NATURALNESS MAKES WILL ROGERS GREAT COMEDIAN

The one thing that makes Will Rogers the outstanding film star of today is his own ability to make audiences forget that he is a comedian.

Evening clothes, topper, cane, boutonniere; not the Prince of Wales, but the Prince of Good Humor, Will Rogers; and that's just what he wears in his new Fox picture, "Young As You Feel," which shows at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

But don't laugh now. Save your giggles, 'cause you're going to need every one of them when you see Rogers change overnight from an old duck of the stock yards to a modern playboy of the night clubs. He's more mirth provoking than ever and he'll shake you loose from your last titter.

If you thought Will was funny in baggy trousers, or in his galvanized derby, wait till you see him in spats. And wait till you see Fifi Dorsay, and Lucien Littlefield who head the strong supporting cast, which also includes Donald Dillaway, Terrance Ray, Lucile Browne, Rosalie Roy, C. Henry Gordon and Brandon Hurst among others.

"Young As You Feel" is by far Rogers' funniest. It was adapted from George Ade's stage play, "Father and the Boys," and it was directed by Frank Borzage.

GEORGE ARLISS TRIUMPHS IN CAPTIVATING COMEDY

Presenting George Arliss on the screen in overalls seems almost like photographing King George V in a night shirt, but it is what is done in "The Millionaire," the Warner Bros. picture which comes to the State Theatre Sunday and Monday.

The public is so used to seeing Mr. Arliss in dignified or spectacular costumes, such as those worn in "Disraeli" or "The Green Goddess" or "Old English" that it is certain to be astonished when the star appears for the first time as a garage mechanic, dressed in the togs german to that profession.

Arliss himself always enjoys getting into roles that give him a complete change of character and atmosphere and he is not actually adverse to overall, in his own regard, although it is not on the records that any one has seen him, either in this country or about his homes in England, dressed in demin and a monocle.

"The Millionaire" presents Arliss in an entirely different role than he has yet played in talking pictures. His supporting cast includes Mrs. Arliss, Evalyn Knapp, David Manners, Noah Beery, James Cagney, Tully Marshall, Ivan Simpson and J. C. Nugent.

Fair Directors Met Wednesday

A meeting of the officers and board of directors of the Isosco County Agricultural Society was held Wednesday. Six directors, the president and secretary were present.

The total receipts during this year's fair was $3581.22. Of this amount $1166.30 was spent for the Western Rodeo, which was the principal attraction. As the receipts for this year's fair were over $1300.00 greater than those of last year, the Rodeo proved to be more than self supporting. In the face of the present depression, when a majority of the fairs of the state sustained a decreased sale of admission tickets, the Isosco county fair had a remarkable increase in sales. This was undoubtedly due to the better attractions this year. With the usual attractions the receipts would have fallen short of last year.

It is interesting to note that about 80 per cent of the money was directly or indirectly expended to people in the county. The expenditures made were for premiums, material, labor, hay and other supplies. The rodeo, itself, spent more than $1000.00 for hay, grain, groceries, supplies and railroad charges.

The deficit this year was about $1300.00. This is less than the average sustained during the past seven years.

Give Time Extension On 1932 Licenses

Motorists will not be required to secure 1932 license plates until March 1, 1932.

Under an act of the last legislature the Secretary of State has authority to extend the time limit for purchasing new plates 60 days, and this extension will be made in connection with the 1932 plates, it was announced by Secretary of State Frank D. Fitzgerald.

One of the effects of this ruling is that motorists who purchase plates September 1, when weight tax fees are cut in half, will be able to use the plates six months instead of four months as in previous years.

Despite the fact that there are $1,000,000 fewer automobiles registered in Michigan this year than last, the amount of money collected from the amount tax is larger than in 1930. One of the contributing causes of this increase is that many motorists who could not have purchased license plates January 1 were able to keep their cars in operation for two months through the extension of the time limit.

"TRANSATLANTIC" HAS LOCAL PREMIERE AT FAMILY

Replete with romance and crammed with action and intrigue, "Transatlantic," new Fox Film production, has its premier showing Sunday and Monday at the Family Theatre, East Tawas.

Edmund Lowe, who heads the all-star cast, has the role of "Monty Greer," a gambler anxiously sought by the district attorney as star witness in a graft trial. His adventures, both amatory and otherwise, aboard this ocean greyhound prove amusing and interesting.

Prominent in the supporting cast are Lois Moran as "Judy Kramer"; Jean Hershoff plays her father, an old German lens grinder, making his first luxury trip abroad; John Halliday, an absconding banker; Myrna Loy, his wife; Greta Nissen, a Swedish dancer and sweetheart of Halliday; and Earle Foxe, one who has designs on Halliday's stolen millions.

William K. Howard directed.

NATIONAL FARM LOAN MEETING AT WHITTEMORE

Members of the National Farm Loan Associations operating in Ogemaw and Isosco counties met at Whittemore Wednesday in a joint conference for the purpose of discussing matters pertaining to their activities in connection with the making of farm loans under the provisions of the Federal Farm Loan Act.

The associations participating were those of Prescott, West Branch and Hale. E. E. Thwing, assistant secretary of the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul was the principal speaker. The meeting which convened at 10 o'clock in the morning was held in Whittemore with Fred C. Latter presiding. Final adjournment was not taken until late in the afternoon. At noon an excellent dinner was served to those in attendance. 94 were present at this meeting.

According to Fred C. Latter, who is secretary-treasurer of the association at Hale and who was in charge of arrangements, Michigan has 134 such associations and there are 4600 of them in the United States, operating in practically every agricultural community.

In his talk, Mr. Thwing laid emphasis on the fact that the Federal Land Banks are farmer owned and farmer operated, also that they do not lend government funds. "Practically every dollar that these banks have loaned," said Mr. Thwing, "has come from the sale of bonds, which bonds are secured by a pledge of the mortgages given by the association members. In the Federal Land Bank system, the farmers have what is probably the largest farmer cooperative in the world, certainly the largest farm mortgage institution. Since the establishment of these banks less than fifteen years ago they have loaned more than one billion, six hundred million dollars on long term mortgages to over 500,000 farmers."

"The system is well designed," said Mr. Thwing, "and can and does accomplish everything required of it as a successful cooperative institution." (Turn to No. 2, Back Page)

IOSCO CHURCH SCHOOLS

All church school workers throughout the county are urged to reserve Friday and Saturday, October 9th and 10th, for attendance at the two day annual county Sunday School Convention to be held at Whittemore and Tawas City. Sessions will convene afternoon and evening of each day. Bernard Cogan of Lansing will be present, also other workers of merit.

The workers in the Vacation Bible schools of the county submit the following report for the past summer:

Number of schools held—12 (nine of which were interdenominational).

Total enrollment—364.

Total teaching staff—37 (26 of this number were new teachers this year).

Denominations represented—9.

Cost of schools—$63.43. Receipts—$43.93. (The deficit was met by the County Council of Religious Education.) (a) Daily offerings from children at Tawas City and East Tawas, $13.00; (b) Final day programs, $30.93.

Handwork made for mission fields and underprivileged children—(a) 265 mounted pictures; (b) 8 prayer cards; (c) 25 Christmas cards; (d) 54 dolls; (e) 125 scrap books; (f) 30 soap models; (g) 4 treasure chests filled.

The decided advance will be noted when compared with the 1930 report of five schools enrolling 184 children and 12 teachers. When the Isosco report reached the state office, Rev. Halpenny sent us a note of congratulation, saying ours was the best report received from the entire state.

"THE PUBLIC ENEMY" KEEN DRAMA OF RACKETEERING

"The Public Enemy," a keen, exciting racketeer melodrama, is one of the features on the double bill program at the State Theatre next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

"The Magnificent Lie" is the other feature for these evenings.

Gangland has at last come in for a searching inquiry via the films. "The Public Enemy," a Warner Bros. film, gives the first vital portrayal of crookdom that has yet been attempted in the movies. It is devoid of over-emphasis on the love element, although this enters into its fabric, and presents instead an absorbing panorama of the growth and progress of racketeering as actuality has it. James Cagney is featured as the mysterious hero of the picture. Important roles are also carried out by Jean Harlow, Joan Blondell and Donald Cook.

Ruth Chatterton, who has contributed at least four of the outstanding screen dramas of the past two years, comes to the fore again in "The Magnificent Lie." In this picture she is introduced as a cafe entertainer in New Orleans. There, masquerading as a famous French actress, she wins the love of a sincere young lumberman. The role is said to be one of Miss Chatterton's strongest dramatic parts since she deserted the stage for the screen. Ralph Bellamy plays opposite the star. Stellan Erwin is also included in the featured cast.

France's Gold Is Carefully Guarded

Ingenious Traps Protect Bullion Underground.

Paris.—This is the story of a ride by trolley through streets paved with gold, 15 fathoms under Paris, a greater fortune than Croesus ever dreamed of. It was no dazzling sight, not half so brilliant as the decoration of a modern palace devoted to the speaking films, yet within an arm's reach of the trackless trolley stood piled most of the nearly 50,000,000,000 francs which represents the bullion stores of the Bank of France.

The bars, most of them with Bank of England seals, do not glitter nor do they shine, but stand in neat steel cases like so many books in a library. This great supply of gold, second largest in all the world's history, is more carefully guarded by ingenious mechanical protections than is any reigning king. A regiment of snipers could never hope to steal a single bar of gold from these vaults, into which 2,000 guards of the Bank of France could retire and keep house in case of attack or war.

Visitor's Reputation Scanned.
The Bank of France outwardly looks like any other bank, except that it is larger than most others in Europe. The thrill comes only in penetrating the gold vaults, flanked by an official who has previously instructed detectives to look up your reputation. Alongside and bringing up the rear is a platoon of uniformed guards, each entrusted with opening some portion of the great underground labyrinth. If one man is missing it is impossible to penetrate the vaults. All the keys are useless if one is missing. The entrance to the gold vault is by one of a series of shafts, most of which are "dummies" leading nowhere. The shaft for the descent has walls 15 feet thick of steel and concrete, waterproofed and ventilated.

This shaft is sunk through solid rock over which, not far below the surface runs an underground creek. This creek is really mud and sand in motion. It is allowed to run freely over the gold vault, another protection against penetration.

Great Doors Intervent.

At various levels on the way down it is necessary to leave one shaft for another, passing through great steel and concrete doors. Some of them are revolving, others are pushed in and out like corks. These are the most ingenious barriers.

At first approach the wall appears to be solid, but an electric trolley runs up, attaches itself to a ring and backs away, pulling from the bottle-neck this great 15-ton "cork" of steel and concrete. The same trolley pushed the cork into place. There are ten such impenetrable doors of all sorts, each more ingenious in conception than another, before the gold is reached 80 feet below.

There, 90 feet under Paris, are the streets of gold. Bullion is constantly arriving.

The minute anything goes wrong underground warning bells clang all the way up to the surface, and at police headquarters on near-by streets overhead a special signal rings.

If the thief tries to run special traps will open, flooding compartments and shafts with water or trapdoors in the ceilings are sprung and tons of sand crush everything beneath. Secret pipes carry gases and steam. Walls and doors are sanded so smooth that it is impossible to take hold and flooded moats from which rise slippery sanded steel walls make capture certain.

Infantile Paralysis Spreads Over Wide Area

Epidemic Less Virulent Than That of 1916.

Washington.—Infantile paralysis is epidemic this year throughout the North and East, and at its height in and around New York city, although the number of cases thus far reported shows that the disease is far less virulent than in 1916, the year of the worst outbreak of the disease in this country.

The death rate in New York city from the start of the epidemic, about July 1, up to the present time, is about one-third of what it was during the same period in 1916, according to Dr. Hugh S. Cumming, surgeon general of the United States public health service, and Dr. Ralph C. Williams, assistant surgeon general, who are observing the course of the disease.

The principal epidemic area in 1916 comprised northern New Jersey, southeastern New York and most of Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island with unusual prevalence in New York city.

This year all of New England is affected, especially Massachusetts and the states of New York, New Jersey, Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois and Minnesota. The extent of unusual prevalence this year is throughout the northern part of the country westward to include Minnesota, with very few cases reported west of Minnesota or south of the Ohio river. During the first six months of this year a total of 764 cases was reported, and for the month of July 1,015 cases, by the 48 states and the District of Columbia, making a total for the seven months of 1,770.

Minister Now Captain in the Texas Rangers

Houston, Texas.—The chaplain of the sheriff's convention which met here recently is not a man who prays for law enforcement and considers his duty done.

For the chaplain was Dr. P. B. Hill of San Antonio, a full-fledged minister, who served pastorates in Virginia and then was a Presbyterian missionary in the Orient, but who in addition wears the badge of a Texas ranger captain.

Doctor Hill, or Captain Hill, has been a ranger for four years, getting his captaincy in February. He preaches peace and has never had to draw his pistol on a man, but when he's at his work his pearl and gold handled .45 is a part of his equipment, and he admits he knows how to use it.

MEN ARE LIKE THE LEAVES

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

SOME leaves keep their green Longer than the rest: When the old trees lean Farther from the west, When the winds blow cold, When the last leaves fall, Some green leaf grows old Latest of them all.

So it is with friends: When the summer's done, When the season ends, Farther swings the sun, Some friends will remain, Keep their faith with you; Poverty or pain, They continue true.

Men are like the leaves, Fairest in the spring; When the autumn grieves, That's another thing. In the summer scene Would that we could tell Which would be the green When the others fell. (© 1931, Douglas Malloch.)—WNU Service.

SEASONABLE DISHES

WHEN preparing salad for more than the usual number, a few packages of lemon gelatin will make a fine foundation for the various fruits or vegetables. If one wishes, add in place of the water, to dissolve the gelatin, fruit juices, strained broths or both, made with bouillon cubes; they add flavor as well as nutriment.

Ostriches Busy Supplying Demand for Plumes

OSTRICHES all over the world are mighty busy these days growing plumes, the reason being the vogue for the Empress Eugenie hat, on which a feather is placed. The owners of ostrich farms are happy and the birds are producing eggs and young ostriches as fast as they can. A few months ago there were twenty-odd feather factories operating in the United States. Now about three hundred of them are going full blast, employing probably four thousand workers. The prices, too, while below those of twenty years ago when a choice ostrich plume brought as much as $30 (that kind isn't needed now) have climbed way up about 70 per cent in the last six months.

When giving a luncheon or serving a church or society club, a molded gelatin salad is always well liked. It may be set in small molds, or in large flat dishes and cut in serving-sized cubes, or it may be lightly broken up with a fork and served in nests of lettuce.

Vegetable Salad.

Grate six or eight medium-sized carrots, or better, shred very fine on a vegetable shredder; add one finely minced onion and one green pepper also finely minced, a few stalks of tender celery chopped fine, a cupful or more of finely shredded cabbage and one small cucumber cut in dice. Add to three packages of lemon gelatin dissolved in three pints of hot liquid and put away to mold. Chill before adding the vegetable and let thicken slightly.

Hot Slaw.

Shred cabbage very fine and crisp in cold water. Beat the yolks of the eggs with two tablespoonfuls of cold water, add a tablespoonful of butter, salt to season and a quarter of a cupful of vinegar. Cook this dressing over hot water until thick. Pour over the drained cabbage and heat until thoroughly hot. Serve hot.

Spanish Pepper Salad.

Dissolve half a box of gelatin in a half-cupful of cold water and add a cupful of vinegar. Add half a cupful of sugar, the juice of a lemon and a teaspoonful of salt, with one cupful of boiling water. Mix with six canned pimientos, two cupfuls of celery and one cupful of peans, all cut fine. Mold in small molds and serve on lettuce with mayonnaise dressing.

German Cabbage Salad.

This is one of the most appetizing of all cabbage salads. Chop a crisp hard head of cabbage with an onion or two, according to the size of the cabbage; three cupfuls of chopped cabbage will need one medium-sized onion. Cut up a two-inch cube of salt pork into the smallest possible cubes and fry until brown; pour this browned pork and fat over the cabbage, stirring and mixing well; add a teaspoonful or two of salt and in the same frying pan add enough vinegar to moisten the salad. When boiling hot, pour that over the cabbage. Serve after standing in a warm place to keep hot. This is very good when cold, so there is never any waste. (© 1931, Western Newspaper Union.)

Music Brings More Milk From Cows

THAT cows will give more milk to the strains of music was proved when Ben Scott, in charge of the cattle at the Fredmar farms near Oakville, Mo., installed a radio loudspeaker for the benefit of the restless bovines. They immediately showed signs of musical appreciation and stood still while they were milked.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

HONKER SENDS HIS THANKS TO PETER

THE slap of Paddy the Beaver's tail on the water, especially in the stillness of the night, is a very startling sound. It is no wonder that Honker the Goose awoke with a start. The other geese did the same thing. "Honk, honk!" said Honker in a low voice, which was the way of asking Paddy the Beaver what the trouble was.

"I don't know," replied Paddy, "but Peter Rabbit thumped his danger signal and I passed it along by slapping the water with my tail. It seemed to me that some of your followers were drifting pretty close to the shore and if there is any danger about, that is where it is, and there is danger or Peter Rabbit wouldn't have thumped."

Meanwhile the geese who had drifted so near shore were swimming out and all gathered around Honker in the middle of the pond to find out what the scare was, their long necks stretched as high as they could stretch them as they looked and listened suspiciously. Now Honker has the keenest of ears. You wouldn't think so to look at him, but he has. They caught the sound of the tiniest rustle on the shore. You or I wouldn't have heard it. Oh, my, no! But Honker did. It was the rustle made by Reddy Fox as he changed his position.

"There is some one over there," said Honker, in a low voice. "I thought you said that there would be no danger here tonight, Paddy."

"I didn't think there would be," replied Paddy. "It must be that some one saw you come here. Probably it is Reddy Fox or Old Man Coyote. You wait and I'll find out."

Paddy dived and when he came up he put only his nose out of water. He was very close to the shore where Reddy and Granny Fox were hiding, and the minute he put his nose out of water he smelled them. Then he grinned to himself and dived again, coming to where Honker was waiting. "Reddy and Granny Fox," said he briefly. "They are hiding right over there on the edge of the shore and I guess that if you hadn't wakened you would have had one or two less to make the long journey South with you by this time. Two or three were pretty close to that very spot when I gave the alarm and were getting closer all the time."

Billy Herman

Billy Herman, sensational second baseman of the Louisville Colonels, was purchased recently by Manager Hornsby for the Chicago Cubs, the price being rumored to be $50,000. He was to have reported at the end of the season, but Hornsby has called him in and put him at work on the second bag. Herman has been called the best man in the American association.

grilly. Old Granny Fox drew back her lips and showed all her sharp teeth. "Hiss away," she snarled. "If it hadn't been for that meddlesome Peter Rabbit some of you never would have hissed again." With that she and Reddy turned and disappeared in the Green Forest.

Honker swam back to where Paddy the Beaver was waiting. "Very early in the morning we will have to be on our way to the sunny southland," said he, "and so we are not likely to see Peter Rabbit again. The next time you see him please thank him for us and tell him that Honker the Goose never will forget what he has done for us this night. Will you?" And Paddy promised that he would. (© by J. G. LOOKING FOR THE TOWN

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

He had motored from Kansas or Arizona or some place beyond the Mississippi and was eager to see for the first time the beauties of New England. Perhaps, he was one of those countless thousands, or millions possibly it has grown to be by this time, whose ancestors came over in the Mayflower and he was looking up the places where they first settled. It was at Provincetown where he ran onto me out by the breakwater at the far end of the cape. He had come via Boston and had traversed the whole length of the narrow wobbling street along which the village is scattered. "I wonder if you could help me out?" he inquired. "Possibly, but not likely," I had modestly to admit. "I'm looking for the town," he explained. He had been from one end of Provincetown to the other, but he hadn't seen it. The old village, touched by his imagination, was something very different from actuality. He had missed it all as he was driving along. There are many of us who miss the town in other ways than did the Kansan when in reality it is all about us. I can, in a vague way, now realize how much of the beauty of the prairie I missed as a boy even when I was looking for beauty. I can see the knolls in spring now as I did not visualize them then, blue with violets and the lowlands in August brilliant with wild phlox. There were lilies—(thousands of them—and goldenrods and yellow sunflowers, "rosin weeds" we called them, from the resinous gum which the sun melted out of their stems. I didn't see them, as I can well realize now, that while I was longing to see the beautiful things of the world here was a sight before me that I would travel many miles to see again. The town was about me, and I was looking for it. Friendship and love and beauty—opportunity and happiness—how many of us pass along beside these things and miss them like the man in the midst of houses and yet looking for the town. Builds Cozy Home of Driftwood From River

Man Borrows Rowboat to Tow Planks Ashore.

New Orleans, La.—Richard Burton, sixty-year-old unemployed machinist, has built one of the coolest little homes in New Orleans.

Three years ago, when Burton was "laid off" by the machine shop where he worked because he was "too old," he found a job as a night watchman on a large, idle steam shovel. The job paid $15 a week, $5 of which he paid for a room. A year ago his pay checks stopped and he faced the prospect of eviction from his home.

It was then that he decided to build a home. He went on the Mississippi river in a borrowed rowboat and towed planks and timber ashore for his home. He sold enough of the lumber to buy food and necessities.

Hoping that some day he will get paid for his services, he has stuck to his job of watching the large, rusting steam shovel each night. By day he works on his home.

It is almost finished and consists of two well-built rooms eight feet above the ground, so he need not fear the floods. He has sold surplus lumber salvaged from the river to buy nails, screens and hinges for the little house. He hopes to paint it soon.

"Everything has come from the river that went into the place," Burton said. Cypress for the foundation, oak for the flooring, pine for the walls and strong beams for the framework have been towed to the bank of the river, a few feet from his door.

Travel and Trade in Java

Java Youths Selling Bamboo Musical Instruments.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.) INSTALLMENT buying has invaded Java, according to United States trade reports. The Javanese like American-made products. American exports to the island annually amount to more than $30,000,000.

Picturesque, horse-drawn carts with wheels from six to seven feet in diameter now must compete with speedier American-made auto trucks; and native two-wheeled passenger carts, once the only passenger vehicles in Java cities, are being crowded off the streets by shiny, new American-made pleasure cars.

The island, which is about the size and shape of Cuba, is traversed by a network of good roads and railroads. While traveling on either, the American tourist is seldom out of eyeshot of American products or products of American machinery. A traveler may engage an Italian, British, Spanish or French automobile for a tour, but a portion of the road he traverses is apt to be the product of American road-building machinery.

Should a blowout occur on the highway, it is likely that one of the thousands of American-made tires that are shipped to the island annually would be as readily available as one of foreign make. And the new tire may contain some of the rubber which a short time before flowed from one of the trees on a vast rubber plantation nearby.

The traveler who prefers to see the island from a train window is unaware that machinery and tools bearing familiar trade marks help to keep his train running on schedule.

Rice farmers whose watery farms rise like a series of silvery lakes up the sides of Java hills, cling to antiquated wood implements, but here and there the blades of plows and harrows from American factories and waterworks in agricultural regions reveal American-made machinery.

With more than 700 inhabitants to the square mile, the natives must be efficient farmers to feed the population. American fertilizer is the farmers' crop insurance, and when crops contract disease, American chemists furnish the medicine to bring them back to a healthful state.

Situated but a few hundred miles below the Equator, Java is hot, but the traveler often finds his hotel room made comfortable by an American electric fan. The power that runs the fan may come from one of the many electric generators imported from America.

Hotels Are Comfortable.

As a rule the hotels in Java are clean and well designed to meet the needs of a tropical climate. Usually, they consist of a main building open to the breeze, with no hindrance to the slightest breeze. The service, complete in every detail, is enjoyed by foreigners. One takes his seat in a spacious pavilion and is brought soup by an army of beturbaned Malays. Then large, deep plates are brought, on each of which is a supply of rice, one of the favored foods of the island. On top of the rice, two inches deep, the diner is expected to place a variety of vegetables, curries, dried fish, eggs, fowls and meat flavored with peppery condiments. After eight of the dishes are deposited on the rice, the diner's appetite, if he is a novice, usually calls a halt and the remaining half of the sixteen varieties of rice "coverings" are allowed to pass untouched. No wonder the great majority of the resident Hollanders are inclined to corpulence when one takes a glance at the Java festive board.

The streets of the larger Java cities that are often filled with American automobiles and bicycles, have their oriental bazaars where a gay array of goods ranging from cheap trinkets to fine metalware and fabrics are on sale, but there are also modern shops in which American cement machinery had a constructional part. There, too, American-made flashlights, batteries, spark plugs, and other automobile accessories, are displayed under the rays of American-made electric light bulbs.

Sometimes the same ships that take American products to Java return with many native products which are popular in this country. Many head colds and cases of malaria are treated with quinine extracted from the bark of the Java cinchona trees. The rubber heels on one's shoes or the tires on one's automobile may contain Java rubber. Perhaps your morning coffee and your afternoon tea originated on a Java coffee or tea plantation, while there is a bare possibility that some of the small quantity of Java sugar imported by the United States may have been used to sweeten these beverages.

What Batavia Is Like. Java ranks among the richest regions of the Dutch East Indies. There are more than 30,000,000 native inhabitants with a sprinkling of Europeans and Chinese and other Asiatics. This population requires systematic cultivation of the soil.

When the Dutch settled Batavia, the largest city on the island, they brought their love for the lowlands and built their city of European type, closed houses on canals which coursed a broad swampy area. But as trading men and soldiers died by the thousands from malaria and other diseases aggravated by the swamp vapors around them, the settlers eventually learned that tropical Java was not a temperate Netherlands.

European Batavia, now on higher ground, is a healthy city, a great emporium of trade and the metropolis of the island, sprawling over a wide area. The old town is almost entirely given over to the Javanese, Chinese, Indians, Arabs and Malays.

The new city has spacious parks, made colorful by myriad flowers and the luxuriant growth of the Tropics. Near one of the parks rises the imposing facade of the Museum of the Batavian Society of Arts and Sciences with a copper elephant, the gift of the king of Siam, in the foreground. The Batavia museum has one of the finest ethnological collections of any institution in the Far East and its publications rank well among the learned societies of Europe and America.

A sail of slightly more than 30 hours from Batavia brings the traveler to Soerabaya, the most important seaport in Java. Although the busy landing stage and bustling crowds in the streets impress the traveler of the city's commercial importance, it is for the most part hot and presents few attractions.

A few hours' ride from the city's back door, however, brings the traveler to Pasourouan where he may get the real flavor of Java's interior; where the dos-a-dos, Java's curious little high-wheeled covered wagons rumble over the roads behind sturdy white bullocks.

Tosari a Pleasant Resort.

Nearby, but reached only after hours of roughing, climbing on donkeys and afoot, is the delightful resort Tosari. A walk along the village's single street reveals the mode of life of Javanese mountaineers who are quite different from their neighbors in the lower valleys. Here are the homes of the Tenggerese, a hardy tribe which at the time of the Moslem invasion of Java retreated to the mountains and successfully defended themselves against the invaders. Tosari is perched on a flank of the Tengger massif 5,490 feet above sea level where invigorating air makes mountain climbing much more pleasant than in the torrid regions in the Javanese foothills.

Situated in the midst of the great East Indian volcano region, Java has its share of active and extinct craters. In fact the island is volcano-made. It is estimated that there are more than 100 craters on the island. Everywhere in Java, in the huge crater lakes, in fissures that now are river beds, even in ancient temples, half finished when interrupted by some fiery convulsion, are evidences of cataclysmic forces. The "treacherous Klot," as the natives call it, all but wiped out the town of Britar in 1919. More recently, Mount Merapi, situated at the extreme eastern tip of the island boiled over and took the lives of 90 natives.

A volcano is not always considered a calamity in Java. In fact most of the larger towns and cities of the island nestle around the base of active craters, although thousands of inhabitants have been lost in violent eruptions. Much of the prosperity of the island is due to the constant enriching of its soil by material coughed from these great smokestacks, and from the medicinal value of the hot mineral springs and highland resorts along the slopes.

U. S. Potatoes Save Million Chinese Handful Planted 25 Years Ago Relieve Famine.

Washington.—"The Biblical miracle of the loaves and the fishes was somewhat paralleled in real life during the recent famine in Kansu province, China," according to a communication to the National Geographic society from William W. Simpson, Tennessee missionary.

"A handful of potatoes sent from America, 25 years ago, planted and extensively propagated by Christian missionaries in this remote part of China along the Tibet border, saved the lives of more than a million Chinese when the district was ravaged by drought and famine," Mr. Simpson says.

"When the first Americans and Europeans penetrated the Kansu province, and established mission stations in Taohow (old city), some forty years ago they found a native Chinese potato which was small, poor, and had a very low food value. The natives of the district, with little regard for the future, had been in the habit each year of eating the best of the crop and saving the poorest potatoes for seed," the communication continues.

"A letter of appeal to the United States brought four early rose potatoes from Tennessee, and these were planted in 1897, two in Taohow, and two in Minchow. They grew very well and produced many tubers of fine quality in Chinese soil. The next year, however, the crop was divided with the Chinese, who were taught how to cut up the large potatoes for seed in order to keep up the quality of the crop.

"In a few years the new variety spread to several counties of the province, which had a total population of some 10,000,000 people. But the Boxer rebellion resulted in a recall of all the Christians from the district and while they were away the Chinese fell back into their old habit of eating all the best, and also of allowing the new variety to become mixed with the diseased older type of potato.

"The flavor and food value of the potato plantings had so deteriorated when missionaries were again operating in Kansu that Mr. Simpson decided to send for fresh tubers from America. Friends in Massachusetts forwarded a mere handful of Green Mountain potatoes, which were planted in 1903. The experience of Chinese planters with the earlier American variety helped to speed the distribution of the Green Mountain tubers, which quickly supplanted both the native and the early rose types. In the three years' famine since 1928, one of the worst famines the world has ever known, almost half the population of Kansu, and also of the Province of Shenai, to the east, have died. But where the Green Mountain potato was cultivated the larger part of the population has been able to subsist. It has been estimated that fully a million people have been living by eating these potatoes.

"Where American potatoes had not been cultivated the people resorted to the bark of trees, roots of grass and insects. As these could not long sustain life the people depending upon them became easy victims of disease and pestilence. In a few limited areas, where wheat and rye had been introduced by missionaries, these cereals proved of great assistance in famine time. In many regions where Chinese wheat had been entirely killed off by blight the newer American varieties flourished, apparently not being susceptible to the same diseases as were the Chinese varieties."

Hubby'll Be Out of Luck If Girl Friend Phones

Chicago.—Every home can use a telegraphone, an invention which will be displayed at the Museum of Science and Industry, founded by Julius Rosenwald. The instrument, invented by Poulsen of Copenhagen in 1900, has been given the museum by William Dubilier of New York.

The telegraphone takes calls in the absence of its owner. It replies to calls that nobody's home, but that it will take any messages.

The vocal registration is simply a reproduction of the voice, similar to a dictaphone. The phone then switches to a recording setup and takes down the message of the caller. When the owner returns, he switches on the reproducing device and hears messages received in his absence.

A German is manufacturing the device, which may come into general use when it can be made more inexpensively than at present.

Pair of Pants Covers Nudity of Rooster

Seattle, Wash.—Jeremiah became the most indignant rooster in all of Washington when he was forced to wear a pair of pants.

He was hit in the neck by an arrow shot by a youngster. He seemed to be dead, so his owner, Mrs. J. E. Winkley, began to dry pick him.

She had removed all of his tail feathers when he came back to life with a squawk and staggered into the yard.

His neck healed and Mrs. Winkley felt there was only one thing to do for poor, nude Jeremiah—make him a pair of pants.

21 Murders in Year Worry London Police

London.—There were 21 murders committed among the 12,000,000 people in the area supervised by the London police during 1930. Yet the commissioner of metropolitan police, Lord Byng, looks at the number with dismay, for he points out that it is a tremendous increase over the number committed the previous year, which was ten. However, he seeks satisfaction in reporting that ten of the murderers were arrested and punished, nine committed suicide, including one who had done two of the murders, with only one still at large.

Unique Salute Planned for the Kaiser's Death

Del Rio, Texas.—A miniature cannon, weighing only one pound and constructed from historical souvenirs picked up over the world, will be fired when death claims former Kaiser Wilhelm.

The gun will be fired by its owner, Rufus Sterling, who made it and fired it the first time when the armistice was signed. Then he said it would not be fired again until the kaiser's death.

A portion of the metal base upon which the tiny cannon rests, came from an 18 inch smooth bore gun that was in use during the Civil war.

THE STORY

By chance James Lee meets Lucy Gresham, daughter of Sir John Gresham, wealthy ship builder. Lee, unjustly accused of robbing the Gresham firm, was sent to prison...

Everything she said was unexpected, and the unexpected is nearly always disconcerting. "First of all, Jim," she said after a moment, "I want you to tell me all that you haven't yet told me. You owe me that, I think, and I believe you will have the justice to think so, too..."

"You can't win," he said bluntly. "There is too big a weakness on your side." "And that is..." she asked, her eyes meeting his. "Love." His look challenged her. She drew a breath, but met the look unflinchingly.

A few days later, when they were out walking, he suddenly linked his arm through hers, and said close to her ear: "See that man at the top of the lane? Well, he owns the place next to mine. It will look convincingly blissful, if we pass him arm-in-arm..."

He Looked at Her in Blank Astonishment.

hand toward her; but she stepped back from it, her face suddenly white; eyes wide. "Don't touch me, Jim!" she said in a tone of almost fierce command. He fell back from her, amazed again by the totally unexpected spirit of her. "You say you are going to stay with me," he cried after a moment.

Croesus Credited With Invention of Coinage

Authorities on the subject tell us that it is to Lydia that we owe the invention of coinage. In all times and in all countries, the privilege of coinage has been allowed the sovereign. Croesus of Lydia was the first monarch to introduce a bimetallic system of coinage—gold and silver in the proportion of about three to four.

The Better Plan

When I die, I should be ashamed to leave enough to build me a monument if there were a wanting friend above ground. I would enjoy the pleasure of what I give by giving it alive and seeing another enjoy it.—Pope.

Lee listened in astonishment. That this little, childish thing should show so much spirit; so much determination; should be so definite and decided. Whatever he had expected as a result of his revelation to her last night, it certainly had not been this. She turned and spoke from the window.

"I'm not, Jim," she said. "I don't believe you would hurt me, physically; and you have hurt me all that is possible in every other way. What more can you do?" He came toward her quickly, an odd light in his eyes, and stretched out a

"I've ridden all my life." "I haven't. Working men don't get the chance," he said. She glanced at him quickly. "I've never known you without plenty of money..." she said slowly. "It's difficult to picture you... poor..."

"I want to ride well. Tell me where I go wrong, Lucy. If I'm going to do a thing, I want to do it as well as it can be done." "Ride past and I'll watch," she suggested. This led to a regular lesson, and for half an hour he quite gravely let himself be coached by her. He was tremendously in earnest, which made her earnest, too, and while that lesson lasted, personal questions seemed forgotten.

"You've a splendid seat," she told him at the conclusion. "But you could just have a lighter hand..." They discussed it together for a little while. "When I see that anyone really knows, I want to get their knowledge," he said, as they rode on again. She thought over that; it was a new light on him.

"I'm afraid so, dad..." He doesn't take things easily..." she answered. "But... I couldn't help it..." He smiled. "No," he agreed; and then: "My girl happy?" Lucy felt the pressure of tears in her throat, but she answered with a gallant little smile: "What do you think?" And the old man was content. She even managed to steer the conversation round to Gresham's, and from there on to the story of the man who had been imprisoned for robbery with violence, and talked of it without a tremor.

Remains of Fossil Whale

Attempts by a dog to bury a bone in ocean sand at Pacific Beach, Calif., led to the uncovering of the fossilized remains of a whale which scientists believe swam in the Pacific 500,000 years ago. Part of the head of the huge mammal, several ribs, a hip bone, three vertebrae of the tail two from the neck and other bones have been uncovered.

"I suppose," she thought, "he's always shown that concentration and earnestness over everything he's ever done, big or small..." It's that that's... sort of turned to poison in him, and filled him up with hate... She found herself thinking: "It isn't hopeless... It isn't... We've been mad, both of us... Jim, with hate, myself with love... We started all wrong. I've got to find a new beginning and start all over again..."

"The end of the honeymoon," and laughed in the old disagreeable way. His tone stabbed her through and through; but she answered bravely: "Yes, Jim." "This mode of life is to continue, I presume?" he went on.

"Very well, then. I want to go into money matters. Do you mind?" "No. But in what way?" "You are Mrs. Lee; I presume the idea is for you to manage the household affairs?" "I will; certainly."

"I like to pay up all round at regular intervals. Run your accounts quarterly, will you? And then come to me for the necessary checks. I'll pay your dress allowance into your bank, with enough over to give you some loose change for current household expenses..." "Jim," she interrupted, "I don't need to bother you for my personal expenses. I've got heaps of money of my own. All that daddy settled on me, and all that mother left me, too. Mother had an immense fortune, you know. Did you know I had so much?"

"You are part of my establishment now," he broke in, "and my establishment is run on my money..." "I understand." He went into details as to amounts, and she let him have it his way entirely. Next day they went up to town. While they had been in the country, St. Abb had been busy getting the flat ready for its new mistress, and they found it in apple-pie order. Lucy found it a little difficult to seem genuinely hearty in her approval of what he had done. This was the home that she had imagined was going to be a paradise of love, and her heart ached as she thought of how tragically differently things had turned out. But she played her part pluckily and well, and St. Abb didn't guess what it cost her.

"Oliver's back," he told her. "He came to see me and then went straight to Gresham's... I don't fancy he'll call yet awhile... He's pretty hard hit, darling..." "I'm afraid so, dad..." He doesn't take things easily..." she answered. "But... I couldn't help it..." He smiled. "No," he agreed; and then: "My girl happy?" Lucy felt the pressure of tears in her throat, but she answered with a gallant little smile: "What do you think?" And the old man was content. She even managed to steer the conversation round to Gresham's, and from there on to the story of the man who had been imprisoned for robbery with violence, and talked of it without a tremor.

Mother's Darlings

George, aged four, and Ernest, aged five, were spending their precious five minutes with mummy before going to bed. "I does love you," sighed Ernest, contentedly. "Why do you love me, darling?" asked mother. "Cos we like your face." "But it's not much of a face," said mother. "This was a bit of a poser. 'But we've got used to it,' said George, after much thought.—London Tit-Bits.

STAGE COACH TALES

By E. C. TAYLOR

Henry Clay Rides to a Fall

HENRY CLAY, the "Idol of the West," to whose efforts in congress more than those of any other man in American public life the building of the great National road was due, rode to a fall on the road he had fathered.

Clay often traveled over the great highway, as he made frequent trips from the nation's capital to his home in Kentucky each year, and was known and liked by every stage coach driver along the route.

One day the brilliant political leader was traveling back home to Kentucky. The streets of Uniontown, Pa., in those days were not the paved thoroughfares of today. They were muddy morasses in wet weather, and rocky roads in dry.

The coach in which Clay was riding struck a large boulder of limestone as it was leaving Uniontown, and overturned, throwing Clay into the street. He was picked up unhurt and after viewing the smashup, remarked:

"This is mixing the Clay of Kentucky with the limestone of Pennsylvania."

Sam Sibley, the driver, received a broken nose, and the party returned to the McClelland house, which it had just left, until a new coach and driver were procured.

The "Pike Boys," as the lordly drivers on the National road were called, were all friends of Clay, although they did not all agree with him politically. One driver was accused of deliberately riding down a pro-Clay procession during the Clay-Polk Presidential contest.

The "Pike Boys" were the aristocracy of the day. Lads all over the nation looked upon them as the boys of today look up to Lindbergh and other heroes of the air. It was every boy's ambition to be the driver of mail and fast passenger coaches. There probably were more street corner arguments along the great highway in those days over the style of various heroes' driving and their prowess as lords of the road than there were over politics.

The drivers were as noted for their quick wit and large acquaintance with men of affairs as for their dextrous handling of two hands full of reins. Their social and business position was the envy of all boyhood, and it was the ambition of the nation's youths to emulate them. They were worshipped as heroes.

Among the best known drivers of the day nearly all of whom Clay knew by their nicknames, were John Bunting, Jim Reynolds, Billy Armor, "Red" Bunting, nearly seven feet tall, was the best known in the East. David Gordon and James Bun were the outstanding heroes of the western section of the stage lines.

These drivers were proud of their horses, and took the best of care of them. The passage of a President was a triumphal procession along the National road. The best drivers and the best horses were assigned to them.

The coaches were elaborate affairs, many of them costing several thousand dollars. They were gaily painted, highly polished, and lined with silk upholstery. They had arm rests, and comfortable seats.

The earliest coaches on the National road were the Troy coaches. They were built at Cumberland, Md., and carried 16 passengers. These were followed by the more elaborate Concord coaches, that were used universally by the stage lines all over the United States.

Relays of horses were waiting for the coaches every ten or twelve miles, and these were changed while the coaches were still rocking after coming to an abrupt halt. Speed was the watchword, and not a minute was lost on a trip. The drivers prided themselves on maintaining their schedule in all kinds of weather.

Those who lived along the National road when they were children still eagerly recall the thrilling sight of a train of coaches, sometimes as many as 14 in a single line, rushing into a relay station, with the drivers blowing their horns, quickly changing horses, and speeding off again. It was romance to them.

ACID STOMACH

PHILLIPS MILK OF MAGNESIA
For Troubles due to ACID INDIGESTION ACID STOMACH HEARTBURN HEADACHE GASES-NAUSEA

EXCESS acid is the common cause of indigestion. It results in pain and sourness about two hours after eating. The quick corrective is an alkali which neutralizes acid. The best corrective is Phillips Milk of Magnesia. It has remained standard with physicians in the 50 years since its invention. One spoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes instantly many times its volume in acid. Harmless, and tasteless, and yet its action is quick. You will never rely on crude methods, once you learn how quickly this method acts. Be sure to get the genuine.

Repressed Emotions

The word libido is used as a single word to express the emotional craving or wish psychiatrists believe to be behind all human activities, the repression of which leads to psychoneurosis.

Block System for Cities

Philadelphia was the first of modern municipalities whose plan was prepared for a particular site, and the rectangular plan there adopted has guided city planning in America ever since.

Chance Happening

Luck is generally described as something that happens seemingly by chance. It may be an event, either good or evil, which affects the interest or happenings of an individual, but this happening is entirely casual. Luck, however, carries the idea of good luck only.

Tallest Known Man

There have been reports among the less civilized tribes and among certain savage peoples that men have measured as much as 15 feet. From actual records that have been compiled, the greatest height found was that of Topinard's Finlander, who measured 112 inches—9 feet 4 inches.

Famous English Forest

By its association with Robin Hood, the most romantic forest in England is, perhaps, Sherwood. On its verge is a curious amphitheater called Robin Hood's hill, and in the forest may still be seen a very old hollow oak tree called Robin Hood's larder. One of the ancient oaks, entirely hollow, called the Major oak, can shelter in its hollow trunk a dozen or fourteen people at once.

Old French Institution

The Academie des Jeux Floreaux is at Toulouse, France. The first floral games were held at Toulouse in May, 1324, at the summons of a guild of troubadours, who invited the lords and their friends to assemble in the garden of "Gay Science" and recite their works. In 1694 the Academie des Jeux Floreaux was constituted an academy by letters patent. At present it is especially interested in Provençal poetry.

Circumventing Colic

A pretty little party from Pittsburgh, who always wears a straight flush and who can't understand the ways of a man with a maid, brings her problem to Oral Hygiene. "My boy friend," she boasts, "is as fine as they come, but whenever he calls he invariably waits 15 minutes before kissing me. Now, what's his system, please?" "Perhaps," grins the editor, "he has learned how long it takes the paint to dry?"—Pathfinder Magazine.

Drum Signaling

The Smithsonian Institution says: "In the eastern Belgian Congo tribes, particularly the Batela, have evolved a system of telegraphy through use of a wooden drum, the system of signals approaching that of a code. The drum vibrations are not articulated as in human speech; rather the message is recognized through intensity of volume, rhythm, kind of drum used, time of day, etc. In a jungle environment much information may thus be signaled."

"Knight of the Road"

Claude Duval, famous highwayman, was born in Normandy in 1643. He was sent to Paris in 1657, where he remained until he went to England in attendance on the duke of Richmond at the Restoration. He soon took to the road and became famous for his daring and gallantry. He was captured in 1670 in London and within a week was executed at Tyburn. His body was laid in state in a tavern and was viewed by huge crowds before the exhibition was stopped by a judge's order.

LEOPARD BOLD IN PURSUIT OF PREY

No Hesitation in Entering Camps After Dogs.

There seems to be a general agreement that the leopard is about as mean and fearless an antagonist as any man can face says Wynant Davis Hubbard in the Yorkshire (England) Post. Leopards are famous for their propensity to charge upon the drop of a hat or less. When they do charge they present so narrow a target and they come so swiftly that a hunter who has faced one successfully inclines towards great respect for him. In other words, hunters are apt to endow leopards with qualities which they do not rightfully possess because of the fear which the leopards engender in the hunters.

Around camps leopards are a nuisance because of their boldness. They appear to prefer dog meat to any other food, and will chase and kill dogs right in the middle of a camp. When I was in Portuguese East Africa, we were camped for a year between the Lula and Cupoche rivers north of the Zambesi. Leopards hunted our dogs nightly and killed ten or more before we got the better of them with traps. At least three or four times a week shouts and yells would rise from the compound where two hundred natives lived in their huts. Torches of grass flared up, and tom-toms were beaten. Always such a commotion meant that a leopard was chasing one of the dogs.

I once met a big male leopard face to face in short grass. With my gunbearers I was returning from a hunt about sundown. Suddenly I felt something looking at me. I went on slowly, but the impression was so strong I stopped and searched the country carefully with my eyes. In a moment I spotted a patch of white. There should not have been white anywhere round and I concentrated on it. Abruptly the head and shoulders separated themselves from the background, and I beheld a big leopard sitting on its haunches, staring at me some 40 feet ahead. I whistled my discovery and for a long minute all of us stood silently staring at the big cat. The combined gaze of so many eyes was too much for it. Rising to his feet, it bounded gracefully away.

A hunting friend of mine was once sleeping in a tent pitched in the Zambesi valley. It is very hot there, and the flaps of his tent were thrown back. On the foot of his cot slept a small pet terrier. In the middle of the night he was suddenly awakened by a thump on his bed. He awoke quickly, but the only sound he could hear was a faint snap of some bushes. Rising, he lit a lantern and searched about. His dog was missing and in the dust were the tracks of a large leopard.

It is not my belief that the leopards I have mentioned were truly courageous. They are demons of fury when cornered or hurt. They charge viciously and it is necessary to kill them to stop them. They are extremely bold. They will come into camps at times when no other animal would think of being so venturesome. Still, it is my distinct impression that leopards by these very acts, show a certain degree of stupidity, or curiosity. They are not the cautious thinkers that lions are. A lion will prowl about a cattle kraal all night, but he will not enter unless he can see a means of escaping. A leopard leaps right in, regardless. Consequently, leopards are far easier to catch than lions.

Jewelers in Constant

Warfare on the Crook

Other lines of business which suffer from holdups and sneak thievery might find it profitable to study the methods by which 4,500 jewelry concerns, banded together in the Jewelers' Security Alliance of the United States, are making the operations of jewelry crooks steadily more dangerous and less profitable.

The crooks have many tricks. For example, there is the fruit eater. If the jeweler does not watch him carefully, he will press a stone or ring into an apple core or a squeezed orange and throw the fruit into the street for his accomplice to pick up.

The gum chewer substitutes a false stone for a real one and sticks the latter, by means of gum, under the edge of the counter until he gets a chance to remove it without being discovered. The umbrella carrier drops valuable articles into the umbrella—and so on.

The alliance keeps its members informed about these devices, and methods for circumventing them. As a result, the value of jewelry stolen from members during 1930 was kept down to about $111,000, which is surely a remarkable showing.

Just recently the jewelry crooks have turned kidnaper. They go early in the morning to the home of a jeweler, stick a gun in his ribs, force him to their car and take him to his store, where he is made to open the safe and give up whatever articles the robbers want. This trick is new, but the alliance has already developed a most ingenious way to meet it. The crooks are smart, but the alliance experts appear to be just a shade smarter.—Frank A. Fall, in the Outlook and Independent.

It has pooled the mortgages of its thousands of farmer borrowers and has sold its bonds secured by these mortgages on a conservative investment basis in the staggering total of more than a billion dollars. The farmers have in the Federal Land Bank system an outstandingly successful farmer owned cooperative. They can ill afford to place obstacles in its continued successful operations by delinquencies or default, that can in any wise be avoided.

"Farms are selling," said Mr. Thwing, in commenting on the present market. "The bank is experiencing the most active demand for farms that it has seen for several years. During the first eight months of 1931 it has sold 398 farms, an increase of 40% over the sales of 1930. 102 of these are Michigan farms. In spite of the present low prices for most farm commodities, I believe we are again in a period of rising values. For the first time in years, the shift in population has turned back to the farm. In spite of the difficulties encountered by our farmers, the city worker generally looks with envy on the farmer's comparative security and independence. Farm lands have reached the lowest point in twenty years."
