CHEHALIS, an attractive town in Washington, is the center of the great egg and poultry producing district of the Pacific Northwest, and every year it lets the world know this by holding a festival. The feature of this year's doings there was the making of the largest omelet ever cooked. Ten thousand eggs were used, and the cooks were armed with huge paddles and salt and pepper shakers. To grease the immense frying pan, Miss Thora Yeager skated about it with slabs of bacon strapped to her shoes. The pan was eight feet in diameter and weighed a thousand pounds.

MORE VISITORS TO PADDY'S POND

WHEN Honker the Goose dropped into the pond of Paddy the Beaver deep in the Green Forest on his way to the Sunny Southland other eyes than those of Peter Rabbit saw him. That clear "Honk, honk, k'honk, honk," with which he had shouted to the world below the message that Jack Frost and Rough Brother North Wind were coming had been heard by many ears. It had reached way in to the den of Old Man Coyote up in the Old Pasture and he had hastily thrust his head out to look up in the sky. He had seen Honker turn and lead his followers down, down, and finally disappear in the Green Forest.

Old Man Coyote had licked his chops hungrily and grinned as he watched. "They are tired and are going to spend the night in the pond of Paddy the Beaver." thought he. Then he yawned and went back to finish his nap and dream pleasant dreams of a fat goose for dinner. You see he knew that it would be of no use to go over to Paddy's pond until after Honker and his followers had had time to go to sleep.

Reddy and Granny Fox had heard hours of the night when those who sleep at night are usually deepest in dreamland stealthy feet trotted softly through the Green Forest toward the pond of Paddy the Beaver.

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH S OMETIMES in summer you will find a lake No storms disturbs. No rolling billows break Upon its shore. It is a place of peace. Yes, here it seems the things that trouble cease And trouble man no more. No thunders roll Across the sky, across the human soul. Be not deceived; no lake, however still.

But has its winters, as all waters will.

Important Strikes Are Made in Abandoned Mines.

Reno, Nev .- The business depression and the low price of silver have stimulated the gold mining industry in Nevade, with new important discoveries of high grade and shipping ore being made in scattered sections.

Many of the famous old silver camps, such as Virginia City, Tonopah, and Goldfield, have responded to the world-wide cry for gold and mine operators are shipping the yellow metal from camps formerly thought to be only silver producers.

Unemployed persons have taken to the Nevada wastelands, some with a small grubstake and visions of a strike, others merely in the hope of finding steady employment at a daily wage. $45,000 a Ton.

The latest strike to capture the imagination is located 63 miles from Reno, at Fireball camp in Pershing county, where ore samples assayed 257 ounces of gold and 123 ounces of silver per ton. Conservative engineers who visited the Fireball returned with glowing reports.

The greatest gold excitement of the year took place in February when two old desert men, Charley and Jim Scossa, discovered high grade ore assaying as high as $45,000 a ton, in the old Rabbit Hole district, 50 miles above Lovelock. This discovery caused a real gold rush and the camp now has grown into a permanent town.

Mining men of Tonopah are speaking in whispers of some great gold discovery which has been made in that vicinity.

Orange Soup. Cook and stir until perfectly well blended, adding a clove or two for additional flavor, and Wash one-half cupful of rice and put it, with two-thirds of a cupful of brown sugar, one-fourth of a package of sliced dates, and one quart of milk, in a deep baking dish. Sprinkle with a half teaspoonful of salt and bake in a moderate oven for two to three hours. Stir often during the first half hour of cooking to prevent a crust from forming. By adding a half cupful of suet lightly mixed with two tablespoonfuls of flour, this will make a very good suet pudding. Have the suet put through the food chopper.

San Diego, Calif.-Ants here are fond of using telephones. They don't use them to talk over, but rather to nest in and stop the instrument. Glasgow, Scotland,-During these days of fast changing records a municipal election expense record of $2.16 has been established. It is expected to stand as an all-time record. Milton stated that he published no election address and addressed no public meetings.

Neither, so far as he knows, did any of his supporters solicit votes on his behalf.

Incidentally, Milton did not get a seat in the town council. He polled 246 votes, while his opponent, Victor D. Warren, got the seat with a majority of 3,502. Warren's expense account has not been made public so far.

None of the girls is sympathetic with the soviet regime in Russia, all of them being White Russians, But Russia had so many flags between the time of the czarist regime and the rise to power of Lenin and Trotzky that the Russian nurses didn't know which was proper. Since the Swedish girls, the American girls and the Canadian girls had their flags in the book, it was decided not to print the book unless the Russian girls could have a flag.

Crowded Shipping on the Min River at Foochow.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.) TOOCHOW, which once ranked among the tea ports of the world and then, two decades ago, bowed to Ceylon and Japan, is staging a comeback.

The steep slopes of Fukien province, of which Foochow is capital and leading city, again are covered with thriving tea bushes; big-hatted men, women and children throng the plantations, picking tea leaves from dawn to dusk; tea-laden porters form an almost endless parade from the plantation to the tea warehouses, and boats on the Min piled with packages of tea recall the days when Yankee clipper ships cleared Foochow with cargoes of fragrant leaves, destined to American teapots.

Foochow port is really not in the city's suburbs. The nearest gate in the city's five-mile, vine-clad wall is more than three miles from the north bank of the Min, about 34 miles from the sea.

Few travelers visit Foochow. To reach the port, one must go by boat, for railroads and good roads are not to be found in this region. Oceangoing vessels from Shanghai and Hong Kong make regular trips up the Min which penetrates the Chinese coast opposite the north end of Taiwan (Formosa). The vessels may steam up the river as far as Pagoda Anchor-There passengers are transferred to launches which, after nine miles of dodging matting-covered sampans and grotesquely carved, highpooped junks, deposit their human cargo at the city's suburban docks. If one wants to "go native," however, he may board a native boat with the owners' family, fowls, dogs and pigs and travel in the unwesternized atmosphere of the Min.

The river's obstruction at Pagoda Anchorage is artificial, formed when stone-laden barges were sunk there to prevent a French fleet from reaching the city during the Franco-Foochow troubles in 1884. It is the characteristic of the Chinese love for things as they are that Foochow business men have waited so long to take steps to clear the channel and thus avoid the endless annoyance of reloading of cargoes.

streets, and western fashions vie with those of the Orient.

But if the traveler steps into a Foochow side street, he steps into an era several centuries past. Streets that twist and turn and come to abrunt stops were marked features of Foochow's early city planners. For example, the tortuous route of one street might be visualized by drawing a diagram. It begins by running eastward and then northward, eastward, northward, eastward, northward, eastward, southward, westward, southward, southeastward, southward, westward, southward, eastward and southward. Travelers Use Sedan Chairs.

The whole course of this thoroughfare is equal to but a few American city blocks in length and nowhere is it wide enough for even a jinrikisha to pass without driving playing children and their playmates-filthy dogs and pigs-into bordering doorways. The sedan chair is used by most travelers to penetrate the Foochow passageways where the odors permeating the atmosphere are so overwhelming to foreign nostrils that chair bearers are urged on to the nearest breathing spaces. Ancient as Foochow seems to be to the westerner, it is a sort of wild west of China to the natives of Canton and Peiping. In the days of Confucius all China looked upon the region that now is Fukien province as the bailiwick of barbarians. The wall that encompasses the city did not rise until the Ming period which covered the years that America was discovered and colonized.

While poor transportation facilities for reaching Foochow have constituted an important factor in keeping the city truly oriental, cholera and the bubonic plague have also caused outsiders to give it a wide berth.

Perhaps the pleasantest portion of a Foochow tour is a visit to the tea factories and warehouses where tea leaves, scented with jasmines, roses and chrysanthemums are sorted from us a long way in the ordinary affairs of life, and in most of the professions for that but not matter. in matters artistic unless there be combined with these other qualities some trace of talent. It is said that Matthew Arnold learned to be a poet through hard work, and that

Stevenson so learned the art of literature, but there was talent combined with the other very necessary qualities which these men had.

It was Saxton's ambition to be a writer from the time, when he was a boy, he had been thrilled by the tales of Scott and Cooper. Adventure, the romantic, appealed to him in the strongest way. He labored at his compositions in school and college with the greatest persistence and the most swelling ambition. Try as he would he could never get higher than "It is half in jest it is rather remarkable how little we and half in awe that old tars refer to know of the vast surface of the solid sphere which lies under this screen of liquid.

> "Little wonder, then that man marvels at how much has been learned about the seas, the while he realizes that what he knows is much less than the proverbial drop in the bucket as compared with what remains a mystery.

"The most impressive thing about the sea is its shallowness as compared with the size of the earth, and its depth as compared with the height of the land. If one were to take a globe six feet in diameter and excavate the deepest trench of the ocean thereon, it would be a bare pin-scratch deepabout one-twentieth of an inch.

"Among the sea's unexplained mysteries are the origin and actions of storm waves, commonest of nautical phenomena. Often storm waves travel much faster than the storm itself, meaning the storm as a whole, and sometimes they break with great force on a short-line where conditions othwise are very quiet and serene.

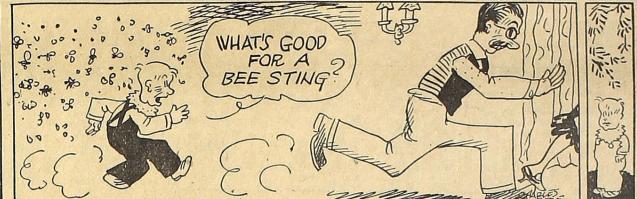

"There is a curious superstition, varying in various parts of the world, that every seventh, or every ninth, or every tenth wave is larger than the ones that precede it. Writers often take advantage of this bellef, not supported by scientists, to illustrate definite periods or sequences in ideas or lives.

"Much is still to be learned about the vagaries of ocean currents. Vessels and debris caught in these natural sea lanes often play uncanny tricks."

Solves Hot Weather Church Problem

By Charles Sughroe

When it gets too hot for folks to go to church the church can now go to the people. Seven Baptist ministers of the Calumet region of northern Indiana put their heads together to solve the problem and devised this "traveling church" mounted on the chassis of an old seven-passenger car. The motorized church has a twelve-foot belfry containing a bell. The roof, thrown back, discloses a pulpit and an organ, and amplifiers with radio equipment make it possible for a great audience to hear the entire service. The church is 22 feet long, 8 feet wide, and has interior seating capacity for 12 persons.

Earnings for 184 Companies Show Gain

New York .- A distinctly better trend | in earnings as second-quarter reports continue to appear is noted by Moody's Investors' service in an analysis based upon results announced by 184 large ndustrial companies, which show aggregate profits for the June quarter 35.6 per cent higher than in the preceding three months. The extra-seasonal character of this advance, the survey states, contrasts with a gain of only 5.1 per cent for the same corporations from the first to the second

Including 171 railroads and 46 utilities which have reported on a fivemonth basis, total net of 629 companies for the first half of this year was 44.9 per cent.

"Further reduction of operating costs doubtless contributed in large measure to improved second-quarter industrial earnings," Moody believes. "The picture is more shadowed when comparison is made with the same period in 1930, and a 38.2 per cent decrease is seen. Nevertheless the substantial average gain over the early months of the year indicates that business has been operating somewhat more profitably than many have realized.'

Industrial groups which made the best contrast with 1930 on a half-year basis included 12 automobile companies, with a drop of 19.9 per cent; drugs, with a decrease of only 5.1 per cent, and biscuits, where earnings were off 6 per cent. Poorest results were found in the case of automobile accessories (with a decrease of 68.4 per cent), cement (66.3 per cent), machinery (71.7 per cent), steel and iron (88.2 per cent), petroleum (95.2 per cent) and copper (with a 1931 deficit for five companies).

From River to City.

The journey from the river to the city may be made by bus, jinrikisha or sedan chair. Frequently travelers prefer to be landed on the south side of the river where they get a glimpse of the most modern portion of Foochow-the foreign settlement. On a small hill are foreign consulates, western churches, hospitals and handsome residences which constitute a community almost independent of the Chinese city, while below is a business district with streets lined with foreign and native-owned shops where eastern and western merchandise is on display. Commodious clubs, wide sweeps of grassy lawns dotted with flowering gardens, a race track, tennis courts and pleasure craft on the Min tend to keep the small foreign population contented.

The visitor should not hurry into Foochow proper, even if he could, for to do so would be to miss the physical beauties and fabled history that accentuate each step of the journey from the ocean to the port. Along the Min one may see pearl divers. Should a diver be drowned his fellows stoically conclude that he has fallen a victim to the sea-turtle, Chinese equivalent for the legendary sea-serpent of the West.

Near Pagoda Anchorage rises Sharp peak, capped by a tower built by a wife to welcome home an oriental Enoch Arden who, when he saw it, thought he had mistaken the river, and sailed away again, never to return. A mandarin's footprint in a rock commemorates the summary punishment of quarrymen who kept right on chopping away its companion footprint, despite the flow of blood that spurted out at each stroke. When removed to a place in a bridge it registered a protest by kicking its bearers into the river, so the companion was not molested.

Inside the Foochow wall a few modern schools and government buildings have punctuated an otherwise low, flat sky line of rather dingy buildings. Telegraph keys click in telegraph offices, electric lights are available to those who can afford them, a few automobiles may be seen on the main dawn to dusk by Chinese women and children. Last year Foochow exported more than 7,000,000 pounds of Fukien tea and re-exported an additional 5,000,000 pounds which were shipped to its "tea perfumeries." There are more than forty tea factories in the

The open shops along the Foochow streets reveal thousands of natives eking out an existence in various industries. Before one's eyes artisans make wooden pillows and images of gods and odd-looking beasts; cabinet makers turn out fancy furniture; potters shape and fire handsome vessels; brick makers fashion their products in all shapes, sizes and colors; both men and women sit silently embroidering, or weaving the dark cloth usually worn by peasants; and dyers, with inky hands, seemingly turn old garments into new of a different color. Trade with 27 cities and many small villages above Foochow which are reached by river boats accounts for much of Foochow's commercial activity. It was not until 1861 when the Min was opened to foregn shipping that the city's "suburbs" spread out along the Min banks and Foochow merchants beckoned to world trade. Since then Foochow's annual output of tea alone once reached nearly 100,-000,000 pounds and it bids fair to repeat.

The Dog Worshipers.

On a mountain not far from the city one encounters the dog worshiperseasily distinguishable by the peculiar coiffure of their women; a scaffoldlike effect with a cord dangling before the face. This is worn because of a myth which holds that a dog once saved the city and the gods rewarded him by subjecting him to a process by which he was to become human after his incarceration for seven times fory days. An impatient provincial Pandora lifted the cover when all but his head had been transformed and thus left a dog-headed man. In going to claim his bride his face was covered so his canine features might not offend her. So, to this day, the women of the mountain wear the headdress in honor of him and, on New Year's day, they worship the image of a dog. Near the city is Doctrine hill, which derives this one of its many names from the residence there of a certain salary as a newspaper reporter, still trying to write, but never getting anywhere. Possibly he might have made a business man; maybe he could have been a lawyer or a physician, or he might even have taught other people how to write-it often does not seem essential that one should know how to do a thing himself in order to teach others-but he could not write himself. He had no talent for it. though he had immeasurable ambition.

I saw in a great art center some time ago scores of men and women whose feverish ambition was to be great painters. Some of them were young and healthy looking, but the thing that seemed to me the saddest about it all was the fact that many of them were old, gray, pale-faced, who were possessed of this high ambition to do something outstanding, and yet who had grown old doing only the commonplace.

The work of keeping the monuments clean from these growths costs the municipality many thousand lire a vear.

Malloy, then a fourteen-year-old youth, escaped from the Salix (Iowa) tornado with a fractured collar bone and two small scars on his back. He had forgotten the scars until one of them became sore and a small lump formed on it. Physicians opened the lump and found a wedge of plate glass between the ribs.

Iosco county has 42 divorced men and 17 divorced women residing within its borders, according to the 1930 government census figures re-leased recently. Widowed men there are 175 and widowed women 221. Many other interesting figures are revealed by the report, which is now being sent out by the govern ment. Of the males 15 years of age or over in the county, 977 are sin-gle and 1601 are married, while of the women 515 are single and 1598 are married.

Not quite all of the younger children in the county have been attending school regularly, but the percentage is high. 98.2 per cent of the youngsters from 7 to 13 years to choose from of age inclusive, have been attending school, the report shows, and that is 1177 out of a possible 1199. After 15 years of age the record drops off rapidly, however, and for the 18 to 20 years of age inclusive class only 23.6 per cent were at-tending school, or 95 from a possi-ble 402 ble 402.

Just how many vabies there are in the county is a question often 60 girls, and at the time the census was taken no Negro babies were included in the number.

The largest number of the population of the county, which is 7517. divided 3984 males and 3533 females, in any age division is from 35 to 44 years, the census report shows. In this age group are 921 and in the 10 to 14 division, a close second, are 862. The report lists four Negroes in the county. Of the older persons, 212 were 75 years or over

The county has 123 persons ten years old and over who are classed as illiterates, or a percentage of 2, which is average among the coun-ties of Michigan which has an av-erage of only two per cent. That is a good showing, tio, for it is a decrease of one per cent in ten years, the 1920 figures being three per cent., 3.1 per cent of this coun-ty's population were illiterate in 1920. #### THE STORY

By chance James Lee meets Lucy Gresham, daughter of Sir John Gresham, wealthy ship builder. Lee, unjustly accused of robbing the Gresham firm, was sent to prison. He blames Oliver Antes, Lucy's cousin, and Gresham's manager, and seeks revenge. Lee inherits wealth and, in com-pliance with the will, changes his name from Warrington. He secures an invitation to the girl's birthday party. Lucy is practical-ly engaged to Ames. She meets Lee.

"Oh, I don't know. . . . Yes, of course. . . . Only it seems to me it's awfully difficult to know exactly what you . . . what you feel, for a person when you've known him all your life and been awfully fond of him, alwavs. . .

"So he's asking you to know?" She nodded.

"And to tell him? Tonight? Before he goes?"

"Yes." "So that is why you must; why you want. . . No: why you promised to dance with him again?"

"What sort of magic are you working, that you should. . . know all this?" she cried unsteadily. She did not know that Ames' devotion to her was common knowledge, and that Lee's guess was founded upon what St. Abb had told him.

"Just the simple magic of putting two and two together," he answered, and then went off at a tangent, "Why are you interested in me?"

"Oh . ., because . . . because you look. . . ."

"Yes?" "Clever. . . ."

"Yes, and . . .?"

She looked up, scanning his face with very earnest eyes.

"And . . . and just a little . . . cruel . . ." she said uncertainly. "No!" she corrected herself quickly. "Not cruel; just a whole lot hurt . .

He caught in a breath so sharply that she heard it, and saw that a rich color flooded up into his face.

She had been all woman in that little judgment of him, and he had thought her only a child. "I am particularly happy tonight,' he said slowly. "One of my biggest ambitions has been fulfilled. "Yes?" The word was scarcely audible.

"I am here; in your father's house"; you about," she answered quickly. 'Mr. James Lee. . . ." She rattled off into the story of the surprising coincidence of his being the necklace man, as they went into the ballroom and began their dance. "He seems to have become very friendly. . . . I have a sort of idea I've seen him before, somewhere, but can't think where . I couldn't see his face; he didn't turn far enough round."

"You may have done. I believe he goes about a good deal. Lady Cordelia says that London is making rather a fuss of him . . ." she said, in a quick, chattering way that was not characteristic of her. A way that struck hot fury and cold fear into. Oliver's heart. The evening had been a 'torment of waiting, to him; and now, when it was almost time for him to go, she talked to him in this light, nervous way. But he resolutely thrust the fear from him. . . . It was not thinkable that he should now have reason for fear.

He glanced at the watch on his wrist; it was five minutes to eleven. "I have to go, Lucy. Come and speed the guest?"

The words brought her once more fact to face with her problems. Scarcely audibly, she agreed, and he took her through the ballroom out on to the terrace and down into the moonlit garden.

By a door in the wall, at the end of the garden, they stopped, and he turned and faced her abruptly. They were wrapped in shadow through which their faces showed oddly white. "My answer, Lucy. . . . I must have it. . . After all these years. All these years of utter devotion . You are going to marry me, darling. . . aren't you?" The tearing fear in his odd, ragged, imploring voice cut at Lucy's heart and brought the hot pressure of tears to her throat and eyes. She stood for the briefest moment still and silent; her eyes loking blindly into the deepest shadow. And although it seemed to her that she had never seen anything so terrible as his pleading voice. yet in that moment all her doubts fell away as if they had been no more and wide, unsmiling lips; with the queer, grim force of him; the suggestion of power; of relentless strength. And that nameless, unrathomable unhappiness that caught at her heart Yes, it was he. . . . Because she loved him . . . loved him . . . loved him. He watched the tremulous realization dawn in her moonlit eyes, and it awoke no chivalry or tenderness in him. Instead, triumph swept him headily. Already, he had brought Ames' dreams to nothing; already he had robbed the man who had coldly refused, three years ago, to believe in his innocence, of all that made life most worth living. The next step would be easy, for she, child that she was, was making it so easy for him. To take her from her father; to take her coldly, with only hate in his heart, and let those two men who loved her look on while he broke the tender, childish heart of her; banished the sweet youth and joyousness from her blue eyes and the happy smile from her lips. Triumph beat hot within him. but he carried it no further then : he just bowed before her, offering his arm and said: "Now take me in and feed me, please."

Her eyes were the most exquisite things imaginable, and her smile so soft and tremulous that it was scarcely a smile at all, as she put her girlish hand through his arm.

But Lee was saying within himself: "She's making it easy. She's making it easy. . . The supper room, when they entered it together, was already more than half full. Some of the tables were only large enough for two; others could accommodate parties, but, large or small, they were nearly all occupied. There was, however, an available one in an alcove, which satisfied Lee. Lucy was thankful for the seclusion of this little table, for her heart was beating fast, and she knew that promise was to be broken. . . . Yours to him, or mine to myself." She laughed slightly. "That is a wickedly tricky argument!" she said. "And anyway, my promise was made first." "How do you know that?" "Because it was made days ago . . more than a week. .

Figures Show Its Value in Milk Production.

Records from dairy herd improvement associations show that grain fed to good cows makes money for the dairyman.

The average annual yield of milk for dairy cows in New York is 5,500 pounds of milk. A group of cows with less than the average production, or 5,261 pounds of milk, was fed on an average $20 worth of grain, and $35 worth of hay, silage, and pasture, or $55 in all for feed. The average rethan all costs of feed, the transaction assuring the dairyman a substantial profit on his investment.

In a group with an average production of 5,500 pounds of milk, the value of the milk was $168. The total feed cost was $71, made up of $30 for grain, and $41 for roughage, and the net return was $95.

A group which produced, on an average, 7,771 pounds of milk, and fed $50 worth of grain and $44 worth of roughage, produced a gross return of $213 against a feed cost of $94, or a net During the Presidency of Martin return of $119. Acids in Silage Found

Not Harmful to Cows Claims are frequently made by some groups opposing the use of silage that this feed is harmful to cows because of the acid it contains. No evidence to this effect was found in a carefully controlled experiment conducted by A. E. Perkins and C. F. Monroe of the dairy department at the Ohio experiment station, Wooster.

"I must go and dance." she said a little breathlessly. "Will you come and meet daddy?"

There was a curious tone in his voice as he answered.

"I shall be delighted to meet your father." And he squared his big shoulders slightly as he followed her out of the room.

They found Sir John by the ballroom door, benignly watching the revels, and she gave James Lee into his care, wholly unaware of the emotions that rose within him as he shook hands with the man who had gone yachting when he had lain beneath the shadow of disgrace.

"Isn't it the very strangest thing, daddy," she said. "Mr. Lee is the very man who picked up my beads for me the other day. . . . And, daddy, give him the very nicest cigar you can find to console him for being completely surrounded by dancers and not being able to dance." She broke off abruptly on seeing Ames coming toward her. "Yes, Oliver, I'm just coming; this very minute . . ." she added, on a changed note.

At sound of that name, James Lee swung round toward Sir John. He was not ready to risk being recognized by Oliver Ames. If anyone had been noticing acutely, it would have been seen that his big hands were clenched at his sides, and that a curious stillness held him for a moment as if he were turned to stone. But quite suddenly he looked back at Lucy, speaking to her over his broad shoulder just as she was leaving to join Ames.

"How long will you be?" he asked. "Oh I don't quite know. I'll . . ." she began.

"If you are more than twenty minutes I shall come and fetch you," he said clearly, and followed his host to the smoking room.

She caught a sharp breath, then breathed it out on a shaken little laugh, and found Ames close before her,

Ideas of Her Own

Marjorie had developed a sudden dislike for going to bed. She admitted that she was afraid of the dark. An aunt, who was visiting in the home, said to the seven-year-old Robert: "Bob, you haven't been putting ideas into Marjorie's head and making her afraid to go to bed, have you?" "Of course not," said the boy. "She whirl is a prayer. The shoulder is five years old and has ideas of her own."

You you know I would !" she whispered, feeling wringing the admission from her.

"All right, then; I'll let you dance." He released her, and she went off with St. Abb.

How she managed to live through the next three dances she scarcely knew, although St. Abb made it easier than it might have been by talking the whole time of his chief. And he talked in terms of such glowing admiration that she found her heart beating with a new feeling; a feeling of possessive pride; as if she were listening to praise of something that was already definitely hers. At the finish of the third dance, she was just starting upstairs to fetch a cloak, when a hand over hers, as it touched the stair rail, made her stop and turn. Over the rail, from her two or three steps of advantage, she looked down into Lee's face.

"The next dance is my dance," he reminded her.

She leaned slightly down toward him.

"Yes; I am going to get a cloak: you said the veranda, you know. Did you think I'd forget?" she asked softly. "I pretty well knew you wouldn't. But I like to make sure of things. . . . he answered. "Go and fetch your cloak."

hand held hers tight down to the banister, and again she had to stop. He suddenly realized, then, that she was beautiful. He had been so engrossed with the progress of his schemes that all the exquisite young loveliness of her had not seemed important to him. But he realized it acutely now, and his triumph rose higher still. Not only Ames, but all the world, might well envy him the winning of this girl! So much the better. It made his victory all the greater.

He looked up, laughing, too. If St. Abb had been within earshot, he might have noticed that that laugh was a shade nearer to being a real laugh than any he had ever heard from Lee. The merest shade, but still. nearer. And if Lee himself had noticed it, he might have heard in it a note of warning. But he did not notice it; and so the warning went by him. . . . The moment held for a few seconds, then he lifted his hand and set her free, and, light-footed, she went on her way upstairs. #### WILD DUCK "CROP" HURT BY DROUGHT Writer Urges Protection for Survivors.

Drought this year has decimated the wild duck population of the North American continent. This statement is neither guesswork nor exaggeration. Anybody who has been much around northern Minnesota knows that the housekeeping arrangements of water fowl have been sadly disarranged by the drying up of sloughs and marshes.

So much for the local ducks. But how about flight ducks? In their case the situation is even worse, on the word of the biological survey of the Department of Agrculture, which has just finished an extensive inspection in both the United States and Canada. Says the survey:

"A marked shortage of breeding ducks and young was noted in the great delta region of the Peace and Athabaska rivers (in northern Canada). In tours of several thousand miles the investigators saw only a few dozen small broods of young ducks in an area that in normal years has produced many millions of mallards, pintails, redheads, canvasbacks, bluebills and teals."

More alarming still is the further statement that "a far-reaching inquiry sent out by the Canadian government has failed so far to show that the ducks have found other more remote breeding places."

Ducks are a crop, an annual crop, a crop that can be killed by drought, the same as any other. And this year the drought has killed the duck crop in the principal areas of duck production.

When the apple crop fails we don't eat apples. So why expect to eat ducks when the duck crop fails? True, there will be ducks coming through this fall-emaciated survivors of the drought, broodless hens

Or do we want to have good duck shooting in other and wetter years, at the expense of giving up our shooting this fall? How old may a wild goose become? Dr. C. S. Purdy, collector of archeological relics, displays a small stone arrowhead in a case in his drug store at Buckley, Mich. The arrow point was recovered from the breast of a blue goose shot at Buckeye Lake, Ohio, when Doctor Purdy was a boy.

"The arrow is of Indian manufacture," said Doctor Purdy. "Since stone weapons had not been in use for 50 or 60 years prior to the death of the goose, it would seem that the bird was that old at least. A hunter of my acquaintance brought it down with a shotgun."-Detroit Free Press.

LeVan of the Fremont Ave-nue Methodist Episcopal church, hue Methodist Episcopal church, Bay City. Both churches were full nightly in spite of the extremely hot weather. It certainly did one's soul good to see many times during the meeting both strong men and women kneeling at the altar of God. Rev. LeVan used the same methods that he used in the Fremont Ave-nue church last winter which proved so successful in capturing the crowds of Bay City, and once again bringing that almost forgotten church ing that almost forgotten church before the public eye and having crowds attending all the way from 400 to 700 people in the evening service. Not only did he get the people, but he also made the Fre-mont Avenue church property take its place among the best church property of Bay City.
