Cities Use Radio in War on Crime

Police Broadcasting Stations ularity of police broadcasting systems. Prove Effective.

Washington .- A rapidly increasing use of radio in the nation-wide battle against crime and racketeering is shown by records of the radio commission. These disclose that in the short space of three years twenty large cities and several smaller ones have installed special police broadcasting stations and equipped patrolmen on duty with apparatus enabling them to receive orders from headquarters within a few moments.

The proved value of the radio in facilitating rapid communication and in many cases assisting in the capture of murderers and other criminals whole activities cost the nation hundreds of millions of dollars annually, has prompted thirty additional cities to make preparation for joining in the radio war against crime. Of this latter group, twenty-two hold construction permits for the establishment of radio stations and communication systems.

Finally realizing the importance of drafting the radio for service in the crime war, the radio commission has set aside eight channels especially for police work. The bands are all within a few meters of each other and lie below normal broadcasting channels. In some quarters it is predicted that ultimately so many cities will utilize the radio for police work that it will be possible to evolve a nation-wide

TTAKES a veteran river man to pilot his craft up or down the Mississippi river at any time, and this is especially true when the river is at as a low a stage as it is this autumn. Our illustration shows one of the best of the veterans, Capt. George O. Rogers, in the pilot house of the towboat Herbert Hoover, approaching the great Eads bridge. His craft is the largest towboat in the world, is powered with Diesel engines and makes regular trips between St. Louis and New Orleans. Captain Rogers, who is sixty-seven years of age, knows "Old Man River" like a book and can point out every one of its crannies and noooks, some of them dangerous and others safe. He has spent a lifetime learning the Mississippi, but because of its frequent changes of channel his "studies" are never completed. Every trip there may be something new to learn in the way of twists and turns of the mighty stream. Readers of Mark Twain's tales of Mississippi river pilotage will appreciate this.

and Peter had a little shivery, crawly feeling all over.

"And now I am going to give you fair warning, Peter," went on Old Man Coyote, still grinning, "that unless you get me a goose, a fat one, mind you. to make up for the one you cheated me out of you'll never get back to the dear Old Brier Patch. You see I'm giving you fair warning I must have a goose or I will have you. Now don't you wish you hadn't meddled?"

"No," replied Peter bravely enough, though inside his heart sank as he thought of how far away the dear, safe Old Brier Patch was. "I'm glad I did it. If that was meddling it was a good kind of meddling and I'm glad I had the chance and wasn't afraid to. Of course I am sorry if you are hungry but if you would learn to eat grass and clover and bark and berries as I do you never would need to go hungry. But I'm glad, ever so glad, that I saved those geese and I'd do it again if I had the chance. Perhaps it was bad business for me, but it was good business for them and I'm glad I med-

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

AS TENDERLY the starlight falls On cottage roofs as castle walls, And we, with all of our contending, Our much of making, much of spending, Our holding high, and walking proud. A little better than the crowd. Find nothing in God's scheme, my brothers,

That makes us better than the others.

The workman passing by your door May be a laborer, no more, But who have so much wealth or beauty They have no destiny or duty? You are a laborer, I guess, Or, if not that, then something less, A weed beside the road of living, Taking and taking, nothing giving.

There is but one nobility: You may be better, friend, than me, But only if you better labor For God and world and land and

Sultan of Sulu Sits as Filipino Senator

Fez Only Distinguishing Mark of Former Ruler.

Manila, P. I.- A visitor to the Philippine senate these days is quick to mark one member from the rest by a single distinguishing mark-a blue fez. Otherwise he appears to the casual observer little different from the other senators. He is a sturdy-looking man of sixty-four, who goes about very much as if he knows his business. This man is Sultan Jamalul Kiram II of Sulu, senator of the Twelfth district, who was a civil ruler in his own right until 1915, when he abdicated, to end a dynasty which existed for more than 500 years. Gov.-Gen. Dwight F. Davis has the privilege of appointing several members of the legislature from regions and provinces where conditions make it difficult to hold elections, and the governor chose the sultan as a senator from Mohammedan Sulu. The senator is reputed to have had more than 1,000 wives, but he has no children. Also, he is the last in the line of famous sultans whose history was interwoven for centuries in the colorful Moro history of the southern islands.

As a boy Jamalul was a prince, and his elder brother, Badaruddin, was sultan. The latter died in 1882 and Jamalul sought the succession, aided by his mother. A long conflict developed, however, and the Spanish government

In 1915 he abdicated and accepted American sovereignty without reservation, although he continued to hold an extremely important place among his people. Now he has taken another step and become a cog in a democratic government far removed from the traditions of his family.

STAGE COACH TALES By E. C. TAYLOR TALES

Black Hawk's Ride THE stage coach was a white man's I "infernal machine" to Black Hawk, the Sac Indian chief who led the savages of the Northwest on the warpath against the white invaders a century ago.

Black Hawk was an imposing, warlike Indian, who struck terror into the hearts of the white families living west of Lake Michigan until he was captured in 1832. The govern-ment realized that permanent peace were destined to rule the country and would be useless.

The representatives of "The Great White Father" in Washington conceived the idea that the best way to teach the proud chief that the white man was his master was to show him the wonderful progress the whites had made, to open the savage's eyes to the wonders of civilization.

The stage coach a century ago was to civilization what the airplane is today. It was the fastest, most comfortable mode of travel then devised. Despite the fact that stage coach riding was little more than a severe. jolting, with progress sometimes of only two miles an hour over almost impassable roads, it was the last word in methods of travel where the early railroads had not as yet been built.

The National road, stretching between the Atlantic seaboard to St. Louis by way of Cumberland, Md., Wheeling, W. Va., and the Ohio river valley was the pride of the nation. All freight and passenger traffic between the East and Middle West, moved over this highway, as many as 30 or 40 stage coaches and hundreds of enormous freight wagons moving in each direction every day. So it was decided to take Black Hawk and his lesser chiefs and retinue to Washington, the home of "The Great White /Father," and make him peaceable by showing him the wonders of the white man's civilization, and the futility of engaging in war on the whites.

The large party, which numbered a score of Indians and their captors, traveled east on boats on the Ohio river to Wheeling. There they were transferred to stage coaches, and set out over the National road for Washington.

When Black Hawk first saw the stage coaches, he was convinced they were a white man's death trap, and he protested gutterally against what he believed was a scheme to kill him and the Indians with him. Daniel Leggett was driving the coach carrying Black Hawk. An Indian was on the seat beside him, and inside the vehicle were six other Indians and a half-breed interpreter, besides Black Hawk.

Black Hawk had ridden in stoic silence, but with wary eyes, until his coach reached Washington, Pa., As the coach rattled down Main street in that city, a strap on the harness of a wheel horse broke. The horse plunged, and threw the Indian riding with the driver to the ground. The Indian, in falling, grabbed the driver

HEAVY DAIRY TOLL

Eradicate the Pest Before Heavy Infestation.

Cattle lice, which run up a heavy toll in the form of reduced milk yields and slackened gains, are likely to be more troublesome this winter than uscould be established so long as Black | ual, according to a report to the Uni-Hawk lived, only by convincing the versity of Illinois by an assistant Sac leader that his white brothers entomologist of the Illinois state natural history survey. There has been that further warfare by the Indians a gradual increase in louse population on dairy animals and other stock in the past two years, owing largely to lack of proper control measures. Fortunately, the lice are not hard to eradicate until a heavy infestation is allowed to develop.

From the standpoint of cheapness, availability and effectiveness the best treatment is raw linseed oil. Boiled or refined linseed oil is likely to injure the skin and should not be used. The oil may be applied with a handbrush or in the case of short-haired animals, with a wad of cloth. A brush having uneven bristles is best adapted to this work. A second treatment should be given two weeks following the first and then monthly applications should be made until spring. The oil should not be applied too vigorously but enough should be put on to reach the skin. It is a good plan to keep treated animals out of the sun for a day.

Time and Work Saved by

Use of Milking Machine The man labor used in caring for dairy cows in Nevada varies all the way from 81 hours to 280 hours # year for each cow, as indicated by 4 detailed farm records secured by the experiment station of that state. The average chore time for herds which were machine milked was 106 hours as against 141 hours for all herds of 15 or more cows, milked by hand. The average time required in all handmilked herds-which on the whole had fewer cows than the machine-milked herds-was 151 hours, which showed that where labor-saving equipment was not available labor costs were higher. For a 25-cow herd, a milking machine will make a net saving in labor of $290 each year according to this experiment station. This calculation assumes that labor is valued at 40 cents an hour and allows an expense of $60 annually for the machine.

Fishermen on

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.) LLAN, chief city of the Lombardian-Piedmont region of northern Italy, announces plans for a metropolitan underground railway system which, when completed, will have a total length of 50 miles. The announcement follows another telling of the completion of Italy's largest railroad station in Milan, a huge structure which compares favorably with the great terminals of the world.

Italy's first subway system and the biggest railway station are but milestones marking the progress of this modern, wide-awake city, which had the first public library in Europe and was the first city on the continent to light its streets with electricity. Viewing the rich and interesting history of this metropolis of the upper Po valley, its outstanding leadership among Italian cities, its virility through centuries, and its varied accomplishments, the observer may be inclined to give serious consideration to the boast of the Milanese that 'what Milan thinks today, Italy will think tomorrow."

Milan, in the matter of a new subway, is hurrying its plans because Rome also is planning a subway system. But Rome must hesitate and discuss. Underneath the streets and buildings of modern Rome are foundations of ancient imperial Roman monuments, and parts of the Catacombs. Milan faces no such obstacles, and will radiate five lines from the center of the city as conditions require. All five of the lines, two of which will reach points 20 miles away, will have stations within a few yards of each other in the Piazzo del Duomo. A population of more than 3,000,000 people will be served by this new system, up-to-date in every respect. Lombardy and Piedmont comprise the plains of the upper reaches of the great Po valley, the Alpine foothills, and the southern and eastern slopes of a large part of the alps themselves.

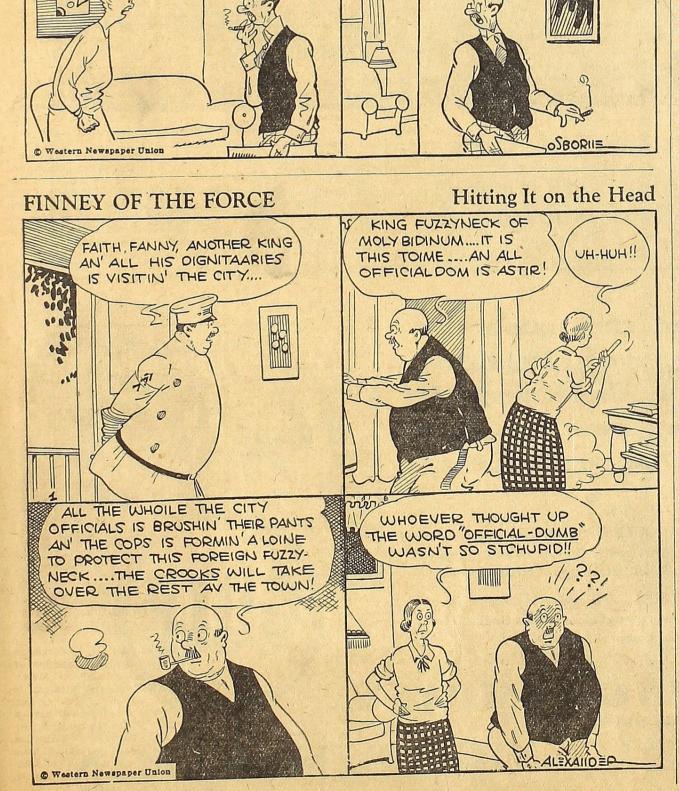

of the cities, may be made to take the place of the expensive fuel for which Italy is dependent on foreign coun-

Milan is today a half-way house for people rushing up and down the earth, from the Mediterranean to the Alps, from Venice to Como; it is so very well known, so very crowded, so busy, so bustling, one feels there is nothing more to be told of her. Perhaps because she seems so entirely modern, because she bears so few traces of her earlier years, because while her sister cities point so proudly to Etruscan, to Greek, to early Roman remains, she invites the visitor to contemplate her Galleria Vittorio Emanuele, one feels she does not appreciate her past. It is not so, she has been literally trampled into the dust so often she would have nothing but scars to show but for the invincible courage which made her instantly build on her ruins the foundations of yet greater things. Gian Galeazzo, who made the Certosa possible, did much for Milan. To him) we owe the cathedral, one of the largest in the world. What joy must have been his to see these wonderful structures growing, to know that from his care they came.

Milan cannot hold anyone long who remembers that Lake Como is but two short hours away, with open-air pictures far lovelier than any that Milan's rich museums hold. The little town of the same name at the southern end of the lake is quaint enough; it has a charming cathedral; it looks straight up to the snowpeaks, but it is not a place to linger; choose rather some quieter place farther up the lake -Cadennabia, Menaggio. Bellagio.

Beauties of the Lakes.

When people speak of the Italian lakes it is usually Como and its neighbors that are meant; Como, which is all Italian; Lugano, which is largely Swiss, and Maggiore, which is largey Italian; but there are others, very iny, perhaps, but also lovely; Orta, Varese, and to the east Iseo, Idro; above all, beautiful Lake Garda, whose upper end was Austrian. So many poets have sung their charms for twenty centuries, so many artists depicted their beauties, what remains for ungifted lovers to say? So much of hisry is sleeping in their shining waters, so many world-known names connected with their shores, what could one summer bring to all their memories? Which is the loveliest? Who knows? Undoubtedly Lake Como is the most popular. And does any visitor fail to row across its blue, satiny surfaces to the marble steps of the Villa Carlotta to see the Thorwaldsen Frieze and Canova's Cupid and Psyche? One does not need eves to know which is the favorite. The "oh's" and "ah's." the sighs and silences tell it; but, then, love is immortal, while war is transi-and pulled him off the coach with him.

The horses promptly ran away, with Black Hawk and his companions inside the swaying, careening coach. The frightened steeds made straight for the barn of the National house, where the coaches stopped on their trips east and west. At the corner of Main and Maiden streets, the coach upset, pinning Black Hawk and his traveling companions inside.

Black Hawk was the first to emerge from the wreckage. He came out of the overturned coach with fire in his eyes, and for a time it looked as though the mission to establish permanent peace with the Indians in the Northwest had been smashed.

He delivered a tirade which onlookers later said must have been a masterly oratorical effort. He spoke at length and very feelingly, with all the dignity of an outraged Indian chief. Unfortunately, in the excitement no one made a record of what he said, and what probably was an epic of Indian oratory was lost to succeeding generations,

The gist of it was, according to his listeners, that he did not care for this phase of the white man's civilization, and that he had been convinced from the start that the stage coach was a white man's death trap. He said just what a white man probably would have said under similar circumstances.

The angry Sac chief did not cool off until several hours later, when he was persuaded to partake of a sumptuous White man's neal a the National house. The next morning Black Hawk appeared to have forgotten the events of .he afternoon before, and meekly entered another coach to resume the trip to Washington.

Apart from any reputation Milan may have gained as an index to industrial unrest, it is a leader among Italian cities in other respects, Indeed, the Milanese insist that their city, their "capitale morale," is the very heart and head of Italy's modern life and activity-"first in industry, first in municipal progress, first in political importance. Even at the beginning of the Eleventh century Milan was of some importance industrially, its handicraft workers turning out textiles, arms and jewelry. The innumerable wars to which Italian cities and provinces were subjected slowed up its industrial development even after the introduction of the factory system, but since the unification of Italy in 1870, and the relative political calm that has followed, the growth of the city's industries has been marvelous. Textiles, locomotives and electrical apparatus are the leading products and a long list of metal manufactures could be added. The industrial plants of Milan have Lugano is quite a different lake from Como, although so near-but a single rocky ridge, an outlying spur of the great Alpine chain between. It is wonderfully picturesque, with its steep, wooded sides and quaipt towns, pink and yellow and mauve, staged upward from the lake like galleries at a theater. If there are fewer luxurious villas, fewer over-rich gardens, there is more of romantic naturalness. On Como one senses luxuriously a civilization two thousand years old; on Lugano one feels ageless nature's unmatched loveliness. If largely Swiss politically, in appearance Lugano is wholly Italian-the half-wild Italian which recalls the ancient freedom-loving Celt, not that which reminds us of polished Rome. Lake Maggiore is almost as well known, as much traveled, as Como. Its individuality is just as strong as that of the other two; to see one is by no means to see all. One must travel up and down it by boat in the morning light and in the sunset glow. One must make excursions along its shores and to the Borromean islands, which float so picturesquely on-its surfaces. One must climb the rocky hillsides about it and get new and surprising views of its size and splendor. One must see it in storm as well as sunshine; see the white snow to northward sharply defined against the blue sky; look in vain for peaks that are hidden in swirling masses of mist and cloud.

Los Angeles Boy Needed Help

Leroy Young, 1116 Georgia St., Los Angeles, is a "regular cellow," active in ports, and at the op in his classes at chool. To look at im now, you'd think e never had a day's sickness but his mother says: "When Leroy was just a little fellow; we found his stomach and bowels were weak. He kept suffering from constipation. Nothing he ate agreed with him. He was fretful, feverish and puny.

"When we started giving him California Fig Syrup his condition improved quickly. His constipation and biliousness stopped and he has had no more trouble of that kind. I have since used California Fig Syrup with him for colds and upset spells. He likes it because it tastes so good and I like it because it helps him so wonderfully !'

California Fig Syrup has been the trusted standby of mothers for over 50 years. Leading physicians recommend it. It is purely vegetable and works with Nature to regulate, tone and strengthen the stomach and bowels of children so they get full nourishment from their food and waste is eliminated in a normal way. Four million bottles used a year shows how mothers depend on it. Always look for the word "California" on the carton to be sure of getting the genuine.

Is the Least Known Bit of Washington .- A hurricane in British Honduras swept into the front pages of the country the name of Belize, capital of this little-known bit of British America.

"Belize, the city, with a population of only 13,000 people, would be a small town elsewhere, but it is the metropolis of England's section of the dense tropical jungles in the southeast sector of the Yucatan peninsula," says a bulletin from the National Geographic society.

"Although Belize is unmistakably British in appearance, the houses of two and three stories that line the main residential streets being of accepted British architecture, many of the British leaders of the colony complain that it is becoming 'American-Newspapers and magazines ized.' from the United States far outnumber those from England, while the official money unit of British Honduras is the American gold dollar.

"The British flavor of the country is as much diluted by tropical influences, however, as by American. Coalblack policemen are clothed much like the London 'Bobby,' and speak with the same broad, Cockney accent.

"The mahogany industry, justly commemorated on the flag of British Honduras by the tools of the trade, lured the earliest settlers to Belize in the Eighteenth century, put money in their pockets, furnished something for them and their backer, Great Britain, to fight the Spaniards; and today is responsible for the main industry of Belize and British Honduras-lumbering.

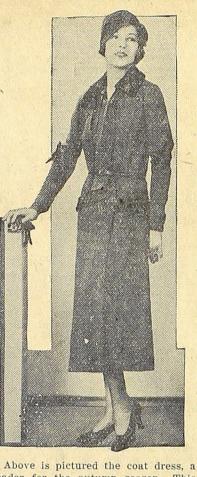

"The people of Belize even tell solemnly how the lowest portions of their city, once a seemingly bottomless swamp, have been filled in and made usable by the millions of mahogany chips hacked there from logs which must be roughly squared before they are ready for market. Assisting the chips in the work of stabilization -they relate with equal solemnity- in black Persian lamb.

country, farthest south, were not molested at first.

"When the settlers were seen to be making a good things of their mahogany trade, the Spanish changed their policy and began harassing them. A series of wars and treaties between Spain and England followed. In 1798 the Spaniards, attacking Belize, were driven off by British settlers with cannon mounted on rafts and flatboats. In 1862 the 'settlement' was declared a 'colony,' and was given a lieutenant governor acting under the governor of Jamaica. In 1884 it became a separate crown colony. "In addition to mahogany and logwood Belize carries on an active trade with the United States in bananas, coconuts, citrus fruits, cacao, and thousands of bales of chicle, the latter the raw material of chewing gum. Great Britain and Canada divide the small part of the colony's trade that does not go to the United States. In addition British Honduras is one of America's best Central American customers, buying nearly $2,000,000 worth of our products in 1929.

45,000,000 Visit Parks

The state parks of the country, now numbering more than 300, were by no means idle acres last year. Figures gathered by the National Park service indicate that there were 45,000,000 visitors in the reservations last year, making an average of 15,000 per park. The parks, incidentally, averaged 1,000 acres each although naturally many were much larger and many much smaller.

true of his children could be said of the average young person going to college in the representative institutions of the country.

Briefly, he complained that to send his three children to the institutions which they were attending was costing him, conservatively speaking, $4,500 a year; and this amount is exclusive of vacations and a number of additional expenses.

I am quite sure that the average cost of an education in the representative colleges of the country is far less than this man alleges, and should be. Evans has just finished his junior year in the college with which I am associated. He graduated four years ago from a small high school in a country town. He is the oldest of three children, his father having a clerical position which does not pay him as much a year as the complaining father mentioned above spent annually on each of his children. Evans was out of high school a year working and saying his money before trying to enter college. He got a job at college, which enabled him to earn his board; and during his short vacations at Christmas and Easter he earned enough to pay his fees. He has held a good position each summer; he has been economical; he has found a position in college for the last two years which pays him fifty dollars a month. He dresses well because he takes care of his clothes. He has the social life which one finds in a fraternity. He has made scholastic honors every year. He has had a pleasant social life. He has done what other boys do; and he told me not long ago that during his three years in college he had cost his father but two hundred dollars. Not everyone could do what he has done, though scores do; but not everyone spends fifteen hundred dollars. A college education costs about what one wants to make it cost.

THE STORY

By chance James Lee meets

Lucy Gresham, daughter of Sir John Gresham, wealthy ship builder. Lee, unjustly accused of robbing the Gresham firm, was sent to prison. He blames Oliver Ames, Lucy's cousin, and Gresh-am's manager, and seeks revenge. Lee inherits wealth, and, in com-pliance with the will, changes his name from Warrington. He secures an invitation to the girl's birthday party. Lucy is practical-ly engaged to Ames. She meets Lee, who makes love to her. With Gresham's approval, Lucy and Lee are married. Lee stuns the girl by telling her he does not love her, and hates her "whole breed." She hears the story of his wrongs, and his determina-

Mining in New York

New York is not usually considered a mining state, largely because it does not contain any gold or silver, yet its sub-surface deposits yield returns greater than those of many states with popular reputations for their mineral resources, according to a recent publication of the New York State museum. More than thirty substances are mined in the state, including iron, zinc, pyrite, salt, calcium sulphate, stone and clay.

Jocelyn recognized the trick. She had known it so long. Her cousin Peregrine was not a clever liar.

"A likely story! I believe you've been so eternally indiscreet as to fall in love with little Lucy."

The tinge of color that came into his face at that, made her think that she was on the right track.

"Don't you ever think of anything but love, Jossy?" he cried disgustedly. 'Honestly, you make me rather sick.' She laughed. Make him happy, don't you know, and child is feverish or upset; or has caught cold.

His simple prescription will make that bilious, headachy, cross boy or girl comfortable, happy, well in just a few hours. It soon restores the bowels to healthy regularity. It helps "break-up" a cold by keeping the bowels free from all that sickening mucus waste.

You have a famous doctor's word for this laxative. Dr. Caldwell's record of having attended over 3500 births without loss of one mother or baby is believed unique in American medical history. Get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin from your drugstore and have it ready. Then you won't have to worry when any member of your family is headachy, bilious, gassy or constituted. Syrup Pepsin is good for all ages. It sweetens the bowels; increases appetite—makes digestion more complete.

"Now that you have found out the dirty game I am playing, you'll do as Perry is doing, I suppose." "Leave you?" she asked. "No, Jim, I shall not do that." argued. "Then what will you do? Tell your father who I am, and what I am, and just how I am out to smash him?"

She didn't answer immediately. The position, for her, was extremely difficult. She was between her loyalty to her father and her love for this man she had married. Could she stand by and let Jim ruin her father and say nothing? On the other hand, how was she to show him up to her father and probably to the whole world, as the hideous revengeful monster injustice had made of him, and which she knew. with every fiber of her, was utterly untrue to his inmost nature? It was a really appalling position.

"No," she said slowly, "I don't think I shall say anything about it to father. . . .

"Are you going to stand by and let me smash him, then?" he challenged. "And I don't think I shall do that, either," she replied in the same slow way. He looked at her, frowning; suddenly puzzled. There was something beneath her quiet manner that he didn't understand. "Then what are you going to do?"

he broke out, with irritation.

"I don't know, Jim. I only know that I am not going to give you away to daddy, because, I . . well, because I couldn't. And I don't see how I am to stand by and let you smash him, either. . . . So. . . ." "It's a a h-1 of a predicament, then, isn't it?" he said roughly.

"You wouldn't." "I mean I thought I knew why."

"Romance? Love at first sight?" she suggested scornfully. "Well, yes," he admitted.

"You know, Perry, I have less and less hope of you as time goes on." He laughed; her contempt, so far from hurting him, was a great relief. He felt that he never knew quite where he was with Jocelyn. "I felt sure you were only joking," he said. "I suppose it's all been a

"It's clear that there's some mystery there, isn't it? Jim had some reason for marrying Lucy . . . That's as evident as daylight, isn't it?" "I'd no idea anything had got about," he said, badly troubled.

"Well, what was his reason?" she went on.

"Blest if I altogether know," he replied. She looked at him, her eyes narrowing.

"It wasn't love, was it?" she added "I don't see, now, how it could have been," he answered slowly. She drew a breath. So far, so good. He knew something, then. Could she get his knowledge out of him? She could not. What St. Abb knew of the Linforths' question, he kept to himself with the resolution of an oyster. Still, she had already got a hundred times more out of him than he remotely dreamed of, so she parted with him a little later, feeling not at all dissatisfied with the work she had put in. She still couldn't get at the truth of two things: one was, why exactly Perry had left Lee and the other what was it Perry knew of Lee's reasons for marrying Lucy. Never mind, she'd enough to go on.
