MEMORIAL IS PLACED ON AU-SABLE BANK

Three bronze figures gazing over the romantic half legendary past are now standing on a high bluff overlooking the AuSable river. There to remain forever as a memorial to that hardy race, the lumberjacks, from whose hands came so much wealth for Michigan.

Last Saturday the memorial was placed on the granite base in the gigantic "Y" at the end of Thompson trail, on a bluff overlooking the beautiful, historic river. R. G. Schreck who has been very instrumental in the project, stated Saturday that a formal unveiling would probably be held during the early part of next summer when it would be possible for all of the many thousands who are interested in the project, to be present. Elaborate plans will be made for this event.

"Mr. Aitken shows his riverman as a young Scandinavian Thor with a peavee for his thunderbolt; the landowner is earnestly considering the possibilities of the timber, and the lumberjack has no thought but how the next monarch of the forest should be made to fall," says the Christian Science Monitor, in a description of this memorial designed by Robert Aitken, the eminent New York Sculptor.

The memorial piece is a two ton bronze casting. Twenty tons of cut granite were required for the base. The block supporting the figures weighs nine tons.

The sponsors of the memorial are descendants of the old pioneer lumbermen. Foremost among them are William B. Merschon, lumberman of Saginaw, R. G. Schreck, formerly supervisor of Huron National Forest and John W. Blodgett of Grand Rapids.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Preaching—10:30 fast time. Sunday School immediately afterward. Epworth League—7:00 p. m., fast time. Subject: Do we need a new religion? Leader: Dora Mark.

Please note that all services are 30 minutes earlier than they have been.

Now and then a minister as layman takes to nursing a grouch. But a grouch is a dangerous creature to keep about us. It soon grows to be bigger than the one who carries it, and becomes master of the situation. Life is too brief and the kingdom of God too busy to spend years in the grouch business. James A. Rowe, mission superintendent of Chicago, was one of the most forgiving men I ever knew. A grouch could not stay with him over night.

Concerning a professed Christian who maintained ill will against him over a difference of opinion, Mr. Rowe said: "Why does he want to carry such a load? I would not let the sun set on such a feeling." How much better to lose ourselves in Christian service than to save for ourselves the agony of self-pity.

The story is told of a young minister who carried complaints against his people to a neighboring pastor, his superior in age. In the young man's opinion, he had been treated with shameful discourtesies. "Did they ever imprison you?" said the elder brother. "No, they have not imprisoned me," was the reply. "Did they ever mock you and beat you with clubs?" "No." "Did they ever spit in your face?" "No." "Did they ever crown you with thorns?" "No." "Did they ever nail you to a cross and raise you upon it?" "No." "Did they do all this to your Master but he opened not his mouth and spake."

EDNA MAY OLIVER PLAYS STAR ROLE IN NEW SHOW

Comedy that rises from the highest sources and emotions that reach the heart-strings sound the note of RKO Radio Pictures' comedy-drama, "Fanny Foley Herself," coming to the State Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday.

The production marks the stardom debut of Edna May Oliver, whose performances in "Cimarron" and "Laugh and Get Rich" and other RKO Radio Pictures' successes, made her a star by public demand.

In a production especially selected for her, a vibrant story of mother-love and sacrifice, of ever changing and intriguing backgrounds, of romance and of wealth, Miss Oliver is said to exceed all her former portrayals.

Miss Oliver is "Fanny Foley Herself," and the tale is as intriguing as Miss Oliver. Past performances of the supporting cast, which includes such players as Hobart Bosworth, Florence Roberts, Rochelle Hudson, Helen Chandler, John Darrow, Robert Emmett O'Connor and Harry O. Stubbs, lend substantially to the enthusiastic claims for the production.

CHICKEN PIE SUPPER

The Morning After

COUNCIL OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION BEGINS THIS YEAR'S WORK

The executive committee of the Isco County Council of Religious Education met at the home of Mrs. W. C. Davidson, Tawas City, on October 24.

The divisional superintendents reported the following plans: Meeting of Children's Workers throughout the county, Father and Son banquets in November, Adult Meeting first week in December, Young People's conference February 6.

Two educational projects, Leadership Training classes and Reading Course Enrollment, were discussed. Watch for definite dates for classes.

Treasurer reported $33.62 on hand. The Council will be very glad to receive the pledges from the various Sunday schools of the county at this time. Anyone desiring to make a personal gift to advance county Sunday school work may do so by sending their pledge to the secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Mae Dease.

As the council launches out into this year's work they are hoping for the hearty co-operation of all pastors, teachers, superintendents, and all interested in religious education in Isco county.

FOUR MARX BROTHERS COMING TO STATE IN "MONKEY BUSINESS"

Zeppo, Groucho, Chico and Harpo. The "Oh's" have it. Also the "ho-hos," the "ha-has" and the "hee-hees." For the Four Marx Brothers were never so delightfully hilarious as they are in "Monkey Business," which will be shown at the State Theatre on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

The Four Marx Brothers do not miss a trick when it comes to providing comedy on the screen. In fact, Director Norman McLeod, who bossed "Monkey Business," their most recent and most frolicsome opus, sees in their efforts on the screen every known comedy method, ranging from slapstick to subtle satire.

"Through a careful choice of characterization for themselves, the Marx Brothers have combined all modes of comedy within their own entertainment," says McLeod. "Groucho uses smart wise-cracks, Chico attacks the dialect comedy, Harpo handles pantomime and Zeppo plays straight to the three with situations as his forte. There you have the main methods of securing laughs."

In "Monkey Business" the Marx quartet reaches the pinnacle of mirthful dizziness. Groucho with a brand new flock of wise cracks, Harpo playing "Hello" with the hordes, Chico being funny and punny, on and off the piano. Zeppo trying to be romantic in the fury of the gales of laughter. It's all about stowaways on an ocean liner. But what does the plot matter, when it's madder than ever!

SCHOOL NOTES

Prepared and Edited by a Committee of the Student Council

High School
Ten new seats recently arrived for the high school assembly room. This addition gives each student a seat by himself rather than in partnership.

Globes have been placed over the light bulbs in all of the rooms, and a much needed additional light has been added to the third and fourth grade room. The globes add much to the usefulness of the bulbs by doing away with the objectionable glare and by causing the light to spread over the room.

The frosts have stopped the field work of the botany class this fall. It will be renewed somewhat in the spring.

Report cards will be given out in all of the rooms Wednesday.

The Sewing Club girls held a business meeting at the high school Monday evening with twenty-five girls present. The following officers were elected: President, Rose DePott; vice president, Effie Prescott; secretary-treasurer, Isabelle Dease. The girls chose "Sewrite Girls" as the name of their club. Games were played after the meeting. The next meeting will be held in about two weeks.

Fifth and Sixth Grades
We are planning a Halloween party for Friday. A committee has been appointed for games and a program.

We have been making numerous Halloween posters.

Third and Fourth Grades
The third grade has begun work in short division.

We have finished a trip across the United States in geography and are now making a picture map.

Primary
Charlotte Hughes left school this week to go to school in the country. We are looking forward to our Halloween party which will be held Friday afternoon.

We are making Halloween posters, baskets, and caps this week in Art.

The second grade reading classes are reading Halloween stories.

Marie Ulman is back at school after a week's absence.

"BAD GIRL" TO HAVE LOCAL PREMIERE AT FAMILY

"Bad Girl," long awaited Fox Film version of Vina Delmar's celebrated novel, shows at the Family Theatre Sunday and Monday, November 1-2.

As the young husband, James Dunn, recent recruit from the New York stage, makes what preview accounts have called the season's most impressive screen debut. Edwin Burke's adaptation of the story is said to place quite as much emphasis on the young husband as on the wife in this drama of adolescent love, marriage and maternity.

Sally Eilers will be seen as the girl bride heroine in the title role. Her characterization in this tensely human and deeply emotional role is said easily to eclipse anything she has done before.

Briefly, the story deals with the meeting of a young New York shop girl with a radio mechanic. They fall in love, rather too well than wisely and are forced into a hurried marriage. Then they find that all their joys, sorrows and emotional vicissitudes during the following months form the basis of the drama that ensues. Minna Gombell acts the ever-present friend of the young wife.

Frank Borzare directed the picture which is claimed to be the most touching presentation of motherhood ever screened.

MISS HOLBECK WINS HIGH MUSICAL HONORS

Miss Dorothy Holbeck, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Fred C. Holbeck of Long Lake, has been announced as the state radio audition winner among the girl contestants. She sang "Bell Song" to win the honor awarded to her and as a result will go to Chicago in November for district competition. She will meet contestants from five different states to decide the mid west honors and for representation in the final to be held at New York City in December.

WHITTEMORE HIGH SCHOOL FAIR NOVEMBER

The Whittemore High School Fair will be given at the school building Friday, November 6. Bats at 5:30 will be followed by a two-hour entertainment given by all grades. No admission will be charged. Every body welcome.

ANN HARDING IS HERE AGAIN, AT FAMILY

Ann Harding is Ann Harding, and she lives up to her reputation in "Devotion," which comes to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, for three nights, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Nov. 3-4-5.

She does a superb characterization, not only "straight" but for a good share of the picture disguised as a cockney nursemaid. She has a poise and sureness of delivery which never fails to entertain. Leslie Howard, for the first time to our knowledge, has a screen part which allows him to demonstrate what a splendid actor he is. The production should greatly enhance his screen popularity with both producers and the public. They are ably supported by sterling performances from Robert Williams, Alison Skipworth, Louise Clorser Hale, Dudley Digges, O. P. Heggie and several other competent artists in comparatively minor roles.

From a novel by Pamela Wynne the photoplay has been done by Graham John and Horace Jackson. It tells the story of the little wallflower sister of an English family who becomes enamored of a successful young lawyer, but sees little opportunity of getting any great attention from him. Tired of being the family drudge, she seeks employment as nursemaid to the young lawyer's son. Then most of the action takes place in the lawyer's apartment where Ann goes disguised in wig, spectacles and Victorian apparel. You know the rest, of course. Romance develops, the lawyer penetrates Ann's disguise and all ends happily.

One comes away from "Devotion" with the feeling of having spent a very pleasant evening. We warn you not to miss it.

U. S. 23 WILL BE PAVED SAYS G. C. DILLMAN

An announcement of great importance to Isco county was made at the annual get-together of the Northeastern Michigan Development Bureau held Tuesday evening at Bay City, when Grover C. Dillman, state highway commissioner, while speaking before the large audience present, stated that the present U. S. 23 would be hard surfaced. He also said that work on this road would not wait for the completion of the Shore Road.

Immediately following Mr. Dillman's announcement, Congressman Roy O. Woodruff repeated the information given. Both speakers emphasized the importance of team work in getting recognition for their communities.

During the past ten years U. S. 23 has not only been a great highway for tourist traffic but a very important link between Northeastern Michigan and Southern Michigan markets. A large portion of this traffic, which is continuous throughout the year, consists of products moving to and from the industrial cities of Southern Michigan.

With the hardsurfacing of the Shore road and U. S. 23, Isco county will be well equipped with fine highways. The people of Isco county and especially the western side, which is not particularly benefited by the Shore road, are highly elated with the decision of the state highway department and the statement that the work on the two roads would go on hand in hand was especially gratifying.

Speakers of the evening meeting in addition to Mr. Dillman and Congressman Woodruff were Earl C. Doyle, Detroit, secretary of the Isaac Walton league; L. J. Thompson, Grand Rapids, president of the West Michigan Tourist Association; George E. Bishop, Marquette, president of the Recreational Industries of the Upper Peninsula; Charles Hensel, Saginaw, managing secretary of the Saginaw Board of Commerce, and Malcolm Binyag, director of managing editors of The Detroit Free Press.

Forgotten HEROES

By

ELMO SCOTT WATSON

A Tough Old Pioneer

IT IS a far cry from Griffins Wharf in the Boston of colonial days to the "Gold Coast" of Chicago, but there is a link between the two. For some of the "400" of the midwest metropolis, as they serve afternoon tea in their luxurious apartments and penthouses, can look down into Lincoln park and see there a reminder of the historic "tea pouring" which took place in Massachusetts 158 years ago. It is a simple granite boulder, bearing a bronze tablet whereon you may read "In memory of David Kennison, the last survivor of the 'Boston Tea Party,' who died in Chicago February 24, 1852, aged one hundred and fifteen years, three months, seventeen days, and is buried near this spot."

Yet the Boston Tea Party was only one incident in one of the most remarkable careers in all American history. Kennison was born in New Hampshire in 1736 and was one of the first to enlist at the outbreak of the Revolution. He was a minute man at Lexington and Concord and with his father and two brothers he fought at Bunker Hill. He served in the Continental army, as a soldier and scout, was captured by the Mohawk Indians and held as a prisoner for several years. After the war he enlisted in the regular army and was a member of the garrison of the first Fort Dearborn. Although past seventy, he re-enlisted in 1808 for a term of five years and was a survivor of the Fort Dearborn massacre. He is said to have fought at Sackett's Harbor in the War of 1812 and to have been wounded in the army by a grapeshot at Williamsburg.

Next he settled in New York and met with far more disasters than ever he had during his service in two wars. A falling tree fractured his skull and broke his collar bone and two ribs; at a military review the discharge of a cannon broke both of his legs; and the kick of a horse left a scar on his forehead which he carried till his death.

Kennison was married four times and was the father of twenty-two children. Late in life he became separated from his children and went to Chicago to live in 1845. Finding that his Revolutionary war pension of $8 was not enough for his living expenses, he took up manual labor again and continued until 1848. Then at the age of one hundred and twelve he decided he had earned a rest, but having no other means of support he entered the Chicago museum as an exhibit. For the last twenty months of his life he was bedridden but his sight and hearing, which had failed him for a time, became perfect again and he retained those faculties until his death in 1852.

The Defense of Fort Jefferson

YOU will look in vain on the Revolutionary war maps for Fort Jefferson. It probably was never placed on any of them, for its existence was a short one. But during that brief time it was the scene of one of the most heroic defenses in the history of the American frontier. It was built in 1781 upon orders from Gov. Thomas Jefferson of Virginia by Col. George Rogers Clark near Mayfield's creek in Kentucky, about five miles below the mouth of the Ohio river.

Clark then returned to Louisville, leaving in command Capt. James Piggett, a veteran of Washington's army and of Clark's expedition into the Illinois country. Angered by this intrusion upon their lands the Choctaws and Chickasaws under their half-breed Chief Calbert marched against Fort Jefferson and laid siege to it. A messenger was hastily dispatched to Clark but it was doubtful if reinforcements could arrive in time.

The situation in the fort soon became desperate. Their provisions were almost exhausted, the water supply was falling, ammunition was running low and as a final horror, sickness swept the little garrison. One of the defenders who was captured by the Indians was forced to tell the true state of affairs in the stockade, and upon learning this, Calbert, under a flag of truce, demanded the surrender of the fort, promising to spare the lives of the settlers, but declaring that if there was further resistance he might not be able to control his warriors if they once swept over the walls.

Captain Piggett made a counter proposal. If the Indians would raise the siege, the settlers would abandon the fort and leave the country. Calbert agreed to submit this proposal to a council of the warriors. While the council was in progress reinforcements from Louisville arrived and preparations were made to defend the fort to the last.

The Indians immediately attacked, but the small cannon which the Louisville party had brought and which had been mounted on the walls mowed them down by the score. But despite this the battle raged fiercely for hours before Calbert gave up the attempt to carry the fort by storm and retired from the field. The settlers, too, had had enough. They prepared to evacuate the fort, some to go to Louisville and others to their former homes in Kaskaskia, Ill. With their departure the fort fell into ruins and within a short time the wilderness had again reclaimed the spot where Fort Jefferson had stood.

About 300 Italian theaters have been equipped with sound film reproduction apparatus.

UNC' BILLY POSSUM THINKS PETER CRAZY

If it may hap with other folks
You cannot quite agree,
Pray do not be in haste to judge,
But wait a while and see.

SOMETIMES folks do things which seem very, very foolish when really they are not foolish at all. So it never does to judge too hastily. That was what Unc' Billy Possum did. You see, it just happened that Unc' Billy was on his way home to his hollow tree in the Green Forest the morning that Bowser the Hound found Peter Rabbit hiding in the old bramble-tangle wondering how he was ever to get back to the Dear Old Brier Patch without falling into the clutches of Old Man Coyote. Where Unc' Billy had spent the night or what mischief he had been into I don't know. Of course, he ought to have been home long before jolly, round, bright Mr. Sun began his daily climb up in the blue, blue sky, but he wasn't. No, sir, he wasn't. More than one Jolly Little Sunbeam had peeped in at the door of Unc' Billy's home before he came pattering along through the Green Forest.

He was right near the old bramble tangle when he saw Bowser coming. Unc' Billy promptly climbed a tree. He had fooled Bowser once by playing dead, but he didn't intend to try it again unless he was in such a tight place that he had to. So now he climbed a tree to wait until Bowser should go, and the way home be clear and safe. So it happened that he was where he could look right down and see all that happened at the old bramble tangle. He saw Bowser go sniffing and sniffing this way and that way, and finally discover Peter in the middle of the bramble-tangle. He chuckled as he listened to Bowser's great voice and watched him try to frighten Peter into running out of the bramble-tangle.

"Brer Rabbit cart'ly done got a wise haid on his shoulders," muttered Unc' Billy as he saw that Peter didn't move. "He knows when he is well off, and Ah reckons Brer Bowser done gwine to bark his haid off befo' Brer Rabbit gwine to so much as shake a leg."

At just that very minute Unc' Billy got a surprise, such a surprise that he nearly tumbled out the tree he was in.

"Fo' the lan's sake!" exclaimed Unc' Billy. "Ah reckons Brer Rabbit done gone crazy! Yes, sah, that's what Ah reckons. Ah takes back all Ah said about him havin' a wise haid on his shoulders. He's crazy! Po' Brer Rabbit! Ah cert'ly am sorry fo' him. He's plumb foolish in his haid and no mistake." Unc' Billy shook his own head mournfully.

And this is what happened to cause Unc' Billy to so suddenly change his opinion of Peter Rabbit: Peter had

Child Thrives on Wood and Milk

UP IN Two Rivers, Wis., is this little girl, Dolores First, two and a half years old, who lives almost exclusively on wood and milk and seems to thrive on the strange diet. She is standing between two chairs that bear witness to her depraved appetite. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jake First, say that only occasionally can they persuade Dolores to eat vegetables.

Lobster a la Newburg.

Cut the lobster from the can in small pieces and heat in a double boiler in two tablespoonfuls of butter. Sprinkle salt, paprika and cayenne to taste. Beat the yolks of two eggs, add one cupful of cream and turn it over the lobster, stirring until thick and smooth. Serve at once on hot wafers, or circles of toast.

Tuna Fish a la Napoli.

Take a large can of tuna fish, break it up with a fork. Cook together two tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour, season with salt and pepper and add a pint of strained tomato juice. Cook until it forms a smooth sauce, add the fish and serve hot on fresh lettuce cut very fine with the shears.

hopped out of the old bramble-tangle almost under Bowser's nose! Yes, sir, he had done just that. It had surprised Bowser quite as much as it had Unc' Billy. He had been so surprised that for a minute he just stared. Then with a roar of his great voice he started for Peter and off Peter went through the Green Forest, lipperty-lipperty-lip, with Bowser at his heels. Do you wonder that Unc' Billy thought him crazy? Probably you do. I would have thought the same thing. But Peter wasn't crazy. Oh, my, no! He wasn't the least bit crazy, as you shall see.

Lower California

Caterpillar Cactus of Lower California.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

NOT often does Lower California get too much rain. The long peninsula which, in shape, resembles a man's sock, thrusting its toe 800 miles southward into the Pacific from the southern border of California, is a land seared by sun's rays and largely covered by cactus and other growth that is found in arid regions. But recently, when a hurricane struck the peninsula, a large area was drenched. Many of its villages including La Paz, the capital, suffered from high water.

Lower California was once in the custody of the United States. During the Mexican war, in 1847, the forces of the United States occupied the principal points in the peninsula and declared it American territory, but relinquished it at the close of hostilities.

Its width varies from 30 to 100 miles and its coast line of over 2,000 miles is indented by numerous bays and bordered by many islands. Most of its nearly 100,000 inhabitants live in villages that dot the shores of the Pacific and the Gulf of California. Its broad areas of low, sun-scorched plains, where death by thirst awaits unwary travelers and desolate plateaus of ragged black lava present an unfriendly aspect.

But all Lower California is not forbidding. Many of its villages of low mud houses are set amid clumps of lofty shade trees, although some of them, surrounded by sandy wastes, might almost have been set down boldly from Arabia.

Nature has made queer marks on the peninsula's panoramas. Almost withing eyeshot of majestic palms that would not be out of place on a Sahara oasis, are great beds of creeping devil cactus which resemble nests of gigantic spine-covered caterpillars creeping in all directions from a central root. This peculiar weed is native to this country. The 'caterpillars' creep away from their roots sometimes 20 to 30 yards. The part of the stem resting on the ground sends down small roots and the older stems die in the rear at about the same rate as they grow in front, so they slowly move away from the colony across the flats where they live.

Animals Who Drink No Water.

A large number of the smaller kinds of desert mammals never drink water. They live and thrive on dry seeds and scraps of vegetation in places where the heat and aridity are excessive, without ever touching their lips to water, and it has even been found impossible to teach some of them in captivity to take water. Apparently they never know thirst or the delight of quenching it.

Many Lower California birds and mammals, however, are closely related to those of southern California. Only a few species of birds and a single land mammal, all in the extreme southern end of the peninsula, appear to have originated on the Mexican mainland. All the others are evidently derived from well-known species of southern California, though they have been isolated long enough to develop numerous geographic forms. This is in strong contrast to the great difference shown by the flora in which are numerous strongly marked species peculiar to this region.

As in similar arid areas of the extreme southwestern United States, the plains of Lower California ordinarily abound with small desert mammals such as rabbits, pocket mice, kangaroo rats, and others. During long-continued dry periods vast numbers of these small mammals perish of starvation, owing to the failure of necessary crops of succulent and seed-bearing herbage; but after two or three years of renewed rainfall and abundant plant life, the desert again swarms with countless numbers of these small folk.

So accustomed do the animals become to depending upon plants for moisture that travelers have come to water holes in the hottest weather and found no evidence that animals have come there to drink while fresh tracks have been found a few rods away.

Small desert foxes, with large ears and bodies not much larger than those of a cat, occur on the larger plains throughout the peninsula. They live in burrows and, when surprised away from home by day, are very cunning in concealing themselves. As danger approaches they skulk to the nearest bush, tuft of grass, or other little object breaking the surface and sink down flat on the ground beside it, and although they may be in plain view, they are almost certain to escape notice unless seen before they reach shelter.

When concealment becomes impossible they are up and off like a flash, and so swift and graceful are their movements that they appear to float across the plain like a yellowish gray streak. On the Magdalena plains the cowboys ride down and lasso coyotes for sport; but they admit defeat in attempting to catch the fleet-footed fox.

Some Large Game Animals.

Antelope, mountain sheep, mule-deer, and mountain lions are the only large game animals on the peninsula. Antelope formerly occupied all the plains, but are now reduced to a small number in a few localities, and there appears to be little hope of saving them from early extermination. Deer are still to be found in many localities and with the mountain lion will outlast other large game in that region.

The first mountain sheep discovered in America were those recorded in the early writings of the Spanish missionaries from Lower California. There are numerous species of mountain sheep in the Old and New worlds, and most of them have their homes about high and desolate mountain crests rising above the coniferous forests at timber line, where they live amid Arctic and semi-Arctic conditions.

Among the mountain sheep of Lower California these common conditions of life are reversed and they occupy the low desert ranges parallel to the Gulf coast from sea-level up to 4,000 or 5,000 feet altitude, always below the lower limit of the coniferous forests which adorn the upper levels of the high mountains in the northern part of the peninsula.

Here the summer temperatures are commonly much more than 100 degrees Fahrenheit in the shade, and the arid mountain slopes have a scanty growth of cactuses, yuccas and other strictly desert plants. These sheep commonly go to water when available in the hot, dry summers, but are able to exist for considerable periods, even in hot weather, on the moisture obtained from the more fleshy cactus plants, the tender flowers and flower stalks of agaves and yuccas, and from other water-storing desert plants.

In addition to the mammals already mentioned wild cats, badgers, spotted skunks, raccoons, coyotes and other kind of fox make their homes on desert areas of Lower California. The spotted skunk, or hydrophobia skunk, as it is commonly called, is most abundant in the extreme southern end of the peninsula, where it is looked upon with fear and abhorrence owing to its habit of biting people in the face while they are sleeping on the ground and the reputed commonly resulting death of its victims by rabies. The fear of these skunks extends throughout the peninsula.

Doves and California valley quail are numerous the entire length of the peninsula, their presence always indicating the vicinity of permanent water. Often while camping near a desert water hole, hunters have watched birds come and go unafraid of man. Even quail stand quietly and after drinking preen their plumage or move carelessly about, uttering little subdued call-notes to one another.

Plenty of Small Birds.

Hawks, woodpeckers, jays, ravens, mocking-birds, cactus wrens, and other small birds enliven the desert and are abundant about some of the cultivated oasis. A desert thrasher is abundant in the yucca forests and in early morning and evening he charms his human neighbors with exquisitely musical notes.

On some of the islands of the Lower California coast breed many cormorants. Whenever a cormorant, alarmed by the approach of a hunter, flies away, gulls swoop down on exposed eggs and eat them at once; or, if the hunter is too near, each gull transfixes an egg on its beak and flies away, draining the contents as it flies. It is common for gulls to alight on nests and calmly pick up young cormorants weighing five or six ounces and swallow them entirely, the helpless victims being swallowed head foremost, their feet waving despairingly from the gulls' widely-spread beaks.

In the San Pedro Martir mountains may be found the California condor, a huge bird, sometimes measuring nearly 11 feet across its outspread wings. These birds are so large that when perched on a dead tree, the turkey buzzards near them look like pygmies. The natives formerly cut off the large hollow bases of the quill feathers of these gigantic birds and, fitting them with stoppers, used them for carrying fine gold at the placer mines.

Earth and Sky

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THE sky is beautiful, but I love the green earth more. The heavens seem so very far, The world so near my door. Above me are the splendid stars So radiantly bright, But here are paths, and pasture-bars, And little lamps at night.

The sky is beautiful, ah, yes, And yet the good, green earth Giv' me each day her loveliness, Each day a whole life's worth. How many of his weary ones The sun has left a-thirst! But, oh, how many of her sons Old mother earth has nursed.

The sky is beautiful, but flow'rs Are beautiful to see, And all the cycle of the hours Earth spreads a feast for me. And even when the thing is through, When all of life is past, Earth's is the best I turn me to And find my rest, at last.

Kid gloves will clean nicely by dampening a cloth in milk, rubbing the cloth over a cake of toilet soap, then over the gloves.

Use eggshells to wash bottles or vinegar cruets. Crush them fine, put into the cruet with warm, soapy water and shake well.

In removing basting threads, cut them every few inches. Do not pull a long thread out at one time, as this may leave holes in the goods.

When laundering curtains for first time, soak them in four tablespoonsful of salt to each four cupsful of water. The curtains will wash easily as the dressing will wash out readily.

To reheat leftover mashed potatoes, place them in a double boiler, add a little warm milk or cream, beat well, cover tightly and cook fifteen minutes.

This Will Be Footwear for Chinese

Southern California has developed a new export industry. This picture shows part of the huge mountain of worn auto tires gathered in Los Angeles and destined to be sent to China and Europe. In China the tires are cut up to make cheap footwear, while in Europe they are used in hard rubber products.

DAIRY

PROVIDE NOW FOR GRAZING IN SPRING

How Good Pasture May Be Saved From Ruin.

Cows will easily ruin a good pasture if turned on it too early in the spring while the soil is soaked with moisture. Early spring grass lacks desirable nutritive qualities, and usually the barns are emptied of the legume hay by early March.

"Therefore," says John A. Arey, dairy extension specialist at the North Carolina state college, "the wise thing to do is to make provision for a supply of early grazing next spring. When a cow has passed the winter largely on dry feed, she craves appetizing, succulent feed such as may be got from a good temporary pasture. Such grazing is appetizing, is nutritious, and is one of the most economical feeds that any dairyman can provide. By providing temporary grazing for March and for as much of April as will be needed, the cows may be kept off the permanent pasture until the grass has made good growth and the soil is so dry that the sod will not be ruined by trampling."

Mr. Arey finds that the supply of home grown roughage is about exhausted on March 1, especially on those farms where only a few cows are kept for cream production. These cows are therefore turned on the pasture when the hay gives out regardless of the condition of the soil or the growth of the grasses. This usually results in damage to the pasture and little good to the cows.

A good forage crop mixture to plant in the fall consists of one-half bushel of Abruzzi rye; one-half bushel of beardless wheat; one bushel of Norton oats; one bushel of beardless barley, and ten pounds of crimson clover or fifteen pounds of hairy vetch. This amount will plant one acre.

Cut Out Low Producer;
No Place in Dairy Herd

Dairymen could speed the recovery of their business by culling poor producers from their herds, according to C. S. Rhode, University of Illinois. While it is true that a large part of the loss of price for dairy products is due to lack of consumption, not over-production, Rhode states there are more than enough cows to supply the normal demand.

With butterfat at 45 cents a pound, the average cow in the state made $30 above cost of feed in 1929, according to the college's records of dairy herd improvement associations. With butterfat as low as 30 cents a pound this same cow would return but $2 a year above cost of feed.

"Butterfat would have to sell at approximately 63 cents a pound for the average cow to make as much return above cost of feed as would be made by cows producing 340 pounds of butterfat selling at 35 cents a pound.

Cleaning Galvanized Pails

About the most satisfactory way of cleaning is first to scrub it with a brush and hot soft water in which some concentrated lye and kerosene have been dissolved. Then brush it with strong vinegar, lemon juice, or a weak solution of hydrochloric acid, about two tablespoonsful of commercial hydrochloric (also called muriatic) acid to a teacupful of water. "Brushing with denatured alcohol also seems to help a good deal. Finally scrub thoroughly with a good cleaning powder and steel wool, and I believe you will find it pretty well shined up."

Keep Testing

The man who only tests his herd for one year has little to show whether it has paid him or not. The only way that he can really get a benefit from keeping records on his herd is through studying these records from year to year and with their help build up a profitable herd and profitable management methods. The Chickasaw County (Iowa) Herd Improvement association offers a splendid example in one member whose herd averaged $75 above feed costs in 1928 and increased to $179 in 1930 in spite of declining butterfat prices.—Successful Farming.

Sold 350-Pound Cows

Dairy cows have to be good producers in times of cheap butterfat to make a profit. V. J. Winnings, Moultrie county Illinois, has a purebred herd of Jerseys. All those he has now produce at least 400 pounds fat per year. He loaded two purebreds into the truck and took them to market because they had produced only 350 pounds fat in a year. Winnings says his cows must make the 400-pound level if they expect to board at his farm.—Exchange.

MANY people, two hours after eating, suffer indigestion as they call it. It is usually excess acid. Correct it with an alkali. One spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in stomach acids, and at once. The symptoms disappear in five minutes.

You will never use crude methods when you know this better method. And you will never suffer from excess acid when you prove out this easy relief.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drug store.

The High Notes

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

A great artist was criticizing the work of his students. A hundred or so were ranged in front of him while the work which each had been doing for a week or so was spread out before him on a huge easel. He would glance at these half-dozen sketches perhaps and then make his criticism. It was strange how little there was out of the commonplace. Here were men and women trying to be great, trying to do something that would bring them out of the crowd, and falling far short of it.

"There is nothing outstanding in these," he would say. "They have no blaze, no sparkle, no snap. There are no contrasts, no higher notes, just one dull, commonplace monotone."

"What you should do," he would continue, "is to put life into what you are painting, color, big contrasts. As I looked at the group whose work the artist was criticizing, it seemed to me that the things they were doing were in most cases pretty much representative of their own characters."

There was a slender, pale youth among the group, with a feminine voice and figure. He did not like out-of-doors. The work which he did was pretty, delicate, refined and full of detail, but it was weak, without either daring or originality.

There was, in striking contrast to this delicate youth, a husky, stocky athlete who might have been a prize fighter.

"I'm curious to see what his pictures will be like," I said to the young woman who sat beside me.

When they were arranged upon the easel, they almost shouted at us. There was a perfect blaze of color, put on with the boldest strokes. There was nothing pale or weak or sickly about his work, as there was nothing of these qualities in him.

The trouble with the lives and work of too many of us is that they are drab, without sparkle or high notes.

Air Transport Flying
Shows Envious Record

Chicago.—If a passenger were to fly 10,000 miles annually in planes flown on regular schedules of air-mail passenger lines, he might suffer a crack-up in his forty-sixth year and might be killed in the 68th year. If the same man, however, went the same distance in random flights, such as sight-seeing, joy-hopping, etc., he could anticipate an accident every five years, or prepare for death in the thirty-fifth year.

This means that there were only five fatal accidents in more than 20,000,000 miles of scheduled air-transport flying during the first six months of 1931, and that the dependability and safety of air transport is being substantially bettered.

Another evidence of the increased dependability of air transport is that on the longest mail passenger line in the world, with both day and night service between New York and San Francisco—2,766 miles—that company had a record of completing 99 per cent of all the mileage scheduled for it last month. This is especially noteworthy because the company flew more than a million miles in one month with tri-motored transports.

A few years ago such a record was one to be hoped for.

Easy Divorce Novelty
Wears Off in Russia

Moscow.—The novelty of easy divorce in Soviet Russia has worn off and the number of persons to take advantage of the "new domestic freedom" has decreased sharply in the last six months.

Although the divorce rate is still one of the highest in the world, figures obtained from the state planning commission showed 8,906 divorces and 16,795 marriages, or about 530 divorces to every 1,000 marriages, as compared to 636 in 1930.

The cities had the greatest divorce rate, but all were lower than in 1928, when there were 800 divorces to every 1,000 marriages.

Device to Hold Planes
in Air Is Announced

Hammond, Ind.—A device by which airplanes may be held stationary while in mid-air has been perfected here by Clayton B. Clark, he has announced. He believes his invention would be valuable to endurance flyers and aviators in nonstop flights.

Six cups, placed on the wing near the cockpit, receive air from a metal tube and reflect it on the back of the wings, keeping the pressure equal on both sides, Clark said in explaining the basis of his invention. The device appeared to be successful in a test flight, according to Clark.

Hunger Pangs End Tour of Hitch-Hike Girls

Start Out to See World, but Stomachs Rebel.

Atlanta, Ga.—Pangs of hunger brought to an abrupt end here a proposed hitch-hike tour of the world by two pretty Michigan girls, and now they are back at their homes at Grand Rapids, where they can get three square meals a day, if not romance and excitement.

The girls are Thelma Henson, fifteen, and Leone Bristol, seventeen. They got as far as Atlanta in fine shape, although the pangs of hunger first struck them at Chattanooga, a day's drive from here. By the time they got here their tongues were fairly hanging out.

Having no money and no means of satisfying their hunger, they wandered along the streets of Atlanta, looking longingly into the windows of the various restaurants and grocery stores.

At a grocery department display of a large uptown department store Leone and Thelma became so engrossed that they went inside and paced slowly up and down the aisles, looking with longing glances at the food on the counters.

Their action aroused the suspicions of store detectives, and before they knew it they were whisked to the office of the manager.

There they told their story. They had left their homes intending to go to Florida and ship from there to South America, later going to Spain and the continent.

"What were you using for money?" the manager asked.

"We thought we could earn our way," said Leone. "We were wrong." The manager agreed at their request to wire their parents. In the meantime they were taken to the police station, where they stayed only a few hours before wires came.

The girls ate for the first time in two days just before they boarded a train for Grand Rapids.

"Travel may broaden the mind," Leone observed, "but it certainly flattens the stomach."

Woman Elopes Day After Wedding

Flees Undesired Mate With Childhood Suitor.

Miami, Fla.—Mrs. Mary Condon Greenleaf, beautiful twenty-year-old bride of two weeks, has gone back to her Pennsylvania bridegroom after a week's visit in Miami.

This is not a social notice, as it may seem, but the story of a romance that parents' wishes and marriage could not break.

In the same automobile that took the young bride back to her husband was Harry White, twenty-six, charged with abducting her from her husband's home at Whitmarsh, Pa., the day after her marriage.

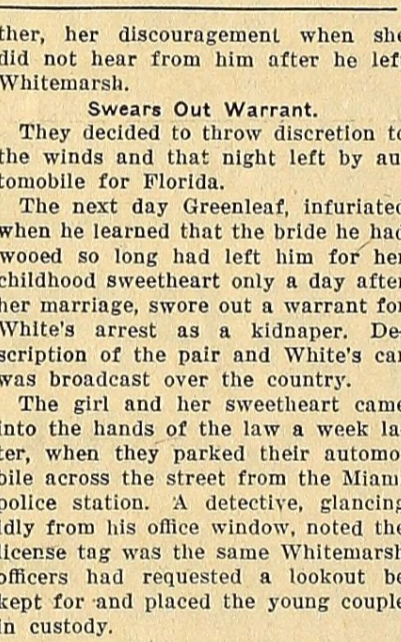

The driver of the Pennsylvania-bound automobile, by the way, was Chief of Police Sherman Koons of Whitmarsh, who came here to return the couple after they were arrested by Miami police.

Swears Out Warrant.

They decided to throw discretion to the winds and that night left by automobile for Florida.

The next day Greenleaf, infuriated when he learned that the bride he had wooed so long had left him for her childhood sweetheart only a day after her marriage, swore out a warrant for White's arrest as a kidnaper. Description of the pair and White's car was broadcast over the country.

The girl and her sweetheart came into the hands of the law a week later, when they parked their automobile across the street from the Miami police station. A detective, glancing idly from his office window, noted the license tag was the same Whitmarsh officers had requested a lookout be kept for and placed the young couple in custody.

The bride, before leaving the police station here, asserted that her romance with White was only "temporarily interrupted" by the law.

Of Her Own Accord, The young wife, almost child-like in her youthfulness, tearfully protested that she came to Miami with White of her own accord.

"This will all be straightened out when we get home," she declared. Then she told how she married Greenleaf because she thought White, her childhood sweetheart, had forgotten her.

"I married the man of father's choice," she said. "He had money, but he was much older than I. I did it only to please father, and because I thought Harry would never come back."

White had left Whitmarsh several years before and had not been heard from.

John Gresham's Girl

By CONCORDIA MERREL

(Copyright) WNU Service

THE STORY

By chance James Lee meets Lucy Gresham, daughter of Sir John Gresham, wealthy ship builder, Lee, unjustly accused of robbing the Gresham firm, was sent to prison. He blames Oliver Ames, Lucy's cousin, and Gresham's manager, and seeks revenge. Lee inherits wealth, and, in compliance with the will, changes his name from Warrington. He secures an invitation to the girl's birthday party. Lucy is practically engaged to Ames. She meets Lee, who makes love to her. With Gresham's approval, Lucy and Lee are married. Lee stuns the girl by telling her he does not love her, and hates her "whole breed." She hears the story of his wrongs, and his determination to be avenged. She believes in his innocence of the crime for which he was convicted. "Linchings," rival of Gresham's, shows a determination to crush its competitor. Lee tells Lucy he is "Linchings," and means to ruin her father. Lucy is hurt by Jocelyn Upton's assertion that Lee loved her before he met Lucy, and the latter believes her.

CHAPTER VI—Continued

"Well, I don't want you to come. There would be too much risk of your being recognized. Oliver would be bound to know you. And there are the Gresham men to think of, too."

"And if I am willing to take that risk? If I don't give a d—n whether I'm known or not?"

Beneath the burning intensity of his eyes, she found herself hesitating slightly.

"I still don't want you to come," she said at last, looking away. "I . . . want to get away. . . . Just for a little while." There was a shake in her throat.

"From me?"

"From everything."

"From me?" he insisted.

"Yes . . . and from you," she cried. He drew a breath and wheeled round from her. And again there was silence.

Suddenly he went back to his chair and sat down.

"When are you going?" he asked abruptly.

"Tomorrow. Perhaps I shall wire to Oliver today, asking him to fix up rooms for me at the most decent hotel in Newchester."

"The Royal is the best. Will you go there?"

"I don't mind where it is, so long as it's comfortable. All right, I'll ask Oliver to get rooms for me at the Royal."

He said no more, and from the time he left the house after breakfast, she did not see him again until midnight. He came to her room, then, just as she had retired for the night.

"Made all your arrangements?" he asked from the doorway of his room.

"Yes," she answered, looking at him. She thought he looked tired, rather pale, and not very happy.

"What time are you leaving?" he asked.

"By the ten fifty-five from King's Cross."

"All right. Good night, Lucy." Her voice was not quite steady as she bade him good night, too.

A good deal to her surprise, she found, when she was ready to start next day, that Jim was waiting to take her to the station. She thanked him for that.

He bought her ticket, found her a place in a first-class pullman, heaped the table before her with papers and magazines, and as he left her, he took off his hat, bent down and kissed her cheek.

"A devoted husband does this sort of thing," he murmured, and he left her quickly, without looking back. She watched him go, with the quick stinging of tears in her eyes, so that his mighty figure was blurred in her sight.

Lee went straight out of the station, without once looking back, flung himself into his car and started it immediately. What he was thinking or feeling, the wisest man on earth could not have guessed from his set, sullen face. And yet a turmoil of emotions was raging through him.

As he was rounding a corner, slowly, he was hailed from the pavement by Jocelyn Upton, and drew up beside the curb to greet her.

"Want to give me a lift?" she asked, her thin eager little face lighting up.

"Certainly. Get in," he answered, and she obeyed.

"Where to?" he asked, as he started off again.

"Anywhere. I don't mind. Shall we go for a little trundle in the country?" she suggested.

"Sorry. Not possible. I've a lot to do."

She moved restlessly beside him.

"Oh, all right . . . home, then," she said discontentedly.

He took her home.

"Come in and see mother," she invited, as they reached the door.

He followed her in.

It appeared, though, that Lady Cordelia was not at home, so he presently found himself alone with Jocelyn in the drawing room.

"Sit down, Jim dear," she said, and looked at her, steadily for a moment. Then:

"What Time Are You Leaving?" He Added.

"Jocelyn, what are you driving at?" he demanded bluntly.

"Come and sit down again, dear, and I'll tell you," she said.

But he didn't move. He just stood where he was and said:

"Tell me."

"It's difficult to shout these things out across such a distance," she objected. These things . . . ? What things? He was silently questioning. He finally compromised by striding over to her and standing close before her.

"Well?" he asked.

"She was telling me the other day what a fiasco your marriage is," she said slowly.

"What!" That broke from him from the sheer unexpectedness of it.

She laughed; an impish, disagreeable sound.

"Oh, yes; she was telling me that, Jim. And more besides. How miserable she is; what a mistake the whole business has been. . . ." She paused a minute; then added: "And she was wondering what could be done about it."

"Done? What did she mean. . . ?"

"Well, Jim dear, marriages aren't the irrevocable things, these days, that they once . . ."

"Did she . . . suggest . . . anything of that sort?" he asked. She said in a tone that suggested the spit of a cat:

"Go home and ask her."

"She's away," he replied. Her eyes lit with a sudden new interest.

"Since when?" she asked.

"This morning. . . . I've just seen her off."

"Where has she gone?"

"She has had to go north, to Gresham's. . . . A business matter. . . ." She laughed. . . . It grated on his nerves, badly, that laugh of hers.

"Her cousin Oliver is head of Gresh-am's. . . . Did you know?" The cat in her voice was purring now.

"Of course. . . ."

"He has been mad about her for years. . . . Every one said they were going to marry. . . . Don't be a fool, Jim; you know well enough why she has gone. . . ."

Silence, while their look held.

"Oliver Ames," she added.

He drew a breath, and stood quite still. . . . Suddenly she rose, and moved up to him in her thin, angular way, and put her arms up round his neck.

"What do you care . . . while there is . . . me. . . ." she whispered, straining her pale, peaky little face up to his.

For a moment he stood there, passively with Jocelyn clinging round his neck, too dumfounded to do anything, or to think clearly. When he did recover from his astonishment to think anything at all, his first thought was that Jocelyn must suddenly have gone completely mad. He tried unceremoniously to loosen her clinging hands, but she only clung the tighter.

"You do love me, don't you, Jim? And, Jim, I've always loved you. . . . always! Why were you so mad as to go and marry Lucy? What made you do it? Didn't you guess that I cared? Didn't you know? Jim, I thought I'd made it clear. . . ."

He wrenched her hands apart and flung her away.

"Jocelyn, don't be a fool!" he said, roughly. "You're talking utter nonsense."

She stumbled from him, her thin little hands clenched tight over her breast.

"But, Jim, before you met Lucy, you absolutely haunted me. You were always here; you practically lived here. . . . Every one thought you cared for me; every one looked upon you as my property. . . . Why, it was only through us that you met the Greshams at all!"

He laughed shortly.

"Well, if I haunted you, Jocelyn, that was why."

"That you wanted to meet the Greshams?"

"Yes."

"Lucy in particular?"

"Lucy in particular."

"Had you already made up your mind to marry her?"

"Yes; definitely; absolutely; and unchangeably."

She backed away further, looking up with incredulous eyes.

"Then you didn't marry her for love!" she cried, a renewed ring of triumph in her voice. "That much of what she said, was true, at least."

"Did she tell you that?" he asked sharply.

"Oh, she told me everything! But I wasn't sure until now that it was true."

"Why should you be sure now?"

"How could you have loved her before you had even met her?"

"I had met her. But very informally. I wanted to meet her formally."

"One meeting? And you made up your mind to marry her? Those romances are out of date. . . ." she scoffed.

"I'm telling you what is true," he said inflexibly. Her scoffing manner softened.

"Do you really mean it, Jim?" she pleaded. "Do you really mean that you don't love me any more?"

"Any more?" he questioned irritably.

"I never have loved you, Jocelyn. I don't know what's given you this ridiculous idea. Look here, I'm sorry if I've hurt you or offended you in any way, but of course you don't mean all you say. You're exaggerating, aren't you? Something's upset you, and you don't absolutely realize all you are saying. . . ."

She broke down then; sank into the couch, hid her face in her hands and cried bitterly. But he remained unmoved by any pity for her, because she gave way with such a weak abandon, that her giving way only disgusted him further.

"Don't be silly, Jocelyn. For mercy's sake, pull yourself together," he said. She raised a tear-streaked face. There was nothing appealing about that little peaky face all blotched with tears. But again he realized the brutal bluntness of his words, and added: "Of course I know you don't mean it. . . . It's just. . . ." But he got no further. His attempt at soothing her was ill-timed. It flicked her vanity almost more stingingly than his brutal outspokenness had. She sprang up from the couch, her thin little body quivering from head to foot; her pale face white as a sheet; her eyes feverishly bright.

"I don't mean it? And you're sorry if I'm hurt? And I'm to pull myself together. . . . You're sorry. . . ." she cried out, flinging the words back at him with passionate contempt.

"Sorry! Thanks. . . . And I don't mean all I say? Don't I. . . . You think you'll find that I do. . . . I can't pick me up and throw me down when it pleases you, and get away with it. . . ."

"There's no question of it. . . ." he put in, trying to stem the torrent of her words.

"I know your marriage with Lucy is a fiasco. She told me so, herself. . . ." she went on. "She confided the whole thing to me. She told me that she was tired of your coldness toward her; that she was going to get free of you for a bit. . . ." She was inventing wildly now. "A woman can't live on coldness, you know, Jim. No matter how much she loves you—and she made it clear enough that she was frantic about you—indifference will kill it all. . . . Well, you've killed her love for you. . . . D'you understand?"

He had turned from her, but at that he swung back toward her, and the flash of temper he had just shown went suddenly to a blaze in his somber eyes.

"What are you saying?" he demanded through shut teeth.

She was beside herself with baffled emotion and wounded vanity and past caring what she said or whom she injured. She thrust her distorted little face up close to his.

"I'm saying that she's tired of you. . . . Tired of giving all and being given nothing. And she's gone back to a strong, faithful love. . . . D'you understand? She's discovered that she was a fool ever to leave it. She's learned her own heart and is going back to the man she has always belonged to—Oliver Ames. . . . Does that move you. Whether you love her or not, that hasn't quite a nice flavor, has it?"

Her words dinned on his nerves till his control broke and his temper rose, now, to sudden fury.

His hands shot out suddenly and caught her arms.

"Take it back! Take it all back! She didn't say any of it. . . . She didn't tell you any of this. . . . She doesn't love Oliver. . . . You're lying. . . . lying. . . ."

He was shaking her now, and the words were jerking from his lips, harshly, brokenly. . . . He didn't realize how rough he was being; some intense feeling had him by the throat and he was past the point of realizing what he was doing. His impulse was simple: just to punish her for speaking the words that could move him so. . . . Her poor little thin body was as helpless in the strength of his hands as a sapling in a raging storm. When he pushed her away, she stumbled, without any acting this time, back onto the couch, breathless, confused and frightened. But he waited for nothing further; he jammed on his hat and left her, his heart beating out an agony suddenly more poignant than any he had ever known.

Mosquito Said to Have No Use for Naphthalene

Malaria-bearing mosquitoes emulate Santa Claus in some parts of the South. When they find doors and windows screened they come down the chimney, and bearing unwelcome gifts of "fever 'n' ague." But you can keep them out by hanging a little basket of naphthalene, the stuff mothballs are made of, at the top of the chimney. They hate it, and will zoom out of its range as soon as they smell it, no matter how much good biting may lie slumbering below. This is one of the curious facts about mosquito behavior which have been learned by the United States Public Health Service.

Not all mosquitoes will enter houses by coming down chimneys, and it is not known whether all of them can be driven off with naphthalene. One species, however, responds in this way, Anopheles quadrimaculatus, the four-spotted malaria mosquito. But she is important enough to make this bit of entomological knowledge very much worth having.

Famous Negro Physicians

The first negro physician of any standing in this country, of whom there is record was James Derham, also a slave in Philadelphia, 1767. He was taught by his master to compound medicines and attained such skill that he was sold to another doctor, who used him as an assistant. He was enabled to purchase his freedom and moved to New Orleans, where he built up a lucrative practice. The celebrated physician, Dr. Benjamin Rush, published an account of Derham and gave high praise to his skill. The first accredited physician was Dr. John V. De Grasse, who became a member of the Medical Association of Massachusetts in 1854.

STAGE COACH TALES

By E. C. TAYLOR

The Race With Mail

WILLIAM G. BECK, an old stage coach driver of the National road days, lived until recently at Fairfield, Iowa. Nearing eighty years of age, he said he felt like "jumping up and cracking his heels together whenever he heard or read of the men and events on the old National road," and wished he were back there again.

He was the son of James Beck, of the noted bridge building firm of the early decades of the United States, and started driving a stage coach before he was of age. He was born in Uniontown, Pa., in 1819 and went to Iowa to live in 1847, a year after he left the road.

In 1846 he was driving for the "Old Line," the National Road Stage company. Both the "Old Line" and the "Good Intent" line carried the United States mail at that time.

The mail was of two classes, the "lock mail," in leather pouches that was to be speeded west as fast as possible, and the "canvas mail," in canvas bags, which was carried on a slower schedule. The latter was frequently called the "second mail," as it contained what is now second class mail matter.

In December, 1846, the "Old Line" carried the "lock mail" and the "Good Intent" line the "canvas mail." Beck was driving the mail coach for the "Old Line" out of Cumberland, Md., and Jacob Crouch drove the mail stage for the rival company.

Great rivalry existed between the two companies and their drivers over carrying the mail, and races were frequent. On this particular day, Crouch loaded the "canvas mail" aboard his coach immediately after the train arrived at Cumberland, and started off at full speed toward the west.

The "lock mail" was handed to Beck, who had to take it to the post office, where it was overhauled before he could start on his trip, causing him considerable delay. While waiting in front of the Cumberland post office for the mail to be sorted, Jack Shuck and other "Good Intent" line drivers chided Beck with the fact that the "canvas mail" had such a good start that Beck could not get near it.

"I made up my mind," said Beck later, "that if it was in the hides of my two teams I would catch and pass him."

It was after nightfall when Beck got under way, and in crossing a waterway in the Cumberland mountains, his stage coach lamps went out. But what Beck thought was a calamity turned out to be an advantage.

As soon as he had crossed the Willis creek bridge, he put his teams to a full run and never pulled up until he reached Rock Hill, seven miles out of Cumberland.

At that point the road was winding, and he espied the lights of his rival's coach. Crouch, because of the going out of Beck's coach lamps, could not see Beck approaching, although on the long stretches of the road he had kept a careful lookout.

Crouch was very much surprised when Beck pulled up along side of him, and the two raced side by side into Frostburg, Md., lashing their teams at every jump.

Grooms at Frostburg had Beck's second teams hitched to the coach by the time Beck had fairly stopped. A friendly driver ran with the "lock mail" to the Frostburg post office, while another lit the lamps. Beck did not leave his seat.

The reins on the fresh teams were thrown up to him and he was off again in full run. The way mail bag was thrown onto the coach as he dashed past the post office.

Crouch, carrying the "canvas mail," had not had to stop, and had gone on ahead. At Sand Spring, at the foot of Big Savage, Beck passed Crouch. Thereafter he held the lead, trotting his team every inch of the road to Piney Grove, the end of the mail route.

Beck had covered the 22 miles in 2 hours and 10 minutes. Fourteen miles of the way had been up hill, but he pulled into Piney Grove 22 minutes ahead of his rival.

Radio's Effect on Language

Radio has aroused new interest in correct speech and pronunciation. No definite steps have been taken in the United States as yet to standardize English speech as used over the radio, but the British Broadcasting company of England has established a single-standard of radio English by organizing an advisory committee to compose a style sheet for radio announcers. According to David Saranoff, radio has added about 5,000 new words to the English language.

New Style Blacksmithing

The village smithy has taken to the highways and business is excellent, Louis Wanasek, a Wisconsin blacksmith, reports. He admits that the motorized era shoved horseshoeing from the door of his smithy and might have forced him into bankruptcy had he failed to fight the automobile with the automobile. "There are still plenty of horses," he said, "but farmers refuse to drive the poky things to a blacksmith shop." So Wanasek receives orders by telephone, loads tools into his car, and drives to the farms where there is horseshoeing to be done.

Girl at the Top in Health Tests

Millions of boys and girls all over the world, thousands of them right here in the West, are being restored to health and strength by the purely vegetable tonic and laxative known as California Fig Syrup and endorsed by physicians for over 50 years.

Children need no urging to take it. They love its rich, fruity flavor. Nothing can compete with it as a gentle, but certain laxative, and it goes further than this. It gives tone and strength to the stomach and bowels so these organs continue to act normally, of their own accord. It stimulates the appetite, helps digestion.

A Kansas mother, Mrs. Dana Alligre, 610 Monroe St., Topeka, says: "Bonnie B. is absolutely the picture of health, now, with her ruddy cheeks, bright eyes and plump but graceful little body and she stands at the top in every health test."

Much of the credit for her perfect condition is due to California Fig Syrup. We have used it since babyhood to keep her bowels active during colds or any children's ailments and she has always had an easy time with them. She always responds to its gentle urging and is quickly back to normal."

Ask your druggist for California Fig Syrup and look for the word "California" on the carton so you'll always get the genuine.

Special Guests

Marcia L. of Mooresville was planning for a birthday party. Her mother had written out the invitations and told the little girl that she must tell her to whom she must send them.

"Now, Marcia," she said, "think of your best friends, the ones you like best, and I'll send them one of these little cards and they will come to your party."

Marcia studied quite awhile and finally said:

"Mother, I've decided to ask Santa Claus and Jesus to my party."—Indianapolis News.

A Far Better External Remedy

No matter how up to date your doctor is, there is one old-fashioned remedy he often finds most helpful—the mustard plaster. For generations it has been recognized as useful in treating bad colds, particularly where pneumonia is feared. But today many physicians realize that there is something far better in the way of external treatment, giving results never before obtained. It is B. & M., The Penetrating Germicide. For quickly checking coughs and colds it is always dependable. Should always be used where pneumonia threatens or has set in. B. & M. is the only germicide that penetrates when externally applied. There is nothing else like it, no substitute for it. Your druggist should have it in stock. Or we will mail a full-size bottle on receipt of $1.25 and his name. Useful booklet free. F. E. Rollins Co., 53 Beverly St., Boston, Mass. (Adv.)

Meteors and Earth's Weight
To a small extent, the weight of the earth is increased by the fall of meteors. Young estimates the number of meteorites that enter the atmosphere daily at from 15,000,000 to 20,000,000, and the annual total weight at 5,000 to 7,000 tons. But it has an effect in slowing the rotation period of the earth by the increase in its diameter, and so lengthens the day, but only by less than one-thousandth of a second in a million years.
