A Smile From the Proposed Canal Route in France.

WO French cities, Bordeaux and Carcassonne, the former a great port and the latter a sleepy ancient inland town, are literally in the way of the canal which France is planning to dig from the Atlantic ocean to the Mediterranean sea, thus affording a new waterway to the Mediterranean from the west.

Bordeaux will be the Atlantic terminus of the canal, which will include portions of the Garonne river and the Canal du Midi which was built in 1681. The canal will be about 280 miles long and will cost approximately $160,000,-

Bordeaux is seldom in the headlines in peace times, but let Paris be threatened from the north or the east, and Bordeaux would doubtless resume its old place in the spotlight. During the Franco-Prussian war, when the enemy occupied Paris, and again during the early days of the World war, before the Germans had been stopped in their initial rush on the French capital, the machinery of government was hastily transferred to the great commercial city on the left bank of the Garonne. At the time of the French revolution, too, the Girondists used Bordeaux as their chief headquarters.

Geography is Bordeaux' trump card, not only in time of war but in time of peace as well. Although a seaport, the city is 60 miles from open sea on a river that provides adequate docking facilities but is still not deep enough for warships of heavy draft. A few barges, judiciously sunk across the channel, would block everything else at any time desired. Far down in the southwestern part of France, the city has prospered almost undisturbed ret come into prominence as the capital of Aquitania Secunda of the Romans.

Bordeaux, however, should not be regarded only as a governmental pinchhitter. It is a thriving commercial city, the fourth in population in France, and has a foreign trade exceed, among French ports, only by Marseilles and Havre. With the province of Burgundy, in the eastern part of France, the district around Bordeaux shares the wine-producing honors of the country.

The Yanks Remember Bordeaux.

Bordeaux is largely terra incognita to the average tourist. None of the large transatlantic lines from North America terminates here, although there are many smaller companies, especially those connecting France with South America. Nor is it on any heavily traveled route to other parts of Europe. Bordeaux cannot benefit by way-traffic, as can Marseilles, Nice or Lyons. Travelers to Spain and to the shore resorts around Biarritz generally pass through the city without stopping.

The American doughboy, however, knows Bordeaux. When the United States went into the World war the railroads in the northern part of France were greatly overworked and choked with traffic. The northern ports, too, were menaced by the submarine. The Brest southward conditions were better. Brest, St. Nazaire, Nantes, Bordeaux and Bayonne thus spring suddenly into front-page headlines of American newspapers. Docking facilities, even at Bordeaux, were rather poor at that time. It was necessary for American engineers virtually to reconstruct some of the ports. In the spring of 1917 only two large ships could berth for unloading at the same time in Bordeaux, but a year later there were places for fifteen vessels. Bassen, a small village six miles down the Garonne from Bordeaux, was given fine docks and warehouses. A great deal of the supplies and ammunition of the A. E. F. were landed here. Bordeaux was one of the few cities to benefit by the war.

Commercial but Attractive.

Despite the fact that it is largely a commercial city, Bordeaux is, in many respects, very attractive. The main part of the city curves around the left bank of the Garonne river, which at this point describes a wide semi-

(Prepared by National Geographic Society, | circle. Low white houses take the Washington, D. C.)—WNU Service. | place of the tenements so characteristic of other French cities, while the public buildings are grouped in the center of the city along public gardens or line the imposing quays of the waterfront. The whole city is surrounded by a circle of boulevards.

The Cathedral of St. Andre, started in the Eleventh century, is considered one of the best proportioned Gothic churches in southern France. The Pont de Bordeaux, one of the bridges connecting the city with the right bank of the Garonne, was long considered among the finest in the world. Many of the magnificent private homes of the city were built when the great merchants of Bordeaux were at the height of their wealth and power, and are comparatively modern.

Around Bordeaux are smiling hills and fresh valleys, covered with vineyards. The vines they produce have made the district famous and have sent the names of Medoc, Graves, Sauternes, St. Emilion, etc., around the world. Nearby also is the little town of Cognac, which has lent its name to the most potent of French liquids. It is the center of the brandy trade of the district. South of Bordeaux stretch great pine forests and regions of waving grass, like those of our southern Atlantic states.

Carcassonne Is Two Towns.

Carcassonne straddles the River Aude about 56 miles southeast of Toulouse. Travelers arriving at the railway station in the so-called new town on the west bank of the Aude scan the panorama for a city of antiques, but it is not found on that side of the

The new town is only about three hundred years older than early American towns. Some of the inhabitants of the old town across the river revolted against the king of France and were driven out of the old town walls. They were allowed to settle on the site of the new town. That was in 1247.

A beautiful, shaded parkway near the railroad station introduces Carcassonne, but a few steps beyond the traveler is hemmed in between walls of stone and brick buildings rising sheer from the sidewalks. The streets run at right angles, forming solid blocks, the monotony of which is relieved only by a few squares and small parks and a wide, shaded boulevard.

The Place Carnot is a combined market place, loafing place, and meeting place in Carcassonne.

Famous Walls of the Old City.

Cross the River Aude, enter the gates of the old town, and you are on a site which was occupied by a settlement somewhere back in the mists of history. You may cross the Aude by a modern bridge or, with the ancient rampants ahead of you, you might prefer the old Thirteenth century span. The frowning gray walls of the old town were impregnable when battering rams were the "high explosives" of attackers. There are two walls with about 28 feet between them. One glance at these rampants convinces the traveler that one historian was right when he said that only famine or treason within the walls could cause the capture of the

The walls form an irregular oval about the old town and have only four openings. One opening in each wall is large enough to admit horses and wheeled vehicles, and each is guarded by a series of turrets and towers. The other openings are mere holes in the walls, wide enough for only one man to squeeze through. Inside, narrow, cobbled streets breathe an atmosphere of many centuries ago. There is the venerable St. Nazaire Cathedral with stained-glass windows depicting Bible scenes, and the Chateau, where high walls once echoed with the gay revelry of Carcassonne feudal lords. These old structures look down upon streets almost deserted, for the life of Carcassonne today is in the new town where the wine trade, one of the old trades of the city, still flourishes.

COWS NEED PROPER

SUPPLY OF WATER Point That Wise Dairyman

Will Remember.

"It costs a lot to have a cow carry water," says A. M. Goodman of the New York State College of Agriculture. He cites the experience of John Lonergan of Tully, N. Y., who found that it took 20 cows to give nine cans of milk a day when the herd drank from the creek in winter and 18 cows gave the same amount when they had water in brinking bowls beside each cow's stanchion in the barn. One cow in every ten to make up for the loss due to watering at the creek, or, as he says, one cow in every ten carries water for the other nine. Mr. Lonergan says that when the cows drank from the creek they did not drink all they needed. Now, they drink a lot of water after they eat their grain, and also in the evening after they have finished their hay.

Mr. Goodman recommends the modern drinking bowls with a supply valve operated by a paddle rather than the old type where the water level for the whole row of stanchions is controlled by one float valve. Piping water is a simple job and the cost of pipe and fittings is lower than it has been for several years, he says. A leaflet describing the installation is free on request to the department of agricultural engineering at the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y. Ask for 50-W.

Splendid Dairy Record

Hung Up by Ohio Man Charles Barnhart of the Madison-Darby Dairy Herd Improvement association was awarded the state honor for Ohio by the Dairy Tribune since he had the highest herd average thus far reported in cow testing circles, says the Ohio Farmer, and his record is the sixth highest in the United States reported to this publication. The highest record was 582 pounds of butterfat per cow in the herd of Robert Roemer of Colorado.

The record of the Barnhart herd was 9,139 pounds of milk and 547 pounds of butterfat per cow for the year, with an average of 11 cows in production for the 12 months. These were Jersey and Guernsey grade cows. The feed cost averaged $113 a head. but the profit over feed cost was figured at $126 for the year, and the labor income for the herd was $801.55 or an average of 50 cents an hour labor income.

Value of Salt Cups

Recent tests show that salt and mineral cups, which are a rather new piece of barn equipment, have been responsible for increased milk flow. These cups are used in connection with automatic drinking bowls and attach to the stanchions within convenient reach of the cows. Besides supplying needed mineral food for milk production, constant access to salt also stimulates thirst and results in the consumption of greater quantities of water. Many dairymen report that the definite increase in milk flow will pay for the low cost of the cups in two or three months' time.

Much investigation has been made to determine the best design and shape for salt cups. It has been found that cows will waste much of the mineral if the containers are shallow and wide topped, consequently the tendency is to make the cups with rather narrow openings so that the cow can reach the salt with her tongue only .- Southern Agriculturist.

In a few herds in this country and in more in the Scandinavian countries the cows are milked three times daily for the increased milk and fat that comes from frequent milking, but we doubt if the practice will ever become common on family-sized farms, where it would mean that the same milkers would have to be in attendance at all three milkings. With labor cheaper. it may be possible and profitable on larger dairy farms, where the help

(WNU Service)

A S HE neared home with his pay envelope in his pocket, Dick Howard had a sense of depression that he hated to go inside and face the exhilerated mood of his wife. She was always elated on pay days, ready for some new adventure in spending.

To have been married a year and a half, with a baby one month old, and not to have been able to save more than a paltry sum from his fairly good wages, seemed overwhelming tragedy. Most of what they saved had gone to pay the hospital bill. The doctor was yet to be heared from.

Dick couldn't see how he was so stupid as to turn over nearly every cent to Mae from the beginning. He had given her the credit of being able to manage well. He was still terribly in love with her and as for the babywell, nothing was too good for the little fellow.

That was the worst of this never getting anywhere. There was the baby's future to consider. He ought to have the best. Especially in education. Dick felt ugly with himself for being so soft in acceding to Mae's demands for money. He had never once protested and Mae had taken it all for granted that she could have almost anything she wanted.

He had got so sick of hearing her mention over all the things she would do the minute money was in her hands. He had never once heard her say the word-save. If she had it would have been different. Then they could talk He hated to spoil the kid's fun. She was lovely in her excitement of getting things together in the house. She must be enmeshed with different deferred payments for various things. He couldn't see how she could be so weak as to fall for that dollar-down stuff. But he hadn't the heart so far to dampen her enthusiasm.

Not that he didn't want to spend. He told himself he got as much kick as the next one out of throwing money for a little fun or spec. But Mae was surely hyped on this installment buying. He wondered where it would bring them if she didn't ease up.

Suddenly he thought of the absurdity of his acceptance of her extravagance. He saw them in debt which they could never meet. If he had any stuff in him at all he'd tell her. He'd tell her tonight when he handed over the pay. He'd be kind about it but wise and firm. He'd treat her like a fine little kid that just needed advice. He felt kind of sick about attempting it as he opened the door and called his usual "Hi, you two."

"Oh, Dick, I've hardly been able to wait to tell you what we've got. Baby and I. You know you said you wanted him to have a good education. Well, he's going to begin right here at home first with his own lovely library. Look-"

She led the way to the living rooms and displayed the beginning of a group of knowledge volumes for a child from babyhood to-it looked to Dick, like old age. She leaped upon pages with her fingers and pointed excitedly to certain items which attract-

A slow fury came over Dick. He looked at the baby asleep in the new buggy, and at Mae with her eyes gloating over this new purchase that was to enchain them with new obligations. He tightened his fists to keep them from gripping her shoulders. He felt he could shake and shake her into sensibility with a more keen delight than he had ever known in either kissing or loving her.

But when she went over to the baby, cooling above him, calling back that she had had the money for the down payment so she thought it was a splendid thing to get the books, he took a quick step toward them.

"And so you had to get into more debt, didn't you?" he glowered above her as she bent to pick up his son.

"And now," she continued, without looking at Dick, without seemingly to have heard him, "its time, Sonny, to tell your Daddy our surprise for himhow busy you and I have been trying to spend the precious money he works so hard for. Even with all the things we've saved a lot more than the doctor's bill which came today. We can pay it and clean up most of our debts and start a bank account for Sonny and some time maybe we'll put our rent into buying a house for us all, won't we?" She looked at Dick, a veritable glow about her. "Why, you're all tired out and white.

Bet you're hungry. But aren't you proud of us, uh?" He held her as if forever, the baby between them. "Proud? I'll show you. I've got something to work for. Something too good for a plug like me-"

Famous Bridgehead Years ago, Germans crossing the Rhine either to or from Coblenz, had the choice of paddling or using a poontoon bridge. Coblenz, meeting point of the Moselle and Rhine rivers, was the bridgehead occupied by the American troops after the signing of the armistice after the World war. The Romans founded a city there, more than 1,800 years ago, known as Confluentia. After the death of Charlemagne, his grandsons came there to divide between them his gigantic empire. Coblenz was the favorite residence of Empress Augusta, wife of Emperor Willlam I. Ehrenbreitstein, the "watch on the Rhine," is opposite Coblenz.

Find Soundness of Dentition Depends on Diet.

Baltimore. - Two Johns Hopkins university scientists have made public discoveries that go far toward explaining the ways in which diet causes, or prevents, decay of teeth. Two fertilizers, phosphorus and calcium, regulated by vitamin D are the tooth

The experiments showing how to work the combination of the three substances were explained in Science, official organ of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, by Dr. E. V. McCollum and Henry Klein. Their work was aided by grants from the American Dental association.

The tests were made on rats. In the laboratories their caretakers grew tooth cavities in the rodents almost at will, or prevented them almost

All this was done simply by giving the rats the right proportions of phosphorus and calcium. This correct ratio was about four parts of phosphorus to three of calcium. Proportions of three to two did not work.

Not only the ratio was important but the amount also. There was a minimum of the fertilizers below which they failed of effectiveness. When the rats were fed too little and in wrong proportions, the report states that 80 per cent of them developed cavities in 140 days. With properly balanced diet this decay was cut to 5 per cent.

The investigators further ascertained that the portion of the phosphorus in the blood is of vital importance, and that this is related to vitamin D.

Calcium and phosphorus are two of the principal fertilizers. They reach

FEDERAL AGENTS ARE EYEING 'LOVE CLUBS'

Powers Case Starts Government Probe of Matrimonial Agencies.

Washington.-While Harry F. Powers prepares to go to the gallows in March in the state penitentiary at Moundsville, W. Va., federal authorities are making a nation-wide investigation of matrimonial agencies and love clubs such as the one through which Powers met two women he murdered. There are more than 300 such agencies in the United States, it is asserted, and they have more than a million "members," including both men and women.

The government charges that men and women are not only being swindled by these organizations but also that through them they are also being placed at the mercy of confidence men, blackmailers, and even killers.

Many Others Like Powers.

Powers, who was condemned to die for killing a Chicago woman after he had made love to her and obtained her money after meeting her through a Detroit matrimonial agency, is not the first to take life under such circum-

Still remembered is the case of Desire Landru, called "Bluebeard," the Frenchman who dismembered the bodies of 11 women to whom he had made love before robbing and then killing them. Landru lured his victims through "love wanted" notices, as also did Bela Kiss, a Hungarian.

Kiss became engaged to more than 125 women through various matrimonial agencies and killed 30 of them.

Years ago Johann Hoch, of Chicago, became acquainted with 12 women whom he married, robbed, and then Agencies Are Thriving.

The fate met by the victims of Powers has not by any means put a damper on the business of the matrimonial agencies and the love clubs, investigating agents have learned. Hundreds of letters are put into the mails every day in all parts of the country as men and women from all walks of life take advantage of honeyed offers of "soul mates" and "connubial bliss." Investigators assert that all acquaintances arranged through these matrimonial agencies are dangerous. There are numerous cases where "love club" correspondence has resulted in happy marriages, but at the same time the dangerous contacts so greatly outnumber the safe ones that federal authorities have asserted that there should be more strict federal supervision of the activities of all of them.

TWO WAYS

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK Emeritus Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

* He came into the office without announcement or ceremony, like a mad bull raging, and threw upon the desk before me an official looking letter which seemed to have my signature on it. He was angry, there was every evidence to indicate, and I was the apparent cause of his perturbed state of mind. "Why do I get a letter like this?" he asked.

It was a notice that under our regulations, because of low grades, he had been placed on probation, and that unless his work in the future girl. improved, he would be automatically dropped from college.

'I'm not on probation," he went on. "You got me in bad with the folks at home, and the whole thing makes me sore. What sort of an outfit do you have in your office anyway? I should think you would know your alphabet at least."

"Did you carry all of your work?"

"No, I didn't," he explained, "but I got a 'B' in two hours, and that keeps me off probation."

"It isn't my mistake," I explained, "if it is a mistake. We send out the notices as the record comes from the college office. If an error has been made it will be corrected, and it will be made right just as quickly if you are polite, and if you were, you'd feel a lot better than you do now."

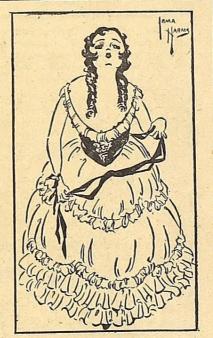

He went out not completely molli fied, but calmer than when he entered. I looked into the error. There were two Campbells with the same initials and the grades had become confused. The next man came in quietly and seated himself in front of me.

"I got the loan you recommended me for," he said, "and I want to thank you for it. You don't know how much it means to me to get a little help just now. The folks at home have had a hard time lately and they can't help me any more this year. I'm pretty nearly through, you know, and I'd hate to give up and not finish when I have only a half year to go."

It is rather uncommon to have people thank me these days for any routine service which I perform and recommending the boy for a loan was rather a routine job for me.

ALICE BEN BOLT

HERE'S "a slab of the granite so gray" in one of those tiny old cemeteries just off the main automobile highway two miles east of Tazewell. Va., under which, they say "Sweet Alice lies"; the same timid, brown-haired Alice of that familiar song, "Ben Bolt." It doesn't matter that the name carved on the tipsy old stone is not Alice, but Olivia, for Olivia Wynne, a girl who lived in an old brick house just up the road from the cemetery and died there early in the Nineteenth century. The countryside has long cherished the legend that Alice and Olivia were the same

The story is an old one, of the country girl of sheltered life who fell in love with the stranger with the city ways, this time an itinerant music master, who was engaged to teach her the not unromantic art of playing the melodeon. There were plans for a wedding, the stranger's departure to make arrangements," the girl's loving dreams over her trousseau and the fatal letter revealing the perfidious music master to be already married and a man of considerable family. Olivia died, as a true heroine of the period must, of broken heart.

In 1842 Dr. Thomas Dunn English of Pennsylvania visited his intimate friend Capt. William Edward Peery, then owner of the old Wynne homestead, was captivated by the legend, and subsequently wrote the words of the familiar ballad. They were later set to music by Nelson Kneass and the song achieved lasting fame when Du Maurier introduced it into his novel, the famous "Trilby."

ABELARD AND HELOISE

IN THE Paris cemetery of Pere-Lachaise, on summer Sundays, the sentimental still lay wreaths on the tomb of two lovers, who died almost 800 years ago but are hero and heroine of a love story which still lives on in the famous "Love Letters of Abelard and Heloise." Abelard was a brilliant and handsome young professor who by the time he was twenty-five was attracting thousands to his open-air speeches for the rights of the individual to make his own intellectual investigations. In time he came to verbal blows with the venerable St. Bernard himself, who stood for traditional authority and strongly condemned the young radical. In 1117 Abelard was hired by the canon of the Episcopal school in Paris to tutor his beautiful niece Heloise, then just seventeen. The pair fell madly in love and fled together to Brittany, where there was a secret marriage. The relatives of Heloise followed the couple, found and separated them, and the canon further hired men to invade Abelard's rooms and brutally mutilate him. Abelard in despair entered the monastery of St. Denis, and Heloise, at his instigation, pecame a nun and foreswore even her memories of him.

Ten years later Heloise learned that his retirement had not brought her lover peace and wrote him the first of five famous love letters in which is revealed the tragedy of two noble souls who tried to forget each other but could not. Abelard died in 1142; Heloise twenty years later.

HARUN AL-RASCHID

A LMOST as thrilling as Sinbad, or ing tales by which Schehazerade through a "Thousand and One Nights" entertained the caliph of Bagdad and saved her own life, is the story of the caliph himself. The caliph of the "Arabian Nights" was Harun al-Raschid, ruler of Bagdad during its palmy days in the Eighth century. His story is made up of the very stuff of romance: harem intrigues, poisonings, splendid gifts, hideous torments, with which his highhanded slaughter of many brides after a single night of marriage is quite compatible, though not authenticated by history. Schehazerade, who won his permanent affection by her gifts as story-teller, was a lady of high

Harun al-Raschid was son of the Caliph Mahdi and a freed slave girl, who ordered his own concubines to kill her eldest son, the rightful heir, in order to set her youngest and favorite in the throne of an empire then extending from Spain to India. At first, under the wise administration of his grand vizier, Yahia the Barmecide, the empire flourished and Harun devoted himself to luxury, pleasure and the arts. Later a quarrel between the caliph and the barmecides led to the execution of Yahia, his four sons and all their descendants, and the ultimate downfall of the empire in rebellious disorder. The caliph himself died in a manner quite unworthy of a fairy story hero-of apoplexy! (©. 1932. Western Newspaper Union.)

Bricks Never Imported

Wilstach says it is a pleasing but improbable tradition that bricks were brought from England for building in Virginia. There was an abundance of excellent brick clay here and no reason for importing brick. The tradition probably had its origin not in the fact of the place where the bricks were made but in the trade phrases "Dutch brick" and "English brick." These terms referred to sizes. Dutch brick were small and English brick large.

Aid for War Veterans

More than 430,000 ex-service men and their families were aided through 3,008 Red Cross Chapters and the national organization during the year ending June 30, 1931. Dependent families were cared for, veterans' claims were filed, hospitalization obtained and many other services given. Part of each contribution during the American Red Cross annual roll call. Armistice Day to Thanksgiving Day, goes toward supporting this vital work for veterans of the World War and other wars in which the United States has engaged.

Books for the Blind

Through American Red Cross Chapters, 3,827 volumes of novels, class books and others, transcribed into braille for blind readers, have been added to libraries, in the past year. These books are to be obtained through the Library of Congress and city libraries. This activity, carried on by a great number of devoted women volunteers in Red Cross Chapters, had its inception in preparing books for war blinded.

THORNTON W. BURGESS THE WHITE HUNTER

A BOUT the time that Peter Rabbit had reached the Green Forest that night after the first snow, a slim, trim little fellow yawned, rubbed his eyes, yawned again, stretched, and then abruptly made up his mind that he was hungry, and that it was time to do some hunting. He scrambled up to the doorway of his home, which was in a snug hollow under the roots of an old tree in the Green Forest, and thrust his head out. The ground was white; the trees were white; everything was white. He smiled as he sat there looking out at the white world, and his smile was a crafty, cruel, hungry, smile. That white world just suited him. It couldn't have suited him better. If you had been there when he made his first leap out into the snow you would have understood right away why he was so well pleased. His coat was as white as the snow! He was all white except the tip of his tail, and that was black. It was Shadow the Weasel. Now of all the hunters of the Green Forest there is none smarter, none more eager, none more tireless than Shadow the Weasel. Reddy Fox and Old Man Coyote and Hooty the Owl hunt to fill their stomachs, and when they have their stomachs full they stop hunting. But Shadow hunts for the pure joy of hunting. When he has killed as much as he can eat he does not stop. Oh, my, no! He keeps right on hunting. He is like a great many two-legged hunters. It is for this that he is so feared and hated by the little people of the Green For-

Now as he bounded along in long With everything white he heart. could be even bolder than usual, for in his pure white coat not even the wrathful eyes of Hooty the Owl, the one enemy he really feared, would be likely to see him. It was very convenient, that white coat. He ran swiftly with long bounds, stopping only to investigate the old logs and stumps and brush piles that he came to. Each of these he examined very carefully. There might be a Woodmouse hiding there, and Shadow is too good a hunter to be careless. So presently he came to the tracks of Peter Rabbit. For just a second Shadow smelled of the tracks with his keen little nose, than which there is none keener. His eyes brightened with eagerness. "Ha!" said Shadow. "He passed here not very long ago, Nothing would or could suit me better for dinner than Peter Rabbit, This cold air makes me hungry. He doesn't know I'm about; unless Reddy Fox or Old Man Coyote happens to give him a scare before I catch up with him it ought not to be a long

It was well for Whitefoot the Woodmouse that Shadow had found Peter's tracks after they left Whitefoot's hiding place, instead of before. He is such a slim fellow that he could have and would have slipped in at the little doorway and made an end of Whitefoot. Presently Shadow came to the place where Peter had followed the tracks of Happy Jack Squirrel. "Hello!" exclaimed Shadow. "Has that fellow returned to the Green Forest? I'll just keep an eye open for him hereafter."

Then he paid no more attention to Happy Jack's tracks, but kept right on after Peter. Presently he came to the tracks of Jimmy Skunk. He knew right away whose tracks they were. You know Jimmy is a cousin to Shadow. When he saw those tracks he scowled. He and Jimmy are not on the best of terms. Besides, at first he thought Jimmy was following Peter, and that would upset his plans. But in a few minutes he saw that Peter had been following Jimmy and that made him easier in mind. He felt still better when Jimmy's tracks ended at the hole under the old stump where Jimmy had made his home for the winter. Shadow sniffed at the Bobby Laying Out "Perfect" Course

HOT SANDWICHES

FOR A quick luncheon or supper there is nothing more satisfying than a tasty hot sandwich,

Ham and Egg Sandwich. Take one cupful of chopped ham and two eggs. Put bacon fat into a frying pan, turn in the mixture and cook slowly until the eggs are set. Cut into squares, lay on toasted bread and spread with currant jelly. Chickurry Sandwich.

Mix together one cupful each of chopped chicken and ham, one teaspoonful of curry powder, threefourths of a cupful of thick white sauce and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Mix the ingredients. Toast six slices of bread on one side, spread the untoasted side with a generous layer of the curry and sprinkle thickly with buttered crumbs. Bake in a hot oven until the crumbs are brown Serve at once.

Hot Reast Beef Sandwiches.

Lay slices of hot roast beef doped into brown gravy between buttered slices of bread from which the crusts have been trimmed. Pour the brown gravy over all and serve very hot with pickles or olives.

Hot Oyster Sandwich.

Cut a pint of oysters into bits. To a tablespoonful of butter add one-half teaspoonful of salt and a few dashes of cayenne and the liquor and the oysters. Stir in one-half cupful of cracker crumbs. Fill buttered sandwiches and serve at once. This makes ten sandwiches.

Spain Could Not

Be Allies' Friend

No one could be surprised that Spain preserved a strict neutrality in the great struggle of Armageddon. The historical barriers between Spain and the allied and associated powers were not to be surmounted.

The deepest bitter memory of the Spaniard is the Napoleonic invasion and the agony of the Peninsular war. Even after a hundred years there could be no unity of sentiment between France and Spain. Gibraltar, though a faded cause of irritation, still plays a part in Spanish thought.

But the real hatred was for the United States, and the final loss of the last remnants of the Spanish colonial empire left an aching void in the breasts of a proud race.

The aristocracy were pro-German. The middle classes anti-French. As the king said, "Only I and the mob are for the Allies." The best that could be hoped for was that Spain should be neutral in the struggle; and certainly she prospered by her abstention from it.-Winston Churchill in Collier's.

FROM THE BEGINNING

During a frustrated "holdup" at the Dutch Mill, a fashionable Chicago night club, a patron later identified as Dunn Clayton is shot and killed. Lieutenant of Police Stanton, investigating, questions a voluntary witness, calling himself "Buck" Trembly. His testimony is apparently straightforward. Stanton had known Clayton in France during the World war, and is personally interested in the case. In Clay-ton's pocket he had found a note signed "Maisie," making an ap-pointment with the dead man at the Dutch Mill. Stanton does not believe the holdup men killed Clayton, and is inclined to sus-

CHAPTER III

Dead Men Two and Three

A large camp on the shore of Lac Vieux Desert near the rise of the Wisconsin river was known in its region as the lodge of Little Butte des Morts It had its name from some obscure Menominee or Winnebago source. Although of only local ken, "Little" had been prefixed probably to distinguish it from Grand Butte des Morts far to the south on the Fox river near Lake Winnebago.

The early French penetration of Wisconsin has its vestiges in the charm of names persisting along with melodious Indian derivations against the homely nomenclature of Anglo-Saxon pioneer and settler. Etienne Brule, La Salle, Tonti, the Griffon. Claude Allouez, Jacques Marquette, Jean Nicholet, the explorers, searchers for La Chine, fur-traders and forest runners keep at least their shadows alive in Lac du Flambeau, the Brule, Lac Court d'Oreilles, Fond du Lac, et cetera, alongside Shantytown, Post Lake, Hickory Corners, Jump Lake and Enterprise.

The central lodge and cabins of Little Butte des Morts were log built in a stand of white and Norway pine with a smaller growth of balsam and with some hard woods to flame in the coloring of the fall. The club membership was in part of solvent half-year idlers and of men who followed the whole calendar of outdoor sport from Canada to Florida and in part of men of active affairs who could have a fortnight or month of fishing in the Two caretakers, with their wives who were the camp cooks, were in charge the year around, for the lodge was never closed. In the season the guides came from the region about. In the winter they went into the woods lumbering, except for a few older fellows who shacked themselves in near by and loitered about the fireplaces of the lodge and in its furnaceheated comfort as much as the caretakers' wives would tolerate and permit. Occasionally members who liked the pine barrens after season and who had nothing to engage them elsewhere would stay for the deer hunting in November without going home.

The morning of October 3 brought a turn in the weather, breaking a succession of brilliant, sparkling days with a storm, with a snow sky, and with blue clouds piling up as folds in a range of mountains. A whipping wind arose and brought the snow, and the lake was whipped into whitecaps, The wind was cold, and the snow was driven straight as a flight of spears, was caught in swirls to break as an upward flutter of white moths and was whipped out again in straight drives.

It was a day for every one about the lodge to knock off early from anything that was being done and to give up thinking of doing anything more if anything else had been thought of. Only one member, Preston Brown, had remained into the fall at the club. He was out with a gun for partridge, rabbits or a chance at a duck.

By mid-afternoon the men about the place, caretakers and guides, with a young Menominee Indian from the reservation and a traveling meat salesman who had been driving to Hurley and who had stopped in out of the snow, were making free with the main room of the lodge. A log fire had been lighted. Brown's tolerance was understood and taken for granted. Several bottles of liquor were produced.

In the woods a rustic playfulness may be a part of an early period of drinking; another period may mean rough action with boisterous humor; while a third may be violent with no humor. Within a half-hour the group in the lodge room was playful and was on the turn to rougher humor when a Buick sedan was driven up the camp road. The driver got out of his car and stood looking at the lodge, the snow quickly whitening his clothes. He wore hunting breeches and leggings and a leather coat. He was of robust middle age. His black hair was graying at the temples.

After a moment's observation of the place he went to the entrance. The Menominee had seen him from a window, and one of the caretakers opened the door. The stranger said that he had been bound for the Ontonagon country to the north but was having trouble driving on account of the snow. He was invited inside. Shortly afterward Brown returned to the lodge with two partridges.

The Buick had been followed along the main road by a Cadillac in which there were two men. When the Buick was driven into the grounds of Little Butte the Cadillac continued on its course, but a half-mile farther it was turned back, the driver using a farm road to the side to make his turn about. At the lodge entrance he also drove in, but several hundred vards from the lodge itself he turned off the roadway and came to a stop behind a covert of balsam. The two men in the Cadillac sat there for a half-hour, the car becoming almost as heavily crusted with snow as the trees behind which it stood. Then the driver's companion got out and walked toward the lodge. He was not dressed as either a townsman or a woodsman of the region but had a heavy ulster with its great collar turned up. That and his soft hat pulled down in front almost concealed his face.

He went to the nearest window of the lodge and looked in. He walked on around the corner. His actions were peculiar in that he seemingly had no intention of entering the place and apparently was indifferent to being discovered in the strange behavior of walking about it in a snow storm and looking in windows. Presently he returned to the car, shook the snow from his ulster and hat as well as he could, and let himself back into his seat beside the driver.

Thereafter the men remained in the automobile for an hour. Then the man in the ulster got out again and went to the lodge, looking in a window as he had done before.

At the first glance he turned and ran back to the car. Several men came hurriedly out of the lodge. One was the stranger who had come in the Buick. He went to his car, entered it and drove out of the grounds, turning south. The men in the Cadillac backed out from the covert of balsam and drove out, also turning south. The other men from the lodge ran to the caretakers' cottages and presently were running back with two women, all much agitated.

The Menominee Indian met the women at the steps.

"He's dead," he said. He then got his car out of the long shed used as a summer garage and departed for the reservation. The traveling meat salesman got his car and drove away toward Watersmeet to the north, on the way to Hurley. The caretakers and their wives and the guides were left dismayed with the consequences of the afternoon's rough hilarity: the dead body of Preston Brown, the club member. He had been impaled on a hunting knife.

The man in the Buick was driving ing the Cadillac followed at that speed until it was certain that the Buick was taking the main traveled road south. Then the speed of the Cadillac was increased to sixty miles. As it passed the Buick it swerved in so closely as to suggest either a peculiar indifference to safety or an intent to force the other car into the ditch, but before the Buick driver could be really aware of that the Cadillac had swung well into the other lane, passed with-snow was no longer falling. Thirty miles from Little Butte des Morts on the main traveled road south a wooden bridge over a thoroughfare between two lakes and the marshes through which it flowed, had been taken out. The concrete posts of the new bridge were in and there was a detour by an extemporized plank road. The approach from the north was by a sharp curve over a small hill.

The snow storm had sent the men home from the construction work October 3, but late in the afternoon an employee had put red lanterns along the approaches as warning of the dangerous road conditions. The snowfall stopped; the wind died down, and at sundown there was a burst of dark red in the west. As it faded out a Cadillac was driven from the north to within a hundred yards of the warning lanterns. A man in an ulster got out of the car and set about taking up the lights quickly. The driver of the car turned it into the brush by an old trail. When the man in the ulster had taken up all the lanterns on the north side of the bridge construction he carried them into the brush and hid them and himself where he could keep the road in view.

The dusk, cupped in the encirclement of balsam, oak, spruce, pine and scrub brush, deepened and darkened. There was then what alwaymust seem a miracle dropped from a casement of Heaven, the song of a white-throat sparrow singing in this waste of growing and forbidding darkness in which he was so bold a midge.

The white-throat stopped his song at the sound of a motor coming from the north. The car was a Ford. The driver knew his road. He swore as he came up slowly, evidently at the carelessness which had neglected to put up the lights, but he took his way across the plank detour.

The hiding man remained hidden and quiet, and waited. It was now dark. There was the sound of another car approaching at high speed. Its bright lights covered the road, but it took the bad curve without any apparent understanding of what might be ahead. It hit the concrete post of the new bridge just as its driver shut off the power and set his brakes. The post was taken out and the broken car went over the embankment into the thoroughfare. The hiding man came out of his place of concealment. He looked into the thoroughfare into which the car had gone. In the darkness there was nothing to be seen. He replaced the red lights where they had been and returned to the Cadillac. The driver brought it back into the road, drove carefully over the plank detour and on south at high speed.

As if there had been no wintry interruption, the following day, October 4, was another of the brilliant warm days of the Wisconsin autumn. White mists arose from lakes and thoroughfares in the chill of the morning as the sun came up, but they cleared away. The snow mantle on the pine, balsam and spruce dropped in thawing and the ground covering melted quickly into the sandy soil.

The construction gangs at the bridge came on the job and had been at work a half-hour before a foreman saw the top of a sedan in the thoroughfare. It was by a pine trunk which stood two feet above the water. Some drift of dead limbs had washed against it and about "for want of a nail a kingdom was lost," is attributed to Benjamin Franklin. In the preface of his "Poor Richard's Almanack for 1758," Richard Saunders, the name Franklin assumed in the writing, quotes a man named Father Abraham as saying: "And again, he Richard adviseth to circumspection and care, even in the smallest matters, because sometimes a little neglect may breed great mischief, adding, for want of a nail, the shoe was lost; for want of a shoe the horse was lost; and for want of a horse the rider was lost, being overtaken and slain by the enemy, all for want of care about a horseshoe nail." No historical incident of this nature is

In old school readers, Franklin's precept is given as follows: "For the want of a nail the shoe was lost; for the want of a shoe the horse was lost; for the want of a horse the rider was lost; for the want of a rider the battle was lost; for the want of a battle the kingdom was lost -and all for the want of a horseshoe

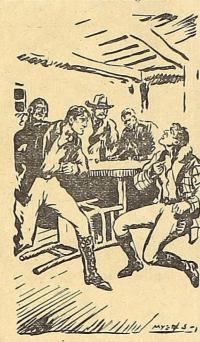

Soldier's Idea of Action

This is my philosophy of action:

Every time you've a task before you examine it carefully, take exact measure of what is expected of you. Then make your plan, and in order to execute it properly create for yourself a method. Never improvise. The fundamental qualities for good execution of a plan are, first, naturally, intelli-The sparrows and robins, if you gence; then discernment and judgment which enable one to recognize the best methods to attain it; then singleness of purpose; and, lastly, what is most essential of all, namely, will-stubborn will.-Marshal Foch.

had obscured its outlines. The fore man looked at it a moment or two before he was certain that it must be evidence of a road accident. Then he called his men. One entered the water and attached chains to the car A tractor dragged it out, and the death in it was disclosed. The wrecked car and the body were sent into Eagle River, where the owner of the Buick identified it as one rented from his garage and the dead man as the one who had taken it out.

Further identification came when the body of Preston Brown was brought from Lac Vieux to Eagle River. The men from Little Butte lodge looked at the victim of the bridge accident and found that he was the man on whose hunting knife Brown had been impaled. They were concerned in part for their own conduct, but they agreed that Brown's death had been accidental. They had been drinking, Brown, the stranger and all of them except Jim, the Menominee. Although they had drunk a great deal everybody had been good-natured. Brown and the stranger had been cordial. There had been some rough play, scuffles, some wrestling, dancing and a great deal of bragging and loud talking.

The guides and caretakers had roughed one another, tipped one another out of chairs, come to grips and thrown one another about the room and had wrestled over the floor. It wouldn't have happened if it hadn't been just that kind of snow? afternoon when a little drinking seemed to be about right. Rough, but nothing out of the ordinary for such an occasion except possibly the knife-throw-

The Menominee had started that. He had not been drinking and he hadn't been tussling, but after there had been some bragging incidental to the rough fun the Indian began pitching his knife at the wall. Possibly he wanted to show how dangerous his dexterity could be. He called two knots in the wall the eyes of a man. The guides and caretakers tried their skill at it, but the Menominee was easily the best. Brown did not throw. He even remonstrated that it might hurt some one. The stranger teased him a bit bruskly about his prudence, The stranger also made one throw with his hunting knife. It was a large twobladed knife, a blade opening from each end of the handle. Both blades were open as he threw it. He wasn't expert, but he imbedded a blade solidly in the wall something over four feet from the floor. His effort was awkward. The men laughed at him and turned to have another drink and forgot the knife in the wall. Later the stranger teased Brown into a scuffle in which they suddenly began to exert themselves to the limit of their strength, almost angrily as men will in adult foolishness of the kind. The unfortunate end came when

Brown was thrown against the forgotten knife blade. He gasped, clutched his breast and sagged at the knees. Then he fell. The other men were too astonished to understand it at first. Then they were sobered and horrified. The stranger must have lost his judgment in his consternation and remorse, which would account for his disappearance and for a wild drive resulting in his death at a place in the road dangerous to a distracted man at the wheel of an automobile. The identification failed, however, to give the county authorities the stranger's name. There was nothing to be found in his pockets or on his clothing to reveal who he was. He remained the stranger who had impaled Brown on his hunting knife in a wrestling scuffle.

It was, moreover, discovered that the men from Lac Vieux knew in reality nothing of Preston Brown. They could not recall that they ever had heard where his home was or who or where his next of kin were. His effects at the lodge yielded nothing except, curiously, the name of Dunp Clayton who had been killed the preceding Saturday night in Chicago. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

American Culture I should like to meet in every European country women as truly cultivated as those whom I have seen in the great colleges of the eastern United States-at Bryn Mawr, at Vassar and at Smith.

My students at Princeton were capable of following intelligently a lecture in French, and their reading was wide. To read the output of the younger American authors is to be convinced that it could not be the expression of an uncultured people. A novelist such as Hemingway, by his taste and his restraint, heralds a great epoch. A critic like Edmund Wilson would do honor to any French or English review.

The tone of the best magazines in dicates a true taste for ideas. It might be answered that these magazines address themselves only to a small minority of highbrows, and that the rest are vulgar. But is not that true of all countries?

Children don't ordinarily take to medicines but here's one that all of them love. Perhaps it shouldn't be called a medicine at all. It's more like a rich, concentrated food.

It's pure, wholesome, sweet to the taste and sweet in your child's little stomach. It builds up and strengthens weak, puny, underweight children, makes them eat heartily, brings the roses back to their cheeks, makes them playful, energetic, full of life. And no bilious, headachy, constipated, feverish, fretful baby or child ever failed to respond to the gentle influence of California Fig Syrup on their little bowels. It starts lazy bowels quick, cleans them out thoroughly, tones and strengthens them so they continue to act normally, of their own accord.
