Emil E. Kasischke Ordained Into Ministry Sunday

Emil E. Kasischke, son of Mrs. Emil Kasischke of this city, was ordained into the Lutheran ministry at the service held last Sunday morning in the Emanuel Lutheran church here. The event marked the culmination of eleven years of study in preparation for the pastorate. Rev. W. C. Voss, pastor of the local church, performed the ceremony, and was assisted by Rev. Henry Wojahn of Waukesha, Wisconsin.

Rev. Kasischke was born in Tawas City and attended the Emanuel Lutheran school here. In 1920 he entered the Michigan Lutheran Seminary at Saginaw, and upon the completion of four years of study there he enrolled in Northwestern College at Watertown, Wisconsin. From the latter institution he secured his Bachelor of Arts degree upon graduating in 1928. In the fall of the same year he entered the Lutheran Theological Seminary at Wauwatosa, Wisconsin. The following year the seminary was removed to its new location at Thiensville, Wisconsin, where he completed his last two terms before graduating on June 5 of this year.

Rev. Kasischke has accepted the position of pastor of the Lutheran churches in Mayville; Silverwood and Greenwood, Michigan, located in the Thumb. The best wishes of his many friends in this vicinity for a successful career go with him when he assumes his charge on August 23 and 30.

FINE VARIETY PROGRAM IN DOUBLE FEATURE AT STATE

In the double feature at the State Theatre next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, a fine variety of program will be shown. "The Vice Squad" and "Finn and Hattie" are the pictures offered these evenings. In "The Vice Squad," Paramount plunges to the heart of the underworld situation in dialog and action. Conditions as they exist in many cities, today as bared by the public press are crystallized and held up to popular scrutiny in this fast-moving and absorbing tale from the typewriter of Oliver H. P. Garret, the former New York reporter who wrote "Street of Chance" and "For the Defense." Paul Lukas, Kay Francis and Helen Johnson have the leading roles in the picture.

A comedy cast of adults and juveniles, known wherever motion pictures are shown, was assembled by Paramount for "Finn and Hattie," the Donald Ogden Stewart comedy. The humorous Haddock adventures has that rubber-kneed comedian who won first screen honors in "Only Saps Work," Leon Errol, in the leading comic role. ZaSu Pitts, sardonic, mournful-eyed feminine fun-maker, is Mrs. Haddock to the life. Mitzi Green, a star in her own right at nine years of age, is seen with Jackie Searl as the Haddock hooligans. Made for fun only, is "Finn and Hattie."

OLD TIMERS WIN IN BATTLE WITH LOCALS

What started out as a farce last Sunday for the Tawas City nine turned out to be nothing less than tragedy. The old-time ball players of the city gave the locals a real surprise when they turned the tables after getting off to a bad start and won the game by a 5-4 score.

Doc Smith and A. Krumm formed the battery for the old-timers, while the different fielding positions were covered by George Hosbach, Wilfred Swartz, E. R. Burtzloff, Roy DePoty, Carl Libka, Jack Swartz, Louis Libka, Martin Zollweg, Wm. Hatton, Scotty McDonald, Louis Klisch, Ernest Moeller. They worked together in surprisingly smooth style and took great delight in slipping one over on the locals, who were thereby made the laughing-stock of the town—for several days at least. Long faces can still be seen on about ten members of the younger generation who thought they could play baseball.

Score by Innings— R H E
Locals 3 0 1 0 0 0 0 0—4 14 0
Summary: Double plays—Cholger to W. Kasischke, W. Kasischke to Bingham, C. Libka to Krumm to W. Swartz to Krumm to C. Libka. Hits—off Smith, 14 in 9 innings; off Brown 7 in 9 innings. Struck out—by Smith, 11; by Brown, 9. Bases on balls—off Smith 1, off Brown 7. Hit by pitched ball—by Brown, C. Libka. Left on bases—Old Timers 5, Locals 5. Umpires—Fred Luedtke and Leo Hosbach!

Tawas City broke out with a flare of determination to annex a decisive 8-2 victory over National City in a twilight game Tuesday.

Bingham, a new member on the locals' pitching staff, showed up in excellent style. A sprained ankle received in the first inning forced him to retire from the game after the fourth frame in favor of Boulder, after having allowed but two hits and striking out nine. Boulder finished the game in slick form, allowing but one hit during the remaining five innings. Errors raised havoc with the three pitchers used by National City to stay the locals' bats.

RESULTS OF COUNTY FREE CHEST CLINIC

Twenty persons attended the free chest clinic which was held in the Isoco county court house July 31. As a result of the examinations made by Dr. E. R. Van der Slice, Michigan Tuberculosis Association chest specialist, five cases of tuberculosis were reported, four of them apparently inactive at the present time.

Eight people were listed as observation cases, and advised to take steps to prevent development of the disease. Seven of the 20 examined were declared free of indications of tuberculosis, but three cases of heart disease and four cases of diseased tonsils were revealed in the tests.

The clinic was made possible by an appropriation from the county supervisors and funds of the Michigan Tuberculosis Association, secured in the 1930 Christmas seal sale. Miss Myrtle Cowgill, local Children's Fund nurse, was in charge of the clinic.

Norman Sibley Makes Record In 4-H Club Work

Norman O. Sibley, Whittemore, R. 2, Michigan, holds a record which stands unchallenged by the many thousands of 4-H boys who represent our 4-H State Club work.

In 1925-26 Norman finished his first year's work under the direction of Romanzo B. Hall. He took first place in the state in this year's work, and was awarded two years free training at Michigan State College, East Lansing. Since that time he has won four honorary state championships under the leadership of Samuel H. George.

1928-29 he finished his second year's work with an honorary state championship; in 1929-30 he again took an honorary state championship in third year work, and this last season of 1930-31 he walked off with an honorary state championship in both fourth and fifth years' work.

The Michigan State College, to be fair to all 4-H members, awards but one scholarship to each 4-H member. If this rule was not in effect, Norman Sibley would at this time have five such scholarships.

An honorary state championship is a higher place of achievement in 4-H work than a regular state championship, as its name (honorary) signifies. In the case of an honorary state championship, the second best work takes the state championship with which the two years' scholarship is given.

Norman Sibley has finished five years of 4-H handicraft work, and has had the best work in the state of Michigan in every year's work that he has taken. He will represent Michigan State 4-H Handicraft Work in the nation-wide International Harvester Company contest this fall.

CLARA BOW LEAVES "IT" FAME FOR DRAMA HONOR

With the filming of "Kick In," the startling Willard Mack stage play, Paramount picture executives declare they have produced the outstanding story of Clara Bow's sparkling screen career.

Dissimilar from all Bow starring vehicles of the past, "Kick In" presents the red-headed favorite in a sheer dramatic role. In no part is the story relieved by those touches of farce or comedy which have characterized Clara Bow's most famous productions, "No Limit," "Her Wedding Night," "It," and other outstanding successes.

"Kick In," made under the direction of Hollywood's outstanding dramatic director, Richard Wallace, the man who directed Ruth Chatterton in "The Right to Love," is the deeply emotional story of a girl who fights the law, the temptations of lawlessness, the threat of the underworld for love of her man. As the wife of an ex-convict, Clara Bow portrays a character as terribly real as life itself.

Regis Toomey, the young stage star of "Alibi," has the leading male role. Wynne Gibson, one of Paramount's bright new personalities, is also in the cast, with Donald Crisp, Paul Hurst and Juliette Compton.

In "Kick In," every opportunity has been given Clara Bow to display the dramatic talents about which Hollywood's leading directors have been marvelling for years.

ALFRED ZINK ELECTROCUTED MONDAY NOON

Alfred Zink, 28 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Zink, was instantly killed Monday noon by electrocution when he pushed the button on a motor starting switch box at the Trudell Fisheries building. A workman at the fishery had called for someone to start the motor which was attached to the ice crusher. Alfred, standing near by, stepped to the box and pushed the switch button.

The switch which caused the accident is in a 110 volt circuit which is used for starting a 440 volt motor located on the second floor of the building. The switch is on the wall of the lower story. The circuit is carried in an iron conduit with iron switch box attached. Both conduit and box are heavily coated inside and out with insulation. Shortly after the accident, the circuit was tested and found to be functioning properly. Alfred had operated the switch several times shortly before the accident.

Alfred Zink was born December 11, 1902, at Tawas City. He lived in this city until 1924, when he removed to Bay City with his parents. In 1926 he entered the employment of the Grand Trunk railroad as fireman and located at Durand. In 1930 he returned to Tawas City. This spring he and his brother, Arthur, located on a farm in Baldwin township near Miners' corners.

He is survived by the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Zink, of Bay City, one brother, Arthur Zink of this place, two sisters, Mrs. Frank Bammel and Miss Ruth Zink of Bay City, and his fiancée, Miss Aline Potter of Durand.

The funeral services were held Thursday afternoon from the Zion Lutheran church. Rev. F. A. Sievert officiated. Fellow firemen from the Grand Trunk railroad acted as pall bearers.

Friends of the Zink family deeply sympathize with them in their bereavement.

The boys and girls cordially invite the public to attend their program and exhibit next Sunday afternoon.

NOVEL COSTUME DESIGNED FOR JOAN CRAWFORD

Gilbert Adrian, who designs Joan Crawford's screen costumes, must sit up nights thinking of new ways to suddenly abbreviate them in daring dancing scenes.

In "Our Dancing Daughters" Joan's evening gown was made of silver fringe, the lower portion of which dropped off as she spun around in a wild dance. In "Our Modern Maidens" a similar effect was obtained with a fur-trimmed creation.

"Our Blushing Brides" brought forth a costume that became suddenly diaphanous during her dance number, and in "Dance, Fools, Dance" Joan wore a mirrored costume that lost its skirt as the jazz saxophones blared the mad rhythm.

New in "Laughing Sinners," her vehicle, playing at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, Wednesday and Thursday, August 19 and 20, Joan dances in a farmer's overall outfit that loses its legs, leaving America's Dancing Daughter as you like to see her.

Harry Beaumont directed the new Crawford film, which is based on the Kenyon Nicholson stage hit, "The Torch Song." Neil Hamilton and Clark Gable share the leading man honors and the cast includes Marjorie Rameau, Guy Kibbee, Cliff Edwards, Roscoe Karns, Gertrude Short, George Cooper, George F. Marion and Bert Woodruff.

Great Airport Over London Is Suggested

Some bold persons have proposed that an immense airport be built in London over the Kings Cross station and vicinity, supported on pillars in the form of warehouses and office buildings. Here is a model of the airport that is being exhibited.

Beautiful Spy Dying in Madhouse

"Blond Lady of Antwerp" Prisoner in Asylum.

Berlin.—Formerly one of the cleverest and most beautiful spies the world has ever seen, a haggard, wild-eyed woman, whose name is given as Bertha Heinrich, lies in the great asylum for the insane at Wittenau, near here, awaiting her rapidly approaching end.

An entry in the books of the institution indicates that she was a hopeless drug addict, when, more than two years ago, she was first admitted. But behind that simple entry lies the story of one of the most amazing personalities of the war years.

Known as the "Blond Lady of Antwerp," she was one of Germany's most successful spies, and betrayed countless allied secret service men.

Caused Many Deaths.

Her victims, however, were by no means confined to that field, for one of her duties was the appointment of hundreds of German agents, and these, without being in the least aware of the fact, were in turn spied on by members of a special corps which she had organized.

It has been averred that in this way she was responsible for the shooting of a number of spies in the pay of Germany who were suspected of playing their paymasters false.

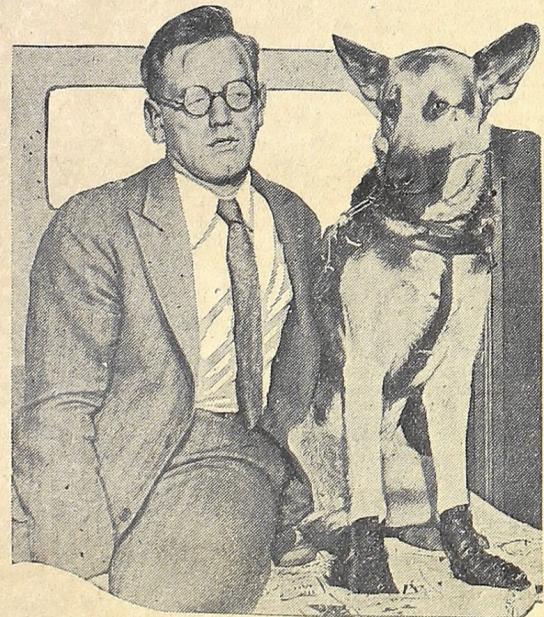

At the height of her power she was a tall, slim, graceful creature, possessing an irresistible allure. In a

Is Only a Citizen When He Quits Car

Albany.—A trolley conductor ceases to be a conductor when he leaves the trolley, the Court of Appeals has ruled.

The case was that of John Mack, who had sued the Brooklyn City Railroad company because one of the concern's conductors had hit him. The company maintained that the conductor had left the car when he smote John and that, ergo, he was no longer their agent—but a private citizen. And the company won.

"Eyes" of the Blind Now Wears Boots

Reginald D. White, blind war veteran, and his faithful German police dog, Wicker. White has rewarded his "eyes" as he calls him, with four boots for his blistered feet that he may guide his master about San Francisco streets on his daily duties. Wicker made his wants known to his charge by putting a hot blistered foot in the hand of White the other day when the mercury soared to nearly the hundred mark.

given her were employed to the full.

And in almost every instance where the stern cross-examination of a military court would have been resisted, the skill of this modern Dilliah was successful, for men stammered out to her their secrets against the promptings of their training and their judgment.

Her daring, too, was as great as her personal fascination. Time and again she penetrated to points behind the French line.

It was after the war that Nemesis overtook this "woman with the smile of a Gioconda and a heart of the hardest rock," as she has been called. Haunted by the ghosts of dead men—men betrayed by her hand and brain—she sought temporary forgetfulness in drugs. But the phantoms remained, and before long the "Blond Lady," now a hopeless drug addict, had lost everything, beauty, charm, reason itself—everything in fact except the insatiable craving for cocaine.

Oil Turns $500 Into Million for Girls

"Worthless" Land Left by Father Brings Fortune.

San Francisco.—Old Dame Fortune has her sentimental moments.

She bestowed a $500,000 dowry on a bride of less than two months, it has developed here—and just to keep things even, poured another half million into the lap of a married sister.

The two lucky women are Mrs. Louise W. Dessauer, who became the wife of a local stock broker recently, and Mrs. Cora Nathan Michaels, both of this city.

Ten years ago upon the death of their father, Louis D. Nathan, a promoter, they inherited an estate considered virtually worthless. It was a quarter interest in 160 acres of bleak land in a corner of Kings county, appraised at $500.

The same legacy is now valued at $1,000,000.

The estimate was made in the court of Superior Judge Thomas F. Graham when W. D. Kelley, trust officer for the Wells Fargo Bank and Union Trust company, presented an accounting of the Nathan estate.

The property is located in the Kettelman Hills oil district, a development barely dreamed of in Nathan's day.

Can Read 5 Miles Away by Novel Searchlight

London.—There is news of the invention of an entirely novel searchlight which throws a beam of light so intense that a newspaper can be read by it at night at a distance of five miles.

The searchlight is the invention of W. H. Pennow, and one of its most astonishing features is that it is able to keep the lamp's rays in a narrow pencil of light. The beam of ordinary searchlights diverge so much that even when lamps of enormous candle power are used their ranges are comparatively short. The Pennow beam is focused much more sharply; at a mile it produces a spot of light only twelve feet in diameter. The searchlight has been designed chiefly to help aviators in night flying, but it has many other uses.

Nail Swallowed by Man 28 Years Ago Removed

Elmer, N. J.—Severe pains in his chest recently startled Edward Snyder, Pennsylvania railroad track foreman living here. Mr. Snyder recalled that twenty-eight ago, when making tomato crates, he had swallowed a nail and so told his doctor.

The nail, now quite rusty, was located by surgeons and removed in a delicate operation at the Episcopal hospital, Philadelphia. They said it must have penetrated the intestinal wall at some point and gradually worked its way upward through Snyder's body until it lodged between his lungs and ribs.

Snyder is recuperating at his home here.

Loss of Collar Button Causes Man's Breakdown

Council Bluffs, Iowa.—Mislaid, borrowed or stolen were just words in the life of Edwin T. Waterman. He was a careful man.

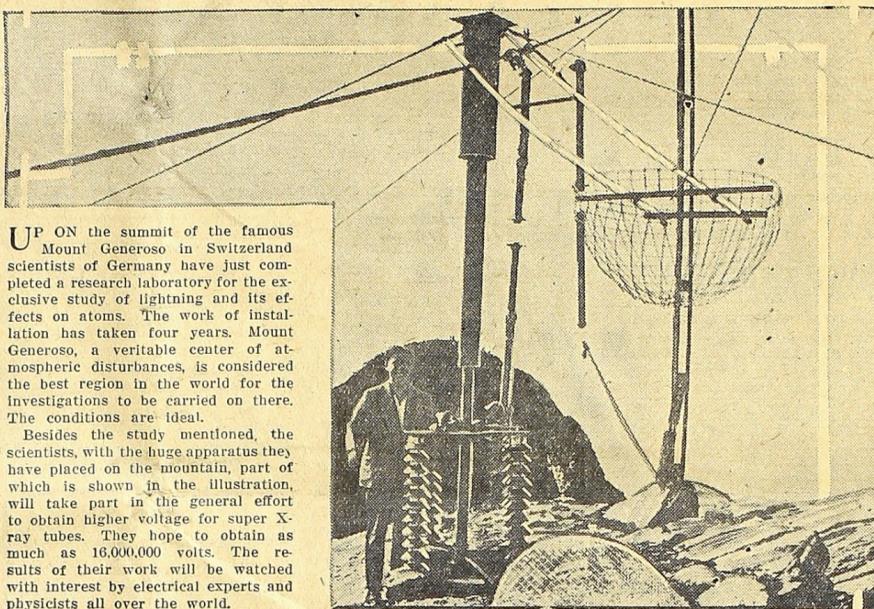

He is the proud proprietor of an umbrella purchased 51 years ago. And he has a prize antique in a shoe brush which has done daily duty for 63 years.

But he is suffering a nervous breakdown because he couldn't find a collar button he purchased recently.

GOOD MIXER

"MY DAUGHTER got a lot out of her college course," a middle aged mother told me the other day, "but she's not such a good mixer as I am even if I never did go to college."

This was rather surprising to hear, as I knew that the daughter under discussion had been a leader among her classmates and was at the time chairman of the reception committee for graduation week. No one could fairly say that such a girl was not a "good mixer." But the mother went on.

"In some ways she is a fine cook and she learned a lot about planning meals and fixing up tasty dishes that don't cost much, but they have some of those new electric mixers in the cooking school kitchen and the girls have just got into the habit of using them. I'm old fashioned and I still think that a cake that is mixed regularly with a big wooden spoon tastes a lot better and bakes better than one that is mixed by electricity and I know a number of good cooks who agree with me."

I didn't stop to argue the point, but I admit to being new fashioned enough or lazy enough to think that any electrical or mechanical devices that lessen physical work and shorten the time required in cooking are worth the benefit of a doubt. So far as any scientific experiments can go to show there is no difference between eggs beaten with a rotary egg beater and eggs beaten with wire whisk or a fork at the expense of two or three times much energy and time.

Life Preserver

YOU'LL hear a lot, as like as not, from women and from men who hear a tale and seldom fall to tell the tale again. But when they come to me with some New scandal they obtain, I let it rest, I try my best. At least to break the chain.

They just drop in with some one's sin. A secret to disclose. They tell with winks what some one thinks. And not what some one knows. They say, "My word! You haven't heard."

Of that? I wonder why?" Then if they vow you can't tell how you heard it, it's a lie.

Folks do not fear the truth to hear, To tell the truth as well; It's only when they doubt it, then They fear a tale to tell. They make you swear you'll never share.

The secret told to you. When that they say, then here's the way To fool them—never do.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

HOW FLATHORNS THE MOOSE GOT EVEN

OF COURSE that is another way of saying that if some one wrongs us we shouldn't try to wrong them in return. But there are times when it seems as if the only way to teach some people a lesson so that they will not forget it is to treat them as they treat others. It was something like this with Flathorns the Moose when he did the thing about which Honker the Goose told Buster Bear and Peter Rabbit and the others sitting on the shore of the pond of Paddy the Beaver deep in the Green Forest.

"It was this way," began Honker. "Old Flathorns had been hunted and hunted by men with terrible guns until he was so uneasy and worried that he couldn't eat or sleep. The rustling of a leaf falling from a tree would make him jump and shake all over. It was dreadful. He didn't dare go to any of the places or use any of the paths which had been perfectly safe all summer. Once in a while he would steal down to the lake where I was, and while he got his breath between drinks he would tell me about his trouble.

"If these men things would fight fairly, I wouldn't be afraid," said he. "But they don't. What chance have I got against them when they kill or hurt with their terrible fire-sticks while yet a long way off? If they would meet me face to face and fight fairly, as any honest liver in the Great Woods does, I wouldn't be afraid. I've never harmed or bothered them. If I could just catch one of them without his terrible fire-stick, I'd show you who's afraid!"

"Right while he was talking there was the bang of one of those terrible fire-sticks, and old Flathorns went right down on his knees with a grunt.

HOT DAYS WITH COOL DESSERTS

WITH one of the inexpensive vacuum freezers, or a mechanical refrigerator, one may have a different frozen dish every day while the warm weather lasts. When ices and creams have begun to pall on the family taste, try some of these dishes that are cool but simple to prepare.

Lemon Foam.

Boil together one cupful of sugar and one and one-half cupfuls of water for five minutes. Stir in two tablespoonfuls of corn starch mixed with one-half cupful of cold water, and cook over boiling water fifteen minutes. Add three tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, one teaspoonful of salt and one stiffly beaten egg white. Chill and serve on sponge cake.

Fruit Fluff.

Mix one and one-half tablespoonfuls of cornstarch with half a cupful of milk. Scald one and one-half cupfuls of milk in a double boiler. Beat two eggs slightly and add with one-fourth cupful of sugar and one-half teaspoonful of salt to the scalded milk; add cornstarch mixture, stir and cook until thick. Cool, well covered, add one teaspoonful of vanilla, and pour the custard over two cupfuls of sliced fruit. Beat the egg whites, add one-third cupful of powdered sugar, and pile on top of the pudding. Bake long enough to brown the meringue. Chill and serve cold.

Cinnamon Stick Pudding.

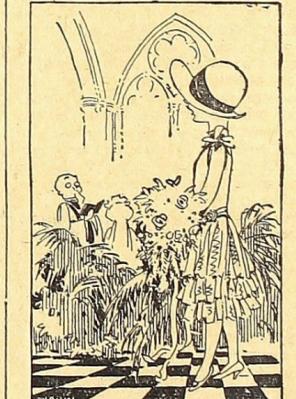

Wash, soak and cook one-half pound of prunes with a three-inch stick of cinnamon in the water, using three cupfuls of water. When the prunes are soft, remove the pits. Measure the liquid, adding more boiling water to make three cupfuls. Mix one-fourth of a cupful of cornstarch with cold water to make a paste and add slowly to the prune mixture. Cook carefully until one cupful of sugar, stirring constantly until it thickens, then cook over hot water for fifteen minutes more. Add one tablespoonful of lemon juice, salt to taste. Pour into molds or glasses to chill and serve with whipped cream.

Dixie Peaches.

Line six sherbet glasses with shredded coconut; place a half of a fresh or canned peach on the coconut, cut side up. Cover peach with any good fruit sirup, fill the cavity in the peach with a spoonful of favorite jam. Cover with whipped cream and top with a bit of the jam for garnish. These may be served on rounds of sponge cake.

Break the Chain

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

YOU'LL hear a lot, as like as not, from women and from men who hear a tale and seldom fall to tell the tale again. But when they come to me with some New scandal they obtain, I let it rest, I try my best. At least to break the chain.

They just drop in with some one's sin. A secret to disclose. They tell with winks what some one thinks. And not what some one knows. They say, "My word! You haven't heard."

Of that? I wonder why?" Then if they vow you can't tell how you heard it, it's a lie.

Folks do not fear the truth to hear, To tell the truth as well; It's only when they doubt it, then They fear a tale to tell. They make you swear you'll never share.

The secret told to you. When that they say, then here's the way To fool them—never do.

Wealthy Convicts Buy Their Way From Prison to Easier Life of Camps

New York.—An investigation into a system of bribery whereby well-to-do convicts sentenced to federal penitentiaries at Atlanta and Leavenworth, especially for liquor law violations and stock frauds, have been able to get themselves transferred to less onerous confinement, in army detention camps, such as those at Fort Wadsworth here, and Camp Meade, Md., has been under way by the Department of Justice for several weeks. The first intimation of the existence of such a system was obtained by federal authorities here some months ago with the discovery of a letter in the pocket of Paul Rubkin, a convicted watch smuggler, in the Manhattan federal building. Rubkin, with Solomon Rubman, secretary of the company, and Joseph Y. Pearlman, was sentenced to the Atlanta penitentiary in July, 1930.

The trio had pleaded guilty to charges of smuggling watch movements valued at $950,000 into this port from Switzerland and defrauding the government out of $300,000 in duties. Rubkin and Pearlman got two years each and Rubman was sentenced for 18 months.

Some time later, however, when the federal authorities wanted Rubkin to confront a new suspect and they sent to Atlanta for him, it was found that he was at Fort Wadsworth. He was brought to the courthouse here. Afterwards when he was taken back to Fort Wadsworth and searched it was discovered that some one had given him a letter while in New York.

The letter was from a convict at Atlanta. It disclosed that the writer had obtained the necessary funds and wanted to follow Rubkin's example in obtaining a transfer to Fort Wadsworth. Questioned by federal authorities, Rubkin admitted that he had bought a transfer for himself for $1,000 and that his two associates had also bought transfers, the prices being $1,000 and $500 each.

Department of Justice agents, under John Edgar Hoover, chief investigator at Washington, began an investigation. They learned that other transfers had been made under similar conditions. However, it was not always easy to ascertain whether the transfers had been paid for. Because of the overcrowded condition of the penitentiaries at Atlanta and Leavenworth, federal prison authorities have made it a practice recently to transfer as many prisoners as possible to army detention camps. Nearly 1,500 prisoners have been scattered through these camps. Among other notorious prisoners who are said to have obtained transfers from Atlanta to army detention camps is Harry Goldhurst, operator of a Manhattan bucket shop and financial adviser of Bishop Cannon and friend of Samuel Radlow, once an intimate of the late Vivian Gordon. Goldhurst was sentenced to five years in Atlanta for his bucket shop operations. An oil well near Bakersfield, Calif., has been drilled almost to a depth of two miles

Rough Silks Are Best for Sports Costumes

Raw and rough silks, Parisian dressmakers have found, are best for sports wear; patterned and plain tweeds, jerseys, flannels, etamines and tricots are the stand-bys in woollens and may be used for sports frocks and for town and country when sports are not the order of the moment.

Striped materials and checks, regardless of the texture, have called out all their troops and invaded fashion's territory. They have had precious little resistance, too, for the inclined-to-be-stout woman welcomes the former with open arms, because she knows that it slenderizes her figure; and the close-to-being-skinny woman "checks" up on her wardrobe with great fervor, knowing that the little squares in all their possible sizes will help to fill in the gaps and swells the potential curves.

STAGE COACH TALES

By E. C. TAYLOR

A President Takes a Tumble

"WE DO not travel any more; we merely arrive." Macauley wrote this in commenting on the passing of the old days, when a trip was an adventure, when one lived every moment of his journey, whether it was a few hours' trip of a few miles, or a trek across the continent.

One of the most romantic periods of the history of the United States was that between 1800 and the coming of the railroads prior to 1850. That was the day of the stage coach.

The notes of the coachman's horn, the stamping of four or six horses, and the rattling of the old Concord stages that filled the highways of America in those years are nearly forgotten. Few records have been kept of their era, although for decades the life of the young nation flowed through these great arteries of travel.

The lords of that distant day were the drivers of the stage coaches. They were the boys' heroes, like aviators are today. Their word was law, and they were looked up to and respected by the great and the lesser individuals who comprised the general public.

Of the tales that are left of these romantic figures the most amusing perhaps is the one of how they ventured to express their emphatic disapproval of a President of the United States.

When Martin Van Buren was occupying the White House, he vetoed a bill appropriating funds for the improvement of the National road in Indiana. That great highway was the backbone of the nation between 1830 and 1848, when the railroads pushed westward over the Allegheny mountains.

Everywhere along the road there was great indignation over Van Buren's action. The stage drivers being sort of overlords of their community, and no doubt somewhat tired of the severe jolting they received when they drove their coaches at full speed over a rocky, rough and swampy highway, nursed their revenge.

Their opportunity came when Van Buren was returning to Washington, D. C., from a trip up the Mississippi valley. The President rode in as much peace and state as the highway then provided, until he reached Plainfield, Ind.

When his coach left Plainfield, it had an "accident," and the President of the United States was unceremoniously spilled out in the road where the mud was deepest.

The identity of the driver of his coach is cloaked in mystery. Everyone denied responsibility for what had happened, although it is probably they all laughed up their sleeves.

Investigation showed that an axle had been sawed nearly in two, and it was brought out that the driver, when he reached a particularly muddy stretch of road, had not avoided any of the numerous bumps. The coach hit a big rock, and the axle broke. As it was going at good speed, the vehicle turned over, of course, and Mr. Van Buren was sent sprawling into the mud puddle.

The President returned to the tavern at Plainfield, and after cleaning up, started off again and reached the nation's capital without further mishap. But he had been taught an object lesson on the importance of keeping the country's greatest highway in repair. When the bill came to him again soon after his adventure, he promptly signed it.

The position held by the drivers of the old stage coaches was like that of the captain of a steamboat. Some of the drivers stood on as lofty a plane as the commanders of great ocean liners of the present day. Their word was law while on the road.

They came into constant touch with all the prominent political, social and commercial figures of the country, and their attention and favor was eagerly sought.

Although they were paid only a standard wage of $12 a month and their board and lodging, they took precedence over even their most distinguished passengers.

In the eyes of small boys they were even above the President of the United States. They also thought well of themselves; as one driver remarked: "While I drive this coach I am the whole United States of America." (© 1931, Western Newspaper Union.)

Counts Time Spent on Study of "Math" Wasted

I believe that an appalling amount of time is spent in childhood in learning things which don't matter, remembering things which will never be needed, and doing silly tricks which an intelligent man need never waste his time upon.

Let us contemplate, for example, the absurdities and abominations of arithmetic. At a conservative estimate, I have myself wrestled with arithmetic and its related studies through ten years of my irreplaceable youth.

I was, moreover, pretty good at it; I could throw a mean logarithm and chase a cotangent into a corner and bang my hat on it. I have done all the geometry, plain and fancy, and dabbled delicately in calculus. I could once make an advanced algebraic equation say "Uncle."

I assure you that not a trace of it is left, and that furthermore I don't miss it. There must be a large blank area in my brain which was once full of arithmetic, but it isn't the least painful. Except for a reasonable facility with the multiplication table there isn't a particle of arithmetic left in my system.

I can make change, but so can a street car conductor. But I can't remember more than five telephone numbers, and so long as they continue to print telephone books I won't need to.—Donald Rose in the Forum and Century.

Turks Shaken in Their Veneration for Koran

Arabic, being a sacred language, the ecclesiastics have cried out against their holy book, the Koran, appearing in any other tongue. But the Turkish government has in spite of this allowed the publication of three separate translations. Fourteen thousand copies have been sold. Turks, who formerly heard the sounding Arabic of the Koran without understanding anything of its meaning, imagined it charged with tremendous and mystic meanings. That impression melts away when the Koran is read in the vernacular. It is sometimes enough to place a Koran and a Testament in the hands of a Turkish reader and leave him to draw his own conclusions. It is said that Kemal Pasha in disgust threw the book across the room into a corner. Yet in the Sudan the primary textbook in all the government schools is the Koran, and Islam is gaining ground constantly in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. — Sunday School Times.

Engine, Aged 100, at Fire

When the fire departments in neighboring towns refused to help extinguish a blaze in a grain store at Bishops Cleeve, England, a fire engine built in 1831 was used. Villagers poured water into the ancient machine with buckets while others pumped. Eventually a volunteer brigade at Stroud, 20 miles away, came to the rescue and extinguished the blaze. Departments of other towns refused aid because the Bishops Cleeve council refused to contribute to their upkeep.

WHISTLING AND EMOTION

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I have never been able to whistle, much effort as I have expended in attempting to acquire the art. I recall with great vividness my envy of a young companion of seven or eight years who had already acquired the art and whose accomplishment I tried in vain to emulate. Nature evidently never intended that I should express my emotions through the medium of whistling.

My brother was a great whistler. He had a tremendous range and could reach the highest and the shrillest notes. He was not one who whistled loud "to keep his courage up." Whistling was his way of quieting the irritations of life. He seldom whistled as he went about his work to express joy or interest or light-heartedness. If I came upon him sitting immovably with furrowed brow, whistling shrilly and persistently, then I knew that something had gone wrong, that he had been thwarted in some purpose, deprived unexpectedly of some pleasure, irritated by some trifling event, possibly. It was no time to ask for favors or to attempt pleasant conversation if we found him whistling. It was better to wait until the storm blew over.

In general, whistling expresses a contented, satisfied state of mind and sometimes a thoughtful one. When at midnight or later I am awakened by the sound of whistling as some of the youthful undergraduates are going home to their books or their beds, I know that the evening has been passed pleasantly, if not profitably.

America Was Once Joined to Europe

reviving discussion of the theory that the American continent once was joined to the Old world but, after the deluge, floated away to its present position.

This theory was advanced during the early part of this century by the German meteorologist Wegener, who died recently. Accepting the theory that the interior of the earth is fluid, then the solidified continents may be giant expanses of floating earth, attached to the interior of the earth by a supple, gradually diminishing link.

The Abbe Moreux points out that the German scientist held that the two continents, when they were close together, fitted into one another almost perfectly, as though they were parts of a jigsaw puzzle. Examination of a world map shows that this jigsaw puzzle idea is not so far-fetched as it would seem at first.

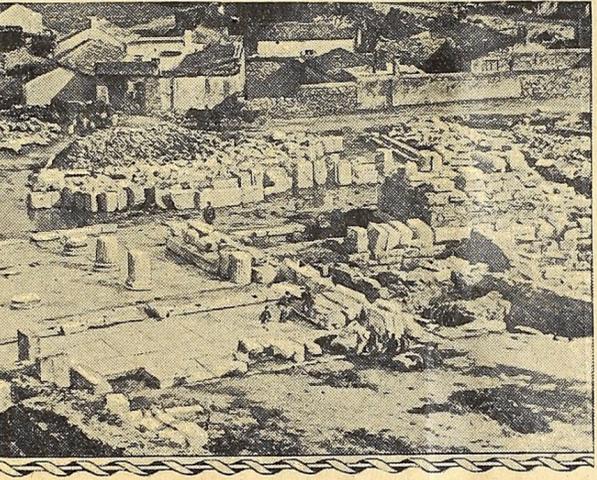

When the deluge came, Abbe Moreux says, the narrow gap between the continents widened, America drifted away, leaving the wide expanse of the Atlantic to separate the newly created world from the old.

The French scientist declares the theory is not new. It was first advanced by Pierre Placet in 1668, and again by Snider in 1889. Abbe Moreux, while unwilling to pass on the theory, points to the curiosity of the islands of the Atlantic, such as the Azores and Madeira. Have they remained stationary, or are they floating more slowly toward the new world?

It is indicated that the French academy of sciences may discuss the theory in its entirety, while organization of a mission to study the composition of the Azores and other Atlantic islands is being urged.

New Geyser Discovered by Explorers in Alps

Schuls, Switzerland.—The Alps have had heretofore everything that mountains should have except a geyser.

That fault has now been remedied, for a geyser, somewhat less powerful than those in Yellowstone National park, has just been discovered in the mountains here.

The geyser erupts regularly each 15 minutes, shooting a jet of water about 30 feet into the air. Scientists attribute the phenomenon to the accumulation of carbonic gas in a natural reservoir below the surface.

Lost Children Kept Safe in a Cage

During the hot weather many children are lost in the parks of the big cities and at the bathing beaches. At the Oak street beach in Chicago, this became such a problem that the park board erected a wire-fenced enclosure, where the lost little ones are kept until called for by their parents.

Large Colonial Plantations Profundity
There were many plantations in Virginia in the early days of 5,000 or more acres. Nicholas Hayward had a unit of 30,000 acres, and William Fitzhugh at one time owned a total of 45,000 acres.
One distinction nowadays is to write a book so incomprehensible that at least a dozen interpreters, who think they know more than the author, will write explanations of the original text.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

THE GREATEST VALUE EVER BUILT INTO A FORD CAR

The Beautiful Ford Tudor Sedan

(F. O. B. Detroit, plus freight and delivery. Bumpers and spare tire extra at low cost.)

WHEN you buy a Ford car today, you buy what is unquestionably the greatest value in the history of the Ford Motor Company. Never before has so much beauty, comfort, safety and performance been offered at such a low price.

The low price of the Ford is something to think about because it means an immediate saving of many dollars — always an important consideration. But far more significant than price alone is what you get for that price. When high quality is combined with low price, you may justly take pride in having found a most satisfactory purchase.

See the Ford — ride in it — learn something about the value that is built into every part. The more you know about it, the more certain you will be that it is the car for you. It is literally true that when you "get the facts you will get a Ford."

JOHN GRESHAM'S GIRL

By CONCORDIA MERREL

(Copyright.)—WNU Service.

Perhaps no living man could have called to be impressed by the vision of sweet youth which Lucy Gresham made, standing at the busy street corner, her small hands catching the broken ends of a strand of beads close against her breast, a little chain of events that would alter the course of several lives, affect vast enterprises and result in one of the strangest domestic tangles ever recorded? How could she know that her future was to be entwined with that of her father's bitterest enemy? Life is a queer show, as the man said to himself many times afterward, and the grimmest of human resolutions are fished about like dry leaves by the winds of destiny. No emotion or purpose will withstand the power of the human affections, as is amply set forth in this absorbing story of a revenge that turned to love.

CHAPTER I

A Broken Thread

Lucy Gresham was walking down Bond street, after a morning of delightfully frivolous shopping, when in crossing the top of a rather narrow street she was nearly knocked down by a big, blue car that was turning into Bond street at a somewhat reckless pace.

To avoid the danger, she darted to the opposite pavement, and gained it safely, but in doing so, somehow managed to catch her hand sharply in a long chain of Chinese beads she was wearing. As the thread snapped, she caught the broken ends quickly against her breast, but she was not in time to prevent several of the beads from scattering into the roadway.

The owner of the car pulled up, swung himself to the ground, and next moment was standing before her, hat in hand, apologizing.

At the sound of his voice, Lucy looked up sharply, and found her eyes caught, and most unexpectedly held, by the man who stood looking down at her. The obvious aspects of his appearance were his huge height, immense breadth of shoulder, and a suggestion of great strength; but it was not these superficial things that had the power to catch Lucy's interest so quickly. It was, rather, his somber, unsmiling face; dark, sullen eyes—so dark that she could not tell whether they were gray or black—and curiously bitter, unfriendly lips.

His voice: "It was entirely my fault. I'm so sorry. But what exactly happened?" brought her to reality. She drew a quick breath, and said hurriedly:

"It's my necklace. I pulled it somehow, and snapped the thread. Some of the beads came off before I could stop them."

"Only the necklace?" he asked. "I didn't see you until you were right in front of the car." The words were polite enough, but his voice was as somber and unfriendly as his face, and his courtesy was offered without the smallest hint of a smile.

"Oh, the car didn't touch me," she assured him. "The worst that happened was that some of my beads are gone," she added.

"We can probably find those again," he replied. And then, as unconcerned as if Bond street were no more than a track in the wilderness, he began searching the road and the gutter for the truant beads.

Lucy was interested and amused. It was such a crazy sort of thing to happen. As she stood, securing the broken ends of her necklace, she couldn't help wondering who this big, gloomy-looking man was.

But his name, had he given it, would have suggested no clue to his gloom. For, although she might have remembered hearing that James Lee was one of London's newest millionaires, that would rather have suggested that he should be well contented with his lot. If, though, instead of wondering what his name was, she had just spoken her own . . . But she didn't, and so her thoughts went on, until some interested people broke through them, by pausing to wonder what had happened. Then a policeman came up and wanted to know, with quite friendly officiousness, what it was all about, and warned them that cars must not be left standing at that corner for long.

By this time the big stranger had gathered a round dozen of the beads, and seeing no more lying about, came toward Lucy, holding them in the curve of his palm.

"These are all I can find," he said.

"I think they are about all that dropped," she answered. "Will you put them into my bag, please?" She held the bag wide, and he poured them in. That done, she looked up again and thanked him.

They made formal adieux, and parted. Lucy Gresham to go blithely upon her way; James Lee to go somberly upon his.

Thus, out of the kaleidoscopic pageant of smart shoppers, well-dressed idlers and casual strollers; changing restlessly, charming ever; chance, that greatest of all stage managers, had brought these two face to face. Yet neither of them guessed that, with the first meeting of their eyes, they had each looked straight into the eyes of Fate.

James Lee's knowledge of this was, however, only postponed until the following evening, when, rather idly turning the pages of a picture paper, his attention was suddenly caught by the face of the little gold-haired girl he had so nearly knocked down with his car, looking out at him from one of the pages.

Next moment he was sitting straight and tense in his chair, and a smothered exclamation left his lips. For, in the pictured group of which the gold-haired girl was the central figure, there were the pictures of two other people. Two men. Two men whose faces were, for overwhelming reasons, branded indelibly upon his memory . . .

Mechanically, he read the legend beneath the picture, which ran:

"A charming picture of Miss Lucy Gresham, whose nineteenth birthday is to be celebrated by a costume ball to be given at her father's town house on the twenty-sixth. She is here seen with her father, Sir John Gresham, and her cousin, Mr. Oliver Ames."

James Lee didn't need to be told who those two men were. All the same he read it again and again, in a sort of stunned surprise, before saying half aloud:

"That's who she is. . . . My G—d! If I'd known . . ." And then, slowly, after a pause: "The last three and a half years haven't marked them." The accent was bitter. From the faces of the two men, he presently turned his attention to the girl again.

Very young and sweet and happy, her pictured eyes looked up from the page, straight into his; just as yesterday, they had looked, when he stood before her, apologizing for his clumsy driving. Her curving lips smiled, as if, even though it was only a picture, she challenged his grimness with the exquisite young beauty of her.

"So that's who she is," he said to himself again. "I'd forgotten that John Gresham had a daughter. . . . I'd forgotten that. . . ."

"Odd," he thought, "how Fate or Destiny or whatever it is, can knock you down with one hand, and then politely help you to rise with the other. . . . Life's a queer show. . . ."

His attention came back to the picture.

"The last three and a half years haven't changed them much," he thought again. "Old Gresham's a little whiter, perhaps; and Ames, a shade stouter. . . . Otherwise. . . ." His thoughts broke off and turned toward himself. If his picture were to appear in the papers, would those two know him as readily as he had known them? Would James Lee of today suggest to them James Warrington of three and a half years ago? He thought not. The last three and a half years had not left him so unaltered.

The door opened and a young man with curly hair, wide eyes, a most engaging grin and Saville row, written all over his clothes, came in. This was Peregrine St. Abb, James Lee's secretary, and social guide; and, incidentally, his very sincere friend.

"My dear old sir," said this young man easily. "If you have no use for my valued services between the hours of ten tonight and breakfast time tomorrow, I'd rather like to look in at a 'do' my Aunt Cordelia is giving. She rang me up to say that she's a man short and could. . . ."

"Certainly," broke in Lee and then, after a moment: "Perry, do you know the Greshams?"

"Not frightfully well. . . . I've met his daughter here and there. . . . A pippin, I assure you."

"Yes; I see her here." Lee crossed and handed it to St. Abb. St. Abb—The Honorable Peregrine Maltby de Cassilis St. Abb, to give him the style to which he had been born—took it and said:

"Oh, she's much better than that in real life. . . . I say, my jolly old sir, you haven't fallen for her, have you? I mean to say, it's no go; she's booked. My Aunt Cordelia told me that this handsome bloke, Ames, has been mad about her ever since she left the nursery, and that papa Gresham is all ready to do the heavy paternal. . . ."

Lee stretched out a hand and took the paper back.

"Ames loves her, does he?" he said sharply. Something in his tone made St. Abb look at him a moment, with puzzled, rather boyish eyes. There was something about his chief that he never could get at. There he was, with more money than any man could possibly know what to do with; able to do any mortal thing he liked; only twenty-seven, though he looked a good thirty-five; big, strong, healthy and distinctly a good-looking; and yet he went about with a dark expression in his eyes, bitterness around his lips, and didn't seem to know what a real laugh was.

Lee sat looking down at the picture, and a new thought began to make its rather ugly way into his mind.

How could he make of that smiling, sweet girl, beloved of Ames, adored by her father, a weapon against them both. . . . ? Skies above! But he owed them the utmost of suffering that it was in his power to give! . . . In the flashing of a mere few moments—so incredibly swift is the inner vision—he saw again his boyhood; motherless from his first day of life, and fatherless, too, when he was only just fifteen. He saw his struggle against poverty; his passionate ambition to rise and make a place for himself in this great, working world; all his stumbling, boyish efforts to get on. He saw his first job in the great ship building yards at Gresham's; not a big job, but a beginning; therefore, with a glory all its own, to him.

He remembered how hard and how faithfully he had worked—he had always been made that way—how he had put all his brain and effort into his work; all his heart and soul; all his hopes and ambitions.

And, just as it seemed that he really had got a foothold on the difficult ladder of success, he saw again how life had dealt him a blow that shattered, destroyed, laid waste. . . .

How vividly it flashed before him again! A clerk, bringing money for the payroll from the bank, had been set upon, stunned, and robbed of every penny.

"Solid" Security Behind Old Continental Money

Many and varied were the paper notes issued in America during the dark days of the Revolutionary war. One of the earliest was a note issued by the Sons of Liberty in Boston, brought out in 1775 to finance the cause of liberty, with a face value of 24 shillings.

Paper money was in common use in the Colonies from its enforced use in Massachusetts in 1690. One of the most interesting of the Continental paper moneys was a note issued in Massachusetts in 1780 for the purpose of financing the state's quota in the Continental army.

The note was backed up not by bullion, as at the present time, but by definite measures of existing commodities. Thus it carried this inscription: "Pay 250 pounds on the first day of March, both principal and interest to be paid in the then current money of the said state in a greater or less sum according to 5 bushels of corn, 68 and 4-7ths pounds of a part of beef, 10 pounds of sheep's wool and 16 pounds of sole leather shall then cost, more or less than 130 pounds current money at the then current prices of said articles, the same being 32 times and 1/2 what the same quantities of the same articles would cost at the prices affixed to them in a law of this state in the year of our Lord 1777." From this old note it appears that the idea of a stabilized currency is not new.

Vienna "City of Music"

The peculiar charm of Vienna has caused many a great musician to spend years of his life there. This was true of Gluck, Mozart, Haydn, Beethoven, Schubert, Brahms, Bruckner, Hugo Wolf, Gustav Mahler and Richard Strauss. Many of the modern masters are living there today.

Even church music is great in Vienna. Those who have heard the musical productions in the Augustinerkirche, the cathedral of St. Stephan, and the chapel of the Burg, with its famous boys' choir, or a performance of the Missa Solemnis in the little old town of Modling, will never forget the experience. Add to this the glory of the concert halls, the Philharmonic orchestra, and you learn why it is called the city of music.—Exchange.

Test of Poetry

The true test of poetry is the substance which remains when the poetry is reduced to prose.—Goethe.

How the sifting of evidence had been done, Lee had never known, but he remembered his own incredulous bewilderment at hearing that some of the stolen notes had been found in an old leather wallet of his, hidden behind a loose brick in the wall at the end of his garden.

He was called upon to explain, and, in the head office, before that very Oliver Ames whose face looked up at him from the picture in this paper he held now, he made his explanation.

"Do you recognize the wallet?" Across the space of over three years, he could hear Ames' voice again, as clearly as if it were questioning now; at this very moment. . . . And his own voice, replying:

"Yes, sir. I lost it some days ago."

"Lost it? When?"

"Last Monday, sir."

"Have you mentioned the loss of the wallet to anyone?"

"No sir." And then, after the smallest moment: "Oh yes, I did just speak of it to Mr. Macklin."

"Send for Macklin. . . ."

Next in the panorama of his memories came a vision of Macklin, the foreman, under whom he worked, small and brisk, smart and smiling. Macklin was questioned about the wallet. He said that "young Warrington" had never mentioned losing it, that this was the first he had heard of it. . . . And he stuck to this through thick and thin.

Then the clerk who had been robbed was unable, when he recovered, to say whether "Warrington" were the thief or not. The onslaught had been so swift and sudden. He had just got the impression that the thief had been a very big man. "Warrington" was a very big man. Little by little the net had closed upon him.

He had applied for permission to appeal to old John Gresham, and it was granted, but it did no good. Sir John felt sure that there was no need for him to interfere. He was, moreover, on the point of starting on a yachting cruise with his adored school-girl daughter. He did not alter his plans. . . .

Lee's big hand clenched to a fist as his memory reached that point. . . . With one of his men lying under threat of terrible disgrace, old Gresham—went yachting!

His memory slid on through his prosecution and trial; through the ghastly nightmare of his own inability to prove his innocence. It was his word against overwhelming evidence, and the evidence won. With his whole soul crying out against the unbelievable injustice of it, he went to prison for three years. For three years that had seemed like three eternities! That was what had knocked the laughter out of his laugh; put the somberness into his thunder-gray eyes, set the line of bitterness around his lips; and, worst of all, brought him back into the world of free men, with all his ambitious energies turned to a burning desire to be revenged; to get even with Ames for his cold willingness to believe him guilty of such a crime; with Macklin for his treachery; with old John Gresham for his selfish carelessness.

But, as he had said, Fate and Destiny were queer, unaccountable forces, shattering one day, building up the next. He had been free scarcely a fortnight, when he came into an immense fortune left by a cousin, who had died in Canada—one Terence Lee, of whose existence he had scarcely known—on the sole condition that he changed his name from Warrington to Lee.

Money was a power. He meant to use it. But there had been things to do first. With the changing of his name and fortune, he intended to change his whole mode of life; to become a new personality; to raise himself to a level of social equality with those he regarded as his enemies, so that he need be in no sort of disadvantage. With this in view he had advertised for a young man of good social standing to act as secretary and social guide. The answer to this advertisement had been Peregrine St. Abb. Under the guidance of Peregrine, Lee had installed himself in a fine town flat; taken a nice little country place in Hertfordshire; acquired a splendid car; a big collection of clothes for all occasions; and a good working knowledge of the manners and customs of polite society. . . . Money was a power, and he meant to use it. But here—and now he came out of the past and let the new and ugly thought have sway—here was a power deadlier still. That smiling, sweet, girlish thing, with her young, unclouded eyes and pretty, childish lips—where, if he searched the world over, could he find a sharper weapon than she might prove? Her father adored her; that was ancient history. And now St. Abb had told him that Ames loved her. To snatch her from them. . . . He, who had been three years in prison. . . . To snatch her from them. . . . "Old Gresham wouldn't know me anyway. . . ." he argued to himself. "And I don't think Ames would either. . . . I've changed so. . . ." Anyway, being recognized was a risk he was bound to take. . . . There was no avoiding it. . . . And the stake was worth it. His thoughts went on.

"Perry," he said suddenly: "Get me an invitation to this birthday party on the twenty-sixth. . . ." He tapped the paper. "I want to meet. . . . John Gresham's girl. . . ."

whiter, perhaps; and Ames, a shade stouter. . . . Otherwise. . . ." His thoughts broke off and turned toward himself. Mighty Mountains

Darjeeling, With Peaks of the Himalayas in the Background.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

MOUNTS Kamet and Kinchinjunga in the Himalayas have taken the place of Mount Everest this summer in the interest of the world's mountain climbers. Mount Kamet, 25,445 feet high, was successfully scaled by a British party on June 21. Kinchinjunga, 27,815 feet high, is now being attacked by a party of Germans.

Heterofore, Mount Kamet has seldom been heard of when the earth's highest pinnacles are being discussed, but nevertheless it is one of the select little group of Asiatic peaks that push up farther above sea level than mountains in any other part of the earth. Although it ranks thirtieth among the amazing group of mountain giants that extend along the Himalaya chain and into China, it is not greatly surpassed in height by any of its fellows except Everest, 29,002 feet high; Goodwin Austen, 28,250; Kinchinjunga, 27,815; Dhaulagiri, 26,828, and Gosaik Than, 26,305. All of these super-giants among mountains are in Nepal except Goodwin Austen, which is in northern Kashmir.

The peak of Mount Kamet is situated just a stone's throw south of the Tibetan border, in the United Provinces of India. Nearby is Nanda Devi, which tops it by less than 200 feet. These comparisons lead down to the fact that Kamet is the third highest mountain in the British empire; and by virtue of this fact it was considered well worth a serious attack by mountain climbers.

While Mounts Everest and Kinchinjunga are near Darjeeling, hill capital of Bengal, Mount Kamet is 600 miles to the northwest near Simla, hill capital of India. It lies in the Garhwal district of the United Provinces, 130 miles due east of Simla near the eightieth meridian of longitude. This area came into British possession in 1814 as a result of the Gurka war (with Nepal). This region consists of a maze of high peaks with extremely deep valleys, winding among them. The valleys and lower slopes are heavily wooded.

How Mount Kamet is Reached. The railroad used in expeditions to Mount Kamet is at Kathgodam, in the United Provinces, at the southern edge of the Himalayan foothills. From there travel is overland through valleys and up steep slopes to Ranikhet, a hill village comparable in location to Simla. From Ranikhet the way leads over rough country and across a number of deep river gorges, to the village of Niti at 12,000 feet altitude. From this point both yaks and coolie bearers are used.

Although numerous attempts to scale Mount Kamet have been made since 1855, no one succeeded in reaching the summit until this summer. The latest expedition prior to the one that has just scaled the peak was led in 1920 by Dr. A. M. Kellas. He reached an altitude of 23,600 feet, but had to turn back because his native assistants were suffering from mountain sickness.

On the slopes of Mount Kamet is one of the chief head-water glaciers of the Ganges river. Kinchinjunga is bigger game for the mountain climber than Kamet, both because of its extreme height and the steepness of its slopes. It is the third highest mountain in the world, reaching upward five and one-third miles above sea level.

Of the three highest peaks—Everest, Goodwin Austen, and Kinchinjunga—the latter is most inaccessible. It lies 45 miles north of Darjeeling in an air line, but the road that one must travel across canyons, over ridges and around intervening peaks, is much longer.

Darjeeling has been headquarters for the several expeditions that have tried unsuccessfully to scale Kinchinjunga in past years. Like Simla, 700 miles farther west, and Srinagar in Kashmir, Darjeeling is a godsend to perspiring Europeans who must spend the hot period in India. But it is more than a cool retreat; it is a matchless observation post, when the clouds permit, for the mightiest mountain scenery that the world affords.

And the outstanding sight to the northward, across deep chasms and beyond tier after tier of foothills, is the mighty Kinchinjunga, buttressed by half a dozen peaks from 20,000 to 24,000 feet in altitude.

DAIRY FACTS

LET COWS BE DRY FULLY SIX WEEKS

Need Rest Between Lactation Periods.

Overworked cows like overworked people make vacations show profits, according to Prof. H. A. Hopper of the New York State College of Agriculture. Cows in poor condition should have a rest of two months between lactation periods, and good cows should rest a minimum of six weeks, he advises.

It is not generally understood that when a cow is producing milk she uses the minerals from her body faster than they can be replaced. A cow producing 6,000 pounds of milk a year must manufacture 750 pounds of dry matter, or more than is contained in the carcass of a 1,250-pound steer. If a cow is given little or no rest, she enters the next lactation period in a weakened and run-down condition, with the result that she can produce less milk than she could have had she been dried off a few weeks before she freshened. It is false economy, according to Professor Hopper, to try to keep cows in nearly constant production.

To allow them to replace the minerals which have gone into the production of milk, cows that are dry during the pasture season should receive legume hays and pasture or be allowed to graze on a legume pasture. At other times legume hays and silage should be fed to dry cows, if possible.

Regulate Separator in Extreme Hot Weather

An additional aid to the keeping quality of cream in summer is the regulation of the separator to deliver a cream testing between 35 and 45 per cent. Bacteria act upon the sugar in the skim milk, causing souring and the smaller the amount of skim milk present the less sugar available for the production of acid. Hence there is a real advantage in separating a richer cream during the summer months. There is no greater loss of fat by this method and a material advantage in improved keeping quality results.

Proper cooling is just as important with cream as with milk, especially since cream is delivered less frequently and therefore has greater opportunity to undergo spoiling. It should be cooled immediately after separation. It is especially important that fresh cream should not be mixed with older cream until it has been thoroughly cooled, since the addition of warm cream to cold hastens souring by warming up the whole mass.

In the summer, cream should be delivered at least three times a week if it is to get to the creamery in good condition. It is important that it be protected from the heat and kept as cool as possible while in transit. This may be done by covering the can with a wet blanket or insulating jacket. In this way it is possible to ship it many times farther than in cans without protection, before much increase in temperature takes place.—Exchange.

Solving "Onion" Problem

Onion flavor can be taken out of milk by a rather tedious process discovered by the Tennessee experiment station and bitterweed flavor can be taken out of cream by a process discovered by the same institution, but the best course is to keep these flavors from getting in the milk. Some land should be cleaned of onions by the cultural methods which will eliminate all bitterweed and then used for a temporary pasture during the season these weed pests bother. By plowing it as often as each two years at the right time in the fall, the onion problem will not bother. Sweet clover, the other clovers, some suitable grass and lespedeza make the kind of temporary pasture for this situation.

DAIRY FACTS

Minimum losses and more regular tests are assured where the milk is separated before it becomes cold.

Naturalists assert that a caterpillar can eat twice its own weight in leaves in 24 hours.

When planning to build or remodel the dairy barn have at least 32 to 36 feet width, outside dimensions.

Wooden tanks or concrete tanks that are insulated can be used in winter as well as in summer, giving a high quality of milk throughout the year.

Careful feeding of dairy cows is especially important when milk prices are low. The ration should be carefully balanced and grain fed strictly in accordance with the amount of milk produced.

A New York state dairy herd improvement association tester reports that 137 cows, shown to be unprofitable, were sold from his association during the year. About 100 of these were sold to butchers and removed from circulation, herd owners making a profit on the transaction.

NEW DEVICE BOON FOR THE SIGHTLESS

A newly perfected device which converts printed words into large raised lines on aluminum foil so that blind persons may read by touch was demonstrated by the inventor, Robert E. Naumburg of Cambridge, Mass. The new printing visagraph, as it is called, rapidly produces enlarged, embossed letters on a wide roll of thin aluminum foil. These letters may be felt by the finger of the blind person in the same way that he reads Braille or other embossed type. The outstanding advantage of the product of the printing visagraph over the old embossed types is that it will enable the blind to have access to books printed in ink. This will increase their present range of reading about 1,000 times. The New York public library contains about 3,000 books in Braille and more than 3,000,000 books printed in ink.

The visagraph, Mr. Naumburg explained, is especially useful to the blind student at school, college or in post-graduate work, and to the blind professional person, whether a doctor, lawyer, writer, teacher, or engineer. It is very helpful to the student of foreign birth, as hardly any literature is available in foreign languages in embossed type.

Mr. Naumburg was assisted in the demonstration by Miss Edith Milner, a student at Perkins Institute for the Blind at Watertown, Mass. After less than one month of practice on the visagraph, she was able to read from a book printed in ink with surprising fluency. A month ago she did not know the shapes of the alphabet printed in ink, having always read Braille, which does not resemble the printed alphabet.

Adults who lose their sight, Mr. Naumburg explained, will welcome the printing visagraph, which enables them to visualize with their finger tips the letters whose shapes they will remember.

The printed letters are magnified in height and width, so that they are about the size of Braille characters, with which most of the blind are already familiar. The letters are composed of dots and lines. A capital T has a long line across the top, and a row of dots forming the vertical line. These dots are close enough together to give the feeling of a continuous letter.

The impressions on the aluminum roll may be preserved for future reference and for instruction purposes, or they may be erased by passing the aluminum foil through a pair of rollers, like a clothes wringer. The aluminum may then be used over again. The roll of aluminum resembles, in size and shape, the music roll of a pianola. The printing visagraph is about the size of an office desk.—Boston Transcript.

Electric Eye Aids Blind

"Electric eyes now are being used to "see" for blind persons in guiding them about their homes by giving them a sense of direction as they move about. The electric eye, or photoelectric cell, is made up like a flashlight with a small buzzer connected to its battery, according to Popular Mechanics Magazine. Convenient electric lights are then placed about passages and hallways, particularly at turns.

The blind person turns the electric eye about much as a person having his sight would direct a flashlight. When the device points to a light source, contact is made and the buzzer sounds. As long as the buzzer is sounding the blind user knows he is on the right path.

Village Built for Bombers

To provide target practice for air-planes in a recent aviation meet in Italy an elaborate reproduction of an Arabian village was built in miniature. The model was raked with aerial bombs shot from airplanes, flying low. Big bombers and small scout machines were used in the attack, and the maneuvers were carried out in strict accordance with the latest Italian military development. The speed in which the village was completely destroyed was declared to be an indication of the effective offensive of the present airplane in waging war.

American College Men

Not Politically Bent?

The American college student seems to be almost a nonpolitical animal. He may know what is happening in congress or the legislature of his state. But he feels no sense of responsibility for either and no obligation of any kind to interest himself in their affairs.

He talks of American politics as though they were the remote affairs of a distant planet. He speaks of the politicians as though they represented some inferior sub-species of the human race. He assumes, almost a priori, that no decent man embarks upon a political career; and he takes it for granted, accordingly, that graft and corruption are its necessary accompaniments.

The idea that citizenship involves on his part an active interest in affairs simply does not seem to occur to him. Save in the crisis of a Presidential year, there is nothing in an American university which corresponds to the well-established political societies which proliferate in their English analogues.

Now and again some university possesses a small liberal club (usually with functions performed off the campus) at which a noted radical will speak; but of that continuity of contact between undergraduates and politicians which exists in the English university there is no trace.

And the determination of the young undergraduate in Oxford or Cambridge to enter the house of commons at the earliest possible moment does not, so far as I know, find any responsive echo in the mind of a student at Harvard or Yale.—Harold J. Laski in Harper's Magazine.

Salt Statistics

The man who "isn't worth his weight in salt" and the one who "feels like 30 cents" seem to be on a par, judging from the salt statistics of last year. During that period, 8,000,000 tons of salt were produced and the total value was about $25,000,000, which on the basis of a 200-pound man works out at about the rate of 30 cents.

Michigan led in production, and with New York, Kansas and Louisiana accounted for 95 per cent of the national production.

Her Handicap

The Golfer—They're all afraid to play me. What do you think my handicap is?

The Girl—Oh, I don't know. It may be your face.—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

The Blame

"Poets are born and not made." "Yes, blame it on the parents! They get the blame for everything else."

CAR OWNERS bought more Firestone Tires

during May, June and July

than in any like period in History

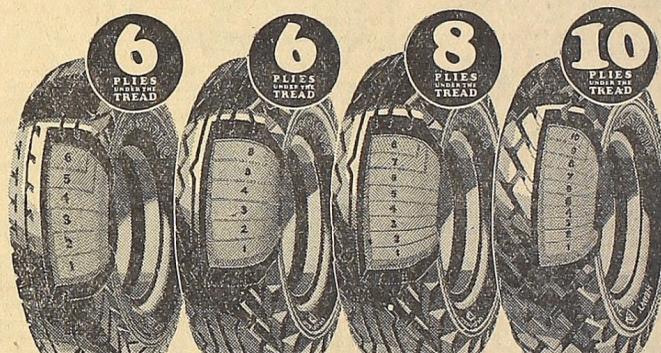

THERE are reasons for this—Firestone is building the Greatest Tire Values in history, with the result that Firestone Factories are operating 24 hours a day, 6 days a week, to meet public preference.

This is the year everybody is scrutinizing his purchases. This is particularly true in tire buying because of the many confusing and misleading statements made about tires.

To give car owners the facts, Firestone published comparisons showing quality, construction and prices. Then the public went to Firestone Service Stores and Service Dealers—made their own comparisons with cross sections cut from Firestone Tires—and from special brand mail order tires and others.

When they saw the facts, they bought more Firestone Tires during May, June and July than in any like period in Firestone history.

Let the Firestone Service Dealer show you these Firestone Extra Values and have your car equipped for Safe, Trouble-Free Motoring. Drive in today.

"The shovel scoops at the poker," is the way the French put it. Hindus quote: "The colander said to the needle: 'Get away, you have a hole in you.'"

Personal "I. Q."
The intelligence quotient or "I. Q." of a person is determined by multiplying the mental age by 100 and dividing by the actual age. Thus the intelligence quotient of a normal person is 100. A person with an "I. Q." below 80 is rated as subnormal, while one with an "I. Q." above 120 is rated as gifted. About five persons in 100 will be found to be 20 below normal and about five 20 above normal.

Musical Phenomenon
An account of Ole Bull says: "Ole Bull was a Norwegian violin virtuoso. He showed remarkable musical precocity. Bull was a rare phenomenon in the history of music. In the matter of mere technique he rivaled even Paganini. And yet a critic could discern the self-taught musician behind this prodigious technique."
