SAGINAW NINE DEFEATS LOCALS

Tawas City met defeat at the hands of the strong Saginaw Independents last Sunday. The game took place at the local athletic field and resulted in an 8-6 score.

Saginaw's total number of runs came in two frames. The third inning saw the visitors connect for four safeties to tally three runs, and in the fifth, aided by a base on balls, a brace of hits and a couple of errors, they chalked up their remaining five runs. The Tawas City boys made a valiant effort to overcome the enormous lead, but the Saginawians had established but fell short in their attempt. They scored five runs in the seventh after having tallied once in the third, bringing their total to but six.

A couple of bad breaks for O. Johnson, locals' starting hurler, in the above mentioned third and fifth frames, were the turning point for his chances of annexing a victory. Bouldier relieved him in the eighth. Besides striking out three men in the last two innings Bouldier assisted directly in the other three put-outs of these frames.

Fisher, Saginaw hurler, had little trouble in holding down the locals. He not only held the homesters to seven widely scattered hits, but also struck out 13 men during the game.

MRS. W. B. KELLY

Mrs. W. B. Kelly passed to the Great Beyond on Sunday, September 13, at the age of 93 years and six months.

Agnes Smith was born in Kingston, Ontario, on March 22, 1838. In 1870 she was united in marriage to Wm. B. Kelly, also of Kingston, who preceded her in death 19 years ago. She came as a bride to Tawas City and has lived here continuously since that time. In the early days she took a very active part in the religious and social life of the community, being a charter member of the Congregational church, the Order of the Eastern Star, the Ladies Literary Society of East Tawas, an active worker in the W. C. T. U. and also in the Macabees. In fact, she, with her husband, joined heart and hand in all that was for the uplift and betterment of the community. In recent years, her declining health has not permitted her to take her usual active place, but her former good works have not been forgotten, as the many and beautiful floral offerings which surrounded her in her peaceful sleep bore mute testimony.

She leaves to mourn, two grandchildren, W. K. Davidson of Detroit and Mrs. G. W. Bass of Detroit, one great grandchild, little Patty Bass, two nephews and one niece, also many friends.

The funeral was held at her home Wednesday afternoon, Rev. F. Metcalf officiating, with burial at the Tawas City cemetery.

PLAINFIELD RESIDENT IS GRANTED PENSION

John L. Thompson, living on R. F. D. No. 1, at Hale, has been granted a pension of $12 a month dating from March 19, 1931. Thompson served in the World War. This pension was secured through Congressman Roy O. Woodruff.

JEAN HARLOW COMING TO FAMILY IN "GOLDIE"

Love was her game. And romancing was theirs.

There you have the central conflict of "Goldie," Fox wise-cracking comedy of sailor life and love co-starring Spencer Tracy and Warren Hymer, with Jean Harlow, which comes to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

Tracy and Hymer are two pals of the sea, drawn together in a Damon and Pythias-like friendship through their mutual regard for one another's mutuality. Spencer is a wise-guy, wise to the world, wise to its women. Hymer is a thick-skulled, thick-necked second mate. He is slow at thinking, slow with the women, but packs a lightning-like punch in both fists.

Intermingled with their constant bickering, the two pals play at love in every important seaport of the globe until they land at Calais. There they meet Jean Harlow, vivid platinum blonde high diver with a street carnival. They don't play at love with her; love happens to be her game. A game at which she matches wits with them until they both cry "quits."

Benjamin Stoloff directed the picture which visits five ports in its screen travels, and discloses a Rio De Janeiro fashion show in which the very latest decares for next season are worn by sixteen of Hollywood's most beautiful models.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank the kind friends and neighbors who were so kind to us during our recent illness, especially the gentlemen and ladies who helped with the threshing.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Johnson.

DOUBLE FEATURE NIGHTS

An exceptionally fine double bill program will be shown at the State Theatre on Wednesday and Thursday. The two features for these evenings are "Svengali" and "Honey-moon Lane."

John Barrymore has the leading role in "Svengali." In this picture the star portrays the character of the master-hypnotist who won such fame on the stage a generation ago, in "Trilby," "Trilby," which was written and illustrated by George Du Maurier, first swept the English-speaking countries as a novel and won even greater acclaim as a play. It depicts with grim power the evil control of Svengali over the pretty artist's model of the Latin Quarter. Through the spell of the sinister music master, Trilby becomes a great singer, leaves Paris with him and though pursued from place to place by Little Billee who loves her, and his stalwart friends she is oblivious to them until the weird magic of Svengali is miraculously broken. Barrymore is supported in his characterization of "Svengali" by Marian Marsh as "Trilby."

"Honey-moon Lane" sees Eddie Dowling in his first picture since "The Rainbow Man." Supporting him is a cast of brilliant actors, including Ray Dooley, Raymond Hatton, June Collyer, Mary Carr, Noah Beery. "Honey-moon Lane" is far removed from the blood-curdling, or jazzy films of a few months ago. It is brimful with romantic fervor, seasoned with plenty of chuckles and outright laughs.

IOSCO FAIR HAS BIG ATTENDANCE

The 1931 Isoco county fair has passed into history. Notwithstanding the depression, each day had a larger attendance than any corresponding day of any fair held at the local grounds. The Western Rodeo, produced by Gentry & Raeburn and Raum's Hippodrome, were the big attractions, presenting three days filled with excellent entertainment. Sunday's all-rodeo program had a small attendance and the evening's performance was rained out.

The books have not been audited and the financial outcome of the fair cannot be given at this time, but a statement and a list of the premiums given in the various departments will be published later. The exhibits compared favorably with any previous year, excepting in the floral department. In this very little interest was shown and only a few exhibits were made.

A serious accident marred a complete enjoyment of the three days. William Green and son, Ray, of Wilber were painfully injured when an airplane in which they were riding crashed to the ground while the plane was making a landing. The machine met an unfavorable air current, the effect of which the pilot was unable to overcome and the plane hit a fence post. Mr. Green suffered broken bones and bruises. His son had a rib torn loose and was knocked unconscious. The pilot suffered minor injuries.

The baseball game Thursday between Hale and Alabaster was won (Turn to No. 2, Back Page)

Farm Loan Association Members Will Hold Meeting at Whittemore

Members of three National Farm Loan Associations operating in this locality are to hold a joint meeting at Whittemore, Wednesday, September 23. Fred C. Latter, who is secretary-treasurer of the Isoco-Ogemaw Association, stated that his association would be joined in this conference by those of Prescott and West Branch. Mr. Latter is in charge of the arrangements.

The Federal Land Bank of St. Paul is sending one of its men to Whittemore as a principal speaker for this meeting. It is to convene at 10 o'clock in the morning, and plans are being made for a dinner to be served at noon to all who are present. Mr. Latter estimated that between 75 and 100 farmers would be in attendance.

These associations have loans outstanding aggregating approximately $300,000. They are made on a long term plan under the provisions of the Federal Farm Loan Act whereby the borrower pays slightly more than his interest and the principal is entirely wiped out by the end of a period of about 35 years. During the life of the loan, the interest rate cannot be raised nor does the principal ever come due in a lump sum.

Mr. Latter stated that as of July 31, there were 10,053 Michigan farmers with these Federal Land Bank loans amounting to $25,537,910.

APPRECIATION

The members of the community band and the student players from Tawas City and East Tawas appreciate very much the favorable comment that was given during the fair for their efforts. They wish also to thank the Isoco fair association for giving them the fair job, which perhaps gave them more actual experience than they would have acquired in a long time.

We wish to say at this time that Earl Gentry of Alabaster has consented to act as instructor in the future. Mr. Gentry has had three years' experience conducting a band and was assistant instructor with the United States army band in their regiment, so we all look ahead to a much better band in the future. We hope to have the support of the community in our efforts.

A. E. Misener.

BUILDING NEW SUPER-SERVICE STATION

"PARDON US" LAUREL AND HARDY'S FIRST BIG "SPLURGE"

Stan and Babe, better known to the movie going public as Laurel and Hardy, entertained three hundred and fifty men during the making of their first feature-length comedy, "Pardon Us," which will be shown Sunday and Monday at the Family Theatre, East Tawas. In this comedy Laurel and Hardy have their first taste of prison life. Their comedy antics are performed within the four walls of a penitentiary, much to the amusement of these three hundred and fifty extras dressed in prison garb.

Up to date Laurel and Hardy have been typical Scotchmen in regard to their casts and sets. They did not ask for large supporting casts and expensive, beautiful sets, but have gone through their scenes with but few people to aid them against moderate backgrounds. "Pardon Us," however, was their big "splurge."

The huge prison, three stories high and surrounded by fifty-foot walls, was built on several acres of land. An entire stage was required for the dining room with its multitude of benches and tables. And, of course, their fellow prisoners had to be provided with the regulation convict outfits.

FORMER TUGBOAT OPERATOR DEAD

Capt. W. C. Davidson, 87, among the last of the old-time Saginaw river tugmen, died Wednesday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. C. F. Shreve, Detroit.

Captain Davidson owned and operated tugs at Bay City, Tawas and Grand Marais, Mich. At one time he owned the ferry boat, Hattie T. Brown, running between Bay City and Banks; then he had the tug Challenge and the Tempest. From Bay City he went to Tawas, with the Pensaukee, thence to Grand Marais with the J. W. Westcott and the J. W. Ward. He was born July 5, 1844, at Port Huron.

Surviving are one son, W. C. Davidson, Tawas City, and two daughters, Mrs. Shreve, Detroit, and Mrs. P. J. Brady, Lakewood, Ohio. Burial will be at Lakeside cemetery, Port Huron, Friday afternoon.

GOLF FINAL NEXT SUNDAY

The first annual Tawas Golf Club tournament held on a match play elimination basis got under way last Sunday with a record field of thirty-three entries, of whom twenty-four qualified for the first round matches.

Arthur Dillon, a member of the committee in charge of the tournament, turned in a score of ninety-three for the eighteen holes and thereby won the driver which was to be awarded to the entrant turning in the lowest qualifying score. Eino Haglund turned in a ninety-seven as the second lowest score and won a prize of three golf balls presented by the Merschel Hardware Company.

First and second round matches have been played and enthusiasm has risen to a high pitch as to the final outcome of the tournament. The committee is particularly pleased by the promptness with which players are appearing for their matches. The schedules are being run off like clockwork and any doubts that this method of play would not be popular have been dispelled by the players' response.

The final match has been definitely set at 2:00 p. m., Eastern Standard time, Sunday, September 20th. Spectators are invited and it is hoped that a large gallery will turn out to watch the match. Those who cannot arrive in time for the first few holes are urged to come out and watch the latter part of the match.

DELIGHT IN NEW LOVE PLAY

The screen's most unique stellar personality, loved the world over for himself, his songs, his vivacity, comes to the State Theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday in his new starring picture, "The Smiling Lieutenant." He is Maurice Chevalier, the smiling French entertainer whose love-making and love-singing have made him the idol of two continents.

"The Smiling Lieutenant" is a rollicking romance, with all the love and song appeal of his first moving picture, "Innocent of Paris"; with all the luxury of setting and story of "The Love Parade"; with the star of another Chevalier screen success, "The Big Pond," Claudette Colbert, in one of the leading feminine roles; with another bright screen light, gorgeous Miriam Hopkins, in an equally leading role, and with Charlie Ruggles, lovable comedian, in an important supporting part.

The story deals with the delicious romance of a young lieutenant of the guards, whose smile gets him involved with two women, one a cabaret performer whom he loves and wants to marry; the other an old-fashioned princess who loves him and whom he is forced to marry. How this marriage turns his life topsy-turvy, and how the unwanted wife turns the table on her rival, is the amusing topic of the romance.

FRAGRANT SASSAFRAS

It was the Indians who first discovered the stimulating qualities of the fragrant bark and roots of sassafras and passed them on to the early French and Spanish settlers. Legend tells us that the sassafras odor was wafted to the nostrils of Columbus on his first voyage and convinced him that land was near. Thoreau wrote of the plant: "The green leaves bruised have the fragrance of lemons and 1,000 spices."

Confirmation and rededication services were held at the Swedish Lutheran church Sunday, September 13. Three special services were held. The events marked the culmination of the efforts of the Swedish Lutheran church and their student pastor, Gustav Wahlstrom, this summer. Dr. Peter Peterson presided at the morning services at 9:30, confirming a class of five, Victor Floyd, Jr., Charles Nash, Senia Loffman of this city, Lucille Johnson of Alabaster and Fred Westcott of Tawas City, and later held a communion service. Special music was rendered by a mixed choir and Miss Selma Hagstrom, soloist. Rededication of Abigail Lutheran took place at 3:00 p. m. The church has been renovated and among the improvements are an oak floor, new pulpit, new altar, with statue of Christ by Thorwaldson, new rugs, refinished benches, and new altar cloth of green plush harmonized with the decorating. Six stained glass windows have been placed in the church through the generosity of and to memorialize the Carlson, Hagstrom, Hogquist, Applin, Burgeson and Christensen families. The expenses of the improvements have been met by members and friends and only a small amount remains to be raised. A vesper service was held at 7:45, at which both Dr. Peterson and Mr. Wahlstrom spoke. Special music was given by a girls' sextette and Miss Ernestine Cecil, violinist

COLORFUL SEVILLE

A Milkman in Seville.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)
WITH the revolution a matter of history, Seville, which a majority of visitors who travel down from Madrid and up from Cadiz call "The Most Spanish City in Spain," has settled down to its usual routine.

But in Seville, now scintillating, now sleepy, is discovered a Spain not of the drowsing past, nor yet of the bustling present; it is an indiscriminate mingling of both. Abiding through the centuries here on sun-swept slopes, the city has built for itself a dwelling place of traditions; but they are not a high wall hedging it about. Seville takes pride in her glorious past, treasures it, becomes frankly arrogant about it at times; but her chief love is life and the living of it.

Her lichen-covered churches she holds inviolate. Not one cobweb may be removed, nor a single crumbling block of hand-hewn stone be remortared; but, across a well-paved avenue, a steel-fabricated office building must incorporate every convenience of the modern builder's art.

Laden donkeys may, and do, wander willy-nilly through every downtown thoroughfare, but the driver of a limousine must keep his eyes open for "one-way street" signs and his ears alert for the traffic officer's whistle.

Seville's history is as colorful as one of the silken shawls that drape the shoulders of her dark-eyed señoritas, as varied as the moods of her people, as interesting as any story may well be that depicts the romance of a town which has lived through the rise, glory, and decay of half a dozen nations.

The city's actual genesis is lost, hidden by the obscuring veil which shrouds much of the remote past of the Mediterranean, and which was only slightly torn aside by the adventuring Phoenicians, and later by the warrior-merchants of Carthage.

But there was a Roman Seville. Of that ancient period definite traces remain. Some of the crumbling walls of the city were built under the direction of the Caesars. The Visigoths, following the fall of Rome's western empire, lingered for a brief three centuries in Seville. The Jews, too, from behind Byzantium came here to have their home, rose to positions of power, endured grievous persecution, passed, but left carved memories of their stay.

Gypsies Still There.
Likewise the gypsies came here, and here they yet remain, crowded together in noisy little and big families in Triana, the ragged suburb of Seville, across the Guadalquivir. Finally, the Moors possessed Seville. One must say finally because the city remains today something of a Moorish town. Saint Ferdinand brought it within the Christian fold some seven centuries ago; but all his might could not wipe out the Orient.

The picturesque Santa Cruz district of Seville, with its narrow, crooked streets and flat-roofed, companionable houses, has changed very little in the last thousand years. The city's famous and equally beloved Giralda is today much the same as when a Moorish architect completed it, in 1196, and the white-robed followers of Mohammed used it as a minaret from which to call the faithful to prayer.

But Seville dwells not overmuch in reminiscences. She reverses her heroes of olden time, but it is the heroes of today that occupy her thoughts and newspapers. Annually she devotes many holidays in obedience before ancient glories, but the days before and after are spent in widening her narrow streets to accommodate a rapidly increasing motor traffic and in building steel and concrete office buildings wherein to house her ever-expanding commercial enterprises.

She points with pride to where the caravels of the New world's conquerors anchored in the Guadalquivir river, but barely a stone's throw away electric cranes strive the day long with vast cargoes to and from the earth's four corners.

Alcazar, the old Moorish palace rebuilt to house the splendor of the courts of Andalusian kings, remains much the same as it was seven centuries ago; but immediately across the street the new Alfonso XIII hotel transplants one straightway to the luxury of up-to-date Paris, or London or New York.

Those fortunate individuals who come to southern Spain armed with letters of introduction to high officials and wealthy families go away with glowing accounts of the sumptuousness of life, of the lavish hospitality accorded visitors, and of the very modern manner of living in this only superficially modernized city.

Other earnest seekers after local color who visit Seville and, in their desire to know their Spain, live among the Sevillanos, endure the inconvenience of modest Spanish homes, spend long hours in crowded cafes to engage in endless discussions with the ever-talkative habitués, attend frequent festivals and bullfights. These folk carry away a vivid, glowing picture of a Seville en festa—colorful, rather noisy, highly picturesque.

Average Income Is Puny.

Only in rare instances does the foreigner come to know the true home life of the Sevillano. There is not much money per capita in Seville these days. To be sure, certain of the city's families are immensely wealthy and live in the style of oriental potentates and occidental plutocrats, while foreign residents are forced, for appearance's sake, to struggle along at a similar pace. But such folk are a statistical handful. Fully three-fourths of the town's population lives and has its being and is wholly happy on an income of around a dollar a day per person.

In many cases this income must cover the needs of an entire family, and some of Seville's families need much. But somehow there is always enough left over for the menfolk to afford a few hours each evening with convivial friends in a favorite coffee shop, and to secure a seat "in the sun" at the Sunday bullfight; and for the numerous children to purchase penny sweets, as occasion demands, from the howling huckster who passes the door each morning, accompanied by a congenial donkey laden with sticky lusciousness; and for the women of the family to have a new imitation tortoise-shell comb, a cobwebby lace mantilla, and a holeless pair of silk stockings—this last because the wearing of silk hosiery has in recent years become one of Spain's leading manufacturing industries.

The people of Seville blend past and present in their dress and in many of their customs. The high Spanish comb and lace mantilla of olden times are still worn here, perhaps more generally than in any other city of Spain. But the comb is more often than not perched precariously in moderately bobbed hair, while the mantilla covers a beautiful head filled with decidedly up-to-date feminine thoughts and ideas.

Racially, the people owe much to the Moorish residence in southern Spain. Brilliant black and brown eyes and complexions ranging from darkest sepia to the most delicate of creamy textures are strangely reminiscent of long generations of ancestors who dwelt beneath the Sahara sun. Intermingling with this great majority, however, one finds increasingly large percentage of the blue eyes and light hair of more Anglo-Saxon communities.

Olives and Cork.

Seville is an industrious city. Many of the city's activities revolve about the production and shipment of pickled olives and various grades of olive oil, for it is the central point of distribution for the richest olive-producing area in the world. There is an ancient local saying that the only genuine queen olives produced on earth are grown within seeing distance of the Giralda tower, the soil and climate of this region being particularly well suited to the full maturing of this class of the fruit.

Much of the cork insulation found in our modern electrical refrigerators and many of the cork disks in the metal caps of ginger ale—and other—bottles were shipped from the port of Seville. The world acknowledges no wrought iron more artistic than that fashioned by the gypsy families of Triana.

Seville's industries, however, are not permitted to interfere too radically with her moments of rest and relaxation. Every coffee shop (and there are scores of them in Seville) is a noisy stamping ground, humanity-choked, from early in the afternoon until long after midnight. Indeed, one may pass at any time during the day or night and see gesticulating knots of men crowded about cup-cluttered tables, talking, talking.

A Quiet Vacation

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

They had come up to Cape Cod from New York to the inn where I was staying to have a quiet vacation. They had chosen a good place, for Provincetown is as uneventful and as near stagnation as any place one could desire. Telephones are the exception rather than the rule, and nothing happens excepting that the world turns over once a day.

Frost was a publicity man and Schenck a stock broker. Frost had never had a real vacation before, he said, and his companion had been working steadily ever since President Wilson had declared war against Germany. But they certainly were going to have a quiet time for the next few days, they were prepared to tell the world.

They went to a show the first night; they took the bus out to the breakwater the next morning; they looked through the illustrated magazines on the living room table in the afternoon, and then they began to grow restless, and a little later to talk business.

It wasn't a half hour until Frost was working out another publicity scheme, and Schenck was giving directions to the home office over long distance half the afternoon, and wiring various people what and how to do. Their minds were so full of business that they found no time for quiet or for rest. When we were not regaled on new methods of publicity, we were given advice on the stock market.

They had come up to the Cape to have three weeks of a quiet vacation, but before three days they were doing business as enthusiastically and as regularly as if they had been in their little offices in New York, and by the end of the week they were ready to go back. They didn't know how to rest; they didn't enjoy quiet; there was really nothing in a vacation for them, for they had one-track minds with no switches.

It takes considerable training and not a little experience to enjoy a quiet vacation. One learns this as he learns other things—by regular practice and by beginning early in life.

Measure Man's Power in Series of Tests

Public Health Service Puts 500 Through Paces.

Washington.—How strong is a man? The answer has just been made by the United States public health service through a series of tests given to 500 men. Generally, heavily built men were found to be stronger than slender men of the same weight.

The tests were made to ascertain the pulling, pushing, handgripping, lifting and lung power of men between the ages of twenty and thirty-four, between the weight of 120 and 169 pounds, and between the heights of 63 and 70 inches.

The greatest pulling power was demonstrated by men in the heaviest weight class, between 160 and 169 pounds. Men in the two heaviest classes, 150 to 159 and 160 to 169 pounds, tied as the most powerful pushers. In each of these weight groups the taller men proved to be the best pushers, with a force of 121 pounds, the record figure.

In the handgripping contest the tallest and heaviest men gave the most powerful hand grips, with a force of 108.48 pounds. But the shortest men in the heaviest group were the most powerful lifters, lifting on an average 519.2 pounds.

The men having the greatest lung power were found among the shortest in the 150-159 pound class. Their lung force was measured at 154 millimeters.

So far as general strength went, it was found that the taller men were

The word "Tuesday" is based on the name of the Norse god of war, Tyr, the son of Woden, from whence comes the word "Wednesday." The French call Tuesday "Mardi," honoring Mars, the Roman war god. There is a "Shrove" Tuesday in the church calendar, it being the Tuesday before Lent.

All Around the House

Bread should be cut thicker when used for toast or when sauted.

Spiced grape jelly with venison is another delightful accompaniment.

Small patty shells or cream puffs filled with a mixture of fruit and whipped cream make most delicious desserts.

Corn on the cob roasted in the campfire tastes like no corn cooked in any other way. Leave a few of the husks on and bury in the hot ashes. Serve with plenty of butter, pepper and salt.

Cup custards carry well if one likes to add to the menu. Fresh fruits and a glass can of fresh-cooked green peas well seasoned and served cold are always enjoyed, or they may be carried hot or reheated.

Ancient Fossils Common in U. S.

United States Fertile Field for Paleontologists.

Washington.—The discovery in Texas of the dorsal armor of a giant phytosaur, a crocodile-like creature which lived more than 50,000,000 years ago, emphasizes the fact that the United States is still a fertile field for paleon-tologists seeking the fossils of prehistoric animals. Traces of many species of these monsters have been found from time to time.

Judging from the number of tracks found, the dinosaur, or "terrible reptile," seems to have been the most common in all parts of the country. Beside the Connecticut river near Northampton are preserved dinosaur tracks said to be the most perfect ever found. Nearer New York, at Woodbridge, N. J., dinosaur tracks were discovered last year measuring 20 inches across the toes. They are thought to date back to the cretaceous period of the Mesozoic age.

The haunts of the dinosaur in New Jersey were first discovered, however, in 1858, and a mounted skeleton is in the State museum at Trenton.

In the western states and in the Canadian province of Alberta dinosaur bones have been most frequently found and most easily excavated. Some huge tracks, 38 inches long, have been discovered in Colorado; and in Dinosaur canyon, near Flagstaff, Ariz., 300 tracks were found by one expedition. One of the largest skeletons of this beast was found in Utah in 1923—the diplococus of the species. This specimen was 71 feet long and the pieces discovered weighed about 52,000 pounds. This creature is supposed to have lived 170,000,000 years ago.

Mastodons, it is believed, were abundant here about 25,000 years ago, whereas this animal was thought to have become extinct in Europe 1,000 centuries back. Mastodon teeth 7 inches long have been discovered in the ocean off the New Jersey coast; and the vicinity of Niagara falls has furnished a fertile field for such discoveries.

Near Medicine Bluff, Wyo., was found the skeleton of one of the largest of the prehistoric reptiles, the brontosaurus, or thunder lizard, now in the Peabody museum at New Haven. When alive, its weight is estimated to have been about 40 tons, and it lived about 120,000,000 years ago. The jaw of a titanothere, to which family belong the modern horse, tapir and rhinoceros, was found in the White River Bad Lands of South Dakota in 1846.

Excavation Reveals Roman Jig-Saw Puzzle

London.—Excavations beneath the new building of the Royal Bank of Canada in Lothbury, E. C., have resulted in the discovery of a 1,800-year-old jig-saw puzzle in Roman pavement.

Many pieces of the old puzzle are missing, but there has emerged a picture of the substantial house of some Roman citizen.

Archaeologists are now studying the jig-saw puzzle and other sections of tessellated paving found in the area.

Car of Juggernaut Still Rolls in Puri, India

FOR centuries most people believed the legend that when the Car of Juggernaut (more correctly Jagannath) was drawn through the streets of Puri, India, devotees threw themselves in front of it to be crushed by its wheels. In these times we know this is false, for the idol within the car is believed to contain the bones of Krishna, the eighth avatar of Vishnu, and to possess a soul, and any death within the god's temple or the spilling of blood in his presence is considered a defilement.

Many thousands of pilgrims gather in Puri for the annual Hindu festival when the ancient car is brought forth and the ceremonies are so impressive and picturesque that numerous tourists are attracted to the city, which is in Orissa on the seacoast. This year the festival was especially significant for it celebrated the "Nua Kalebar" or "God's renovation of the body."

Jagannath has a magnificent temple in Puri, and is exposed to view three days each year. On the first day the god is publicly bathed. Ten days later he is drawn in the massive and ornately decorated car to a neighboring temple, and this ceremony, here photographed, is the chief event. One week later Jagannath is conveyed back to his own temple. The Hindus regard Jagannath as the god of all people and pay him the deepest reverence.

A THUMP AND A SLAP

IT ALL sounds like a dreadful quarrel, doesn't it? But there wasn't any quarrel at all. You see it was this way, Peter Rabbit sitting on guard near the pond of Paddy the Beaver, where Honker the Goose and his eleven followers were sleeping, saw something moving among the Black Shadows which filled the Green Forest. "Hello! What is that moving over there?" thought Peter, but he was far too wise to think it out loud. He just thought it inside and kept stiller than ever, if that were possible. And all the time he looked very hard in the direction where he had seen, or thought he had seen, a something moving.

Sure enough in a minute or two he saw it again. He saw it steal across from one Black Shadow to another and he didn't need to be told what that something was nor who it was. Oh, no, Peter didn't need to be told. Peter had seen that shadowy form too often not to know it at the very first glimpse. It was Old Man Coyote. Peter felt little prickles of fear all over him.

"He knows I am over here and he's hunting for me," thought Peter. "Oh dear what shall I do? It is a long way to the nearest bramble-tangle and I don't know a single hollow log or hole any nearer. I wish I stayed at home. That's what I do—I wish I stayed at home."

He crouched down, making himself as small as possible under the thick branch of a low-growing hemlock tree, and stared out with eyes wide with fear. Nearer and nearer came Old Man Coyote. Peter sat tight. It was the safest thing to do. He just longed to run, but if he should do that Old Man Coyote would be after him in a flash and Peter knew how Old Man Coyote can run. So he sat tight, though it was the hardest kind of hard work. He held his breath. Old Man Coyote was so near that Peter was afraid he would hear the thumping of his heart. And then Peter gave a soft little sigh of relief. Old Man Coyote had passed without so much as a glance his way. In fact, Old Man Coyote was watching the pond of Paddy the Beaver, and his eyes fairly burned with eagerness. Silently, but swiftly, he stole along. He was making his way around to the other side of the pond. Then Peter understood. He was after one of those geese who, fast asleep, were drifting nearer and nearer to the other shore.

Peter was just trying to make up his mind what he ought to do when his wabby little nose caught a familiar scent. Once more he sat tight, it was the safest thing to do. Granny and Reddy Fox passed. They, too, were stealing along very softly, with their eyes fixed on the pond. They made their way around the other end of the pond from the one Old Man Coyote had gone around.

Peter's heart went pit-pat, pit-pat with excitement. What should he do? What ought he to do? If he should thump and try to waken Honker and the other geese he would give himself away. Would he be able to reach the nearest bramble-tangle before Old Man Coyote or Reddy Fox could catch him? Perhaps those sleeping geese would not drift any nearer to shore and then they would be safe and he would not need to give warning. Perhaps they would not hear him even if he did thump and he would run all that dreadful risk for nothing. Anyway, there was no need of doing anything just yet.

So Peter watched. Little by little two or three of those sleeping forms drifted nearer and nearer to the other shore. By and by they were so near that Peter knew that something must be done at once or it would be too late. Somewhere over there three pairs of hungry eyes were watching those geese just as he was. Peter made up his mind. He would thump, and then he would run with all his might.

Thump! Thump! Thump! Peter

hit the ground with all his might and hoped it would waken Honker. Then without waiting to see he started for the nearest bramble-tangle as fast as he could go.

Slap! That was the tail of Paddy the Beaver hitting the water. He had heard Peter's thumps and knew what they meant. And at the sound of that slap Honker the Goose awoke.

The Unanswered Letter

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

(Suggested by G. M., Springfield, Mass.)

THE mailman comes, the mailman goes,
The postman passes by,
And someone only can suppose,
And wait, and wonder why,
Today no letter, and tonight
A silence hard to bear,
We wonder if they cannot write,
Or simply do not care?

The little note is laid away,
The letter put aside,
Yet someone hoped to hear today
An answering voice denied.
You may be busy, well we know,
So many things you're at,
You may be busy—are you, though,
As busy as all that?

Oh, keep the tree of friendship green
When friends are far apart.
How much a word of yours may mean
To cheer some absent heart!
The rose unwatered droops and dies,
Yes, dies in some sad hour;
The letter that unanswered lies
Is love's unwatered flower.

Economy Spice Cake.

Give Him the Limit

The Old Gardener Says:

THE autumn flowering crocuses which are very much like the spring crocuses but bloom late in the year, come into flower only a few weeks after they have been planted. They are choice subjects for the rock garden but may be scattered through the border, too. These autumn flowering crocuses are often confused with other autumn flowering bulbs called colchicums but the latter have very much larger leaves, and for that reason are not as well suited for the rock garden because the heavy foliage interferes with more delicate rock plants. Colchicums, however, are very handsome in the border.

and one cupful of raisins together, two minutes. Cool and add the flour and when well blended, pour into a floured pan to bake in a moderate oven for 45 minutes. Cover while hot with the following topping: the juice of one orange, a little of the rind if desired and one-fourth cupful of sugar well mixed. This mixture soaks in the cake leaving a light glazing top and adds greatly to the flavor of the cake. This may be used with any plain cake.

Corned Beef Hash.

Take two cupfuls of cooked corned beef, two cupfuls of cooked potatoes, all chopped, two onions chopped, salt and pepper to season, one-half cupful of milk and two tablespoonfuls of vegetable oil. Bake in a well oiled pan in a hot oven for 20 minutes, or cook in a well oiled frying pan until brown on the bottom, then fold like an omelet.

Childish Intelligence
The intelligence quotient or "I. Q." of a child is determined by multiplying its mental age by 100 and dividing by the actual age. Thus the intelligence quotient of a normal child is 100. A child with an I. Q. below 80 is rated as subnormal, while one with an I. Q. above 120 is rated as gifted. About five children in 100 will be found to be 20 below normal, and about five, 20 above normal.

HALE

Knockout Features Boxing Exhibition at Hale

Grimaldi of Saginaw and Criss of Detroit fought three fast rounds at the boxing exhibition given at Hale on the evening of Labor Day. Mike Grimaldi, though he had never fought in the ring before, put up a great fight, but he could not overcome the greater weight, height, and reach of Criss, and was knocked out in the third round of their scheduled four round fight. Young Grimaldi, only 16 years old, deserves a lot of credit for the game, uphill fight he staged, for Criss is a veteran of many years' experience. Grimaldi won the first round, but Criss had him groggy in the second and easily finished him in the third. In the main bout, Paul Myers of Saginaw, manager and catcher of the Saginaw Athletic baseball team, went into the ring tired from their game against Hale Sunday and an exceptionally hard one against Prescott Monday and easily outpointed Paul Follette of Detroit. Myers weighed 163, Follette 173.

Saginaw Athletics Win and Lose On Northern Trip
The Saginaw Athletics beat Hale 8-6 on Sunday, September 6. The Athletics held Hale to one run until the sixth inning, when Kelly, relief hurler for Saginaw, was nicked for four runs. Eddie Turner replaced him and finished the game, allowing one more run.

Turner was off form Labor Day and Prescott won a free hitting contest, 15-10, from the Saginaw Athletics. Numerous errors on both sides helped make the score so large. Turner hurled the whole nine innings for the Athletics and struck out eight men. Ferguson and Rahl divided the mound work for Prescott, each displaying a fine brand of pitching. Kelley, for Saginaw, featured the hitting with two triples and a double in four official trips to the plate. Eddie Turner pitched good ball, but lacked his usual control. In the six former games he has pitched for the Athletics he struck out 86.

On August 13, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Herr of Turner, their son, Arnold, their daughter, Mrs. Otto Rahl, and Mrs. Rahl's little son, James, started on an auto trip to Montana. They traveled the northern route through the Upper Peninsula of Michigan, through Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, and Montana. Mr. Herr has a sister, Mrs. John Buxton, living near Geraldine, Montana, whom he had not seen for 42 years. She lives on a 300 acre ranch in a fine agricultural district. The crops there have not been good during the past two years because of dry weather. They left Montana on August 18 for Buffalo, N. Y., traveling through Montana, Wyoming, Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and New York. A family reunion was held at Darien Center on August 30 with 67 present. Relatives were visited at the following places in New York: Buffalo, Attica, Warsaw, Batavia, Bennington, Darien, Corfu, Darien Center, Kinmore, and Niagara Falls. They traveled the Canadian route to Detroit, stopping for a two day visit with Mrs. Herr's sister at Port Stanley. Two days were spent in Detroit, and they arrived at their home September 3, having completed the trip in three weeks. Mrs. Rahl stated that she enjoyed the trip very much, that the scenery was beautiful, and that Michigan is the best place in which to live.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Humphrey and Mr. and Mrs. Basil Humphrey of Flint left last Saturday for a motor camping trip through the Upper Peninsula.

Glendon was re-elected president, Mrs. Mary Bernard secretary, Mrs. Amy Bernard treasurer and Mrs. Rose Livingston lady director. The weather was ideal for a day at the lake and the members and visitors enjoyed the meeting.

David Jackson of Wayne, Ohio, passed away on Tuesday, September 8th. Mr. Jackson owned property in Plainfield township and for many years was a frequent visitor. He has been in failing health during the past year. Hale relatives who went to Wayne, Ohio, to attend the funeral services were Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Bernard and Ira Pember.

Must Give a Show

"A successful politician," said Hi Ho, the sage of Chinatown, "should be a great actor, able to give a show worth the taxes he collects."

LITTLE GIRL NOW WELL AND HAPPY

Mrs. Elizabeth Rimer, mother of the little girl shown in the picture says: "Mull-So-Lax certainly worked wonders with my little girl. She suffered constantly with constipation, her color was bad and she could not be coaxed to eat but little, not even dainties. I had to continually give her cathartics, suppositories, enemias, etc. with no lasting relief. Finally I read about Mull-So-Lax and started to give her this regularly. She liked the taste of it, and soon began to get better. In all she has taken 4 bottles and she is really a different child. Her constipation has disappeared and she has a hearty appetite, healthy rosy cheeks, and lots of pep." Mull-So-Lax is a SUPER-TONIC that contains 19 different ingredients. Take no substitute.

Author Unknown

No one knows who wrote the "Arabian Nights." It is thought that the stories were derived by the Arabians from India, through Persia. They were first introduced into Europe at the beginning of the Eighteenth century, through the medium of the French translator, Antoine Galland. Lane was the first Englishman to translate them worthily. The present form dates from 1500.

Popular Adage

The adage about the pot calling the kettle black is found in many tongues. A Spanish adaptation is: "Sald the jackdaw to the crow; Get away, nigger." while in Italy one hears: "The pun says to the kettle: Get away lest you stain me." "The shovel scoots at the poker," is the way the French put it. Hindus quote: "The colander said to the needle: 'Get away, you have a hole in you.'"

JOHN GRESHAM'S GIRL

By CONCORDIA MERREL

THE STORY

By chance James Lee meets Lucy Gresham, daughter of Sir John Gresham, wealthy ship builder. Lee, unjustly accused of robbing the Gresham firm, was sent to prison. He blames Oliver Ames, Lucy's cousin, and Gresham's manager, and seeks revenge. Lee inherits wealth, and in compliance with the will, changes his name from Warrington. He secures an invitation to the girl's birthday party. Lucy is practically engaged to Ames. She meets Lee, who makes love to her, planning thereby to hurt Gresham and Ames. With Gresham's approval, Lucy and Lee are married. Lee stuns the girl by telling her he does not love her, and hates her "whole breed."

CHAPTER IV—Continued

"If your love for me has all been a lie . . . how am I to believe anything you say to me?" she cried. "Jim, you don't know what you are saying! You can't know. . . . Jim, do you mean that when you have taken me in your arms, it has been a lie? When you have kissed me . . . it has been a lie, too? Jim, you can't mean that. . . . It was a cry right up from the depths of her hurt heart. A cry it would have been easy to answer. He had only to take her in his arms and tell the lie again. . . . But still he couldn't. The personal equation was a stronger thing than he had ever known. . . . He shook himself free of her hands and moved away from her.

"I do mean it," he said. She went so terribly pale that he thought she was going to faint; but she didn't. She stood stone still, for a moment, then bowed her head and covered her face with her hands. The utter stillness of her was almost uncanny. It seemed to him that no living thing could ever have appeared so utterly lifeless. Then slowly she raised her face, all white and drawn, and looked up at him again.

"Then I suppose," she said tonelessly. "I suppose it is true. . . . I suppose I must believe. . . ."

The change in her was startling. Some life had gone out of her eyes; some lilt from her voice. It was as if in that moment of stillness her youth had died. With a word he had killed the lovely youngness of her. It gave him a feeling of having driven his fist into the face of a child.

"But, Jim," she went on in the same toneless voice. "Why? Why, Jim? What has made you do this to me? What have I done that you should want to hurt me so?"

"You are your father's daughter," he answered slowly.

"Then what is it that he has done? Jim, you must tell me. You can't do a thing like this and leave me all in the dark. You can't say these nightmare things and leave them unexplained. . . . You must tell me. What has father done?"

"Do you remember telling me of the man who had robbed a pay clerk and been imprisoned. . . ."

She drew a breath as if she knew what was coming, and nodded.

"Do you remember saying that he was horrid? And that he had to be hurt?"

"Yes."

"Well, I'm that man." There was a silence. Her eyes never left his face, but they were quite unreadable. Whether she was shocked at this news or not, he couldn't tell. Perhaps after what had just gone she was past the point of being shocked further. She was so unmoved that he said again:

"I am that man."

"Well," she said in that steady, measured voice that sounded so terribly wrong from her. "Well, you are that man, then; I believe you. After tonight, I don't think I shall ever find it difficult to believe anything. You are that man. I still don't understand. . . . I'm slow, I suppose. But why did you marry me, Jim?"

"To pay them back." The words fell very cold and clear.

"Father?" she questioned.

"And—Ames."

"Oh, yes. . . . I'm beginning to see. . . ."

She passed a tired hand across her eyes.

"They let me go to prison," he said harshly. "For three years. . . ."

"For robbing a pay clerk?"

"Yes. . . . with violence. . . . Three years penal was my sentence. . . ."

There was another silence, then:

"Had you done it, Jim?" Her dead voice came up to him, hitting on his nerves. If only she'd change the tone, show some life. . . .

"You said that that man must have done it," he retorted bluntly. "You said that Ames wouldn't have let him go to prison if it hadn't been absolutely proved that he had done it. . . ."

"Yes; I did say that. . . . I remember. . . ."

"You said," she went on, "that he must be hurt. . . . Well, he has been hurt. . . . Believe me, he has been hurt. . . . Can you imagine what a purgatory prison is. . . . Can you picture what it meant to me, with my strength and ambitions, to be caught and held for three whole years? With life going by outside? Three years! Thirty-six whole months. . . . A hundred and fifty-six dragging weeks. . . . Over a thousand interminable days. . . . Hurt?" he laughed dully. "Don't worry about that, Lucy. . . . I've been hurt. . . . good and plenty. . . ."

"And so you hurt me?" she said. "No; then—your father and Ames—through you."

"You set yourself to make me love you, so that you could make Oliver suffer. . . . and father. . . ."

"He'll scarcely like to have a jail-bird for a son-in-law," he broke in bitterly.

"Oh, yes, I see. . . . It was a neat plan, and marvelously successfully carried through."

If she would only cry or break down in some way, he thought. This dead-level calm was ghastly to listen to.

"And I see why you were afraid of losing me. Always so queerly afraid of that, weren't you, Jim? I understand it now. You were afraid of losing this revenge of yours. Afraid something might happen to upset your scheme. And I thought you were afraid of losing me because you loved me; in the way that a lover is afraid, because he loves so much and can hardly believe that such happiness can last. I thought that was what made you afraid, Jim. . . . I thought I understood it, because sometimes I was almost afraid myself. . . ."

The dead voice went on, dining into his ears, beating on his nerves, till he almost gave way to a sheervly womanish desire to scream. But he could only say:

"Yes, it's all true. Everything you say."

He wanted to move his eyes from hers, but somehow could not. Those big, blue eyes of hers, void of feeling as that changed, terrible voice, just looked straight up into his, and held them.

"And your pride of conquest; your triumph; your glory in that great, big strength of yours, that could pick me victed of robbery with violence, perhaps you'd rather leave it till tomorrow?" The bitterness of that was indescribable.

"Oh, I'm not in the least afraid," she answered. "I wasn't afraid of your love and I'm not afraid of your hate."

"Then you'd better go to bed. There's nothing profitable in this." He turned violently and flung himself toward the door of his dressing room.

"Is that your room, Jim?" her voice came after him.

He turned in the doorway.

"Yes. But I'll go and sleep in one of the spare rooms if you object to my being so near you," he answered bluntly.

"Oh, no," she said tiredly. "It doesn't matter. Good night, Jim." The little formality, coming with such lifeless mechanicalness clutched at his heart in the most extraordinary way. A chaos of impulses arose within him, and died before he could get them sorted out. But that last sight he had of her, standing there looking after him, suddenly brought something she had said to his memory:

"Rather a little girl. . . ."

And he found that he was saying the words to himself as he closed the door and shut out the sight of her.

Lucy sat on the edge of the big bed staring out helplessly before her, trying vainly to get a hold on life again. Reality seemed to have slipped from her grasp, and she felt that she was struggling in the throes of a nightmare. And yet she knew that the nightmare was only the truth. It had happened, that ghastly scene just now, with Jim. He had told her all those terrible things. She knew that they were true, and she knew that they had changed everything for her. Yesterday seemed centuries past. Her love, her engagement, her wedding—all seemed as if they had happened to some one else.

Jim was that man who had gone to prison for robbery with violence; a workman at Gresham's. She had heard her father speak of that man; Ames, too; but she had never heard of the affair in much detail.

What was she to do? Go back to her father, as Jim had suggested? She could be sure of sympathy and comfort there. . . . Yes, she supposed that was the only thing to do. Go back and tell the truth. Tell that it was for this man who could deal so treacherously with her, that she had given up her rose-strewn girlhood; for a man who could wound her in this terrible way, that she had refused Oliver's devoted love. . . . For a man who had suddenly become this terrible, this monster thing that Jim had shown himself to be. From being everything she had loved, he had become—this.

What did she feel for him now? An answering hatred? An answering vengeance? She searched her heart for the truth. It was none of these. She did not know quite what it was. Just a sort of numbed horror was as near as she could get to it. Fear? No. There was no fear of him in her heart. She had told him that, and it had not been in any way a bluff. Just horror, that was all. Horror of finding that something she had loved and revered was really a thing to be hated, despised, abhorred.

Thoughts began then to go round in circles; repeating over and over again; dinningly; unbearably. It was nearly dawn when she wearily undressed and got into bed; and full day before, exhausted with a sort of utter exhaustion she had never before known, she sank into sleep.

She did not see Lee again until noon next day. She had not been up long, but evidently he had, for he came into the house in riding kit. As he crossed the hall, he turned, and through the open doorway of the living room he saw her standing by a table, arranging pink roses in a big silver bowl. He stopped, startled by up and carry me off as easily as you had taken my love. . . . Oh, a big triumph, Jim! A big triumph. . . ."

"Well, it was the triumph I had been working for. . . . Three years' hell takes some paying back," he said sullenly.

"And I was so simple, wasn't I? So unbelievably easy. You just looked and—conquered, didn't you? Did you laugh sometimes to yourself, Jim, when you held me in your arms and. . . ."

"No," he said roughly. "I've never—laughed. Think what you like. . . . But that, at least, isn't true. . . ."

"Not that it matters much. And if you had, it would be understandable, for surely there was humor in it, somewhere. . . ."

She broke off, turned away, looking round the room as if she had been walking in her sleep and had just awakened to wonder, dazedly, where she was. Then her eyes came back to his.

"And now, Jim, we are married," she said, "and you have told me that you don't love me. Now, what are we to do?"

"I didn't mean to tell you!" he cried.

"Then, why did you?" she asked wearily. "After setting your plans so carefully, why should you do anything you did not mean to do? That was not typical of you, was it?"

It was not bitterly said; neither was there the least hint of irony in it. It was as if she had suddenly seen him in a new and terrible light, and quite simply accepted that he was this new and terrible thing.

"No," he answered abruptly, "it isn't typical; but I did it. You'll not believe me capable of a. . . . decent impulse toward you, after this. . . . but. . . . well, marriage is a. . . . big thing. . . . I couldn't take all that it means. . . . letting you think that I. . . . Oh, hang it all, some idiotic weakness caught me. . . . and I told you!"

That came roughly, and he flung away from her and strode over to the window, pulled back the curtains and stood breathing in the soft night air, as if the room had suddenly become suffocating. She turned slowly and looked after him.

"Well, Jim, what are we to do?" "I suppose you'll leave me, won't you?" he suggested. She paused, then:

"Tonight?"

"If you are not afraid to be in the house with a man who has been convinced of robbery with violence, perhaps you'd rather leave it till tomorrow?" The bitterness of that was indescribable.

"Oh, I'm not in the least afraid," she answered. "I wasn't afraid of your love and I'm not afraid of your hate."

POISON in Your bowels!

Poisons absorbed into the system from souring waste in the bowels, cause that dull, headache, sluggish, bilious condition; coat the tongue; foul the breath; sap energy, strength and nerve-force. A little of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will clear up trouble like that, gently, harmlessly, in a hurry. The difference it will make in your feelings over night will prove its merit to you.

Dr. Caldwell studied constipation for over forty-seven years. This long experience enabled him to make his prescription just what men, women, old people and children need to make their bowels help themselves. Its natural, mild, thorough action and its pleasant taste commend it to everyone. That's why "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin," as it is called, is the most popular laxative drugstores sell.

STAGE COACH TALES

By E. C. TAYLOR

From Stage Driver to Cabinet
JEREMIAH M. RUSK, who later became governor of Wisconsin and still later was first secretary of agriculture of the United States, was a picturesque stage coach driver of the early days in Wisconsin.

Almost a giant in stature, and heavily bearded, he was a leading personality in the state even when he was handling the reins behind two or three span of horses over the bumpy, marshy roads of that new commonwealth.

Tales of his muscular prowess in those early days made him famous, but his chief claim to fame, otherwise, was that he probably was the only stage coach driver who did not drink. Drivers as a lot were moral men, noted for their integrity, and famous for their seeming aversion or swearing and cursing. But with the exception of Rusk, all of whom there are any records, drank. A man's size glass of whisky or brandy was the first thing they asked for when the coach stopped at the taverns along the route, and in winter, when they descended half frozen from their high seats where they had been fighting gales and icy temperatures for hours, it probably was needed to get their blood circulating again. But Rusk never took a drop, even after a long stretch of driving through the bitter cold. He was one of the early ardent prohibitionists.

As Rusk's stage coach neared Virgo one day, a horse fell ill. Rusk saw that it could not pull its share of the coach any longer, so he tied it to the coach, seized the neckyoke himself and with his great strength helped to pull the coach into the next town.

Rusk was reticent about his physical prowess, and was almost bashful when anyone mentioned it, but he often told a story on himself about how he, a teetotaler, had to buy drinks for a tavernful of people.

One cold day, he stopped his stage coach at a tavern near Prairie du Chien, Wis., so the passengers might warm themselves.

When they all trooped into the public room, Rusk noticed an innocent looking horn on the counter. The young driver was invited to blow it. He did. But instead of musical notes, there issued from the horn a quantity of flour that covered his face. Everybody laughed, and Rusk had to "set them up" for every one in the place.

Rusk began driving a stage coach when he was only sixteen years old. He drove for McNeill, Moore and company, famous stage coach operators of Columbus, Ohio. He migrated to Wisconsin in 1853, and drove coaches there until the Civil war broke out.

Rusk raised a regiment of volunteers and was commissioned a major in the Union army. He took part in the battle of Vicksburg, and in August, 1863, was promoted to lieutenant colonel.

He was with Sherman in the Meridian campaign, and displayed such great gallantry in the battles around Atlanta, Ga., that he was breveted a brigadier general.

After the Civil war, he went back to Wisconsin, where he entered politics. He was elected a member of congress in 1871, and served in the national house of representatives until 1877.

In 1882, Rusk was elected governor of Wisconsin, and was continued in that office until 1889.

In the latter year President Harrison appointed Rusk to his cabinet, and the tall former stage coach driver became the nation's first secretary of agriculture, a branch of the executive department of the federal government which congress had just created.

He served in Harrison's cabinet until Grover Cleveland succeeded Harrison in the Presidency in 1893. (© 1931, Western Newspaper Union.)

Birds' Songs Tell Time
Clocks are not necessary to give the time in the morning if one understands the songs of the birds, according to a German naturalist who has just completed a schedule of offerings by feathered songsters. He says the chaffinch sings at about 1:30 on summer mornings and the backcap calls an hour later. Between 2:30 and 3 o'clock the quail give their call, while the hedge sparrows are heard about 30 minutes later. The blackbirds are next, followed by larks, the black-headed titmouse, and finally the sparrows start between 5 and 5:30.

Lincoln Mementoes
The original plaster casts of the face and hands of Abraham Lincoln and also the first bronze casts of the face mold and of the hands were presented to the National museum on January 25, 1888, by a committee comprised of the late Augustus Saint-Gaudens, Thomas B. Clarke and Richard W. Gilder, acting for the subscribers to the fund collected to finance the making and sale of the casts. They were purchased from Douglas Volk, son of the sculptor, Leonard D. Volk, who made them from the living face and hands of Lincoln.

Brutal Retort
"It was the sweetest hat," gushed Mrs. Penn, "and when the milliner told me I could have it for a mere song, I ordered it at once."
"A case of mistaken identity," he said quietly. "The woman evidently thought you were a famous singer."

Timepieces That Are Marvels of Precision
The most accurate precision timepieces now available are the Shortt clocks made in England. The United States naval observatory has three of them. So sensitive are they that the mere temperature of the body is enough to render them inaccurate as standard timepieces, and so it was decided to install them in a vault in the ground below the frost line.

There are really two vaults, one within the other. An air space of 18 inches between the vaults serves as an insulator and also makes it possible to inspect and clean the inner vault. It is almost a holy rite to enter the sacred inner vault. Since the timepieces must not be exposed to atmospheric changes the privileged enter the inner vault only through an airlock. Electric lamps are so mounted that they can be changed and cleaned without the necessity of entering the inner chamber.

Visitors to Washington who want to see how the nation keeps its time must gratify their curiosity through a periscope.

Mineral Expands
In halls and similar places where the acoustics are to be seriously considered, engineers are making use of a mineral which is comparatively new and which has several peculiar and valuable characteristics. To the touch it seems like cork, but to the eye it is gold, at least in color, and when used in construction it deadens the wall so that there is no reflection of the sound and consequently no reverberation. Exposed to the flame, it expands several times its former bulk. It has been called zonolite and is found in Colorado and other parts of the Northwest.

Early Surgical Operations
Garrison's History of Medicine says that certain pictures engraved on the doorposts of a tomb near Memphis, Egypt, are regarded by their discoverer, W. Max Muller, as the earliest known pictures of surgical operations (2500 B. C.), and antedating these are the well splinted fractures of the fifth dynasty (2750-2625 B. C.).

Nurse Marries Rich Woman-Hater

Romance Buds in Hospital After an Operation.

Atlanta, Ga.—An unusual June-December romance that flowered in the stillness and somberness of a hospital ward culminated here in wedding bells for a pretty young nurse and a wealthy bachelor.

The principals are Miss Luna Lane and F. M. Barberi, an official of the Southern railway.

The marriage, performed by the Georgia Baptist hospital chaplain a few hours after Miss Lane received her diploma as a graduate nurse, came as a surprise. The couple kept their engagement secret until Miss Lane could get her diploma.

Once Woman-Hater

Barberi was a woman-hater of wide reputation. Despite his good looks and wealth, he had escaped designing mothers with marriageable daughters for so long that his friends had given up hope that he would ever marry.

In fact, he had told them on innumerable occasions that he would never wed, which statements were received with considerable dismay in the debutante ranks.

"Get Barberi," became a slogan with the more forward of the debutantes and their mothers, but never a proposal did any of them get.

Then Barberi was stricken suddenly with appendicitis. He was rushed to George Baptist hospital and put under the knife. One of the nurses helping the surgeon was Miss Lane.

The pretty young nurse was instantly attracted to the patient. She was by his side when he came out from un-

Ex-Slave, Declared Dead at 5, Is Nearing 100

Staunton, Va.—"Aunt Annie" Johnson, former slave, who, when a child and following a serious illness, was given up for dead and placed in a coffin for burial, is nearing her one hundredth birthday anniversary at her home at nearby Waynesboro.

Pronounced dead at the age of five years, a member of her family noticed her body move as she lay in her coffin and she was nursed back to health.

The ancient colored woman, who will pass the century mark December 1, is still active and a familiar figure about the streets of Waynesboro.

J. D. and His Great Grandchildren

A most unusual and exclusive photograph of John D. Rockefeller, Sr., oil king and one of the world's wealthiest men, with two of his great grandchildren, made on his estate, at Lakewood, N. J. The youngsters are left to right, John (9 months) and Elizabeth (2½ years) De Cuevas, offspring of Mr. and Mrs. George De Cuevas.

Patience Wins Him.

Perhaps Barberi did not pay special attention to the pretty dark-haired nurse at first, but later her kindness and patience won him.

The woman-hater began to sit up and take notice. And he also did a little thinking.

Then one day he said:

"I didn't think I needed anyone to take care of me. I thought the old saying about a woman's loving hands was hokey. I was mistaken. Let's get married."

Miss Lane was willing, if she could get her diploma first, so they waited until a month after Barberi was well and out of the hospital.

Now the wealthy "woman-hater" and his wife are keeping house, surrounded by the scenes of domesticity he once scorned.

He is forty and she is twenty-two.

Low Birth-Rate Causes Alarm in Britain

Only Sweden Has Fewer Infants Per Capita.

London.—Great Britain now has the lowest but one birth rate of any country in the world—the sole exception is Sweden—and economists are somewhat alarmed over the possibilities this forecasts.

The census, taken throughout Great Britain, reveals that there has been an almost unbroken fall in the birth rate during the last ten years. It has been reduced to the level of 16.3 per thousand population, which is more than half less than in 1890 and only about two-thirds of that recorded in prewar years.

S. P. Vivian, the registrar-general, in his report warns: "Though further slight increments in the total population may be expected during the next two decades owing to a rapidly expiring but not quite exhausted momentum imparted by the higher birth rates of the past, there can be no doubt that, failing a considerable rise above the present birth-rate figure—of which there is no sign at present—the population maximum will then be reached and will be followed in its turn by a small but increasing decline."

Vivian adds that at its present rate the birth rate is insufficient to retain a stationary population in the future.

The report points out that in spite of the fact that marriage rates have been well maintained, particularly at the younger ages at which the bulk of births occur, and of the further fact that the exceptional postwar spurt in the birth rate itself had passed its maximum at the beginning of the last period of ten years, the total births registered between 1921-1931 are more than a million and a quarter fewer than they were in the preceding period—a period which covered the war years, when the birth rate sank to levels never before recorded in this country.

The births were between 2,000,000 and 2,500,000 fewer than those of the last completely normal ten years, from 1901 to 1911.

Majestic Swans Again Nesting in Yellowstone

Yellowstone Park.—The appearance of eight pairs of trumpeter swans was reported in Yellowstone National park during the month of May, which is their nesting period. Conservationists hail this as good news, for these majestic birds are one of the species which are facing extinction under changing conditions, and the Yellowstone is one of the points where it is hoped to check the apparently ebbing tide.

Unless the few remaining trumpeter swans in existence can nest and rear their young safely, the species will soon join the dodo and the passenger pigeon.

Bread From Seaweed Is Popular on West Coast.

Ojai, Calif.—There's something new under the sun all the time—if an old proverb may be contradicted.

For this describes the baking and selling of bread made of kelp, better known as "seaweed," which started in this town, located only a short distance from the Pacific ocean.

William Baker specializes in producing this bread and says there is quite a demand for it. "The kelp gives the bread a peculiar flavor," he said.

Smoker Starts Big Fire in Pennsylvania Forest

Harrisburgh, Pa.—Realizing that smoking was a dangerous practice while cleaning the brush in a woodlot, a Cambria county farmer placed his pipe in the pocket of his coat. Unfortunately the pipe was not extinguished and burned through the coat, fell to the ground and started a forest fire that destroyed five acres of timberland.

DIG UP CEMETERY OF ROMAN EMPIRE

Recent Discovery in Ostia Is Important.

A workmen's cemetery, dating from the second and third centuries of the Roman empire, has been unearthed near Ostia, the ancient seaport of Rome, and will throw much light on the customs and life of the lower classes of that period.

During the construction of roads in the Ostia section workmen came upon a vaulted roof which revealed the existence of tombs. Systematic excavation led to the discovery of a veritable "City of the Dead."

The ancient cemetery, occupying a triangular portion of land known as the Isola Sacra (Sacred Island), is enclosed within two arms of the River Tiber and the sea, says a United Press dispatch.

The island was called the "Paradise of Venus," according to historians, and later the "Sacred Island" for some undefinable reason. It was donated by Emperor Constantine to the church of the Holy Apostles in Rome and this was believed to be the origin of the name. Recent unexpected finds, however, give rise to the theory that its latter name was given because the inhabitants of the port had set it aside for their burial grounds.

The 20 tombs unearthed are of artistic as well as archeological interest. Although it cannot be expected that they will reveal such treasures as would have adorned the burial place of the wealthier classes, the architecture and decorations display a certain inborn sense of art.

The tombs rise in groups of five or six. Around the larger structures are found burial places, dome-shaped, like the sepulchers of the Mohammedans, known as "marabutti." All are built of bricks arranged with the same astonishing skill that was characteristic of the great architectural feats of the epoch of Emperor Trajan, such as the colosseum, the Trajan forum, the markets, etc.

On the outside is a marble tablet with a plain inscription giving merely the name and age of the deceased. One door found in place, shows that the entrance to the cells was closed by a solid piece of wood, lined with a sheet of lead, turning upon hinges like modern doors.

The interior walls held niches which received the ashes of slaves and poorer people and are embellished with mural paintings not unlike those found at Pompeii, and depicting mythological subjects.

The necropolis was probably abandoned when the port of Ostia fell into disuse, and the tombs were soon buried by sand carried over by sea winds, which explains why no trace remained.

Jack Mail Route

The carrying of the mails has progressed so rapidly in late years that the airplane now speeds across the country with mail in only a fraction of the time required by trains of a few years ago, yet in spite of all the progress there is one mail route which goes on unchanged in the 36 years of its operation. In Edwards, Colo., W. H. Wellington, a veteran of the mail service, has the contract for transporting the mail from the post office to the railroad station, and thrice daily for 36 years he has driven the mail back and forth in a buckboard wagon drawn by a jack mule. His is believed to be the only jack-powered conveyance in the federal mail service.

Arizona Growing Dates

Dozens of date palm trees were planted in Phoenix, Ariz., early this summer in response to a chamber of commerce "plant a tree" campaign. The date palms produce fruit in addition to being ornamental. Southern Arizona is one of the few places in the United States where the date palm will thrive.

Three Party Divisions Had Name "Republican"

The name Republican has been applied to three parties, a fact which gives rise to confusion. The Republican party of today originated in 1854-56, after the dissolution of the Whig party. The southern Whig went over to the Democratic party on the slavery question and the northern Whigs affiliated with the Free Soil and Know-Nothing parties.

At a meeting held at Ripon, Wis., in 1854, a group of Whigs, Free Soilers and Democrats threatened to form a new party if the Kansas-Nebraska bill passed. The bill passed, and on July 6, 1854, representatives of the same groups met at Jackson, Mich., and formed a party to which they gave the name Republican. In the election that fall, the new party carried 15 of the 31 states. The Democratic party as now known began with the Anti-Federalists, who opposed the federal Constitution because of the rights surrendered by the states to the federal government. In 1792, it took the name Republican party to oppose the Federalist party. It was later sometimes known as the Democratic-Republican party, which name is still the official designation of the Democratic party. After its principles were clearly formulated in 1798 by Thomas Jefferson, it was sometimes called Democratic, but generally Republican, until Andrew Jackson's administration, which began in 1829. He was the first President to be officially listed under the name Democrat.

It was 78 years ago that Frank N. Davis, of Calais, and Isaac H. Johnson, of Deering, Maine, ran up the 294 steps of the Bunker Hill monument without stopping or touching the rail. There is the chap who wants to be a rich man; another who wants to be a famous man; still another would like to be a strong man, but perhaps after all greatest is he who is content to do his work as he finds it and be just a man.—Exchange.

Fame Soon a Memory
The splendors that belong unto the fame of earth are but a wind, that in the same direction lasts not long.—Daute.

Ancient Saying

"Smooth runs the water where the brook is deep," writes Shakespeare, and he got that from the proverb. "Still waters run deep." Other versions are, "God defend me from the still water and I'll defend myself from the rough," and "Silent men, like still waters, are deep and dangerous." The German said: "Dumb dogs and still waters are dangerous."

The First Census

Moses is credited with being the first ruler to count noses in his flock. Solomon did likewise, some 3,000 years ago. After nine months and twenty days the census taker reported 1,300,000 able bodied men among the people of Israel and Judea.—The Country Home.

Three Widely Read Books

It has been estimated that there are only two books in the world that have exceeded the circulation of "Pilgrim's Progress"; these are the Bible and the Koran.

Colors Blended in Roof

Shingles may be dipped in several shades of red, green, gray or other colors, and may be laid without any suggestion of a fixed design, producing beautiful varicolored effects.

Price of Selfishness
The only happy people are those whom we see more concerned about the happiness of others than about their own well-being and convenience and advancement. Selfish people never know contentment.—Hamilton Fyfe.

Only One Remedy
Neither drugs nor charms nor burnings will touch a deep-lying political sore any more than a bodily one; but only right and utter change of constitution.—Plato.
