LECTURES AT LOCAL L. D. S. CHURCH WELL ATTENDED

Rev. D. T. Williams and the local church officers of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints have been gratified with the response elicited as a result of the lectures Mr. Williams has been delivering on the fundamentals of religion to the local congregation.

The speaker reports that such appreciation has followed these lectures in practically every one of the thirty-six places to which his service has been extended.

Next Friday, January 22, 7:45 p. m., at the local Latter Day Saint church, Tawas City, Mr. Williams will deliver the fourth study of the series under the title "Seeking Divine Approbation." The lecturer presents in a positive manner with very interesting side lights the principles of Christian philosophy, avers the local pastor, Marshall J. McGuire. At a meeting of the Washington Bi-Centennial Executive Committee held Wednesday night it was agreed that the Tawas City public schools would give a George Washington play February 22 at the State Theatre. This play will be part of a series of events which will be held between February 22 and July 4th in celebration of the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington.

The Washington Bi-Centennial Executive Committee was elected at a joint meeting of committees appointed by the Council, Board of Education, Masons, Twentieth Century Club, American Legion and Tawas City Improvement Association held Thursday, January 14, at the City Hall. The following are members of the Washington Bi-Centennial Executive Committee: A. E. Giddings, chairman, H. Read Smith, secretary, Alfred Boomer, L. H. Braddock, F. F. Taylor, Mrs. L. H. JOE E. BROWN COMING TO FAMILY THEATRE SUNDAY IN COLLEGE DAYS COMEDY

Joe E. Brown, one of the most popular comedians of the screen, comes to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, Sunday and Monday, in his latest First National comedy, "Local Boy Makes Good."

Brown, who has indulged in athletic pictures of many sorts, including football, baseball and boxing, is a track man in "Local Boy Makes Good," and wins laurels for his college—and his lady—as a sprinter, putting the usual number of typical Brown effects into his athletic efforts.

"Local Boy Makes Good," which is based on a play by J. C. and Elliott Nugent, was directed by Merwyn LeRoy. Among the supporting cast are many favorites including Dorothy Lee, Edward Woods, Ruth Hall, Wade Boteler, Edward J. Nugent, William Burress and John Harrington.

Mr. Brown's big local following will be agreeably surprised by the human quality of "Local Boy Makes Good," which does not depend on slapstick for its appeal. Joe provides the laughs—but in a different way. It's his best picture to date, he declares.

JOHN GILBERT SPLENDID IN "WEST OF BROADWAY"

John Gilbert makes a dashing American vaquero in "West of Broadway," his new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring vehicle, which plays Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at the Family Theatre, East Tawas.

Beginning with a glimpse of Gilbert in A.E.F. uniform, reminiscent of his role in "The Big Parade," the new offering brims with striking action and dialogue. Gilbert's characterization is most impressive.

It is by far the most successful of his sound film efforts. El Brendel heads the supporting cast as Gilbert's Swedish man-Friday and Lois Moran scores as the leading lady.

Most of the picture was filmed out on the Western desert and mountain stretches and the pictorial enjoyment is appreciated. The story concerns a rich young man who returns from war, broken in health from wounds, to discover himself jilted by the girl he thought waiting for him. To drown his sorrow he gets drunk and marries the first girl he meets in a night club. Later, to cast her off, he goes to his ranch in Arizona, not realizing that she really loves him and wants to make him happy. But the heroine proves herself equal to the emergency and by an unusual plot twist the pair are eventually reunited.

SCHOOL NOTES

Prepared and Edited by a Committee of the Student Council

The programme given Friday afternoon at the high school was sponsored by the Junior class. The seventh and eighth grades, Mr. Bollinger's room, were invited upstairs to hear it. The programme in order was as follows: Popular songs by the high school; a poem by Clair Thompson; a vocal solo by Miss Sage; piano solo by Eileen Nevanpaa; Radio Skit by Arnold Hoshach, Glen Barnes and James Mark; popular songs by the high school.

Final examinations for the semester come next week. They will begin Tuesday afternoon in the high school and continue for the remainder of the week.

A couple of new subjects will be offered next semester. Advanced Civics will take the place of Economics and the present Advanced Algebra class will be followed by Arithmetic. The second semester of Botany will consist mostly of text book work, rather than the field and other general work of the first semester.

We regret that illness still compels Velma Harger, a member of the Junior class, to be absent from school.

Preparations have begun for the general school program to commemorate the George Washington Bi-centennial. This program will probably be (Turn to No. 1, Back Page)

Old Time Fiddlers Will Contest for Honors at State

An old time fiddlers' contest will be held February 4 at the State Theatre. Since the announcement last week a number from various parts of the county have indicated their intentions of entering the contest. A prize of $5.00 is offered. Applause of the audience will determine the winner. All contestants should register before Monday, February 1.

STATE FEATURES "SOOKY," SUCCESSOR TO "SKIPPY"

Jackie Cooper, the phenomenal towheaded boy who teamed so effectively with wistful and brunette Robert Coogan in the first Percy Crosby story to reach the screen, "Skippy," co-stars again with Coogan in a new Shantytown adventure for the Crosby successor, "Sooky," which plays Saturday, Sunday and Monday, January 23-24-25, at the State Theatre.

Paramount, which produced the first Crosby hit, in its successor wisely has maintained as much of the original cast and technical staff as possible.

In addition to Cooper as "Skip" and Coogan as "Sooky," five other members of the "Skippy" cast carry on in roles which they created. They are Jackie Searl as "Sidney," Willard Robertson as "Dr. Skinner," Enid Bennett as "Mrs. Skinner," Helen Jerome Eddy as "Mrs. Wayne" and Guy Oliver as "Mr. Moggs."

The story centers chiefly in the efforts of Skippy and Sooky to build their own cadet corps after they have decided the Boone Boys in the fashionable neighborhood, are too snooty and need a ribbing. Their ruses, tricks, frolics and good turns, with and at the expense of fathers, mothers, dogs and little pets and trinkets, constitute a luscious slice of typical boyhood.

The conclusion is emotionally potent.

REGULAR P.-T. A. MEETING HELD LAST THURSDAY

The regular meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association was held Thursday, January 14, at the high school. After the business meeting Miss Worden presented the following program:

A piano solo by Ilene Nevanpaa. Violin duet by Wray Cox and Ernest Cecil accompanied at the piano by Arlene Leslie. Mrs. Anschuetz gave a short discussion of the article, "Should We Spank," taken from the Parent-Teacher magazine. Dr. Reagan of West Branch was then introduced and spoke on the subject of "Community Relationships." Dr. Reagan's address, delivered in a simple, direct manner, proved both enjoyable and worth while.

A social hour followed adjournment.

LOCAL INDEPENDENTS LOSE TO HARRISVILLE, 24-16

Tawas City's basketball quintet engaged the Harrisville Indians in a stiff battle last Friday night at Harrisville. Although the locals were beaten, 24-16, their showing against Harrisville's strong cagsquad was very impressive.

Both teams displayed flashy defensive work, necessitating a large number of long shots by both sides. Lack of accurate shooting on the part of the locals was the big factor in their defeat. Scoring for Tawas City was evenly divided among the members of the team, as also was the scoring for the Harrisville group.

ALABASTER SCHOOL NEWS

The Alabaster boys' basketball team won its sixth consecutive victory last Friday by defeating St. Bernard's of Alpena by a score of 24 to 11.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Erickson gave a chicken supper on Tuesday evening in honor of the boys' basketball team. Those present were: E. Benson, W. Rescoe, H. Johnson, C. McCormick, M. Brown, H. Oates, V. Willett, L. Roiter, A. McCormick, and Russell Rollin. Captain Harold Rollin was missing on account of illness.

There were three eighth graders on the honor roll last month. They are, Merle Rescoe, Bernice Baker, and Evelyn Simmons.

DOLORES COSTELLO HERE IN HER FINEST ROMANCE

Dolores Costello comes to the State Theatre next week Thursday and Friday, January 28 and 29, in "Expensive Women," her first star vehicle since her two year domestic retirement from the screen.

Miss Costello, recognized as one of the most beautiful women in pictures, is even more exquisite than before her motherhood. The added charm of her diction is evidence of the intensive study she has given to that branch of her profession—and the role she plays is utterly different from others she has done. She is cast as an emotional, though sophisticated girl of what is called high society.

The three men with whom her life becomes complicated are played by Warren William, Anthony Bushell and Joe Donahue. Others in the strong cast are H. B. Warner, Allan Lane, Morgan Wallace, Mae Madison, Polly Walters, Adele Watson and William House.

HEALTH UNIT BOARD MEETS AT GREENBUSH

The quarterly meeting of the District Board of Health was held at Greenbush Inn on Friday, January 15th, with the following members in attendance:

Alcona County—Dr. A. R. Miller, G. Emerick; Isoco County—Miss M. E. Worden, Messrs. C. L. McLean, E. Crego, M. S. Loffman; Ogemaw County—Messrs. H. S. Karcher and W. A. Crandell; Oscoda County—Messrs. H. H. Stickfort, H. J. Stevens, C. G. King; Visitor—Mrs. C. L. McLean of Tawas City.

H. S. Karcher of Rose City presided as chairman of the board. The minutes of the last meeting (held at West Branch September 24th) were read and adopted. The health department report for the year 1931 was read by Dr. Johnson, director of the unit, and placed in the records.

Following are excerpts from the annual report: 225 cases of communicable disease were taken under supervision; 1364 children have been immunized against diphtheria; 1124 have been vaccinated against smallpox; the nursing service has been extended to 177 maternity cases; 275 infants were recorded on the visiting list; 2944 school children have been given physical examinations, 1436 of whom have remediable physical defects; 500 children in the four counties have had all necessary dental work completed; over 200 inspections of dairy farms are recorded; 190 visits have been made in furthering the program of school sanitation; 120 summer resorts have been regularly inspected.

Miss Cowgill reviewed the year's nursing program in Isoco county. The health committee has been active; morning inspection in the schools is being more generally practiced and in many rural schools, provision has been made for hot noon lunches.

Miss Spellman, nurse for Alcona and Oscoda counties, has noted during the year, greater care exercised in the control of communicable disease amongst school children. The lean fund in Alcona county has been used for tonsil operations in 21 cases.

Miss Scott of Ogemaw county called attention to the health contest to be judged in the spring. Nine Ogemaw schools are entered and making satisfactory progress. The county health committee has been active in the promotion of welfare work.

Mr. Reagan gave a clear cut description of the sanitation program in the district, which same was favorably commented upon by board members.

Routine business was transacted by the board and a general discussion followed as to public health activities in 1932.

The next regular meeting of the board will be held at Tawas City in April.

EAST TAWAS HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

East Tawas high's boys and girls basket tossers, playing before a capacity crowd, broke a five and seven-year jinx last Friday evening by defeating the Oscoda high cagers, 20 to 11 and 15 to 14. This double victory runs the boys' record to seven wins in nine starts, and the girls' to five straight wins.

Coach Young's charges, fresh from a 19-18 defeat at the hands of Alabaster high that undoubtedly knocked all the over-confidence out of them, opened the Oscoda contest with a fast and fairly clever floor game. So busy was Oscoda in attempting to find a defense for the locals' attack that they were unable to get their own offense working. Led by Captain Glenow and Durant who both played a brilliant passing game, and the defensive play of co-captain Klump, Carpenter and Wilson, the visitors were forced to resort to "long toms" in the last half. "Tibby" Schanbeck, although only in the game a little over a quarter showed his great offensive skill.

"Leddie" McKay, who replaced Carpenter in the closing minutes of the game, played his usual steady game. Captain LaVack was the outstanding player on the Oscoda squad. His brilliant offensive and defensive play kept his team-mates in the running.

While we have been singing the praises of what the boys' team did we must not for one moment forget the wonderful victory of East Tawas high's lassies over the Oscoda damsels. Miss Hallanger's sextet, with the "old fighting spirit," took the lead by a foul shot and a field goal in the first few minutes of play, and although the Oscoda girls fought a hard game, and a close one, never once did the local girls give up their lead. It was one of the most exciting and well played games of the season.

In the preliminary encounter between the second teams, after leading Oscoda, 11 to 2, in the first half, the locals lost the game, 16 to 12. They were bewildered in the last half for some reason or other.

East Tawas' basketers play the undefeated, powerful West Branch team next Friday evening, January 29, at the Community Building. Come and see this strong team beat.

Theft of Worker Is New Soviet Racket

Moscow.—The shortage of labor in the Soviet union has led to keen competition for working hands among various state organizations, carried, in some instances, to the extent of "stealing" each other's workers.

The luring of peasants bound for one job to halt at another en route has developed, according to charges in the Moscow economic press, into a profitable "racket" for those engaged in it. The Russian slang name for a racketeer or swindler is "beetle." It appears that railroad stations are infested with beetles, who waylay and "capture" raw labor power, using vodka, cigarettes, tall promises, and sweet words.

The beetles receive five rubles, and sometimes more, for every laborer lured into the employ of organizations suffering from lack of labor.

The newspaper Za Industrializatsie reveals that of 11,200 peasants enlisted in the Tartar Soviet republic for service in the Donbass coal fields, only 9,820 reached their destination. For weeks the 1,380 missing men were sought by the Donbass authorities. Finally it was established that they had been decoyed to construction jobs by beetles.

A graphic description of the labor thieves at work is given in an indignant attack on the racket in the press here. A train bound for Donbass arrives in the Moscow station. A group of peasants gets off to look around.

Shortage of Labor Brings Keen Competition.

Soon they are spotted and approached by a beetle.

At first the peasants distrust the man, but in a few minutes he wins their confidence. He sits down with them in the waiting room, gives them better cigarettes than they are accustomed to and mysteriously a bottle of vodka appears. In a few minutes more the peasants are convinced that they have met a true friend.

They go back to the train only to fetch their bundles and remain on the

Census Report Shows Families Are Smaller

Washington.—The size of the American family in the last decade continued the steady decrease which has been apparent in every decade since 1890, according to figures just issued by the census bureau.

The population per family in 1930, the bureau reported, was 4.1, as compared with 4.3 in 1920. In 1910 the average population per family was 4.5, in 1900 it was 4.7, and in 1890, 4.9.

The total number of families in the country, however, was 23.1 per cent higher in 1930 than ten years ago. According to the figures, there were 29,980,146 families in the United States last year.

More than 40 per cent of the families in the United States had radio sets when the census was taken in April, 1930. In Illinois nearly 56 per cent owned radios at that time, while in the east north central area the percentage of families possessing radios was 43.1.

In the preliminary figures made public, the bureau said, the term "family" applied to all groups of persons, whether related or not, who live together as one household, usually sharing the same table. One person living alone, it was pointed out, was counted as a family, while, on the other extreme, all inmates of an institution or all persons living in a boarding house were also counted as a family by the census enumerators.

Bullets Stop Two Dogs' Vigil Over Dying Woman

Macleod, Alta.—Two collies sacrificed their lives here for Mrs. William Anderson, seventy-seven years old, who lived alone with her dogs since her husband's death three years ago.

Neighbors had not seen Mrs. Anderson for several days and, becoming alarmed, informed police. When police arrived at the house the dogs attacked them. A struggle ensued and the officers had to shoot the collies before they could gain entry. They found Mrs. Anderson unconscious. Taken to a hospital, she died several hours later.

Hawk-Pheasant Battle Is Told by Eyewitness

Milwaukee.—The following letter was received by a Milwaukee newspaper recently from Ray Schroeder, Nashotah, Wis.:

"I live on Moose lake and there are quite a few pheasants around here. This morning, when I came out of the house, I heard a pheasant rooster making a racket a half block from the house and I started to see what was the matter with him.

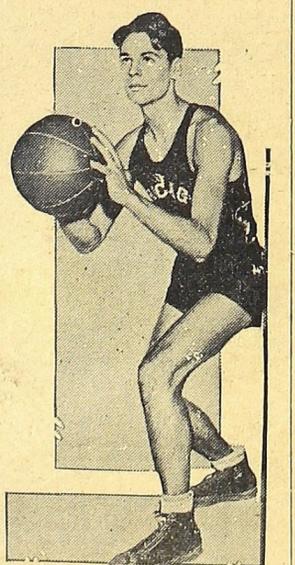

"I ran to where he was and here was the pheasant and a monster chicken hawk, and they were just having a battle royal. When I got up to them the rooster ran down to the lake, but the hawk was all caught up and I got my dip net and caught him. Now, this is the truth, and I have the hawk here alive."

Buenos Aires

Annual Cattle Show of Buenos Aires.

(Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)—WNU Service.

THE world's largest market is planned for a five-block tract in Buenos Aires, Argentina. The market will have access to all railroads entering the city and also direct communication, by tunnel, with the city's port.

No city in the United States is so important to us as Buenos Aires is to Argentina. It handles four-fifths of all Argentina's trade, and houses 20 per cent of all the nation's 10,000,000 inhabitants. All its 2,000,000 people are either Europeans or of European descent. This is true of only one other Latin American city—Montevideo.

Three times as big as Spain's largest city, modern Buenos Aires—as expanded and rebuilt in the last 30 years—is conspicuous in all the world for its magic growth.

The whole 25,000-mile railway system of Argentina has its focus here—the finest railroads in South America. No great motor highways radiate from the city, because the vast pampas afford no road-making materials. But by rail and river Buenos Aires handles more than half as much freight as the port of New York, and the net tonnage of ships calling each year is equal to all that passes through the Panama canal.

Not trade alone makes it great. Its social, artistic and political attractions rank it among the world's most dazzling capitals. To it flock the rich, the influential, the intelligentsia of all Argentina. "Our country as a whole would develop faster," said one prominent banker, "if more of our best brains would stay in the provinces."

Stock Farms Are Enormous.

Yet, although so many land owners live in the city, the swift, prodigious growth of herds and farming on the vast campos is an economic phenomena in this comparatively new country. In Europe the Argentine visitor is noted among hotels, resorts and shopkeepers for the freedom with which he spends money. These immense incomes are mostly from the wool.

One Estancia in Santa Fe province runs 50,000 cattle, and boasts of prize bulls costing $10,000 each and upwards. There are 25,000 hogs, 1,200 horses, a creamery making 4,000 pounds of butter daily for export to England; a private telephone system, a rambling chalet set in an artificial forest of imported trees, swimming pools, tennis courts—a princely estate that would make even a Texas cattle king dumb with astonishment. Similar ranches lie near Buenos Aires; others are far away, on the pampas. Their number, size, and money-making organization amazes the tourist—with school-book memories of woodcuts showing a three-balled gaucho swinging a three-balled lasso over his head and chasing a longhorn steer—or an ostrich.

Nature is kind to Buenos Aires. Up the Parana are the majestic falls of Iguazu, and Guayra, solemn and stupendous, ranking with Niagara and Victoria in Africa. Up the Andes and under the shadow of Aconcagua—highest mountain in the Western world—runs a cogwheel railway that lifts you in a few hours from green plains to Alpine heights and snow-drifts 20 feet deep, where Argentine soldiers train on skis. Winter hotels are here now—a new St. Moritz. And there is ancient Cordoba, historic Tucuman, the famous baths of Rosario.

And as melons and oranges rush to our East from California and Florida, so Argentina's fruits flow into Buenos Aires. It lives well. Whole trainloads of fresh grapes come from the famed vineyards of Mendoza—and many reach our own markets. New York is at one end, Buenos Aires at the other, of a busy trade route. Now both sea and ship serve it. And ships are "ceaseless shuttles weaving the fabric of international commerce and good will."

American Investments Heavy. Mutual trade has brought huge American investments to Buenos Aires, notably in packing houses, public utilities and banks. Two Yankee concerns alone control more than 100 light and power units in Argentina. Here, too, you see the new policy of great American corporations applied, by which now their Argentine employees are encouraged to become stockholders.

Youth, vitality, sheer enjoyment of living, they are the attributes of Buenos Aires. Shiny new motor cars; fascinating, Paris-like shop windows; arc lights glaring on well-dressed midnight crowds in brilliant Calle Florida; cafes, casinos, high-priced restaurants and hotels, all packed with chattering, laughing people. Endless places of amusement, including the great Grecian Colon theater; and, on billboards, many names familiar to Broadway: Titta Schipa, Chaliapin, Spinelli, Mistinguette. "Peluculas Parlantes," they call the "talkies."

And still it grows. Here lands the immigrant stream. Bearded men in boots, carrying bundles; wandering boys and girls, chattering in strange Slav or Latin tongues; bewildered mothers, their heads wrapped in shawls, hard-handed women bent from work, carrying babies and still more bundles—you see them all come slowly down gangplanks from European ships to stand a bit on the busy wharf and stare at Buenos Aires.

Argentina needs these. She has one-third as much land as the United States; but only as many people as live in and about New York city. Or about one and one-third per square mile, as against 490 in the British Isles.

Italians, English, Spanish, French, Germans, Swiss, American, all mingle. So cosmopolitan is the city that its great papers—La Nacion and La Prensa—must serve news from everywhere. Their circulation is enormous; their advertising huge. The quality, completeness and accuracy of what they print challenges the thought of every visiting journalist. Their absorbing Sunday rotogravures, their feature articles on sport, travel, international affairs, science, literature and art—many by world famous writers—astonish the newcomer, at first. Then he reflects; this is a great world city. It thinks like any other; and acts as Paris does, or Berlin, or New York.

Modern but Exotic.

Italian workmen with power drills tear up good pavements. New buildings rise higher and higher. Air students stunt at Palomar field, and Yankee free-lance flyers come peddling new planes. A man in fancy gaucho dress, as obsolete now as old time wild west cowboy gear, coils a live snake about his neck and hawks patent medicines. A communist tries to harangue a crowd, and police lead him amiably away. Children ride tame llamas in the parks. A weakened little man struggles through traffic with a huge basket of coconuts, and offers them to a world which seems to spurn coconuts.

Around the great Diagonal of the financial center grim, towering banks suggest Wall Street. Subways, long suburban trains, screaming newsboys, 50,000 football fans jammed before a loudspeaker on Avenida de Mayo—you see this a city—greatest in South America.

Its fog suggests San Francisco. Its flat expanse is like Chicago. The vast plains beyond, with endless leagues of corn, wheat and cattle, conjure up Kansas, or the Illinois prairies. And mules! Fat, with good harness, they compete with trucks. You see a team draw aside, to let a luxurious motor lorry pass hauling glistening race horses out to the track of the Tiajuana-like Jockey club. An unusual organization this is. Its downtown club-house, gorgeous as a senate chamber, dominates all others.

A member may ask you to hunt partridges at a great estancia on the pampas. For many interesting hours a train hauls you past queer big corrals shaped like tanks; wind mills; high-wheeled pampa wagons; endless riders in flat black hats, baggy breeches, short boots, flying ponchos, riding with short stirrups on clumsy saddles covered with sheep's wool.

Leagues of wire fence stretch far as the eye can see, and artificial groves of imported trees dot the pampas. You stop at a lonely prairie station—for all the world like Kansas west of Dodge City—where you are to hunt. Partridge are plentiful; so are ostriches.

Riding back to Buenos Aires you take the day coach, to hear cowmen talk. It is like riding, in old days, in the caboose of a cattle train from Texas up to Kansas City. Everybody talks herds, horses, fodder, calves, branding and market prices. Mention hunting. "Our boys never waste a cartridge on a partridge," says a cowman. "They use a horse-hair noose on the end of a pole—they just ride the bird down and loop that over his neck. And, anyway roasted armadillo is better than partridge—not so dry."

THE BAREFOOT BOY

POSING before the camera barefoot and with "turned-up pantaloons" just to make the matter conclusive, a retired Lutheran preacher of Nebraska, recently got his name and his picture in the papers as the original Barefoot Boy who inspired the American poet, John Greenleaf Whittier, to write his well known praises of care-free boyhood out in the country. An examination of the details of his life, however, and of the circumstances under which Whittier wrote his poem, lead to the conclusion that the Nebraskan and the barefoot boy could not have been one and the same person.

This preacher states that he came to America from the old country in 1862. Whittier is known to have written "The Barefoot Boy" while he was editing the Middlesex Standard at Lowell, Mass., and to have taken his theme from seeing a boy there starting out to his day's work in the field, rake over shoulder. It is a matter of record that Whittier edited the Middlesex Standard for six months, starting in the fall of 1845, nearly twenty years before the preacher ever saw the shores of this country. Is it not more logical, and more pleasing, to suppose that Whittier's model is the very spirit of boyhood itself, viewing the world through unspoiled eyes.

FRANKIE AND JOHNNY

FRANKIE and Johnny were lovers" goes a familiar song, and few of its many singers perhaps know that Frankie and Johnny were real lovers, who lived in the negro section of St. Louis not so long ago, and that Frankie is still alive, a thick-set colored woman, now fifty-nine years old, with graying hair and a razor scar received some forty years ago across one cheek.

Frankie herself is not prone to discuss how she "got her man who done her wrong," but the facts of the case may be dug up out of various police, morgue and hospital records and shaped into a readable if sordid tale. Allen Britt, later Albert and still later Johnny, came to St. Louis with his parents in 1891, and there, at an Orange Blossom ball in Stole's hall at Thirteenth and Biddle streets, met Frankie Baker, handsome but ten years his senior, and formed for her his fatal attachment.

One night Frankie found Johnny in the ill-lighted hallway of the Phoenix hotel lavishing on a pretty negress named Alice Pryor the attentions she claimed exclusively as her own. Took him home, and as the climax of a violent quarrel which lasted all night shot him with his own gun just as he was advancing on her with a drawn knife. Fatally wounded, Johnny staggered to his own home where his father called the police and his mother an ambulance to take him to the hospital. He died four days later and his funeral was a gala affair, well attended. Almost immediately after, the wretched affair was being celebrated in song, and Frankie, freed of the toils of the law, bore herself with the pride of a wrong well avenged.

PRINCE CHARMING

NO, LADIES have never actually worn glass slippers. But the Cinderella theme, the story of the down-trodden heroine to whom at last has come a Prince Charming and bliss for ever, has become so deeply imbedded in our literature, and in our very hearts, that we are scarce surprised to find it founded on a real happening.

About 1730 a talented and wealthy French actor, named Thevenard, then a man over sixty, wandering about the streets of Paris, observed upon a cobbler's stall awaiting repair a woman's slipper. So dainty was it, and of such grace, that Thevenard was struck with admiration and curiosity about its owner, and a sort of fascination which would not leave him, even after he had returned home and several days had passed. Unable to free himself from his uncanny interest, he at length returned to the cobbler's stall, but could gain from him no clew as to the slipper's owner.

Days passed, and that worn little slipper became an obsession with the great man. Again and again, irritated by his own folly but unable to do otherwise, he returned to the stall and watched the cobbler as he worked upon the tiny shoe, always hoping in vain that the owner would appear. She appeared only when the shoe was done, and proved to be a charming girl enough, but of the poorest and humblest class. But since this was a real fairy tale, that made not the slightest difference, and this Prince Charming and his Cinderella were married and lived happily ever after.

Country's First Paper Mill

The early printers of colonial America imported their paper from Europe, chiefly from the continent. The first paper mill was built in 1690 at Germantown, Pa., resulting from the combination of the needs of the Philadelphia printer, William Bradford, and the arrival of an ambitious German papermaker, William Rittenhouse.

Second Educational Series of Radio Lectures Started

Authorities on economics, psychology and other subjects have inaugurated the second series of "Listen and Learn" Lectures under the auspices of the National Advisory Council on Radio in Education, over coast-to-coast networks.

Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, started the spring series in January when he and representatives of the Council outlined the lecture courses to follow. The programs are heard every Saturday over NBC-WEAF facilities.

The series is scheduled for twenty weeks, closing with a valedictory program the last week in May.

Among the Speakers.

International trade, the tariff and industrial planning are economic subjects to be touched upon by speakers such as James Harvey Rogers of Yale, Ernest M. Patterson of Pennsylvania, F. W. Taussig of Harvard, George Henry Soule, Jr., editor of The New Republic, and Walton H. Hamilton of Yale.

Changes and growth in personalities, animal behavior and psychology in education are topics to be taken up by Fred A. Moss of George Washington University, Henry W. Nissen of Yale, Frank N. Freeman of Chicago, and others.

Public response to the initial ten lectures broadcast in the fall indicated, according to the Council, that they reached listening groups in the home, school, special neighborhood gatherings and even fishermen of Nova Scotia.

PATRIOTIC SONGS

The songs that thrill Americans, patriotic selections written by inspired composers, will be played in the February National 4-H club program of the National Farm and Home Hour by the United States Marine Band.

The concert will be another program in the series by the Marine Band on "Learning to Know America's Music."

Beginning with "The Star-Spangled Banner," the renditions will swing through "America," and the lively strains of "Dixie." These will be followed with "Yankee Doodle," "America the Beautiful," "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," "Hail Columbia," and a more recent song written when the United States Army was moving to the European battle front, "Over There."

The programs are designed to acquaint and familiarize the 850,000 4-H club members of the United States with the music which is typical of America.

Each month an additional concert will be provided by the Marine Band. On March 5 America's hymns and religious songs will be featured. The programs are broadcast over a coast-to-coast network.

The series, which promises to be one of the most entertaining features of the National Farm and Home Hour during the winter months, will contain much basic forestry information of interest to both town and country listeners.

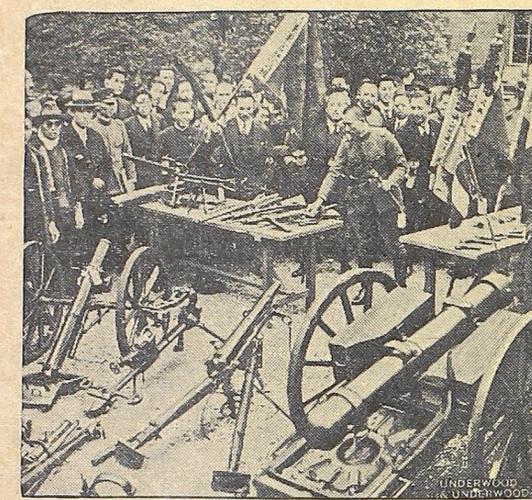

Carveth Wells, adventurer, explorer and lecturer, who starts a new series of programs over an NBC network next month under the title "Conoco Adventurers," says that if all the hogs in Texas were rolled into one hog, they, or it, could root out a Panama Canal with ease and dispatch.

In presenting Organ Melodies, Irma Glen has the three-fold job of speaking the verse while she plays the organ with feet and hands, and watches the music, prose, and stop watch.

Harvey Hays, well known to radio listeners for his interpretations of outdoor roles, will play the part of the forest ranger. Wise in the ways of forest uses and protection through long experience in the fields, the character will often find himself in amusing situations with his sub assistant whose eagerness sometimes overwhelms his better judgment.

Alfred Corn, who plays the part of Sammy in The Goldbergs' NBC daily feature, is nearing his sixteenth birthday, and is a student in high standing at the Art Students' League

Pastor, Blind 30 Years, Slowly Regaining Sight

Twin Lakes, Mich.—Out of the darkness of 30 years, light has come to shatter the sound world created by Rev. Peter Kuiken, pastor of the Reformed church here.

The minister is recovering his eyesight, lost when he was a boy of eleven. Physicians at University hospital, Ann Arbor, lifted the veil. He can see.

And with returning sight, the minister said he is losing impressions of the world he formed throughout his long blindness. Mental pictures of objects, developed through touch, are being destroyed.

"I am beginning to see things as they are seen by others," he said. "Sometimes they are not as beautiful to me as they were before."

"But, there are many beautiful things in this new world of sight and color, some of them more beautiful than anything I ever dreamed. Flowers, for instance, they are beautiful. One cannot touch or hear their color." The minister's sight is about 5 per cent normal vision. Although physicians have refused to predict the complete recovery of his eyesight, the pastor expects he will be able to read his Bible in a few months. He hopes to regain total vision of one eye.

Prison Warden Utilizes Fish to Tell Weather

Columbus, Ohio.—Warden P. E. Thomas, who often sits in his office at the Ohio penitentiary and gazes absently at the antics of goldfish in a huge bowl in the prison yard, has reached certain conclusions about goldfish and the weather.

He calls his fish bowl, the goldfish weather bureau.

Months of observation has brought him to the conclusion that:

When the fish are on top of the pool and scattered it's going to be good weather and splendid for fishing.

When the fish are on top, but bunched together, there will be a rain-storm.

When the fish are below the top and scattered, cold weather is coming.

When the fish are below the surface and huddled together—throw fuel in the furnace for a blizzard is coming.

Town Gets Tax Holiday Two Consecutive Years

Gainesville, Ala.—For the second consecutive year Mayor P. M. Norwood, has declared a tax holiday.

"We can get by without taxes this year," he wrote the citizens. "We have a cash balance with no debts to pay, bonded or otherwise."

The population of Gainesville in the 1930 census was 329.

Explorers Settle Down After Years of Roving

San Francisco, Calif.—Slippers instead of skis, a fireside and a comfortable room instead of a campfire, are in prospect for Capt. James Critchell-Bullock and Lord Edward Montagu.

Setting out as two young Englishmen, they separately have explored some of the most little known spots of the world, and each has a list of adventures worthy of the hardest scout. Critchell-Bullock has been to the most remote parts of the Arctic. His adventures with John Hornby, famous "hermit of the frozen north," have been the subject of one book, "Snow Man," by Malcolm T. Waldron. He also served during the World war with the British army in India and France.

Lord Montagu has roamed up and down the African coast, through the interior of Morocco, and in the most out of the way parts of eastern Europe.

Now they have determined to halt their wanderings. They plan to settle in British Columbia, where they will enter mine development.

20-Year-Old Wisconsin Youth Wears 18½ Shoes

Milwaukee, Wis.—Harry Ploszy, twenty, who is 6 feet 7 inches tall, walked into the state aid office here barefooted.

"My dad's dead and ma's got all she can do without having a pair of shoes made special for me," Harry said as he exhibited the biggest pair of feet seen here since the circus came to town.

Harry needed size 18½-D shoes and none were to be found in shoe stores. A shoe manufacturer volunteered to make a pair, and after a two weeks job, figured the cost was $85.50.

Nevada Lakes Reported to Be Drying Up Fast

Reno, Nev.—Nevada is going dry, not in a prohibition way, but waterless.

The level of Pyramid lake, which is about four miles northeast of here, has dropped nearly 55 feet in the last 60 years. In the last four years the level has dropped more than 14 feet.

Pyramid isn't the only vanishing lake in Nevada, Walker, Winnemucca, Washoe, and Tahoe levels are dropping at tremendous rates.

FINNEY OF THE FORCE

THE FEATHERHEADS

Forgotten HEROES

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

He Saved New Orleans

ASK the average American "Who saved New Orleans in the War of 1812?" and he will probably answer "Why, Andrew Jackson, of course." That answer is correct, but it would be equally correct to say "Capt. Samuel Chester Reid." And what is more surprising is the fact that Reid saved that historic city by fighting a battle on the sea several thousand miles away.

During the War of 1812 Reid was commander of an American privateer, the General Armstrong. On the night of September 26, 1814, his ship lay at anchor in the harbor of Horta in the Island of Fayal in the Azores. Despite the fact that Horta was a neutral port, a large British squadron, commanded by Commodore Lloyd, came to attack the little American ship.

It was a bright moonlight night when Lloyd sent his first attacking party of more than 100 men in four large launches into the harbor. The enemy opened fire as they approached and Reid immediately replied, driving off the launches with heavy loss. Another attack was made at midnight with 14 launches and 500 men who succeeded in boarding the General Armstrong but were driven out by the desperate resistance of the Americans, suffering a loss of 120 killed and 130 wounded. At daybreak another attack was made by the British brig, the Carnation, but she was beaten off.

Realizing that he could not resist another attack and finding his ship badly damaged, Reid scuttled his vessel and safely conveyed all of his men ashore. He had lost his ship but he won a victory that was more important than he realized. The British lost over 300 killed and wounded while the Americans lost but two killed and seven wounded. But the important fact was this: this squadron was part of the expedition then gathering at Jamaica for the purpose of seizing New Orleans and they had attacked the General Armstrong to capture her and use her as an auxiliary vessel.

But the British squadron was so crippled that it did not reach Jamaica until ten days later than the expedition had expected to leave there. The expedition waited for Commodore Lloyd and that delay was fatal to its expected results. For by the time it arrived in Louisiana, General Jackson had completed his defenses for that city and the world knows the result of the battle which he fought there on January 8, 1815.

Forgotten—By His Own Choice

SUNRISE on the morning of December 4, 1900, in the sleepy little town of Vigan in the Philippines. The town is held by 84 men of Company B of the Thirty-third United States volunteer infantry, operating against the insurgent General Tino. Also it is a supply depot where are stored 60,000 rations for the campaign and a hospital in which lie some 156 sick and disabled soldiers.

Tino has a force of 850 men. He will steal into the town under the cover of darkness. Then when reveille sounds and the American soldiers turn out, without arms, to answer roll call they will be met with a leaden hail from the insurgents' rifles. But the plan doesn't quite work. Outpost No. 5 of Company B discovers the Filipinos stealing into the town and opens fire. Immediately the fight is on. Capt. Charles Van Way rushes forth and takes command. At one place he stations Private Joe Epps and Private Smith. His orders are, "Don't let them get across here. Hold them, d—n it. If they ever get in, they've got me cut off." And Private Epps and Smith "held them."

The insurgents were repulsed, but snipers lingered, and from time to time poured in a galling fire upon the Americans. One group behind a churchyard wall was especially annoying to Private Epps. Finally he went to Captain Van Way and said, "I want to go and get those fellows behind that wall." "All right," replied the captain. "Take the men you need and get them out."

As it turned out, all the force Private Epps wanted was one man—Private W. O. Trafton, a big Texan. Creeping along cautiously, they located their quarry. Before the enemy knew what had happened, Epps was on top of the wall and shouting down at them in Spanish and English both to throw down their rifles and get their hands up in the air. To Private Trafton he shouted orders as though that individual was a whole company, and the Texan let loose a typical Texas whoop. The insurgents dropped their guns and hoisted their hands. There were 17 riflemen and four others armed with bolos, all of whom Epps herded into camp as prisoners. Eight Americans and over 100 insurgents were killed at the battle of Vigan. There were 40 prisoners taken—more than half of them by one man.

Epps was voted the Congressional Medal of Honor for his feat. But when he got back to this country he deliberately dropped out of sight. Finally 24 years later he was discovered in Muskogee, Okla., and there at a great gathering in a ball park the medal was pinned on his coat.

THE RUNAWAYS

By H. IRVING KING

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) (WNU Service)

EDITH JAFFREYS had two admirers who counted—William Lester and George Calton. As a rule, Lester was away ahead of Calton in the race, but just now a quarrel with William had brought George within measurable distance of the winning post.

The quarrel was about—well, several things; one thing leading to another, as they will when two positive characters get to arguing—smoking by women, bobbed hair, "ships and shoes and sealing wax and cabbages and kings."

The first time Edith had refused George Calton, George felt that life had turned to dust and ashes. Each subsequent refusal left him less and less afflicted. Edith had become merely a habit with him, but she had so long been the object of his dreams that he thought she was so still and made love to her automatically.

The evening after Edith's great flare-up with William, George made his semi-annual proposal. This time it went, "Edith, when are you going to throw over Bill Lester and marry me?" "Mr. Lester and I, with my consent, will never meet again," she answered. "And, George, I will marry you at any time."

George was amazed at his own sensations. He knew that he ought to be deliriously joyful; but subconsciously he had a feeling of dismay.

The answer flashed across him suddenly. Helen Marlowe! Yes, hang it! he was in love with Helen Marlowe and engaged to Edith Jaffreys, George groaned as deeply on this, the first night that Edith had accepted him, as he had on the first night she had rejected him.

Edith, after George had gone, at first fairly gloated over the hopeless agony that William Lester would suffer when he learned of her new engagement. Then she began to be sorry for him, and by the time she turned off the light and got into bed she was crying. Next morning she thought: "If William will only apologize for his outrageous conduct perhaps I might—but I'm engaged to George!" She was moody and irritable all day, revolving impossible schemes to extricate herself.

George had proposed and been accepted on Wednesday. Thursday he did not show up. Friday afternoon Edith packed her bag. She had a great aunt living out on Long Island. Meantime George had been going through the same mental processes as Edith. "I shall go crazy if I think of this much longer," thought he. "I can't face this girl! I'll disappear for awhile; that's what I'll do. Something may turn up in the meantime."

He packed his bag and bought a ticket for Champrville, Long Island. It was a small town. He had never been there; but he had heard it had a good hotel which was open the year round. At this season the hotel would not be likely to have many guests and there was no chance of encountering anyone he knew.

Five people got off the train at Champrville. Three of them hurried through the little station to waiting automobiles. Two stood on the platform and stared at each other in consternation. The two were George and Edith.

"Why George!" "Why Edith!" Silence for a minute and then: "Were you going somewhere?" from George.

"Oh, no," said Edith, "were you?" "Of course not," replied George, trying to assume a look of childlike innocence.

Just then an automobile came rushing up to the station on the further side and two familiar voices were heard in the waiting room.

"I knew we should not get here by the time the train did," said the voice of Helen Marlowe.

"What's the difference?" replied the voice of William Lester; and then he and Helen saw George and Edith standing there staring at each other.

With a joyful cry Helen rushed out. William followed more cautiously, as not entirely sure of his reception. "Then you got Jack Huntington's wire all right?" cried Helen. "You see, in making up his house party, he quite forgot to send you invitations. But as soon as William and I arrived, he wired at once. But gracious! how did you make the train? He only wired half an hour ago. Edith where are your trunks? Gone astray? Phone at once and find out about them. But first, William, you drive Edith over to Soundedge in the two-seater and send back a car for George and me. George is going to get a wigging in the meantime. He has avoided me for two days."

Edith had never been so glad to see anybody in the world as she was to see William. They made it all up on the ride to Soundedge. Before she got into the car she said: "Remember what I said to you Wednesday night? Of course, you understand I was only joking?"

"Oh, perfectly," replied William with beaming face.

Clocks Routed Herons

A resourceful zoologist has routed a colony of herons which persisted in camping in the public parks of Alameda, Calif., and eating up the park goldfish. The zoologist strung four alarm clocks in the herons' favorite tree, setting the clocks to go off every half hour, and after a sleepless week the herons vanished.

FARM POULTRY

MOST VITAL POINT IS PROPER MATING

Careful Selection of Male Big Proposition.

Correct mating of poultry for greatest profits during the coming year is a difficult problem and one that is usually conducted as a "hit-or-miss" proposition.

N. W. Williams, poultryman in charge of North Carolina state college flocks, says mating poultry is a hard job for the experienced poultryman, and that the inexperienced man generally gives it no consideration at all. However, it is one of the most important jobs to be undertaken at the beginning of the new poultry year.

First, the grower must know what he wants. If he wants egg production, he must mate birds that have been producing eggs. If he wants show birds, he must use those that have the standard conformations.

To mate birds for egg production, the poultryman ought to understand what body factors indicate high egg production, says Williams. Select those of standard weight that are vigorous, broad, deep and with large body capacity. Such birds will lay more eggs and the chicks will be stronger than those from birds which do not have such desirable characteristics. If the hens lack some of these good qualities but are good layers, use a male bird which will correct the deficiency in the chicks. No bird should be used in the breeding pens which has a tendency to be weak constitutionally.

Immature Pullets Show

Poor Laying Qualities

Pullet culling proved its value in a Wyoming country poultry farm demonstration conducted by the county agricultural extension association, D. C. Henderson, poultry extension specialist of the Pennsylvania State college, said.

From a flock of 800 white leghorn pullets a year ago 133 were separated from the others because they were immature. A careful record of the production of the two groups was then kept for five months. In November the cull birds had 6.6 per cent egg production while the properly developed pullets laid at the rate of 46 per cent. In December the percentages were 22 and 51 respectively. In January 24 and 41, in February 34 and 47, and in March 46.5 and 68. Averages for five months are 26.6 and 50 per cent, showing the well-developed pullets nearly doubled the production of immature birds.

Housing Suggestions

It is necessary to comfortably house the chickens during the winter months in order to make the maximum profits.

- Comfortable housing provides for:
1. Four square feet of floor space for each bird of the heavy breeds and three square feet of floor space for the light breeds.
 2. Light in every part of the house.
 3. A dry floor all the time.
 4. An open front through which sunshine may get into the house.
 5. Ventilation system that will furnish fresh air without a draft and will remove the moisture from the inside of the poultry house.
 6. A warm house and the conservation of body heat during the cold months.

Brooding Baby Chicks

A laying house is used for brooding baby chicks on the John Schaff farm, Macomb county, Michigan. Last fall Mr. Schaff started with 1,000 laying hens in two Michigan shed type houses. By March 1 the flock had been culled to 600, all were put into one house and the other house, 80 feet long and 20 feet wide, was cleaned, disinfected thoroughly and used for brooding 2,800 chicks.

The chicks were kept two weeks in battery brooders, then were put into the laying house. Six electric brooders were hung from the ceiling of the laying house.—Capper's Farmer.

Beets for Hens

Beets and other garden vegetables are valuable additions to the ration of hens and may be fed without weighing them out. Beets, carrots and cabbages are all good succulent foods, apples may also be given in moderation, sweet ones being best. These vegetables are usually fed at noon, giving the flock what it will clean up in an hour or two. Hens accustomed to them, however, will not eat too much if they are before the flock through the day.

Flock Profits Vary

Of 214 Ohio farmers who kept records on the Leghorn flocks during the past year, sixteen of the group lost money; 66 made from 1 cent to $1 per bird; 101 made from $1 to $2 per bird; 23 made from $2 to $3 per bird, and eight made more than $3 per bird. This wide divergence in profits indicates the possibilities when good feeding, good housing and good management are given the flock, is the assertion made by a writer in the Prairie Farmer.

The name "Hohenzollern" is derived from Castle Zollern, the ancestral home of the family. The name literally interpreted, therefore, means High Zollern.

STOP THAT COLD

DISTRESSING cold in chest or throat—that so often leads to something serious—generally responds to good old Musterole with the first application. Should be more effective if used once every hour for five hours.

This famous blend of oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other helpful ingredients brings relief naturally. Musterole gets action because it is a scientific "counter-irritant"—not just a salve—it penetrates and stimulates blood circulation, helps to draw out infection and pain. Used by millions for 20 years. Recommended by doctors and nurses.

To Mothers—Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

Harold's Mother Knew Answer

"Yes, sir, I am certainly proud of my little boy," says Mrs. H. M. Smith, 421 Topeka Ave., Topeka, Kansas. "He's five and weighs fifty-seven pounds. He's the picture of health as you can see, and I feel like he'll always be that way as long as I can get California Fig Syrup. I have used it with him ever since he was a year old. I knew what to give him for his colds and his feverish, upset spells because Mother used California Fig Syrup with all of us as children. I have used it freely with my boy and he loves it. It always fixes him up, quick."

In many homes, like this, the third and fourth generations are using pure, wholesome California Fig Syrup because it has never failed to do what is expected of it. Nothing so quickly and thoroughly purges a child's system of the souring waste which keeps him cross, feverish, headachy, bilious, half-sick, with coated tongue, bad breath and no appetite or energy as long as it is allowed to remain in the little stomach and bowels. Fig Syrup gives tone and strength to these organs so they continue to act as Nature intends them to do, and helps build up and strengthen weak, pale and underweight children. Over four million bottles used a year shows its popularity. The genuine, endorsed by physicians for 50 years, always bears the word "California."

A lunch followed. Altogether, a profitable evening was spent. It is hoped that every member will be present on February 16th.

Mrs. Geo. Bills, who has been seriously ill for several weeks, is very low at this writing. C. M. VanHorn dug a sixteen quart pail of potatoes last week in a fence row missed by the digger last fall. The potatoes were in fine shape, not in the least frosted. Truly, our seasons are getting mixed. We would not be surprised to find ice on Indian lake in July.

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

PETER says that habits always make him think of burrs—they stick and are mighty hard to get rid of. Of course there are some kinds of habits you don't want to get rid of—good habits. Then there are some habits which are neither good nor bad, and it doesn't really matter whether or not you get rid of them. Lastly, there are bad habits, the kind you DO want to get rid of as quickly as possible, and these stick tighter than either of the others. They never shake off; they have to be pulled off or cut off.

Now one of Peter Rabbit's habits is to run in circles, a perfectly harmless habit usually, and yet one which sometimes gets him into trouble. You see hunters know of this habit, and when they have set a dog to chasing Peter they just stand near where they first started Peter, knowing that sooner or later he is almost sure to come back there and give them a chance to shoot at him. Peter has run in circles that way so much that she seldom thinks anything about it. So it was not surprising that as he ran about in the Green Forest this moonlit night, looking for tracks of his neighbors, he should gradually make a circle, and so come upon his own tracks made when he first started out.

At first he didn't know that they were his own, and started to follow them. Then, happening to look back at the footprints he had just made, he suddenly realized that they were exactly like the ones he was following.

"Huh!" he chuckled. "Here I Am Chasing Myself."

Peter can always see a joke, even if it is on himself. "Huh!" he chuckled. "Here I am chasing myself! I am afraid it would be a long, long chase to catch up. I guess I'll run over to the pond of Paddy the Beaver and see what I can find there. Hello!"

Peter sat up very straight and stared straight ahead at the tracks he had made earlier in the evening. His eyes were round with surprise, and then a troubled look crept over them. Somebody had been following him just as he had followed others! There were the tracks plain to see. Who could have made them? Peter hurried for a closer view of them. But this told him nothing. He never had seen any like them before, and so of course he couldn't tell who had made them. Hastily he looked around and saw where the tracks had joined his own. They came from the direction of an old brush pile, and when they reached his own turned and followed his. It was quite clear that whoever had made them had been going in another direction until he came on Peter's tracks. Then he had at once turned to look for Peter. Was it some one who, like himself, was following the tracks of his neighbors just out of idle curiosity, or was it an enemy? With all his heart Peter wished he knew. One thing was very plain to see, and that was that whoever was following him had found his tracks, and Peter didn't like that. It made him uneasy.

What should he do? He didn't dare sit still and he didn't know where to go. If only he knew who it was! Suddenly he thought of a plan. Perhaps if he followed those tracks back before they joined his own he might learn something. Peter wasted no more time. He hurried along that back track straight to the brush pile. The tracks went all around it and in and out under it. Peter didn't like that a bit. He was beginning to get suspicious. Then he found where the tracks had first come to the brush pile from the direction of an old fallen log. He hurried over to this. The tracks were all around and over the log. Whoever had made them had peeped into every hole, no matter how small. Then Peter knew.

"It's Shadow the Weasel!" he cried with a frightened gasp. "No one but Shadow would look into every hole this way and run all around and in and out of the brush pile. It's Shadow the Weasel, and now he's after me! Oh, what shall I do?"

TURNING WHITE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH
"HIS hair turned white in just one night."
They say, and sigh with sympathy. "His hair grew gray in just one day"—Well, he is better off than me. One night of trouble changed his hair; Just look at mine, there's plenty there. Yes, white and gray they seem to run, But I got my hairs one by one.

One night of grief and like a leaf His hair was altered in its shade. One day of pain, of sorrow's rain, Yes, so it was the change was made. One night, and white or gray he grew. One joyless day, and he was through. He had a night he couldn't smile, But my white hair took quite a while.

See this one here? That took a year Of trouble when the times were bad. See that one there? I got that hair With months of worry that I had. If sympathetic you must be, Then why not sympathize with me? Some get them suddenly, but I'm Still getting mine—one at a time. (© 1932, Douglas Malloch.)—WNU Service.

COLD'S ADVANCE MAN

Dr. H. B. Maris, of the United States naval research laboratory, who will be the scientific director of the Arctic expedition which will sail for the Far North next June. Accompanied by Capt. F. H. Williams of the naval reserve, the party will make its base and erect a radio station at old Fort Conger, a lonely outpost on Ellesmere Island. From there, 600 miles from the North pole, daily reports as to the Arctic weather drifting down to the temperate zones will be radioed to the weather bureau. This advance information will enable the United States to prepare its weather reports far in advance.

DAIRY

BEST TO LET COW FRESHEN IN FALL

Several Excellent Reasons for the Practice.

Usually the cow bred during the latter part of January or in February will freshen in early fall and will produce more butterfat through a twelve-months period than when bred to freshen in the spring.

"The cow that freshens in the fall does not suffer from hot weather and flies during the period of her heaviest milk flow as does the cow that freshens in the spring," suggests A. O. Kimrey of the dairy extension office at the North Carolina State college. "The rush of the summer work is over in the fall, and the owner has more time to care for the cow during this heavy producing period. Then, too, the prices for butterfat are usually better in winter than in summer. December butterfat often sells for 10 to 12 cents a pound more than May and June butterfat."

Mr. Kimrey finds that a majority of the creameries in North Carolina has a surplus of butter during the summer months but a scarcity in winter. This means that much of the product must be consigned to the large central markets at a sacrifice in price. In winter it is hard to supply the local demand. Since the payments made to dairymen for their butterfat are based on the price which the creameries receive for their manufactured butter, it seems only wise to try to sell the most fat when the best prices may be obtained, Mr. Kimrey says.

A little more attention by dairymen to the breeding period of their cows would make possible a greater annual income per cow, he suggests.

Not Hard to Deal With Feed Shortage Problem

Recent feeding inquiries from certain sections of the country indicate a shortage of feed for dairy cattle. Under such conditions as these, owners of dairy cattle are confronted with the problem of buying some feed or of reducing the herd. They are, as a rule, reluctant to reduce the herd. If they can only get the herd through the winter they feel that they can then carry on to better economic advantage.

It is not very good business to buy feed, even at low prices, and then turn around and sell it to inherently poor producing cows, says Hoard's Dairyman. The first step in an intelligent solution of this feed shortage problem is to find out whether one has any inherently poor producers and if so which ones they are. The next step is to actually get these cows off the farm—sell them to the butcher. An empty stall or two will make more money than a poor cow or two when one must buy feed. The third step is to make and feed good rations to the remaining good cows even if some of the feed must be purchased.

Butter Consumption

Since the educational work of the dairy council has been under way, butter consumption has steadily increased throughout the United States. At present, government reports of July 1, 1931, based on production and storage holdings, show 24,000,000 pounds more of creamery butter were consumed the first six months of this year than last year. This is three ounces per person throughout the United States. If this increase has been maintained for the last six months of the year, it will be an increase in consumption of 20,000,000 pounds more than the total surplus holdings of 1929, which broke the price of butter 12 cents a pound. Other causes have doubtless helped, but this educational work has been of outstanding value at this time.—Hoard's Dairyman.

Keep Fanning Mill Going

There is a continual fanning mill action going on in all walks of life blowing out the ineffectual and inefficient. Just as you clean the chaff from your seed grain, you take out the cripples from your dairy herd. You must go further, however.

There are many cows that look like cows, pretty fair cows, that are fooling you. Only the keeping of individual cow records will show you these cows. They are the "Blue Cows." If your herd is to be as profitable as it can be they must be found. Not only the fanning mill to weed out the chaff, but the sieve of production records such as are furnished by the Dairy Herd Improvement associations and the statewide cow testing association are necessary.—Minnesota Farm Bulletin.

Benefit of Drinking Cups

We understand some tests were made in the Iowa State College of Agriculture and as a result, cows given free access to drinking cups produced about 6 per cent more milk and about 12 per cent more butterfat than cows turned outside to drink at a trough. As near as could be determined the cows drank about 18 per cent more water from the buckets than they did from outdoor troughs. They drank about ten times every 24 hours.—American Agriculturist.

People of the World
 The present population of the world is approximately 1,900,000,000. Estimates of world population before 1880 are not very trustworthy. Sir George Knibbs, however, considers that Machelot's estimate of 1,009,000,000 for 1845 is as well founded a guess as can be made. Accepting this estimate, it can be calculated that between 1845 and 1914 the average annual increase of the world population was .7 per cent. It was, in other words, increasing at a rate which would double the population in less than 100 years.

THE MEN on the DEAD MAN'S CHEST
 by Clifford Raymond

FROM THE BEGINNING

During a frustrated "holdup" at the Dutch Mill, a fashionable Chicago night club, a patron later identified as Dunn Clayton is shot and killed. Lieutenant of Police Stanton, investigating, questions a voluntary witness, calling himself "Buck" Trembly.

"The man I'd known elsewhere," he explained. "He was my reason for coming to Chicago. The women were incidental. They were his suggestion." Clayton evidently had awaited the coming of only one person. His table was for two. When the three hold-up men took the scene the man who was to become the only victim had been imperturbable. "I wasn't very nervous myself," said Trembly, "but I thought he was less so." "I don't know how nervous you'd be, mister," said the lieutenant, "but there wouldn't have been any false starts from Clayton."

"You knew him?" "A bit of him. He might have taken the three of them in another five minutes if he had not been shot." "Maybe they knew that?" "Not the faintest chance. Those bums didn't know anything. If they had they'd have known they didn't have a chance from the beginning. They were exposed on all sides. It was so raw that they ought to be given another chance before they're tried. But what happened?" "The shot. I was looking at Clayton, saw him crumple, looked about and saw the fellow who shot him put his pistol in his overcoat pocket and walk out."

"Have you a gun?" "Yes." "You're a competent citizen. You rather say so yourself. And you look like one. Why didn't you crack this killer?" "I'm not that good, Lieutenant," said Trembly. "Things were happening a bit too fast. You wouldn't count on the fellows you call bums bolting the way they did."

"They would have bolted if some one had dropped a plate or slammed a door." "Anyway, I sat dumb." "Could you describe or identify the man?" "Not a chance," said Trembly. "What I saw of his face was next to nothing, a blur. For the rest of it I could tell you that he was probably five feet eight or nine, one hundred and sixty-five to one hundred and seventy pounds and wore a black overcoat."

"Half the male citizenship of the town," said the lieutenant. "Where are you staying, Buck?" "I'm not staying," said Trembly. "I'm leaving at two forty-five for Minneapolis. That is, if you do not need me further. I hope you don't."

"I don't see why I should make you any inconvenience, Buck. You've tried to come in with what you knew. You might not think that a copper would want to keep these poor bums from standing trial for something they didn't do, but I'd rather get the fellow who really did it. Give me the names of the people you were to meet here, will you? I suppose they came about the time the party was breaking for the outside and took themselves out of the picture. Write me their names and addresses, Buck."

"I know only the man's," said Trembly. "That's all right. A fellow can find a lot of women's names in this place. You stay here just a minute while I talk with the detectives. I should have said dicks, I suppose. Eh, Buck? Lots of us are queer fish. Now, you'd never guess that my hobbies are ants and bees. So probably I say detectives. Anyway, the detective headquarters is on the job. That will end my concern with it. I'll be back in a moment. Just write me the man's name and address on a bit of paper."

As soon as the lieutenant had gone out of the office Trembly took a piece of paper from the desk at his side and after a moment's consideration wrote:

"A. P. Willard
 3220 May Place."

Five minutes later the lieutenant came back. "You've got something under an hour for your train, Buck," he said. "I had them stop a taxi for you. As a formality would you let me see your gun? They ask these d—n fool questions of us. Did you see his gun? No. You knew he had one? Yes. He told you he had? Yes. You didn't see it? No. And you're a copper? A copper, you are! I'm being pretty considerate, don't you think, mister? Let's see the old gat."

"Why not Buck?" Trembly asked, smiling as he drew his pistol. "Sometimes I feel Buck and sometimes I feel mister. You know how it goes with prima donnas. Now, one time," he broke the pistol and glanced at its chambers, "I might have felt like framing these bums we've got. Tonight I don't. Pistol's all right, Buck. Thank you. Your cab's outside. We'll not bother you any more. You've been a good scout. I told you I was interested in ants and bees? Sure. I just wanted you to think of me as a human being. Many coppers are when you see them at home."

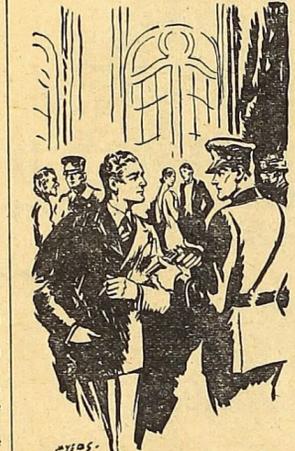

Arthur, or Buck, Trembly was the only son of a Buffalo attorney of reputation and wealth, whose money was made in hydroelectricity. The father was a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and of the Harvard Law school. There were six children, but Arthur was the only son. He had gone into Canada and had been a trooper in the Royal Mounted. He had got his man on a number of occasions, but on one the question why had arisen. The man could not answer it because he was dead. There was too much plausibility in Trembly's report for an official inquiry to be indicated or demanded. Nevertheless a question remained. It would have had more insistence if it had been known where the man's bag of gold was, (1) an hour before his death; (2) an hour afterward. Arthur never rejoined his reputable Buffalo family circle.

Trembly had married twice. His first wife had been the daughter of a well-to-do Indianapolis family who inherited one hundred thousand dollars on the death of her father. Mr. and Mrs. Trembly made identical wills, each bequeathing to the other all possessions. Mrs. Trembly died the year following her father's death. Trembly did not marry again until 1927.

CHAPTER II

The Necessary Dame

All aside from what John Law and his tipstaffs might think of it, Dunn Clayton had died nice. He had been much too busy a man to linger weakly and wretchedly in his bed and pick at his coverlet. Although he had changed his boots for spats it was consistent with his living that his dying should find them on. He was buried Tuesday, October 2, after the coroner's jury had taken its view. His funeral was a sober and decent affair with American Legion recognition of his good war record. The morning of the burying Lieutenant Stanton came to the station out of uniform.

"Going somewhere?" his captain asked him. "State's attorney wants to see you, Clayton, I suppose."

"I'm going to Clayton's funeral," said the lieutenant.

"You believe the murderers always turn up at the burying?" "This one won't. I knew a bit of Clayton when he was a square shooter."

"Yes, and when was that?" "In the latest war. But why me to the state's attorney? I'm not a detective."

"Corvaleski has asked for you. The squad car will take you down."

At the state's attorney's door the lieutenant had a wait of ten minutes. Then Horde, the first assistant, came out.

"Hullo, Stanton," he said, "glad to have you back on a case. Come on in."

"Don't kid me, man," said the lieutenant. "When did you ever have me on a case? I'm not a detective. I'm an officer of patrolmen. You ought to know the difference."

"Anyway, come in. He wants to see you."

They went inside. "Back again," said the state's attorney. "You can't help yourself, can you? Always falling into something nice. Red meat, Reputation, Fame. The fang of the law."

"Mr. Corvaleski," said the lieutenant, "you're not the man to kid a lieutenant of police. Fangs of law aren't lieutenants at East Chicago Avenue."

"How are the bees and ants? You'll be chief yet."

"No, I don't see it that way. You'll hold out on me and it will cost you half your pile to beat the case. What do you know about the Clayton murder? Why are you protecting these four 'hoods'?" (hoodlums). "They're not 'hoods,' mister," said Stanton. "They're boy scouts gone wrong. I'm not protecting them. Their own foolishness protects them, or should."

"What have you to show it? The case against them seems clear. These men try to take the Dutch Mill. There were the three whom the people saw. There were, of course, others near the door. You assume there weren't, and so you conclude the three were simple-minded. Most of the customers in there were sheep when they were scared, but Clayton wasn't. Can you imagine him taking a stick-up that way? He started to clean out these 'hoods,' and at his first move one of them back of him shot him. Then they all lost their nerve and ran. There's your story. It's not only plausible, it's insistent."

"It's also worthless," said Stanton, smiling. "It doesn't take into account why Clayton was in the Dutch Mill. He was put there to be killed and that wasn't done by the fellows who only wanted the cash and ornaments of the customers."

"How do you know that?" "It's partly guessing, as usual. A customer named Trembly—Arthur, or Buck, Trembly—had been sitting at a table near Dunn. He volunteered to tell the story. He told it too well. He had seen too much, although he explained that plausibly. My impression was that he had gone there to find Dunn, and that Dunn was astonished to see him. That assumes that they knew each other. I think they did. I think Dunn knew at once that he was in for trouble and was sorry for it not because he had any fear but because it would spoil his respectability. I doubt that he suspected Buck of planting a killer on him. He'd expect Trembly to do his own."

"Oh, wait a minute, Stanton!" the state's attorney interrupted. "Can you honestly think that there's even a semblance of probability or plausibility to that? How do you know they knew each other? Who says they did? Did Trembly say so? How do you know Clayton was planted there? I don't think you're quite reasonable. You say a simple case is no good, and then you produce what really is a fantastic one."

"Isn't it the truth, mister?" said the lieutenant. "But that's the way the police business goes now and then. Why don't you stick to your story? It will get you a few headlines. Leonine Young Prosecutor Promises Swift Justice for Dutch Mill Bandits' 'State's Attorney Corvaleski Aroused by Outrage.' 'Hanging Horde Demands Rope for Killers.'"

"Oh, go one with your story," said the state's attorney. "I'll have to because I've been holding out on you. I'll let you judge in a minute whether Dunn was enticed into the Dutch Mill. Assume he was. I connect that with Trembly. I guess that Buck had some reason for killing Dunn and that he intended to make sure of it by having some other man do it while Dunn thought he had only Buck on his hands. I happened to know Dunn Clayton a little more than by his reputation," said the lieutenant. "I knew him in the war."

"Oh, yes," said the state's attorney. "I forgot. You were in the war."

"Go to h—l," said Stanton. "You weren't. But don't let that worry you. Lots of other politicians weren't, and the ones who were in it kept it from being a really good war. But never mind that. You couldn't help it. The point is, Dunn was a man to have some enemies. Say Buck was one of them. Dunn was smooth and cool and sometimes hard. My guess would be that he and Buck sat looking at each other and knowing that there was murder coming. I don't know much about Buck, never having seen him until Dunn was dead, but I'll guess that Dunn sat there thinking he could beat whatever started. Only he didn't see it start. Now, I said I had been holding out on you. I took a letter off Dunn before they made a search of his pockets. A little quiet exploration sometimes helps. Here's the letter."

He handed it to Corvaleski who read it aloud:

Mayans Good Examples of Downtrodden Males

There was no equality of the sexes among the Mayans, who flourished in Yucatan in prehistoric times, but it was the man who was downtrodden and held in subjection by the woman, according to the investigations by Dr. Franz Blom, a German archeologist. The woman was a heavy drinker, but no man was allowed to drink until he had passed the age of sixty. The favorite drink was a concoction of honey, water and certain wild herbs which had a high alcoholic content. The women drank this regularly, but the man who was caught with even the odor of liquor on his breath was subject to immediate corporal punishment.

Woman at that time was the suitor.

Logical Youngster
 My little son, Arthur, aged five, found a wishbone on his plate, and asked me to wish with him.

Arthur won and said that he had wished for a motorcycle. "You must not tell me your wish," I said.

"Well, if you don't know what I wished for, how will I ever get it?" was the reply.—Chicago Tribune.

"Dunn, Old Dear—I have been in town so short a time that I have just learned you were here. I must leave Monday. It seems impossible to see you and wholly impossible not to. I can be run off with Saturday night by a discreet friend who will understand and who will give me an hour free and be my alibi for it. Be at the Dutch Mill sometime before midnight and, you willing and fate willing, you will see Maisie."

"That was in his pocket," said Stanton. "So I guess that considering he was killed he was planted there to be killed."

"It doesn't follow," said the first assistant. "The girl is doing something clandestine. She is a bit late. The place is held up. Her escort whisks her away."

"Nothing ever follows nothing," said the lieutenant, "unless you're willing to speculate. Now, I've talked to these bums, and they are merely pitiful. Take a diagram of the Dutch Mill, and then see what they tried to do. In five more minutes, before they could have taken more than three watches, two bill rolls and a ring, they would have been shot by some one from the kitchen or the office. The coroner, the cops, the fire department, the insurance patrol and a couple health department inspectors would have been arriving simultaneously."

"Why didn't you hold Trembly?" Corvaleski asked.

"It was just my hunch not to try it. My guess was that we'd do better with him loose than with some lawyer in court to know why we were holding him."

"But this letter; you certainly haven't been concealing it." "Only from publicity. The detective bureau is looking for Maisie."

"Who is she? Have you any idea?" "She's beyond my guessing. In fact, my guessing is pretty rotten, but it always comes back to Trembly and the conviction that he knew the note had been sent to Clayton. It may have been that the killer was outside or at another table waiting for Dunn to go. You see we can't tell what the appearance of Trembly meant to Dunn. He shows up, and Maisie doesn't. There's the nub of the matter. To that point it's Trembly's show. We don't know what might have happened because this crazy hold-up explodes on the scene. Whoever shot Clayton certainly rationalized the unexpected just as if it had been made for him. That's what I see. These young fellows we are holding know I'm the only friend they have, and they're telling me the truth. I'm sure of that. You probably can work them off if you want to, but don't think it will be good prosecution. It will be terrible."

"I don't feel murderous," said the state's attorney, "but I can't as yet share your confidence. You let Trembly go. What happened?" "He gave a fictitious name for the man he said he was to meet in the Dutch Mill. That was expected. He went to Milwaukee instead of Minneapolis, but he did leave town."

"Where is he now?" "We don't know, but I think he'll be picked up again."

"Who do you guess Maisie to be?" the first assistant asked. "Isn't she the key?"

"You guess," said Stanton. "You might guess that she was an old gal of Dunn's. You might guess that she was married. You might guess that she still liked Dunn, and that Dunn liked her. But if you can guess who that come-on letter you outguess me."

"I'd guess that if she wrote it she intended Clayton to be killed. There'd be a story in that. Then I'd guess that she might not have written it. Some one faked her hand."

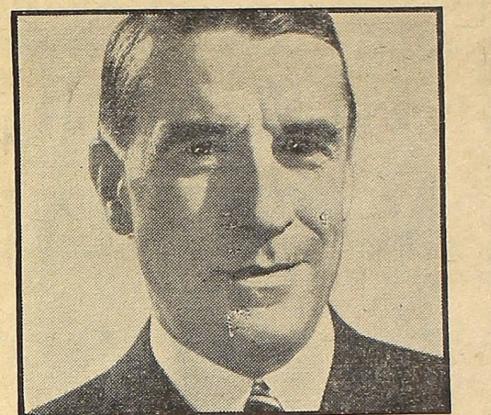

"You see, mister," said Stanton, "there's just as good guessing in your own office as anywhere else. I'm going to Dunn's funeral, and remember, if you select the bums as victims, give thanks that we don't yet use the electric chair. You couldn't burn them. They are too green and sappy. And so good day to you all. I'm going to the funeral."

"I'll want you in a day or two again," said Corvaleski.

"You've had all you'll need out of me," said the lieutenant as he closed the door behind him.

How Old?

He doesn't look a day over fifty. And feels like forty.

At the age of 62. That's the happy state of health and pep a man enjoys when he gives his vital organs a little stimulant!

When your system is stagnant and you feel sluggish, headachy, half-alive—don't waste money on "tonics" or "regulators" or similar patent medicines. Stimulate the liver and bowels. Use a famous physician's prescription every drug store keeps. Just ask them for Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin.

This appetizing syrup is made from fresh laxative herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin. One dose will clear up almost any case of headache, biliousness, constipation. But if you want to keep in fine shape, feel fit the year 'round, take a spoonful of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin every few days. You'll eat better, sleep better and feel better in every way. You will never need to take another laxative.

Give the children a little of this delicious syrup two or three times a week. A gentle, natural stimulant that makes them eat and keeps the bowels from clogging. And saves them from so many sick spells and colds.

Have a sound stomach, active liver and strong bowels, muscles that expel every bit of waste and poison every day! Just keep a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin on hand; take a stimulating spoonful every now and then. See if you don't feel new vigor in every way. Syrup pepsin isn't expensive.

It's common sense

WHEN doctors all agree that your body needs Vitamins, it's common sense to see that you get them. Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil contains both Vitamins A and D in guaranteed potency. Vitamin A builds resistance to winter colds. Vitamin D aids growing children in the development of bones and teeth. This emulsion has no fishy flavor. Men and women find it a pleasing, palatable way of taking cod liver oil. Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J. Sales Representative, Harold F. Ritchie & Co., Inc., New York.

A Writer of Unusual Stories

Clifford Raymond, author of "The Men on the Dead Man's Chest," has written a number of extremely popular American novels, each of which has had the distinction of being "different." He was born at Franklin, Pa., in 1875; is a graduate of Wittenberg college and of Harvard university; has been connected with the staff of the Chicago Tribune as an editorial writer since 1907 and is as thoroughly familiar with crime conditions in that city as it is possible for a newspaper investigator to become. His home is at Highland Park, one of Chicago's north shore suburbs.

"The Men on the Dead Man's Chest" resembles his other stories only in that it is "different." It is an unusual mystery story where a murder occurs in the first chapter and the identity of the murderer is disclosed at once in a foot-note? Certainly a very different kind. Lieutenant Stanton is a remarkable detective. So far as we know he is the only one in mystery fiction who ever started with the solution of a series of murders before they were committed and knew just what to expect before it happened, and then couldn't do anything about it after it had.

The reader, too, is an accessory to murders before the fact. And very cheerful about it.

This exceptionally interesting story is to appear serially in these columns. In it there is mystery of a new kind, romance, adventure, baffled detectives, thrills, climaxes, and with it all a keen humor. The kind of a story in which every chapter, every installment, every paragraph, is satisfying. A story no one of our readers will want to miss, and for which every one will say "thanks" for a good yarn.
