THAT SPECIAL SESSION OF THE LEGISLATURE

Governor repeatedly said that the terrible load of taxation now carried Jack Swartz, Jr., spent the week and that if the legislature in its regular session did not do something about it that he would call a special session and keep them in Lansing until they did correct this evil. The regular session above referred to is now history—almost a year has passed since its adjournment. Nothing was accomplished that would Mrs. John L. Taxes are higher than ever and still nothing has been done about the matter at Lansing.

The present situation with reference to taxes could hardly be worse. Fifty per cent of all the farms and homes in the state will have been lost to their present owners inside of three years, unless some relief is found at once. Lincoln Forbears Not Men of Mean Stock

His Ancestor a Member of Jefferson's Cabinet.

A BRAHAM LINCOLN came of no mean stock, according to Dr. Louis A. Warren, of Fort Wayne, Ind., director of the Lincoln Historical Research foundation and editor of Lincoln Lore.

The Civil war President's family belonged to the ante-bellum southern aristocracy of Kentucky, and one of his ancestors was a cabinet officer in a Democratic administration, Doctor Warren's research has revealed.

In refuting the popular misconception that Lincoln rose from poverty and was of an humble origin, Doctor Warren declared that if his revelations were a shock to cherished ideas of the emancipator, they had the sound backing of documentary evidence,

"President Lincoln was of the seventh generation of his family in America, and his line has been traced back through four generations in Hingham, England. Samuel Lincoln, who came to America in 1637 and founded the town of Hingham, Mass, was the founder of the American line.

"When Lincoln visited Worcester, Mass., in 1848, and was entertained by Levi Lincoln, he was the guest of one of his own family, although neither he nor his host knew of the connection. The President died without knowing of the link with the Lincolns who had a prominent part in molding the history of New England. A recent document lists more than 1,000 of them. Levi, Sr., who was once governor of the Bay state, was secretary of state under Thomas Jefferson.

Doctor Warren traced the migration of the Lincolns from Massachusetts. through New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Kentucky, across the Ohio river into Indiana and thence to Illi-

Sought Supreme Wisdom

Abraham Lincoln said: "I have been driven many times to my knees by the overwhelming conviction that I had nowhere else to go. My own wisdom and that of all about me, seemed insufficient for that day."

Last Witness of Tragedy

Henry C. Harris, ninety-year-old Union veteran of the Civil war and believed to have been the last surviving witness of the assassination of Abraham Lincoln, died at his home at Berryville, Ark., in 1930.

A PROPHECY (From "Lincoln's Grave.")

And if Virginia's vales shall ring again To battle-yell of Moseby or Mahone, If Wilder's wild brigade or Morgan's men Once more wheel into lines; or all alone A Sheridan shall ride, a Cleburne fell—
There will not be two flags above them flying,
But both in one, welded in that pure flame
Upflaring in us all,

Document in Possession of Milwaukee Family.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S autobiography, consisting of slightly more than 500 words in his own handwriting, is in the possession of Mrs. Harriet F. Richardson and her son, of Milwaukee, Wis.

They were willed the document by the late Miss Fannie Fell. Jesse Fell, Miss Fell's father, shared law offices with Lincoln in Springfield, Ill. He prevailed upon Lincoln to write the autobiography in 1859 when it became apparent that the great emancipator would become a Presidential candidate.

Extracts from the autobiography follow:

"I was born February 12, 1809, in Hardin county, Kentucky. My parents were both born in Virginia of undistinguished families, second families, I should say. My mother, who died in my tenth year, was of a family of the name of Hanks, some of whom now reside in Adams, and others in Macon county, Illinois.

"My paternal grandfather, Abraham Lincoln, emigrated from Rockingham county, Virginia, to Kentucky about 1781 or 1782, where a year or two later he was killed by Indians, not in battle, but by stealth, when he was laboring to open a farm in the forest.

"His ancestors, who were Quakers, went to Virginia from Berks county, Pennsylvania, An effort to identify them with the New England family of the same name, ended in nothing more definite than a similarity of Christian names of both families, such as Enoch, Levi, Mordecai, Solomon, Abraham and the like.

"My father, at the death of his father, was but six years of age and he grew up literally without education. He removed from Kentucky to what is now Spencer county, Indiana, in my eighth year.

"At twenty-one I came to Illinois and passed the first year in Illinois-Macon county. Then I got to New Salem, where I remained a year as a sort of clerk in the store. Then came the Black Hawk war and I was elected a captain of volunteers, a success which gave me more pleasure than any I have had since. I went into the campaign, was elected, ran for the legislature the same year (1832) and was beaten. Only time I have ever been beaten by the people. The next three succeeding biennial elections I was elected to the legislature.

"During this legislation period I had studied law and removed to Springfield to practice it. In 1841 I was elected to the lower house of congress. From 1849 to 1854 I practiced law more assiduously than ever beforealways a Whig in politics, and generally on the Whig electoral tickets, making active canvasses.

"If any personal description of me is thought desirable, it may be said, I am 6 feet 4 inches in height, lean in flesh, weighing on an average 180 pounds; dark complexion, with coarse hair and gray eyes-no marks or brands recollected."

ET every man remember that to violate the law is to trample on the blood of his fathers, and to tear the charter of his own and his children's liberty.-Abra

TT HAPPENED that after receiving an invitation to be best man for his last bachelor friend, Clark Darlington came upon a relic of his college days in the form of an old photograph

He sat before the fireplace in his comfortable room and held the old frame before him so that the light from the fire shone on the faded photographs of six girls. It had once been the fashion for college boys to frame theirs various loves thus: "My witty girl, my pretty girl, the girl that I adore; my winter girl, my summer girl, my girl alas-no more.'

He studied each face, successively. "Yes; Jane was my witty girl. She always had a merry quip to greet you with or a joke or a story," he solilo-

The next face was beautifully carved out as a cameo. "And Bertha was the prettiest girl I knew. No doubt of her right to that title in the frame. And perhaps I did adore Clara." He had passed to studying the third face.

"Babs was a peach of a winter girl. Beth was a light and frilly summer girl and-"

He had reached the last face in the frame-"my girl alas-no more." A shadow had crossed his eyes. This, then, was the girl. Constance Hoyt was, alas, his girl no more, and yet be had never found one to take her place. The cause of their quarrel had been trivial enough-her annoyance at his behavior at his senior dance. And he had defied her right to criticize him and had gone on tossing wild oats here and there until the girl would have nothing to do with him.

He had not heard of her for years. Probably she was married; possibly she was gone.

When he retired that night he had not put the picture frame back in the drawer with the relics of his past. He had slipped it along the mantleplece so that the photograph of his girl, "alas-no more," was in the center where he could see her face at all

For the next few days he was busy attending to last-minute duties of a well-informed best man. Therefore, he had had little time to think of the former love whose face had recalled such tender memories of a lost romance. It happened that the name of the little girl who was to carry the ring up the aisle on a satin pillow was Constance. She was a pretty tot and Clark quite fell in love with her at the rehearsal of the ceremony the night before the wedding. "Isn't she a doll?" asked the bride-to-be.

"She's all of that. Where did you pluck her?"

"Oh-she's the daughter of one of my old school friends. She's married since and-this is her wee daughter. Don't forget anything, Clark. Tom is so flighty these last few days."

The best man was the least nervous of the whole wedding party when the organist began to play the wedding march that should usher them into the church.

All eyes were on the lovely little girl who carried the ring. She stepped gracefully along the aisle to the strains of Lohengrin's march. Clark watched

As the child passed one of the lower pews he saw her turn her little face up and smile. Clark looked at the face of the woman whom she had greeted and there, almost obscured from his vision by a cluster of American Beauty roses, was Constance-his girl-alas, no more!

From that moment on he had no interest in Tom and his wedding. Here -entirely out of his reach and more beautiful than ever he had fancied her -was the only girl he had ever loved.

After the ceremony things moved so quickly that he lost sight of Constance. But he realized that she would be at the breakfast and that no doubt he should have an opportunity to speak with her. He wondered whether he dared to trust himself.

Almost before he had decided, he found himself beside her with her little girl. "Clark-Clark Darlington," she was saying, "I-I thought it must be you." "I had seen your little daughter," Clark said, awkwardly. "And-I have an old photograph of you in my room. Strangely enough, I was locking at it not a week ago."

"I'm sure it's lovely," laughed Constance.

"Your-husband? Is he here?" asked Clark. "You must remember that I do not even know your namenow."

Constance did not answer at once. Clark waited.

"Poor old Don is 'Somewhere in France.' Didn't you know? He and I were married only six weeks when he was called to his regiment." "Oh-" Clark Darlington had never felt so awkward. But later he recovered and lost no time in finding out all he could of Constance. She seemed as glad to have found him as he was to have discovered her again. It was an intensive wooing and when at last Clark had promised little Constance he would be a good

daddy to her, he felt that Tom's wedding had been the happiest day of the best man's life. "My girl-forever more," was what he wrote beneath the old photograph of Constance who objected to the

Every Strata of Labor Used in Production.

Washington .- Cuba's sugar crop is on its way to the dining table. Grinding sugar cane began several days ago by decree of the president of the re-

"The progress of sugar from standing cane on the vast plantations which belt the world in areas where there are long summers and plenty of moisture and fertile soil, to the sugar bowl on the dinner table, is a story involving nearly every strata of labor from experts in agriculture, sugar refining and distribution, to the lowly laborer of plantation lore," says a bulletin from headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Sugar cane must be mature to give the maximum quantity of sugar. When the stalk is cut and loaded into an oxcart, it has already survived a major operation by which it has lost its appendages-its blades and the upper part of the stalk which contains almost no sugar.

"While automobiles glide through the sugar country today, the oxcart, long a part of the sugar plantation panorama, still collects the cut cane and delivers it to the nearest railroad for transport to the crushing machines. In Cuba a railway car transports about 20 tons of cane and each train consists of about 30 cars-600 tons of cane in a single trainload. Ten trainloads must be harvested to keep a crusher in operation for the 24 working hours in the height of the harvesting season.

"After the cane is deposited on the oxcart, human hands seldom touch it until it emerges from a refinery, ready for the dinner table. A derrick lifts the cane from the oxcart, and deposits it on railway cars. At the crusher the cars are pulled, one at a time, onto a cradlelike device. A button is pushed, the car tilts and the cane falls into a

THE DUTY OF TODAY

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK Emeritus Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

It is far easier for a great many of us to plan something great for the future than it is to do the simple tasks of today. George sits with his book in his hand dream-There is a problem in trigonometry before him to be solved which, if he would give his attention to it for a few minutes, he could easily manage, but that is not what he is doing. Instead his mind is wandering far into the future when he shall have finished his course in college, and the period of probation which every great man, engineer or otherwise, must go through, and shall have become a great engineer. He has not realized that meeting simple and possible situations of today will help him to the realization of the dream tomorrow.

Mr. T. E. Lawrence in his "Revolt of the Desert," is riding with Zeki, an enthusiastic Syrian, over the hot sands of the Syrian desert. It is a trying journey for man and beast, and the weary camels are worn out from overwork and underfeeding. Zeki's beast is full of mange, and his attention is called to the fact.

"Alas and alack," he says in a sad tone of voice, "in the evening, very quickly, when the sun is low, we shall dress her skin with ointment."

It would have been a very simple thing to do, and quite within the range of possibilities, but instead Zeki's brain takes fire and his imagination runs riot. He conceives a great organization through which not only camels but all other suffering auimals shall be taken care of by the state. Hospitals he will have and skilled surgeons and medicaments of all sorts and a great library of medical books in which can be found remedies for all suffering animals, and traveling inspectors to look out for and bring in the ailing animals, and under these subinspectors. It was a wonderful scheme pregnant with possibilities, but while his imagination was work ing and the details of his great organization were being worked out, his poor camel, nothing having been done to relieve its distress, died of its

Father Needing Money Offers Twins in Pawn

Gets No Takers, So Flees in Fear of Charity.

Harris was out of a job and figared that the only way that he could obtain money for the operation was to pawn something. He didn't have much to pawn except the twin babies.

So Harris informed A. B. Leigh, probation officer, and Mrs. Jack Campbell, police matron, that he is willing

All Adults in Village

Are Sentenced to Jail

Kovno, Lithuania.-The entire adult population of the village of Naujamiesta has been sentenced to jail and the 400 inhabitants have begun serving terms of from two to four weeks in relays of ten persons. The jail accommodates only ten at a time.

The wholesale sentence was the result of a forty-two-year court action over the right of the citizens to gather firewood in a nearby forest, where for generations they had found fuel, although the government frequently warned them that the property belonged to the state and that trespassing was forbidden.

The town first filed suit against Czarist Russia and later against the republican government of Lithuania, created after the World war. Police served thousands of notices of violation of the law, and many fines were assessed, while the suit was being decided by the courts. The government eventually won the action, but by that time every person in Naujamiesta had been fined once or twice.

None would pay a fine and the jailer decided to let them serve jail terms in relays. Meanwhile the population continues to gather firewood from the forest as before.

to pawn the twins for $200. The twins' names are Daniel and Delbert.

"I can't get a job," he said as he sat with his wife and babies in their one-room tenement home. "I have nothing that I can mortgage and I won't accept charity.

"The twins are the only security that I can offer for a loan," he said. "If some one will lend me $200, he can adopt the twins. Later on, when I get steady work, I'll redeem them."

Leigh and Mrs. Campbell recommended that Harris go to the county doctor for his operation, but he protested, saying that he would not accept charity.

The twins are six months old, and have been described by doctors as being in perfect health.

A few days after Harris made his offer he fled from Hutchinson, taking with him his wife and babies. He had confided in friends that he had feared that city and county authorities would take action against him, since he had refused to move to the county farm as a charity family.

Autos Replace Camels as "Ships of Desert"

Detroit.-Automobiles are fast replacing camels as the ships of the desert, according to H. K. Norman, London, England, on a recent visit here.

"Recently I was in Beyrouth," Norman said, "and was amazed at the lines of auto transportation that extended from that point over various desert routes. One line runs from there to Bagdad. Another extends to Damascus. Still another to Haifa.

"The reason for the replacement of camels with the modern auto has been largely the demand of tourists for more comfort and speed."

The belief that the percentage of butterfat varies with the feeding of the cow is not correct, for none of the experiment stations have ever found a method of feeding that would maintain the milk flow and at the same time increase the percentage of fat over a long period of time.

Roughage Important in

Many of the abnormal conditions experienced in dairy cattle feeding which in the past have been attributed to other causes have probably been due to lack of proper quality in the roughage.

If corn fodder rather than corn silage must be a part of the dairy feed supply for this winter, start now to put it in such shape that it can be kept clean, bright, and of the best possible quality. Attention given now to safeguarding palatability and quality in corn fodder will pay big returns later in the winter.

Fodder should be shredded if possible. Shredding or chopping may not increase the digestibility of fodder but does make it possible to store such feeds in much smaller space and under shelter where is quality can be

Corn fodder should not be used as the sole source of roughage. It is better to feed it only once a day preferably the last thing at night, feeding liberally so that dairy cows are not forced to pick it over too closely. To force cows to feed over corn tod der too closely is poor economy. Forcing cows to eat weathered, moldy, frozen, or snow-filled fodder from the field or shock is the worst of folly .-Successful Farming.

Wattz King's Record

Strauss, the waltz king, is said to have written nearly 400 waltzes and that there was not a poor one among them. In addition he wrote many selections for other dance steps, including polkas, mazurkas and schottisches, not to mention marches and ballads. His operettas were next in fame to his waltzes.

Wheat Brings $1.25 a Bushel Here

E CONOMISTS might be puzzled at seeing Charles Huffman (right), Kansas farmer, being handed a check for $125 for 100 bushels of wheat while other Kansas farmers are getting only 40 cents a bushel for the grain. John R. Reed, who is tendering the check, bought the wheat in accordance with the Pratt County Prosperity Wheat association's plan for boosting the price of wheat to $1,25 a bushel. The wheat was turned over to a bakery in Pritt, Kan., which promptly proceeded to make it into bread which sold for 10 cents a loaf, the prevailing price. The first loaf of the "$1.25 wheat" bread was presented to President Hoover.

MADE WITH BANANAS

ONLY rich flavored fruits will stand the chilling in frozen dishes without losing their flavor. The banana is one of these. It not only keeps its luscious flavor, but enhances the creamness of any frozen dish.

The banana being rich in vitamin C it is another fruit to serve freely in various ways to keep helathful.

Fruit Ice Cream.

Rub three ripe bananas through a sieve, add the juice of three oranges, three lemons and two cupfuls of sugar, a pinch of salt and one quart of thin cream. Freeze, after stirring until the sugar is well dissolved. Serve in sherbet glasses garnished with preserved orange peel.

HOOTY THE OWL PROVES A FRIEND

Oh, honor a friend when a friend you need,
For then is a friend, a friend indeed.

SOMETIMES people act the part of friends without knowing it. It was that way with Hooty the Owl. He proved a friend to Peter Rabbit when Peter most needed friend, but he doesn't know it to this day. However, Peter doesn't forget, and he has a kindlier feeling for Hooty than ever he used to have. It is queer how things sometimes happen in this world. Hooty did for Peter the greatest thing that anyone can do for another; he saved Peter's life. Yes, sir, that is just what Hooty did. And this is the queer thing about it; he didn't try to do it. More than this, he didn't know that he did do it. He doesn't know it yet. But Peter knows it, and little Mrs. Peter knows it, for Peter told her all about it, and one other knows it-Shadow the Weasel.

You see it was this way: Peter had run until he felt as if he couldn't run another step. His feet felt too heavy to lift. He was so short of breath that he had a pain in his side, the same sort of pain that you sometimes have when you run very long and very hard. Worse still, his heart was thumping from fear and terror till it seemed as if it must burst, and not one little ray of hope did Peter have to give him courage. He knew that somewhere behind him, drawing nearer with every jump, was Shadow the Weasel, and that when Shadow should catch him, then-well, it was best not to think about what would happen then.

At last Peter felt that he just had to rest. He couldn't run another step. Right in front of him was a pile of snow-covered brush. He crawled under this, and there he squatted panting for breath, and with a terrible fear in his eyes, watching his back tracks for Shadow the Weasel. Now it just happened that Peter had no more than crawled under that pile of brush than Hooty the Owl came sailing over the Green Forest on silent wings, like a black shadow in the moonlight.

Close by the pile of brush under which Peter was hiding was a tall dead tree, and right on the top of this Hooty alighted and sat perfectly still and very straight. In fact he looked like a part of the tree itself. He meant to. It was one of Hooty's watch towers. He had arrived just too late to see Peter crawl under the brush, and he came so silently that Peter didn't hear him. Neither did Peter see him, for he was too intent on watching for Shadow to look up. So Peter didn't know that Hooty was anywhere near, and Hooty didn't know that Peter was anywhere about.

Peter had watched sharply, but had seen nothing, when suddenly Hooty swooped down right in front of where Peter was hiding. It was so sudden and unexpected that Peter swallowed his breath and almost choked. There was an angry spitting sound, and then Peter saw what looked like some of the snow itself bound off to one side. It was Shadow, and his coat was pure white. Again Hooty swooped and Shadow dodged. Then he turned and darted into a hole in a hollow log while Hooty went back to his watch tower. Then Peter sighed. It was a sigh of great relief. As long as Hooty sat there Shadow would not dare come out of his retreat in the hollow log, and that meant that he, Peter, would have time to rest and regain his breath. Hooty had saved his life for a while, anyway, for if he hadn't swooped at Shadow just when he did, and so prevented him from reaching the pile of brush, Peter would have been no more by this time. For the first time in all his life Peter felt kindly toward Hooty the Owl. Perhaps now he might get away after all.

ON THE FLOOR

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

FIGURE this one out for me: Wide awake I seem to be, Lying quiet, counting sheep, Nothing seems to make me sleep, Far from noises of the town, In a bed as soft as down, Yet I roll and toss about; Here's what I can't figure out:

Then I think about the floor. Where I slept in days, of yore, Where I used to slumber some Night the company would come. Then our house was much too small Few the beds, to hold them all, And we children, with delight, Slept upon the floor that night.

Blanket, pillow, these I find, And, upon the floor reclined, Fall asleep, and wake at three Glad again a bed to see, Sleep again, and waken lame, Just as certain just the same I'd have stayed awake till four If I hadn't tried the floor. (C. 1932, Douglas Malloch.)-WNU Service

Beauty Talks

MARJORIE DUNCAN

Famous Beauty Expert

It Is Smart to Be Healthy Time was when women were pale and wan, when it was fashionable to be frail and delicate, to swoon at the slightest pretext and wilt at will. Where women gathered there was much talk of "operations" and one was a lady to the extent that she was frail and ill.

What changes evolution has wrought. Today's "lady" is treated less like a china doll and more like a human being. Not her fraility but her strength win her the admiration of the oncestronger sex.

She knows enough about anatomy, about her own body, to make her interested in the rules governing its health.

She realizes that she must spend part of her day outdoors, that fresh air and sunshine are sure-fire enemies of many toxic poisons, that deep breathing develops the lungs, that exercising stimulates the circulation, and that a fresh supply of blood means more energy and strength. She delights in being able to do things-in competing with boys and men in outdoor sports-working less for and more with them in business-meeting them on a footing of equality.

She knows her diet, too-our modern version of "lady." Foods are well balanced. All the pretty-pretty, whipped-creamy desserts physicians warn against are cut down-not completely eliminated, you understand, because we do need some sweets, but not too much. And meat and eggsexcess proteins are also cut down There's no overeating in general, and in these foods in particular. And for balance fresh fruits and vegetablesraw apples, celery, cabbage, lettuce and the like. Plenty of roughage, toocereals and such. Teeth are stronger for thorough chewing and right diet, and the entire alimentary canal functions properly.

Water-between meals-eight glasses daily-means less waste materials and poisons in the systems-poisonous accumulations are flushed out of the system, the digestive tract is kept clear.

The daughter of the day sleeps "like a top"-restlessness, nervousness are not known to her. And every dawn there's a new supply of energy to face an active, healthy day with.

There's been much talk about sacrificing femininity with the acquisition of all this buoyant health. Humbug! One can be lovely, feminine, gracious and graceful and healthy withal. Not one lota less the perfect lady.

Sun Squinting Causes Wrinkles

A GREAT many people do a lot of sun-staring during the summer only to find that a network of wrinkles is the price one usually has to pay for the privilege. Squinting is a very definite cause of wrinkles. People who squint ordinarily should have their eyes examined by a specialist and remedial measures taken. But sun squinting is something we all do.

One way to avoid squinting is to wear sun glasses or sun shades. and wrinkles is via the good old-fashioned and old-reliable "ounce of prevention.

Every woman over twenty should use a wrinkle oil during the summer months. Even if there isn't the slightest trace of a line or a crow's-foot around your eyes, if the skin is as soft and satin-smooth as it was when you were as many months old as you have years to your credit, include a good wrinkle oil in your treatment at least three times a week. It should only be left on lines or wrinkles from twenty to forty minutes. Then followed by a good skinfood.

Because of the astringent action of the oil, it is best to use it after coming in from outdoors. And before going outdoors the preparations you use to prevent sunburn are also excellent as protective measures against lines and wrinkles.

If your skin is oily or inclined to be quite moist during the summer months, use a protective lotion. This will give your skin a lovely and coollooking finish, keep powder smoothly clingy and act as a barrier against the burning and blistering rays of the sun. If your skin is dry, use a finishing cream or a special sunproofing oil. Pat and blend the cream or oil over face and neck until it is almost absorbed by the skin. Then follow with a dusting and blending of powder. Take these important, protective measures during the summer months and at the end of the summer you will have a two-fold cause for rejoicing. First-there will be nary a wrinkle to mar your youthful loveliness. Second, your skin will not be dull, heavy, weatherbeaten or coarsened, and you will not need a complicated program of corrective treatments.

Brazil Well Described as "World in Itself"

Brazil has features of distinctive interest both in the universe in general and to ourselves in particular Kipling once said that the region over which the benevolent and be whiskered Dom Pedro II ruled, "is a world in itself." Nor did he over-shoot the mark. With an area of 3,275,510 square miles, Brazil is greater in extent than the United States, excluding Alaska and the insular possessions. Some of the states are larger than the largest European countries Isaac F. Marcasson writes, in the Saturday Evening Post. Amazonas for example, is five times the size of Great Britain, while Matto Grosso could cover all France twice.

Putting it in another way, Brazi is bigger than the whole European continent, not counting a part of Russia, and is the fifth country any where in geographical scope.

The average man thinks of Brazi in terms of Rio de Janeiro, loveliest of all harbors-it lives up to the advertisement-and his cup of break fast coffee. The republic accounts for nearly 70 per cent of the tota coffee supply. But Brazil is much more. To no land has nature been more generous in the bestowal o her rich gifts of raw material.

An observer has stated that if deluge should again inundate this world, sparing only Brazil and the United States, the two countries could still carry on their lives and industries with one supplementing the other.

Brazil could supply rubber, sugar coffee, rice, bananas, meat, cacao iron ore manganese and timber, es pecially mahogany, while we could contribute wheat, corn, copper, cotton, fruit, manufactured articles of all kinds and capital. Practically the only essentials lacking would be tin and platinum.

"Lucile is the Happiest Girl"

So many mothers nowadays talk about giving their children fruit juices, as if this were a new discovery. As a matter of fact, for over fifty years, mothers have been accomplishing fuices, by using pure, wholesome California Fig Syrup, which is prepared under the most exacting laboratory supervision from ripe California Figs, richest of all fruits in laxative and nourishing properties. It's marvelous to see how bilious, weak, feverish, sallow, constipated, under-nourished children respond to its gentle influence; how their breath clears up, color flames in their cheeks, and they become sturdy, playful, energetic again. A Western mother, Mrs. H. J. Stoll, Valley P. O., Nebraska, says: "My little daughter, Roma Lucile, was constipated from babyhood. I became worried about her and decided to give her some California Fig Syrup. It stopped her constipation quick; and the way it improved her color and made her pick up made me realize how rundown she had been. She is so sturdy and well now, and always in such good humor that neighbors say she's the happiest girl in the West." Like all good things, California Fig

Syrup is imitated, but you can always get the genuine by looking for the name "California" on the carton.

The Men on the Dead Man's Chest

FROM THE BEGINNING

During a "holdup" at the Dutch Mill, a fashionable Chicago night club, a patron later identified as Dunn Clayton is shot and killed. Lieutenant of Police Stanton, investigating, questions a volun-tary witness, calling himself "Buck" Trembly. Stanton had known Clayton in France during the World war. In Clayton's pocket he had found a note signed "Maisie" making an ap-pointment with the dead man at the Dutch Mill. Stanton is in-clined to suspect Trembly of the murder. At a Wisconsin winter camp a boilterous crowd is gathered, including Preston Brown, An apparent stranger arrives. Later, two men, driving, appear to be deeply, though secretly, interested in the party. The stran-ger leaves the camp in his car, after Preston Brown has been accidentally killed. They follow the stranger's car, passing it. A viaduct, being repaired, is out, and one of the two men removes the red lanterns, danger signals. The stranger, in his car, goes over the embankment. He is dead when found. The lanterns are replaced. In Brown's papers Clay-ton's name is found, and Stanton connects the two deaths. Assigned to the case, he goes to Wisconsin, and finds the dead man, as he had suspected, is Trembly. Trembly had caused Brown's death, apparently an accident. A Vermont lawyer, John Whittlesex, reading of the case, recalls the names in connection with an odd will he had been asked to draw by a man named

"Then, said Mr. Turner, he came to the real joy of making a will. 'It will amuse you, Mr. Whittlesex,' he said. 'Some years ago six men gave me occasion for remembering them in my will. I have made and lost a great deal of money in my time. I have had men use me well and use me ill. Most of it all came out in the next wash. But I've never forgotten these six

"Mr. Turner looked at the wall for several moments as if he were thinking of something which pleased him. Miss Field has very fine feminine perceptions and intuitions. There was a distinct pickle expression on her face which had meaning for anyone who knew her. 'I have amused myself with these men for several years without them being aware of it. I know their characters so well that I can anticipate their actions. That, you see, Mr. Whittlesex, increases the pleasure. I have approximately six million dollars to form the trust fund I have in mind. If the young lady will she may take the names down for reference.'

"Miss Field now gives me the names from her notes which she had preserved. They were: Acton Blair, Howard Ashley, Ronald Roberts, Preston Brown, Arthur Trembly and Dunn

"Mr. Turner said that his physicians gave him an indeterminate sentence, and although in his own opinion his heart, which was at fault, would outlast all of them, he wished to have his remembrance of the six men in shipshape so he could feel at ease about it. He smiled very happily. I think it was the smile which affected Miss Field incontrollably.

'Do I understand, Mr. Turner,' she said, 'that you are leaving five thousand dollars a year to a fine highminded boy?'

"'That as a minimum,' said Mr. Turner. 'You noted the slight increases on occasion.'

"'And you are about to dispose of six million dollars to some scoundrels?

"I do not know from where Miss Field derived her descriptive adjectives in either instance, but they represented her intuitive conclusions. Mr. Turner laughed. Miss Field closed her notebook and with a good-afternoon to me walked out of the office. Mr. Turner looked after her and then at me and asked what that meant. I said I construed it as meaning that Miss Field did not approve of him or his will. Mr. Turner asked why it should be regarded as necessary for her to approve or disapprove. I replied that Miss Field would not assert the necessity. She merely withdrew from the association, a step in which I was constrained to follow her.

"Mr. Turner seemed about to be angry, but his expression then changed and he laughed very heartily. 'You Vermonters,' he said, 'and your hard little moral universe. All right, All right. I respect you. You're tough, in your way. Well, then, I suppose, Mr. Whittlesex, we are not to go on with this will at this time in this office?' That seemed to be so obvious a conclusion that I merely nodded. Mr. Turner shook hands quite heartily and said he liked them tough. "I found it difficult to dislike the man although I had made a good start at doing so. I find I have been beguiled into writing at great length. I recall that Mr. Turner asked me if I ever had been an accessory to murder before the fact. In the New York World I read that of the six men Mr. Turner said he had occasion to remember, Clayton, Brown and Trembly have been killed. A connection is suggested in my mind. I never heard of Mr. Turner again, but I have no doubt that he proceeded with any purpose he may have had. In my judgment he was capable of enjoying a continuing hatred. I might surmise that at least two other deaths are to

"Your servant, "John Whittlesex."

The letter of John Whittlesex sent the lieutenant traveling east. His protest thereat was so weak he laughed at it himself as soon as he began it. Certain information regarding Turner had been easily obtainable. It did not give any real measure of the man but there was enough for first directions.

He had died two years before, October 29, 1926, on his country place in Westchester county, New York, of pneumonia after a fall from his horse. His will had been probated at White Plains. Its peculiarities had brought it some newspaper publication at the time in the East. It was not contested. The son accepted the provisions made by his father.

Stanton went to White Plains. A clerk in the probate office was interested and accommodating. The lieutenant found the will conformed to the purpose Whittlesex had indicated. A trust fund had been created "in affectionate remembrance of friendship and loyalties" to yield an annuity of at least thirty thousand dollars in each case, for "my companions in peril and adversity who would remember me without this token of fidelity but whose lives I take this way of sharing after my death." The beneficiaries were as John Whittlesex had named them: Dunn Clayton, Arthur Trembly, Preston Brown, Howard Ashley, Ronald Roberts and Acton Blair.

The provisions of the trust required semi-annual payments of the income. When the number of the beneficiaries should be reduced by death the distribution, in result, was by fewer shares and larger ratio. The gift was only for life, but to the survivor, the longest lived of the six, was released the entire income. Upon the death of this last person the entire estate reverted to the son of the testator, to his issue if he were dead, or in the failure of issue to the trustees for use in their discretion and in their general knowledge of the testator's ideas and preferences.

"I have always regarded money as the greatest good," Turner had written in his will, "but I think its real nobility must be recognized by the person possessing it or trying to get it. Money is freedom. It releases man and everything there is in him. It is his surest friend. It may be beauty, kindness, helpfulness. It will be anything the man could possibly be. I have never known another good above it. I prefer earned money. If a man does not care enough for money to

The lieutenant went from White Plains to Newburgh by automobile, crossing the Hudson at the Tarrytown-Nyack ferry over the Tappan zee, and then by the Storm King highway past Stony Point and West Point. In crossing Westchester county he directed the driver to go by the Turner estate which had been closed shortly after its owner's death. He made inquiries in the neighborhood to pick up character fragments from people who had known the man.

Turner was a reckless cross-country rider. The morning of his accident, October 20, had been one with gray skies and a light fall of snow. He had mounted about ten o'clock. His horse came back about noon. The household, searching for him, found him two hours later in a ditch ten miles from the house. He was conscious but had become exhausted vainly trying to pull himself out of the Biblical "Usury" The word "usury" has come in modern English to mean excessive interest upon money loaned, illegal or oppressive. In the Scriptures, however, the word did not bear this sense, but meant simply interest of any kind upon money. The Jews were forbidden by the Law of Moses to take interest from their brethren, but were permitted to take it from foreigners. The practice of mortgaging land, sometimes at exorbitant interest, grew up among the Jews during the captivity, in direct violation of the law.

trap. It was three feet deep with steep sides. His broken legs were in six inches of water, and there was nothing he could reach with his hands.

He was a powerful hardy man of fortitude and great courage and endurance, but he could not get out of the ditch. The horse, a young and uncertain hunter which he was training and of which he had expectations, had refused the jump. It had stopped and swerved, throwing its rider who had been confident that he was putting his mount across. The fall had stunned him. When he regained consciousness he was helpless with the snow lightly falling on him and his broken legs in the water. He called frequently for help but in taking across the fields and stone fences he had fallen where it was improbable that he would be heard.

Thus he was found. The snowfall, light as it had been, had covered him, but his courage was still smiling when he was lifted out.

"We all get it unexpectedly," he said, "but I haven't any too good a break this time." He hadn't, He died October 29.

CHAPTER V

Mr. Darling and the Turner Heir Mr. Darling's house of brick was deep set in an old yard, and Stanton, calling at eight o'clock the evening of his arrival in Newburgh, could see in the gate lights the edges of perennial gardens in late bloom waiting for the

He had been easily directed at the office of the Hotel Palatine to follow the tree-lined street paralleling the crest of the river bluff, by the Hasbrouck house, which he would know by the cannon on its green and on, then, to the house with the grilled iron gates and the tall brick gate-posts. [The Hasbrouck house on the bluff of the Hudson was Washington's headquarters in the Highlands after Yorktown. It was in this encampment that the Continental officers thought too much of their grievances against congress and neglected civil authority as they waited for a ship to bring word from England whether it was to be peace or more war and considered setting up a military government if it were peace and withdrawing to the west beyond the mountains to form a new country of their own if it was to be more war.1

Dried leaves rustled under the lieutenant's feet on the long brick walk from the gate to the door.

At his three drops of the knocker the door was opened by an old colored man whose blue coat was a noble survival of the later Andrew Jackson period

"May I see Mr. Darling, if he is at home?" Stanton asked.

"He is at home," said the colored man with grave courtesy, "but it is unusual for him to see anyone unexpectedly at this hour."

"I am Lieutenant Stanton, of the Chicago police. I will come another time if he prefers it, but will you ask him if he will see me now?"

"Certainly, Lieutenant Stanton, Will you come in? Please be seated. I will speak to Mr. Darling."

Stanton was in a broad hallway, to sit, if he cared to, on a mahogany settee or to stand for a better view of the oil portrait of a handsome Darling ancestor in Revolutionary uniform, a young captain of light infantry. The lieutenant was standing when the colored man returned.

"Mr. Darling says that if you will excuse the fact that he is at supper he will be glad to see you."

Stanton entered by a door to the right into a large room glowing in rich colors and soft lights shining on pictures, books and rugs. In front of a log fire an old gentleman with white hair and white mustache sat in a comfortable stuffed chair. At his side was a table with a tray of smoked and cured fish delicacies from Germany and the Baltic. There was also a hot chicken wing and leg and a tea samovar. The little old gentleman was in a yellow dressing gown. His slippered feet were on an ottoman.

"You'll pardon me if I don't try to rise, won't you, Lieutenant? Please sit down."

The cofored man had pushed another great chair toward the table. "Would you join me?" Mr. Darling asked, sweeping the table with one gesture and pointing to the samovar with another.

"No, I couldn't," said Stanton. "Thank you, but I've just had dinner." "Pompey," said Mr. Darling, "you know what Lieutenant Stanton might like. I'll make an exception and take some myself. You may remove the tray and samovar, Pompey.' "Now, please, don't bother about me," said Stanton.

"I assure you, Lieutenant, it's not a bother. May I say it will be Napoleon brandy? It is strictly and indubitably legal. The cellars of this house have been stocked for over one hundred years. I am now a light user. You have heard of the Frenchman who said that we flatter ourselves we quit our vices, but the truth is our vices quit us. The French always say the civilized thing."

"Do they?" the lieutenant said. "I hadn't noticed it in France. But then I probably didn't know enough of the language."

"Lots were. It was nothing unusual.' (TO BE CONTINUED.)

"You were in France?"

Mother of 7-Still Young

THE woman who gives her organs the right stimulant need not worry about growing old. Her system doesn't stagnate; her face doesn't age. She has the health and "pep" that come from a lively liver and strong, active bowels.

When you're sluggish and the system needs help, don't take a lot of "patent medicines." There's a famous doctor's prescription for just such cases, and every druggist keeps this standard preparation. It is made from fresh laxative herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin. Just ask for Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin. Take a little every day or so, until every organ in your body feels the big improvement.

The next time you have a bilious headache, or feel all bound-up, take this delicious syrup instead of the

Rock Oddly Carved by Erosion of Centuries

If there is any character that predominates in the infinite variety of form and outline among the smaller Galapagos islands, it is perpendicularity. They seem to specialize in it.

On some of them the rock walls, rising directly out of deep water, are so nearly vertical that a landing could be made upon them only with great difficulty, if at all. On some I imagine no human foot has ever

In many cases the waves have cut the shore line inward in a deep groove, so that at ten or twenty feet above low water the rock actually overhangs, and one walks or crawls, if he can keep his feet at all, under a sort of stone portico whose roof is carved into innumerable coigns and arches and inverted pinnacles of the most fantastic form.

Not seldom the unceasing erosion what it would cost him in town.

that poisonous waste, and you haven't weakened the bowels. You'll have a better appetite, and feel better in every way. The constant use of cathartics is often the cause of a sallow complexion and lines in the face. And so unnecessary!

Would you like to break yourself of the cathartic habit? At the same time building health and vigor that protects you from frequent sick spells, headaches, and colds? Get a big bottle of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin today. Use often enough to avoid those attacks of constipation. When you feel weak and run-down or a coated tongue or bad breath warns you the bowels need to be stimulated. Give it to children instead of strong laxatives that sap their strength. It isn't expensive.

of the waves has worn the rock away into huge caverns and flying buttresses and natural bridges, and here and there a great promontory or a whole island, like Watson island or Kicker rock, has been pierced clear through from side to side in a passage high and wide enough to take a boat.-Gifford Pinchot in the Saturday Evening Post.

States' Bear Populations

California had the biggest number of bears in national forests in 1930, having 8,984 black bears and a number of grizzly bears reported. This is as near to a definite census of bears as can be reached in this country. Alaska had 5,750 black bears and 2,800 grizzly and Alaskan brown
