WILL GIVE A CHARITY FUND BENEFIT SHOW

The Tawas City Improvement Association, Twentieth Century Club and State Theatre will give a Charity Fund Benefit Show at the theatre next Wednesday and Thursday evenings. The members of the committee in charge of ticket sales are Mrs. John A. Campbell, Mrs. W. C. Davidson, Mrs. H. J. Keiser, L. H. Braddock, C. L. McLean, and J. A. Brugger. Tickets are also on sale at all business places.
The Charity Fund is a worthy movement and deserves the support of every citizen. Buy a ticket and you will help to make it a success and at the same time enjoy an exceptionally fine picture at the State Theatre.
"The False Madonna" which is the feature picture offered on Wednesday and Thursday at the Charity Fund benefit, is the first Paramount picture in which Kay Francis has played the featured leading role. She shared the leading honors with Lilyan Tashman in "Girls About Town," was teamed with William Powell in several of his big Paramount productions, and had important parts in a number of other screen plays, but the forthcoming entertainment at the State Theatre is her first major role—and she carries the distinction with high honors.
"The False Madonna" is a story that brings Miss Francis forward into the full scope of her acting powers. She is seen as the "counterfeit lady," the woman of refinement who operates with a group of skillful crooks who are very successful in promoting their international confidence games. The ensuing action, leading up to a dramatic climax, is blood-stirring and hectic.
Very compelling characterizations are provided in the picture by William Boyd and Conway Tearle, while Marjorie Gateson has a delicious comedy part.

CHARACTERS IN "PENROD AND SAM" ACT NATURALLY

Convinced that rehearsals would take all spontaneity from the actor that he desired, William Beaudine, First National director, recently made a motion picture in which the actors themselves wrote the dialogue as they made the picture.
The production is "Penrod and Sam," coming to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, in which Leon Janney and Junior Coghlan are featured with an all star cast of twenty or more children and just a few grown-ups.
Beaudine's system is the essence of simplicity. Knowing the Janney, Coghlan, and the elders in the cast are experienced players, he had them memorize the lines necessary to get over the story points. All others in the cast, however, were merely told the general nature of the scene and went into it with the instruction from Beaudine, "Speak the reply that comes first to your mind. If you desire to laugh, let it come. Be perfectly natural in the scene. That's what I want."
The result, according to observers, is that Beaudine got thoroughly realistic performances from all of the youngsters; performances that are so natural they might well have been filmed in the school yard or the vacant lot next door.

WILL HOLD ITS FIRST MEETING DECEMBER 13

The adult division of the Council of Religious Education for Iosco County will hold its first meeting of the year at the Hemlock Road Baptist church Sunday evening, December 13th, at 8:00 o'clock, E. S. T.
This will be a great opportunity to meet and greet the great host of men and women in Iosco County who have on their hearts the best interests of all the boys and girls of their communities.
Rev. E. A. Florv will be the principal speaker at this meeting. He always has an inspiring message and one that brings us the best thoughts of the day. You will be uplifted and benefited by what he has to say.
A very important feature of this meeting will be the carrying out of the suggestion made last year, that the Christian workers of the county unite in a communion service, regardless of church or creed. This will be a unique service and so far as we know the first of its kind ever held. It should do more than anything else ever attempted to unite Christian thought in our county.
Start planning now to attend this meeting and bring all the adult members of your Sunday school.

TAWAS CITY CAGERS TRIM GLENNIE FIVE, 24-13

The Tawas City independent basketball team trimmed the Glennie quintet to the tune of a 24 to 13 score at the Glennie Community Hall last Saturday night. In this game the locals displayed plenty of power, warranting the continuance of the newly organized team.
Soon after the starting guns the Tawas City cagers ran off to a sizeable score, but the Glennie boys found themselves in the second quarter to tie the count at ten points by the end of the half. In the third quarter the locals again went wild and soon had acquired a safe margin. The remainder of the game they devoted to stopping the fast Glennie crew.
Bingham, with ten points, led the locals in scoring. He was followed closely by Swartz with eight. Sweet was high scorer for Glennie with five points.
On the Friday previous to the Glennie contest Tawas City had administered a 32 to 17 beating to the Alabaster independents.

N. E. M. BASKETBALL LEAGUE ORGANIZED

The Northeastern Michigan basketball league was re-organized for the 1931-32 season at a meeting held last week Wednesday night at Whittemore. Following are the teams comprising the league this year: Tawas City, Standish, Sterling, Omer, Au Gres, Whittemore, Hale, Glennie and Prescott.
Officers for the organization were elected at this meeting. They are as follows: President, Donald Anderson, Whittemore; vice-president, Carl Libka, Tawas City; secretary, Reginald Boudler, Glennie; treasurer, Fred Jennings, Au Gres. The above group of officers will act as a board to decide any questions which may arise from time to time. It was decided to employ only licensed referees to officiate in league games.
A league meeting was held at Whittemore on Wednesday of this week at which the schedule for this year was arranged. The season will be divided into two periods. The winners at the end of each half will play off in post-season games for the 1931-32 championship.
Next week marks the official opening of the league's activities. Tuesday night Prescott plays at Sterling; Thursday, Sterling at Hale; Friday, Tawas City at Standish; Omer at Whittemore, and Glennie at Au Gres.

4-H POTATO CLUB OF RENO COMPLETES YEAR'S WORK

Reno's Real Russet Raisers, a 4-H potato club organized by Norman Sibley of Reno, completed their year's work with compliments from the state leader, A. G. Kettunen, a short time ago.
The club was composed of nine members, seven of whom completed their project with good standing. These seven boys were, Norman Sibley, who won county place, Gerald Fournier second, Carlton Robinson third, Duwayne Barnes fourth, Alfred Anderson fifth, Lloyd Anderson sixth, and Fred Papp seventh.
The local achievement day was attended by Messrs. Fred Wolf, Karl Bueschen and Charles Fournier, the club's advisory board, and David Daugharty, an interested farmer.
The following boys, Norman Sibley, Gerald Fournier, Duwayne Barnes, Alfred Anderson and Lloyd Anderson, have sent an exhibit of 32 potatoes each to Lansing, where they will be put in cold storage until Farmer's Week, February 1 to 5, at which event they will compete with other 4-H clubs throughout the state. This is the first 4-H Potato Club organized in Iosco county.

TALLULAH BANKEAD AT STATE IN "THE CHEAT"

"The Cheat," Paramount's new modern dialogue edition of Hector Turnbull's famous story of silent days, which comes to the State Theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, with Tallulah Bankhead and Irving Pichel in the featured roles, is entertainment of the type that will satisfy the most voracious type of excitement cravers.
Miss Bankhead, who has made personal triumphs of her previous American photoplay opportunities, has a more dramatic and suspenseful story in "The Cheat," and her supporting cast is adequate to an exacting detail.
The story is of a woman who allows a flirtation and gambling debts to draw her into an intrigue away from her husband. When she balks on the brink of fulfilling a promise to a man of wealth whose code of honor has been perverted by life in the Orient, she is branded with the symbol this chap uses to identify women of conquest. The injured lady shoots him, not mortally, and in consequence she and the husband, eager to shield her reputation, are compelled to air the entire affair publicly in court.
Harvey Stephens, Ann Andrews, Robert Strange, Jay Fassett, William Ingersoll and Hanaki Yoshiwara have supporting roles.

May Use Coffee to Haul Trains

Seeking Practical Use for Its Surplus Crop.

Washington.—Coffee, not coal, may soon haul passengers and freight on Brazilian trains. After dumping tons of coffee into the ocean and burning other tons to avert a crash in the coffee market, Brazilian government officials announce that coffee will be pressed into bricks and tried out as fuel in locomotives.

"Coffee is a prolific stepchild of Brazil, for the original home of the coffee plant is Ethiopia," says a bulletin from the National Geographic society.

"But coffee has by no means been given the proverbial treatment of a stepchild," continues the bulletin. "Its beans have been fondled to build up enormous fortunes, cities, towns and railroads. The coffee bean started its world-wide rambling from the Ethiopian hills centuries ago. Tradition has it that its stimulating effect was discovered by a priest when he investigated the plants consumed by his herd of goats because the animals refused to take their proper rest. His tests led to the cultivation of the coffee plant.

"Shortly after its discovery, coffee jumped the Red sea and began sprouting along the southern coast of Arabia, home of the famous Mocha coffee. In the Fifteenth century, the aroma of coffee rose from European coffee pots and when colonization got under way in the West Indies and South America, coffee beans were among some of the early cargoes from Europe.

"There are about eighty species of coffee but only a few are cultivated for commerce. The cinchona tree, from the bark of which quinine is produced, is one of coffee's botanic relatives. So is gambier, which furnishes tanning material and dyes that bear the same name.

"In its meteoric rise coffee has had its ups and downs. Its first use was in the form of a paste which was eaten. Moslems, prohibited from drinking wine, took to coffee. Moslem leaders, upon learning coffee's stimulating effect, called a meeting at Mecca and banned its use in 1511. Fanatics burned the coffee warehouses, raided the coffee houses and beat the shop proprietors with their brewing utensils. "The ban lasted only thirteen years in Egypt where Sultan Selim de-noticed it, and further impressed his feeling upon his subjects by executing two Persian doctors who warned against coffee drinking. Egypt now is among the world's leading coffee consumers. Some Egyptian peoples even use the beverage in connection with religious rites.

"The world's leading coffee-producing region is a pear-shaped district on the Atlantic coast of Brazil in the 'backyard' of Rio de Janeiro. The prosperity of Sao Paulo state rises and falls with the rise and fall of the coffee industry. Coffee built its fine modern capital which bears the name of the state, its excellent railroad system and its good roads. The railroad leading from Sao Paulo, the so-called coffee capital of the world, to Santos, the world's greatest coffee port, is one of the richest steel highways in the world because it is literally a coffee funnel with the small end of the funnel set in ships' holds at Santos."

GIANT HOWITZERS NOW TRAVEL FAST

Army Develops New Transportation for Guns.

Washington.—A picture of giant motorized howitzers—some of 8-inch caliber—dashing over highways at 45 miles per hour, was painted in the annual report of Maj. Gen. Samuel Hoff, chief of army ordnance.

Guns of such weight have in past wars had to be moved slowly by mules or crawling tractors. Now, apparently, it will be possible to transfer them between fronts 200 miles apart in five hours.

The first of these large mobile guns, Hoff reported, was completed last year at Rock Island arsenal. It is now at Aberdeen (Md.) proving ground, undergoing tests.

"Preliminary firing tests," Hoff said, "indicate that it is satisfactory as a firing unit. In road tests it has been transported at 45 miles an hour, this being made possible by the use of pneumatic tires and spring supports provided in the carriage and limber."

Development of a semiautomatic shoulder rifle to increase the firing power of infantry is being carried out by the ordnance department, Hoff

Cuba Planning Law to Oust "Fag" Lighters

Havana.—The lowly cigarette lighter, butt of many a stage joke, is to be legislated out of existence in Cuba. Congress in its wisdom believes it has eaten far enough into the profits of the match business.

The proposed law, which is expected to be passed shortly by congress, will impose a penalty or fine on any person found using a lighter. At the same time the price of matches, with an increased tax, will retail for seven cents as against five cents now.

Dress Failed to Fit, So Wife Misses Boat

San Francisco.—Failure of a dress to fit delayed the liner Santa Ana, distracted a husband and three children and caused a search of the ship. After her son, Luis, had swung ashore and frantically telephoned police, Mrs. Pedro Escalon arrived at the pier half an hour after the vessel departed. She had trouble getting the proper fitting for a new dress, she calmly told officials.

95-Year-Old Man Sleeps Days, Reads at Night

Evansville, Ind.—The time-honored advising "early to bed," etc., doesn't apply in the case of Dr. C. P. Bacon, ninety-five, a resident here. Doctor Bacon stays up most of the night. He often reads until 3 or 4 a. m., then sleeps until late in the afternoon. He said he formed a habit of remaining awake late while a medical student. Doctor Bacon has used tobacco most of his life.

said. Three types of .276-caliber rifles—the Garand, Pederson and White guns—are now being tested.

During the last year the army increased its artillery by 15 75-mm. pack howitzers, 15 3-inch antiaircraft guns, 11 37-mm. guns, 12 75-mm. mortars and 4 105-mm. howitzers.

Cavalry Radio Found Practicable in Tests

Washington.—Use of radio within mounted organizations has been found practicable, Maj. Gen. Guy V. Henry, chief of cavalry, stated in his annual report. He added that during recent cavalry division maneuvers receiving sets were installed in airplanes, in armored cars and carried on horseback, accompanying widely separated columns of mounted troops.

"In these maneuvers," Major General Henry said, "the importance of quick and reliable radio communication between cavalry columns, while they were actually marching and in combat, was clearly demonstrated. The radius of action of a cavalry command is being greatly increased and its ability to disperse safely into several columns on a wide front is being insured by improved radio communication.

"Intensive study is being given to proper radio communication within mounted organizations, within mechanized units and to the problem of intercommunication between both of them."

Shakespeare's Gloves Placed in U. S. Museum

Philadelphia.—More than 300 years ago there was a man named Will in London.

And he had a pair of soft, gayly fringed buckskin gloves. He was a well known figure in the taverns and around the courts where the strolling players congregated.

He wasn't a very important fellow then, so that when he died no one was especially interested in his soft buckskin gloves.

But now his gloves have been placed on exhibition at the University of Pennsylvania.

For Will of old London was none other than William Shakespeare.

Baby's Cries Save Family From Death

Hopewell Junction, N. Y.—There was an occasion when Mr. and Mrs. Harold Harvey of Pawling actually were happy when their baby cried during the night. For the infant saved their lives.

Coal gas had flooded the house and the baby's cries awoke his parents, who managed to stumble outside to safety.

MOTHER GOOSE

WHO wrote the famous "Mother Goose Nursery Rhymes" we will never know. Some of them such as "Ride a Cock Horse to Banbury Cross," "Little Jack Horner," and "London Bridge Is Falling Down," are obviously of English folk origin; others have been borrowed from a famous collection of French folk tales called "Tales of My Mother the Goose," edited in 1697 by Charles Perrault. It is nevertheless a fact that our own country can claim a real Mother Goose, through whom these indispensable nonsense ditties were first introduced to the children of America.

Mother Vergoose, her grandchildren called her. Her name was Elizabeth Vergoose, and she made her home with her daughter and son-in-law, Thomas Fleet, in Boston, early in the Eighteenth century. Like many grandmothers she held active, if dotting sway in the Fleet nursery, and sang her charges to sleep nightly with the well-known rhymes. Thomas Fleet was a printer by trade, and important as the editor of Boston's first newspaper, the Boston News Letter. Recognizing the value of Mother Vergoose's rhymes, he wrote them down and in 1719 published a printed copy which sold, and sold well, at two coppers each.

Elizabeth Vergoose must be given credit as collector, not as originator of these poems. But in spirit she was a real Mother Goose, "—whose melodies shall never die, while nurses sing and babies cry."

ROBIN ADAIR

What's this dull town to me?
Robin's not here!
Who 'st I wish'd to see?
Robin Adair!

THUS wrote the love-lorn Lady Caroline Keppel about the famous English watering place, Bath, to which she had been banished by her father in the vain hope that "out of sight" might prove "out of mind." For young Robin Adair, however well he may sound as the hero of Lady Caroline's ballad, was as a real person no great match for an earl's daughter.

Adair was a young medical student who, after some youthful scrape, left his native Dublin to walk penitence to London and was on the way run down and injured by a coach belonging to a London society woman. She took him home with her, superintended his recovery, established him in society and introduced him to Lady Caroline.

Set to an old Irish air, Lady Caroline's little poem became immediately popular, much to the chagrin of her father. Since, however, it failed to soften his heart, she took advantage of a prerogative of her generation, went into a "decline" and thus won her point. In a recent London auction there was put up for sale an exquisite miniature of Robin Adair, Lady Caroline and their three children.

LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY

VIVIAN BURNETT in all probability was never guilty of wearing a short-trousered, black velvet suit with a big white collar, and surely he detested long curls and wide brimmed hats with streamers as much as any of the numerous seven-year olds who did wear them. Nevertheless, it was Vivian Burnett who was responsible for this amazing juvenile fashion some years ago. For it was he who inspired his mother, Frances Hodgson Burnett, to write the book that set this style, "Little Lord Fauntleroy," and the quaint ways, the sweetly candid eyes, the friendly, kind little heart that endeared its small hero to all readers, were Vivian's.

Mr. Burnett tells the story in his own book, "The Romantic Lady," a biography of his famous mother. "I shall write a book about an American boy with aristocratic English connections," Mrs. Burnett exclaimed one day, "and Vivian shall be he. Little Lord Something or other. What a pretty title! Little Lord —, what Lord — what?" A day later she had written on a slip of paper still preserved, "Little Lord Fauntleroy" ten times in a column, as though testing out its appearance and sound.

Nobody knows just why she chose Fauntleroy, though it is a common enough English name. Indeed, shortly after the book was published, one man, quite unknown to her, wrote Mrs. Burnett asking just why she had chosen his name!

Historic Book Plates

Book plates are ancient. Some of the small tablets found in Assyrian libraries must have been book plates. Japan had them in the Tenth century. Modern book plates are nearly contemporaneous with printing. The earliest actually known is a hand-colored heraldic wood cut of about 1480.

Country Well Named

Not more than one-fourth of Iceland is inhabitable. The rest of the country is composed of elevated deserts, lava streams and glaciers. It was for this reason, undoubtedly, that the land was called Iceland.

At Christmas Eve

By Rev. Abram Ryan
in Philadelphia Record

AH! there's nothing like a Christmas Eve
To change life's bitter gall to sweet,
And change the sweet to gall again;
To take the thorns from out our feet—
The thorns and all their dreary pain,
Only to put them back again.
To take old stings from out our heart—
Old stings that made them bleed and smart—
Only to sharpen them the more,
And press them back to the heart's core.

Ah! there's nothing like a Christmas Eve
To melt, with kindly glowing heat,
From of our souls the snow and sleet,
The dreary drift of wintry years,
Only to make the cold winds blow,
Only to make a colder snow;
And make it drift, and drift, and drift,
In flakes so icy cold and swift,
Until the heart that lies below
Is cold and colder than the snow.

orations often include strands of colored lights at the intersections, crossed from corner to corner. The natural thing is to arrange the strands with a red globe, then white, then blue. Looked at as a single unit at close range the effect is not bad, but as the general view is of several blocks, having all the lights at one intersection red, at the next white, and the next blue, gives an almost incredibly finer effect.

In a general way, the longer the view the larger the object, or the larger mass of small objects of the same kind, as in a store window display. A large number of small objects scattered haphazard over a given area, when viewed at a distance, lose effectiveness, while the same objects grouped as to size, color or shape, with proper spacing, render the display much more striking and effective.

Christmas Shopping

HE biting cold of a zero day, coupled with finding merchandise stocks badly depleted, filled many last minute shoppers with good resolutions to do their Christmas shopping early next year.

Marion English was one of those caught in the jam. It was now late in the afternoon, the next day would be Christmas, and there still was Uncle George, Cousin Essie and Old Mrs. Brighton unchecked on her list. What in the world could she get for them? Helplessly she wandered up and down the aisles. Why hadn't she heeded all the warnings to shop early? Well, they just would have to be satisfied with anything she could pick up now.

Yearningly, she looked up toward the balcony of the big store, where several persons were occupying comfortable chairs. And then an idea flashed through her brain.

Ten minutes later, she was walking through the crowded aisles again, but the worried look had left her face. In the short time she had taken to rest and think she had tried to put herself in the place of three persons for whom she was seeking gifts, and now, instead of just taking anything she had a very definite idea of what to get for the amount she had to spend. She remembered that Uncle George had a pet weakness for fancy socks, that Cousin Essie liked nothing better than new fiction, and she felt sure that Mrs. Brighton would welcome a pair of bright-colored bedroom slippers.

By 5:30 her selections were all made. This was the way to do Christmas shopping, she thought, not the haphazard way she had been doing it for years. She remembered now, with a pang, the rather inappropriate gifts she had chosen sometimes. Never again, she vowed, would she wait until the last minute to make selections. From now on, she would heed the many warnings to shop early, and so bring an added share of happiness to herself and others.

The Faeroes

It Takes Two Months to Dry a Codfish in the Faeroes.

(Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)—WNU Service.

THE bleak, wind-swept Faeroes soon will hear the drone of regular mail planes, for a new landing field is planned for accommodation of planes which will fly the proposed America-Denmark air mail route.

The Faeroes, numbering twenty-one small islands sprinkled over a small area about 250 miles off the northern tip of Scotland have remained practically unchanged since Viking days. Modern civilization can find no foothold on their windy cliffs; there life can exist only when modeled on ancient, primitive patterns. And so the islanders, forever wrestling with waves and winds, have little time for the tourist or his money.

Each of the islands rises from the sea with flanks as sheer as a ship's sides and with a plateau top, flat like a ship's deck. In all the Faeroes there is only one small sandy beach of a hundreds feet or so, a beach which is considered such a remarkable gift of nature that the big island of Sandoy takes its name from the tiny strand.

Basalt cliffs rise majestically on all the islands. Some tower nearly 2,000 feet above the restless sea, and against these black barriers the Atlantic sends her mighty waves, to break with explosive force and burst into probably the most remarkable clouds of spray and surf to be found in all the world.

Videro is probably the bleakest island of them all and therefore visitors seldom land there. But the effort pays, for there the dwellings are of the most ancient type, customs have been handed down unmodified, and it is such a colony as Leif Ericsson might have planted. There is no town; not even a store. Low stone farmhouses, half sunk in the ground and girded by outer stone walls to escape the violent winds, cling to the barrens. Sheep graze at will.

Live in "Smoke Rooms."

So poor is Videro that only one house, that belonging to the schoolmaster, a very great man indeed, has a "glass room." Such an extravagance is not for the average Videro dweller, who lives with his family in a "smoke room," or a converted smoke room. The smoke room, which was once typical of all rural homes in the Faeroes and still survives in many, harks back to the feast halls of the Vikings. Usually it is large, since it is often the only room in the house, except the stable below it for horses and cows, and must serve for the entertainment of the neighbors as well as for all family uses. Around the room there are no windows; only the entrance door and those that open on the original "pullman beds," which may be single—or double-deck.

In the center of the room stands a low stone forge on which burns peat or, rarely, brown coal, and above the fire hangs a wooden chimney, which carries some, but not all, of the smoke to the outside air. Converted smoke rooms with modern improvements boast a stove where once the open fire gleamed, and a skylight glass window where once an aperture in the roof, uncovered in good weather, suffered to admit light.

While the schoolmaster has his "stove room" and is the only man on Videro with a glass room, nearly all the farmhouses on Stromo Island have glass rooms, and in Thorshavn, the capital itself, the communal stove room has been left out in the new, graceless concrete houses.

A glass room is an appendage of the smoke or stove room, having glass windows. Usually it is a parlor and, like parlors of an earlier day, can be used only on state occasions—for a funeral, for a marriage, or a reception of a special guest. Generally the unused parlor contains the family's only furniture, such as a table, a few chairs, a vase with paper flowers, and religious pictures on the wall.

Frequently the glass room is opened for travelers but the stranger usually prefers the family living room, with its warm stove, to these parlors, which give forth the cold, musty odor of a cellar closed for many years.

Like Their Food "High."

The stove room serves, of course, as the dining room. Sheep, fish and whale are staples with the islanders. The first two are common enough to most people. The method of preparing the food for the table in the Faeroes scarcely recommends it to the fastidious. Like most primitive northern peoples, the islanders prefer "high" meat, and to satisfy this desire they hang a skinned sheep in an open shed for about a year before eating it. The carcass acquires a crust like camembert cheese. This is pared off, each man using the knife which he carries constantly. The highly toned meat beneath the crust the natives eat raw. Similarly, whale blubber must season for a month or more before the family makes high feast. Other seafood, however, receives different treatment. Newly caught fish are cleaned and dried and dried—until they become so hard that one's teeth can make no impression. But with a stout hammer the islander will powder his durable codfish on a stone and eat its dust, so to speak.

No one goes to Myggenaes, the westernmost island of the Faeroes, unless the trip is necessary, for it has the most violent surf. Myggenaes consists of a main island, supporting about 125 inhabitants who raise sheep and catch fish. Cursed it is by winds and waves, for the storms that leave Newfoundland and Greenland gather all their forces and loose them here. The rest of the Faeroes and Europe get the storms later; Myggenaes gets them first and worst.

At the very western end of the island is a holm, or islet, separated from the main block by a crevice 75 feet wide. At the outer point of the detached piece stands the westernmost lighthouse of the Faeroes. Its beacon blazes out 413 feet above the sea. At the foot of the lighthouse cliff, their foundations melting year by year in the tossing waters, are two pinnacles of rock on which in summer the gannets rest.

Life in the Lighthouse.

The lighthouse is operated by a Dane, who lives with his family in a house sheltered behind the lighthouse rock. The keeper tells of the awesome storms of winter, when a screaming, whistling blackness descends on the island and the sea lifts up higher, higher, and higher on their rock; when the suffocating blast of stinging salt spray that no living creature can stand against rages mercilessly.

But more telling even than his descriptions is the kerosene lamp which hangs from the ceiling of his living room. It has a large globe with a hole on either side, as if a shot had passed through. During one winter storm a wave that rose up the cliff dashed over the precipice a pebble, which broke his window, passed through his lamp, and struck against the wall. He shows visitors the water-worn stone, which he retains as a keepsake.

The farmer-fishermen of the north islands like Myggenaes and Videro are self-supporting, living on the fish of the sea and the sheep on their barrens, almost independent of what the world has to sell or wishes to buy. Different conditions obtain, however, in the southern and more populous islands, where extensive fisheries have long been operated. A decline in this major industry has been occasioned by many factors. The modern equipment used by steam trawlers elsewhere, newer and quicker methods of packing used in Newfoundland and Norway, and a reduced world demand necessitated a recent extensive program of aid by the Danish government. Figures show a tragic loss of trade; but to a newcomer, Sydero appears to have all the fish any island could possibly wish. On bright days the rocky shore is white with the codfish which are Sydero's chief stock in trade.

Acres of fish lie everywhere, soaking up the fitful Faeroe sunshine. Fish follow the shore line as if they had been cast up by the sea. They cover a slope like slates on a roof, thousands of oval slabs of white fish meat—a thirsty sight! A line, two hooks, and some fish or bird intestines for bait, are all the gear a native needs. When his boat has been anchored, over go the lines, and in come the fish. For the novice, there is a thrill in pulling in a five-to-twenty-five pound fish, but it is an old story to the islander.

Fish are cleaned at once and salted down. Often a ship will return to port with 250,000 pounds of hand-caught fish. Again it will go out and never return at all. These are brave men who go to sea for cod. Each year numbers of island fishermen lose their lives at their trade. Each grim cliff is the tombstone of some schooner and her crew.

Once safely back in port, the schooners unload their fish, which are passed out to women out on the piers, who bend over huge vats of water, scrubbing the cod clean. Pictures of these arduous workers are obtained only with great difficulty, for in the Faeroes, as elsewhere, women do not want their pictures taken unless they are dressed in their best clothes.

Forgotten HEROES

By

ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Saved From Apache Tortures

HAD it not been for the fearless devotion of one of those typical old army sergeants, the career of a distinguished cavalryman and Indian fighter might have been ended at the outset and American literature might never have been enriched by the stirring romances of the old army days in the West which came from his pen. For Gen. Charles King, at the age of eighty-seven one of the few remaining links today between the present and the past when there was a frontier, owes his life to Sergeant Bernard Taylor of the "Fighting Fifth" cavalry.

In 1874, King, then a lieutenant, with a small detachment of the Fifth, was pursuing a band of Apache raiders in the Mogollon mountains of Arizona. Near Sunset pass King, accompanied by Sergeant Taylor, scouting ahead of the detachment, uncovered the ambush which the Indians had laid for the soldiers. The first sign of the presence of the enemy was an arrow which whizzed past his head and buried itself deep into a tree. A moment later he felt a burning sensation as another dart tore through the outer corner of his left eye.

Jumping quickly behind a rock, King waited for the enemy to show themselves and as two dusky forms glided into the open a quick shot from his carbine brought one of them down. Before he could reload a volley from the other warriors splattered on the rock. A bullet pierced his right arm and his carbine dropped from his hand. Realizing instantly that the savages would be upon him before the detachment could come up, King sprang to his feet and started to dash down the slope. But a tough clinging vine tripped him up and a head-long plunge of ten feet left him lying bruised and almost senseless among the rocks. As he fumbled for his revolver, for he was resolved not to let them take him alive, he heard a voice calling "Lieutenant! Where are ye?"

"Here, Sergeant," replied the wounded officer, and a second later Taylor was at his side, had lifted him in his arms and started down the slope. When King fell, the Apaches lost his trail for a few moments but they caught sight of him again as Taylor reached him. Now began a thrilling race for life with the savages gaining on the sergeant with his heavy load. Every few yards he stopped to send a shot from his carbine to delay his pursuers and twice an Apache dropped in his tracks. Taylor was tiring fast and King begged the sergeant to drop him and save his own life. But the sergeant knew what that would mean for the young lieutenant. He staggered on and just as he was about to collapse he heard the welcome sound of the other soldiers crashing through the bushes. They were saved.

F. F. V. and Indian Scout

IN HIS veins flowed some of the proudest blood in all America. His father was Col. Richard Garnett of Virginia, a classmate of Sheridan at West Point, who was commanding officer at Fort Laramie, Wyo., before the Civil war and who as a brigadier general of Virginia troops in the Confederate army lost his life early in the war. His mother was an Indian woman of the great Chief Red Cloud's Ogallala Sioux. So Billy Garnett could claim that he belonged to the "first families of Virginia and the Dakotas."

During the Sioux war of 1876-77 he served under General Crook as a scout and interpreter and it was largely through his energy, influence and work in the field that Chief Crazy Horse, leader of the hostiles who overwhelmed Custer on the Little Big Horn, surrendered at Fort Robinson in the spring of 1877. Then when the war was over and some 9,000 turbulent red men were placed on the Pine Ridge reservation with Dr. V. T. McGillicuddy, a former army surgeon, as agent, Garnett was made chief interpreter.

And this is Doctor McGillicuddy's tribute to him: "During seven years of service, it was largely through Garnett's help and influence that I was able, with the assistance of only ten white men and a force of 500 Indian policemen to hold those 9,000 Indians in check. Many a time during my incumbency as agent, Billy stood by my side in hostile councils, aligned on the side of the Great White Father, when our prospects were good for a buffalo hunt on Ghost Creek," but he never wavered.

"During the Ghost Dance outbreak of 1890-91 Garnett was as usual to the front serving between his people and the whites. He is the last survivor of the old scouts and interpreters; he had few equals and no superiors. He helped open up the West to civilization and he helped make history on the frontier."

Those last words were uttered when only a few years ago. Billy Garnett, old and decrepit from arduous service and exposure during campaigns where the temperature ranged from 110 in the summer to 65 below in the winter, was trying vainly to get a pension of $50 a month from the government he had served so well. At last the grateful republic which he served did grant him a pension, but they cut it down to $20 a month! And until his death in 1928 that was the only recognition which this forgotten hero of the old frontier had ever received.

Maronites Largest of Lebanon's Many Cults

Biblical Lebanon, Asia's only Christian state and the smallest one in the world, has seven different confessions among its 826,618 inhabitants, according to the last census. Despite mass emigration among people of their faith, Christians again maintain their majority. The largest group is the Maronites with 214,313 adherents. In addition there are 20,448 emigrants of this faith in the United States who still pay taxes to the homeland. They form one of the oldest Christian churches. Its history goes back as far as the Fourth century, retaining Aramaic as the church language. Since the Middle ages, the Maronites have recognized the pope, although they have a patriarch of their own. There are only 5,421 Protestants in the Lebanese republic. The ancient churches such as the Syrian Jacobite and the Assyro-Chaldean claim the majority of 11,000 church-goers classed among the minorities. Next to the Maronites in strength are the Sunnite Moslems with 136,040 and the Shilites with 113,536.

Mothers... Watch Children's COLDS

COMMON head colds often "settle" in throat and chest where they may become dangerous. Don't take a chance—at the first sniffle rub on Children's Muterole once every hour for five hours.

Children's Muterole is just good old Muterole, you have known so long, in milder form.

This famous blend of oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other ingredients brings relief naturally. Muterole gets action because it is a scientific "counter-irritant"—not just a salve—it penetrates and stimulates blood circulation, helps to draw out infection and pain.

Keep full strength Muterole on hand, for adults and the milder—Children's Muterole for little tots. All druggists.

Scalp Is Heirloom

The scalp of an Indian chief slain by her father is among the cherished possessions of Mrs. Burch Young, of Fort Worth, Texas. This heirloom and other trappings taken from the dead warrior passed into her hands recently on the death of her mother, Mrs. Ira Long, widow of the former Texas ranger captain of frontier fame. Captain Long died in 1913 at seventy-one. The Indian chief was killed by Captain Long in a hand-to-hand encounter in Lost valley in Jack county, Texas, more than fifty years ago.

MAGAZINE IS PAL OF BOYS

Those boyhood years between the ages of ten and twenty are the impressionable years—the formative years when the fundamental character of a boy is molded into the pattern it will maintain throughout the remainder of his life.

That is why so much importance is placed on the factors that govern the lives of adolescent boys—their companions, their environment, their reading, the food they eat, etc. At this age is determined whether the boy will develop into a cheerful or surly man, generous or selfish, intelligent or dull, ambitious or indolent.

School teachers, librarians, Scout leaders and others engaged in boy activities have found that THE AMERICAN BOY—YOUTH'S COMPANION magazine is one of the most favorable influences a boy between ten and twenty can have. Its stories and articles are a force for good—wholesome, alive, inspiring.

The million or so boys who read this magazine every month consider it their closest friend. In it they find the keenest entertainment, adventure, mystery, athletics, aviation, humor, everything that delights a lively American boy. Its sports articles by famous coaches and athletes help boys win places on their school teams. Its professional articles and biographical sketches aid them in selecting their life's work. Its keenly analytical editorials guide them in their daily problems.

That boy or young man in whom you are interested would have a world of pleasure reading THE AMERICAN BOY—YOUTH'S COMPANION. Make a subscription to this magazine your gift to him. Subscription prices are only $2.00 for one year or $3.00 for three years. Mail your order direct to THE AMERICAN BOY—YOUTH'S COMPANION, 550 W. Lafayette Blvd., Detroit, Michigan.

STATE OF MICHIGAN

In the Circuit Court for the County of Isosco

In the matter of the petition of Grover C. Dillman, State Highway Commissioner for the State of Michigan, for condemnation of private property for public highway purposes in Plainfield Township, Isosco County, Michigan.

At a session of said Court held at the Court House in the City of Tawas City, in said county, on the 1st day of December, A. D. 1931.

PRESENT: Hon. Herman Dehnke

It appearing to the Court that Grover C. Dillman, State Highway Commissioner for the State of Michigan, has this day filed in this Court a petition praying for the appointment of three Court Commissioners to appraise the damages to be paid as compensation for the taking of an easement for public highway purposes in, over, and upon certain private property therein described, and it appearing to the Court that the said Grover C. Dillman, State Highway Commissioner for the State of Michigan, did on the 1st day of September, A. D. 1931, make and file in his office a written determination of the necessity of improving the highway known as trunk line Federal Forest Highway No. 6 in Plainfield Township, Isosco County, Michigan, by constructing the necessary grade and drainage structures and surfacing to a width of twenty-two feet with gravel, in accordance with a survey thereof and plans and specifications made under the supervision and direction of said State Highway Commissioner, and the necessity for taking an easement for public highway purposes in, over, and upon the particular private property therein described, and the damages which in his opinion should be paid as compensation for the taking of said easement in, over, and upon each parcel of said property, in accordance with the provisions of Act 352, Public Acts 1925, as amended, and that all proceedings thereafter were in accordance with said Act as amended, that the said petitioner has taken or is about to take possession of the property described in said determination, in, over and upon which it is necessary to acquire such easement for said public highway purposes, that the said petitioner has been unable to agree with the persons interested as owners or otherwise in any of the said described property on the damages to be paid as compensation for such taking, that the description of said property and the names of the persons interested therein as owners or otherwise, so far as known, who reside in the county of Isosco and those persons mentioned in the attached descriptions as being residents of other counties, or states, are as follows:

NOTICE

On Hearing to be Held Pursuant to Sec. 4 of Act 352 P. A. 1925 As Amended on the Construction and Improvement of Road Project M 035-17 in Isosco County, Michigan.

This is to advise that it is proposed to construct and improve road project M 035 17, Federal Forest Highway Number (6) from Hall north four miles, in Plainfield Township, Isosco County, Michigan.

Being unable, after a good faith effort on my part, to agree with you on the purchase of an easement over and upon certain parcels of land, hereinafter described, of which you are the owners and which are necessary for the State to acquire in order to provide for the construction and improvement of this project, you are therefore hereby notified that I will be present in the Court House in the City of Tawas City, Michigan, at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon, Eastern Standard time, on Tuesday, Dec. 22, 1931, and hold a hearing pursuant to the provisions of Sec. 4 of Act 352, P. A. 1925, as amended, on the proposed construction and improvement and the necessity of taking these particular parcels of land therefor.

GROVER C. DILLMAN, State Highway Commissioner in and for the State of Michigan.

The first and only low-priced car with

Syncro-Mesh Shift and Free Wheeling

ONE of the biggest driving thrills in modern motoring is now available at one of the lowest prices in the automobile market. Syncro-Mesh is combined with Free Wheeling in the new Chevrolet Six!

This is the first time that these two outstanding inventions have been brought together in a low-priced automobile. Syncro-Mesh is the most advanced type of transmission ever developed. Free Wheeling is that new sensation which adds so much to the zest of driving. The two make a matchless combination! They bring about an entirely new kind of driving ease and car control, far beyond anything you have ever enjoyed. They give you quick, quiet shifting and complete mastery of the car under all driving conditions. They enable you to do things in driving that are impossible without both these features.

If you prefer to drive in "standard" gear, Syncro-Mesh enables you to shift back and forth with uncanny speed, silence and precision. This is particularly desirable when descending steep hills or traveling slippery streets. For it enables you to use the engine as a brake, instantly, without slowing down the car.

Then, suppose you want Free Wheeling. Simply press a button on the dash. Thereafter, and until you pull the button out again, you Free Wheel. You coast along with a delightful gliding sensation. And you shift with never-to-be-forgotten ease.

The Free Wheeling mechanism of the new Chevrolet Six is a highly simplified type. Instead of a complicated mechanism with many moving parts, it is a simple, sturdy unit, with only three moving parts.

Then, along with Syncro-Mesh and Free Wheeling, Chevrolet offers you 60-horsepower six-cylinder performance, higher speed, faster acceleration, greater smoothness, smarter Fisher bodies, matchless economy, and a first cost that is among the lowest in the market. Certainly it's the great American value for 1932.

The new Chevrolet Six combines the advantages of two inventions . . . Syncro-Mesh and Free Wheeling . . . to assure quick, quiet, easy gear-shifting and positive control of the car under every driving condition

POULTRY

BEST TO INSULATE
HEN HOUSE WALL

Only Method of Eliminating Frost Deposits.

There is one important advantage in building the poultry house wall with a dead-air space between the studding, and that is that this dead-air space affords considerable insulation and this is the most important factor in controlling the deposit of moisture and frost on the inside wall. Moisture deposit is caused by the inside wall being cold, and anything that can be done to insulate the wall and keep it warmer, will reduce the amount of frost deposit and possibly eliminate it entirely. If it is desired to spend quite a little money on a poultry house wall and make it especially good from this standpoint, it would be advisable to further insulate this wall by using a stiff insulation board between the studding, dividing the 4-inch air space again into two spaces. It is also important to have this insulation practically air-tight, so as not to let the air circulate from one air space into the other. Such a wall will add expense to the house, but it is the only satisfactory way to eliminate frost deposit on the wall entirely. The air spaces in this wall are practically as effective as the insulation material itself, so you can see the importance of having them.

Artificial heat in poultry houses is coming to be used a little more than formerly, especially where standard-bred birds are being raised. If it is used judiciously, it seems to be practical; and that means, of course, that it must not be used enough so as to get the birds used to a nothouse condition. In other words, use a small amount of heat, and use it only at intervals.—Dakota Farmer.

Grade Pullets as They Develop to Maturity

Some pullets mature and start laying sooner than others, but it is not every one who takes advantage of this fact and grades his pullets accordingly. Many poultrymen separate their pullets into grades, putting those pullets into pens by themselves that develop before the others, and are ready to go on laying. This is an advantage for these birds, since they can be put on a laying ration as they are ready for it and allowed to go on laying. They need not be held back from the rest of the flock. It is also an advantage for the remainder of the flock; they will have more room, more of an opportunity at the mash hoppers, and altogether a better chance to grow and develop. As the best of these develop they in turn can be put in a laying pen, and the rest will have a still better chance to develop. Several divisions may not be possible where housing accommodations are limited, but where sufficient pens are available this separation of the most forward birds from the others will be found to be beneficial.

For Winter Eggs

Delaying the housing of pullets until they are well started laying is one of the main causes of a winter and fall molt, a disastrous blow to winter egg production, says Miss Cora Cooke, extension specialist in poultry, Minnesota university farm. Houses and equipment should be ready so that the pullets can be shovled in as soon as they start to lay. A ready house is one that is clean, thoroughly disinfected, insulated for winter and well ventilated in the winter as well as in the summer.

Don't have a lot of fixing to be done on the house after the pullets are in, Miss Cooke admonishes, because it worries them too much.

She advises sorting the pullets, keeping the big, thrifty, yellow-legged ones and shipping the runty, pale ones. Any surplus of good pullets should be sold, as an overcrowded house is not conducive to profits even with the best of hens. Miss Cooke also advocates separating the pullets into two lots, if some are further developed than others.

Give Hens Real Home

There is nothing that will have greater influence on the poultry raiser's success or failure than the way in which he houses his flock. Birds, no matter how well fed, will not return maximum profits unless well housed. The poultry house is the hen's home, and to be comfortable and give good production, the house should have proper ventilation, insulation and sanitation, a proper location, plenty of light, be dry, and have ample floor space.

Hens Eggs Bigger

It has been shown that if birds are handled properly, they will lay about 80 per cent as many eggs as year-old hens as they did as pullets. The egg will be larger and have a greater market value. Throughout the year pullet eggs will run smaller in size than hen eggs, but for about eight weeks they will be much smaller and bring only about 75 per cent as much. Eggs from hens will also be worth considerable more for hatching purposes than eggs from pullets.

BERMUDA GETS STREET CARS

FOR many years the people of Bermuda and the visitors to that charming island in the Atlantic have been satisfied with such transportation as was afforded by old fashioned horse-drawn vehicles and by bicycles. Automobiles were barred. Just recently, however, the capital city of Hamilton became "modern" for it acquired a street railway. The photograph shows a scene at the official opening of the line, an event that brought out the residents of the little town en masse.

LUNCHEON FOR BRIDE

FOR the occasion either before or after the nuptials, there is nothing which the hostess can afford which will be too much trouble. For the beginning the following cocktail will be most dainty:

Cupid's Cocktail.
Boil together one-third of a cupful of sugar with one cupful of water, or better, canned fruit juice, for two minutes, then add four tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and cool. Chill one cupful each of seeded white grapes, red cherries, diced pears, and pine apple. Mix all the ingredients together and serve in glass cups placed on pink hearts on serving plates.

Chicken Croquettes.
Make one cupful of white sauce using chicken stock with milk or cream. Take two cupfuls of minced chicken, one-half teaspoonful each of salt, celery salt and onion salt and one-fourth teaspoonful of paprika. Mix all the ingredients, cool, then form into small croquettes, cone or cylinder shaped. Roll in beaten egg to which two tablespoonfuls of water has been added, then in crumbs and set away to chill. Fry in hot fat and serve with mushroom sauce.

Heart Cakes.
Make a cake batter, baking it in a shallow pan. Take one-half cupful of sugar well creamed, flavoring to taste, two-thirds of a cupful of milk and two cupfuls of pastry flour sifted with three teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Mix well and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs. Bake in a moderate oven. Cut when cool into heart shapes and cover the entire cake with pink frosting.

To make the frosting use four tablespoonfuls of "ot cream, two tablespoonfuls of butter and one and two-thirds cupfuls of confectioners' sugar. Mix the cream, butter, salt and flavoring, add a little red coloring, and the sugar a little at a time, beating well. Arrange each cake on a paper dolly and insert darts of gold paper.

Care of Captive Turtles
Turtles live well in captivity in a screened box filled with earth if the earth is renewed every few months and kept moist at all times. They are disinclined to feed in winter, but in warm weather will eat angleworms, slugs and insects, also strawberries, tomatoes, lettuce, melon-rind and other succulent fruits.

A STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

WHY SOME BIRDS FLY SOUTH AND SOME STAY

WHEN Peter Rabbit asked Prickly Porky the Porcupine if it was discontent that caused so many of the birds to fly away to the sunny Southland at the coming of cold weather he did it more to change the subject than with any hope of learning anything. Prickly Porky had been preaching to Peter about contentment, and it had made Peter feel a little uncomfortable. You know nobody likes to be preached to, Peter least of all. So he tried to change the subject.

Now he didn't have the least idea that Prickly Porky would really know anything about the matter. Like almost every one else he always thought

So just imagine how surprised he was when Prickly Porky stopped eating long enough to look down at him and say in the most scornful way, as if he thought Peter the most stupid fellow that ever was to ask such a foolish question:

"Discontent has nothing to do with it. It's simply a matter of getting enough to eat. I thought everybody knew that."

Peter didn't like the way in which Prickly Porky said that, but he wanted to know more, so he wisely swallowed the sharp retort which was on the tip of his tongue. "I didn't," he confessed very humbly, "and I don't quite understand it now. Little Tommy Tit doesn't seem to have any trouble finding enough to eat in this weather, and if such a little fellow as he can stand the cold weather I of Prickly Porky as rather a stupid fellow. He is slow moving and does little but eat and sleep, and altogether regarded by his more active neighbors as rather stupid. So Peter didn't really expect to learn anything when he asked the question. It was a matter that had bothered Peter for a long time. He never could see any sense in those long journeys which so many of his feathered friends made every year. If Tommy Tit the Chickadee and Drummer the Woodpecker, and a few others who stay all winter could stand the cold why couldn't the rest? He had studied and studied the matter without growing one bit wiser.

should think that Welcome Robin and Carol the Lark and Goldie the Oriole and all the others could do it too." "What does Welcome Robin eat?" demanded Prickly Porky. "Why, worms and bugs and things," replied Peter in a rather uncertain voice. "Seen any worms and bugs and things since Jack Frost arrived?" asked Prickly Porky and the tone of his voice was enough to make Peter feel very foolish. "No-o," confessed Peter, "but—" "But what?" demanded Prickly Porky sharply. "But doesn't Tommy T. eat worms and bugs? And doesn't Drummer the Woodpecker? If they can find them why can't Welcome Robin and the others?" Peter felt very pleased with his retort.

"Why don't you eat nuts the way Happy Jack Squirrel does?" demanded Prickly Porky.

"Because I haven't got the right kind of teeth for cracking them," replied Peter. "What a silly question!" "So if you had nothing to eat but nuts you would starve while Happy Jack would grow fat, wouldn't you?" persisted Prickly Porky.

"I guess I would," replied Peter, looking puzzled. "But what has that got to do with Welcome Robin and Drummer the Woodpecker?"

"Nothing!" replied Prickly Porky. "Only Drummer has a bill for making holes in trees and in the bark where certain kinds of worms are always to be found, and where bugs hide their eggs. Welcome Robin hasn't and there you are. Drummer can find a meal any time where Welcome Robin would starve. It's the same way with Tommy Tit. He eats millions of eggs of insects, so tiny that you wouldn't be able to see them at all probably, and he finds them on the twigs of trees and hidden under the bark. Welcome Robin never could fill up on those, and even if he could, he couldn't get them. His feet are not made for clinging upside down to little twigs as Tommy Tit's are. That's all there is to it. Those who can find enough to eat stay, and those who can't find enough to eat go. Simple, isn't it?"

Aleck McCall's Mad Jealousy

By CHARLES SLOAN REID

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) (WNU Service.)

ALECK McCALL was swinging along the mountain trail by long strides. His rifle lay across his shoulder, and in his hand he carried a brace of pheasants. Aleck was happy. There was a new little cabin just half a mile ahead to which Aleck had carried Polly Goodiron less than a month before, a bride.

Old man Goodiron, his wife and two daughters had moved in on the Cullowhee range five years before, from somewhere over in Transylvania. Polly was the elder of the two girls; and some had hinted that she had left a sweetheart in the county from which she came, this being the reason she had put off Aleck McCall for so long, for McCall was the outstanding young mountaineer on the range. Aleck's stride was almost a dance step, as he hurried towards home. "Polly, Polly, Polly, the purtiest gal in the world," he kept singing in his thoughts.

Around the head of a little ravine, across the nose of a ridge, then along the crest of it he hurried until he had reached a spot where a huge boulder marked the fork in the trail. Here McCall paused to contemplate in silent joy the sight of the little home.

Suddenly the young mountaineer grounded the butt of his rifle, and the brace of pheasants slipped from his hand. In the twilight now gathered about the cabin door were to be seen a man and a woman. The woman was Polly, but the man was a total stranger. He was dressed like a Westerner, Aleck thought, for he wore one of those broad-brim, heavy white hats which he had seen worn a few times by men returned from the West. But the part that filled his soul with horror was the sight of Polly in the stranger's arms.

The embrace had lasted for only an instant; but in that instant all of the joy had gone out of Aleck McCall's soul. He lowered his gaze to the rocks at his feet, and his fingers gripped his rifle barrel with a clutch that might have crushed anything but steel. He stood there thus for some moments, then slowly the gun stock came to his shoulder, as once more his eyes turned towards the cabin lot. Polly and the stranger were standing only a little way apart now. Slowly, slowly, the rifle barrel came toward a level. Presently it steadied, with the barrel pressed against the boulder, and the muzzle of it trained upon the cabin lot. The side of Aleck's face sank toward the firelock, and his finger clutched the trigger. Now his eye drew the bead of the rifle along the top of the barrel. A moment later a sharp "Crack!" rang out over the ravine yards. Before the cabin door, a hundred yards away, the stranger staggered backward and went to the ground on his back, his big hat flying before him. A scream went up from Polly's throat; and Aleck McCall set his teeth down hard upon his lower lip. Turning aside from the rock he retraced his way back along the mountain trail.

"God, thar ain't nothin' more for me to stay around here for," he exclaimed, after a long silence.

Presently his shoulders began to sway from side to side, and hot tears stole from his eyes. "But I got to have one more look of her, afore I git out—I-I jes' got to!" he cried, no more than half aloud. When he arose from the log, the darkness of night had gathered. Once more he set out for the cabin.

When McCall strode down into the clearing about the cabin, with a queer smile he noted the gleam of freight from beneath the cabin door. He crept forward to the doorstep, never once turning his gaze toward the spot where the stranger had fallen at the crack of his rifle. He heard voices inside of the house.

"Polly, what yuh reckon's a keepin' Aleck? I shore am anxious to see what yuh got when yuh got married."

It was a man's voice speaking. The red arose to Aleck McCall's temples. Seizing the latch string in the cabin door he gave it a jerk. The door swung inward. Then, as his big form stood framed in the doorway, Polly suddenly threw herself upon his breast, her arms around his neck. "Brother Bill's come home, Aleck!" she cried, at the same time squeezing his neck so hard he hardly could breathe.

The stranger came forward and thrust out his hand. "Yeah," he said, "I had a hard time a findin' the old folks an' these kids."

Aleck's eyes stared unseeingly for a moment. "What yuh mean, Polly?" he asked.

"Why, Aleck; yuh see, I never told yuh about Bill, c'ase he had to run away six years ago. But thet scrape's been settled, so Bill's come back."

"An' some galoot took a crack at me out o' the woods jes' time I got here tonight," laughed Bill. "Must ha' took me for a houn'."

"I reckon," agreed Aleck. "Clipped a hole slap through muh hat."

It was an hour later that Polly got a chance to whisper to Aleck: "I shore am glad yuh's so jealous o' me, Aleck! I knowed hit was you as fired thet shot—ain't another man on the Cullowhee as could ha' done it like thet, an' never clipped a hair."

Nurse Cow Saved Colt

Walter A. Gruenberg, Columbia county, Wisconsin, lost a mare last spring that had a young colt. Gruenberg did not like the idea of having to hand-feed his colt, so he installed the foal in the dairy barn where he kept a large number of Holstein cows. After much work the colt was persuaded to get his meals from one of the cows.

This fact brought out information from Kentucky that many thoroughbred horsemen there are raising their foals on a nurse cow via the bucket route.—Prairie Farmer.

CHAPTER X

Lee Confesses His Love

Her tears ceased presently, and she rose, bathed her face and spent some time before the mirror, doing everything she knew to efface the blotchy effect of them. Life seemed very dark and hopeless. She felt that she had done everything, tried everything, in her power to put things right, and that it had been utterly unavailing. Well, she had better do as he had said, and go. And yet she was sure that he was so near to loving her. Last night during the storm, how gentle and dear he had been. Very willing, too, to hold her close in his arms and press his somber face caressingly to her gold hair. Surely he had loved her then? Surely it had been love that had made him unable to bear the torments of jealousy that Jocelyn's lies had aroused; had made him abandon plans and engagements, and get into his powerful car and come post haste to her here, to learn the truth for himself? And yet, if it were love, he was utterly unwilling to own it. What was left for her to do? Just to do as he had said, she supposed, and leave him. . . . Should she? Now? Right away? And let him find her gone when he got back? The idea held sway for a while, but somehow she couldn't bring herself to act upon it. She knew it was hopeless and yet she must just see him again before she went; must let him know that she was going. . . . But he seemed in no hurry to get back to her. So dinner was a lonely meal that evening, that seemed to be threatening to choke her with each mouthful. Then the thought struck her that he did not intend to come back. No, that could not very well be, because he had taken none of his things. Oh, well, whether he came back or not, she would go tomorrow morning; first thing. Back to her father, confessing that failure she had told Jim she would not confess. . . .

She went to her room and began gathering her belongings, ready for packing in the morning. Packing some of them now; feeling wretchedly unhappy; her heart aching as it never had ached before.

She was engaged in this way, when suddenly she heard him return. She straightened up and stood rigidly still at the sound of his steps. He came straight to her door and opened it without preliminaries of any sort, shut it behind him and leaned back against it. She was startled at sight of his face, for she had never seen him look just as he was looking now.

"What are you doing?" he demanded, his voice strained and queer.

"Packing," she answered, "I'm going."

"To leave me?"

"Yes. You told me to."

Their eyes met in a look that held. Suddenly he came toward her; caught her arms, looked down into her face with burning eyes, and said:

"You're not. Do you understand? And don't ever shut me out again; as you did this afternoon. Don't. . . . D'you hear?" The words were shaking from his lips as if the emotion that prompted him were threatening to rend him.

"You've beaten me, Lucy. I was lying to you when I said that I didn't long for you. . . . I'm mad with longing for you. . . . You've worked your woman-power on me and beaten me. . . . I love you. . . . Love you." The repetition came with an emphasis that made the words sound curiously desperate, as if it were indeed a surrender of all his strength. . . .

"Jim! Is this true?" she asked, and her heart was knocking hard in her breast.

"True?" He laughed, oddly. "True? When I'm so mad for you that I can't think of anything else? . . . When your face comes between me and everything I try to do? When I'm giddy. . . . drunk with the nearness of you. . . . True?" He laughed again in the same way and the strength of his hands around her arms was so great that it was painful. Suddenly he pulled her close. . . . "Love you? . . . Do I love you. . . .?" he cried in a low, broken voice. "I'll show you how I love you. . . . I'll show you how true it is. . . ." His arms went wholly round her and he crushed her up to him, so that she could scarcely breathe. Then she found his face close upon hers, and his kisses on her hair, on her cheeks, on her throat. . . .

"Jim. . . . Jim. . . ." she faltered out. . . .

"Love you? Do I love you. . . .?" Words fell from his lips in a torrent of passion, and then went to silence as his lips closed down upon hers.

A timeless moment passed, while she stood there crushed in his arms; unable to move; almost unable to breathe for the passionate strength of him. She was lost in the ecstasy of his kisses; lost in the heaven of his love; her heart beat out sheer rapture in her breast.

He raised his head presently, a queer, triumphant laugh breaking from him; then looked down into her face, trying to see her eyes. But she kept them lowered, until, with a hand beneath her chin, he forced her to look up at him.

"You asked me whether it was true. . . ." he said, unsteadily. "Is it, Lucy?"

"Yes," she whispered. "It is true. . . ."

"Are you satisfied now that I love you?" he went on.

"Yes, Jim. You love me. It is true this time. . . . Real. . . . I have no doubts. . . ."

"This time?" he questioned.

"It was not true or real before. When you made me love you, right at the beginning. . . . When you held me in your arms. . . . Kissed me. . . ."

"It was not real then, Jim. . . . But now. . . . This. . . . Oh, yes it's real this time. . . ." She breathed a little sigh and, leaning her head upon his breast again, his arms tightened round her again, roughly; savagely almost. And his voice was queer and harsh as he said:

"I think it's always been true. . . . Always been real. . . . I think I've always loved you, Lucy. Anyway, you've always tormented me; maddened me; it's been sheer torture to be near you. Torture to be within arm's reach of you. . . . To long for you. . . ."

"Always, Jim?" She twisted her face upwards as she asked the question. "Even that night. . . . That night of our wedding day. . . . When you told me that you hated me?"

"Oh, I don't know!" he cried.

"There no precise moment, or hour, or day for these things. They just happen. Take you unaware. Steal upon you to destroy your peace. . . . To weaken your resolutions. . . . Perhaps hate is love, when it is like that. . . . Burning. . . . Torturing. . . . Don't question, Lucy. . . . Take my love. . . . Give me yours. . . . Forget everything that has been. . . . Bury the past. . . . Let the future Longed to kiss your lips. . . . It's purgatory to want anything as I have wanted you." He was punctuating his words with kisses that fell on her hair, on her cheeks and lips and throat. . . .

"Jim. . . . Jim. . . ." she faltered out breathlessly, amazed, almost afraid, of the wildness of his passion.

"Lucy, I'm mad tonight, I think. . . . Mad with longing for you. . . . Mad with the sweetness and the beauty of you. . . . Do you know how lovely you are? Do you know what magic there is in your eyes? And on your lips. . . .? And they are mine now, aren't they, Lucy? Aren't they mine now?"

"I am all yours, Jim. . . . You know that. . . . I always have been, ever since the first day I saw you. . . . Jim, you know that, don't you? There's never been anyone else for me. . . ."

"Ames?" The question shot out from between his lips and hers, as he moved the fraction of an inch from a kiss.

"Never, do you doubt it? I liked him. . . . was fond of him as I might be of a brother. . . . But I never have loved any man but you. . . ."

"He says that he is going to make you leave me. . . . He can't, can he?"

"Only one person can make me leave you, Jim; you yourself. . . ."

"Then you'll never leave me now, Lucy. I'll never let you out of my sight again! Do you know what it is to long for anything as I have been longing for you? I don't believe you do. . . . I don't believe anyone could. . . ."

"Jim," she answered, lifting her lips to his, "I love you, too. . . . Don't you think that I must know something about it? I've loved you all the time you have been saying that you hated me. . . . All the time I thought you were in love with Jocelyn. . . . Don't you think that perhaps I know something of what the longing of love can be? You have at least always known that I love you. . . . while I have had to think that you hated me. . . ." She crushed that off her lips with his own. "Ah, don't!" he cried. "Girl, it's been such hell. . . . But you haven't thought lately that I hated you. . . ."

You have known that I loved you? Haven't you? Isn't that what you meant yesterday? Isn't that what you tried to make me confess? Well, you've done it. You have got it from me. Beaten me. I'm done. . . . Can't hold out against you any longer. I told you I was only a man, Lucy. Nothing more; nothing less. And you have known what it means, have you? You have known the torment of it, too? Then you know what it is to me now to hold you in my arms. . . . To kiss your lips. . . . To know that at last you are mine. Mine. All the sweetness of you. . . . All the beauty. . . . He pushed her away suddenly, until she was at arms' length from him, and looked her up and down with hungry eyes. "You're some sort of miracle, aren't you, Lucy?" he added shakily. "Can anything so lovely be real?"

She laughed, rather tremulously; immensely happy at his admiration, and drew herself away from him further yet, until his clinging hands left her free, and she stood at a slight distance, looking at him with exquisite eyes, a smile on her lips.

"You're rather nice to look at yourself," she said, softly. "Hasn't anyone ever told you about it before?" There was a touch of shy humor in her voice, and, as he came toward her she backed away, half-teasing; half, really shy. He started after her, hands outstretched, eyes lit.

"Don't play with me, Lucy," he said, a curious tone almost like a warning in his voice. "Don't play the fool with me. I can't stand it. . . ."

"Why, darling," she cried softly, melting to a wonderful tenderness. "I'm not playing with you. . . . I'm just trying to realize it. Just trying to believe that it isn't a dream, and that I shan't wake up in a moment and find things. . . . as they were. . . ." She caught a breath.

"Then if you are not playing with me, come here and show me that you love me. . . . Prove it to me. . . ." he demanded. She moved toward him again, that sweet, young shyness still in her eyes, and on her lips. Then she held out her hands and finished the short journey at a little run. He remained unmoving, letting his arms hang at his sides, letting her stand close before him. . . .

"Show me that you love me," he said again. She raised her hands and slid them up round his neck; pulled down his head, and laid her lips to his.

"Jim. . . . Jim. . . . I love you. . . ." she whispered between soft little meetings of their lips. "Love you with all my heart and soul. . . . Love you so much that I don't see how I could love you more. . . . And I want your love just as much as you want mine. . . . I've longed for it, just as you have. . . . And I'm yours. . . . Wholly. . . . Absolutely yours. . . . Dear, believe it; because it is the truth. . . ." At that his arms were round her again, and reality was once more sent spinning into space. . . .

"Jim," she sighed, presently. "I think I'm the happiest girl alive. . . ."

"If conquest is the height of a woman's happiness, you ought to be," he answered, still holding her close, as if he were afraid to let her go. "For never was there a man more abjectly beaten by a woman than I am beaten by you. . . ."

And right at the very height of this wonderful new happiness of hers, she had a sudden feeling of chill fear.

"That is a. . . a queer way to put it, Jim," she said, not quite steadily. "Is it being beaten to win what you want? To get the love you have been longing for?"

"Being beaten," he answered slowly, "is finding that you are weaker than the force you have been fighting, and surrendering to it. . . . Giving up the fight. . . . Owning up that you can't stand against it any longer. . . . That is being beaten, Lucy. . . ."

She tried to draw away; the little fear in her eyes now. But he held her fast and would not let her move.

"And that is what has happened to you?" she said, after a moment.

"Yes," he said, with a short laugh. "That is what has happened to me."

"And, Jim. . . . do you want to stand against it any longer? Against love? Against me?"

He pulled her strongly to him. "There's only one thing I want at the moment," he answered, with another laugh. "And that's—you."

She was silent for some time, recovering from that, and realizing that he had said something from which she needed to recover.

"Jim!" she said at last, the name a cry.

"Don't question. . . . Don't think. . . . Take the love that's burning me up, and give me yours. . . ." he said, his lips touching hers. . . . But she strained away from him, the fear beating all through her now; her newly won paradise already shimmering away into cold, remote distances. . . .

"Jim," she faltered. "Is it love that you are giving me? Is it love that you are asking me to give you in return? Is it, Jim?"

"What do you think?" he countered. "Ask yourself, Jim. And tell me the truth. . . . Is it love. . . .?" She was pulling away from him, but he still held her tight.

"Can't you see that I'm mad with love for you?"

"Yes," she said slowly, a note of tears in her voice. "But, Jim, there is a difference between. . . . madness and love. . . ."

"Do you expect me to love you coolly? Do you think I can love you and not be mad for you? What are you asking of me, Lucy?" he said, with a touch of violence. She raised her blue eyes to his, very straightly, and he saw the fear that was in them now.

"No," she said, bravely. "I do not ask that of you, nor anything else that is impossible in the love between man and woman, and, Jim, I do not want it. . . . But there is a difference between love with madness, and madness without love. . . . There is a difference, Jim, and you know it. . . ."

"Don't play with me, Lucy. . . . I can't stand it. . . ." he said, warningly. "Whatever my emotion for you is, it is something that is stronger than myself. . . . And anything that is stronger than oneself is dangerous. Dangerous, Lucy. Do you understand?" The words fell from his lips harshly, and the arms that held her quivered with the intensity of their own strength.

"Let me go, Jim," she said, in a queer, low tone.

He crushed her closer yet.

"No," he said, without compromise. She did not struggle against him; she just remained passive in his arms and said again:

"Jim, let me go."

There was a moment's hesitation this time before he spoke. Then he said:

"Why? When more than anything in the world, I want to hold you in my arms?"

"Because I've got to think. And I cannot think with your arms around me," she answered.

"And I do not want you to think. . . ." he retorted. "I want you only to love me. . . ."

She sent up a silent little prayer for wisdom; for the power to think clearly and to do what was best; above all for the strength to withstand the drugging sweetness of his nearness, the heaven that lay within the circle of his arms, the ecstasy of his kisses. . . .

"Let me go," she said, a third time.

There was a moment when she was crushed so close that she could scarcely breathe. Then she was thrust violently from him, and he was crying out:

"D—n it! You beat me always! Well, there you are. . . . I've let you go. . . . Now you can think. Only, Lucy, think quickly. I've let you go, but my arms are already hungry for you. . . ."

DAIRY

USES TOBACCO TO FIGHT CATTLE LICE

Dairyman Got Good Results, He Reports.

While we are considering the dairy industry, here's a seasonal suggestion. Do your cattle rub and give indications of itching? Possibly, perhaps I should say probably, they have some cattle lice. Now, if you had one of these lice on your hand you could see it readily enough, but when it is smugling down in a cow's winter coat, it isn't very visible.

Most farmers say that these lice come from sparrows by means of bedding in which sparrows have rested. According to Prof. R. H. Pettit of the entomology department of the M. S. C., this is a superstition and not scientific fact. He says that the lice found on cattle do not molest other animals and that sparrow lice would not live on cattle.

Just why cattle lice confine their activities to winter and early spring I do not understand, but such seems to be the case. There are probably a number of equally good ways to rid the cattle of these irritating pests. We have tried several. Last winter I mixed up a solution of "Black Leaf 40" (powdered tobacco) at the rate of a teaspoonful to a gallon of water and used this with splendid results. I do not know whether this is the best strength to use or not, as I was unable to find any directions for using this poison for such a purpose. Anyway, it seemed to stop the itching without harming the cattle. Last week we went over all our cattle, including the cows, herd sire and young stock, with such a solution, rubbing it well into the hide with a stiff brush. This is a case of where it is good policy to "rub the fur the wrong way." Our milk flow has increased since the treatment.—Michigan Farmer.

Poor Feeders Usually Have Poor Production

Which are in the majority—poor dairy herds or poor dairymen? Some years ago, at a national dairy show, a Jersey cow was on display that had made a ridiculously small amount of butterfat in the previous year. She was the poorest cow in the local cow-testing association. Professor Van Pelt purchased the cow and recorded her milk and fat for the next year with good feeding—not forced feeding but intelligent, economical feeding—and her record was in excess of 500 pounds fat. Such a cow could never have been a poor cow. The trouble was probably with her owner. The late Henry Glendinning, when in his prime as a lecturer at farmers' institutes, was in the habit of saying that the reason there were so many poor cows in the country was because there were so many poor feeders and he would then cite experiences similar to the above. Business conditions are against us but it is unquestionably true that for many of us there is plenty of room for improvement right at home on our own farms.—Montreal Family Herald.

Soy Beans in Feed

Roughly speaking, fed with farm grains in the proportion needed to make a balanced ration for a dairy cow, ground soy beans are equal pound for pound, to such feeds as linseed meal and cottonseed meal. Thus when linseed meal brings $40 to $45 a ton, soy beans have a value of $120 to $135 a bushel, less the cost of grinding.

A good crop of soy beans will yield about 20 bushels per acre, which at $1.10 a bushel would bring a gross income of $22 an acre. This compares very favorably with oats at 55 bushels per acre at present prices. Practically every Wisconsin farmer can grow enough soy beans to supply his cow herd with all the protein needed for supplementing his ordinary grains and should do so.—Wisconsin Agriculturist.

When Cows Chew Bones

When cows chew bones or wood it is usually an indication that there is something lacking in the feed. In a good many cases these cows are not getting enough mineral and this in turn is usually an indication that the ration is not well balanced. Dr. G. S. Weaver of the South Dakota state college at Brookings, suggests that where this condition is noted that bonemeal and salt should be kept before the cattle all the time. The bonemeal may be fed alone, with the grain ration at the rate of 2 to 5 pounds per 100 pounds of grain or it may be mixed with salt at the rate of 1 pound of salt to 4 pounds of bonemeal.

Long Dairy Record

Martin Neekser, who lives near Alma, has kept a cow herd for 22 years and never, with the exception of the 61 head he is creep-feeding this year, has he ever grain-fed any of his calves. He plans to cull to 75 head the best individuals out of his 70 Herford cows and his 14 coming two-year-old heifers. His cows are bred so that about half of them calve in November and December, with the remaining ones calving before April.—Kansas Farmer.

Dangerous days
AHEAD

IN MIDWINTER you and your children need reserves of sturdy resistance to ward off those nasty colds. Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil will help you gain this resistance. Its Vitamin A promotes growth and fortifies against the common cold. And then there's a wealth of Vitamin D that helps build strong bones and teeth. Doctors will tell you how good it is for run-down adults as well as growing children. And the pleasant flavor of Scott's Emulsion makes it easy to take. Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J. REVELRY AND WIT IN FAMOUS CLUBS

Gathering Places of Old England and America.

Thoroughly enjoying the experiences of Lady Slane, who betook herself and her eighty-eight years to a house in Hampstead which she had observed thirty years before, I was reminded that Hampstead Heath was the meeting place of the Kit-Kat club of Addison's time, and that recalled other clubs of note. It would be interesting, if one had time, to trace the origin of clubs down to the present days when we have so many that we are in line to be clubbed to death!

It is quite the natural thing for those who are interested in the same things to enjoy contact with others of the same mind, so we band ourselves together in order to compare notes and get inspiration for better action. Though I believe that the Saturday club, of New England origin, held the opposite idea, being an association of some fifteen or twenty men who were elected on the ground that they were generally opposed to each other in mind, character and pursuits, and therefore conversation would assume as animated tone.

In the Sixteenth century, taverns, and in the Eighteenth, coffee houses, took the place of the clubs of today. There was the Mermaid tavern where rare Ben Jonson held sway, his genial personality ruling by royal right those "sealed of the tribe of Ben," among them being Shakespeare, Beaumont and Fletcher, Donne and Sir Walter Raleigh who was the founder of the Mermaid club. It was Dryden who made Will's coffee house the center for literary men and wits, gathered together to exchange pleasantries and criticisms; where Pope found inspiration, and Swift was told that he would never be a poet.

In 1700 the Kit-Kat club was founded, composed of such men as Addison and Steele, Richardson and Horace Walpole. Addison speaks of a Hum-drum club to which he once belonged being made up of very honest gentlemen of peaceable dispositions who used to sit together and smoke their pipes, saying nothing until midnight. But the Kit-Kat is said to have taken its origin from a nut-ton pie. Then there were the Beef-steak club and others founded upon eating and drinking, which are points wherein most men agree.

A little later came the famous Literary club, with Samuel Johnson as its leading light, and Boswell his satellite; Johnson, the great dictator, objecting to David Garrick as a member of the club because he did not recognize the dignity of the theatrical profession and did not care to sit next to a mere player; scolding Goldsmith because he wrote like an angel and talked like poor Poll, later running with his "Vicar of Wakefield" to a publisher to defray expenses of which Goldsmith had taken no thought. Edmund Burke, the politician; Sheridan, the author of "School for Scandal" and the "Rivals," and Sir Joshua Reynolds, the founder of this club, and one of the greatest of English portrait painters were among the members.

Place for the Amateur
There is a current tendency fostered, I regret to say, by many of our clever writers—to scoff at the "amateur" and the "dilettante." This is an attitude with which I have very little sympathy. We might as well take our food by sniffing at another person's plate as to confine our musical activities to an admission fee at somebody else's performance. If we keep on letting other people do things for us in that way, another century will find us with nothing of common interest to say to each other and no means by which to say it. Conversation is already becoming a lost art. An evening of talk is a rarity. One plays bridge.—Harold Bauer, in the Etude.

Laidlawville

Mrs. Wm. Benedict called on Mrs. Thos. Baxter Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Wm. Moore and Mrs. C. M. VanHorn spent Wednesday with Mrs. Louis Binder.

The new well at the school has been completed. Water was reached at 125 feet.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. VanHorn, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Baumgardner attended the shower on Mr. and Mrs. Burt at the Grant town hall last Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Springer have moved from the Grant farm to East Tawas.

Chris Sommerfield of Munger and Herman Batzer of Detroit spent Monday night with John Mathie on the Grant farm on the Plank road has been purchased by Glenn McLeod of Chicago.

The thief or thieves who have feasted for the past year on Mrs. Thos. Baxter's chickens will have to look elsewhere for their meat supply. Other elderly people should be on the lookout for it seems that this prowler only preys on the old and crippled. Mrs. Baxter and Mr. Mathieson are both past 80 and have been in poor health for several years. Their chickens have disappeared at the rate of one, two or three a week, nearly always on a Friday or Saturday night. The last two were taken two weeks ago.

Whittemore, 7:30 p. m.—Pantomime, entitled "The Quest for Christ." In the picture which will unfold, you will see the silent and pathetic figures of heathenism as they move before you through the night of ignorance. In all the sky is but one star of hope—the same star that shone over Bethlehem when Christ was born in a manger with the cattle lowing His lullaby. You will hear the voice of Hebrew prophecy and the cry of the starved souls of men. As you see the nations coming to the star, let us remember that in our Christ there resides the hope of their salvation. Special music by Common's orchestra; vocal solo by Mrs. Curtis. COUNTY NORMAL

The Normal course is divided into three thirteen week courses. The second quarter's work was begun last week.

On Tuesday and Wednesday of last week Dr. Johnston, the medical examiner for unit number two of the Children's Fund, conducted a physical examination of the critic room pupils. This examination was conducted as a part of the project begun some time ago. The Normal acted as a clinic. Dr. Johnston will return at a later date and make further observations of the results of this examination.

On Tuesday of this week Professor Powers, the supervisor of the Barberry Eradication Department of the United States Department of Agriculture, gave a talk and showed slides on the common barberry, the harm caused from it, and what is being done to eradicate it in the thirteen states where it is so prevalent. Michigan has a great amount of the barberry.

Weaver From Afar
