disease, too, proved an enemy hard to subdue. At last, in 1875, they gave up the unequal battle. There was no use in riding to certain defeat.

Satanta, one of their leaders, made a speech before the white conquerors. He said, "I love to roam the prairies. There I feel free and happy; but when we settle down we grow pale and die. A long time ago this land belonged to our fathers; but when I go up to the river I see the camps of soldiers on its banks. The soldiers cut down my timber; they kill my buffalo, and when I see that my heart feels like bursting, I feel sorry. I have spoken."

To get rid of wolves, the Indians hid a sharp blade in frozen fat. On licking this, when a wolf cut its tongue, the odor of blood caused the others to fight, and thus many were destroyed.

NEW ORLEANS MONEY GAVE SOUTH PET NAME OF DIXIE

Southerner Gives Bankers' Convention History of Derivation of Popular Nickname.

Pittsburgh.—When the band strikes up "Dixie" and the crowd joins in singing the song of the South, something quite different from the thought of money serves as the stimulus for its enthusiasm. Yet money was responsible for this nickname of the South, Fred W. Thompson of the First and Merchants' National bank in Richmond, Va., told the young money experts at the American Institute of Banking convention here.

"Money is the essential commodity handled by a bank and I'm going to tell you a little story about money. Money gave the South its pet name of 'Dixie.' The principal bills issued by a bank in New Orleans before the war between the states were in $10 denominations. They were engraved in English on one side and in French on the other. On the French side, the word 'Dix' was very prominent; as you know, it means 'ten.'

"The Americans throughout the Mississippi valley who did not know the French pronunciation, called the bills 'dixies,' and Louisiana came to be known as 'the land of the dixies' or 'dixie land.' This inspired Dan Emmett, who in 1859 composed the original 'Dixie Land' for a minstrel show, then performing in New York. He embodied in it the expression he had so often heard: 'I wish I were in Dixie.' This song was later rewritten by Gen. Albert Pike, who gave it the battle thrill that makes 'Dixie' immortal and stamps the name 'Dixie' upon the South."

New Orleans also seems to have been responsible for the expression "two bits," according to Mr. Thompson. "For its early currency," he said,

"New Orleans and some other sections of the country depended upon imported Mexican dollars. To meet the need for fractional change, these dollars were cut into bits. And so, today we refer to a quarter of a dollar as 'two bits.'"

U. S. Leads World as Largest Platinum User

New York.—The United States continues to be the largest consumer of platinum of any country in the world. During the last year more than $10,000,000 worth of platinum was imported, of which 60 per cent was used by jewelers, and the rest in a great variety of industries.

SEASONABLE GOOD THINGS

One of the laws of a well planned meal is to see that several foods of the same nature do not appear in the same menu. When serving a fruit cocktail the entire menu should be considered, as other fruits should not appear in the same meal.

Ceylon Tomato Salad.—Peel three solid tomatoes, cut them into halves and press out the seeds. Chop the tomatoes and put into a bowl, add a tablespoonful of lemon juice, a teaspoonful of salt, a tablespoonful of onion juice and the same of green pepper, with half a teaspoonful of paprika. Mix and turn into the dish in which it is to be served. Serve with four tablespoonfuls of coconut cream.

Coconut Cream.—Prepare coconut cream by grating a good-sized nut and pouring boiling water over it. Wash and stir until all the flavor has been washed from the fiber, then press into a sieve and drain, turn into a cheese cloth to strain. Let the milk thus obtained stand over night. The cream will form on the surface. Remove this and use for the above dish. It is well to remember that a nut after draining out the milk, if placed in the oven or on a hot plate to become very hot, will come out of the shell with little difficulty.

Italian Cheese.—Take one pound of veal, one and one-half pound of calf's liver, one-half pound of ham, one small onion, one-half teaspoonful of sage, two teaspoonfuls of chopped parsley, one-fourth of a box of gelatin, two teaspoonfuls of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of pepper and a dash of cayenne. Cover the liver with boiling water and let stand five minutes, then drain and dry. Chop the liver and the other meats, all raw, add the seasonings together with one grated onion. Mix well and grease a mold, press the meat into it, packing well, cover and steam three hours. Remove the cover, pour off the broth, adding the gelatin to the broth, return to the mold and let stand in cold water for an hour or more.

How English Merchant of 1480 Sought Custom

One of the earliest posters ever printed in England is to be seen in the Bodleian library, and concerns a Sarum service book, printed in 1480 by Caxton. It reads as follows: "If it pleases any man spiritual or temporal to buy our pyes of two or three commemorative of Salisburi Use, emprinted after the form of this presyt letre, whiche ben wel and truly correct, late hym come to Westmonester into the almonestrye at the reed pole, and he shall have them good and chepe." The manner of presentation is somewhat unenterprising. The goods advertised belonged to the Middle ages, which were fast dying. But a new force had been let loose, which in the course of the next century was to revolutionize not only the art of advertising, but the whole of European culture.

Historic Eastern Spot

Shimoda, on the eastern coast of the Izu peninsula, came into the American spotlight in the middle of the last century, when a treaty was ratified there which first opened Japan to foreign trade.

In 1853 Capt. Matthew Galbraith Perry, United States navy, sailed up the bay of Sagami to Shimoda, went ashore with 900 men and delivered letters from President Fillmore to a representative of the Japanese emperor. In the spring of 1855 the first treaty between America and Japan, providing, among other things, for the opening of Shimoda to American trading vessels, was proclaimed.

America's first diplomatic representative to Japan resided at Shimoda. It was a tidal wave and earthquake that caused the diplomatic offices to be removed from Shimoda to Yokohama in 1859.

Cinderella in History

Long before the Christian era a version of Cinderella was known to the Egyptians. The story was also familiar to the Greeks. It is found in German folktales of the sixteenth century. The Grimm brothers popularized the story of Cinderella. The English versions, however, are derived from the narrative of Charles Perrault.

SHOULDER CAPE OR HIPLength JACKET THE STYLE FOR SUMMER

ABOUT the happiest of happy "hap-penstances" which has happened for many a day, is the cunning little velvet wrap, either shoulder-cape or hiplength jacket, which we simply must wear over our lingerie frocks this summer if we would be "in style."

Just which to choose, a capelet or a little jacket, aye, that is the question. The really logical solution to the problem is to indulge in both. The wee capes are altogether too new and novel and flattering to lightly "pass up." Anyway where is the wisdom in denying oneself the joy and satisfaction of possessing so comely a summer wrap, seeing that it takes so little a length of velvet to fashion it, and so

For bathing and beach suits there is easy to make—simply a matter of having a good pattern and sewing a few seams.

By these cunning cape fantasies ready made if you will, for all the best shops and departments are showing them in the loveliest colors imaginable, which is the fascinating thing about them—the striking note of color which they lend to the frock of white organdie or flowered chiffon or eye-letted batiste.

The little cape in the picture is a very pretty model. Its narrow circular ruffle achieves a graceful and animated silhouette.

Likewise the jacket illustrated is charmingly fashioned. It is made to nothing more practical than jersey, and this summer it has a special significance because of the style prestige it enjoys. The costumes pictured are of jersey. The ensemble to the left makes appeal in that it includes a coat to slip on and off at will. The color combination is effective—old gold jersey with skipper blue. The long scarf with its contrasting lining lends no end of charm to this stunning outfit.

Clever as can be is the two-piece costume to the right, for its little pleated skirt is detachable. Frequent these wrap-around skirts are designed so that they can be worn as capes when desired. The color scheme look youthful with its wide cape collar which ties in the front with long scarf ends. The softly flared three-quarter sleeves are up-to-the-moment when it comes to smart styling.

Transparent velvet in black is used for this wrap and in this instance it is posed over a white satin frock thus accenting the vogue which still persists for black-and-white.

If you like this little jacket in black you should see it copied in a beguiling color—charming beyond words. A favorite is bright green, either grass green or parakeet, the latter a very new hue on the color card.

For Beach and Bathing.

Jersey is playing an outstanding role in the realm of sports fash-for the suit pictured is ciel blue with white for the modish square revers which trim the snug-fitting bodice.

In styling the now-so-voguish jersey swimming suit, a special feature is made of contrast color effects. Vivid color touches on white are particularly stressed. A white jersey piped with red with red pearl buttons and a nautical design embroidered in red is cited as being ultra chic.

Other contrasts for the smart 1931 bathing suit which is made of jersey accent striking effects such as dark green piped with light green, white combined half-and-half with skipper blue and among the newest is the swim suit with a light top.

Changing Color of Gold
The color of gold can be changed by alloying it with various other metals. The old method was to alloy it with about five times as much silver, but as such articles readily tarnished, a new process was introduced which does away with the use of silver. Certain base metals are added to give the white appearance, the amount of gold and of alloy being the same as in the case of ordinary gold of various carats.

Peters, of Saginaw, Michigan, dated March 12th, 1928, and recorded January 18th, 1929, in the Register of Deeds office for Isosco County, in Liber 25 of mortgages at page 61, upon which there is claimed to be due now for principal and interest the sum of One Hundred Fifteen Dollars, and no proceedings at law having been taken to recover said sum or any part thereof:

Said Mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises, described as the NE¼ of SE¼, Section 18, Town 22 North, of Range 7 East, Isosco County, Michigan, on the 1st day of August, 1931, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at the front door of the Court House in Tawas City, in said county, to satisfy the amount due at that time for principal, interest, taxes, attorney fee and cost.

Dated May 7th, 1931. William V. Peters, Mortgagee. Saginaw, Mich. N. C. Hartingh, Attorney, Business Address: Tawas City, Michigan. 12-19

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Charles Wojahn and Minnie Wojahn, his wife, of Tawas City, Mich., to Gustav Wojahn and Louise Wojahn, his wife, of the same place, dated the 8th day of October, A. D. 1921, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the county of Isosco and State of Michigan, on the 8th day of October, A. D. 1921, in Liber 22 of Mortgages, on page 359, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice, for principal and interest, the sum of Four Hundred Nineteen and 35/100 Dollars, and an attorney's fee as provided for by law, as provided for in said mortgage, and no suit or proceedings at law having been instituted to recover the moneys secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof:

Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and the statute in such case made and provided, on Saturday, the 25th day of July, A. D. 1931, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, the undersigned will, at the Court House in the city of Tawas City, that being the place where the Circuit Court for the County of Isosco is held, sell at Public Auction, to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount so as aforesaid due on said mortgage, with six per cent. interest, and all legal costs, together with said attorney's fee, to-wit: The Northwest quarter of the Southwest quarter of Section Seventeen (17), Township Twenty-two (22) North of Range Seven (7) East, containing forty acres of land, more or less.

Gustav Wojahn and Louise Wojahn, Mortgagees. John A. Stewart, Attorney for Mortgagees, Business Address: Tawas City, Michigan. 13-18

Woods Colored by Hand

There is no known means of fixing the color of any soft woods when they are exposed to light and weather. All woods fade in a more or less degree (ebony, satinwood, Cuba or Spanish mahogany, the least) under exposure. The richness and color of the woods chiefly used now in furniture and paneling is largely produced by the art of the French polisher, but fine quality hard woods will retain their color (indoors only) for centuries.

Auction Sale

The undersigned will sell at Public Auction to the highest bidder at the stock yards, Whittemore, on

Cozy Little Cottage That Has an Appeal That Is Hard to Resist

By W. A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to practical home building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as editor, author and manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 407 South Dearborn street, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

Who could resist the appeal of such a cozy little cottage as this? It simply charms you right from the start and makes you feel as though you were looking into a picture book instead of at a real life-size house, too, for in spite of its "picture-book" appearance it contains a big living room, we see. The high, snub-nosed gables create a snug appearance without any suggestion of flatness. The walls covered with shingles laid wide to weather are most appropriate, and the chimney worked into the entrance detail gives that individuality which is the secret of charm of the place.

It is, perhaps, this entrance detail and chimney that first catch the eyes. The chimney itself has a satisfying solidity without appearing in the least too heavy for so small a house. It suggests a broad fireplace where, in winter and on chilly autumn evenings, the family will gather about a cheery, crackling fire. Within, we find this fireplace as a feature of the big living room which extends across the entire front of the house.

To the rear of the living room are the dining room and kitchen. The latter is provided with a rear entry and a commodious pantry. Basement stairs are placed in a passage between kitchen and dining room, while from the dining room itself, a stairway ascends to the floor above.

On this upper floor we find two large sleeping rooms, each measuring 14 by 11 feet and each provided with a large closet, lighted by an outside window. On this floor, too, is a bathroom of the most modern type, easily accessible from bedrooms.

26 feet long, by 13 feet, 3 inches wide, and four other rooms of proportionate size.

Though this little house measures but 26 feet wide and 28 feet deep, its proportions are so good that it carries an air of real dignity and beauty in contrast with the box-like appearance of so many of the very small houses

Woman Handy With Brush Can Touch Up the Home

There's magic in the paint pot for any woman who wishes to beautify her home. We may once have been a little shy about bringing color into our rooms, but the modern woman welcomes gayety, whether it's in drapery fabrics, bright floors and walls or in furniture. Painting furniture is one of the easiest ways of adding lively charm to some room at small cost, and it's also a source of fun for the homemaker.

Suppose, for instance, that a bedroom has several unrelated pieces of rather shabby furniture. Painting them green or blue or putty color with deft little touches of a contrasting tone on drawer knobs and in occasional bands of trimming will simply transform the room.

Quaint old chairs, either straight styles or those suggesting the Boston rocker type, will respond marvelously to a new coat of paint.

They may be painted black, brown or ivory and decorated in colors, or they may be refinished any gay shade which suits the room scheme. The flower, fruit and basket designs so often used on the old painted early American chairs may be applied by the amateur either with transfers, stenciling or by free hand. She might follow the plan used in many antique shops of sketching the design in white chalk and then filling it in with colors. Whether the furniture is painted a plain color or decorated, it should be waxed after the paint is thoroughly dry so that the coloring will look soft and mellow and not too new.

The new furniture made specially for painting, sold with a bare wood finish, may be cleverly decorated at home. Cupboards and bookcases are unusually charming if they are lined in a contrasting color. A robin's egg blue cupboard, for example, might be lined in lacquer red; and the interior of a jade green bookcase could be painted silver. A band in a contrasting color may be suitably painted around the edges of a drop-leaf table.

Before painting sandpaper the furniture to make it perfectly smooth. Several flat undercoats of paint are desirable before the final coat is applied. Colors may be easily mixed to secure unusual shades. A final waxing is important, as it adds a soft glow to the finish and protects the paint surface from injury.

Built-In Space for Auto Holds Popularity

It is becoming more and more the custom to conceive of the home as a correlated assemblage of all the different factors of house and grounds, rather than to plan individual features without reference to the others.

During the last ten years the motor car has made it necessary to include the garage in the architectural scheme or plan, and the garage is being increasingly incorporated as an integral feature of the house.

Considerations of heating and lighting, as well as economy in construction, tend to favor the in-built garage. Placing a garage in the basement greatly simplifies the installation of heating, water and electric lines, all of which are necessary to proper care of the car. Then, too, the in-built garage permits of putting the family car or cars away without leaving shelter to reach the house.

It has been frequently found that hot water or steam heating pipes, even when heavily insulated, waste a great deal of heat when run to a detached garage from the main house system. A separate heating unit for the garage is usually made rather expensive by the necessity for protection from inflammable fumes.

The increasing tendency toward full utilization of basement space, which is known to cost as much as cubic foot as the rest of the house, recommends the installation of the modern two-car garage in the basement, heretofore usually devoted to the storage of useless cast-offs which were a constant fire menace and breeding place for disease germs.

Steel Window Cases Are the Most Satisfactory

With the variety of standard case sizes, which may be used singly or in attractive groupings, the architect has an almost unlimited opportunity for artistic window arrangement. And wherever the better steel windows are used they enhance the beauty of the home, both inside and out.

They open easily at a finger's touch—never warp, stick or rattle; they admit pleasant weather in abundance, yet close tight against the storms. They can be washed easily from the inside. Usually the cost—in standard sizes—is only about 2 per cent of the house cost.

Radio Used to Guide Airplanes

Houston, Texas.—In the presence of 5,000 spectators, a pilotless monoplane was flown successfully by radio control from another plane circling overhead at the Municipal airport here.

This was said to be among the first public demonstrations ever made of a principle of operating motor vehicles by radio discovered seven years ago by Robert E. Autrey, formerly of Los Angeles, who holds three government patents on the invention.

Autrey said he had many times before demonstrated the operation of a driverless automobile by radio control, but his tests heretofore with planes had been made in private.

The experiment included driving a car by radio control, with the master key located in succession in a truck on the field and then in a flying airplane. The engine of the automobile was started by radio control, the horns blown, and the vehicle propelled forward as carefully as if the wheels had been manipulated by human hands. The car was empty during the exhibition, except for a collection of batteries in the rear seat and a maze of electric wires.

The plane which was flown by radio control, a five-place Stinson Detroit, had double controls. Whitey Owen, a transport pilot, went aloft with the ship to satisfy a government standard requiring a licensed pilot when doing any experimental flying over an incorporated city. Shortly after taking off he plugged in a switch which put the plane in control of Autrey, who

it. Autrey explained that an aviator was guided largely by a sense of touch in operating a plane, and that Autrey, using the ship by radio control, had his eyes to guide him in determining whether he was banking too sharply.

Autrey said the principle of radio control which he has perfected holds unlimited possibilities in time of war. He declared that one man could easily control by radio a dozen planes in flight.

ranging from 1,000 to 3,000 feet. When the two planes landed Owen said that one time he had thrown the switch, disconnecting the radio current, and took control of the plane himself when Autrey by accident "overcontrolled" it. Autrey explained that an aviator was guided largely by a sense of touch in operating a plane, and that Autrey, using the ship by radio control, had his eyes to guide him in determining whether he was banking too sharply.

NEW GOLFING KING

A good close look at Tommy Armour, the veteran Detroit (Mich.) golf professional, who won the British open golf championship over the Carnoustie course, with a total of 296 strokes for the four rounds of 18 holes each. A beautiful 71 for the final round won the title for Tommy. He succeeds Bobby Jones as the champion.

"Made to Order" Predicted

St. Louis.—Made to order weather in which the average householder will be able to press a button on winter days and produce a climate of tropic warmth, or press another button and obtain bracing mountain air, was predicted by Willis H. Carrier, president of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers, in a talk to the Electrical Board of Trade of St. Louis recently.

Air conditioning, largely perfected to industrial uses, and now applied to theaters, department stores, and other places where people congregate, offers the possibility of any kind of controlled atmospheric condition to the home, Carrier said.

Research work at Harvard, coordinated with experiments of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers at the bureau of mines, indicates that more persons receive the maximum comfort in a 66 degree winter atmosphere and in a 71 degree summer atmosphere, the speaker told the group.

"The average human being at rest has a heat output of about 400 body temperature units per hour, the approximate equivalent of a 120 watt electric light," he said. "This remains remarkably constant throughout normal ranges of temperature, moisture variation, and changes of clothing."

"Research has shown that a temperature of 65 degrees Fahrenheit breaker said: "Many of us suspect there is a quality of air neither determined by its oxygen content nor by any other chemical characteristic which vitally affects the well being of man."

Inaugurates New Marker System

This odd-looking tower surmounting a service station near the municipal airport at Cleveland, Ohio, is the first of a proposed nation-wide system of markers for air pilots and motorists. Symbols on the tower sides indicate the position on a special map. Letters signify degrees of latitude and longitude, and figures, minutes of latitude and longitude. Ludo L. Zimmer, a map-maker, is the inventor of the tower system and grid method of marking maps.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

By WALTER TRUMBULL

When Burns Mantle, dramatic critic, was a reporter, his apartment was entered and stripped by thieves. Among others, he told an office boy, who lived in a tough East side district, of his loss. This was the following day.

"There is a chance," said the boy, "that I can get some of that stuff back for you. I can't get the money, but I might get some of the other things." Mr. Mantle said he realized the money was gone, but that he would very much like to recover a mesh bag, which Mrs. Mantle valued greatly.

The boy said he felt fairly sure he could recover the bag, if the fellow who took it had not given it to his girl, but when he came to make his report he looked a bit disconsolate.

"Mr. Mantle," he said, "I sure am awful sorry, but my friends weren't in your apartment. They weren't out last night, at all."

Forty-seventh street, from just west of Sixth avenue to Fifth, I find most interesting. Aside from the book shops, there are a number of fascinating stores there. One is a Japanese establishment, with animals carved from crystal and jade, and tea and smoking sets. Another is a pipe shop. Here you will see calabashes of all descriptions, and briars of unusual shape and fine grain, and real ivory cigarette holders. I own only two pipes that I ever smoke, but I am always buying them.

In November, 1920, Dr. Lawrence M. Gould of Michigan was out about 400 miles on his famous antarctic sledge trip, accompanied by three Harvard

One hundred and fifty years ago George Rogers Clark with a little band of men set out to conquer the Northwest for the newly established nation. The hardships of his expedition have hardly been realized, the importance of his work has met with but meager appreciation.

"They marched through freezing water-soaked land," the historian tells us. "Crossed swamps and quicksands, and forded rivers that had overflowed their banks, yet singing or praying according to mood, the little band pressed on. The weaker ones were carried in canoes. All followed without question the daring leader."

His efforts resulted in the opening up of the great Northwest, the settling of Illinois and Kentucky and the expansion of America westward. For what he had done Virginia presented him with a sword, a gift quite useless to him at that time. Later when he was old and living in extreme poverty he petitioned for a small grant of land from the territory which he had conquered, but this request was denied, and instead he was presented with another sword.

When the representative of the government came with much ceremony and many flattering words to present him with the second sword the old man acknowledged the useless gift by saying: "Young man, when Virginia needed a sword, I gave her one. Now I need bread."

USELESS GIFTS

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

We are very much addicted at our house to the giving of gifts—Christmas, birthdays, anniversaries all come in for consideration. Nancy has a birthday within three weeks. What shall I give her—something pretty, something ornamental, something purely personal or something useful? I generally try to choose the latter—not that I am as practical as the woman who gave her husband the window curtains, but I do try to choose something that is useful and something that I think I should very much like myself if I were in her place. No one appreciates the useless gift.

THE STORY

At a public dance Martin Forbes, a newspaper man, cuts in on Rhoda White's dance with Max Lewis, whom Martin instinctively dislikes. He overhears a conversation between Lewis and a woman, which he realizes concerns Rhoda. He recalls a "blind ad" inquiring the whereabouts of "Rhoda McFarland" and senses a newspaper story. He believes that is Rhoda's real name. She refuses to deny or admit it. However, it recalls her childhood in California. Her mother, dead, she had been happy until misfortune befell her father, Professor McFarland. Associated with the blow is her uncle, William Royce. They move to Chicago, where her father is engaged in mysterious work. Rhoda takes up stenography. Her father dies suddenly, vainly trying to give her a message about "papers" in a trunk. Rhoda goes to live with a fellow-worker, "Babe" Jennings. Martin learns that "C. J." of the "blind ad" is Charles J. Forster, uncle of Lewis. Rhoda admits her name is McFarland. A mysterious "Claire Cleveland" asks Rhoda for a certain paper belonging to her which, she claims, was in McFarland's possession. Rhoda's trunk is stolen and she suspects Claire. She trails Claire to the Worcester hotel, where Forster lives. Martin sees Lewis check the trunk at a depot. Babe Jennings gets the trunk check and flees.

His little gimlet eyes had been boring right into her all the while she talked. Now, at her first pause, he barked out, "Who was this woman?" "She told me," Rhoda answered, "that her name was Claire Cleveland." A sudden suffusion of blood in his face turned it purple. He beat feebly but furiously upon his desk with a loosely clenched hand. "So you've joined up with that blackmailing woman, have you?" he said. "I haven't joined up with her at all," Rhoda retorted. "I've just been telling you I think she stole my trunk. She talked to me about you quite a lot at lunch—after she'd come back from the telephone, that is. She said she'd seen your advertisement for me in the newspaper."

He pounced upon her here with a question. "My advertisement? How did she know it was mine? It wasn't signed. Come to that, how did you know yourself?"

"A friend of mine on the paper found out for me," Rhoda said. "But I was wrong in saying that Claire knew. She said she thought it probably was you."

"Call her Claire, do you," he commented, "when you never saw her before today?"

This slip had rattled Rhoda. She'd been aware of it as it left her tongue. "She asked me to call her that," she explained, "and I did, though I hated to because I hated her. And the real reason I came to see you was because she urged me so strongly not to. I thought she must have some reason of her own for not wanting me to come. She said that you'd been the cause of all her trouble. She said you were a terrible person that liked to get young girls."

He broke in with an ugly laugh. "And on the strength of that you thought you'd come."

Rhoda felt her face burning and didn't know whether her voice would obey her or not, but she answered the smear as if it had been a real question. "I thought she was lying. I didn't think you were like that. I'd seen you this morning when you took us to work in your car."

"Come to That, How Did You Know Yourself?"

He dismissed that explanation with a mere snort of contempt. "Well, go on," he continued. "What else did she tell you?"

"She told me that you'd been in business, in a way, with my father, and that you'd played some sort of trick on him. She said it was her personal opinion that you were responsible for my father's trouble out in California."

"California!" He fairly yelped the word at her. "Now I know you're lying. This Cleveland woman worked in my office. For a while she was my private secretary. Then I found out what sort she was and fired her. She may have known that McFarland was working for me but I don't believe it. I don't believe she ever saw him in her life. Anyway, she didn't know he came from California. She didn't know that until you told her about it while you were working up this plan between you to blackmail me. Come across now! Tell me the whole story, and I'll let you go. But if I catch you in any more lies you'll spend the night in jail.—And to begin with," he wound up after a long stare into her face, "who are you, anyway?"

Bewildered now by the suddenness of his attack she could only echo in amazement, "Who am I?"

"Yes. Thought you'd cooked up something pretty good, did you, when you got together and swapped stories with a discharged employee of mine, faked up the red hair, and came around here pretending to be Rhoda McFarland."

"I am Rhoda McFarland," she told him furiously. "I don't know who you think I am. I don't know what you're talking about."

"I don't mind telling you what I'm talking about. I'm talking about what happened to Professor McFarland six years ago, when he got on a train here in Chicago to go back to the coast. He'd been sent to read a paper before the Oil Chemists' Institute, and he found a young girl on the train across the aisle from him crying because she'd had her pocketbook stolen after she'd got on the train."

"He was sorry for her and paid her fare, pullman and all, so they wouldn't put her off the train. According to his story that was all he did. And she promised him her friends would pay him back the money as soon as she got to the coast. But what she did was to make a complaint before the district attorney out there that he'd taken advantage of her."

"He claimed it was a frame-up, and when it went to trial the jury acquitted him, although he couldn't show any reason why anyone should want to frame him that way and no one else could, either. And the scandal of the trial cost him his job at the university."

"So he came back here and told me his story, and I believed him and gave him a job. He felt disgraced about it. He was like a man hiding out from the police; didn't want anybody to know who he was or what he was doing. Well, I could see how he felt so I never told a soul anything about it. I even paid him his wages in cash every week."

"Claire Cleveland couldn't have found out anything about him, even if she'd tried to. He never came near my office nor where I lived. He worked at a place I fixed up for him, and I used to go around there once a week to see how he was getting on and to pay him his money. I'm dead sure he never told his daughter anything about that California mess. She was nothing but a kid. He'd have kept it from her if he'd been telling everybody else in sight. And if you want to know who I think you really are, I don't mind telling you that either. I believe you're the one person alive today who really knows whether Walter McFarland was telling the truth or not."

Until he'd finished she hadn't seen what he was driving at. And when she did she could do nothing but stare at him, confounded by the mere consciousness of his mistake. To complete her discomfiture she found she was beginning to cry.

"You can cry, can you? Well, it worked with him but it won't with me. So you may as well . . ."

He broke off as well and what had interrupted him both made her blink away her tears and checked their coming. A sort of little trap-door in the front of Napoleon had silently fallen forward and revealed, as he reached toward it, a telephone instrument inside.

Forster seemed rather startled by the message he was getting. "What's that?" he barked. "Who does he say he is? All right," after listening for a minute, "I'll see him, but not in here. Have him shown up to the library. I'll see him there. And find DeGraw and tell him I want him."

He put the telephone back and clicked the little trap-door shut upon it. Then he pressed an electric button on his desk.

"I'm going to leave you here for a while," he said to Rhoda, "to think things over, and you'd better think straight, if you can. I'm going to get this Cleveland woman. I've got her now, as far as that goes. But I've got nothing personal against you. And if you can make up your mind, by the time I come back, to come through clean and tell me the whole conspiracy, I'll let you go."

His ring had been answered while he was speaking, not by Conley, but by a sort of overgrown page in livery. He helped the old man to his feet and conducted him to the door Rhoda had come in by.

Rhoda sank back in her chair. What possessed her mind was the story Forster had been telling her about the girl he'd preposterously taken her to be. Did he really believe that? Was there a scrap of genuine doubt in his mind that she was Walter McFarland's daughter? Wasn't the whole thing a bluff to put her on the defensive and frighten her into doing, eventually, whatever it was that he wanted her to do? It would have been a rather satisfactory explanation if she could wholeheartedly have adopted it, if for no other reason than that it brought him out in a clearer, less ambiguous light.

But she found she couldn't adopt it. He wasn't a much better actor than she was. His manner while he had been trying to convince her that he had been led by nothing but disinterested benevolence in trying to find her had been sleek and shy, utterly unconvincing. But some of the things he'd told her she knew to be true. Her father had been paid every week regularly, through the whole four years they'd lived at the hotel, in cash. Forster wouldn't have known that unless he'd paid him himself, or it wasn't likely that he would. What he'd said about her father's feeling disgraced and having lived practically in hiding was confirmed, too, by innumerable memories of his having cautioned her not to talk to people, nor answer their questions, nor make friends with them.

Claire Cleveland, somehow, had found the secret out. She'd spoken with perfect confidence of the laboratory where her father had worked. Had she really worked for him there—evenings, as she said she had? It was possible, but it didn't seem very likely. At any rate, it was flatly unbelievable that he would have confided to her at those times, as she said he had, the story of his California disaster. And yet it was clear that she knew about that. She'd spoken of the trial and the sensation that it created. There'd been hardly anything else in the papers at the time, she said—at least in the San Francisco papers.

Rhoda sat erect and held her breath. Why, why hadn't she caught that slip at the time? All it meant, all it could possibly mean, was that it had been in the San Francisco papers that Claire had read about it. She'd been in San Francisco, then, during the trial. She hadn't said so. She hadn't meant to give that away. She'd pretended that it was from Walter McFarland's own lips that she'd heard this story, long afterward, here in Chicago. Of course! Claire Cleveland was the girl on the train.

She recalled her first impression of Claire, her momentary belief that she couldn't be the woman because she looked rather nice, and young—not much over twenty. Six years ago she could have looked convincingly like an innocent young girl crying forlornly over the loss of her ticket and her money and the prospect that they'd put her off the train. She had something of that look left even now. Martin had described her as looking younger than her voice sounded. Why hadn't her voice given her away to Walter McFarland?

Of course it was hard to tell where the truth left off and where the lies began. Claire's professed hatred of Forster was true, though as yet specifically unaccounted for. She had tried to convince Rhoda, though with a suspicious insistence upon her own lack of knowledge, that Forster was the person primarily responsible for the plot against her father.

That felt like the truth though it obviously wasn't. Forster had stopped being frightened and had burst into a rage of pure relief when she had told him that Claire had said that. That disposed of the possibility that he could be the man who had compelled, or persuaded, or coldly hired, Claire.

And yet he couldn't be left out of the pattern altogether. He had advertised for Rhoda McFarland and no one but an idiot could doubt after seeing him and hearing him talk, that he had done so in the furtherance of some mean purpose of his own. Claire, who had once been his private secretary, and Max Lewis, who was his nephew, knew, or thought they knew, what that purpose was, and had tried

Old St. Augustine Still Spanish in Character

The fact that St. Augustine was already an old town before the Pilgrims landed in New England, is rarely considered in comparing the respective antiquity of these two events. Yet, to be exact, St. Augustine had been in existence 55 years when the Mayflower made its famous voyage to New England's shores. In modern terms, when Plymouth was settled in 1620, St. Augustine was already older than many of our western cities are today.

In 1648, almost a century after its foundations, St. Augustine was reported to have 300 householders besides a Franciscan monastery and a garrison. On its one hundredth anniversary St. Augustine was again visited by misfortune in the person of Captain Davis, a roving English freebooter. While the inhabitants fled to the fort for safety, he sacked the town, but failed to find much booty.

In 1784, St. Augustine again passed under Spanish dominion and continued undisturbed its dreamy existence, little affected by the events of the outside world. Although in 1821 it was embraced in the territory of the United States, it remained distinctly Spanish in character, and even today retains much of this foreign atmosphere.

Today St. Augustine is one of the most interesting historic cities of the United States, its quaint narrow streets and shaded plaza eloquent of centuries of existence. One can not visit this city without strangely feeling the romantic charm of this rich historical background.

Nicotine in Tobacco

The quantity of nicotine contained in tobacco varies from 2 to 8 per cent, the coarser kinds containing the larger quantity, while the best Havana cigars seldom contain more than 2 per cent, and often less. Nicotine does not appear in tobacco smoke. It is split into pyridine and cellulose. Of these the latter is said to be the less active, and to preponderate in cigar smoke, while the smoke from pipes contains a larger amount of pyridine. The percentage of nicotine varies with the kind of tobacco and with the district in which it is grown.

Nothing

At a trial in a fraud case in an adjoining county to Indianapolis the receiver of the company in the case was asked by counsel to state in as few words as possible what the company had, what he sold and what he received as receiver.

"Well," he said, "they had nothing, I sold nothing, I got nothing."

He held her so until he had replaced the telephone in Napoleon's chest and shut the little trap door upon it. Then he released her, saying as he did so, "You can yell if you like but it won't do you any good, in this room." He was still standing over her so that she couldn't get up out of the heavy chair. "What I ought to do," he concluded, glowering down upon her, "is to wring your neck."

It came to her that down inside he himself was frightened; bewildered, anyhow, like a bull with a lot of darts in his shoulders, gazing about the ring not knowing exactly who his enemy was. If she could just keep out of his way. Anyhow, it was plain he didn't quite know what he wanted to do with her. She scrubbed her lips vigorously with her handkerchief before she spoke.

"I wish you'd sit down where I can see you," she said. "What harm do you think I've done you?"

"What did you come here for?" he asked.

"Unless to make trouble for me," she supposed he meant. "You mean,"

she said, "you're afraid I've come to tell your uncle that I think you stole my three hundred dollars and my trunk."

He was almost inarticulate with fury, but finally he managed to stutter, "Never mind about that. What did you come here for?"

She decided to evade that. "Your uncle sent for me," she told him.

If she'd been a practiced deceiver she'd have stopped there. Not being one, she felt that the explanation sounded rather bare and added to it, "I don't know how he found out where I lived? Did you tell him? Because of course you did find out from Babe."

He sat down in the chair that she had sat in during the talk with Forster.

"No," he said, "I didn't tell him, but I happen to know how he found out. I guess I'm beginning to catch on to some things, too," he went on, still eyeing her intently. "She's quite some girl, that Babe Jennings. How long have you known her?"

"Quite a while," Rhoda told him.

"Got sort of an idea she's a friend of yours?"

"No," Rhoda answered, "I know she is."

He gave a short laugh. "Did you know," he asked, "that she left for New York this afternoon?"

She smiled as she shook her head.

"Well," he asserted, "I saw her off on that train, myself."

The lie was so childish that Rhoda almost laughed as she said, "That's very interesting."

"Don't you believe it?"

"No."

Her skepticism didn't seem to irritate him. He stared at her thoughtfully a few seconds and then said, "Well, maybe I've got you all wrong. I thought you and she were teamed up in this business. Now I've got a notion that she's burned you just like she did me."

"How did she burn you?" Rhoda asked.

"Never mind about that. That's my end of it. Say, what kind of a trunk was it you lost? Because she took a trunk with her. I helped her check it."

"What sort of trunk was it that you checked?" Rhoda asked him. It didn't seem possible that even he would be fool enough to fall into that trap.

He did give his answer a little uneasily. "Why, I didn't notice it especially," he said. "It was sort of a square leather trunk."

She sat for a while in puzzled silence. How could he have hoped she would believe a story like that? Why hadn't he seemed more disappointed that she didn't believe it? Was it possible that he really thought Babe had taken a train to New York?

"When did all this happen?" she asked at last. "What time did the train leave?"

"Five-thirty."

"What did she do? Call you up and ask you to see her off?"

The question startled her a little as she asked it. It made her think of the anonymous telephone message that had come to Claire Cleveland just as Claire had locked her in the bathroom.

Phrases Ascribed to Great Men All Wrong

The Detroit News is responsible for this "debunking" of some great men of the past:

Washington did not make use of the phrase "entangling alliances" in any of his speeches. In his farewell address he stated: "It is our true policy to steer clear of permanent alliances with any portion of the foreign world." It was Thomas Jefferson who in his inaugural address spoke of "peace, commerce and honest friendship with all nations, entangling alliances with none." The saying about "fooling the people" is commonly attributed to Lincoln, but is not mentioned in his biographies; it was probably a common proverb long before Lincoln ever used it, if he did so. Herbert Hoover never used the expression "noble experiment" with regard to prohibition. In a letter to Senator Borah long before the Presidential campaign, Mr. Hoover stated: "Our country has deliberately undertaken a great social and economic experiment, noble in motive and far-reaching in purpose." Woodrow Wilson never said this country was too proud to fight. In a speech to newly naturalized citizens in Philadelphia, he said: "Peace is the leading and elevating influence of the world and strife is not. There is such a thing as a man being too proud to fight. There is such a thing as a nation being so right that it does not need to convince others by force that it is right."

Lobbyists Might Have Heard of This Witness

Paul P. Harris, founder of Rotary, said at a Chicago luncheon:

"Some of the lobbyists investigated down in Washington gave rather complicated explanations of their lobbying work. They seemed to want to mystify rather than clarify. Anyhow, they were as hard to follow as the witness."

"A lawyer said to this witness: 'You say that the defendant is a kind of relative of yours. What in creation do you mean by that?'"

"Well, it's like this, friend," said the witness mildly. "Jake's first wife's cousin and my second cousin's first wife's aunt married brothers who were cousins of my mother's aunt, and then again Jake's grandfather on his mother's side and my grandfather on my mother's side were second cousins, while his stenographer became the wife of my wife's stepfather after his father and my mother died, and furthermore his brother Jim and my wife's brother Hilary married sisters, while on top of that—"

"Hold on. That'll do," said the lawyer feebly, "I accept your explanation, sir."—Detroit News.
