EUGENE F. ABBOTT

Friends and relatives of Eugene F. Abbott were shocked to hear of his sudden death last Saturday after an illness of only four days. His life was spent in unselfish service to his family and friends.

Eugene Farnsworth Abbott was born November 3, 1890, in Wilber, the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Abbott, pioneer residents of Iosco county. Mr. Abbott preceded his son in death in April, 1929. Eugene was taken seriously ill Wednesday night and moved to the Oscoda hospital late Friday, where he passed away Saturday, October 10, at 1:15 a. m. of septicemia. The aid of loving hands and medical skill was of no avail. He was a member of the I. O. O. F.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Alice J. Abbott of Wilber, four sisters and four brothers, Walter of Bapaune, Saskatchewan, Mrs. Beth Simmons of Wilber, Mrs. Edna Bommer of Tawas City, Hollis of Flint, Mrs. Amy Buck of Hale, Mrs. Jennie Harms of East Tawas, Harvey and Alton at home.

The funeral was held Monday afternoon from the Wilber Methodist church, Rev. W. L. Jones officiating, with burial in the family lot of the Wilber cemetery. The I. O. O. F. attended in a body and conducted services at the grave.

Out of town relatives who attended the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. Hollis Abbott of Flint, Mrs. May Westervelt of Reno, Mr. and Mrs. Oren Misener of Alpena, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Buck of Hale.

His work well done, His race well won, His crown well won, He is at rest.

BRILLIANT TALENT MAKES "MY SIN" A GREAT PICTURE

"My Sin," one of the season's most interesting pictures, will be presented at the State Theatre on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

This thrilling story of the regeneration of a man and woman, one crushed by bitter circumstances, the other demoralized by wild living, has Tallulah Bankhead and Fredric March in its leading roles.

The story is filled with dramatic incidents. Its vivid scenes reach from the tropical atmosphere of Panama to the noise and hurry of sophisticated New York. A master hand has taken the theme and woven vigorous action into a thrilling drama that intrigues the imagination and grips the emotions. Paramount, realizing the rich possibilities of the story for pictured dramatics, selected the most gifted artists available in making up the cast.

"My Sin" is a great picture, replete with incident, vivid and colorful in its scenes and thrilling in its dramatic action.

MRS. JOHN DURANT

Mrs. John Durant, age 71 years, passed away at her home on the Meadow road last Friday, October 9, after a week's illness.

Mrs. Durant was born in Ontario, Canada. She came to Michigan with her husband and children about 31 years ago, settling in Grant township where they have since made their home. She was a loving wife and a devoted mother, and will be missed by all who knew her.

She leaves to mourn her loss, her husband, three daughters, Mrs. Mabel Decker of West Branch, Mrs. Walter Pringle of McIvor, Mrs. Peter Clark of Owosso, two sons, Elmer Durant of East Tawas and Henry Durant of Grant township, also 14 grandchildren and three great grandchildren besides many other relatives and friends.

HOLD CHILD HEALTH MEET AT OSCODA

The county Child Health Committee held the October meeting at Oscoda on Tuesday afternoon, the Oscoda group being responsible for the program and serving light refreshments.

Prof. Jotter of the Forestry Department of the state university, spoke of interesting our children in outdoor recreation, in conserving our forests and in making our school grounds more attractive with trees and shrubs. He also stated some of these plants could be secured from the forestry department for the cost of transportation for use in school grounds.

Dr. T. H. Johnston, director of the health unit, spoke on causes of infant mortality, listing the chief causes as follows: (1) Pre-natal care; (2) Lung conditions; (3) Contagious diseases. He also stated that a large percentage of these deaths are preventable by more prenatal care of the mother and better knowledge of child care on the part of the mother, and that statistics thus far for 1931 in Iosco county are showing quite a high infant death rate.

Mr. Nurnberger, superintendent of the Oscoda school, outlined the health education program of their school, showing how they were stressing formation of health habits rather than mere teaching of physiology.

Miss Worden presented suggestions given by The Better Homes Association for the local groups to consider as a possible project.

Mrs. Cowgill suggested that the local groups organize as soon as possible to work on projects most needed in the local communities.

A demonstration of a music class in the primary grades was given by the music supervisor in the Oscoda school.

COUNTY TEACHERS' MEETING

There will be a county teachers' meeting Saturday, October 17, at the Tawas City high school at 9:00 a. m. Eastern time. Professor Jotter from the forestry department and Dr. Johnston from our health unit, will address the group at that time.

U. S. GYPSUM CO. INSTALLS TEST MILL

During the past two years experiments have been conducted at Alabaster relative to the practicability of producing terra alba and other white plaster products from the gypsum quarries there. In this particular, the product is satisfactory, a wide market and if local rock will produce a product of the proper standard, its manufacture will be of considerable importance to the company.

Tests on a much larger scale are planned and a 40 ton mill is now under construction. When the mill is completed, eight or ten extra men will be required for its operation, which is a worth while thing in this time of unemployment.

J. H. East, superintendent of the United States Gypsum company plant, said that he was quite hopeful of the venture becoming a success as all preliminary tests had indicated that the rock came up to the necessary standard of purity. He said that if the product is satisfactory, large capacity mills would undoubtedly be installed which would mean a greatly increased payroll, perhaps greater than at any previous time in the history of the plant. He said that while the present payroll was comparatively low, it amounted to about $15,000.00 per month at the local plant. Mr. East stated that the manufacture of the contemplated white plaster products would require a large amount of hand labor. To secure the necessary high standard the rock must be hand picked and its manufacture will require considerable more supervision than the ordinary gypsum products.

The people of the county are awaiting with interest the outcome of the tests, which will be made with the newly constructed mill.

A. I. A. Will Hold October Meeting At East Tawas

The Alcona-Iosco-Arenac Association, C. E. S., will hold their October meeting in the Community Building in East Tawas on Thursday afternoon and evening, October 29th, with the chapter of East Tawas as the hostess chapter.

Mrs. Selma A. Brown of Birmingham, the Associate Grand Matron of the Michigan Grand Chapter, will be the guest of honor and will conduct the school of instruction in the evening.

The Community Building is amply able to take care of every member of every chapter in the three counties and it is hoped that the capacity of the building will be taxed both in the afternoon and evening.

The association president, Miss Bess Mackenzie of Omer, is planning a fine entertainment for the afternoon.

Composing the double bill at the State Theatre for next Wednesday and Thursday are "Alexander Hamilton" and "The Woman Between."

One of America's most colorful characters—Alexander Hamilton—hero and statesman, husband and lover—is portrayed by George Arliss in a brilliant characterization in "Alexander Hamilton." The play deals with the human side of the character of the fiery political leader, and with susceptibility to feminine wiles. The picture marks a greater triumph in the amazingly successful career of Mr. Arliss. It blends his outstanding genius into the most sensational screen success of all time.

"The Woman Between" is a dramatic story of a French man's early American marriage and its bitter consequences. The picture tells the story of a young and beautiful French modiste, played by Lily Damita, who marries a wealthy widower and incurs the bitter, unrelenting hatred of his daughter. The new wife is subjected to evil innuendo, to social ostracism, secret intrigues and heartless campaign of degradation. The cast includes Lester Vail, O. P. Heggie, Miriam Seeger and others.

Charles Farrell, doing the finest work of his career opposite the dainty Titian-haired star—settings that are perfect copies of their British originals—an intensely human and vivid story—a notable supporting cast headed by Beryl Mercer and J. M. Kerrigan—and Henry King's splendid direction—these are additional reasons for the popularity of this unique screen offering.

"Merely Mary Ann," adapted from Israel Zangwill's play by Jules Furthman, is arousing much enthusiasm for its exceptional entertainment qualities.

Stadium Enlarged for the Olympic Games

Here is the first aerial picture of the reconstructed Olympic stadium at Los Angeles, where the athletic events of the Olympic games of 1932 will be held. The changes have raised the reserved seating capacity from 80,000 to 105,000 by adding a complete new rim section to the gigantic bowl. The new wings added to the peristyle, in front of which will be the Presidential box and loges of visiting foreign dignitaries, are also shown in the picture, with the tunnel through which the opening pageant of athletes will enter shown in the left rear of the field.

Gold Mine Fable Rudely Shattered

Many Lives Lost in Hunt for "Lost Dutchman"

Phoenix, Ariz.—Iconoclasts of Arizona's arid lands have directed their talent against one of the state's choice legends—that of the "Lost Dutchman" gold mine of Superstition mountain. Arizonans have believed generally for more than fifty years that the rugged hills of Superstition contained a mine of fabulous value which was found and lost years ago by a Dutchman.

Adding interest to the story is an Indian legend of wrathful Apache gods, who got those entering the deep and twisting canyons of the mysterious range of central Arizona.

Iconoclastic prospectors, having searched long and hard this summer for a lost amateur prospector, who sought to find the mine, now insist there isn't and never was a "Lost Dutchman" gold mine.

According to the most popular version of the "Lost Dutchman" story, a Dutch prospector would come from the hills, back in the pioneer days, with gold-laden bags.

"Plenty more where this came from," the Dutchman would say as he tossed a bag of dust on the bar. It was presumed he referred to a mine. He always had gold, but no one knew where it came from.

Now the doubters are insisting that half of the world's gold seekers would toss their last bag of dust on a bar with the same optimistic remark; that the statement proved nothing.

Came a day when the Dutchman ventured again into the hills, which Apaches say men should not enter, and disappeared forever. That launched the first "Lost Dutchman" mine hunt and it has continued at well-spaced intervals ever since. At least a dozen lives have been lost in seeking the mythical mine.

The last victim was A. Ruth, sixty-five-year-old government employee, of Washington, D. C. From somewhere —probably a confidence man—he had obtained a map of the mine's alleged location and in it he had faith, although possessed of scant prospecting ability.

Into the hills Ruth ventured, and from them, in keeping with Apache tradition, he never returned.

A reward offered by the man's family stimulated search. The best of mountain men led the hunt. Claws they found, but no definite trace of Ruth's body. Apache gods and the "Lost Dutchman" had claimed another victim.

Despite the minute search, no sign of a gold mine was found. Airplanes flew over the ranges and pictures were taken, but nothing was uncovered to indicate that a mine had ever been worked and abandoned.

Italian Priest Learns to Fix Leaning Towers

Genoa.—Don Piccardo, Italian priest, has developed a side line in which he has no rivals. In his spare moments he is a church tower and belfry straightener. He has just finished bringing the belfries of the parish churches of Monerago and Santo Stefano d'Aveto back into line.

Don Piccardo, assisted by two or three workmen, digs a trench around the base of the tower to be straightened after first securing the top with steel stays or ropes. He drives a number of steel wedges into the sides of the trench and covers them with sand. The priest and his men then hammer the structure back into position.

Convict Gets $100,000 for Unpickable Lock

San Quentin Prison, Calif.—Harold Marks, robbery convict, who invented an unpickable lock, learned recently that his ingenuity has won him $100,000.

Marks applied for a patent on the invention, and through a patent attorney was told that an eastern lock firm had placed $100,000 in escrow for him, pending patent grants.

"I'm going to bring my mother and sister to California," Marks said, "and when my five-year stretch is done I am going into business for myself. Maybe I'll write a book on 'How to Get Rich in Prison.'"

American Trains Dogs for European Blind

Tennessee Woman Provides Guides for Sightless.

Paris, France.—A clever and philanthropic American woman from Tennessee, Mrs. Dorothy Harrison Eustis, has made it possible for many blind men and women of Paris to develop an independence they never have known before, and she does it with dogs. At her home in Vevey, Switzerland, Mrs. Eustis has established an organization called the "L'Œil qui Voit," or the "Seeing Eye," where she trains German shepherd dogs as guides for the blind. She says she conceived this idea after visiting Potsdam, where a similar enterprise has been successful.

Special trainers teach the dogs to be the "eyes" of the blind, and a number of blind people are received into her home where they are kept until they are accustomed to the dog. Assisting Mrs. Eustis are two fel-

Whistle Tells These Shoppers Day's Weather

Columbia, Mo.—One long blast from the whistle of the city water and light plant, and shoppers don their raincoat and sally forth confident of fair weather.

Two long and three short blasts, and they either defer the trip or take along the umbrella and fur coat. Another signal, and it may be the palm leaf fan, or the whipcord duster.

George Reeder, United States meteorologist, arranged with the plant to broadcast his weather forecasts and generally spread the code. Now Columbia knows its weather prospects long before they are in print.

low countrymen, Miss Edith Doudge and E. S. Humphrey, whose efforts are concentrated on bringing help and relief for the blind throughout the country, for requests come to them from all parts of the world.

Only two or three dogs are trained at a time, and very close and concentrated attention is given to them until they become proficient in their task. By certain movements the dog is taught to make, he tells his sightless partner when to step up or down, from a curbing and when it is safe to cross a street.

Mrs. Eustis says that she does not allow the animals to be punished so that they have the slightest fear of their trainers.

Robin's Nest Found on Busy Locomotive

Augusta, N. J.—Employees of the Lehigh & New England railroad, which operates on rails with gasoline locomotives between Augusta and Goshen, N. Y., were startled recently to find a robin's nest on the air brake compressor of one of the engines. This engine travels 90 to 100 miles a day.

How long the nest had been there nobody knew, but there were two small, healthy young robins in it. The engineer said he had frequently noticed a big robin fly to the engine with something in its mouth, and he hazarded the guess that the mother keeps her brood fed en route.

The period influence is pronounced in this empire gown of ruby velvet and ermine. The straight gathered skirt is interesting.

Mother's Cook Book

How many a man has dated a new era in his life from the reading of a book. The book exists for its purchase which will explain our miracles and reveal new ones. The at present unutterable things we may find somewhere uttered. These questions which disturb and puzzle and confound us, have in their turn occurred to all wise men; not one has been omitted; and each has answered them, according to his ability, by his words and his life.—Henry Thoreau.

QUICK DESSERT

WHEN nothing seems available for a quick dessert, are crumbled cookies or bits of cake, adding nuts and a few finely cut dates. Serve with Caramel Nut Sauce.

Melt four tablespoonfuls of butter in a saucepan, and one and one-fourth cupful of brown sugar and two-thirds of a cupful of corn sirup, boil to a very soft ball stage or to 230 degrees F. Add three-fourths of a cupful of evaporated milk and one-half cupful of pecan meats. The nuts may be omitted when they are used in the pudding itself.

Cookies for picnics should be of the durable variety, which packs well. Bake them any time and pack in a box that may be carried right along to the picnic. These are a kind that will be liked:

Orange Bread.

Mix and sift three cupfuls of flour, six teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful of salt, then add one egg beaten, one and one-half cupfuls of milk, three-fourths cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of candied orange peel chopped fine, with the juice and thin rind of an orange. Chop the rind.

Lemon Sirup.

Add the juice of six lemons to the grated rind of one, four cupfuls of sugar and two cupfuls of water. Boil together for ten minutes, cool bottle and place in the ice chest. When serving use one to three tablespoonfuls of the sirup with chilled ice and cold water. This is ever ready lemonade.

Energy Salad.

Arrange three leaves of lettuce on a salad plate, add three dates, one tablespoonful of raisins, three tablespoonfuls of cottage cheese, three almonds and three pecans with one slice of pineapple. With bread and butter or hard crackers, this makes a good luncheon with any fruit juice for a drink except grape fruit juice.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

PETER RABBIT THINKS THINGS OVER

PETER RABBIT sat looking over his shoulder mournfully. He was looking at that funny little tail of his, which, since Old Man Coyote had pulled a tuft of hair out of the middle of it, looked funnier than ever. You know that tall always has worried Peter. If Peter ever is envious it is when he sees some one with a beautiful tail. It was bad enough to have nothing but a little white bunch for a tail, and now to have that torn and ragged—oh dear! Peter felt so badly that he almost forgot to be thankful that it was only his tail and not he himself that Old Man Coyote had got hold of.

But Peter isn't the kind to worry for very long over things that cannot be helped. "The hair will grow out again and then my tail such as it is, will be as good as ever. Besides, when I am sitting on it no one can see it," thought he.

So he stopped worrying about his tail and began to think over the warning Old Man Coyote had given him.

"He says I've got to get him a fat goose to make up for the one I cheated him out of by waking Honker and his followers over there in the pond of Paddy the Beaver or else I never will get back to the dear Old Brier Patch," thought Peter. "He knows very well that I couldn't get him a fat goose if I would and that I wouldn't if I could. It's just his way of telling me that he is bound to get even with me and that he's made up his mind to catch me. Probably he's hiding somewhere along the way to the dear Old Brier Patch this very minute.

"Now, if it were Reddy Fox, I wouldn't mind so much. But Old Man Coyote is so very smart and clever that I'll have to use all my wits to keep out of his way. I could fool Reddy, but I'm not so sure about Old Man Coyote. He knows I can't stay here forever. There isn't enough to eat in this old bramble-tangle. And he knows, too, that I will want to get back to Mrs. Peter. She'll be worried most to death. Peter, you've certainly got yourself into a peck of trouble this night. It won't be safe for you to poke your nose outside of this bramble-tangle tonight, that's sure. But you're glad you saved those geese even if it did get you into a heap of trouble. Now you've got to think of some way to get out of it.

So Peter made himself as comfortable as possible and settled down to do some hard thinking. The little stars looked down to him and winked and twinkled, which was their way of trying to tell him to keep his courage up. And so the night passed. The little stars winked themselves out and disappeared. The Black Shadows red and deepened deeper and deeper into the Green Forest until at last the first Jolly Little Sunbeam came stealing along and crept into the old bramble-tangle and kissed Peter on the nose. Day had come and still he had thought of no plan to get safely back to the dear Old Brier Patch. It was time he was there now and little Mrs. Peter would begin to worry.

What Do We Care?

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WHAT do you care if skies are gray? Even the best ones get that way. What do you care if gold takes wings? Even the rich man's does such things. What do you care if plans go wrong? Maybe you thought so all along. What do you care (and you do, no doubt), What is all of the care about? What do you care the most of all? It isn't winter, it can't be fall. What do you care in your heart of hearts? It can't be money, when that departs. What do you care when you care a lot? Not if you have your way or not. What do you care, and I know you do, Just as long as I care for you?

What do you care? For I believe Just as much, though the rest deceive. What do you care? Not much endures, But whatever I have is yours. What do you care? You care for me, And I for you, as it's plain to see. So it's all right here, and it's all right there, So whatever happens, what do we care? (© 1931, Douglas Malloch)—WNU Service.

Elaborate Fad of a Wealthy Western Man

PROBABLY the most complete miniature village in the United States, this tiny settlement near Denver is a source of much pleasure to its owner and builder, George Turner, millionaire business man of Denver. Several years' time and a large amount of money were spent in bringing the Lilliputian village to completion. It includes beautiful little lakes spanned by bridges, a complete municipal lighting system, miniature residences, store buildings, barber shop, garages, a railroad station, and most of the other establishments to be found in a flourishing town. The buildings are all from four to six feet in height.

SOLVES OLD RIDDLE

Underwood & Underwood

One of the riddles which has puzzled modern archeologists has been solved by Prof. Martin Sprengling of the University of Chicago, who has succeeded in deciphering the Sinai inscription, an ancient form of the alphabet. His achievement traced the alphabet to its source and proves that it is of Semitic origin and not Phoenician as scholars have thought. A Bedouin mine foreman, working for the Egyptians, invented the rudimentary alphabet in the half century between 1850-1900 B. C., according to the theory developed by Professor Sprengling.

STAGE COACH TALES

By E. C. TAYLOR

Zachary Taylor Skids

PRESIDENT ZACHARY TAYLOR, "Old Zach," who had led the American army that chased Santa Anna through northern Mexico in the war with Mexico, ignored the dangers of travel by stage coach over the old National pike while he reveled in the beauties of the scenery.

With a party of statesmen, politicians and office-seekers, President Taylor rode over the road in 1849, between Cumberland and the Ohio river.

The party rode in many specially chartered coaches. The identity of their drivers has never been clearly established, but they were the pick of the drivers then operating on the road west of Cumberland, and probably included such famous reinsmen as Henry Farwell, Archie McNeil and Alfred Wolf.

The Presidential party was under the marshaling of Thomas Shriver of Cumberland, that ardent Whig. Included in the party was Colonel Bullet, famous editor of New Orleans, who was the "Colonel House" of the Taylor administration.

The road was a glare of ice; everything above ground was heavily coated with sleet that had been falling for hours before President Taylor and his party left Cumberland.

To a southerner like President Taylor, who had never seen the like, it was a phenomenon.

Going down a spur of the road from Meadow mountain, the Presidential coach, along with all the others, danced and waltzed on the polished road, first to one side and then to the other, every moment threatening to overturn. But it remained upright under the capable handling of the driver.

Shriver was in one of the rear coaches, and was greatly in fear for the safety of the President. As the coaches careened down each hill and mountain his bare head could be seen protruding through the window of his coach to discover if the President's coach was still upon its wheels.

The iron-gray head of Zachary Taylor with almost the same frequency could be seen outside the window of the Presidential coach. But Zachary Taylor was not trying to see after anybody's safety. He was enjoying what seemed to him an Arctic panorama.

After the party had skidded and lurched along many hills and down many slopes, and everything was safe, they finally reached the Narrows, two miles west of Cumberland, at twilight.

At the Narrows is one of the most sublime views along the Atlantic coast. There Zachary Taylor assumed command and ordered a halt. He got out in the snow and sleet and looked and looked at the giddy heights on both sides of Wills creek, every twig of vegetation and every inch of ground covered with glistening ice.

He had beheld nothing like it in his life before, not even in the beautiful mountains of northern Mexico when he was on the trail of the elusive Santa Anna.

It was more than an hour before the President would permit Shriver and the rest of the frightened party to proceed on their journey.

It was known along the road that the President and his retinue of dignitaries were making the trip, and great alarm was felt when they failed to reach Cumberland at the time they were due. Every precaution had been taken, of course, to insure the President's safety, but the people of Cumberland stood about awaiting "Old Zach" with many misgivings.

When President Taylor and his party finally pulled into Cumberland they were tendered a huge reception and the unperturbed general and his shaken companies dined, rested, and set out the next morning to continue their journey to Washington.

President Taylor was only one of the nation's leaders who traveled over the famous old pike before the railroads had pushed across the Alleghenies.

Jackson, Van Buren, Monroe, Harrison, Polk and Tyler were other chief executives who rode the stage coaches over the old National road.

Others were Henry Clay, champion of the road in congress, and a great favorite with all the stage coach drivers Benton and Cass, Lafayette, the Mexican general, Santa Anna, the Indian chief Black Hawk, John Quincy Adams, P. T. Barnum, and Jenny Lind, who returned from her first tour of the West by stage coaches from the Ohio river to the east.

China's Bootleg Calendar

China's law forbidding the printing of calendars according to the old lunar system has failed to prevent the continued use of that system or the celebration of the Chinese New Year as it has been observed for thousands of years. Chinese families buy calendars printed according to the Gregorian reckoning and then write in the corresponding lunar dates. As before, they have marked the advent of the new year by abstaining from work, visiting friends, paying debts and setting off firecrackers.

Forgotten HEROES

By

ELMO SCOTT WATSON

"The Salt Water Lexington"

EVERY American knows the story of what took place at Lexington, Mass., on April 19, 1775, where "the British regulars fired and fled." But how many of them know the story of "the salt water Lexington?"

On June 17, 1772, the armed British schooner Gaspe, which was patrolling the coast of Rhode Island to enforce the trade and navigation acts, so hateful to the American colonists, attempted to stop the Providence packet, Hannah, commanded by Captain Linzee, and chased the colonial vessel into her home port where the British man-of-war went aground on a sandbar. Lieut. William Duddingstone, commander of the Gaspe, had made himself very offensive in his attitude toward the coasting vessels. So when Linzee brought the news of his plight to Providence the people there resolved to make the most of their chance.

That evening 64 picked men, all disguised as Indians, set out in eight long boats under the leadership of Abraham Whipple, and arrived in sight of the stranded Gaspe about two o'clock in the morning. There were few firearms in the boats but every man was well supplied with round paving stones for weapons and when a British sentinel challenged them, their reply was a hail of stones which sent him tumbling hastily below deck.

As the boats closed in on the ship, their crews swarmed over the side and quickly beat down any resistance offered by the sailors of the Gaspe. Then hastily setting fire to the ship, they returned to their boats with their captives and pulled away, but stayed within sight until dawn when the schooner blew up. Then they rowed back to Providence with the tide, released their prisoners and scattered to their homes. The British authorities were furious when they heard of this affair and offered a reward of a thousand pounds for the leader of the expedition and five hundred pounds and a free pardon for any member of it who would turn informers.

But although a "commission of inquiry" was busy for six months investigating the affair, not a single arrest of the "Indians" who had committed this outrage was ever made. And within the next year another party of "Indians" had swooped down upon the tea-ship, Dartmouth, in Boston harbor and there held a "tea party" which has been forever since famous.

Two years later the Continental congress established the first American navy and one of the four captains appointed to command a ship was Capt. Abraham Whipple, leader of the paving stone fighters at the "salt water Lexington."

The Earliest Revolutionist

ALL honor to the heroes of '76, who brought about the Revolution, fought in it and won American freedom, but don't forget the earlier revolutionists who paved the way for them. One of them died on the gallows and his death there, in the words of a recent historian, "was the primordial germ of the American revolt. It antedated Lexington by 85 years, but was in a way, remote but certain, its forerunner."

Jacob Leisler was his name. He was a Dutchman who lived in New York in the last part of the Seventeenth century. When James II was deposed as king of England, New York which had been ruled by an absentee ruler, the Duke of York, brother of the king, was without a governor. So the burghers met and appointed a committee of safety (since war with France was in the offing) and chose Leisler to be captain of the fort. Later it authorized him to act as governor until a new one should arrive and although he filled the office well and was recognized as governor by the other colonies, the aristocrats of New York (the English officers and their circle) were bitterly hostile to him.

In 1689 the new English monarch, King William, sent a notoriously drunken and incompetent person, named Slaughter, to be governor and a lieutenant governor named Ingoldsby, who arrived in New York first. The aristocrats immediately lined Ingoldsby up with them and he demanded that Leisler hand over to him possession of the fort. Leisler, doubting his authority, refused.

The result was that he was arrested for high treason, as was Jacob Millborne, his son-in-law and secretary. They were tried before a court which was prejudiced against them and sentenced to be hanged. Slaughter hesitated to sign the death warrant but the leaders of the aristocratic party got him drunk and while he was in that condition he signed the papers without knowing what they were. So Leisler and Millborne went to the scaffold, around which gathered the common people, weeping and crying aloud when they saw their champions going to their deaths. From that day grew a deep resentment against the tyranny of British rulers which was to burn brighter during the long dispute of the next century and which was destined to make ardent patriots of the Dutch burghers of New York city when the fire of Revolution flamed out in 1775. So Jacob Leisler did not die in vain.

Finding New Plants

Monster Fig of Orotava, Half Grown.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

MANY years of whole hearted devotion to the cause of science was recognized recently when Allison V. Armour, patron of eight expeditions to find and bring into America from foreign countries useful and ornamental plants to enrich our farms and gardens, was awarded the Frank N. Meyer medal "for distinguished services in plant introduction."

The presentation was made by Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic society, at Beinn Bhreagh, home of the late Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, now the summer residence of Doctor and Mrs. Grosvenor.

Mr. Armour's yacht Utowana sailed under the auspices of the United States Department of Agriculture and carried on each expedition a staff of scientific experts chosen by the secretary of agriculture, the president of Harvard university, and the director of Kew gardens, England.

As described in "Exploring for Plants," Dr. David Fairchild's fascinating account of three of these expeditions, the yacht Utowana was especially equipped with laboratory, library and greenhouse arrangements, and everything possible was done to facilitate the collecting, study and transportation of living plants in conformity with the strict regulations of the federal plant quarantine and control board.

The work of the expeditions under Mr. Armour's patronage was not confined to the discovery of hitherto unknown plants in the depths of tropical jungles or on remote islands of the sea. More often the plant explorers brought back known plants in other lands which gave evidence of useful lives in our own country.

One of the most interesting and unusual of the expeditions headed by Dr. Fairchild was that to the Canary islands, a few years ago, when a visit was paid to one of the strangest botanical gardens in the world.

The Garden of Orotava.

There is something a bit bewildering to most people in a collection of plants such as one finds in any European botanical garden. The Latin labels and the crowded specimens are too confusing. At Orotava, Don Juan Bolinaga's Jardin de Aclimatacion, as he calls his botanic garden, is no exception. It dates back to a time when the illusion prevailed in scientific circles that even the frost-tender plants of the Tropics might be acclimated so that they would grow in the chilly gardens of Europe if only they were brought into them gradually enough. This garden was to have been an important link in the chain of gardens reaching from the Tropics to the Arctic circle; but a century has proved too short a time for the process of acclimatization, as it was understood, to make any impression on the hardness of tropical trees, and this dream has not come true.

To a botanist, however, the Jardin de Aclimatacion of Orotava is full of fascinating plants which have been brought from all parts of the world, for it represents the successes of thousands of introductions which the long lifetimes of such botanists as Wildprent and others of its directors made possible, and although few of the plants introduced have found their way into common use in the island, that is not the fault of the men who have been in charge, but of the public, which does not look forward to changes in the taste of the users of plant materials.

Today the great rock terraces, built with such back-breaking hand labor as an American farmhand would refuse to undertake, are growing the dwarf Chinese banana for European markets at a profit which would surprise even the most successful of the South Florida tomato growers. But what if the taste for the Honduras banana should supplant that for the Chinese species in the minds of the Europeans? The profits of banana raising might vanish and the growers might have to turn to something else.

Huge Roxburgh's Figs.

It is at such turning points as this that human tragedies occur. Then come into their own the gardens of introduced plants, furnishing their knowledge of what other plants will grow and what will not in the climate and soils of the region.

The most amazing tree in the garden at Orotava is Roxburgh's fig (Ficus roxburghii) from the Himalayas. It is not at all a commercial fig, but a wild tree from the tropical forests of Burma. It seems to be very seldom cultivated in botanic gardens anywhere. It is a spreading tree of immense size, and its trunk and large branches are literally covered with enormous figs—figs that are three inches in diameter before fertilization and that swell up to two to four inches afterward.

This fertilization, by the way, is very curious. It is done by running a small stick into the interior of each fruit, a process which appears to irritate the internal flowers in the same way that the fertilizing wasp does in its native habitat.

Every afternoon boys irrigate the garden, not by means of the usual irrigation canals so familiar in California, but with a large fire hose, which delivers a stream of water onto the foliage with such force as to wash off thousands of insects and prevent the dust from gathering on the leaves.

But whenever one thinks of the Canaries the barrancos come to mind. These are great, dry river beds with precipitous sides and terraced plantations wherever terraces could be built. They are short canyons leading from the mountain peaks to the sea; but, unlike those solitary canyons of our Southwest, these are the abodes of men, and there are always to be seen, walking over the zigzag mule paths which enter them, the forms of people.

Stately women with the carriage of grandes dames, straight and graceful, with all kinds of burdens on their heads, wander leisurely over the mule paths, or the sombreros of the men and the miniature forms of their mules give the landscape a friendly appearance.

One never sees a man carrying his burden on his head; the fashion against it seems to be as universal as the fashion against carrying bundles on the streets of London used to be among English gentlemen.

The barrancos are delightful places for the botanist, for in the rocky crevices of their precipitous walls many strange and interesting plant forms can be seen which exist nowhere else in the world. The Aeoniums, for example, which look like green dinner plates thrown up against the walls and stuck there, are striking features of the reign near San Juan de la Rambla.

Dragon's Blood Trees.

The Canaries have long been noted in botanical literature as the home of the dragon's blood trees. The most famous and largest one of these remarkable trees was reported to have been 79 feet in circumference, at the ground and 70 feet high, and its age was estimated as being anywhere from the age of the great Pyramids of Egypt on up to 10,000 years.

Although this specimen was destroyed in the hurricane of 1867, there are descendants still standing near the town of Icod which give a very good idea of these incredibly old trees.

Since they are more nearly related botanically to lilies than to our hardwood trees, the difficulties of estimating their age are very great. They have no annual rings of growth and in appearance bear scarcely the faintest resemblance to an oak, a pine, or a giant eucalyptus. They remind one of the great yuccas of the Mohave desert, although they are taller and more tree-like.

They seem, like the huge, ungainly tortoise of the Galapagos islands, to be left over from antediluvian times, and one can imagine dinosaurs feeding upon their foliage.

Their great branches rise from the trunk as clumsily and haphazardly as do the sawdust-filled legs and arms of the old-fashioned doll; and yet there is a certain staidness about them, too. The Plant Introduction medal was established by the staff of the division of foreign plant introduction of the Department of Agriculture in honor of Frank N. Meyer, agricultural explorer of that office, who after 13 years of exploring in China and Central Asia was drowned in the Yangtze river in 1918.

The letter of presentation is signed by Doctor Fairchild, president of the American Genetic association; O. E. Leighty, secretary, and by E. W. Sheets, J. H. Kempton and G. N. Collins, members of the council.

ONE PER CENT FOOLISHNESS
How Uncle Sam unknowingly plays a joke on citizens who draw their money from banks and deposit it with the federal postal savings system, is pointed out by a Detroit newspaper.

Uncle Sam turns right around at the close of business, and deposits the same money, right back in the same bank from which you withdrew it, or some other local bank. From the bank you were probably drawing at least three per cent. From the postal savings system you draw two per cent. In other words, your loss is one per cent, which, on even a fair deposit, is a pretty steep price to pay for a panicky feeling.

This sort of explodes the oft heard and entirely wrong belief that Uncle Sam rushes the money to the federal treasury at Washington, where, according to popular belief, worms, bugs, burglars and other things can't get it. The point of all this, with Uncle Sam as the joker, is that wise old Uncle Sam is so sure of the local banks with which he does business, that whenever anybody gets fussy and takes their money out of the bank, he puts it right back in again.

Of course, Uncle Sam is careful about the banks that he picks out to put other people's money in. And everybody who puts money in a bank is entitled to be just as careful. To be anything else would be poor business. And then of course, there's that money in the southwest corner of the mattress in Aunt Mabel's bedroom. Nobody gets any interest on that, and a burglar might get the whole works if it doesn't burn up.

When Columbus Died
Christopher Columbus' will and other evidence indicate that he did not die in poverty, and that he was in possession of a considerable amount of wealth at the time of his death at Valladolid, Spain, in 1506. He was very much disappointed, however, that he was neglected by the court, but he was not in destitute circumstances at the time of his death.

Changing Color of Gold
The color of gold can be changed by alloying it with various other metals. The old method was to alloy it with about five times as much silver, but as such articles readily tarnished, a new process was introduced which does away with the use of silver. Certain base metals are added to give the white appearance, the amount of gold and of alloy being the same as in the case of ordinary gold of various carats.

LABOR HEAD URGES SUPPORT OF RED CROSS
"Invariably it is the masses of the people which suffer most when disasters occur," stated William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, recently.
"Because they suffer most and because of their helplessness, the ministrations of the Red Cross organization take on added significance and importance. No doubt many lives among these particular groups are saved through the prompt service which this organization gives."
"Because the American Federation of Labor appreciates this fact, we have supplemented the appeal of the American Red Cross at each Roll Call period for memberships from the great mass of working men and women and their families."
"The continued service of the American Federation of Labor in this most humane and unselfish work will be most cheerfully rendered."
Mr. Green is a member of the Board of Incorporators of the American Red Cross.

LINDBERGH SCHOOL NEWS

Edited by Irene Partlo and Sophia Rouse

As this is our first news for the year we will start from the beginning.

School convened for the first day August 31 with an enrollment of 89, but before the month was gone two of our pupils had left, William Johnson and Alberta Corey.

In the latter part of the month the county nurse and doctor visited our school. Last week Miss Worden, the county school commissioner, was here. She reported our school in fine condition and brought us some magazines, for which we are very grateful. We have had many other visitors. Among them are: Marcella Earl, William Fuest, Geraldine Nunn, Edward Graham, Willis Webster, Eva Smith, John Bowen, Merlin Partlo, Julia Lomason, and Noel Partlo.

Mr. Schuster comes to school every Sunday to take a load of children to Sunday school at Whittemore. The following people attend Sunday school: Sophia, Lilliao and Carolina Rouse, Celi, Edna, George and Sarah Lomason, Sarah, Alfred and Calvin King, Nelson, Clarence, Bessona, Walter and William Provoast, Irene and Burton Partlo, Capitola Craner, and Mavis Ruckle. This is over 50% of our week day school.

The following pupils have had perfect attendance, being neither tardy nor absent for the month of September: Capitola Craner, Raymond Gay, Mabel and Marion Hottis, Ella, George, Sarah and Edna Lomason, Donald Mareck, Burton, Ellis and Erwin Partlo, Albert and Harold Wice, Carolina and Francis Rouse.

Burton Partlo received the most A's for the first month.

Each pupil is required to read one book a month this year and make a book report on same.

We are having much enjoyment from our trapeze, swinging rings, and horizontal bar. The school board is going to put us up some swings and teeter totters soon. They bought us a playground ball and bat.

One of the boys in the sixth grade, Shirley Colvin, has had a hair snake at school since the beginning of the year. It is still alive and doing fine. He keeps it in a cup in his desk and feeds it molasses cookies.

Moths in Fur Collar

There are several methods that can be followed to get moths out of a fur collar. A simple one is to place the fur over a warm radiator or on top of a lighted gas oven with a very low flame. The moths will come to the surface and may be brushed off. Place the garment in the sun for several days.

Used Every Day in Bridge

Our Mr. Ripley reports that "smajs" was the word used by Galileo to hide the secret of his discovery of Saturn.

And, as near as we can recall, a lady bridge player the other night used the same word to hide her discovery that her partner had reneged and that the opposition, instead of going down one, would make the contract.—Arkansas Gazette.

Protecting your home and family 24 hours a day

A telephone in your home is more than a convenience. It is an ever-ready safeguard to protect your home and family in times of emergency.

In case of fire, for instance, a telephone will enable you to summon aid immediately, without having to run to the next corner. Property and lives have been saved frequently because there was a telephone handy to summon aid.

When sudden sickness or accidents occur in the middle of the night, it is important that medical aid be summoned at once. With a telephone in the house, a doctor can be called immediately.

The cost is low—you can have the protection and convenience of a telephone in your home for only a few cents a day. To place an order, or for information, call or visit the Telephone Business Office. Installations will be made promptly.

America's most economical truck is now available in 25 different models priced as low as $440—complete with body

NOTE: The model priced at $440 is the open cab pick-up.

1 1/2-ton 157-inch Stake Truck
(Dual wheels standard)

By actual road performance, week after week, month after month—the six-cylinder Chevrolet has proved its right to be called America's most economical truck. Owners have found that on a ton-mile basis Chevrolet costs less for gas and oil, less for upkeep and less for service than any other truck—regardless of the number of cylinders. And price-comparison will show that this big, sturdy Chevrolet Six is one of the lowest-priced trucks you can buy.

Today, any truck user can apply this economy to his own particular work. The current Chevrolet commercial car line covers practically every delivery and hauling need. Twenty-five different models. Half-ton and 1 1/2-ton pay-load capacities. Three wheelbase lengths. A wide variety of Chevrolet-designed and Chevrolet-built bodies. Just name the type of truck you need—and you will very likely find it in Chevrolet's all-inclusive line.

Each Chevrolet truck has a 50-h.p. six-cylinder engine—25% more powerful than any other engine in a truck priced so low. Maximum load-capacity is assured by unusually large bodies, supported by long rigid frames and long parallel-mounted springs. And Chevrolet truck prices are among the lowest in the commercial car market.

Half-ton 100-inch wheelbase chassis $355 (Disc wheels standard)
1 1/2-ton 131-inch wheelbase chassis $520 (Dual wheels $25 extra)
1 1/2-ton 157-inch wheelbase chassis $590 (Dual wheels standard)

Now is a good time to use Hexite, as the price is much lower than usual, only $1.45 per 100 lbs.

"What's the matter?" asked a friend.

"Oh, my husband is so absent-minded. After breakfast he left a tip on the table, and when I handed him his hat he handed me another tip."

"Well, that's nothing to worry about. That's just force of habit."

"That's just what worries me. When I handed him his coat he kissed me."

Boss: "A man is never older than he feels. Now this morning I feel as fresh as a two-year-old!"

Steno (sweetly): "Horse or egg?"

Once upon a time there was an absent-minded traveling salesman who called his wife on the phone. "Hello, honey," he said, "just arrived in town. Now about a little party?" Latest reports say he'll recover.

Let's see, it's been four or five days now since a flier has flown across one of our pceans.

Reduce the Acid

SICK stomachs, sour stomachs and indigestion usually mean excess acid. The stomach nerves are over-stimulated. Too much acid makes the stomach and intestines sour. Alkali kills acid instantly. The best form is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia, because one harmless dose neutralizes many times its volume in acid. For 50 years the standard with physicians everywhere. Take a spoonful in water and your unhappy condition will probably end in five minutes. Then you will always know what to do. Crude and harmful methods will never appeal to you. Go, prove this for your own sake. It may save a great many disagreeable hours. Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians in correcting excess acids.

There is one thing about it: When the doctor is sick, he knows what it is.

Now You Need Not Fear Coughs

It is always important to get a cough under control as quickly as possible. Too often it may otherwise prove the forerunner of something far more serious. One sure way to banish the fear of coughs and colds is to have in your medicine chest a bottle of B. & M., The Penetrating Germicide. Keep it ready for instant use when anyone in your family develops symptoms of a cold in the chest or a sore throat. Use B. & M. externally, just as you would a mustard plaster. You will find it many times as efficient and it gets quick results. Order from your regular druggist, or send us his name and $1.25 and we will send a full-size bottle postpaid. Valuable booklet free on request. F. E. Rollins Co., 53 Beverly St., Boston, Mass. (Adv.)

Made specially for BABIES and CHILDREN

Physicians tell us that one condition is nearly always present when a child has a digestive upset, a starting cold or other little ailment. Constipation. The first step towards relief is to rid the body of impure wastes. And for this nothing is better than genuine Castoria! Castoria is a pure vegetable preparation made specially for babies and children. This means it is mild and gentle; that it contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics. Yet it always gets results! You never have to coax children to take Castoria. Real Castoria always bears the name:

Most Sensitive Hands in the World

These are the hands of a group of Angora goat hair sorters at Sanford, Maine. The sense of touch in their fingertips can distinguish as many as fifteen different diameters of hairs, in the thousandths of an inch. If the sorter makes a mistake a fine, luxurious and costly piece of velvet may be ruined later in the weaving. A sorter to hold his job must take better care of himself physically than a football player or prize fighter. Ill-health or a sleepless night will disturb the delicate senses sufficiently to cause errors. No women have ever been able to qualify as hair sorters. Oddly enough the 35 men who sit and match hairs all day long are middle-aged or past. Few of them wear glasses, and few mistakes are made.

HAPPY MEMORIES

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

Sarah had never known anything but hard work all her life. Hard work may sometimes be not at all unpleasant and may give one joy and exhilaration in the doing, but Sarah's was not of that sort. Her father and mother had come from Europe when Sarah was a little girl, and had settled in New York. They were without education; they were used to toil, and they had no ambition for their daughter to know or to be more than they, themselves, knew or were.

And so Sarah, when she was old enough, went out to service, and being awkward and unskillful, drifted finally into the work of a scrub woman. But the unexpected does sometimes happen. When Sarah was fifty, perhaps, a relative across the ocean left her a modest legacy which, if properly invested, would have made a living more comfortable for her, and might have provided a little competence for her old age, when scrubbing would not be so easy nor so possible as it now was. "It's good luck for Sarah," her thrifty friends were heard to say. "She can put this money by for a rainy day." But Sarah thought otherwise. During all her fifty years she had had no cessation of toil. "I'm getting old," Sarah said. "I'd like a few happy memories before I die." And so, foolishly maybe and maybe not, it is not for us to say, Sarah quit her job. She got herself ready, and she went off for a holiday as long

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

When preparing fruit salad, sprinkle bananas, peaches, pears and apples with lemon juice and sugar, as soon as they are cut. This helps to prevent discoloration.

Private Property Sign Gets Rid of Rail Ties

Gorham, Maine.—A trolley line was scrapped here and company officials left the railroad ties along the right-of-way where people could cart them away for use as fuel. Days passed and not a tie was touched. Finally the company erected over the wood piles signs reading: "Private property. Do not molest." Next day the ties were gone. Also the signs.

Find Treasure of Last Hindu Ruler

Drain Lake to Recover Ancient Indian Relics.

Calcutta.—A secret underground treasure vault used by the ancestors of the maharajah of Alwar, India, has been rediscovered with the aid of Sig. Mancini, an Italian architect. The utmost secrecy surrounds the finding of the treasure, "lost" for so many years near the artificial lake of Saugor. Jewels and gold found in the vault are said to be worth about $500,000, but they are sacred relics, and the maharajah has not decided whether to ransack the vault or appropriate the treasure. Frequent attempts have been made in the past to discover the jewels and huge sums were spent in searching for them. The maharajah was once told by an astrologer that he would recover the lost fortune, and he destroyed four old palaces and then built new ones in the search.

The ancestors of the maharajah of Alwar, who claims to descend from the mythological King Rama of Ajodhya, had been charged with the preservation of the historic imperial jewels of the last Hindu emperor, Rana Prithviraj, who was defeated in the battle of Panipat in the Sixteenth century.

The famous crown of the Pandava emperors was said to have been found after the vault was opened. To the Hindus the jewels have great mystic value, embodying the ruling principles of kingship among them. The possessor of the jewels, Hindus claim, hold the power to rule India in the future.

During the excavation for a huge irrigation reservoir engineers came upon the ruins of an ancient palace. A copper plate was found containing verses in Sanskrit, which indicated that the treasures of the Hindu emperors were carefully stored in vaults near the "lake in the hills."

Sig. Mancini, who has been engaged to supervise the construction of a new palace for the maharajah on Mount Abu was asked to help in the hunt for the hidden cache. The "lake in

A tunnel under the lake bed led to the vault lying hidden deep in the rocky hills. In the first chamber was found a huge copper vessel.

On being opened, the vessel was found to be full of gold. It was one solid mass, apparently having been melted and poured into the vessel before it was placed in the vault. Tracks on the ground led to the corner in the wall where the second entrance to a second vault was located. There the $500,000,000 in jewels and gold was found.

Time Clock Crowing Governed by Whistle

Kingston, N. C.—A hen owned by William R. Brinkley, master of the local fox hunt club, laid a freak egg. Ridges on one side formed the rough likeness of a clock dial.

The hen was broody. Brinkley allowed her to keep the egg. The egg was hatched and produced a chick. The chick became a cockerel.

A few days ago the young rooster started crowing. Brinkley noted that it crowed at 6 a. m., noon and 6 p. m.—on the dot. He was astounded. It maintained the schedule day after day.

Neighbors were informed. They kept tab on the bird and verified Brinkley's claim that it "kept time." Then Brinkley made a disappointing discovery. The cockerel crowed only when incited by a mill whistle in the neighborhood and the whistle sounded at 6 a. m., noon and 6 p. m.

Difficulties of erecting the huge lighthouse, radio compass station, power house and foghorn station may be imagined with water so scarce. Sea water was found impractical for use in mixing concrete, so it was necessary to bring it from the mainland, land it on the beach and haul it over a rocky cliff to the building site.

Anacapa island, most southerly of the Santa Barbara channel islands, is directly in the path of coastwise steamer traffic, and has been lighted previously with only a small flashing light. Despite this, there have been no serious wrecks on its rocky shore.

Fate evidently plotted the courses of vessels so that they would pile up on San Miguel island, most northerly of the group, or on the opposite shore of the channel, at Point Arguello. Although isolated and uninhabited until the arrival of the construction crew, Anacapa island has for years been a favorite haunt of fishing and pleasure craft.

Constipation may very easily become chronic after forty. And any continued constipation at that time of life may bring attacks of piles and a host of other unpleasant disorders.

Watch your bowels at any age. Guard them with particular care after forty. Whenever they need any help, remember a doctor should know what is best for them. "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin" is a doctor's prescription for the bowels. Tested by 47 years' practice, it has been found thoroughly effective in relieving constipation and its ills for men, women and children of all ages. It has proven perfectly safe even for babies. Made from fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients, it cannot gripe; will not sicken you or waken you; can be used without harm as often as your breath is bad, or when your tongue is coated; whenever a headachy, bilious, gassy condition warns of constipation.

"Lucile is the Happiest Girl"

So many mothers nowadays talk about giving their children fruit juices, as if this were a new discovery. As a matter of fact, for over fifty years, mothers have been accomplishing results far surpassing anything you can secure from home prepared fruit juices, by using pure, wholesome California Fig Syrup, which is prepared under the most exacting laboratory supervision from ripe California Figs, richest of all fruits in laxative and nourishing properties.

It's marvelous to see how bilious, weak, feverish, sallow, constipated, under-nourished children respond to its gentle influence; how their breath clears up, color flames in their cheeks, and they become sturdy, playful, energetic again. A Western mother, Mrs. H. J. Stoll, Valley P. O., Nebraska, says: "My little daughter, Roma Lucile, was constipated from babyhood. I became worried about her and decided to give her some California Fig Syrup. It stopped her constipation quick; and the way it improved her color and made her pick up made me realize how run-down she had been. She is so sturdy and well now, and always in such good humor that neighbors say she's the happiest girl in the West."

Like all good things, California Fig Syrup is imitated, but you can always get the genuine by looking for the name "California" on the carton.

THE STORY

By chance James Lee meets Lucy Gresham, daughter of Sir John Gresham, wealthy ship builder. Lee, unjustly accused of robbing the Gresham firm, was sent to prison. He blames Oliver Ames, Lucy's cousin, and Gresham's manager, and seeks revenge. Lee inherits wealth, and, in compliance with the will, changes his name from Warrington. He secures an invitation to the girl's birthday party. Lucy is practically engaged to Ames. She meets Lee, who makes love to her. With Gresham's approval, Lucy and Lee are married. Lee stuns the girl by telling her he does not love her, and hates her "whole breed." She hears the story of his wrongs, and his determination to be avenged. She believes in his innocence of the crime for which he was convicted. "Linforths," rival of Gresham's, shows a determination to crush his competitor. Lee tells Lucy he is "Linforths," and means to ruin her father.

All this is how it came about that next day, Lucy, sitting alone in her room and very much occupied with her thoughts, was surprised to be rung up by Jocelyn and asked to tea. "Most particularly want to see you, Lucy," she said. "Most particularly. About something that is absolutely vital. It's something you ought to know and you'll be a fool if you don't come."

Lucy found her heart knocking. She had had so much to bear lately that this hint of something still more, gave her a desperate little feeling of fear.

"Very well, I'll come," she said in a subdued voice, and Jocelyn at the other end put down the receiver, saying to herself triumphantly: "I've terrified her, anyway," as if it were a really noteworthy achievement. It was, at least, a little bit true. Lucy was afraid. Ever since she had found out that Jim was Linforth's, her mind had been in a chaos of questions. What ought she to do about it? She couldn't give him away to her father, her whole soul shrank from that. And yet oughtn't she somehow to put Gresham's on guard? If she could warn Oliver in some way, without letting him know Jim's part of it . . . Then there was Jim's confession that he had been in love. That was another question that brought its own train of utter perplexities. Perhaps it was the question that occupied her mind most insistently. When had he loved this unknown girl? Who had she been? What had she been like? And—had he really got over it, or did it make him suffer still? There was hope for any man who could love. Was it through this one tender spot in his nature that his salvation was to be won? But even though he might be ready to take salvation that way, there was herself . . . He was married to her, no matter how meaningless a ceremony their marriage had been.

And now, she thought, as she was getting ready to go to Jocelyn's, now Jocelyn had suggested that there was yet some other angle of her disastrous marriage affairs that was becoming threatening. Still, Jocelyn was such a scaremonger. It might all mean nothing at all.

Jocelyn was looking thin and peaky, and there was a curious restlessness in her manner as she greeted Lucy. At first she talked very quickly about everything under the sun, and with the sort of superficial smartness she affected. Lucy began to wonder whether there really was a "vital" matter, and was half inclined to hurry through tea and go, leaving the whole question at that. But suddenly Jocelyn looked across the little tea table and said:

"You aren't happy with Jim, are you?"
Lucy had been prepared for a good deal, but she hadn't thought of this. "What an extraordinary question!" she managed to say, with well-assumed lightness.

"It wasn't a question really," said Jocelyn sharply. "It was a statement of fact. What was his reason for marrying you?"

But if Jocelyn hoped by the shock-attack method to jar Lucy into unwary admissions, she found that, so far, at least, she hadn't succeeded.

"The best reason I know of, is that he happened to want to." Lucy gave this reason perfectly smoothly, but her heart was beating fast and the tell-tale color was dyeing her cheeks. Jocelyn looked at her steadily.

"I know your marriage is a farce . . . I know it, and I'll tell you how I know it; because Jim loves me . . . Jocelyn got as far as that and stopped to watch for the effect of her words upon Lucy. Lucy drew a breath and for a moment remained quite still; then she said:

"In that case, Jocelyn, farce is scarcely the word to describe my marriage. To Jim, at least, it must be a good deal more like a tragedy." She said it composedly, but for the life of her, couldn't put the lightness into it that she had tried for. Jocelyn laughed.

"Jim simply lived here . . . before he met you," went on Jocelyn. "He spent all his time with me. It was an open secret that he was . . . well, my property. And then, the moment he met you . . ." She broke off.

Lucy couldn't find anything to say. This revelation of Jocelyn's had come too quickly on top of Jim's own. Her mind was a whirl of questions. Remembering back to the evening of her birthday ball, Lucy thought of what Jocelyn had said then; she had wondered at the time whether the strange girl cared for Jim . . . She remembered, too, what Jocelyn had said about knowing what Jim was where women were concerned. Had it been his treatment of herself that had made her speak so bitterly of him? It all fitted terribly well and easily. And Jim . . .? Had Jim really loved this queer girl? And sacrificed himself and her, just for the satisfaction of his spirit of revenge? Was this what Jocelyn meant? Was it what Jim himself had meant?

Jocelyn leaned suddenly nearer, her peaky little face white in its frame of shining dark hair.
"Do you think I'm going to let this stupid marriage of yours keep him from me? Do you think I'm going to let my life be cheated by you? I tell you, I'm not. I'm going to get Jim back. I know he doesn't care two straws for you."

"Get him back?" broke in Lucy. "You are talking rather extravagantly, aren't you, Jocelyn? Have you forgotten that, whether my wedding was a farce or not, he is married to me?"
"Oh, that's all my eye, these days. Legal ceremonies are quite easily—unpicked . . ."

Lucy rose abruptly. If it hadn't seemed to her that Jocelyn's outrageous words held a very big element of fantastic absurdity, she would have been unable to keep her temper. She had some difficulty as it was, but managed to say quietly enough:

"If I could take what you have been saying the least seriously, Jocelyn, I might be rather concerned. As it is, it only seems to me that you have worked yourself up to a very hysterical pitch over nothing. I'm sorry if you are unhappy on Jim's account. But do remember that it's utterly hopeless, and try to . . . pull yourself together a little . . . Showy talk never helps anything . . ."

But Jocelyn, now, was a great deal more sure of her ground. All that she had managed to glean from St. Abb, was confirmed by what Lucy had said; or, rather, by what she had left unsaid. All that Jocelyn did not know was just exactly what was the inner secret of the Lee marriage. But bluff had helped her with Perry, and she relied upon bluff to help her now.

"Showy talk! Showy talk!" she echoed, in a low, trembling voice. "You'll find it's something more than showy talk! What would you say if you knew that half the time when he seems to be so busy with his work, he is really with me? What would you say if you knew that he has told me all about the stupid business of his marriage with you? Told me what a silly mess it is; told me that if he could get rid of you . . ."

"Jocelyn!" Lucy's voice rang clear and sharp through the room, but Jocelyn went on, low-voiced, and stony:

"Yes, and told me that he is only waiting to get rid of you, to come back to me . . . I don't care if he is married to you. He loves me. He's mine. And it's darned hard on us both. You only got him away from me by . . . Well, we both know why he married you, I fancy . . . He admits it was just a madness . . ."

That held Lucy still; still and staring. Here was something new; something that changed the face of the whole situation. Jocelyn knew why Jim had married her. Jim had told her. Jim had been with her . . . Had said that he was only waiting . . . Could this be true . . .? Up to now, Jocelyn had talked in generalities; this was something positive.

Lucy went to her quickly, caught her shoulders, forced her to look up, and said quickly, her voice scarcely more than a whisper:

"Jocelyn, is this true? Jocelyn, think before you answer me . . . I beg of you, think; and, if you never told the truth before, for God's sake, tell it now . . . Has Jim been with you a lot? Oh, I'm not asking from jealousy, or anything of that sort . . . Just tell me, and tell me honestly."

"I have told you."
"But was it true? Did you mean it? Or were you just talking wildly. Tell me, Jocelyn, because it's most desperately important—to both of us."

An almost imperceptible moment of hesitation and then:
"Of course it was true! Would I say such a thing if it weren't true? What would be the good of saying it? If I seemed to talk wildly just now, it was because I'm so ghastly hurt and unhappy. So . . . so overwrought." Her face quivered pitifully; and quite suddenly she slid her thin, wiry arms tight around Lucy, hid her face on her shoulder, and burst into tears; saying brokenly:
"Oh, Lucy! I'm glad you know at last! I'm glad you know. The tension has been ghastly. The secrecy and . . . and underhandedness of . . . of my meetings with Jim. It has been . . . awful . . . I love him so, Lucy, and to know that he loves me and yet is tied to you . . . Oh, Lucy, you don't know what it has been!"

Lucy stood quite still, her heart beating hard. Here again was something new and—something genuine. Or, so it seemed. Jocelyn was so utterly broken down. She seemed like a poor, broken-hearted little girl. If it were acting, Lucy argued, it was acting of the most consummate perfection and finish.

Jocelyn moved presently, drew away, turned, and flung herself in the corner of the couch, looking drawn and miserable. Lucy looked at her a moment, then asked:

"What do you know of Jim's reason for marrying me, Jocelyn?"
"Everything," said Jocelyn, sharply. "Jim has told you?"

"Yes."
"And has he really said that he is only waiting to . . . to get rid of me . . . to . . . come back to you?" The words would not come smoothly.

"Not so . . . brutally as that. When I said all that, I was beside myself, Lucy. You would not believe, you sneered and laughed at me and spoke of . . . showy talk. . . ."

Jocelyn broke off on a sharply drawn breath.

"But, brutally or not, he did say it?" persisted Lucy. Jocelyn nodded.

"Oh, Lucy, I hate to hurt you. Really I do. I'm not heartless, truly. I've just had . . . about as much as I can stand; that's all. You don't know what it is to long for him and know that he is longing for me. . . . And that there's just this mad, impulsive marriage of his between us. . . . And he knows now that it was a mad business and that . . . that it . . . oh, that it hasn't been worth it!"

"It Wasn't a Question Really," Said Jocelyn.

It was some moments before Lucy spoke again; then she said, slowly:

"Jocelyn, that night of my party, you hinted to me that Jim was a . . . philanderer. You said that some people knew just what he happened to be, where women were concerned. . . ."

"Oh, Lucy, I was racked with jealousy. . . ."

Crude Eyeglass Frames in Use in Olden Days

The people of the world would be very much upset if they were compelled to wear the kinds of frames used in the olden days for eyeglasses. History tells us the earliest corrective glasses were mounted in crude shell frames which were held in position by strings extended to the ears. Some were made without ear pieces and were held in the hand, much the same as the modern lorgnette.

At one time in Spain, glasses were attached to the hat, a very inaccurate and insecure manner. About 1600 in England, glasses were fastened to hoods, which fitted the entire head. These were later discarded for leather holders with string attachments.

Thoughts of Druids

When you are in Carnac in France, and you go out to see the mysterious Druid menhirs, which are among the most impressive in the world, you will, of course, be told, as you were at Stonehenge, in England, that they mark warrior graves or are stones connected with sun-worshippers and so on. It is well to recall that we know very little of the religion of the Druids, in fact, one of their laws was, "Do not discuss religion among yourselves." Other laws were, "Women may become judges." "No child shall be reared in a city but only in a village," and Caesar has left the testimony that "It is a law of the Druids that no man shall be richer than his neighbor."

ousy. I admit it. I had thought he was so absolutely mine. Remember, that only an hour before he had been . . . well, letting me think that nothing could ever take him from me. . . . And then to see him, apparently bowled over by you. . . . Of course, if I had known the truth of his reason for making love to you, I should have known that his heart was still with me in spite of everything."

Jocelyn bowed her head into her hands. "It's so awfully hard on us both," came her muffled voice. "So awfully hard, Lucy. To miss the only thing in life that is worth while. . . . It's so . . . so darned hard on us, Lucy. . . ."

It was rather hard on Lucy, too; but that aspect of it didn't seem to have struck Jocelyn. And Lucy had determined to think only of Jim, and so she didn't let it strike her either.

"Jocelyn," she said slowly. "Will you leave things as they are for a while? Perhaps only for a day or two. . . . Just to give me time to think and get this clear. It isn't altogether easy to straighten things out, all in a moment. . . . Don't try to see Jim. . . . Or if you do, don't say anything of what has happened today. I must think. But I promise you, I'll try all I know, to make things easier . . . to be fair to you—both."

Her voice shook slightly. Jocelyn was silent a moment; then she said:

"You are right. Much better to leave it for a while. I . . . I will be brave. . . . If I see him . . . I'll . . . not say anything. I promise that, Lucy."

Jocelyn took Lucy to the door. There Lucy hesitated; then turned swiftly, caught Jocelyn's arm and said quickly:

"Jocelyn, you have told me the truth? You wouldn't . . . you couldn't say such things if they were not true?"

"You . . . Lucy, I think you might know I couldn't," she said, in a low, indistinguishably pained voice.

Lucy said no more; she nodded her head, but the adieu she tried to speak would make no sound.

She turned away, and went out into the street, holding her head high and proudly. . . .

But once she was out of sight of the house her posture of proud carriage crumpled somewhat. She felt shaky and wretched as if she had been actually physically beaten. She tried to think and didn't know where to begin. That Jocelyn should be the girl Jim loved! . . . That he should have talked everything out with her so freely! . . . Told her even the reason of his marriage with herself. . . . That, more than anything, convinced her of the truth of what Jocelyn had said. Besides, no woman could say such things if they were not true. Her own utter honesty supplied this argument. It was not possible. No one could lie to such a ghastly extent about anything so terribly important. Besides, it had sounded like truth, all the last part of it. Jocelyn's breakdown had held the poignancy of genuine torture. . . . Questions revolved so dizzily in her brain that she felt she would go mad with them.

She turned homeward, saying half aloud:

"Heavens, what an unearthly muddle life is! And where's the truth to be found?" It was a cry from the depths of her poor, puzzled heart, and she felt the sting of tears in her eyes.

SICK HEADACHE?"

It is not necessary to give-in to headaches. It is just a bit old-fashioned! The modern woman who feels a headache coming on at any time, takes some tablets of Bayer Aspirin and heads it off.

Keep Bayer Aspirin handy, and keep your engagements. Headaches, systemic pains, come at inconvenient times. So do colds. You can end them before they're fairly started if you'll only remember this handy, harmless form of relief. Carry it in your purse and insure your comfort while shopping; your evening's pleasure at the theatre. Those little nagging aches that bring a case of "nerves" by day are ended in a jiffy. Pains that once kept people home are forgotten half an hour after taking Bayer Aspirin! You'll find these tablets always help. If you get real aspirin, you'll get real relief. In every package of genuine Bayer tablets are proven directions which cover headaches, colds, sore throat, toothache, neuralgia, neuritis, sciatica, rheumatism, etc.

The tablets stamped Bayer won't fail you, and can't harm you. They don't depress the heart. They don't upset the stomach. So take them whenever you need them, and take enough to end the pain.

SCHOOL NOTES

Prepared and Edited by a Committee of the Student Council

High School

Friday is being observed as Freshman Day. At seven (7) o'clock the Sophomores are entertaining the Freshmen and teachers at the annual Freshman party in the high school rooms. Many stunts and jokes are being planned at the expense of the Freshies and after the initiatory rites are over they should be better able to appreciate their importance as members of the Tawas City high school.

School will begin Monday, October 19, at 9 o'clock fast time in the morning and dismiss at 12 o'clock noon. Afternoon session will begin at 1:15 and dismiss at 4:15. The first bell will ring at 8:30 in the morning and at 1:00 o'clock in the afternoon.

The Seniors have ordered their invitations of the same company that the class of 1931 did; that is, the Inter-Collegiate Press. The local printer, Mr. Thornton, will do the printing for the job.

Feast your eyes on the modern miracles of the new Technicolor! See "The Runaround," with Mary Brian, Johnny Hines and Marie Prevost, at the State Theatre, October 28 and 29. A Junior class benefit at popular prices. Adults, 30c; children, 10c. Come!

The Senior class has decided to wear the conventional cap and gown at its commencement exercises in June. The outfits will be rented of the same company that rented them to the class of 1931.

Dr. Weed of East Tawas, under the auspices of the Extension Department of the University of Michigan, spoke to the junior and senior high schools Tuesday afternoon of this week. He spoke concerning goiter. Dr. Weed brought out the fact that a large percentage of the school pupils of Michigan are afflicted with the disease without their knowledge, and that the use of iodized salt tends to prevent the effects.

Seventh and Eighth Grades

Seventh graders are starting the study of "The Courtship of Miles Standish."

Our room joined the high school in listening to Dr. Weed's health talk on Tuesday.

Fifth and Sixth Grades

Our room will entertain the third and fourth grades Friday afternoon by two plays. The first is a musical play, "The Five Knights," by the music class, Miss Sage directing, followed by an outdoor play of Columbus. We are working very hard to make our plays interesting.

We have been making autumn leaves in Art class.

Third and Fourth Grades

Those with perfect spelling lessons this week are: Mary Sims, Betty Rapp, Marion Musolf, Marjorie Musolf, Irene Cunniff, Lenora Marz, Leona Monroe, Ellen Malcolm, Warren Kehoe, Norma Malcolm.

The third grade is making Indian booklets.

Primary

Richard Sievert is back at school after several days' absence.

The second grade studied the picture, "The Helping Hand," by Renoir, for language.

The Art classes are making Halloween posters.

Ruth Ciddings brought us a winter bouquet.

NOTICE TO ALL TEACHERS

Hon. Webster H. Pearce, State Director of Public Instruction, Lansing, Michigan

President Hoover in his recent proclamation calling for the celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown, Virginia, recommended that Monday, October nineteenth, be fittingly observed in schools and other suitable places in commemoration of the American victory. The United States Yorktown Sesquicentennial commission respectfully requests that all institutions of learning under your direction be urged to celebrate the anniversary of the surrender and assemble at the hour of the President's address beginning at eleven o'clock in the forenoon, Eastern Standard time. We urge that, if possible, facilities be provided for these children to hear the President's speech during which the President will extend a special greeting to the school children of America. We further request that at the conclusion of the President's address, which will be about eleven thirty-five, all school children salute the flag and join the thousands gathered at Yorktown in singing America.

S. O. Bland, Secretary, United States Yorktown Sesquicentennial Commission.

Aged Letters in Door

Business letters mailed during the Nineteenth century, some 64, 65 and 67 years ago, were found in an old-fashioned double-paneled front door when workmen removed it from offices in Manchester, England, recently. The missives had lodged in the space between the panels, behind which was the letter box. They were addressed to H. Barbour & Company, a thread company, which was merged with another firm many years ago.

Consecration
There was a dramatic moment, a great crisis in the world's history, when General Pershing placed the American army under command of General Foch, who had just become commander of the allied forces. One of the phrases used by Pershing was this: "Infantry, artillery, aviation, all that we have are yours. Dispose of them as you will."

When the church in America makes a similar consecration and surrenders to its great Captain, it will be as irresistible as an army with banners.

Save Them
Trees with cavities, safe refuges of the small hunted wild animals, are the "fur" or "den" trees. Affording shelter to the small animal, the den tree is very important to its life, for when the animal is taken and the den destroyed nothing is left there to protect another animal, says the American Forestry association.

EAST TAWAS HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

Wednesday morning Professor Jolter of the extension department, University of Michigan, visited school and talked to the high school and County Normal. He talked of forestry in general, but stressed what the students of East Tawas can do with the advantages of the national forest so close at hand.

At Wednesday morning's sing, Fred Wilson furnished several solos on his new saxophone. Fred did a real job. Last week Paul Field of Saginaw rendered several selections on his flute. He also demonstrated how it is possible to get music out of a tin whistle and with it can determine if one can learn to play a saxophone, flute or clarinet.

This week, which is the seventh week of school, ends the first term of the first semester for the six upper grades. Report cards will be given out next week.

The second P. T. A. meeting of the year will be held next Monday night at 8:00 o'clock, E. S. T., in the school. The subject for discussion will be, "The importance of play in teaching in the primary and early elementary grades," and will be led by Miss Helen Applin. The first grade orchestra will furnish the entertainment. Mrs. Warren, the president, will preside.

Plans for the first of a series of Sunday night concerts given by the school music department in the Community Building are being made for November first.

School will be dismissed next Thursday and Friday, October 22, 23, for the annual teachers' institute which will be held this year in Saginaw.

Wednesday morning the entire school attended a movie at the Family Theatre when the films "Wood Wisdom," furnished by the local forestry department, and a "Talkie Travelogue," furnished by Mr. Berube, were shown. The school children appreciate this very much.

TEACHERS—ATTENTION

Any school or school district employing six or more teachers including the superintendent, all of whom are members of the Michigan Education Association for the current year, shall be placed on the membership roll of honor, and shall be granted a membership roll of honor certificate. Such certificates will be mailed in November to all schools eligible at that time.

Any county having one or more townships in which the teachers in all schools having less than six teachers each, including the superintendent, are members of the Michigan Education Association shall be entitled to a certificate which shall list the townships in said county having a 100% membership.

A Woman With A Past That the World Would Not Forget!

She knows more about men than they know about themselves—but not enough to get the one she wants, without a terrific sacrifice. No other woman in the world could live the life she's lived—and still get the one man!

The electrifying star America has taken to its heart, Tallulah Bankhead, and America's most brilliant young actor, Fredric March, in a gripping social drama, filled with thrilling incidents, varied scenes, and strong dramatic action. A beautiful story of the regeneration of a man and woman through the influence of an understanding love. A highly dramatic vehicle for superb acting by Tallulah Bankhead and Fredric March—both outstanding artists of strength and versatility.
