TAWAS CITY

MINA BROWN DROWNS IN TAWAS BAY

Mina May Brown, 14 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Brown of this city, was drowned Sunday afternoon at the Tawas City Park beach.

She and three girl companions, Misses Anna Metcalf, Effie Prescott and Phyllis Bigelow, were swimming to a raft anchored in Tawas Bay, when suddenly she called for help. The girls went to her aid but were unable to rescue her. Carl Musolf, who was diving from the slide several hundred feet away, was attracted by their cries for help and hurriedly swam to the girl. Owing to his exhausted condition from the exertion of rapid swimming and the unconscious struggles of the drowning girl, he was unable to save her and was nearly drowned in the attempt.

Mina May Brown was born November 10, 1916, in Grant township. She came with her parents to Tawas City in 1919 and would have been a junior this year at the Tawas City high school. She was a member of the Camp Fire Girls.

She is survived by her parents, three brothers, Roy, Orville and Billie, and one sister, Violet.

The funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon from the Tawas City Baptist church. Rev. Frank Metcalf officiated.

Deep sympathy is felt by everyone in the community for the bereaved family.

ADOLPH BISCHOFF

Adolph R. Bischoff died Tuesday evening, July 28, at his home in Tawas township at the age of 83 years, seven months and 22 days. Death followed an illness that extended over a period of several years.

The deceased was born December 6, 1847, in Germany. He came to this country in 1872 and settled in East Tawas, where, on March 22, 1876, he was united in marriage to Miss Anna Hartman. After living in East Tawas several years they moved to a farm in Tawas township, where he has resided since.

Ten children were born to this union, eight sons and two daughters, of whom a son and daughter preceded him in death. His wife died August 15, 1899.

On June 10, 1901, he was married to Mrs. Anna Wiggers of Evansville, Ind. She preceded him in death September 13, 1924.

Surviving are: Seven sons, William, Max and Emil Bischoff of Detroit, August Bischoff of Lansing, Paul Bischoff of Gaylord, Louis Bischoff of Bay City and Edwin Bischoff at home; one daughter, Mrs. Ida Wrobel of Detroit; eleven grandchildren, and one brother, William Bischoff of Baldwin township.

Funeral services will be held Saturday afternoon at 1:00 o'clock at the home, with burial in the Zion Lutheran cemetery. Rev. F. A. Sievert of the Zion Lutheran church, of which the deceased was a member for almost 60 years, will officiate.

RE-REGISTRATION OF ALL VOTERS REQUIRED BY 1932

The Department of State is making plans a year in advance for the general re-registration of all voters before the presidential election in 1932. Under the changes in the election laws adopted by the State legislature, the Department of State has greatly added powers in regard to elections.

Already the department, in conjunction with the election commission, has approved forms for the next re-registration, which is mandatory on all counties of over 5,000, and these forms will be available for local election officials within a short time.

"JUST A GIGOLO" OPENS AT FAMILY THEATRE

William Haines will be seen Sunday and Monday at the Family Theatre in "Just a Gigolo," a new adaptation of the David Belasco stage farce, "Dancing Partner," starring Irene Purcell and Charlotte Granville of the original play support in the screen version and the important roles are also played by C. Aubrey Smith of "The Bachelor Father" fame, and Lillian Bond. The picture was directed by Jack Conway, whose last production was the successful "Paid."

The plot of Haines' latest vehicle concerns a ne'er-do-well English lord whose uncle finally refuses to finance any further amatory adventures and consents to support his wayward nephew only on condition that he marry the girl of the uncle's choice. Haines amends the condition with the proposition that if he can prove the girl to be promiscuous he may be relieved of matrimonial bonds. The uncle agrees.

The hilarious episodes then relate to Haines' attempt to compromise the young lady in the guise of a gigolo. It is only when he discovers that she is the only woman he has ever met whose virtue is impregnable that he falls in love with her—and almost too late.

A good deal of serious acting is said to make a pleasing contrast with the more familiar tomfooleries of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer comedy star. Also showing a "Laurel and Hardy" comedy.

National City Drops Another to Standish

National City has yet to break into the win column in the Northeastern Michigan baseball league. The gypsum squad was defeated for the second time in a row by Standish Sunday, 3-1.

C. Frank, on the mound for the National crew, pitched his usual good game, allowing but six hits and striking out nine men. His wildness, however, hurt his chances for victory a great deal. Five passes and a hit batter were "taken advantage of" by the Standish boys, who came in at the right time with their hits.

Wasalaski, Standish hurler, duplicated his victory over National City of the Sunday previous by allowing but three hits and striking out nine men. A run in each of the eighth and ninth frames, clinched the game for him after Standish had started the scoring by tallying once in the first only to have the score tied by National in the fifth.

KELLY STOCK COMPANY AT EAST TAWAS NEXT WEEK

The Kelly Stock Company will be in East Tawas next week for three days, starting Monday, August 3. The Kelly Stock Co. needs no introduction through this section as they have played this territory for the past 25 or 30 years and the people are assured of high class royalty plays as usual. In accordance with the times they are showing at reduced prices with adults at only 35c and children at 10c. Their opening play will be "For Crying Out Loud" and it is a laugh from start to finish.

CARD OF THANKS

For numberless acts of kindness and beautiful floral offerings—the varied expressions of sympathy of neighbors and friends in our hour of sorrow and bereavement, we are very grateful, and in this wise wish to voice our gratitude to all. Sherman J. Dobson and Family.

MRS. W. D. GRAHAM

Mrs. William D. Graham, aged resident of this city, died at her home here Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Graham was one of the earlier pioneer residents of this city, having come here with her husband and family 64 years ago. The deceased was 93 years of age.

Euphemia Isaac was born April 8, 1838, at Inverness, Scotland. When she was 12 years of age her parents came to America, settling near Orillia, Ontario. The voyage from Scotland made in a sailing vessel required about 30 days' time. On January 8, 1861, she was united in marriage to William D. Graham.

In 1867 Mr. and Mrs. Graham and family came to Tawas City. She is survived by one son, W. M. Graham of Chattanooga, Tennessee, and one daughter, Miss Effie Graham of this city.

The funeral services were held Monday afternoon from the residence. Rev. W. L. Jones of the Tawas City Methodist Episcopal church officiated.

MRS. CHARLES WALTER

Mrs. Charles Walter of Standish died at two o'clock Tuesday morning at the home of her sister, Mrs. Louise McFadden. She had been in the city for about two months receiving medical attention. She had been in ill health for the past eight years. Heart trouble was the cause of death.

Anna A. Miller was born in Tawas township November 2, 1874. She was united in marriage March 12, 1907, to Charles Walter of Standish and had lived at their farm home near that city continuously since.

She is survived by the husband, one sister, Mrs. Louise McFadden of this city, four brothers, Jacob Miller and Rev. Charles F. Miller of Saginaw, John Miller and Frank Miller, and one aunt, Catherine Koerner of this place, besides a large number of nieces and nephews.

The funeral services will be held at three o'clock this afternoon from the Emanuel Lutheran church, of which she was a member. Services will be held from the McFadden home at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. W. C. Vosg will officiate.

PRIMITIVE TALE BRISTLES WITH ACTION AND THRILLS

A deadly python, slithering silently through the night; a lithe black panther lurking in the shadows; a pair of marauding tigers stalking the jungle trails, striking fear into the hearts of the Jungle folk. Such moments as these sharpen the drama of "Rango," the greatest motion picture thrill of 1931, which is one of the feature pictures offered in the double bill program at the State Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday.

No picture in recent months has evoked more spontaneous praise from critics than has "Transgression," stirring drama which Herbert Brenon directed for Radio Pictures and which is the other feature offered Wednesday and Thursday. The production is said to be far advanced in the realms of sheer beauty and dramatic strength. Featured in the cast of this powerful drama are Kay Francis, Ricardo Cortez, Paul Cavanagh and Nance O'Neill.

TAWAS CITY LOSESTO BAY CITY TEAM

Apparently the locals are going from bad to worse instead of improving. After running off to a three to one lead in the early innings of Sunday's game, they leaned back in the fifth frame of the encounter while Cowan Nickless of Bay City piled up sufficient runs to annex the contest by a 4-3 score.

The locals kept on at least even terms with the visiting team in the field, and although they outthrew their opponents, the added punch necessary to tally with men on bases in scoring positions was lacking. Boudler, local starting pitcher, had an off-day in the box, and although he allowed but six hits during the five innings he hurled, the Bay City boys made the most of them. Boudler left the mound in the sixth in favor of Brown, who had the visiting aggregation eating out of his hands during the remainder of the game.

Ditmar, southpaw hurler on the mound for Cowan Nickless, went the entire round nicely, and struck out seven men during the course of the game.

Sunday next, August 2, will find East Tawas and Tawas City again go to it. The contest will take place at the East Tawas athletic field, and, according to past meetings between these teams, will be another real battle from start to finish.

Something that is bound to be a real treat to fans in this vicinity has been arranged for by the local management. Next Thursday, August 6th, the Tawas City baseball team will play the Detroit All-Nation baseball club at the Tawas City athletic field in a twilight game. The All Nation club is composed of the following:

BOARD OF EDUCATION ELECTS OFFICERS

At a meeting of the Tawas City Board of Education held Monday evening the following officers were elected: Geo. A. Prescott, Jr., president; A. A. Bigelow, secretary; Edward Burtzloff, treasurer.

Grayling Man Heads Bay-Straits League

T. W. Hanson of Grayling, prominent figure in Michigan conservation matters for many years, was elected president of the Bay-Straits League of Northeastern Michigan Sportsmen at a meeting of the officers and directors held at Grayling last Sunday. Mr. Hanson succeeds Herman N. Butler of East Tawas, who was president of the Tri-County Sportsmen Club which the new league absorbed a few months ago and expanded to include seventeen counties of Northeastern Michigan.

Robert Rayburn of Alpena was elected first vice-president; Sam Yockey of Harrisville, second vice-president, and Frank J. Shipp of Gaylord, third vice-president. R. G. Schreck, secretary of the old Tri-County organization for the past several years, was re-elected secretary of the league.

In accepting the new office, Mr. Hanson pledged himself to keep the organization out of politics, and assured the fullest co-operation of the members and officers with the state conservation department.

"When this organization was first formed," Mr. Hanson said, "I hoped that our secretary inform the governor and director of conservation that it was not designed in any way for political purposes. As your new president I intend to see that that is carried out. On the other hand, the state, its conservation department and this organization has one common objective—a better outdoors in Michigan. And as I see it, there is but one way in advancing that work—by full co-operation where we are all working along the same lines with a brotherly spirit."

"DIRIGIBLE" OFFERS ANTARCTIC THRILLS TO MOVIE PATRONS

"Dirigible," an authentic and thrilling drama dealing with Antarctic exploration by means of modern aircraft will be presented by Columbia Pictures at the State Theatre on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Every phase of the dangers to be encountered on these hazardous trips and every detail of life aboard an up-to-date airship is shown with a faithful realism. The result is a picture that is sweeping in its spectacular appeal. Nor has the human interest angle been neglected—the story underlying the action is delightfully sympathetic.

Acting honors fall about evenly between Jack Holt and Ralph Graves. These two splendid players—who have appeared as "buddies" in other Columbia productions, portray two totally different types of men—and each is excellent in his way. Both have the faculty of bringing their big dramatic scenes up to a high point of intensity. Fay Wray makes a thoroughly delightful heroine.

REPORT OF COUNTY NURSE FOR MONTH OF JULY

During July, in Isocoo county, Miss Myrtle Cowgill, county nurse, made 26 prenatal calls, 14 infant calls, 36 on preschool children, 65 on school children, 14 tuberculosis calls and one orthopedic.

A chest clinic was held by the Michigan Tuberculosis Association on July 31st, a representative of the East Tawas and Tawas City health committees as well as the county nurse assisting.

Miss Cowgill spent one week this month with Miss Ruth Scott in Ogemaw county assisting with the eye clinics. Miss Scott joined the staff of the Children's Fund as county nurse in Ogemaw county on July 6th, Miss Lawrence, the former county nurse, having been transferred to VanBuren county in May.

The county nurse will be on vacation during August, so any matters needing immediate attention may be referred to the Health Department at West Branch and may be looked after by another nurse in the unit or by the Sanitary Inspector, F. A. Reagan, who is acting health officer for the department at this time.

"Depression Flats." New St. Louis Subdivision

For about a mile along the Mississippi at St. Louis may be seen many small make-shift shacks built of old boards and tar paper. This is the new subdivision built and occupied by those families and individuals who are without jobs and funds and named "Depression Flats." These people have taken the liberty, under their circumstances, to squat on the edge of the Mississippi where living is cheaper and children can romp and play. The photograph shows one of the shacks where a family of six, including three children, make their home.

Plan to Take Gold From Sea Fails

Berlin.—The fantastic scheme of German scientists to pay Germany's reparation debt with gold from the ocean has been abandoned.

For more than eight years Professor Wilhelm Schlenk of the chemical institute of the Berlin university revealed, German scientists carried on extensive research in all the oceans of the world in an attempt to extract gold from seawater.

Hope Is Abandoned.
"Our last hope of winning gold from sources other than mines has been definitely abandoned," Professor Schlenk declared to Universal Service.

The Idea of extracting gold from the ocean sprang up during the inflation period when the gold question was so burning. A number of ships equipped with the latest scientific instruments and modern laboratories carried Germany's most prominent scientists to all corners of the world.

"According to Arrhenius, the percentage of gold in the ocean would have been adequate to warrant extracting it. But our expeditions found that Arrhenius was wrong and that only a small fraction of the amount of gold he claimed to have found in ocean water actually existed.

Hard to Extract.
"But even if Arrhenius had been right, it would be practically impossible to isolate the precious metal, owing to its extremely irregular distribution. Contrary to general belief, ocean water is not a specific solution, but a continually changing mixture.

"Water from the polar regions contains an entirely different percentage of salt, chemicals and minerals than water from the tropics.

"And gold's peculiar molecular formations in ocean water offer an added difficulty in extracting it. We found veritable 'gold streams,' specific currents which contain a higher percentage of gold."

Lipstick Once Classed With Witchcraft Art

London.—Use of lipstick was once a punishable offense in England, according to Dr. Margaret Fishenden, scientific investigator in the department of scientific and industrial research.

Cosmetics were introduced into England by the knight crusaders, she declared in a radio broadcast on "Chemistry and the Housewife."

In 1780, she said, it was decreed that any woman who should "seduce, or betray into matrimony any of his majesty's subjects by scents, paints or cosmetic washes should incur the penalty of the law in force against witchcraft and that the marriage, upon conviction, should stand null and void."

More German Food Served in Paris Cafes

Paris.—The ever increasing number of Germans frequenting Montmartre and Montparnasse, the two gayest night haunts of Paris, has caused restaurateurs and cafe proprietors to substitute German dishes for American ones served as specialties.

In former years the restaurant men catered to Americans with breakfast foods, "hot dogs" and baked beans. The decrease in Americans has resulted in the appearance of German dainties.

College Boy Orchestras to Play on U. S. Liners

Boston.—Collegians will be employed to play in the orchestras of ships of the United States lines during the summer months, according to plans being completed by the Intercollegiate Alumni extension service.

Orchestras from the following colleges have already been engaged for the summer: University of Pennsylvania, University of California, Massachusetts Institute of Technology Penn States, Ohio State, Columbia, Fordham, and University of Maryland.

Immigration Tide to United States at Ebb

Washington.—Fewer immigrants are now being admitted than at any time during the last 100 years, and immigration has ceased to be "an economic menace," William N. Doak, secretary of labor, has announced.

Only one immigrant is entering the United States where five were admitted a year ago and thirty in 1914. Mr. Doak declared. Swelling the outward time of migration, there were more than 18,000 aliens deported in the fiscal year just ended on June 30, he said.

Mr. Doak recommended that congress raise the educational requirements for admission to citizenship. Too many persons are gaining citizenship who do not comprehend its responsibilities, he said, also significant in its declaration that "there are now signs of improvement in employment conditions."

Old Court Records Complete Archives

St. Louis, Mo.—Three packing boxes of old official court records of Ste. Genevieve, Mo., shipped recently to the Missouri Historical society, has given that body complete official records from that district between 1761 and 1865—almost 100 years.

Previously the society had been given official papers from 1761 to 1804. Recently, however, it was decided to turn papers dating from 1804 to 1865 over to the society.

Owl "Hypnotizes" Man; Claws Out One of Eyes

Edmonton, Alta.—"Hypnotized" by a vicious mother owl, which clawed his face and body, Albert Hughes of Wainwright, Alta., was at a hospital here after an operation for removal of his right eye.

"I was walking underneath a tree," said Hughes, "when the owl suddenly fluttered from her nest. I didn't fight back or run. I couldn't. All I could see was those two big eyes. I was hypnotized."

Asked If He Wants to Go to Jail, Mute Says "No"

Seattle.—William Leonard, twenty-three, was taken to Police court, charged with begging. He professed to be deaf and dumb. Court attaches tried various ruses, attempting to make him talk, but all failed until Judge John B. Gordon suddenly caught his eye and asked, "Do you want to go to jail?" Leonard quickly replied "No." He was escorted to a cell.

Machines That Are Almost Human

By E. C. TAYLOR

The Telehor

THE telehor, a robot similar to the television machine, gets pictures at places where human being cannot live, such as at the bottom of the ocean or high up in the air.

The robot picks up the picture at the sea floor or in the thin air of high altitudes and transmits it by radio to a receiving machine that translates the electric waves into a photograph.

The robot is lowered into the ocean, and sent aloft in a balloon. It is directed by men on the ground, and when it is pointed at the object to be photographed, starts sending its flashes of vibrations that are recorded like the image of a television broadcaster is recorded on the television receiving set.

The mechanism of the robot transmits the pictures direct from the object being photographed without the necessity of making preliminary exposures. It sends the electric impulses of the picture one at a time, and they are picked up by the receiving apparatus and flashed before a camera. A complete picture can be sent in one-eighth of a second.

Equally as remarkable in the eyes of most people is the robot that sends photographs by telegraph and by radio. The sending of pictures by telegraph is universally done nowadays.

When a great news event occurs in a far distant country, or in a part of the United States far from home, photographs of it are sent in a few minutes to the newspapers that we read. Pictures of the inauguration of a new President of the United States in Washington are printed within an hour in newspapers on the Pacific coast.

When there is a great earthquake or other disaster in Europe or Asia, these robots send the pictures to American newspapers by cable. This is a companion device to the radio for the speedy dissemination of news to the people of the world.

This sending of pictures by wire is becoming an important factor in business. An engineering firm in New York city recently sent a set of complicated mechanical drawings to San Francisco. They arrived in time to enable the firm to complete a contract several days ahead of the specified time, and thereby made considerable profit for the firm.

The latest fashions are sent by wire now. Important financial announcements are transmitted just as they have been set up in type at the home office to prevent error in resetting the type where they are received.

Physicians send photographs of patients' showing conditions that need immediate diagnosis. Facsimiles of checks have transferred large sums of money in a few minutes when they have been transmitted by wire.

The robot frequently goes to the aid of the police in catching criminals. Photographs and even fingerprints have been sent to distant cities to aid in the hunt for criminals.

This robot sends out electrical vibrations one at a time. They are received by a device attached to a writing pen that draws a line as each impulse is received. The pitch of the vibration of each impulse makes the line light or heavy. These lines are drawn very rapidly, and when the entire operation is completed in a few minutes, there is a picture that, when photographed on a smaller scale, is a clear copy of the original picture.

The same device is frequently used to transmit photographs by radio, sending the electrical impulses through the air instead of over wires. But the wires so far have been found to give greater accuracy in reception.

A movie camera operated on a similar principle is being used by the United States coast and geodetic survey to take pictures of tides and water currents beneath the surface. It does the work of several men, and does it accurately.

The device recently was submerged in Chesapeake bay to make studies of the tidal currents. It contained a compass and a revolving dial, on which the direction and strength of the currents were recorded. One picture was made each half hour and the machine worked steadily and without attention for a week at the bottom of Chesapeake bay. Careful analysis of the charts recorded aided in the planning of a sewage disposal plant.

Judge's Black Cap

The custom of a judge donning a black cap—really a square piece of black cloth—when sentencing a prisoner to death is a relic of the ancient days when covering the head was a sign of mourning. The judge, therefore, in putting on the black cap, is assuming mourning in view of the fact that he is about to pronounce the forfeit of a life. On top of the Old Bailey, the famous London court of justice, the familiar figure of Justice can be seen. It is blindfolded—to indicate impartiality—holding the scales in one hand, and a sword aloft in the other. The scales are the symbol of fairness.

To Restore Old Capitol

After three years' research for authentic data in America and Europe, the historic Colonial capitol of Virginia in Williamsburg, completed in 1705, has been made in miniature scale-model form and will be restored by the Rockefeller interests. The capitol stood at the eastern end of Duke of Gloucester street, three-quarters of a mile from William and Mary college.

LITTLE GUAM

Street in Agana, Guam.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.—WNU Service.)

THE interests of governmental economy the lonely island of Guam, one of the smallest of American possessions will be taken from the list of American naval bases and turned over to another government department, possibly the Department of Interior, which has already suggested that Guam would make an attractive national park.

Guam's military importance has always been theoretical, but as part of the chain of mid-Pacific American stepping stones, leading from California through the Hawaiian islands to the Philippines, Guam has also provided a handy landing place and relay station for cable lines across the Pacific, and a base for repairs and supplies for American vessels plying midway lanes. More than 1,100 miles of open water separate it from the Philippines while the ocean jump to Midway, nearest of the Hawaiian islands, is even greater—some 1,700 miles.

Guam's strategic value is out of all proportion to its size and population. In area it is about three and a half times as large as Nantucket, having a length of less than 30 miles and an average width of about six miles. Only 18,620 people, more than ninety per cent of whom are native Guamaese, a people similar to the Filipinos, inhabit this coral-reefed oasis. The population, however, is growing. It jumped 40 per cent in the last decade.

The island of Guam was discovered on March 6, 1521, by Magellan, after a passage of three months and twenty days from the strait which bears his name.

Raided by Magellan.

The natives of Guam came to meet the Spaniards in strange "flying proas" (canoes provided with outriggers and triangular sails of mats). The Spaniards had dropped anchor, furled their sails, and were about to land, when it was discovered that a small boat which rode astern of the flagship was missing. Suspecting the natives of having stolen it, Magellan himself went ashore at the head of a landing party of 40 armed men, burned 40 or 50 houses and many boats, and killed seven or eight natives, male and female. He then returned to his ship with the missing boat and immediately set sail, continuing his course to the westward.

The natives did not fare much better at the hands of later visitors. Missionaries came in 1688.

Though Guam lies within the tropics, its climate is tempered throughout the greater part of the year by a brisk trade wind blowing from the northeast and east. Its mountains are not high enough to cause marked differences in the distribution of rain on the island, and the island is not of sufficient extent to cause the daily alternating currents of air known as land and sea breezes. Generally speaking, the seasons conform in a measure with those of Manila, the least rain falling in the colder months or the periods called winter by the natives, and the greater rainfall occurring in the warm months, which are called summer by the natives.

Though the mean monthly temperature varies only 2 degrees on either side of the mean annual temperature, yet the "winters" of Guam are so definitely marked that certain wasps which during the summer make their nests in the open fields among the bushes invade the houses of the people at that season and hibernate there.

The forest vegetation of Guam consists almost entirely of strand trees, epiphytal ferns, lianas, and a few undershrubs. The majority of the species are included in what Schimper has called the Barringtonia formation. The principal trees are the wild fertile breadfruit; the Indian almond; jack-in-the-box, and the giant banyan.

How They Catch Fish.

The fruit of another common tree (Barringtonia speciosa) the natives use to stupefy fish. The fruit is pounded into a paste, inclosed in a bag, and kept over night. The time of an especially low tide is selected, and bags of the pounded fruit are taken out on the reef next morning and sunk in certain deep holes in the reef. The fish soon appear at the surface, some of them lifeless, others attempting to swim, or faintly struggling with their ventral side uppermost. The natives scoop them in their hands, sometimes even diving for them.

Nothing more striking could be imagined than the picture presented by the conglomeration of strange shapes and bright colors—snakelike sea eels, voracious lizard-fishes, garlike houndfishes, with their jaws prolonged into a sharp beak; long snouted trumpet fishes, flounders, porcupine fish, bristling with spines; squirrel fishes of the brightest and most beautiful colors—scarlet, rose color and silver, and yellow and blue; parrot fishes with large scales, parrotlike

WORLD WAR YARNS

by Lieut. Frank E. Hagan

"In the Soup"

No matter how deficient the Allies may have been in some phases of warfare they were masters of propaganda; in the telling of horrendous stories the Germans were completely outclassed. Most of the tales of atrocities have been thoroughly disproved by authoritative books, published since the war. And poor Fritz has been shown to be not at all the monster he was pictured.

However, the tales of German ruthlessness thrived mightily before November 11, 1918. One of them given credence among troops was that the enemy was shipping the dead back to a factory and boiling the corpses for glycerine to make explosives. This fabrication was presented as a known fact, substantiated by the evidence of witnesses who had seen carloads of dead soldiers, done up efficiently in bundles of six, en route to the factory.

An American Intelligence officer was on duty with the Second corps when the Twenty-seventh and Thirtieth American divisions and the Australian were cracking the Hindenburg line in Flanders, near Bellecourt.

To him one day hurried a sergeant who had gone through with the infantry, breathless with excitement. The sergeant announced dramatically that he had discovered a "corpse reducing plant." The officer was dubious and in no mood to be dragged away on a wild goose chase. But finally he decided to have a look.

The two proceeded cautiously over the area that had just been captured. It was rough country, filled with many pits and caverns which had made mopping up difficult. Germans were likely to pop out of a hole and take a shot at any moment.

Finally they descended into the depths of an underground canal, which the Germans had made into a labyrinth. The sergeant led the way through several pitch-dark tunnels, eventually emerging in a true chamber of horrors. A sight which has inspired many nightmares since, met the officer's gaze. A large pot, filled with liquid, was in the center of the room. Immersed in this, with only his head showing, was a dead German.

Other investigators soon appeared. Affidavits were about to be drawn up definitely establishing the discovery of a "glycerine plant." But just then a bedraggled infantry officer came in and looked the situation over.

"H—," he said, picking up a few bits of iron. "Can't you fellows see what happened? One of my men threw a pineapple in here and blew the cook into his soup!"

"Gas!"

A Chicago Board of Trade member who was once a rear rank soldier in the Fifty-third infantry, Sixth division, tells of a hard boiled sergeant in his outfit who carried the gas mask drill to extremes.

The sergeant would shout "GAS!" at the most unexpected times and his men would have to fasten on the instruments of torture. Then he would trot them along country roads, on the hottest days, wearing the masks.

Word came of a move to the front and the sergeant gave his men a final gas drill. A few days later the long-anticipated event happened. As they were moving up a sunken road there came the plop! plop! plop! of gas shells, falling to their right.

Without waiting for the sergeant's cry of "Gas!" masks went on without a fumble. But something seemed wrong with the sergeant. He stumbled along, pawing at his mask. Finally he snatched it off, revealing a face purple from congestion. Hastily the sergeant pulled out the can, removed a pile of letters blocking the air passage, and popped the mask back on.

"When we got out of it," tells the Board of Trade man, "the sergeant swore that some one else put the letters there. Perhaps they did!"

Hitting .300 in Kaiser's League

Hank Gowdy, world's series hero for the Boston Braves in 1914, became a national hero when he showed the way to other major league ball players by enlisting for the "biggest series" of all in 1917. Hank signed up with an infantry regiment, one of the National Guard, which became a unit of the Forty-second (Rainbow) division and was sent to France.

He attracted special attention from other soldiers of the Rainbow and they flocked to see him when his regiment paraded in the back areas before it was sent into the lines. Hank carried the regimental colors on these marches and was the target for assorted remarks as he plowed along through the roads or more uncertain footing over which his regiment passed.

"How're they coming, Hank? . . . What're you hitting in the Kaiser's league?" the soldiers would shout as Hank and his outfit marched by.

And Gowdy, with a careful glance to see that no commanding officer was near, would come back with: "There's nothing to it, boys. The Kaiser's losing the hop on his fast one. We'll hit these Boche for plenty home runs and there will be no strikeouts in this game when we have finished the job." (© 1931, Western Newspaper Union.)

Novel Invitation to President

Children of the Los Angeles municipal playgrounds sent to President Herbert Hoover a great big invitation, attached to a great big sombrero, asking him to attend La Fiesta, Los Angeles' one hundred fiftieth birthday anniversary celebration, September 4 to 13. The photograph shows Gloria Valdez, daughter of a pioneer Los Angeles family, with the invitation, the huge pen with which she signed it and the 10-gallon sombrero designed to carry the spirit of the fiesta to the President. The invitation was dispatched to the White House by regular mail.

Revoluting Youth

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I suppose most of us would like to do as we please. If that were possible, though we should strenuously object to other people's having the same privilege. And most of all youth dislikes to be handicapped by rules and regulations. It wants to choose for itself, and though it has always desired this privilege, perhaps now more than at any other time for generations it revolts against law and regulations, snapping its fingers at the experience of age which sees how necessary regulations are if we are to have respect to the advantage of the greatest number. In no place is this revolt from regulation more evident than in our schools and colleges where the adolescent chafes under any rule which tends to inhibit his free and untrammelled action.

In a city in the Middle West not many weeks ago the whole high school body went on a strike because, forsooth, a few negro children, whose parents were citizens and taxpayers and who were quite as much entitled to an education as were the strikers themselves were in the school.

Down in Oklahoma the students have been recently all "het up" and threaten to pack their dishes and doll clothes and go home to mother because they are not permitted to dance as late as they please, drive an automobile when and where they want to, and have "dates" seven nights in the week. As if these things would interfere with their studying!

And here in my own fair state one excited youth in the columns of one of our greatest dailies asks this pertinent question:

"Has the University of Illinois, then, any legal right to prevent students, especially tuition-paying citizens of this state, from doing whatever they please when they please, so long as they obey the laws of the state and federal governments and the laws of the locality in the jurisdiction of which the students are living?"

The answer is yes.

Any educational institution, like any other great business enterprise, has not only a right, but it is its duty to make such regulations as will make the work done most effective and to the intellectual advantage of the greatest number. So the courts have always held.

Boxer Knocks Out a Fleeting Bandit

Berlin.—A would-be pay roll bandit, who took $275 from a girl cashier of a suburban laundry as she came from a bank, made just one mistake. In his flight he tried to make his getaway across an athletic field where a group of amateur boxers were working out. The boxers heard the girl's cries. One of them knocked the bandit out and turned him over to the police.

Larger Crop of Wool Is Forecast for 1931

Washington.—Production of wool in the United States this year is expected to surpass last year's because of the increased stock and more favorable weather conditions, the bureau of agricultural economics here announced, but the world's wool crop is expected to be smaller. This, it was pointed out, will increase the value of domestic wool clips. Wool production in the southern hemisphere fell off from its abnormally large supply of last year and is now just below normal, the bureau said. The wool production of the British possessions continue slightly above normal.

Mailed Ted Wrong Letter

By DUFORD JENNE

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) (WNU Service.)

THEODORA, flushed and happy, with a song in her heart, as she dreamed and played with the soft, shining, shimmering things she took from the trunk—the garments that made up her trousseau—suddenly heard Mrs. Abbey's high voice speaking in the lower room.

"There's no question about it, Mary. For five afternoons I noticed Will Hanly out driving with one of the prettiest girls I ever saw, I was suspicious, the girl seemed so interested in him, and I asked one of the men where Will works, and he said, 'Sure, he's engaged to her!'"

"There was a deep silence in the kitchen below, and then Theodora heard her mother say in a slow, hurt tone: "Why it can't be so! 'Ted' has her wedding dress ready, and their plans are all complete!"

"Well, I'm telling you what I saw and what was told me!" "It will break her heart! But I have been afraid—just a bit. He writes her so seldom since he went to the city, and he's such a handsome, popular fellow!"

"It is too bad—and if I were Theo, I'd—"

"Hush, don't speak so loud, please. Ted is in the old guest-room looking over her wedding things, and every sound goes right up there through the old register. She might hear you—and I don't know what she'd do if she did! She's been so happy in her dreams of—"

Her mother's voice died away, Theodora sat in dumb misery, a little heap of pain. "It could not be true!" her heart told her bravely; and then her mind whispered: "It might be true!" Will's letters had been so short—yet he had always been a man of few words; and he was handsome, good-natured—

She moaned a little as she sat on the floor near the trunk where lay the shining remnants of her dream.

Suddenly, it must have been a long time after the conversation below, her mother's gentle voice came to her up the stairway.

Ted awoke with a start from the depths of her despair, rallied her will, kissed the soft garments one by one and folded them back in the trunk. Then she stood a moment in silence fighting for mastery of herself so that her mother would not read the hurt in her heart.

But the moment she stepped into the kitchen her mother's tender eyes understood. "Oh, Theo, you heard. But don't you believe it, dear. I know it can't be true!" her mother said quickly.

Theodora smiled faintly. "Of course, it isn't, mother."

"This is the day for the usual letter. He wouldn't keep up writing you if everything wasn't all right. He isn't that kind," her mother urged.

When the mail came, she found his letter. She opened it with slight, trembling fingers. Across the page her eyes read a line of fire:

"Dear Ted—Our engagement is off. Sorry, indeed. As ever, Will."

She could not quite stay the little cry of pain that broke from her lips. Her mother came to her with a rush, and Theo handed her the brief note.

Theo smiled at her bravely. "It's his way. I'm glad he said it simply and quickly."

Then she went quietly to the little room which had been her refuge in childish troubles and in later years, and there she wrote him a simple note of understanding. Then, with the letter in her hand, she walked through the gathering dusk of the late afternoon to the village office and mailed it. It would reach him in the morning.

On the evening of the day following the mailing of her letter she went outside into her mother's flower garden, and stood a silent, solitary figure searching for healing and peace among the blossoms.

As she stood there she heard the roar of a powerful motor and a car swept to a sharp halt at the door. A tall figure dashed to the house, saw her, turned, and came with long strides toward her. Then, with a strange sense of things unreal, she was caught in strong arms, kissed warmly on her lips and cheeks.

"Ted, what under the sun!" Will's strained voice said. "Why did you send that note?"

She explained haltingly. He groaned as he listened. "I sent that note to a pal of mine, Ted Evans, calling off a golf engagement—I mean I meant to; instead I sent my love letter to him and his note to you. What a mess!"

A little song began to sing in her heart. She understood, but she told him Mrs. Abbey's story. He laughed.

"That girl is the daughter of a rich chap. The company asked me to teach her to drive her new car. She's the biggest dumbbell I ever met," he said with some heat. "As for that yarn of my being engaged to her, one of the men told me about an old lady who asked him about us and what he said. Now, look, I'm not going to take any more chances of losing you. Can't we be married tomorrow, right here in the old town? I've got the license!"

Only the flowers in the old-fashioned garden heard her answer—and they know how to keep secrets.

DAIRY

STOP LOSSES FROM ACID OR SOUR MILK

Washing and Cooling of All Utensils Imperative.

(By D. S. KOCHER, Specialist in Dairy Technology, Ohio State University.)

Heavy losses due to the development of acid or sour milk may be prevented. The cause of souring is the rapid growth of acid-producing organisms. These organisms are not harmful to the health of the consumer, but are objectionable when in milk that is supposed to be sweet. To avoid this trouble it is best for dairymen to use buckets, strainers and cans that are well tinned and constructed so that they can be thoroughly washed and sterilized.

After milking, it is best to rinse the utensils with cold water, then wash with hot water, washing powder and brush. Do not use soap, soap powders and cloth. After washing, all utensils are sterilized with scalding water or a chlorine sterilizer. The scalding water is preferable.

The milk should also be cooled as soon as possible to 55 degrees or lower and held at this temperature at all times. With well water at the prevailing temperatures in Ohio it will require at least 5 gallons of water for each gallon of milk to be cooled.

Although a temperature of 55 degrees may seem lower than necessary, the best results are obtained with that or lower temperatures. The organism that causes sour milk will develop about 15 times as fast at 60 degrees as it will at 50 degrees, and 700 times as fast at 70 degrees as it will at 50 degrees.

Modern Cow Needs More Than Pasture Feeding

Pasture alone was satisfactory for cows in the early days when even the best of cows yielded only an amount of milk which would now be too low for profit, but the present-day animal has been developed to have a capacity for producing milk so great that any ordinary pasture cannot furnish her enough feed for both milk production and for the maintenance of her body, says Prof. F. B. Morrison, head of the animal husbandry department at the New York State College of Agriculture.

Referring to the present surplus of milk, Professor Morrison says the way to reduce the surplus economically and efficiently is to cull out and sell to the butcher the low producers, which, even under normal conditions, do not pay for their keep. If every dairyman who has low producers in his herd would dispose of just one cow, the poorest one in his herd, the dairy surplus problem would be solved almost overnight, he says.

All investigations on the cost of milk production show that high-producing cows produce milk and butterfat more cheaply than those of moderate or low production. High production can never be secured except when good cows are well fed.

Treating Milk Fever

Milk fever is a disease which may occur with any cow, following calving, no matter how well she is handled. It seems especially likely to occur with high producers.

Our advice is that it is best to call a veterinary who will give the proper treatment and explain the care that is needed. The modern method of distending the udder with air is very effective and with this treatment few fatalities occur. Milk fever outfits are available for use by every dairyman, but due to danger of infection, it is probably better to have the veterinary do the work. It is a good practice to milk the cow a little two or three times a day during milk fever to make sure that all quarters are milking freely.—Exchange.

Dairy Hints

A cement or wooden tank for cooling milk and cream should be part of the equipment of every dairy farm.

We must look for the returns on good feed, not in increased test but in more pounds of milk of the same test.

Careful washing of the utensils and the application of a good sterilizing solution will help lessen the possibilities of milk becomingropy.

Even at best some dirt does fall during milking. This can largely be excluded from the milk by the use of the hooded or small-top milkpail.

At no time has the poor cow been so great a luxury as today.

It will be a grand day for dairying when every dairy farm has proper equipment for cooling the milk or cream.

Powdered skim milk may be substituted for fresh skim milk for calves after they are a few weeks old. It should be mixed at the rate of one pound of powder to nine pounds of water and fed in the same manner as fresh skim milk.

Fleawort

The common name for the seeds of the Plantago Psyllium is fleawort, and they belong to the herb family. The name originated in England. This species of plantago grows in the south of Europe and in northern Africa. The seeds are about 3 mm in length, 1 to 1.5 mm in width, convex on one side and concave on the other. They are dark reddish brown in color and closely resemble flaxseed in medicinal properties.

Stock Exchange's Beginning

The present New York stock exchange traces its origin to a group of men who held daily meetings under a buttonwood tree which stood at what is now 68 Wall street, New York city. It was in 1792 that a formal organization was effected.

 Friends were grieved Saturday when word came that Mrs. Harry Craig of Battle Creek had been killed in an auto accident on Friday while enroute to Whittemore to spend the week end with her brother, Roland Lehman. Harry and a little son are both in a hospital and not expected to live. They lived here for a number of years before going to Battle Creek and had a large circle of friends. George and Roland Lehman left on Saturday to attend her funeral, which was held on Sunday.
 Mrs. Harold Karr of Lincoln is visiting relatives here for a few days.
 Mr. and Mrs. H. Jacque, returned from a trip in the Upper Peninsula and while there visited Mr. and Mrs. Norman Ruckle at St. Ignace and report Mrs. Norman Ruckle as suffering from a broken ankle received in an automobile accident a short time ago.
 Miss Elnora Dillenbeck of Grayling is spending the week here.
 Mr. and Mrs. H. Powell returned Saturday from a week's visit in Kalamazoo.
 Mr. and Mrs. H. Jackson met with a serious accident last Wednesday night while returning from a show in Bay City. A car ran into them, rolling their car over on the pavement several times before it rolled into the ditch. Mrs. Jackson and son, Teddy, were hurt seriously and taken to Samaritan hospital, Bay City, where they remained until Saturday, when they were removed to their homes but are still under the care of Dr. Hasty. Mrs. E. Jobe of Bay City is assisting in caring for them.
 Irene Austin is spending this week in Sterling with Mr. and Mrs. Ross Ktchen.
 Mr. and Mrs. Romanzo Hall and children of Flint spent Sunday at the parental home.
 Mr. and Mrs. Paul Snielvogel of Detroit spent the week end here. Ruth Fuerst returned with them to Detroit to spend two weeks.
 Mr. and Mrs. John Thompson of Midland spent the week end here with relatives.
 Rev. and Mrs. George Hall of Lincoln were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. John O'Farrell. Rev. Hall was the Baptist minister in Prescott a few years ago.

LAIDLAWVILLE

Mrs. Anne Gilmore and son of Saginaw are spending a few weeks with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Lange.
 Miss Evelyn Rempert spent Tuesday with Mrs. W. Youngs.
 Mr. and Mrs. Carl Youngs of Flint were callers at the John Anschuetz home Saturday.

 Adolph Bischoff is very low at this writing.
 Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Springer and son and Mrs. Beulah Rempert of Detroit spent the week end with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Springer.
 Sherman Baumgardner spent the week end at the home of his son and family.
 C. M. VanHorn of Ann Arbor spent the week end at his farm here.
 Frank Wood of Bay City, L. Colby of Tawas, and Mrs. Z. Colby and sons of Saginaw spent a few days at the Woods farm this week.
 Everyone is busy cutting grain. Threshing is due to start here on Monday.

French Easter Custom

In olden times the noblemen of Paris paid a complimentary visit to the palace to felicitate the king on his great luck in not being a perplexed man of science in a godless world. And in return, as an acknowledgement, each nobleman received the royal Easter egg.

Seal of Great State

The design of the seal of the state of Virginia was proposed by George Wythe. It consists of a female figure representing Virtue, her foot resting upon a figure representing Tyranny. The motto—"Sic Semper Tyrannis"—describes this allegorical representation.

"Queen of Flowers"

The most number of flowers, the rose, is to be found in almost every country north of the equator. More than one hundred species of rose have been described and more than 2,000 varieties are known.

Full Up

The following announcement appeared recently in an English parish magazine: "The annual choir dinner will be held in the village Wednesday evening at 6:20 to be followed by a service in the church at 8 p. m. with full choir."

Architectural Idea

The Greek architect Vitruvius asserted that columns at the corners of a temple should be made a fifth thicker in diameter, because these outer columns seem smaller than they really are.

No Middle Course

Druggist: "Some-

thing else, Miss?"

Girl: "No, just the oil."

Druggist: "But you just drank it."

Girl: "Oh dear! I wanted it for my mother."

"If you don't shut off that blantly-blank loud-speaker," an irate tenant shouted across the court, "I'll come over and shut it off for you."

"Here's wishin' you luck, neighbor," came the calm reply. "She's been goin' that way ever since I married her."

Girl: "Could you fix me a dose of castor oil so the oil won't taste?"

Druggist: "Certainly! Won't you have a glass of soda while waiting?"

Girl: "Oh, thank you." (And drinks the soda.)

FINNEY OF THE FORCE

—And Running Yet

THE FEATHERHEADS

Too Good a Chance to Pass

On Their Way to Demand "Peace and Freedom"

LED by the intrepid and experienced Miss Mabel Vernon, the "Transcontinental Caravan of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom" is on its way from Los Angeles to Washington. All along the route the women, who are in motor cars, are gathering signatures to petitions for peace which are to be laid before President Hoover, the object being to have the United States take the lead in the international disarmament conference which will be held in Geneva next year. Our illustration shows the scene in Los Angeles as the caravan is about to start.

The trip across the continent, over mountains, deserts and plains, will take more than three months, for the women depart often from the highways in order to visit as many cities and towns as possible. They expect to reach the National Capital on October 16, and their parade up Pennsylvania avenue will be something to look at. Miss Vernon has conducted a number of coast-to-coast caravans in the last fifteen years and knows how to run them.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

GOOD WORD FOR GLUTTON

THAT is where Peter is not only nice but smart as well. Kind words always make friends and never make enemies. And the more friends one has the better. But it isn't with any such selfish purpose that Peter does it. Peter says kind things because he thinks kind things.

Now as he sat on the edge of the pond of Paddy the Beaver deep in the Green Forest and listened to the news from the Great Woods in the Far North, as told by Honker the goose, who had just stopped over for the night, Peter was hearing for the first time of Glutton the Wolverine. Buster Bear and Prickly Porky and Paddy the Beaver and Honker the Goose knew him well, and they knew would be caught in them, at the same time stealing all the food which the trapper had put out as bait to lead little fur-coated people into the traps. He told how Glutton had broken into the little log house of the trapper while the latter was away, and had stolen or ruined all his supplies, so that the trapper had been forced to go away to get more. Of course while he was away the little people in fur had nothing to fear from traps.

Buster Turned and Stared at Peter Very Hard.

no good of him. Buster had said that everybody hated Glutton; that he was so selfish that when he found more food than he could eat he spoiled what was left so that no one else should have any; that he was so smart in a bad way that no one could hide anything from him, and that he was so strong and savage that most of the people who lived in the Great Woods were afraid of him.

Then Honker the Goose had told how he had watched Glutton follow a trapper and find and pull up all the traps, no matter how cunningly they were hidden, so that no one

Peter had listened with ears wide open. When Honker had finished Peter spoke.

"Did I understand you to say that Glutton is all bad and that every one hates him?" he asked.

"You certainly did," growled Buster Bear in his deep grumbly-rumbly voice. "He hasn't a friend in the world."

"That's funny," replied Peter, pulling his whiskers thoughtfully. "What's the matter with the people of the Great Woods?"

"Nothing the matter with us," growled Buster. "The matter is all with Glutton."

"Oh, I don't know," returned Peter. "It may be you don't owe Glutton anything, Buster, but it seems to me that some others up there in the Great Woods owe him a great deal."

Buster turned and stared at Peter very hard. "Peter," said he slowly, "you are the first one I ever knew who could find a good word to say for that ugly robber of honest folks."

"Perhaps no one ever has tried to find a good thing to say," retorted Peter. "I never have found anyone yet who doesn't do some good for others once in a while, even Reddy Fox. Now you are you people who live in the Great Woods most afraid of?"

"Hunters and trappers," replied Buster promptly.

"Then it seems of me that anyone who can and does get the best of them and actually drives one of them away is doing something good, very good, indeed, for the rest of you. Glutton may be a robber and may kill the smaller people when he can catch them, but when he pulls up all the traps so well hidden that no one else can find them and leaves them in plain sight so that no one will get caught, it seems to me that he has done a splendid thing for his neighbors and that they have no right to say that he is all bad. Just think of how many lives might have been lost in those dreadful traps but for him."

"That's so," grumbled Buster Bear, scratching his head thoughtfully. "I never thought of that."

DESSERT FOR HOT DAYS

WITH gelatin in so many attractive forms—flavored, plain acidulated and powdered—one may have a different dessert for every hot day, without repeating. Such desserts are not only refreshing to look upon, but are appetizing and sufficiently satisfying after a hearty meal. The following is an old-time recipe, but is always enjoyed:

Snow Pudding.

Soak one and one-fourth tablespoons of plain gelatin in one-fourth cupful of water fifteen minutes, then add one cupful of boiling water and stir until well dissolved; add one cupful of sugar, one-fourth cupful of lemon juice and stir until the sugar is dissolved, then strain into a large bowl. Beat the whites of three eggs until stiff and add to the gelatin mixture when it begins to stiffen—beat until very light.

Collegiate Champ

Keith Gledhill of Stanford university receiving the intercollegiate lawn tennis trophy from Frank A. Cabeen, chairman of the tournament committee, after the matches at Merion Cricket club, Philadelphia.

When stiff enough to mold, pour into a mold that has been rinsed in cold water. Prepare a boiled custard, using the egg yolks, four tablespoonfuls of sugar, one-half teaspoonfuls of salt, and a pint of hot milk. Cook until the spoon is coated, add flavoring and chill. Pour round the pudding when serving.

Grape Ice Cream.

Scald one quart of thin cream, add one and one-half cupfuls of sugar, a pint of grape juice—if sweet lessen the sugar—add the juice of half a lemon and freeze as usual.

Whipped Fruit Jelly.

Take a package of any flavor of gelatin—lemon is good—add a pint of boiling water and mix well. When cool and before it sets beat with an egg beater. Beat the white of an egg until stiff, add one-half cupful of powdered sugar and add to the jelly with two bananas, one orange and one-half cupful of fresh strawberries, all cut into small pieces. Make a boiled custard with the egg yolk, two tablespoonfuls of sugar and one and one-fourth cupfuls of milk. Mold the jelly and serve unmolded with the custard for a sauce.

Wooden Bead Bag

This good looking bag in envelope style is woven of large wooden, brightly colored beads in red, white and blue, blending with the colors used in the crocheted bands on the blouse and with color of the hat. It is a clever accessory for use with any sports garb.

The Old Gardener Says:

WOWEN who work in their own gardens and find the ordinary steel rake heavy and cumbersome will be delighted with bamboo rakes, which come from Japan and are very cheap. Metal rakes now being made in this country have the same pattern and are almost as light. These rakes are especially useful when cleaning up leaves and grass clippings, but can be used also in garden work of a light nature. They can be handled in much the same way as a broom, and with much less effort than is required to manipulate rakes of the old-fashioned type. These rakes do not look very strong, but will stand a remarkable amount of hard service. Naturally the metal rakes are somewhat more durable than the Japanese product, but the latter is cheap and surprisingly satisfactory.

Longest American Tunnel

The Cascade railroad tunnel, longest on the American continent, is 7.79 miles in length. It was built through solid granite, and is lined throughout with concrete. The tunnel is straight as a rifle bore, but the eastern portal is 634 feet higher than the western. This gives a continual flow of fresh air through the tube. Work was commenced December 23, 1925, and the tunnel was completed ready for track laying December 25, 1928.

The Sealed Trunk

He glanced at the clock across the lobby. It was just after nine. "The place will be locked up, all right, but there'll be a watchman at the door who'll let us in. That makes it all the better because we'll have the place to ourselves."

She looked so pitiful as she thanked him that it was hard to refrain from kissing her then and there. He did it, however, and, guessing from the way she huddled down in the corner of the seat in the taxicab which conveyed them down town that she didn't want to be made love to, he went on refraining even from trying to get possession of one of her hands.

The watchman was an old friend of Martin's and he let them in without comment, though not without a good deal of visible curiosity. They climbed the stairs in silence. He led the way into the floor, pulled a chain that flooded the room with a glare of cold white light, and after not more than two minutes' search, pulled out a manila folder that had the name "Walter Whitehouse McFarland" written across the face of it. He laid it on the table, moved up a chair for her, and was on the point of withdrawing to leave her to herself when she reached out a hand and drew him back to her. "I want you to read it, too," she said. "Do you mind, Martin?"

He didn't wonder when the brutal headlines above these old newspaper cuttings assailed his eyes that to the girl the thing had been a nightmare. What he marveled at was her courage in confronting it now and being willing to share it with him. He experienced a strange jumble of emotions during the silent hour that it took them to read all the contents of that file.

One of the earliest to assail him, and one of the most disconcerting, was a momentary disgust for his own profession. Here was the material that they had gathered to make up the life story of a man; a man who had lived to be fifty years old and had devoted those years, with an extraordinary singleness of mind, to useful service. And yet, except for a few minor clippings, a casual stickler here or there regarding papers that he'd read before learned societies, studies of chemical processes, modest announcements of discoveries, the whole content of the file concerned itself with what might or might not have happened during a ride on the train from Chicago to California; whether or not an acquaintance he had formed with a girl in an attempt to relieve her apparent distress had resulted in a sexual intimacy. And, at that, the verdict of the jury had been that it had not so resulted. Yet the doubt that remained in the public mind after the verdict of the jury had been brought in had been enough to ruin the man's career, to force his resignation from the university, to drive him into hiding for the last four years of his broken life.

The newspapers had done it and they had done it without transgressing their own code. The story of a college professor indicted and brought to trial under the Mann act was legitimately entitled according to current standards to just such headlines and pictures and editorial comment as this story had received. It made Martin feel pretty sick.

Well, there was no help for anybody in thinking thoughts like that. They were diverted by a picture included in one of the clippings of the girl then called Clara Bowman, who had been the principal witness of the trial. She was unmistakably Claire, despite the dark hair that was piled high on top of her head.

"Rhoda," he asked, "how did you know who she was? How did you know what she was saying to Forster? We couldn't hear a sound through the glass."

A smile flickered across her face, the first he'd seen there in a long while. "I forgot," she explained. "It seemed like listening to me. I can read lips, you see. Martin dear, don't you remember long ago at the Alhambra, how I saw you ask me if I didn't want to be rescued? And you asked me afterward how I knew the exact words you said, and I laughed and told you it was telepathy? I lost some of it tonight, of course, when they turned their faces away. But whenever I could see their faces I could hear just as well as if I'd been in the room."

He sat silent for a while after that, not exactly thinking, but enjoying the savor of the term of endearment she had unconsciously used. When his mind got back on the rails he took up the kink in Forster's explanation, which he had been conscious of not straightening out at the time Forster made it.

What the old man had said about the contract seemed straight enough, and squared with the facts as Martin knew them. If Rhoda's father had died, as apparently he had, before completing his discovery, it was obvious that the contract was of no value. Claire, though, apparently thought it was valuable. There seemed to be no doubt that it was the thing she'd been trying all along to steal. It wasn't incredible that if Forster knew she'd failed to get it (since he knew in whose hands it actually was) he might have offered her a hundred thousand dollars for it in pure malice, as he said. But Forster did think that it was Claire who'd stolen Rhoda's trunk, and unless Rhoda's observation had been at fault, he had held his breath get some money. That was what he should have done in the first place.

They didn't precisely quarrel over this, though she insisted on walking home and had her way.

He knew she didn't mean to be unfriendly. She even slipped her hand within his arm as they walked along, and left it there. But, even so, she felt a million miles away. They tried to talk but gave it up, and by the time they'd got to the street door of the studio building, the silence between had become a palpable oppressive thing.

She asked him now, in a strictly neutral voice, whether he was coming in.

"I'll go up with you to your own door, anyhow," he said, and they climbed the two long flights of stairs side by side without another word.

There was a light shining through the crack under the studio door and they could hear Babe in there talking to somebody. But Rhoda had her key in her hand and she thrust it into the lock and swung the door open without even a momentary pause for a private farewell on the landing. Martin stepped aside. He wouldn't go in.

But in the instant that Rhoda pushed open the door the man to whom Babe had been talking spoke, and at the sound of his voice Rhoda stopped as if she'd been suddenly frozen. The man's voice broke off. Babe, who sat where she could see through the doorway, said, "Here they are," and Rhoda came to life again in a surprising way. She flung herself upon Martin like a child at the sight of an ogre. Martin heard her say in a broken voice, "It's Uncle William! Martin, don't—don't let him—"

Martin's arms came around her and pulled her closer still, and as he gazed over her head at Babe's astounded face, he whispered to Rhoda, "Don't you worry, darling. He can't do anything to you now. You're engaged to me."

CHAPTER XIV
What Was in the Trunk
Rhoda's sob of assent to this perhaps unique proposal of marriage marked the end of her moment of panic. She walked into the room steadily enough, though still in the embrace of Martin's right arm, and under the now startled gaze of their rather unaccountable visitor. How he'd managed to find her despite Forster's refusal this afternoon to tell him where she lived wasn't so puzzling as the consciousness that she'd seen him somewhere, without knowing who he was, only a little while ago. Even this minor bewilderment was not what kept her rooted to the rug while Babe was stammering out a superfluous introduction (Babe's scrambled condition

Scientists Baffled by Great Mystery of Life?
"What is your life?" asks St. James. He answers it thus: "It is even a vapor that appeareth for a little time and then vanisheth away." The life spoken of here is the individual existence, the mortal life, and not the general life, the life principle. Nevertheless, the definition is interesting and suggestive.
"Life, the shadow of death," so Swinburne says, but then he was a poet. Another poet sings of life as "a blunder and a shame." One of the ancients who held that there was no difference between life and death was asked why, in that case, he did not die. "Because," he replied, "it does make no difference." The final verse of the last Psalm reads: "Let every thing that hath breath praise the Lord." This seems to identify life with breath, which surely is a "vapor," to use the word of St. James. Our

Peculiar Eyeglass
There is an eyeglass worn in direct contact with the eyeball, but it is worn only to relieve a condition known as keratoconus, a conical deformity of the cornea. It is worn with extreme difficulty and is not practical for correction of ordinary errors of refraction.

Powerful Snake
The bite of a boa constrictor is not poisonous. The danger of this snake lies, as its name suggests, in its power to wrap itself around its victim and strangle him to death.

Days of Rest and Joy
Mary E. Hazeltine in her book, "Anniversaries and Holidays," says: "The calendar includes 77 holidays, special days, seasonal festivals and holidays, without counting the feast days of the saints or constitution and statehood days, which in some countries and states are observed as holidays; the former are counted with the names of persons, of whom there are 892; the latter with events, of which there are 229; a total of 1,198 calendar entries, an average of three and a half for every day."

was due, of course, to what she'd seen through the doorway) and he, pompous yet a little embarrassed, stood waiting, apparently, for a welcome appropriate to long-lost uncles. The really astonishing thing was that he wasn't an ogre at all. He wasn't much taller than Martin, and he had perfectly normal, human-looking eyes and teeth. Why had she ever been afraid of him?

It wasn't until she heard Martin murmur again, "It's all right, darling," that she released herself from his arm, said, "How do you do, Uncle William," and went up and shook hands with him. She thought he expected to be kissed but she couldn't manage that.

He said, heavily, "How do you do, my dear, I'm very glad to have found you at last. I thought this afternoon that I must expect a long search, but this evening just after dinner I saw you in the lobby of the Worcester hotel and heard this young man call you Rhoda. There was enough of your mother's look about you so that I called up the telephone number I had heard you give him . . . (Yes, that was who it was, of course. The man who'd been looking at the telephone directory when she and Martin were calling up Babe to tell her they were all right.) "So I took the liberty of coming here and waiting for you, late as it was. I felt it was important that I see you at once."

"I'm glad you did," Rhoda told him, not in the manner in which one says something polite but as if she really meant it. She dimly remembered something about him and thought she had an idea. "You're a lawyer, aren't you?" she asked.

He seemed a little surprised at the question but answered stiffly, "Yes, that is my profession."

"Well then," said Rhoda, "you're just the person we want. You see, Martin and I . . ." She broke off there to remedy an omission by introducing the two men in due form. After they'd shaken hands, a strictly non-committal ceremony on both sides, Rhoda went on. "You see, Martin and I have just found out what really happened to my father—before his trial. I mean—that made him leave the university."

Uncle William's reception of this statement was not encouraging. He began to look a little more like the ogre Rhoda remembered. "That is not a matter for discussion," he boomed. "Certainly not now."

But Rhoda was no longer a little girl of twelve. "It's got to be discussed," she contradicted him crisply, "and now is the best time to do it. Martin's a reporter but he says the paper can't print the true story, even though we know it's true, unless we have Mr. Forster indicted."

"Forster indicted!" Uncle William exploded. "C. J. Forster? Perfect nonsense! What has Forster to do with it?"

"It won't seem so much like nonsense," Rhoda said, "when you know what he's got to with it. Tell him, Martin."

Uncle William's attitude and gesture showed that he meant to protest, but before he could speak Martin cut in.

"Forster admitted to Rhoda and me this evening that the whole case against her father was a frame-up. The woman was planted on the train and instructed to pretend she'd lost her ticket in order to trick Professor McFarland into paying her fare. He fell for the trick but he didn't fall for her. She admits that herself. But she went ahead, under instructions, and perjured herself on the stand. Forster's motive was to force Professor McFarland's resignation from the university so that he'd come to work for him, which is what happened. Forster never paid the woman the money he promised her. And it was her quarrel with him that enabled us to find out about it. That's the bones of the story. It would take an hour to give you all the details, but we've got them and we'll furnish you with them whenever you like—now or later."

Rhoda's gaze from the time Martin had begun speaking had been fixed upon her uncle's face. She'd seen him wilt; she'd have said he actually sagged and spread a little, like a partly deflated balloon tire. But before her lover had finished speaking he managed somehow to pump himself up again.

He said now, in his booming voice, "I don't want the details at this or at any time. There's no possible good to be gained by raking up that old story. And it could do harm in more ways than one. The scandal hurt the university at the time. It's forgotten now, and president of the board of trustees, which I happen to be, I should be unwilling to see it revived."

"Revived!" Rhoda blazed at him. "We aren't going to revive it; we're going to kill it. We're going to prove that it wasn't true."

"You're going to attempt to prove that it wasn't true," Uncle William answered, "and that, my dear child, is a very difficult thing. Your father is dead. Technically there is no stain on his character, since the jury acquitted him. Any attempt to go beyond that, even if there were no other aspects of the affair to be considered, would be most unwise."

Rhoda, turning desperately away from him, saw a harbor and went to it, in Babe's arms. She heard what William Royce went on saying, but with no other emotion than a passionate wish that he would stop talking.

"Your father wrote to me shortly before his death requesting me to take care of you and look after your interests. I couldn't find you at that time. The management of the hotel where you had lived informed me that you had gone to live with friends in Denver. I assumed you were in good hands and there seemed to be nothing more for me to do in the matter until I saw recently in a San Francisco paper an advertisement for your whereabouts. Seeing that, I came to the conclusion that a certain contract which your father had enclosed with his letter might have a value for you, and that you ought to be found."

"Good lord!" Martin exclaimed. "Do you mean to say you've got the contract that everybody has been trying to steal? Did you see Forster this afternoon and tell him you had it?"

"I refer," said Uncle William majestically, "to a contract which my late brother-in-law entered into with C. J. Forster. I was speaking to my niece, I cannot see that it concerns you in any way."

"Everything that concerns Rhoda concerns me," Martin told him. "She and I are engaged to be married."

"Humph!" snorted Uncle William. He was a perfectly terrible person. Martin didn't wonder that poor Rhoda had changed her name and hidden herself away from him like a frightened little rabbit. Martin could see him now majestically pausing before he hurled a thunderbolt.

"If," he said, "your matrimonial intentions toward my niece are in any way predicated upon your knowledge of the existence of that contract, I think it only right to tell you that it is of small value and doubtful validity."

"That's what Forster told us this evening," Martin observed. "He said he had told you that it wasn't worth a nickel."

"I'll have no more of this impertinence," Uncle William roared. "You can't marry my niece. She's still a minor, and I shall never consent . . ."

"Look here," Martin interrupted him, "we don't like each other at all, but there's no good in our quarreling unless we have something to quarrel about. And unless you're Rhoda's legal guardian I can't see that we have. Are you?"

"I'm her natural guardian," said Uncle William.

"Not her legal one, then," Martin observed. But as he turned to Rhoda he saw a panic awake once more in her eyes. "We won't have any more of this tonight," he went on. "Rhoda's had a terrible day, and she's come clear to the end of it. I'm going to ask Babe to put her to bed at once. I'll go back with you to your hotel and put you abreast of the situation."

This was a Napoleonic move. Babe came into action instantly. Before he finished speaking she was leading Rhoda toward the little stairway that went up to the loft where their bedrooms were.

Martin followed along to the foot of the stairs. "She's not to get up in the morning," he told Babe as if he were a doctor giving a nurse instructions about an unconscious patient, "—at least not until late. I'll come around some time after ten with the documents and we'll go down to the baggage master and get her trunk."

Then, ceasing to treat Rhoda as if she were unconscious, he kissed her and she heard him murmur, his lips so close to her ear that it tickled, "Don't you worry, darling. The hunch is coming along all right. You leave Uncle William to me."

PLEA FOR CHILDREN OF "NEGLECTED" AGE

American mothers are again under attack for neglecting their children. Almost all of them, it develops, are guilty, and Dr. Frank Howard Richardson of the American College of Physicians, is leading the assault against them. They take good care of their children up to the age of twelve or eighteen months, he says, and then leave the little tots to their own devices until about the time they enter school.

"Along toward the end of the first year and a half, children enter a period which has come to be known as the 'neglected age,'" he writes in the Woman's Home Companion. "Parents should remember that care and oversight must be continued to keep the child from drifting into a condition called, for lack of a more descriptive title, malnutrition. While the lack of proper food is but one of the causes of malnutrition, nevertheless, food is frequently at fault in one way or another."

"Fortunate is the child who passes through the pre-school age without the development of some one of the faults and vices of posture that we see so commonly even among little children. The most marked of these is the 'fatigue posture.' This is characterized by the prominent shoulder blades, flat chest, protuberant abdomen, knock-knees and flat feet, together with the tired expression of the face, that together are almost sufficient to justify the diagnosis of malnutrition without going any farther."

It is an unfortunate fact, however, that while it is almost criminal to try to cure this fatigue posture before straightening out the malnutrition that brought it about, the faulty posture frequently remains even when the child's weight has come up to or beyond that expected for his age and height. In such instances a definite crusade is necessary if the child is to regain the correct posture. The old way to do this was to institute formal exercises that were in themselves an incitement to the fatigue posture through the weariness that accompanied them. The modern idea is that exercise, to be effective for permanent improvement, must be enjoyed.

Place in Formal Parade
Organizations in a parade are arranged according to the dates of their establishment, the oldest being placed in front. For instance, first, the Grand army; second, the Loyal Legion; third, Spanish War Veterans; fourth, Veterans of Foreign Wars; fifth, Military Order of Foreign Wars; sixth, American Legion; seventh, Military Order of the World War, and eighth, Disabled American Veterans. However, men in the regular service of the United States army, navy and marine corps parade first. Other organizations would be placed in the parade among the organizations listed according to the date of their establishment.

HERE, within an easy drive from your home is a foreign land—Canada, with its historical and romantic background . . . with its fascinating old world charm. And yet Canada is every bit as progressive as our own United States. You'll enjoy her good roads, her modern hotels, her fine restaurants, her comfortable tourist camps, her smart shops which display the finest merchandise from world-wide markets of the British Empire.

Once it was difficult to reach Canada. Not so today! Detroit and the Border Cities of Canada are joined by a broad, light, cool and airy boulevard—the magnificent new $25,000,000 Detroit-Windsor Tunnel, first international automobile subway in the world. Always open—no delays.

Visit Canada this week-end. Only 3 minutes from downtown Detroit via Tunnel.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Robert F. Burnett and May Burnett, his wife, of Flint, Michigan, to Louie Matuszak and Grace Matuszak, of Tawas City, Michigan, dated the eleventh day of September, A. D. 1924, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the County of Iosco and State of Michigan, on the eighteenth day of September, A. D. 1924, in volume Twenty-two of mortgages on page 464, which said mortgage was duly assigned by said Louie Matuszak and Grace Matuszak, to John A. Stewart, on the Twenty-fifth day of March, A. D. 1931, said assignment being recorded on the Twenty-sixth day of March, A. D. 1931 in Liber two of assignments on page 352 in the office of the Register of Deeds for the County of Iosco, and said mortgage was duly assigned on the Twenty-fifth day of March, A. D. 1931, by said John A. Stewart to Grace Matuszak, which assignment was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for Iosco County in Liber two of assignments on page 353, on which said mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice, for principal interest and taxes paid, the sum of Two Thousand Two Hundred Thirty and 80/100 Dollars ($2230.80), and an Attorney fee as provided for by law, and no suit or proceedings at law having been instituted to recover the moneys secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Notice is Hereby Given, that by virtue of power of sale contained in said mortgage, and the statute in such case made and provided, on Saturday, the 15th day of August, A. D. 1931, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, the undersigned will, in the city of Tawas City, that being the place where the Circuit Court for the County of Iosco is held, sell at Public Auction to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount so due as aforesaid on said mortgage with six per cent interest and all legal costs together with said Attorney fee, to-wit: All that part of the Northwest quarter (¼) of Section Nineteen, Township Twenty-two North, Range Eight East, lying southwest of highway known as East Town road and located in Baldwin township, Iosco County Michigan.
