SCHOOL NOTES

Prepared and Edited by a Committee of the Student Council

High School
R. M. Bogue, formerly superintendent of the local school and now a representative of the Allyn and Bacon Book company, called on us Wednesday afternoon.

School will be closed on both Thursday and Friday of next week for the Thanksgiving vacation.

The botany class is now wrestling with the parsley family. This family is interesting as it contains several members that are used for human consumption, as well as several members that are very poisonous.

The Senior class will sponsor the Thanksgiving assembly program next Wednesday afternoon. This program will begin at 1:15 and all patrons of the school are welcome to attend.

Jack Nelen has been absent the last two weeks due to illness.

The high school—profited about forty dollars on our magazine sale. The contest was won by the Navy team, led by Dorothy Roach.

CELEBRATE 50TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

On November 12th, 1881, John Ristow and Miss Augusta Wojahn were united in holy wedlock here in Tawas City. The 12th instant marked the fiftieth anniversary of this important event in their lives. Their children were desirous to commemorate this event with a fitting celebration, which was held at the Ristow home on Thursday evening of last week.

The evening festivities began with a religious service. The service was opened by singing the hymn, "The Lord hath helped me hitherto." Pastor Walter Voss, Immanuel Lutheran church, delivered an address based on Ps. 126, 3, "The Lord hath done great things for us; whereof we are glad." Beata Wuggazer, a grandchild, sang "The Lord Is My Shepherd." She was accompanied on the piano by another grandchild, Elvira Kasischke. Pastor Voss then read the fiftieth wedding anniversary marriage formula from the book of prayers. Then Pastor A. Wuggazer, a son-in-law, read a poem which he dedicated to the couple. The religious service was concluded by singing "Now Thank We All Our God."

The home and the tables were beautifully decorated for the occasion. Fifty-three partook of the wedding dinner and were served by six granddaughters of Mr. and Mrs. Ristow.

Immediately following the dinner a program was rendered, Pastor A. Wuggazer being master of ceremonies. The first number on the program was the singing of "Put On Your Old Gray Bonnet," by all the grandchildren present. Next the toastmaster called on each of the sons-in-law. All responded with a suitable toast. A poem, "Grandpa," was recited by grandson Roland Buch. Pastor W. Voss and Teacher W. Woltmann responded to toasts.

A monologue, "Si and I," was given by granddaughter Elvira Kasischke. Then toasts were given by the other relatives and friends present.

The next number was the musical reading, "Grandma's Patchwork Quilt," given by granddaughter Marie Wuggazer. Then a brief history of each child of the honored couple was read by Pastor A. Wuggazer. At this juncture, John Ristow, Jr., as groom and his sister, Virginia Ristow, as bride, marched to the couple, little Johnnie carrying a basket filled with gifts, mostly gold, and cards and letters and telegrams of congratulation.

November P.-T. A. Meeting Held Last Thursday Evening

The November meeting of the local P.-T. A. was held at the school building Thursday evening of last week.

An added feature for future meetings of the P.-T. A. will be a question box. There will be a brief discussion of questions presented by members of the association.

The award for rooms having most parents present each month will be a new book. A book will also be given the room which has the largest attendance throughout the year.

The seventh and eighth grade room received the award for the month of November.

A musical program arranged by Miss Sage followed the business meeting. Two numbers, "Floating With the Tide" and "Moonlit Meadows" were sung by the Girls' Glee club. Superintendent Swanson of East Tawas then gave an address on music. He emphasized the effect of music on children's lives and characters, stressing especially the fact that music should be encouraged in the home by the parents as well as in the schools.

The program concluded with a piano solo by Ilene Nevanpa. Refreshments and a social hour followed.

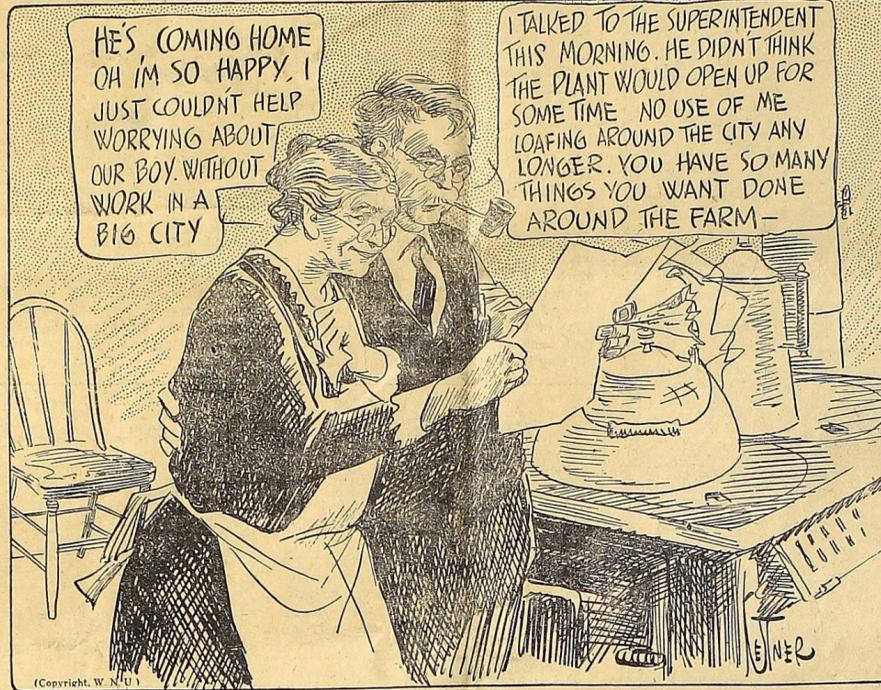

NEW FILM EXPOSES LIVES OF RICH FAMILIES

Not until you see "Mother's Millions," which is playing at the State Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday, November 25 and 26, for the benefit of the Ladies Auxiliary, American Legion, East Tawas, will you be able to know the real trials and tribulations of the rich. The story of this picture gives an inside view of a home of the richest woman in the world. Also given is the real low-down on why rich girls want to run away with the chauffeur and why the sons of millionaires are easy-marks for the chorus girls and blackmailers.

It is worth seeing, and incidentally, you will have the extreme pleasure of witnessing one of the most remarkable performances of this year's screen successes, that of May Robson in a part which fits her like a glove. James Hall, Lawrence Gray and Frances Dade head the supporting cast.

Also shown on these nights will be a four-reel featurette, "First to Fight." Slim Summerville has the leading role in this comedy special that brings the famous and funny doughboy into the Marines.

The Silver Lining

Many Local Men Fill Their Deer Licenses

Deer are plentiful this year, if the number of cars carrying bucks which passed through the city is any criterion. Many local men have been fortunate in filling their licenses.

Wm. Rhodes of Sherman and Joseph Dimmick of East Tawas were the first in the county to report killing deer. Rhodes killed his deer early enough Sunday morning to have venison for breakfast. Dimmick shot his within a few minutes after he had gone out. Joseph Jordan shot a deer Monday at McIvor. Some of those in the city who shot their deer early in the week were Fred Musolf, Fred Rempet, Dr. C. F. Smith, M. C. Musolf, Wm. Wendt, Sr., Duncan Bell.

Deer hunters in Michigan this year will have an opportunity to express their opinions and to report their observations to the Department of Conservation through a report card now being sent to each conservation officer for general distribution among the hunters.

The cards ask the hunter to report where they hunted; the county and the general locality. They ask if the hunters shot a buck and if so how many points did he have and how much did he weigh. The same information is asked for a camp deer.

The hunter is asked how many days he hunted and the numbers of bucks, does and fawns seen. Other questions asked are: "How many years have you hunted in this locality? Do you favor the one buck law? Did you get a bear? Number of bear seen?" Space is given on the card for the hunter to make remarks and comments on the deer situation.

CLARK GABLE IS GRETA GARBO'S NEW LEADING MAN

The answer to many a maiden's prayer is to be found in the teaming of Greta Garbo and Clark Gable in "Susan Lenox, Her Fall and Rise," which plays Thanksgiving Day and Friday, November 26 and 27, at the Family Theatre, East Tawas.

It was a happy and wise decision that made the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer officials cast this engaging newcomer opposite the famous Swedish star. Gable is right at the top of the ladder in the estimation of fans and his work in the Garbo picture would seem to assure his early bid for stardom.

Garbo is magnificent as the heroine of the David Graham Phillips story which Robert Z. Leonard directed. Modernized as it is, the dramatic regeneration theme makes ideal material for Garbo. She accomplishes the greatest individual characterization of all her talkie efforts.

Leonard's fine direction keeps the picture moving at a rapid tempo, reaching a gripping climax after a most novel cross-section showing the disintegration of the girl who climbed from obscurity to power due to her consuming love for the man who first led her astray.

"Bad Company" was adapted to the screen by Thomas Buckingham and Tay Garnett. In the cast which supports Miss Twelvetrees, besides Ricardo Cortez, are John Garrick, Paul Hurst, Harry Carey, William V. Mong, Emma Dunn, Frank Conroy and others.

HOLD B. Y. P. U. RALLY AT RENO BAPTIST CHURCH

The young folks of the lower half of the Alpena Baptist Association met at the Reno Baptist church on Friday, November 13th, for a rally and to make plans for the carrying out of the B. Y. P. U. work for the next three months. After the meeting, all repaired to the basement of the church for a hot lupper.

Following is the list of churches that sent delegates and the number from each church: Goodard, 7; Hale, 17; Reno, 9; Prescott, 7; Hemlock Road, 12; Tawas City, 23. Curran, Curtisville and Twining did not send delegates. In all, approximately one hundred twenty-five were present, including visitors.

After the opening services several of the different groups gave a special feature representing that particular church. Miss Edna Greve of Hale gave a special selection on the organ after which Reno gave a monologue, "Thelma's trip and her letter back home." The Hemlock group rendered a song, "Life's Railway to Heaven," and the Tawas City group brought to the assembly that stirring song, "We Have a Story to Tell to the Nations."

After the entire assembly sang "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," Rev. Frank Metcalf of Tawas City closed the meeting with prayer.

The next meeting will be with the Prescott church in three months.

HELEN TWELVETREES HAS LEAD IN "BAD COMPANY"

The motion picture star, director, and "heavy" who produced "Her Man," one of the acknowledged outstanding photoplays of 1930, have been brought together again for "Bad Company," which plays at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Tuesday and Wednesday, November 24 and 25.

The star is Helen Twelvetrees, beautiful screen favorite who sprang to prominence with "Her Man" and who has attained even greater heights through her brilliant performances in "Millie" and "A Woman of Experience."

The director is Tay Garnett, now considered one of the finest of the younger directors after years of motion picture experience as a writer.

"Bad Company" was adapted to the screen by Thomas Buckingham and Tay Garnett. In the cast which supports Miss Twelvetrees, besides Ricardo Cortez, are John Garrick, Paul Hurst, Harry Carey, William V. Mong, Emma Dunn, Frank Conroy and others.

WILBER MAN WOUNDED BY DEER HUNTER

Russell Schaaf, age 23 years, of Wilber township, was seriously wounded Monday, having been shot by a person whose identity is not known. The bullet entered his back at the shoulder, coming out at the fourth rib, but did not pierce the lungs. While the young man was greatly weakened by the loss of blood, he has a good chance to recover.

According to Schaaf's statements, he was dragging a deer from the brush at the time of the shooting. Stooping over to adjust the tag on the carcass of the dead animal, he was shot. His assailant, who must have been quite near when the shot was made, apparently ran away from the scene when he discovered that he had shot Schaaf.

Crawling on his hands and knees to a clearing, Schaaf shouted and attracted the attention of his brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Schaaf, who were a short distance away in the woods. Schaaf was brought to his home in Wilber and the sheriff's office notified late in the afternoon.

Conservation Officer Arthur Leitz and members of the sheriff's department are conducting an investigation into the accident. Sheriff Charles Miller said that while every effort was being made to trace the hunter who fired the shot, it looked improbable that they would discover his identity.

Schaaf is under the care of Dr. S. E. Summers of East Tawas. The wounded man has a wife and one child.

ARENAC INDEPENDENT MOVED INTO NEW HOME

The Arenac Independent of Standish has been moved into its handsome new building. We wish to congratulate the owners, H. M. Myers and Floyd Perlberg.

Ella Ross Will Be Michigan 4-H Club Representative

Miss Ella Ross of Reno township, Isoc county, will be Michigan's representative in the National 4-H Girls' Style Dress Revue Contest to be held at the tenth national boys' and girls' 4-H club congress in Chicago, November 27 to December 5, state club leader A. G. Kettunen has reported to the national committee on boys and girls club work.

Ella will model a tailored wood dress of her own making in the national contest. To the high scoring individual in each of the four divisions of the national contest, the Chicago Mail Order Company will award a three-weeks educational tour to the shrines of American history in July, 1932. The national winner will also receive a solid gold medal of honor. Gold wrist watches will be awarded the second and third high scoring contestants in each of the four classes of the contest.

Thanksgiving

Come, ye thankful people, come,
Raise the song of harvest-home:
All is safely gathered in,
Ere the winter storms begin;
God, our maker, doth provide
For our wants to be supplied:
Come to God's own temple, come,
Raise the song of harvest-home.

Made Day National

Persistent Woman Editor
United the Nation in Giving Thanks.

The impression seems to prevail in some quarters that the women of the United States never accomplished anything worth while before they were given the right to vote. Talk of that character is a million miles from the truth. The women of America have always been doing fine, big, worthwhile things. H. O. Bishop writes in the National Republic.

At this particular season of the year it is appropriate to tell about the woman who, after twenty years of patient effort, succeeded in having an annual Thanksgiving celebration in this country observed on the same day by all of the people.

The name of this woman was Mrs. Sarah Josepha Hale. Few women, either before or since, have accomplished more big things for the betterment of men and women. Probably few persons of the present generation have ever heard of this gifted woman. She was born at Newport, N. H., October 24, 1788, and died in Philadelphia, April 30, 1879. She was not a college woman, but was taught by her mother. In 1813, at the age of twenty-five, she married a lawyer, David Hale, a brother of Salma Hale, historian and at one time a member of congress from New Hampshire. Nine years later she was left a widow with five children. She was a genuine, old-fashioned American woman, and did not clamor for governmental or individual aid. She was quite content to go to work. In 1828 she became editor of the Ladies' Magazine, which had recently been started in Boston. She successfully edited this publication until 1837, when it was merged with Goddard's Ladies' Book. She continued with the latter publication until 1877.

Much Work Well Done.

Editing a magazine is usually considered a pretty big job in itself. Mrs. Hale, however, seemed to find time for many other things. She organized the Seaman's Aid society in Boston, which is the parent of similar organizations now existing in most ports. The completion of the Bunker Hill monument was also partly due to the efforts of this little woman. She persuaded the women of New England to raise $50,000 for that purpose.

The plan of educating women for medical and missionary service in foreign lands was inaugurated by Mrs. Hale. She devoted a number of years to this effort, finally succeeding through the organization of the Ladies' Medical Missionary society of Philadelphia, and the Woman's Union Missionary Society for Heathen Lands, in New York.

Throughout her editorial work Mrs. Hale urged the practical advancement of women, advocating their employment as teachers and the establishment of seminaries for their higher education.

Thanksgiving in 1777.

It was in the early forties that Mrs. Hale began her campaign for making Thanksgiving a national holiday and its celebration on the same day all over the country. It was then the custom for different localities to observe the occasion on whatever day happened to strike their fancy.

Following the surrender of Burgoyne at Saratoga in 1777, the Continental congress had appointed a committee to recommend joint thanksgiving for "the signal success lately obtained over the enemies of the United States."

In 1778 Thanksgiving was set for December 30, most of the states concurring in a uniform date, but there were other Thanksgivings in May, June and December as the various states saw fit to order them.

It was not until January, 1795, that Washington was authorized by congress to proclaim a national Thanksgiving, which he did for February 19.

For twenty years Mrs. Hale wrote editorials in her magazine, and personal letters to governors and Presidents, in behalf of a national Thanksgiving day. Her efforts and patience were rewarded in 1863, when Abraham Lincoln saw the wisdom of her suggestions and decided to adopt the plan. From that day to this Thanksgiving has been celebrated by the entire nation the last Thursday of November.

After the 1795 day of Thanksgiving in February, the festival was skipped for twenty years. In 1815, when peace with Great Britain followed the War of 1812, congress resolved that "a joint committee of both houses wait upon the President of the United States and request that he recommend a day of Thanksgiving to be observed by the people of the United States with religious solemnity and the offering of devout acknowledgments to God for his mercies and in prayer to him for the continuance of his blessings."

Long Lapse After 1815.

The day fixed for observance was April 13, 1815, but thereafter Thanksgiving as a national celebration fell by the wayside, not to be revived until Mrs. Hale's campaign moved President Lincoln to act in 1863.

Mrs. Hale's persistent efforts had won favor for the idea in most states by the time the Civil war had arrived. Some states already had begun the

GIVE THANKS FOR "GOODLY TURKEY"

HOW well I remember that old Thanksgiving dinner! Father at one end and mother at the other end, the children between and wondering if father ever will get done carving the turkey.

The day before at school, we had learned that Greece was south of Turkey, but on the table we found that Turkey was bounded by grease. The brown surface waited for the fork to plunge astride the breastbone, and with knife sharpened on the jamba of the fireplace, lay bare the folds of white meat.

Give to the disposed to be sentimental, the heart. Give to the one disposed to music the drumstick. Give to the one disposed to theological discussion the "parson's nose."

Then the pies! For the most part a lost art. What mince pies! In which you had all confidence, fashioned from all rich ingredients, instead of miscellaneous leavings which are only short of glorified hash! Not mince pies with profound mysteries of origin! But mother made them, and laid the lower crust and the upper crust, with here and there a puncture by the fork to let you look through the light and flaky surface into the substance beneath.

observance of a fall Thanksgiving day, nearly ten years before the national day in November was set aside. New York was one of these, and her representatives in congress tried repeatedly to induce that body to name a day. In 1863 there were actually two Thanksgivings days, the northern states having observed one in August for the victory at Gettysburg.

Following the assassination of Lincoln, Mrs. Hale feared the holiday might be allowed to drop. She urged the necessity of keeping the national fall festival as a "Thanks day for all good things given us by the Heavenly

Mrs. Sarah Josepha Hale.

Father." Mrs. Hale wrote to ministers all over the country, urging them to help.

The First Congregational church of Washington responded to Mrs. Hale's plea, and sent a delegation to President Andrew Johnson requesting him to issue a Thanksgiving proclamation. He accepted and the Presidents since have followed his example without being petitioned, the states issuing separate proclamations in keeping with the national edict.

Mrs. Hale wrote many books and poems. The most famous of her poems were "Mary's Lamb," "The Light of Home" and "It Snows." Perhaps the best known of her works is "Woman's Record, or Sketches of All Distinguished Women From the Creation to the Present Day," first published in 1853, and enlarged in 1869. She went on writing verses and jingles for children, articles and novels for grown persons and editing her magazine until shortly before her death in 1879, at which time she was ninety-one years old.

THANKS is one of the things we forget. We take our blessings as a matter of course. We seldom say a word about them—although we kick like steers when things don't go right. So let's stop complaining long enough to say "Thank You."—Grit.

Thanksgiving

Let us pause a moment in our daily deliberations and give thanks for the many blessings we have received. Thankful for our health, our good friends, the rewards for honest toil, and the community and nation whose prosperity is our ever-present concern. Let us be thankful of the right to be alive, no matter how hard the road of life may be; and it will help us to know that the sunshine always comes after the storm and the rainbow of prosperity is just ahead.—"Emy" Smith.

PETER TELLS MRS. PETER ALL ABOUT IT

When things look dark, pray, do not quit. Get busy then and use your wit.

IT IS by doing just this that Peter Rabbit has succeeded in getting out of all kinds of scrapes. If Peter were the kind to give up easily he long ago would have made a good dinner for Reddy Fox or Old Man Coyote, or Hooty the Owl or Roughleg the Hawk, or some other of those who have a fondness for rabbit.

When Peter told Mrs. Peter that in letting Bowser the Hound keep close to his heels all the way through the Green Forest and half way across the Green Meadows to the dear Old Brier Patch he had been fooling Old Man Coyote, she didn't know what to think.

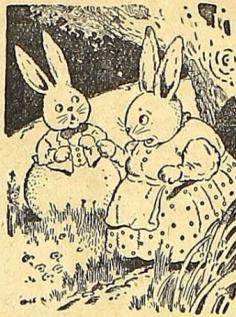

"What did Old Man Coyote have to do with it?" she demanded just a wee bit crossly, for she had been terribly frightened as she watched Peter seemingly having such hard work to keep out of the clutches of Bowser the Hound. "I didn't see him anywhere."

Peter chuckled. "It was this way, my dear," he began. "I was sitting near the pond of Paddy the Beaver over in the Green Forest last night where Honker the Goose and eleven of his followers were fast asleep. When I saw Old Man Coyote and Reddy and Granny Fox hide close to the edge of the pond. By and by I saw that some of those sleeping geese were drifting in right toward them. I wait-ter with his tail, and that made them open their eyes in a hurry. The instant I had thumped I ran, for I knew that the nearest hiding place was an old bramble-tangle, and that was a long way off, and I felt sure that Old Man Coyote would try to get even with me for spoiling his chance of getting a fat goose. Half way there I stopped to listen, which was a very foolish thing to do. Old Man Coyote almost caught me there.

"He's smart, Old Man Coyote is. I never realized until last night how smart he is. You see, he knew that the nearest place of safety for me was that old bramble-tangle, and he guessed that I would do just what I did do—stop before I got there. So the instant I thumped he started for the bramble-tangle to try to catch me, and he nearly did it, too. Just look at my tail. Did you ever see such a looking tail?" Peter twisted around and looked mournfully at the ragged little white bunch which he called a tail.

"He's so nearly caught me that he pulled a bunch of hair out of my tail just as I reached the bramble-tangle. I never before had such a narrow escape in all my life. Then he told me that I never would get back to dear Old Brier Patch unless I got him a fat goose to make up for the one I had cheated him out of by waking Honker and the others and I knew by the way he said it that he meant it. Of course, he knew that I couldn't, and wouldn't if I could, get him a goose. It was his way of telling me that he meant to catch me. Then he trotted away, and

The Old Gardener Says:

MANY garden makers are obtaining much satisfaction by the use of peat-moss as a mulch. This is especially true in sections where there has been a prolonged drought. Granulated peat-moss is a better mulch than stable litter or grass. It prevents the evaporation of moisture from the soil and enables the garden maker to avoid hours of cultivation. When a mulch of this kind is spread over the perennial bed it serves a useful purpose by conserving moisture, and becomes a fertilizer when dug in as a part of the spring work. Moreover, it helps to protect the roots during the winter. In some gardens this plan of using peat as a mulch has been extended to the rose bed, with decided success.

How I Carry On

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

IF I am part of all the past,
If dead men's souls still live
In me,
If rocks are only rocks re-cast,
Each oak the acorn of some tree,
If I am part of what is gone,
I wonder how I carry on?

This boulder traveled from the north
Upon some glacier's icy blast,
That they who journeyed back and forth
Along this road might pause and rest,
And yet how many men in me
Will find a little charity?

This oak tree, when an oak tree fell,
Rose from its roots and spread its shade;
And, when the sun beat down as well,
How much of shadow have I made
To cool some other fellow's brow
As this old oak tree cools me now?

And, if some mortal loved the right,
And died, who had so bravely fought,
How well did I take up the fight,
Or was his struggle all for naught?
I took his gifts, but now he's gone,
I wonder how I carry on?

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

A dainty food especially good for an invalid and simple to prepare is:

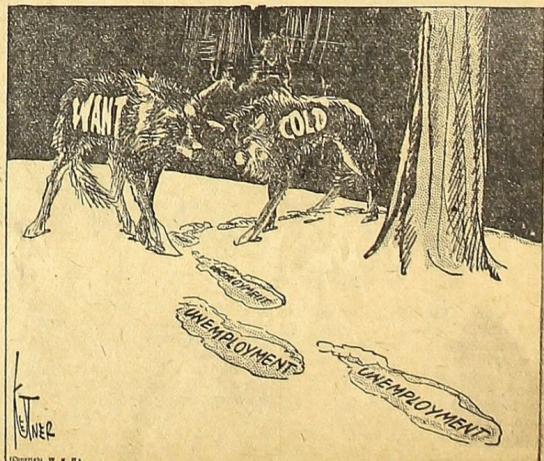

Chicken Custard.

Take three tablespoonfuls of finely chopped and pounded chicken, one-half cupful of bread crumbs, two well beaten eggs, a pinch of salt and one of celery salt, a cupful of milk. Mix thoroughly, pour into well greased custard cups and place in a pan of water. Bake in a moderate oven until the custard is set. Serve hot.

Turkey Stuffing.

Crumb a good sized loaf of bread, chop two medium sized onions and fry until soft in one cupful of butter; when tender but not brown, pour over the bread crumbs, mix lightly, add one cupful of finely cut celery, two hard cooked eggs chopped, one cupful of broken walnut meats, a pair of cooked sweetbreads, salt, pepper and minced parsley. Mix well, fill the turkey, adding a few nice olives at intervals. Do not pack too tightly. If a plainer dressing is desired sweet-

The DAIRY

BEST TO DISPOSE OF "LEAKING" COW

Percentage of Cures Shown to Be Small.

Many high producing milk cows will be seen with the milk dripping or streaming from their udder for some time before the usual milking time. The owners of such cows will be desirous of learning how to prevent this loss of milk. Usually there is only one way to prevent that is generally satisfactory, and that is to milk these cows often enough to prevent the distention of the udder which causes this leaking. By milking these cows three or four times a day, this loss usually is prevented. Since many owners do not find it convenient to do this, it is usually best to dispose of these animals.

Several different treatments have been advocated for this condition, but none of them promise sufficient results to warrant their being generally used. Under no condition should rubber bands be placed around the teats nor should the teats be tied off with tape. Where the leakers are not too bad, occasionally the openings in the end of the teat can be contracted slightly by painting with tincture of iodine or by making a saturated solution of alum and injecting it just inside the opening. Most owners find any of these treatments too troublesome to be practical.

When the cow is a persistent leaker and leaks away a good quantity of her milk, it is usually best to dispose of her unless she is an exceptionally valuable cow for breeding purposes, as the percentages of recoveries are so very small that it hardly seems desirable to keep such cows in the herd unless they are exceptionally valuable. —Montreal Herald.

Impossible to Find Any Profit in "Scrub" Cows

When the prices of butterfat and feed are normal, ten cows producing an average of 100 pounds of fat per annum will earn $135. Under the same conditions one cow producing 400 pounds of butterfat will earn $138. When you multiply the butterfat production of a cow four times, you multiply your income ten times and you cut your feed costs per pound of butterfat in half.

It is suggested that out of the more than a million cows milked in Texas there must be a very large number that never make a profit for their owners. How much better it would be to sell six scrubs for butchering purposes and buy one good cow.

When scrub cows are sold to other farmers for dairy purposes the industry has not been helped. Every non-profitable cow should be disposed of, even at sacrifice in price, to the butcher or killed and canned for home consumption. What we need in the Southwest is fewer and better cows. —Farm and Ranch.

Kill Lice in Calves

The problem of lice on calves, and especially calves, in the winter is difficult to control but by using certain well-known methods as recommended by J. B. Fitch, Kansas state college, the insects can be eradicated.

"Probably the most efficient treatment for lice in an application of a 2 per cent solution of a coal-tar dip to all parts of the calf's body. A second treatment, a week or ten days later, will usually eliminate most of the trouble. This treatment should be applied only when calves are in a warm place and can be rubbed dry. During severe weather a mixture of equal parts of kerosene and lard, or a good commercial louse powder will usually control the lice. Through cleaning and disinfecting of the calf shed will also help to control the lice."

Curing "Sucking" Cow

A cow that has formed the habit of sucking the other cows usually as difficult to break. A writer in Hoard's Dairyman states that he has had this trouble with two animals in his herd and cured both of them by putting bits in their mouth, securing them there with a small rope running over the head, halter fashion, and a piece of baling wire for a throat latch. The halter must not be tight enough that the bit binds in the corners of the mouth, as this causes the mouth to get sore and they will refuse to graze or eat. The directions are to use a common light snaffle bit. The bit is left in the mouth for several weeks and when removed the habit is cured. At least, it was so in the case of this writer.

DAIRY FACTS

The composition of milk is, with small variations, 87 per cent water, 3.7 per cent fat, 3.5 per cent protein, 5 per cent lactose, and 0.8 per cent ash.

In spite of low prices for dairy products the present trend in the number of milk cows in the country as a whole seems to be distinctly upward, according to the bureau of agricultural economics.

How People Play

The Philippine Slapping Game.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

WITH interest in miniature golf waning, enterprising members of the "play industry" in a western city substituted fishing poles for golf clubs, fish for golf balls, and transformed the diminutive golf courses into fishing ponds, thus ushering in the "pee wee fishing grounds."

Play knows neither geographical boundary, nor historical limit. There was a law among the Persians by which all children were to be taught three things: horsemanship, shooting with the bow, and telling the truth.

Carthaginians and Phoenicians owed something of their maritime glory to a love of swimming, the sport by which they first mastered their fear of the sea. One wonders whether the more rapid strides made in England toward the political emancipation of women may not be traceable to the ardor of British women for outdoor exercise and sports.

Climate often determines the way a people play. It is obvious that coasting is popular in a zone where snow falls, and reasonable that those peoples most generally proficient in swimming should be found in the equatorial islands, where limpid waters invite surcease from the scorching sun; but less well known, perhaps, that card and board games developed in southern Asia, where zest for play is just as keen, but temperature dampens the ardor for exertion. To the Netherlands is traced the origin of silt and skate which even yet have their work-a-day use in flooded and frozen areas, but to the rest of the world they are playthings. Norway once had a regiment of skaters and Holland's soldiers were taught to drill and play on ice.

Just as the individual adopts games which meet his bodily needs, so national pastimes are modified to foster and fortify the peoples who play them. In the age of personal combat, there were men like Milo of Crotona, a veritable Samson, reputed to have been able to break a cord wound about his head by swelling the muscles; or Polydamas of Thessalia, said to have slain an infuriated lion, and to have been able to hold a chariot in its place while horses tugged at it.

Those were the times when boxing and wrestling, most ancient of sports, were in their heyday, though they were not always gentlemen's diversions, reckoned by modern standards.

Missile-Throwing Games.

When missile-throwing became the technique of warfare the Italian city youth reduced stone-throwing to a fine art, and in winter made use of snowballs on fete days. In Perugia as many as 2,000 would engage in this game. Defensive armor was worn but many fatalities resulted. Old English laws encouraged archery, and Charlemagne sought to popularize the sport. Play and love of competition have often been the mother of invention. The great automobile races have revolutionized the automobile industry. Benjamin Franklin, employing a boy's familiar plaything, snatched from the clouds a secret that outdoes the pranks of a magic carpet. On the other hand invention made popular certain ways to play. For example the invention of the rubber bladder was a boon to the game of football and the gutta-percha ball added immensely to the popularity of golf.

Theodore Roosevelt's influence is generally accounted in social, political, economic and literary fields; yet time may show that one of the most profound lessons he impressed upon American people was a deeper regard for healthful, vigorous, strenuous outdoor sport.

The story of how the weakling Roosevelt went to the open places of the West and played at broncho-busting and cattle-herding and later relaxed in African jungle from seven years in the hardest job in the world, is an oft-told tale. Such an uprooting of one's life, thanks to our national parks, is not necessary today. More and more it is the habit of young men and old to seek the health-giving recreations to be had in Uncle Sam's matchless play places.

Walking is one of the most healthful and invigorating "games" and is free to everyone. Yet it is much neglected by Americans. Perhaps the automobile is to blame in some degree; but the fact that walking is deliberate and lacking in that element so dear to the American heart, competition, also must be taken into account. To the seasoned pedestrian, "joy riding" cannot compare with "joy walking."

The instinct is universal.

Sports of a nation afford an almost invariable barometer of its progress in civilization. Baseball is one of the most complicated and highly organized pastimes known to any people. It is a veritable instrument of the most delicate precision in the world of sport. A South Sea Islander no more could play it than he could operate a linotype machine or deftly handle the paper money in a bank teller's cage.

Yet the instincts baseball satisfies—the zest of racing to a goal ahead of the ball, the deep satisfaction of diverting a swiftly moving object to serve his own ends, the mere impact of the speeding sphere against the instrument he controls, basking the spheroid as it flies afield, the suspense of nine men as they await the batter's fate—each and all find their counterpart in play as old as animals that walk on two feet and have enough gray matter atop their spinal columns to control nature's laws for their human purposes.

The foot-race was the most popular of the 24 Olympian events. Romans batted balls with the forearm swathed with bandages, and the Gilbert Islanders wrap coconut shells with cord so they will rebound to a blow from the open palm; Homer's princess of Phaeacia is represented in the Odyssey as jumping to catch a ball tossed by her maids of honor; and the Chinese had a game in which a suspended ball was kept hurtling to and fro by blows from the players.

Wrestling is much older than Greece, as indicated by bouts pictured on tombs along the Nile. In Greece boxing fell into disfavor among the Spartans for an unusual reason. The Greeks had developed sportsmanlike rules for the game, eliminating kicking, biting and ear pulling, and the bout closed when one boxer admitted his defeat. Lycurgus held it improper for any Spartan to acknowledge defeat, even in a game. Boxing and wrestling have been popular sports in Japan for ages.

Running, throwing, hitting and kicking are the fundamental muscular operations of America's characteristic sports—baseball, football, tennis and golf. The peoples of antiquity manifested all these instincts in cruder form. Luzon hillmen, the Polynesians and the Eskimo and Sumatra Islanders had games played by kicking a ball. Greeks played it, and the Roman game, harpastum, derived its name from the Greek "I seize" which is evidence that carrying a ball was practised then.

In old England football was even rougher than most sports of those hardy times. James I thought it was "meeter for laiming than making able the user thereof." Edward II frowned upon it for its interference with archery and also because of the commotion it aroused. In those times it was played in the city streets. A writer of the sixteenth century called it a "devilish pastime" and charged it with inciting "envy and sometimes brawling murder and homicide."

Tennis Goes Far Back.

One must also go back to the Greeks and Romans for the origin of tennis. In the twelfth century a game with ball and plaited gut bat was played on horseback. Then came "La boude" in which the horse was abandoned. Louis X died after excessive playing of the game. Henry VIII was a devotee of the game. Until the sixteenth century the hand was used for batting the ball, but soon the racket came into general use.

If tennis has a royal lineage, golf, which was later regarded as a rich man's game had most plebeian beginnings. Contrary to widespread belief, it seems not to have originated in Scotland, but in northern Europe. Apparently it was first played on ice, being one of the winter sports adapted to the physical geography of the Low countries. By the fifteenth century golf had attained such vogue in Scotland that it threatened the cherished archery, and it was classed with "futeball" and other "unprofitable sports" by James IV.

America's love of play is a distinctive part of her Anglo-Saxon heritage. Where two or more English-speaking people get together, be it in Bagdad or Buenos Aires, their common tongue makes the point of contact, but it generally is their love of active play that forms the tie that binds their comradeship.

STAGE COACH TALES

By E. C. TAYLOR

Breaking Up a Whig Parade

GEORGE FISHER was one of the best known stage coach drivers on the old National pike in the 1840's. He was noted for his manipulation of fiery steeds.

There was a fractious team at Claysville, Pa., that was the terror of all the drivers on that section of the road. It had "run off" once, killing one passenger and injuring several, on Caldwell's hill, seven miles west of Washington, Pa.

Every driver who had been given the team had despaired of taming these fiery horses, so Fisher was sent for. He had been driving out of Washington, Pa., and after taking charge of the team he soon had it under control. He drove it many years without an accident.

Fisher was driving this team in 1844, during the celebrated political contest between James K. Polk and Henry Clay, opposing candidates for the Presidency. Fisher was an ardent supporter of Polk, and bitter in his enmity toward the Whigs.

One day in 1844 there was a large mass meeting of Whigs in Washington, Pa. An "extra" coach, specially chartered, passed over the road going west, with Fisher at the reins, going from Claysville to Roney's Point.

There was a delay just beyond the state line of West Virginia. A delegation of Whigs, flaunting banners and with music blaring, were en route from West Alexander to Washington to attend the mass meeting.

On their return home in the evening, while they were parading along the National pike, with banners flying and bands playing, they were overhauled by George Fisher and his coach.

Fisher drove his teams, one of which was the famous "unbroken" span he had mastered years before, and his coach into the Whig procession at several points. Buggies were damaged, carriages and light wagons broken, and several persons were injured.

Colin Wilson, a prominent citizen of Washington, Pa., was one of the injured. The town of Washington demanded that Fisher be held to account for his action, and the resultant investigation stirred that section of the country as nothing else had done for years.

Fisher explained that the "bad" team he was driving became frightened when it encountered the banners and the music. He claimed that the breaking up of the Whig procession was unintentional, was just an accident.

The reputation of his team was well known, especially in the vicinity of Washington, Pa., and his explanation served as a plausible excuse. The fame of the team saved Fisher from prosecution and probable severe punishment.

But the Whigs of that neighborhood went to their graves solemnly believing that Fisher did it on purpose.

Fisher in later years would not discuss the incident, but he intimated to his many friends that the team must have known the paraders were Whigs, and had the same feeling toward them that he had.

The same team, just before Fisher took the reins, had made a reputation as "killers." One man had been killed and several injured in a mad dash of the horses.

A few days before Fisher took charge of the recalcitrant team, the horses dashed down the long hill from the locust tree at Caldwell's tavern, to Wickert's bridge.

A Mr. Moses—He never was identified further—was seriously injured; the driver was severely hurt and three passengers were injured.

Mr. Moses, a Kentucky merchant, suffered a badly crushed leg. He died two days later in the hospital at Washington, Pa.

The driver of the stage coach was so seriously injured that he did not recover until the next spring. He spent the winter recuperating at the Caldwell tavern.

The other passengers in the coach were not injured.

Lightning and Autos

The bureau of standards says that the fact that automobiles are supported on rubber tires would probably have no appreciable effect on the probability of the automobiles being struck by lightning. Likewise, the wetting of the automobile by rain would probably produce no appreciable effect. The inclosure effected by the automobiles would probably afford some degree of protection to persons within. Persons within a conducting inclosure are safe against lightning. The automobile body, although the inclosure is in a large measure effected by glass, approaches this condition.

First English Letter

Sir John Pelham is stated to have been the first to receive a private letter written in the English language. It was sent by his wife in 1399. Latin was the language in which letters and communications of every kind were written to the time of the accession of Edward I. French continued to predominate as the language of correspondence until the reign of Edward III. An act of parliament then provided that the English language should in future be the language of legislation, and the French language, which had been spoken since the conquest, ceased to be used.

NATIONAL CITY SCHOOL NEWS

Alberta Hammon, Editor. The attendance for last week was perfect.

A certain boy in school moved his seat on account of a certain girl. For art last Friday we made logs out of paper to make a log cabin for Thanksgiving.

Miss Earhart from Hale visited our school last Friday and taught some of our classes.

The pupils have started a savings account. Whoever puts the most in his bank during the week gets a gold star. Delbert Freel and Alberta Hamman have two gold stars each, and Virginia Riley and Glenn Freel have one each.

Our teacher made a temperature chart this week. Alberta Hamman reads it at 8:30, 10:30, 1:30 and 3:30.

Mavis Schuster and Clayton Schuster had their teeth fixed. There are three pupils who have their names on the dental honor roll chart now. They are Annabell Nichols, Clayton Schuster and Mavis Schuster.

The seventh grade had examinations in geography Thursday.

Most of the pupils are trying to stand by the health rules that we have every morning.

The pupils are having a party for Thanksgiving. The school had a drill on arithmetic Monday.

Virginia Riley and Annabell Nichols were scared by a house and some boys. They thought the house was a lynx and ran all the way to school.

POISON
in Your bowels!

Poisons absorbed into the system from souring waste in the bowels, cause that dull, headachy, sluggish, bilious condition; coat the tongue; foul the breath; sap energy, strength and nerve-force. A little of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will clear up trouble like that, gently, harmlessly, in a hurry. The difference it will make in your feelings over night will prove its merit to you.

Dr. Caldwell studied constipation for over forty-seven years. This long experience enabled him to make his prescription just what men, women, old people and children need to make their bowels help themselves. Its natural, mild, thorough action and its pleasant taste commend it to everyone. That's why "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin," as it is called, is the most popular laxative drugstore sell.

John's Mother Praises Doctor

There isn't a mother living who won't agree that no half-sick child should be the subject for an experiment with medicines of uncertain merit. When your child is bilious, headachy, half-sick, feverish, restless, with coated tongue, bad breath, no appetite or energy, you know that nine times out of ten it's a sign his little stomach and bowels need purging. And when you know that for over fifty years leading physicians have endorsed one preparation for this condition, there doesn't seem to be any reason for "trying" things.

Rich, fruity California Fig Syrup clears the little stomach and bowels gently, harmlessly and in a hurry. It regulates the bowels, gives tone and strength to them and to the stomach; and helps to give your child new strength, energy and vitality. Thousands of Western mothers praise it. Mrs. Joseph W. Hill, 4306 Bedford Ave., Omaha, Nebraska, says: "I'll never forget the doctor who got me to give my baby boy, John, California Fig Syrup. Nothing else seemed to help his weak bowels. That was when he was just a baby. He suffered a good deal before I gave him Fig Syrup, but it stopped his trouble quick. I have used it with him for colds and little upset spells ever since. I consider him a Fig Syrup boy."

Insist on the genuine article. See that the carton bears the word "California." Over four million bottles used a year.

Cross and Peevish maybe its worms

When your little one is irritable, restless or cross, the chances are he has worms. Wise mothers give Dr. Jayne's Vermifuge at the first symptom of worms. This proved remedy has been used for the past 100 years by millions of grateful mothers. Don't punish the tot when what he really needs is Jayne's Vermifuge. If worms are present your child will have a new lease on life after taking the first bottle. No other preparation is so efficient. Get a bottle today from your druggist. DR. D. For Stomachs TEMPORARILY Out-of-Order Occasional constipation should never be allowed to attach itself. Check it at once with a cup or two of Garfield Tea. A good old-fashioned, tried and natural remedy; it flushes the bowels, stimulates sluggish liver and renews the cheery good health of an active stomach. Recommended by many years of splendid, certain results. As good for children as it is for grown-ups.

U. S. MISSIONARY IS CAPTIVE OF CHINESE

Last Reported to Be "Teacher" of Red Army.

Peiping, China.—Bert Nelson, American missionary whose home is Minneapolis, has finished a year in the hands of Communist bandits in Honan province.

Nelson, a worker for the Lutheran United mission, was captured at Hwangchan, Honan, on October 5, 1930, by members the "first red army" of Honan, and has been held captive ever since.

For several weeks nothing has been heard from Nelson, who wrote the last letter received by his family in July, reporting he was not badly treated, and that the Communists had appointed him as their "English teacher."

At that time, Nelson was held in the Communist camp within two days' journey from Hankow, and within 40 miles of a large camp of government troops. The latter have never made any serious attempt to obtain his release.

Nelson's family has waited in anxiety for the last year in Hankow, hoping daily that he might escape or be released. The mission of which he is a member has made determined efforts to release him, and paid a ransom of more than $10,000 to the Communists, who had promised to let the missionary loose when this sum was delivered.

But after getting the money, they changed their minds, and said they would keep him until they had also received tennis balls and racquets, volley balls, a radio set, English books, a supply of gasoline and arms and ammunition.

The mission sent most of the articles demanded, but said they could not supply arms and ammunition, because it was contrary to mission principles. Even after receiving the articles they asked, the Communists decided to keep Nelson a captive. They sent back word that they needed an English teacher, and no one else was available.

A Norwegian missionary worker, Rev. A. Tvedt, was captured with Nelson, but the Communists let him go after the mission paid $10,000 for his release.

The American legation in Peiping and the consul-general in Hankow have written dozens of notes to the Chinese government asking that troops be sent to rescue Nelson, but nothing has been done. The Chinese government agreed on several occasions to send a relief expedition, but nothing came of these promises.

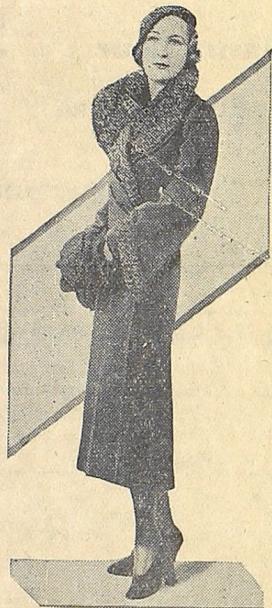

It is believed that the length of Nelson's period of capture constitutes a record in China. At the time he was captured, more than forty missionaries of different nationalities were held captive in different parts of China, but all of these have since died, been killed or released.

Looks Like a Motorist's Nightmare

A quarter of a million highway traffic signs have been erected by D. O. ("Dusty") Rhodes during the twenty years he has had charge of the sign posting work of the Automobile Club of Southern California. There are now 64 varieties of signs in the state. More than half are caution signs, including warnings of hospital zones, railroad crossings, fire stations, city limits, slow bridges, winding roads, slippery surface roads, pedestrian crossings, one way street flashers, etc.

Detroit.—How to administer first aid soon will be a part of the knowledge and training of every Detroit policeman. Already 300 have completed the Red Cross course in first aid, and a class of 600 will start instructions the first of the year. The department intends that eventually every member shall take the course. New officers must receive the instructions and obtain a Red Cross certificate in the work before he can start active duty.

Guides the Shark
The pilot fish is so called because of its habit of accompanying ships and sharks. It swims closely in front of the shark and some believe it guides the shark to its food. A more plausible explanation is that inasmuch as the shark does not bother this type of fish, the pilot stays close to the shark to secure protection from its enemies.

TO LIFT RESORT'S WATER 3,000 FEET

Engineering Task Will Require Gigantic Pumps.

Flagstaff, Ariz.—The gigantic engineering task of bringing water from springs near the bottom of the Grand canyon to supply the tourist resort on the south rim will be started soon. Water will be pumped from Garden creek, 3,075 feet under the canyon rim, to the park headquarters and tourist hotel, M. R. Tillotson, superintendent of the Grand Canyon National park, has announced. The project will be completed in four months. Contracts were awarded to a Los Angeles firm recently to lay almost two miles of 5-inch steel pipe from truth which wounded her pride and brought her to tears. I knew at once that I had done a discourteous thing, and I was truly sorry and said so almost as soon as my tongue had slipped to wound her. She has never gotten over it, however.

Sheehan became very angry with me last summer about a thing which I had in fact not done at all, but of which he could not be convinced. After questioning my veracity he said some extremely insolent things and slammed the door as he went out of the room. Now Sheehan is young and impulsive, and will probably have more self-control twenty years from now than at present, and I made some allowances for his rage.

I saw him frequently afterwards, but he never saw me. He was occupying himself with the display of haberdashery in the shop windows when we met or with the clouds drifting across the blue sky, so that I did not seem to come within the range of his vision. Just recently he wanted some special privilege very badly which I only could grant. He came into the office quite embarrassed to make apology for what he had said.

"What can I do to show that I am sorry for what I said?" he asked.
"Suppose you speak to me when we meet," I suggested, "and the next time you want to apologize to anyone whom you have injured, don't wait until you want to ask him for a favor." Then we shook hands.

When PAIN Comes

WHAT many people call indigestion very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali, which neutralizes the acids instantly. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this harmless, tasteless alkali in water neutralizes instantly many times that much acid, and the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go, get a small bottle to try.

THE STORY

By chance James Lee meets Lucy Gresham, daughter of Sir John Gresham, wealthy ship builder. Lee, unjustly accused of robbing the Gresham firm, was sent to prison. He blames Oliver Ames, Lucy's cousin, and Gresham's manager, and seeks revenge. Lee inherits wealth, and in compliance with the will, changes his name from Warrington. He secures an invitation to the girl's birthday party. Lucy is practically engaged to Ames. She meets Lee, who makes love to her. With Gresham's approval, Lucy and Lee are married. Lee stuns the girl by telling her he does not love her, and hates her "whole breed." She hears the story of his wrongs, and his determination to be avenged. She believes in his innocence. "Liforthis," rival of Gresham's, show a determination to crush its competitor. Lee tells Lucy he is "Liforthis," and intends to ruin her father. Lucy is hurt by Jocelyn Upton's assertion that Lee loved her before he met Lucy, and the latter believes her. Jocelyn seeks to win Lee, but is repulsed. Lucy places her personal fortune at Gresham's disposal to save the firm. She is frightened by a demented man, "Silly Billy," and is saved by her husband.

CHAPTER VIII—Continued

She raised a hand to her breast as if to still the sudden quick beat of her heart. His somber eyes watched her narrowly.

"Well?" she said at last. And she waited, too. Waited for him to tell her that he loved Jocelyn and knew now that she knew it, and had come to see her to say that any further pretense was impossible. Come to arrange with her, perhaps, for that freedom which Jocelyn had insisted that he so much desired.

"Well?" she said again, unable to endure the suspense in silence.

"I didn't know that you were going to boast of the . . . fiasco of our marriage . . ." he said harshly. "I thought the idea was to pretend that it was a great success."

"I didn't boast of it," she said unsteadily. "Jocelyn guessed it. Knew it. And, Jim, hasn't she good reason for knowing?"

"What reason? That I love her?" The words came oddly. "Do you believe that I love her?"

"She gave me such evidence of it," she answered. "No woman could have said all that she said, if it hadn't been true."

"Then you do believe it?"

"I did believe her this time . . . though mostly I am never quite sure of anything she says . . . it all fitted in with what you had said, yourself." The words came stammering out.

"What had I said?"

"That you had loved and . . . conquered love." He laughed suddenly. "Oh, Jim," she cried out. "It isn't funny . . ."

"No. And I'm not amused," he answered. "Why don't you usually believe what Jocelyn says?" he added. "Is she a liar?"

"She is . . . inclined to be hysterical . . ." said Lucy.

"If she told you a lie, she could tell me one. That stands to reason, doesn't it?"

"Yes. What has she told you, Jim?"

He opened his mouth to speak; closed it again and turned away with nothing said. Then:

"She said that you loved Ames."

"It was her turn to laugh now."

"I should think I have given proof that I didn't," she said, the bitter note still ringing through her words.

He drew a breath.

"She says that you regret—choosing me," he said.

"I have reason to regret it. But, of all things concerning our marriage, Jim, my choosing you . . . my loving you, is the one thing I don't regret."

"You do love me then? Still?" The words broke from him.

She nodded.

He drew a deep breath and breathed it out again before speaking. Then he said:

"And I don't love her. Never have; never could; never even remotely dreamed of it. Does that mean anything to you, Lucy?"

"Jim, you know it does."

There was a considerable silence. Then:

"I came here really to see whether you were with Ames." That was said confessionally, and he looked rather shame-faced as he said it.

She looked at him with incredulous eyes.

"That's why you have kept on asking whether I were alone!" she cried. He nodded.

"When I arrived here this afternoon they told me that you were out, but that you had been in, not long before, with Mr. Ames, of Gresham's. . . . I asked if they knew where you were, and they inquired and found that you'd mentioned going to Brady's cottage. . . . So I chanced it. . . . And came after you. . . . He told her all this, not quite looking at her."

"I see," she said slowly. "I see. I had lunched with Oliver, and he had brought me back here afterward. And from that you thought. . . ." She broke off, and after a pause went on: "But, Jim, whatever the conditions of our life together may be, I shall not make that sort of fool of your name; our name; you needn't ever fear it. And I'd like you to apologize for suggesting it."

She looked at him squarely. There was a gleam of admiration for the spirit of her in his answering look, and without further comment he made the apology she had demanded.

"Thank you," she said.

Suddenly she sat down, rather as if her knees were shaky. When she spoke again it was of the entirely prosaic question of food. The next few moments were given to arranging that dinner should be sent up to her sitting room.

"And about my room?" he asked.

"Are you staying?" she cried. "Oh, I hadn't thought of that!" She looked up at him, her color heightened. Then, quickly: "My suite is only half a suite really. The rest adjoins. You can arrange for that, if you like. . . ."

"Thanks," he said, smiling, rather queerly. "Do you know, Lucy, I never expected to be ordered about; given permission to do this or that, quite as much as I get it from you. Above all . . ." he paused, looking down at her.

"You never expected to obey, did you?" she put in.

He laughed.

"And do you know why you do?" she went on. "Because deep down you know I'm right; deep down, you know this revengefulness of yours is hateful, wrong, a waste of everything that's fine in you; and because, Jim, just because there is so much that's fine in you . . ."

She broke off breathlessly and added:

"Telephone down to the reception clerk about your room."

Over supper he asked her about the papers that were scattered on her writing table, and she told him what they were. He laughed bitterly.

"And though you have read the evidence, you still believe that I am innocent?" he asked.

"More than ever," she assured him. "Jim, the whole case against you rested, really, upon that horrid man, Macklin. His saying that you hadn't mentioned the loss of your wallet. Just that one lie of his turns the whole thing against you, Jim."

"Might not I be the liar?"

She shook her head.

"Jim, why won't you ever tell me that you didn't do it? Not that I need your assurance, but why won't you, Jim?"

"Why won't I?" he asked abruptly. "Do you want to know why? Because faith . . . just pure, unquestioning faith, is so . . . so devilish sweet . . ." he said, his face working oddly.

She was touched through and through. She rose quickly and went to him; put her hands on his shoulders.

"Jim . . . Jim . . . Is it so sweet? Even from me? Does it help? Make things any easier? Ah, Jim, you've got all my faith. . . . All my love . . . Can't you let it compensate? Can't you let it heal the wound of those awful years? . . . Ah, Jim, dear, there's nothing I wouldn't do. . . . Nothing. If you could only . . . not fight me any more. . . . Make me your friend. . . ."

He stood, straight and rigid, then suddenly caught her arm with a strength that was painful, and shook her.

"Don't try it on," he said, through his teeth. "Don't; d'you hear? Don't try your woman-power on me. . . ."

He stood, hands clenched, breathing quickly. If he expected an outburst of indignation from her he was disappointed; for, all she said, very quietly, was:

"All right, Jim, I'll remember."

It was a long time before either of them broke the silence. He moved presently and flung himself moodily into a deep chair. Silence still reigned.

She reached out a hand suddenly and pushed the dark hair from his forehead, looking down into his face. Her voice was low and soft and tender, as she said:

"You think yourself a man aged by suffering. Made . . . oh, so terribly old . . . but you aren't, Jim; you're just a hurt boy, mad with the boy's impulse to hit back. . . . Just a hurt boy, Jim, dear."

He started from his chair.

"D—n it! Don't!" he cried fiercely. A silence followed that held the words ringingly.

She looked at him with shining eyes.

"Oh," he cried, "it was madness to come here! I don't know what made me do it."

"Don't you? I believe you do, Jim. I believe I do, too. And if you don't own up that you know, I shall tell you what I think the reason is . . ."

"When I Arrived Here This Afternoon They Told Me That You Were Out."

There was something like sheer, downright panic in his dark eyes at that; and he stretched out a hand defensively as if to ward her off; although she had not moved one step.

"I own up . . . I own up . . ." he said unsteadily. "For God's sake let me go. . . . Let me go. . . ."

He turned, searchingly, because the room was not familiar, and made for the door.

She heard him go through her bedroom—rather as if he plunged, blindfolded, through it—to his own. Then the slam of his door. She raised her hand to her forehead, drawing a quivering breath.

Something had happened this evening that changed the whole aspect of life for her. She knew that Jim did not love Jocelyn; never had loved her; and she knew that he was jealous of Oliver. Beside that wonderful knowledge, her indignation against Jocelyn for the lies she had told, dwindled to a small thing. Amid the glorious crowd of new thoughts and new hopes, that were suddenly in her heart, she could find very little room for anger against anyone.

When she was in bed she lay for a long time staring up into the dark, unable to think for the memories of Jim; of looks and words, that kept racing through her mind. When at last she did sleep it was to dream of his harsh, broken voice, and his dark, tormented eyes. But along toward midnight, her dream changed to more violent things. It seemed to her that the hotel was on fire and that it was Billy who had set it alight. She lay for a moment, rigid, staring, while the lightning flickered its piercing, vivid light through the room, and thunder crashed overhead. Then panic swept her, as a storm always made it, and before she knew it, she was halfway to Lee's door. . . . But evidently he had already thought of her, for before she reached it, she saw him in the doorway, a dressing gown over his pajamas, and he was saying:

"It's all right; Lucy, don't be afraid. I'm here if you want me. . . ."

If she wanted him! She just stumbled toward him, hands outstretched, and found herself caught in his arms; then plucked up and carried in his strong, effortless strength, back to the bed. He put her back between the sheets, pulled the clothes up around her, and then sat beside her, and gathered her close. Words of comfort came rather stumbly from his lips and his cheek was close against her shining hair.

"It's silly, I know," she gasped, clinging to him with all her strength. "But, Jim, stay with me till it's over. . . . Don't leave me. . . ."

"Hold tight . . . hold tight. . . . Little kid! I'll stay; of course I will. What makes you so afraid?"

"I don't know. It just . . . catches at me. . . ." She buried her face against his neck, as a blinding flash lit the room, to be followed by a vicious crash that seemed to shake the world.

He crushed her close, his big arms wholly around her; gentle with the wonderful gentleness of great strength; comforting; tender; just what she needed. But she struggled herself free enough to raise a white face to his.

"Something was hit that time, wasn't it, Jim?" she asked in a shaking whisper.

"Sounded like it," he answered. "Don't be frightened. We aren't likely to be struck."

"I'm not afraid of being struck," she answered. "It's just the . . . awful light and the . . . awful noise. The not being able to do anything against it. . . . Oh, Jim, I'm so glad you are here! . . . What should I have done without you? All alone. . . . With all that awfulness going on. . . . Do you think I'm an utter little idiot?"

"No, Lucy. No. Just . . . rather a little girl, that's all. . . ." He was whispering, too, and the words were breaking from his lips jerkily.

She sat quite still, clinging close, giving herself to the lovely comfort of his arms, listening to his kind, soothing words, until the storm rolled away into the distance. Then came the snapping of the tension. His arms dropped from around her, and she lay back, rather limp, into her pillows. There was considerable silence. Then:

"Thank you, Jim, dear," she said softly.

He rose from the edge of the bed quickly, at that, and moved over toward his own room.

"You can be the most wonderful dear, when it pleases you to be," she added softly, her eyes following him; but he went straight on, without turning and without a word.

"But, Jim, you laughed at my fright," she went on. "Wasn't that rather a dangerous thing to do?"

"Dangerous?" He flung the word, questioning, over his shoulder.

"Yes; because I might retaliate by laughing at some of your fears. . . . I know one or two things you have been afraid of, Jim, dear. . . . You have been afraid of Oliver. . . ."

He bit his lip, but would not speak. . . . "And I know something that you are afraid of now; all the time; at this very minute. . . ."

"G—d! So do I!" The words broke from him.

"Jim, you're afraid of me. . . . Afraid of loving me. . . . Aren't you, Jim?"

"Lucy!" Her name rang through the room on a note of sheer torture, and left the silence ringing with it. He stood for a moment, while some battle raged itself out within him. . . . Then flung open the door and left her.

She lay looking at the door he had closed rather sharply behind him, half-smiling as she looked. Then raised a hand and turned out the light.

She scarcely slept at all, after that, until it was almost day. Then she fell into such a profound sleep that she did not wake again till past ten.

When she had dressed she went into the sitting room, and there she found him apparently waiting for her. He was standing by the window, looking out. The table was set, all ready for breakfast.

He turned as she came in, and for a moment they stood looking at each other. She didn't know what to say, and wondered what his mood was to be, this morning, after what had happened last night. He said nothing, only stood and looked at her.

Need Not Visit Europe for Literary Research

Two professors of English at Southern Methodist university published a book, "Famous Editions of English Poets," in which 18 volumes of verse are reproduced in full, just as they appeared in the originals, with photographic copies of the old title pages. This involved a vast amount of labor and research, and was done at Oxford university and the British museum, where original copies of such works as Shakespeare's sonnets, Pope's "Essay on Criticism," Byron's "The Prisoner of Chillon" and Tennyson's poems were available for copying. On returning to this country, the "Texas Weekly" relates, the scholars were surprised to learn that all the rare volumes they had consulted overseas could have been found in libraries of their own state. This is an amusing incident, but it is more: it indicates how our country has made intellectual progress while it expanded economically, and that it has libraries as well as skyscrapers to be proud of. It is not always necessary to rush to Europe for a draught from the Pierian spring.

"Uttering and Publishing"

This legal phase is most generally used in connection with the circulation of counterfeit money, forged notes, etc. Bouvier's Law Dictionary states that "to utter" in criminal law is to offer or to publish; also that "to publish" means primarily to make known. Webster's dictionary quotes F. Wharton that "to utter and publish a document is to offer directly or indirectly, by words or actions, such document as good."

Too Big to Ask

Robert insisted that his younger brother be sent on an errand to a neighbor.

"Why don't you want to go?" inquired his mother.

"I went to the grocery for her. She said she was going to make cookies today and Junior will get 'em, if he goes. I'm too big to ask."

POULTRY

WINTER SUNSHINE GOOD FOR POULTRY

Ultra-Violet Rays Needed by Flock.

So much evidence has been accumulated about the value of winter sunshine in egg production that it cannot be ignored by poultry raisers who want to get profitable results.

It has been shown that ultra-violet rays are a powerful factor in increasing egg production, hatchability and fertility, as well as in maintaining healthful conditions.

Ultra-violet rays promote bone and body growth, and building vitamin D. During the winter months, when poultry is confined, ordinary glass and soiled cloth curtains bar them out and some means must be employed to make them available.

You need good housing and good management to get best results. Published data by such representative bodies as Wisconsin experiment station, University of Arkansas; Ohio experiment station and others have shown the effect of ultra-violet rays during the winter months. Records at egg-laying contests (notably the Vineland egg-laying contest) also give practical proof of the egg-producing value of ultra-violet rays.

Poultry needs winter sunshine. Layers must get ultra-violet radiation or its equivalent. This is also true of chicks. The wise poultry raiser will make sure his house is properly constructed this winter and next spring.

Size of Eggs Can Be Influenced by Feeding

Egg size is influenced by breeding and also by feeding. It is as natural for some hens to lay large eggs as it is for some cows to give a heavy flow of milk. It is important to select eggs of the desired size when saving for incubation, because the size of egg laid, to some extent, is inherited by the offspring. However, it is possible to influence the size of eggs to a considerable extent through proper feeding and a proper supply of minerals necessary for egg shell.

A ration of grain alone or even with milk will probably not give best results so far as egg size is concerned. A balanced ration carrying not less than 3 per cent of bone meal and possibly 1 or 2 per cent calcium carbonate in some form, like crushed limestone or calcite, is considered desirable for best eggs.

Plan Now to Increase Production of Eggs

One of the imperative needs of the poultry industry is to increase the consumption of eggs, said Reese Ricks of the International Baby Chick association, in addressing the American Institute of Co-operation at Manhattan, Kan. Other foods are giving eggs a battle for a place on the breakfast table, and according to Mr. Hicks, this is what can be done about it.

The first step toward increasing egg consumption is for producers to supply high quality eggs. The second step is in standardizing the product so that the public will know what it is buying. The third step is for co-operatives to join hands with other agencies in the poultry industry to educate the public as to the value of eggs.—Nebraska Farmer.

Poultry Facts

Oat hulls are not harmful to chicks if ground fine enough.

Among the incurable poultry diseases are chronic cocciidiosis, tuberculosis, bacillary white diarrhea, fowl cholera, fowl typhoid and blackhead. Serious cases of chicken pox and roup might also be included.

The poultryman's biggest asset right now is the flock of new pullets that are being developed for next winter's laying flock, and whatever he can do to protect that flock so these birds will continue to lay, worth real money to him.

Culling a flock is one of the important things which is most commonly neglected. There is also a neglect to procure and keep pure-bred chickens. Vermin are commonly found in poultry houses.

Several poultry diseases are quite similar in many external symptoms. One or two additional symptoms usually, to the experienced, determine the accuracy of the superficial diagnosis. Post mortems prove the superficial diagnosis and therein lies experience.

Either whole oats or hulled oats may be used in a grain ration that is fed to chickens. However, hulled oats makes a better feed because a large part of the fiber is removed and the birds will, therefore, get a bigger percentage of grain.

Keep records of the number of eggs received each day and how they are disposed of. An account book will tell where the money goes and where the money comes from and will enable one to make economies on the one side and increase income on the other.

REMAIN TOO LONG IN BUSINESS LIFE

Writer Argues for Earlier Retirement Age.

Nobody has taken into account the increased productivity of the average human being. In the last century medical science and modern sanitation have added about twenty years to the effective period of human life.

Every modern man is really living two lifetimes, as lifetimes used to be. He is producing twenty years longer than men used to produce. To be sure, he is consuming also, but, since every man produces something in excess of his actual consumption, we have a steadily mounting total of overproduction.

A few illustrations:

Shakespeare retired to Stratford-on-Avon at the age of forty, an old man, his work completed. He died at fifty-two. Montaigne retired at thirty-nine, to spend his ancient years in study and contemplation in his tower. Alexander had conquered the world at thirty-three, and died because there were no more worlds to conquer. Napoleon was ruler of Europe at thirty-three, banished to Elba at forty-five, and died in St. Helena at fifty-two.

Men used to mature young, do their work quickly, die in their thirties and forties, and make way for the next generation. Thus there were always openings, always jobs enough to go around.

Contrast this with the record of Judge Gary, who stayed on the job until after eighty, and kept at least three other men from being chairman of the board of the United States Steel corporation. Or George F. Baker, who passed away at ninety-one and who, if he had stepped out at the same age as Shakespeare, would have made it possible for four other men to succeed to his job.

We have the silly idea that everybody must keep on producing. Even when we all realize that we are overproduced. My remedy, as I say, is simple and fundamental. Create a special automatic class of consumers. Let young men do the work, and old men loaf. Make work what it ought to be, a logical step to leisure. Not, as it is, merely a slavish habit which leads to more and more work.—Bruce Barton in Vanity Fair.

Rooster in "Pants"

Jeremiah, pet rooster belonging to Mrs. J. E. Winkley, of Seattle, Wash., was hit in the neck by an arrow shot by a youngster. He seemed to be dead, so his owner began to dry pick him. She had removed all his tail feathers when he came back to life with a squawk and staggered into the yard. His neck healed and Mrs. Winkley felt there was only one thing to do for poor, nude Jeremiah. She made him a pair of pants.

Safety First

Magistrate—Witness says you neither slowed down nor tried to avoid the pedestrian.

Motorist—I took all precautions. I blew my horn and cursed him.

"I'M going, anyway"

THE modern Miss needs no "time out" for the time of month. If you've ever taken Bayer Aspirin for a headache, you know how soon the pain subsides. It is just as effective in the relief of those pains peculiar to women!

Don't dedicate certain days of every month to suffering. It's old-fashioned. It's unnecessary. Aspirin will always enable you to carry on in comfort. Take enough to assure your complete comfort. If it is genuine aspirin it cannot possibly hurt you. Bayer Aspirin does not depress the heart. It does not upset the stomach. It does nothing but stop the pain.

Headaches come at inconvenient times. So do colds. But a little Bayer Aspirin will always save the day. A throat so sore you can hardly swallow is made comfortable with one good grade made from these tablets. Neuralgia. Neuritis. Rheumatism. Pains that once kept

Irvin Burtzloff, a 1930 graduate of Tawas City high school, has received honorable mention in scholarship at the University of Valparaiso.

Seventh and Eighth Grades
We have been making "Mayflower" posters in Art.
We are reading the "Legend of Sleepy Hollow" in seventh grade reading.
We have finished the French and Indian War in seventh grade history.

Fifth and Sixth Grades
We are working on a Holland poster and table scene of the First Thanksgiving.
The sixth grade language class have written Thanksgiving plays. Grace Hill's was chosen as best and will be presented next Wednesday.

Third and Fourth Grades
The third grade is making a large poster of the Pilgrim story.
We are reading Thanksgiving stories in reading. We dramatized one story.
We are sorry to have Edwin Farland leave us. He has moved to East Tawas.
Ruth Gibson, who has been ill, is back in school.

Primary
George Westcott entered the first grade Monday.
Helen and Lewis Farrand left school Wednesday to attend school in East Tawas.

Herbert Marz had perfect spelling lessons all last week.
The first grade dramatized the story of the "Three Billy Goats Gruff" for language this week.
The Art classes are making a Pilgrim border for Thanksgiving.
Amelia Herman is absent this week due to illness.

Work of the Lungs
From twenty to thirty cubic inches of air are normally changed with each act of breathing. Nearly 400 cubic feet of air passes through the lungs of an adult each day.

Money in Circulation
In the United States the total amount of circulating money media amounts to approximately eight and one-half billions. Of this about seven billions are bank deposits subject to checks; one billion consists of fiduciary money (bills, minor coins, etc.), and only one-half billion is primary money or gold coins.

Save Them
Trees with cavities, safe refuges of the small hunted wild animals, are the "fur" or "den" trees. Affording shelter to the small animal, the den tree is very important to its life, for when the animal is taken and the den destroyed nothing is left there to protect another animal, says the American Forestry association.
