PUBLIC SCHOOLS WILL OPEN NEXT TUESDAY A. M.

The Tawas City public schools will open Tuesday morning, September 8, at 8:30, central standard time. The entire faculty will hold a meeting Monday morning at the school building to make definite plans for the first day. The faculty for the ensuing year will consist of the following members:

The superintendent, A. E. Giddings, holds a life certificate and a degree from both the Michigan State Normal College of Ypsilanti and the Michigan State College of East Lansing. He has taken work during the past three summers in the graduate school of the University of Michigan. The ensuing year will be the fifth year of tenure for Mr. Giddings in the local schools.

The principal of the high school, J. R. Forsten, holds a life certificate and a degree from Hope college. He has spent the past two summers in the graduate school of the University of Michigan. The ensuing year will be the fifth for Mr. Forsten in the Tawas City schools.

The commercial teacher, Mrs. Lurissa M. Forsten, holds a life certificate from the Michigan State Normal College, and has had special training in commercial work at the Ferris Institute. The following year will also be the fifth for Mrs. Forsten in Tawas City.

The English-Latin teacher, Miss M. Louise Crosby, holds a life certificate from the Central State Teachers College of Mt. Pleasant. She has also taken special work at Ferris Institute. The ensuing year will complete the fifth for Miss Crosby in her present position.

The grammar room teacher, Robert M. Bollinger, holds a life certificate from the Central State Teachers College. Previous to his present position he taught in the Interior Township Public Schools. The ensuing year will be the third that Mr. Bollinger has occupied his position in our schools.

The upper intermediate teacher, Miss Opal I. Coon, secured a life certificate from the Central State Teachers College of Mt. Pleasant in 1928, and has done some post-graduate work in the same institution. She taught in the Remus public schools before accepting her present position. The next will be the second year of tenure for Miss Coon in Tawas City.

The intermediate teacher, Miss Louise Bird, holds a life certificate from the Western State Teachers College of Kalamazoo, graduating from that institution in 1929. She taught one year in the public schools of Ionia county, and accepted her present position for the school year 1930-1931. The ensuing year will, therefore, be the second year of tenure for Miss Bird in the Tawas City schools.

The primary position will be filled by Mrs. Emma Anschutz, the dean of all the teachers from the standpoint of service in the local public schools.

MRS. SUSANNA SCHREIBER WILL USE PLANE TO DETECT FIRES IN HURON FOREST

Mrs. Susanna Schreiber, pioneer resident of this county, died at five o'clock Tuesday morning at her home in this city. Mrs. Schreiber had been in ill health for several months.

Susanna Grenke was born September 24, 1850, in Germany. She came to the United States in 1871 and was united in marriage to John Schreiber in 1874 at Ghent, N. Y. In 1877 Mr. and Mrs. Schreiber came to Tawas City, later going to Baldwin township and then Wilber township, where they settled on a farm. Mr. Schreiber died March 22, 1916.

The deceased is survived by four sons, Charles Schreiber of Pontiac, Fred Schreiber of Detroit, John Schreiber of Wilber and Ernest Schreiber of Tawas City, two daughters, Mrs. Martha Brooks and Mrs. Amelia Cardo of Colma, Wisconsin, and one brother, Michael Grenke of East Tawas.

The funeral services will be held at two o'clock this afternoon (Friday) from the Tawas City Baptist church. Rev. Frank Metcalf will officiate.

WILL USE PLANE TO DETECT FIRES IN HURON FOREST

For the first time in the history of Michigan airplanes will be used on the Huron National Forest in the detection of forest fires. A contract for this service was recently awarded to the Abrams Aerial Survey Corporation of Lansing, Michigan. One plane will be used in the lower peninsula. A similar plane will be stationed in the upper peninsula. These planes will be used during periods when the atmosphere is hazy on account of smoke or fog. When this condition exists, the fire towers are unable to render satisfactory service.

Airplanes have been used with success in the west for patrolling for fires and in scouting the larger going fires for the purpose of aiding the attack, and last year they were a big help in Minnesota and Wisconsin. Unfortunately, landing fields are at a premium in the immediate vicinity of the forest. A new landing field is being considered at Mio, and it is hoped that a similar field will be developed near East Tawas.

While the western states are battling large fires which already have caused the loss of several lives, and have destroyed values running up into the thousands of dollars, the Huron National Forest in Michigan has not so far this year had similar conditions to contend with. The fall fire season is immediately ahead of us, and no one knows what it may have in store. Only recently we read about a large fire which burned over 10,000 acres in the southern part of the state. To have a fire of this magnitude means that all conditions for a fire must be just right—a long period without rainfall, low humidity, high winds, and temperatures can cause a disaster when one least expects it. Therefore, be careful with your smokes, campfires, and matches wherever you are. Be sure they are out before you leave them; and should you see a fire along the road, put it out, and at the same time send someone to report it to the nearest forest officer or fire warden.

To date this year the Huron National Forest has had 22 fires, and fifty per cent of these have been caused by carelessness with smokes. Man has been responsible for every one of them. The area burned over comprises 643 acres. The co-operation of all who visit the forest is sincerely solicited. By being careful it is hoped that further damage can be eliminated.

JOHN FRIEDRICHSSEN WILL USE PLANE TO DETECT FIRES IN HURON FOREST

John Friedrichsen of Tawas township passed away suddenly at his home Tuesday, August 25. Mr. Friedrichsen was in perfect health until death came.

The deceased was born August 28, 1852, at Holstein, Germany, and came to the United States in 1891, settling at Oscoda. He moved to Tawas township in 1897 and has made his home there since that time. He was united in marriage to Bertha Mess in 1893. To this union thirteen children were born, three of whom passed away in early life.

He leaves to mourn his death besides his wife, six daughters and four sons, Mrs. Anna Brown, Mrs. Emma Gonsler, Mrs. Augusta Pigott and Albert Friedrichsen of Flint, Mr. Martha Finn, Mrs. Eva Finn and John Friedrichsen of Detroit, Charles, Elmer and Miss Frances, at home, one brother in Germany, twelve grandchildren, and a number of other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were held at the home on his seventy-ninth birthday, Friday afternoon, at 2 o'clock. Rev. W. L. Jones of the Methodist Episcopal church officiated. Burial was made in the family lot in the Tawas City cemetery.

ENROLLMENT HAS INCREASED 200 PER CENT

The Whittemore Public Schools opened on August 31. Five years ago it opened for the first time as a twelve grade school. In these five years it has grown over two hundred per cent in enrollment. The following teachers are in charge this year:

F. L. Stelter, superintendent, has been in the system all the years since it became an accredited school, first as principal and later as superintendent. He holds an A. B. degree from the Michigan State Normal College at Ypsilanti and has had graduate work at the University of Michigan.

Howard Switzer has been principal for the past three years. He has a life certificate from the Central State Teachers College at Mount Pleasant. He has charge of all boys' athletics and is mathematics instructor. In his three years' work here he has made many friends in the town and among the student body.

Mrs. Horace Powell, who has been English and history instructor for the past three years, holds an A. B. degree from the Western State Teachers College at Kalamazoo. Mrs. Powell has charge of girls' basketball.

Mrs. Harry Hill holds a life certificate from Western State Teachers College at Kalamazoo. She has taught Latin and English in the Whittemore school for the past two years. To her is due the credit for the quality of school plays that so many people have enjoyed.

Mrs. Leo Wilson is beginning her second year in the intermediate room. She holds a certificate from Central State Teachers College. Her work with the 4-H sewing girls has made her as great a favorite with the high school students as with her own pupils.

Mrs. Duncan Valley has been in the system for the past five years, and holds a certificate from the Michigan State Normal College at Ypsilanti. Though she has charge of the primary room, she is acquainted with every student, and enjoys the friendship and confidence of everyone. She has charge of the 4-H club work, sewing work, and her pupil, Miss Ella Ross, won the state championship for fifth year sewing.

LOVE IN A LAND OF LOVE DEPICTED BY "TABU"

Love; in a land where love began. That is what one Hollywood writer calls "Tabu," the F. W. Murnau feature picture of South Sea island life which comes to the State Theatre on Wednesday and Thursday.

"Tabu" is the story of a primitive love between Reri, a beautiful Polynesian girl of the island of Bora Bora, and her handsome lover, Matahi, a youth of the same tribe.

They live happily in the carefree joyousness with which all the natives seem to be endowed. But their romance is threatened when the chief of the islands arrives to announce that Reri has been honored as the Chosen One, the maid who will henceforth be set apart from all others. She is to be "tabu"—that is, unattainable, beyond the possession of any man. None is to desire her. He who hits, must suffer death.

When Hitu, the chief, takes her away, Matahi follows and steals her from the righteous-minded old leader. Reri and Matahi go to a faraway island where he succeeds for a time as a pearl-fisher, earning money which they spend freely in feasts and semi-civilized carryings-on. But old Hitu finds them out and threatens Matahi with death unless he give up his loved one.

In order to save her lover, Reri goes with Hitu. Matahi learns of this in time to follow the departing boat. He swims manfully, desperately, to rescue her. The ending is dramatic, full of heart-stirring emotion.

Boxing Exhibition to Be Given at Hale

A boxing exhibition will be given at Hale on the evening of Labor Day. Six bouts of from four to six rounds each will be staged.

The feature bout of the exhibition will be a six round go between Paul Follette of Detroit and Paul Myers of Saginaw. This promises to be a very interesting match as both are good fighters and in condition to put up a real scrap. Follette will have a slight advantage in weight but Myers will have a distinct advantage in boxing experience.

The other bouts will be between youngsters from Hale, Detroit and Saginaw.

STATE FEATURES CHARLIE CHAPLIN IN "CITY LIGHTS"

Charlie Chaplin, that magic personality of which the name alone brings joyous smiles to millions, makes his bow with the most glorious story ever brought to the screen in "City Lights," which will be shown at the State Theatre on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

A battered bit of human driftwood, floating in the tides of city life, the Chaplin of old with the baggy trousers, shabby derby, bamboo cane and pocket edition mustache, is seen in a story full of pathos, tenderness and laughter the world loves, and done as only Chaplin can do it.

The Chaplin touch is in a class by itself, and in this picture it is at its greatest. Supporting the great comedian are such favorites as Harry Myers and Henry Bergman. The girl is a Chaplin discovery, Virginia Cherrill. Greater than "The Gold Rush" and "The Circus," "City Lights" will be acclaimed the master comedy of the age.

EMANUEL LUTHERAN CHURCH

West Point's Memorial to a Master of Swords

A view of the memorial erected to Lieut. Col. Herman J. Koehler, in charge of the physical development of the cadets at the United States Military academy at West Point from 1885 to 1923. Koehler, a "master of swords," was popular with the officers and cadets and their appreciation of his work led the Association of Graduates to erect the memorial in the entrance hall to the gymnasium building.

Tells of Dangers on Volcano Flight

Hop Over Aniakchak "Prelude to Hell," Priest Says.

Santa Clara, Calif.—A graphic description of his recent flight across the volcano Aniakchak is given by Father Bernard J. Hubbard, famed "patriot of the snows," in dispatches from Alaska.

Aniakchak is the world's largest active volcano, and was successfully spanned by the Santa Clara university priest in a plane piloted by Harry Blunt. The plane was nearly sucked into the crater.

"It was the most terrible prelude of hell that I ever imagined," Father Hubbard informed friends at Shignik, Alaska, from his base camp at Kujulik bay.

Crater Changed.

"The great moon of the crater was completely changed from its shape last year," he said. "Where we hunted caribou and picked flowers last year is now inside the crater."

"A high fissure many miles long splits the southwestern floor of the crater and the mountain in the center has blown up and is still erupting."

"In the southeastern crater floor there are two new pits which resemble a huge coliseum. They are sending out smoke and cinders continually."

Deafness Blessing for This Man's Neighbor

Seattle, Wash.—Several hours of patient tugging finally repaid Ronald Egerer when he landed a large trout—one of the biggest fish he had ever caught—and he happily contemplated the meal it would make.

He proudly showed it to his wife, who suggested that the neighbors ought to see it before it was cooked. Egerer put it on a platter and went next door. The neighbor took the platter, examined the fish, then turned to enter the house.

"Thanks, old man," he flung back; "mighty nice of you to give me this fish. It'll make a swell meal for the family."

Egerer's heated comments a few minutes later were halted by his wife. "He's hard of hearing and thought you were giving it to him," she remarked.

Small Beetle Aiding in Fight on Forest Worms

Newberry, Mich.—A small beetle has come to the rescue of forests in the upper peninsula infested with a small worm which has stripped trees of leaves, according to reports.

Aid has been sought from the entomology department at Michigan State college and the response was that the worm could be killed only by airplane dusting. When a trip was made through the forests recently, however, it was reported that the worms were diminishing in numbers and that they were seen to have been eaten by the beetles.

These Puppies Should Be Air-Minded

Dorsey, the full-blooded Eskimo dog owned by Joe Collins of Roosevelt field, with her litter of seven pups walking the plank to terra firma after the mother and her brood went aloft for an airplane flight. The puppies were born in the cockpit of an antiquated airplane in one of the hangars at Roosevelt field.

ly. The entire crater is black and resembles nothing more than a huge tank containing many cubic miles of sulphur gases.

"Our trip was like a trip to the moon. It seemed as if we were looking into a moon crater.

Feared Being Sucked In.

"The plane rocked and dove. For a time it seemed as if we would be sucked into the huge crater, but I had full confidence in Harry Blunt, my pilot, and in the prayers of the mission native children of Holy Cross, Alaska, who promised to pray to the Queen of Angels each day for our safety and success in our unique venture."

The airplane trip, Father Hubbard declared, was necessary in order to study the activity of the volcano before seasonal changes obliterated many important features.

Unsinkable Boat Latest French Invention

Latest Craft May Revolutionize Navigation.

Vichy.—Possibilities of the complete revolution of the factor of safety in navigation appeared when experiments on a 25-foot model of an unsinkable boat, held in the River Allier here, were completely successful.

The inventor of the craft, Joseph Chartrain of Clermont-Ferrand, has refused to reveal any details of his method and the high naval officers who witnessed the experiments made no comment except to express their satisfaction.

The little boat, constructed of sheet steel, and weighing 1,320 pounds, was moored in the Allier. The first step was to smash over 50 holes in the hull below the waterline. The boat settled slightly, but preserved entire navigability. The holes, on the basis of scale comparison, are equal to those which would be made by a 24-inch shell. No shells of this size are in use.

The boat was next loaded with 1,700 pounds of lead, well over her own weight, without settling at all. Tilted to an angle of 45 degrees, and handicapped by the holes and the load, she righted herself immediately.

A police guard was set over the boat immediately after the experiments, pending the decision of the government on whether to buy the discovery and its eventual disposal by

Ancient Buggy Causes Horse to Run Away

The Dalles, Ore.—A runaway of all things—started The Dalles the other day.

It all happened when Nat Garman's kids hitched a horse to an ancient buggy. The horse bolted down the street while numerous young Garman tumbled out of the buggy. The horse did not stop until the buggy was overturned.

'Tis an Old Story, But It's Still Good

Columbia, Pa.—Tubs full of rain water were offered as evidence here to substantiate a report that during a recent storm it "rained frogs and tadpoles."

Pools of water accumulating after the shower were "literally alive" with the amphibious creatures, said observers.

Several residents carried cans of rain water containing the frogs and junior frogs to the office of the Columbia News.

MAYOR FORTY YEARS

Capt. Harry Wooding, a veteran of the Civil war, who served with the Confederate cavalry forces, is serving his fortieth year as mayor of Danville, Va. Captain Wooding was first elected mayor in 1892, during the Cleveland administration, and has served without a break since that time. He is eighty-seven years old and in splendid health, being proud of the fact that he hasn't spent $10 in doctor's bills in the last forty years.

Best Revives Terrier Instead of Killing It

St. Louis, Mo.—Babe, a two-year-old fox terrier, became so ill in a recent heat wave here that Mr. and Mrs. Otto Walkenhorst decided death would be merciful. So they called the police.

"The officers said Babe could live only a few hours, anyway, and it would be better to kill her."

The patrolman took Babe outside. One policeman hit her a tremendous blow on the head. The body was covered with a carpet, but the children wanted one last look at the pup.

Babe opened her eyes, and Mrs. Walkenhorst screamed.

"She looked up so pitifully that we brought her inside and massaged her. In the morning she was up to meet the milkman as usual. We believed the blow on the head, instead of killing Babe, really made her well again, because she romps about now as she never did before," Walkenhorst said.

"Little Stories for Bedtime" by Thornton W. Burgess

WHAT THE TWINKLING LITTLE STARS SAW

HIGH up in the darkened sky the little stars twinkled and twinkled as they looked down on the Green Meadows and the Green Forest, on the Old Pasture, the Old Orchard and the Smiling Pool. No sign was there of the little people who sleep at night, for they were hidden away in their secret places, trusting to their stillness and the Black Shadows to keep them safe from those who were hunting for them. But of the little people who see by night many were abroad. Over the Green Meadows and the Green Forest on noiseless wings, coming and going as silently as one of the Black Shadows themselves, was Hooty the Owl looking for a dinner. Just beyond the edge of the dear Old Brier Patch little Mrs. Peter Rabbit hunted for some clover leaves still green and sweet, ready to run back to the safety of the friendly brambles at the least sound.

Up the Crooked Little Path walked Jimmy Skunk. The little stars winked and twinkled more than ever. They knew where he was going. He was headed straight for Farmer Brown's henhouse. Down the Lone Little Path through the Green Forest came Uncle Billy Possum. Uncle Billy was very fat. On the edge of the Laughing Brook sat Bobby Coon very still and gazing very hard into a little pool. Bobby was fishing. In the Smiling Pool was Jerry Muskrat so busy putting the final touches on his house for the winter that he could hardly take the time for a hasty lunch. You know Jerry is a great worker.

But the most interesting place on which the little stars looked down was the pond of Paddy the Beaver deep in the Green Forest. All around in the edges the Black Shadows lay, but out in the middle the pond was silvery in the starlight. Just where the Black Shadows and the silvery part met floated twelve queer looking things. The little stars twinkled harder than ever, for never before had they seen anything like these in the pond of Paddy the Beaver. They were Honker the Goose and his followers sleeping peacefully after their long, long journey from the Far North.

And the little stars saw more. They saw Paddy the Beaver as busy as Jerry Muskrat, his cousin, of the Smiling Pool. He also was laying in supplies for the winter. At the same time Paddy was doing more. He was keeping watch for danger, not only for himself but for his visitors, for Paddy felt responsible for their safety. That is, he felt that he should prevent any harm coming to them. So he was very wide awake. His ears and his nose were busy every minute, on guard for sounds and odors which might mean that enemies were coming. The little stars twinkled as they watched, and presently they saw three forms creeping stealthily among the trees toward the pond of Paddy the Beaver. One came from the direction of the Old Pasture. It was Old Man Coyote. The other two were together coming from the direction of the Green Meadows. They were Reddy and old Granny Fox.

The little stars have looked down on many exciting things that have happened in the night, just as jolly, round, bright Mr. Sun has looked down on many exciting things that have happened in the day time. This promised to be quite as exciting as anything they had seen for a long time, for it was very clear that Old Man Coyote and Granny and Reddy Fox were after a goose for dinner, and you know there are no hunters more clever than these three. As long as those sleeping geese were out in the middle of the pond they were safe, quite safe, but the watching stars saw that several of them were drifting little by little toward the shore. Would they wake up in time?

The world would be more happy and the mass of the people in it just as wise, if they would whistle and sing more and argue less.

FOOD COMBINATIONS

THERE is no law which governs the foods that go together, nor the time or season for serving; for the kind of food served depends upon whether you live in China or in Boston. The tastes of the people determine the food combinations.

There is nothing more interesting to the average woman than foods, their combinations and methods of preparing and serving. We like and thrive on certain kinds of food and are in better health than when too many combinations are offered.

As we learn to treat the body as the engineer treats his furnace, giving it fuel at stated times, not over stoking it or filling it up with too many kinds, we find we have better health and greater efficiency. If we over eat, we waste good fuel and over work the furnace; if we are undernourished the furnace cannot give off heat or supply energy.

The three food principles which we find supplies the body in the best manner are proteins, such as meat, eggs, fish, milk and the carbohydrates, which are sugars and starches, represented by potatoes, rice and sugar; then come the fats and mineral matters, which are fully as important. We find our fats in yolk of egg, cream, butter and fat of meats. If these principles are included in each meal or during the three meals of a day we have what is called a well balanced diet.

We obtain our mineral matters, which build up bone, teeth, and nails, from green and root vegetables. Fruits give us the acids we need as well as sugar and mineral matter. The roughage which is found in the leaf and root vegetables is also valuable for its use in the intestinal tract, keeping it clean and also inciting the action of the villi in the intestine.

All Nations Are Building This Memorial

ALL the world claims Shakespeare, so all the world is contributing toward the erection of the new Shakespeare Memorial theater at Stratford-on-Avon, England, an aerial view of which is given herewith. It is to be a beautiful building, standing close to the lovely Avon, and will be equipped with all modern theatrical devices. The superstructure is practically completed and the theater will be ready for dedication on the birthday of the immortal bard next April.

Your Home and You By Betsy Callister

SALT IN DAMP WEATHER

TO THE housewife damp summer weather means caked salt and stopped salt shakers. It is true that various sorts of special table salt do much to help this difficulty, and the trick of putting a few grains of rice in the salt shaker also does some good. Adding a little cornstarch to the salt undoubtedly helps to keep it from caking, though it also adulterates it.

English people have a sharp dislike for the salt shaker and this is perhaps because they have so much damp weather. They regard the open cellar as the only fit dish for salt, and salt shakers as gross Americanisms.

On the other hand we are apt to look on open salt dishes as not so conveniently sanitary as shakers. If we do use them they should be refilled before each meal and never allowed to stand uncovered where dust might get on them. Then too they should be used with little glass salt spoons—silver corrodes too readily in contact with salt.

The only trouble that pepper gives the housewife is that it loses strength if kept on hand too long. It may remain "hot" enough but loses the characteristic spicy flavor that is so much stronger in freshly ground pepper from a little hand pepper mill than in pepper shaken from a can of ground pepper that has been kept on hand for some time. Oddly enough some persons don't like the freshly ground pepper—they have become so accustomed to stale pepper that the fresh kind doesn't taste like real pepper.

Most housewives have some prejudice or other regarding the time to salt vegetables. Some insist that potatoes should be boiled in salty water, others that this takes from the flavor. Some cooks never salt meat until it is partly cooked, others do not add the salt until it is entirely cooked, while others dredge meat with a little salt and pepper before beginning to cook it. To boil meat or vegetables in salty water is believed by some to toughen them. There is as a matter of fact, very little if any difference in flavor whether food is seasoned before, during or after cooking, so the best advice is to go ahead in the way to which you are accustomed. Only of course with cereal or anything that becomes thick with cooking it is easier to distribute the salt if it is added before cooking.

Fishhooks Little Changed

Copper fishhooks used by fishermen on the River Euphrates thousands of years ago are in the possession of the Field museum, Chicago, and are said to be not very different from modern hooks.

The Old Gardener Says:

PHLOX plants flower freely, and if left to themselves are almost certain to set a large quantity of seeds, which will fall to the ground and quickly germinate. Then a crop of undesired seedlings will come up all around the mother plant, in some instances perhaps crowding it out. It is when this sort of thing happens that garden makers think their plants have reverted to the distressing magenta, which is all too common in gardens. The moral is, of course, that the phlox should not be allowed to go to seed, and that seedlings, which happen to come up, should be rooted out.

THE LITTLE LADIES By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

NOT all the ladies I have known were twenty-one or two. On Sunday morning, out alone To walk, as people do, Some Sunday morning fair and cool I'm always meeting some, When home again from Sunday school The little ladies come.

Within their hands a book of prayer, Within their hearts a psalm, I wish that all the ladies there Were half as sweet and calm. For, whether winter's here again Or spring, with budding grass, It always seems like Sunday when The little ladies pass.

A coat, a hat, a parasol, And shoes of black or tan, As gracefully they wear them all As any lady can. They bow to left, they bow to right, Upon the promenade. It surely is a pretty sight To me—I guess to God.

Aviation in Canada

One of Canada's Far-Flung Trading Posts.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

ALTHOUGH the revised itinerary of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh's vacation flight to Japan and China routed them over many square miles of practically unexplored territory in northwest Canada, much of the country they traversed between Washington, D. C. and Baker Lake, Northwest Territories, has been flown by Canadian government air surveys and by aerial prospectors.

The native Indians, Eskimos and Royal Canadian mounted policemen of the Hudson Bay district have not before had such distinguished aerial visitors, but the sight of an airplane, either in winter or summer, is no new experience to them.

Few people, except those who have seen it, realize the high degree to which northern Canada has organized its air transport. Using water routes, open in summer, it has laid down a wide network of fuel and supply stations at strategic points. All around Hudson Bay, at convenient spots; down the Mackenzie river to Lake Athabaska; about Great Slave and Great Bear lakes and along the Arctic coast, and down the Yukon, these depots are set up. Now practically every district in continental Canada is within flying range of one of these stations. In fact, if you picture the Canadian airways as linked up with the air net in the United States, the broad statement is true that, given good weather, no place on the North American continent is now more than one or two days' flight from a railway.

It was in survey work and in patrols of her millions of acres of forest reserves that Canada first used planes. The first attempt to use a plane on a long distance commercial mission was made by an oil company in 1921. To meet an emergency, it started two all-metal monoplanes, on skis, from the railroad at Peace river on a 1,200-mile flight to Norman on the Mackenzie river. The weather was vile; blizzards with temperatures of 40 and 50 below zero alternated with mild spring thaws.

Pilots Are Resourceful.

One plane, landing on crusted snow, at Simpson, broke through so that a ski collapsed and a propeller blade struck the ground. But the resourcefulness of Canadian pilots, in a smash, far from shops and spare-part stores, is revealed in Pilot Gorman's laconic report on this accident:

"March 30 . . . Will try and have a new 'prop' made here. Oak sleigh boards are available; also some glue. And a Hudson's Bay company man named Johnson is an old cabinetmaker . . . We can use the damaged propeller as a pattern and use the Catholic mission workshops here.

"March 31. Found moosehide glue. Borrowed some boat clamps, so that the boards can be clamped tightly together in making the laminated propeller.

"April 15. Tested the new propeller. It works satisfactorily."

The amazing degree to which planes now wipe out miles and save time in Canada was shown by flights and photography work carried on from a base on the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence. From this stormy coast Capt. Vernon ("Turk") Robinson made flight after flight, bearing surveyors and supplies over a mountainous coast line into the interior plateau. He carried drums of gas by air, making caches at points far distant; from these deposits planes could operate even farther inland. Thus Grand Falls, on the Hamilton river, was finally reached. Then, after a day's flight of 800 miles, starting from Burnt lake, photographs were taken of the falls; and the next day the engineer-photographer was back in Quebec having his pictures developed. By sea and canoe, the only other means of travel, this task would have taken all summer!

Adventure, grim and perilous, is often the lot of pilots and passengers in flight over the long stretches of empty wilderness which intervene between fuel caches, camps, or settlements.

Meet With Perilous Adventures.

One party, from a base on the inhospitable Gulf of St. Lawrence, was forced down by bad weather and had to alight on an unknown lake. A floating log ripped the bottom from their hull and the flying boat sank. Casting aside their clothing, the crew swam for the shore. They made land minus any food or equipment, and spent a week, naked, in the woods, in the midst of the black-fly season. The days were blazing hot, but the nights freezing cold. Two men, badly hurt in the crash, reached the shore only with the greatest difficulty.

Happily, however, in the party was a land surveyor, who managed to swim ashore with a hand ax and a water-tight box of matches. Using his ax, he made a rude shelter. By snarling rabbits in the woods and killing frogs with sticks, the party kept alive for seven days, till rescued by another flying boat sent to seek them.

The search for the lost French flyers, Coli and Nungesser, in May, 1927, nearly cost the lives of Captain Robinson and his crew. They had flown along the north shore as far as the Strait of Belle Isle, then still full of ice, when a storm forced them down. Anchoring late in the evening, in the shelter of a rocky ledge, they curled up in their cockpit to await better weather. Suddenly the wind veered, blowing a gale from the open sea. Their anchor dragged and their ship smashed on the rocks. They saved their emergency kits, made a fire on shore from the wreckage of their plane, and cooked breakfast. They walked 20 miles along the beach, to a lighthouse and signal station, to report their whereabouts.

Returning from a flight up the Ashuapmucuan river, one pilot brought with him an old Indian. When invited to ride, the red man seemed in no way perturbed at the prospect. He calmly donned helmet and goggles and settled himself in the front cockpit, as if flying were an everyday act with him. In a half hour he flew downstream a distance which just previously it had taken him six days to cover by canoe.

On landing he climbed out, stretched himself, and said to the pilot: "Bon canoe! How much him cost?" That Indian saw the advantage of air travel in the north country. Undoubtedly he graphically pictured to himself what paddlerwork he could save for himself and family in their long annual canoe trips to their hunting grounds, if they owned such a "bon canoe!"

Flying in Winter.

In north Quebec, flying goes on summer and winter.

On a January morning Capt. Kenneth Saunders, chief pilot of the Canadian Fairchild company, started north with an engineer and a Hudson's Bay company official, on a visit to some of the northern trading posts. Unless one flies, it usually takes six weeks of musing on snowshoes, with a dog team to haul baggage, to reach these wilderness outposts. Regions between posts are wholly uninhabited. Snow lies from four to six feet deep; trails, such as they are, usually follow the lakes and rivers, through a broken country of small timber.

When Saunders and party left Roberval the day was bright and fair, but the thermometer was 25 below. An hour up the Ashuapmucuan they sighted the first trading post and circled to land on the frozen river. Either they struck a spot where a warm spring had thawed the ice or else an early fall of snow on this ice had prevented a thicker formation; anyway, the plane broke through. The men had barely time to crawl from the cabin before the whole fuselage was under water.

Luckily, they were near the post, and Tom Moar, the Indian in charge, volunteered to walk out the hundred miles to civilization with a message. He started away within half an hour, taking only an ax, some matches and a chunk of moose meat. He made the trip in the record time of five days, sleeping twice, on the second and fourth night, in holes in the snow lined with balsam boughs, and traveling continuously the rest of the time.

Meantime the Canadians set about salvaging their plane. They made a platform of logs around the machine on which to work. As the water was not deep, a tripod of poles cut from the woods was built over the aircraft and its wings were removed.

Salvaged Their Plane.

Seven days later a rescue machine reached the scene with hoisting tackle and tools. The wrecked plane was moved safely to shore. A tent was erected around the front of the fuselage and the engine, which was a solid mass of ice. This ice was chopped out, and then a stova was lit in the tent and gradually the cabin and engine thawed out.

The metal propeller, badly bent, was straightened and the engine reassembled. The carburetor, though frozen in a solid block of ice for eight days, again worked perfectly.

On the 6th of February the plane was again ready for flight. Accompanied by the rescue machine, which had made several trips to ferry in gas, provisions, and little gifts for Mrs. Moar and her family (on whose hospitality the crew had been dependent during the salvage operations), it took off safely and flew back to Roberval.

Northern British Columbia is as inaccessible a country as can be found on this continent. Cut off from the Pacific by the panhandle of Alaska, with its coastal mountains and glaciers, it can be reached only by the Stikine, the Peace, or the Liard rivers and their tributaries.

Romance in Realm of World Finance

Drama Is Woven Around the Pound and Franc.

London.—Romance still lives in the world of international finance, although it may be dimmed by a few drab technicalities.

The most recent drama was woven about the English pound and the French franc, with the Austrian shilling as the poor, long suffering orphan. Its sensational ending dispelled, for the present at least, all hopes of France to make Paris the greatest money market in Europe.

The curtain rises with the Credit-Anstalt, once the most powerful institution in central Europe, slowly approaching collapse. Its funds had been used liberally to support Austrian industry and manufacturers in adjoining states, when the economic depression descended.

In a moment of desperation, Austrian leaders turned to their old ally, Germany, which had little money to offer, but suggested a reciprocal customs scheme whereby industry of both states would benefit, thus lessening the pressure upon the Credit-Anstalt. Thus was born the Austro-German customs union, which precipitated more heated discussion in Europe than any incident since the armistice.

France feared a new alliance between Austria and Germany in contravention of the treaty of Versailles and offered financial assistance to the Credit-Anstalt in return for abolition of the proposed scheme.

However, after the measure had been referred to the Hague court for final settlement, France's enthusiasm for offering financial aid cooled. In return for floating a $21,000,000 loan urgently needed by the Credit-Anstalt, French financiers demanded Austria scrap the customs union.

Austria's acquiescence, observers pointed out, would have made her simply another franc child of Paris and enhance the city's prestige as a money market. At the crucial moment, however, the Bank of England as the "hero" swept upon the stage with its money bags filled with $21,000,000.

The Credit-Anstalt was saved. The Bank of England's reputation had a new glitter and France was left with nothing but a daze as to how the rich plum had slipped from its grasp.

In addition, French hopes of Paris becoming a great financial center have of late been dampened by the spread of the general depression in France. In May it had an unfavorable balance of visible trade estimated at $45,000,000, the largest it had known for any month in many years.

Denies He's Typical

Representative Robert Low Bacon of New York was designated the other day by Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, distinguished scientist and curator of physical anthropology of the National Museum, as typifying the average American of future generations. But Mr. Bacon indignantly denied that he was a type. According to Hrdlicka, a race of tall, ruddy faced sandy haired people, brawny and hardened by outdoor life, will inhabit the United States in coming years.

Mid-Season Ensemble

A pert little cocque feather perched just above the roll-up brim of the white crocheted turban adds a fetching note to Chanel's smart mid-season ensemble of black, white and orange flat crepe. Orange lines the hip-length bolero jacket and furnishes the saw-tooth edging on the vestee and pockets. A narrow edging of the same tone is noted on the skirt. Black and white pumps and a chain necklace are accessories.

ABOUT THE HOUSE

Rust in ovens is due mostly to moisture that develops from baking or broiling. If the oven door is kept open for twenty minutes after use the moisture will evaporate and remove the cause of rust.

Dry chewing gum, often carried indoors on the soles of shoes, is easily removed from carpets and rugs by putting on a few drops of gasoline. The gum will crumble and can be brushed off.

Serving a sherbet with the meal course adds a novelty touch to the dinner. It is not only delicious in itself but gives a piquant contrasting flavor to heavier dishes. Another all-important point for the busy housewife is that sherbets are easily and quickly prepared.

A well-known scientist in the field of nutritional psychology recently suggested that an excellent way to stimulate digestion is to partake of a sweet snack—a second dessert as it were—a half hour or so after meal time. A few pieces of candy, some small cakes, in fact, anything sweet, he said, is not only a pleasant afterthought to dinner but helps stimulate the flow of gastric juices needed to complete digestion.

Men dislike knife-like edges on their

Russia's Long River

The Volga river of Russia is the longest in Europe. It, itself, is some 2,300 miles long, but with its tributaries furnishes more than 20,000 miles of navigable water. Fifty million people live along this waterway. The Oka and the Kama, two of the Volga branches, are each among the longest rivers of Europe. The head of the Volga is near Petrograd.

Zoo Hippopotamus Reaches Ripe Old Age

New York.—Peter the Great is unique among his kind. He recently celebrated his twenty-fifth birthday, which is another rare event for one of Pete's race, who usually pass to the great beyond before arriving at this staid old age. If Pete has any intention of passing on he failed to demonstrate an early demise as he gobbled up two bales of hay in his quarters in the Bronx zoo. Pete is the huge hippopotamus that for many years has been the center of admiration of the millions of visitors at the zoo.

Fort Wayne, Ind.—A 33,000-mile globe-encircling jaunt has been completed at a cost of under $700 by Harold Greinert, Fort Wayne, and Paul Neipp, Cleveland. The youths, both of whom were graduated from Concordia college here, began their long trip a year ago this month.

Among the methods of earning transportation engaged in by the youths was peeling potatoes on an ocean liner. In Spain they traveled more than 750 miles on bicycles.

Big Cities Spend More Than Three Billion

New York Takes the Lead in List of 250.

Washington.—The 250 cities of the nation having a population of more than 30,000 paid $3,435,289,927 for the operation of their governments in 1929.

Their revenue totaled $3,075,234,308, and property subject to ad valorem taxes totaled for city purposes was valued at $80,402,335,256, or $1814 per capita.

These figures are given in a compilation made public by the Department of Commerce.

The revenue receipts totaled $607,009,389 more than the payments of the year, exclusive of payments for permanent improvements, but $360,055,619 less than the total payments, including those for permanent improvements.

In only 87 of the cities was there sufficient revenue to meet all payments during the year. The payments in excess of revenue receipts were met from the proceeds of debt obligations.

The gross debt outstanding at the close of the year amounted to $8,961,973,215, or a per capita of $202.22, consisting of $7,886,749,779, funded or fixed; $539,446,218, special assessment bonds and certificates; $436,465,087, revenue loans, and $99,312,131, outstanding warrants.

The net indebtedness of the 250 cities amounted to $6,130,289,576, or $138.32 per capita.

With an assessed property valuation of $18,362,062,000, revenues of $663,406,000 and $504,734,000 representing the cost of government, New York led the list.

Following New York in the matter of governmental cost was Chicago, with a total of $172,795,000. The next eight cities, ranked according to their governmental costs, were Philadelphia, Detroit, Los Angeles, Boston, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Buffalo and Baltimore.

New York was first also in its net debt, which amounted to $1,546,859,000, an increase over that of 1928 of $69,434,000.

Millionaire Jockey

Clothes obviously don't make the man in this case, for Pete Bostwick, the millionaire jockey, who wears a dinner suit or a jockey's silks with equal grace, certainly was not attired in a manner his riches would suggest when this photograph was taken. America's most famous gentleman jockey had just arrived in Saratoga.

saved money, he still had his farms and his children in whom he was much interested. He had faith in them and he decided to deed his property to them while he was still alive sure of being looked after as long as he lived. This he did.

Things changed then. Father was getting old and childish, it was said; it was almost impossible to get on with him.

And so he sits there alone, unloved, uncared for excepting in a mechanical and perfunctory way, pondering over the mistake he made, the ingratitude of his children eating into his heart.

Sharper Than a Serpent's Tooth

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

Children are a great comfort in most instances, I can see, and if the race is to continue, they are, of course, an absolute necessity. Poor old King Lear, however, had a hard time with at least two of his, and got little satisfaction from his relationships with them. His is one of the most tragic stories in fiction. "How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is," he cries out in an agony of grief and disappointment of Goneril, "to have a thankless child."

When I was a little boy and used to drive into town on Saturday afternoons I remember often seeing the drayman of the town driving his team about. He was a big strong man almost of middle age then, black haired, broad shouldered, hard muscled. He lifted barrels and boxes about as if they had been a child's building blocks. His wagon was newly painted, and his horses were no common animals. They were carefully groomed, their sleek black coats shining in the sun.

That was fifty years ago or more, and I had long ago let the memory of him pass from my mind. There was a news item in the local paper a few weeks ago which attracted my attention. The old drayman had been taken to the poor house, it said. He was past ninety now, unable to work, not easy possibly to get on with, needing love and care and attention and having no one willing to give it to him.

When he had quit work a few years ago, so the story went, he had found himself amply provided for. He had

Broad "A" Not Irish

Professor Grandgent of Harvard university says the earlier English "ah" became short "a" by the sixteenth century. Until 1780 or thereabouts the standard language had no broad "a." Benjamin Franklin, who recorded in 1768 the pronunciation of his day, knew no "ah." Evidence indicates that it appeared again in London speech between 1730 and 1750. There is no basis for the statement that it originated with the Irish.

ORDER OF THE CONSERVATION COMMISSION—RACCOON

The Director of Conservation, having made a thorough investigation of conditions relative to raccoon in the state, recommends certain regulations.

WHEREFORE, the Conservation Commission by authority of Act 230, P. A. 1925, hereby orders that for a period of one year it shall be unlawful to hunt, take, or kill any raccoon in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan; and to hunt, take, kill or attempt to hunt, take or kill any raccoon in the Lower Peninsula of Michigan, excepting that it shall be lawful to hunt raccoon in the Lower Peninsula of Michigan from November 1st to November 15th, inclusive; and it shall be lawful to trap raccoon in the Lower Peninsula north of the north line of Township 13 North and west of Saginaw Bay from November 15th to November 30th, inclusive; and south of the north line of Township 13 North and east of Saginaw Bay from December 1st to December 15th, inclusive; and it shall be unlawful to train dogs on raccoon prior to October 2, 1931.

Signed, sealed, and ordered published this 1st day of July, 1931.

CHEVROLET TRUCKS

priced as low as $440*

complete with Chevrolet-built bodies

Chevrolet manufactures trucks of both 1/2-ton and 1 1/2-ton capacities in three wheelbase lengths. A number of the popular 1/2-ton models are illustrated at the right.

Investigate these trucks from any angle and you will find them outstanding. Take the question of first-cost—and you learn that the Chevrolet Six is one of the lowest priced trucks you can buy.

Look into the matter of economy—and you discover that many leading fleet owners report the Chevrolet Six to be more economical to operate than any truck they have ever used, regardless of the number of cylinders.

Investigate stamina, reliability and upkeep cost—and you find that Chevrolet owners frequently report such records as "20,000 miles without opening the engine"—"50,000 miles and still dependable"—"ten months with practically no expense for repairs."

As for speed and power, Chevrolet gives you a six-cylinder 50-horsepower engine—very fast, very flexible, and 25% more powerful than the engine of any other truck in the lowest price field.

And when you consider capacity, you find that Chevrolet's longer wheelbase, long sturdy frame, and 4 long semi-elliptic springs permit the mounting of extra-large bodies. These bodies are Chevrolet-built, stoutly reinforced and exceptionally smart and trim. Moreover, they are available in styles exactly suited to every business need.

Obviously, here is a line of trucks that deserves your attention, whether you plan to buy a fleet or a single unit. Before you buy a truck for any purpose, get all the facts about Chevrolet's complete line of six-cylinder haulage units. Your Chevrolet dealer will supply you with full information.

MANNEQUINS IN FASHION REVUE AT STATE FAIR

ORIGINAL FRENCH CREATIONS WILL BE SHOWN AMID COLORFUL SETTING

For the French Fashion Revue to be staged at the Michigan State Fair and Exposition in Detroit, Sept. 6 to 12, the atmosphere of the most famous Parisian salons is to be provided.

One of the central fair buildings has been remodeled for the event, which promises to take rank with the finest exhibitions of its character held in the Middle West. Situated in the very heart of the fair grounds, this hall has dimensions of 70 by 160 feet and is especially fitted for such a display.

An extensive collection of original French creations will be exhibited under the direction of Mme. Marcelle D'Orsay with the assistance of a group of mannequins accompanying her from Paris. Directrice of the Societe des Couturiers de Paris, Mme. D'Orsay has won an international reputation as a style authority and her daily talks during the fashion revue are looked forward to with great interest.

The models will parade on a 60-foot runway, a novel plate glass window arrangement and special lighting effects making for an alluring display. There will be several showings each day, starting Monday, Sept. 7, of authentic French creations and equally fascinating reproductions. Appropriate music will add to the pleasing general effect of the revue.

In her talks and illustrative displays, Mme. D'Orsay will distinguish between mere whims or fads of fashion and accepted styles and offer a wealth of pointers for the guidance of women who would be well groomed.

POST OFFICE TO HAVE EXHIBIT AT FAIR

The great part that the parcel post plays in the commercial life of the nation, especially in the prompt and safe shipment of farm products, will be illustrated by interesting displays and educational talks planned as a feature of a postoffice exhibit at the Michigan State Fair and Exposition, Sept. 6 to 12.

Postal experts will emphasize the value of proper containers designed specially for the transportation of agricultural commodities. In conducting the public behind the scenes of the postoffice department fair visitors will see how stamps are cancelled by machines of great rapidity and will obtain an insight into other modern methods of expediting the nation's mail.

An interesting collection of many odd pieces of mail which have finally found their way to the Dead Letter Office in Washington and which have never before been placed on public view also will be exhibited, provided that Postmaster Charles C. Kellogg of Detroit prevails upon department authorities to consent to their display.

THE STORY

By chance James Lee meets Lucy Gresham, daughter of Sir John Gresham, wealthy ship builder. Lee, unjustly accused of robbing the Gresham firm, was sent to prison. He blames Oliver Ames, Lucy's cousin, and Gresham's manager, and seeks revenge. Lee inherits wealth, and, in compliance with the will, changes his name from Warrington. He secures an invitation to the girl's birthday party. Lucy is practically engaged to Ames. She meets Lee, who makes love to her, planning thereby to hurt Gresham and Ames.

CHAPTER III

Lucy Is Won

She was crossing the wide landing at the top of the first flight when, to her utter surprise, Jocelyn Upton called to her from the depths of a wide window seat.

"Why, hullo, Jocelyn, what are you doing here, all alone?" she said.

"I'm docked for repairs," answered Jocelyn, her voice oddly curt.

"Has your dress got torn?" asked Lucy, with a little laugh.

"No. My heart has." There was no laugh in Jocelyn's voice. But Lucy didn't take it very seriously. Jocelyn always seemed rather inclined to do and say things for effect.

"What can I offer you for that?" she said lightly.

Jocelyn rose suddenly and came, in her lithe, willowy way, to Lucy. Her eyes were flashing angrily.

"Oh, you can laugh!" she said, in a low, tense voice. "It's nothing to you, is it?"

Lucy moved back a step, the smile gone from her lips.

"Jocelyn, I don't understand. What have I done? Aren't you having a good time?"

"A good time!" echoed Jocelyn bitterly.

Lucy still couldn't altogether get rid of the idea that she was playing-acting.

"I'm awfully sorry. . . . Is there anything I can do?" she asked.

"Oh, no; there's nothing you can do. . . . Whatever can be done, I've got to do myself. . . . You've got this dance with Jim, haven't you?" she finished abruptly.

"Yes," answered Lucy.

"I know, I heard, I . . . saw, too. I was looking over the banisters just now while he was talking to you. You've made a bit of a conquest, haven't you?"

Lucy colored like a poppy. "How absurd! Jocelyn, won't you come down and dance?"

Jocelyn ignored that. She turned and went back to the window.

Lucy waited a moment, then went up to her room and found the wrap she wanted. When she came down again Jocelyn was still there in the window seat.

"Going to dance in the garden?" she asked, eyeing the cloak, her thin lips curling.

"Yes," answered Lucy frankly.

"Oh, don't lie! It's so feeble."

"Jocelyn!"

"Don't I know that Jim can't dance? Can't dance for little apples. You're going to sit out in the moonlight. . . . You're making this latest affair of yours a trifle conspicuous, aren't you? Every one's rather—amused. But then, some of us know what Jim happens to be where women are concerned."

Lucy did not answer that; she was a little afraid of what she might say. Jocelyn's insinuation did not cut a very deep mark upon her, because whatever that morose man who had suddenly become so important to her might be, there was one thing he did not remotely suggest, and that was a philanderer. On the other hand, the insinuation did not leave her quite unmarked; perhaps this sort of insinuation never can. She was destined to remember it more than once, later on, but now refused to carry the rather poisonous conversation any further. Instead she did what she could to induce Jocelyn to come down and dance, but Jocelyn shrugged her thin shoulders and in a decidedly acid voice, begged Lucy not to keep Jim waiting.

Lucy, a good deal perplexed, went on her way downstairs, wondering what it was all about. Did Jocelyn care for Lee? Remembering back to an incident at the beginning of supper, she thought that it rather looked that way. But Jocelyn was always so theatrical; so prone to exaggerate her own feelings; so very apt to pose for effect; besides, Lucy remembered her being in love so many times before.

She was in the doorway, now, looking out onto the veranda, and there, in the light of the many-colored lanterns, Lee was waiting for her, and all thought of Jocelyn faded as he caught her hand and drew it through his arm.

"Let's go down into the garden," he suggested, and she agreed. They went down the path, crossed the grass and he released her as they sat down on a seat beneath a tree.

"How much time are you going to give me?" he asked.

"The length of a dance, anyway," she replied.

"Then I've no time to lose. I want you to tell me something. I want you to tell me exactly what you feel for your cousin—Mr. Ames."

"Oh . . ." she said, startled.

"He loves you, doesn't he?" he went on.

"I . . . I'm afraid he does," she admitted.

"Why afraid?"

"Because," she said, looking up at him, "I . . . don't love him."

"You don't want to love him, do you?"

"I hate to make him unhappy," she cried, her lips quivering. "He's like a brother to me. I've known him ever since I can remember. But I'm not fond of him in the right way. And I never knew it till tonight. And I'm afraid I've rather . . . let him think . . ." She broke off.

"That you were fond of him the right way?" he put in.

She nodded.

"It's so awfully puzzling when you aren't sure," she said in a low voice.

"But tonight it suddenly came to me that I . . ." She stopped and there was a moment's silence. "You see, said, letting the words fall, slow and distinct. . . . 'I've thought that you were going to marry—me.'"

It was said. For a moment he almost held his breath, waiting for her answer. It meant so much to him; to that passion of revenge that the last three and a half years had cut deep into his heart.

For a moment she sat stone still. She was certain now; all her bewilderment at his abruptness vanished. She had been right; he loved her; had been telling her so, in his own queer way, ever since their eyes first met. He loved her! The music of the three words rang like a song in her heart. . . . She looked up at him; away into the shadows, and up again.

"Can you want to marry me . . . so soon?" she asked, her voice scarcely audible.

"I want it more than anything on earth," he answered her. "More than I've ever wanted anything. . . ."

She thought it was love that brought the feeling to his voice, and, with all her heart in the words:

"Then . . . I will . . ." she said, her voice very low and still. "I want it, too. . . . It's . . . it's some sort of miracle . . . isn't it?"

She finished on a quickly caught breath. His hands came slowly towards her, caught her slender shoulders, and held her for a moment with a hurting strength. A timeless moment passed as the look between them held; then he raised his head and his short, unlaughing laugh, ragged and odd now, with the triumph of his conquest, rose into the summer night sky.

She had made it easy! And he was not going to forego one smallest element of his victory. He caught her into his loveless arms, and crushed her quivering, yielding lips beneath his own.

He let her go, presently, rose abruptly, and took a few striding turns across the little lawn. He had drunk deep of the heady cup of victory and needed a moment to steady himself. So far, he had won all along the line; but his plans were as yet really only set in train. They were far from being accomplished. He must not say, must not do, one single thing to jeopardize them. Still, he might allow himself the luxury of taking all that this first moment of triumph could give.

As abruptly as he had left her, he now came back and sat beside her again. He did not kiss her, nor take her into his arms. He wanted the satisfaction that words could give him and demanded it with quiet intensity.

"You love me?" The question came through tight lips. "Say it. Say the very words. Tell me . . ." he insisted in the same curious, tense way. There was something fiercely masterful in his voice and manner.

"I love you," she whispered. "Do you need assurance of that?"

"Tell me that you're mine. . . . That I've won you. . . . Taken you from . . ." he stopped to draw a sharp breath. "From all the rest of the world of men," he finished, with a queer laugh.

Something in the demand brought back to her memory the hateful suggestion that Jocelyn had made about him. There was so much in his manner that seemed the sheer desire for conquest.

She put out swift little hands, caught his big shoulders, and turned his face so that the moonlight showed it plainly.

"Are you mine?" she countered softly.

The question took him aback. His dark eyes looked down into hers. His hands clenched tight. At the back of his brain a warning was sounding, telling him not to let his victory sweep him off his feet.

"Do you need assurance of that?" There was a tremor in his voice brought there by the guard he was setting on himself.

"Can you want to marry me . . . so soon?" she asked, her voice scarcely audible.

"I want it more than anything on earth," he answered her. "More than I've ever wanted anything. . . ."

She thought it was love that brought the feeling to his voice, and, with all her heart in the words:

"Then . . . I will . . ." she said, her voice very low and still. "I want it, too. . . . It's . . . it's some sort of miracle . . . isn't it?"

She finished on a quickly caught breath. His hands came slowly towards her, caught her slender shoulders, and held her for a moment with a hurting strength. A timeless moment passed as the look between them held; then he raised his head and his short, unlaughing laugh, ragged and odd now, with the triumph of his conquest, rose into the summer night sky.

She had made it easy! And he was not going to forego one smallest element of his victory. He caught her into his loveless arms, and crushed her quivering, yielding lips beneath his own.

He let her go, presently, rose abruptly, and took a few striding turns across the little lawn. He had drunk deep of the heady cup of victory and needed a moment to steady himself. So far, he had won all along the line; but his plans were as yet really only set in train. They were far from being accomplished. He must not say, must not do, one single thing to jeopardize them. Still, he might allow himself the luxury of taking all that this first moment of triumph could give.

As abruptly as he had left her, he now came back and sat beside her again. He did not kiss her, nor take her into his arms. He wanted the satisfaction that words could give him and demanded it with quiet intensity.

"You love me?" The question came through tight lips. "Say it. Say the very words. Tell me . . ." he insisted in the same curious, tense way. There was something fiercely masterful in his voice and manner.

"I love you," she whispered. "Do you need assurance of that?"

"Tell me that you're mine. . . . That I've won you. . . . Taken you from . . ." he stopped to draw a sharp breath. "From all the rest of the world of men," he finished, with a queer laugh.

Something in the demand brought back to her memory the hateful suggestion that Jocelyn had made about him. There was so much in his manner that seemed the sheer desire for conquest.

She put out swift little hands, caught his big shoulders, and turned his face so that the moonlight showed it plainly.

"Are you mine?" she countered softly.

The question took him aback. His dark eyes looked down into hers. His hands clenched tight. At the back of his brain a warning was sounding, telling him not to let his victory sweep him off his feet.

"Do you need assurance of that?" There was a tremor in his voice brought there by the guard he was setting on himself.

STAGE COACH TALES

By E. C. TAYLOR

From Stage Driver to Railroad President

THE Hon. Ginery Twitchell rose from obscurity to become one of the leading figures of the era of stage coach transportation, then president of the railroad that put his stage lines out of business, and then a member of congress.

Many a New England child, hearing the cry of "Ginery's coming! Ginery's coming!" and probably wondering what a "ginery" was, watched with delight as a great stage coach with six prancing, reeking, foaming horses came to a stop in front of the Bay-state house, in Boston, or the taverns of Worcester, Mass., or Brattleboro, Vt.

Seated atop the magnificent vehicle was a dignified, self-contained man, ruddy of face, his stout body swathed in a heavy greatcoat and on his head a tall silk hat. Ginery Twitchell would sit erect on the coachman's seat, gather the reins well in hand and suddenly be off with a great rattle of wheels and blowing of horns.

Ginery Twitchell was called "Honorable" even then. Probably it was because of his vast reputation for integrity, and probably also because he was an inveterate politician, and always had a finger in the political maneuverings and plottings of his part of New England.

His stage coach was one of the most famous that ever rolled over the rough roads of the early days of the United States. It was built in 1837 by Henry T. Breck of Worcester, and never was repaired beyond occasionally getting a new coat of varnish. In 1840, at the request of the citizens of Barre, Vt., seats were added to the top, so that the great coach carried 32 persons, 12 inside and 20 outside.

It once carried 62 young women from Worcester on a blackberry excursion, with eight horses drawing this record load. During the presidential campaign of 1840, it carried the political leaders to and from meetings around Quinsigamond.

His last driver, Henry S. Miner, narrates that Twitchell before the days of the railroad collected election votes on horseback, and once rode from Greenfield, Mass., to Worcester, a distance of 54 miles, in four and a half hours. He had relays of fresh horses every six or ten miles, and made the ride at night.

In the days when he was a post rider, before he had accumulated sufficient funds to buy an interest in a stage coach line, he once slept in his clothes, including buckskin underwear, in the American House in Worcester for a week, waiting for despatches from British steamers. He also had men and fresh horses waiting the entire week along the road to Norwich, Conn.

When the boats arrived, Twitchell mounted his horse and started for Norwich. He met the boat, and delivered the despatches in New York hours ahead of any other post line.

Ginery Twitchell was a great favorite with those who rode with him, and the seat beside the driver was eagerly vied for, even in bad weather. He had an inexhaustible fund of racy anecdotes with which he regaled his acquaintances. The people along his post and stage routes trusted him with their business commissions, and he performed a service similar to that of the express companies of today.

After a long period of self-denial in his early days, he bought a stage coach and two horses from a Mr. Stockwell, and established a stage line between Brattleboro and Worcester. In 1843 he owned and operated a line between Barre and Worcester, and later established a stage line from Greenfield to Brattleboro.

In that year the postmaster general at Washington advertised for contracts to carry the mail and Twitchell, instead of bidding for one route, went to Washington and obtained several. Within a short time he was the largest stage operator in New England, owning a large number of fine stage lines and coaches.

One of his feats was driving a coach from Worcester, Mass., to Hartford, Conn., a distance of 60 miles, in 3 hours and 20 minutes, through deep snow. That was on January 23, 1846.

When the railroads came, Twitchell turned to the new mode of transportation, and became first president of the Boston & Western railroad.

SCENES OF HORROR AS CHOLERA RAGED

Recalled by Anniversary of Great Plague.

In the early summer of 1831 there began to appear in the London Times messages and articles which introduced a new heading in the Times Index—one which was to have an increasingly grim significance for many months. In the summer and autumn of that year, 14 years after the first appearance of cholera near Calcutta, it was brought home to English people that no country was secure against the inroads of the disease. Its first appearance in 1817 had been followed by a western march on two lines: cholera was reported from Bombay in 1818 and from Madras shortly afterward. In 1819 it reached Ceylon and spread thence and from India over eastern Asia and the islands of the Indian ocean. Another great leap had been taken by 1821, when it was so virulent in Muscat that the survivors did not trouble to bury their dead, merely wrapping them in mats and setting them adrift in the harbor.

By 1823 Syria was reached and Europe was threatened. Then, by one of the strange chances in the history of the disease, its course seemed to be stayed. It disappeared in Turkey, where no precautions, sanitary or otherwise, had been taken; but it began to push north and west again, after ravaging Persia and the lands south of the Caucasus for some years. The mortality was very high. In Russia in a short space over 335,000 people were attacked; more than 250,000 died. In Cairo and Alexandria 30,000 were swept away in 24 days. In Russia and Hungary horrible barbarities were committed. In Hungary it was believed that the nobles and landowners were poisoning the rivers; in revenge many families were wiped out and torture and murder became rampant. The cry was raised in St. Petersburg that the foreign doctors in the hospitals were killing the Russian sufferers; hospitals were sacked and the doctors dragged through the streets; infection was let loose on the city.

In the autumn the plague had really established itself in England for the first time (if we exclude the belief that some of the "plagues" of previous epochs may have been cholera). The time was one of general disturbance; but public excitement was diverted by the news that cholera had appeared in Sunderland. Early in February there were cases at Rotherhithe, in Limehouse, and in a ship off Greenwich, "amongst the lowest and most wretched classes, chiefly Irish," and the first attempt to organize a local board of health was not very successful, "as they met at a public house and all got drunk and did nothing."—London Times.

Soviet Republics

There are six republics in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics as follows: Russian Socialist Federated Soviet Republic, capital, Moscow; White Russian Socialist Republic, capital, Minsk; Ukrainian Socialist Republic, capital, Kharkov; Transcaucasian Socialist Federated Soviet Republic, capital, Tiflis; Turkoman Socialist Republic, capital, Askabad; Uzbek Socialist Republic, capital, Samarkand. Within these republics there are 31 minor political subdivisions which are autonomous, having their own local soviets. Any member of the union may withdraw at will.

Carefully Directed Gaze

"You always keep your eyes on the music," said the leader of the band. "Haven't you learned these tunes by heart yet?" "Yes," replied the cornetist; "but my wife doesn't allow me to look at the dancing."

schools, as the ensuing year will make the tenth for her in such a position. Mrs. Anschuetz is a graduate of the Tawas City high school and of the Iosco County Normal, and holds a life certificate from the Central State Teachers College.

The music and art teacher, Miss Marjorie Sage, is a graduate of the Central State Teachers College, and holds a life certificate from that institution. While attending college, she specialized in music and art, and made an outstanding record in these subjects. The ensuing year will be the second year of tenure for Miss Sage in the Tawas City public schools.

Many improvements have been made in the school plant during the summer. New seats and floors have been placed in the primary and intermediate rooms, and a new floor in one of the halls. The seats were purchased of the same company and are of the same pattern as those with which the high school assembly room is seated. It was found that the furnace was in need of much repair, and that it would cost but little more to buy a new one than to repair the old. As a result, the board decided to purchase a new furnace, and it is now ready for installation. New tablet arm chairs have also been secured for one of the class rooms of the high school. These chairs will enable the students to write in this room—an act which was practically impossible under the former conditions. The roof of the school building has been reshingled—an improvement which was much needed. Mention should be made of the tennis court which was completed during the summer, and also of the seed bed which has been prepared on the school yard in preparation to the sowing of grass seed. If the attempt to renew the lawn is successful, it certainly will add much to the appearance of the school plant.

Much credit should be given the local Board of Education for the many improvements and high standards which the school has secured. It should also be noted that the school tax has been materially lessened at the same time.

As mentioned before, school will open Tuesday morning at 8:30, central standard time. All beginners must be at least five years of age.

Mrs. Alfretha Brookins holds a state first grade certificate from the Central State Teachers College at Mount Pleasant. She is the only new teacher in the system and has already endeared herself to everyone by her pleasant disposition and kindness.

The board of education consists of the following: Burr Hall, president; Theodore Bellville, secretary; Richard Fuerst, treasurer; William Curtis, trustee; Henry Bronson, trustee.

It is indeed gratifying to see the progress made by the Whittemore school, a progress made possible only by such unity and hearty support as are lent the school by the board of education and people of the town. Whittemore wishes to also emphasize how much is due the people of surrounding towns who have confidence in their school and send their young men and women to this school. We wish to continue to grow, we wish to continue on friendly terms with our older neighboring schools who have watched us grow without an air of superiority or jealousy.

At present there are two hundred twenty-five enrolled in the grades and ninety-two in the high school. May this year be as successful as those of the past.
