"FMMA" BRINGS MARIE DRESSLER TO FAMILY

American family life, its comedies and tragedies told in intimate style, furnishes the basis for one of the nurnisnes the basis for one of the most dramatic stories of the screen in "Emma," which brings Marie Dressler to the Family Theatre for three days, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, March 13-14-15, in her newest role.

The story deals with an engrossing phase of the "stepmother prob-lem" with Miss Dressler playing the role of a devoted family servant who mothers the children of a rich inventor as though they were own. Her subsequent transition from housekeeper to stepmother gives rise o a number of dramatic problems which reach a climax in a sensation-

KIDNAPING OF LINDBERGH BABY STIRS WHOLE WORLD

No Crime in Modern History Has Aroused Such Universal Indignation—Tops Long List of Abductions.

aroused the entire American public as the kidnaping of the young son of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh. Little Charles Augustus, Jr., is the nation's baby. He is a national character and has been since the day he was born. His abduction was a dastardly crime resented by every redblooded American, grown-ups and children alike

Every parent grieved with the stricken father and mother. They knew the anguish they endured. They could feel the heart throbs and the immeasurable grief. They could realize what the finding of that empty crib meant to the grief-stricken parents. They knew the darkness that settled over Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh as they viewed the dirty foottracks left by the villians, and the ladder on the lawn outside the window, that told so vividly the fate that had befallen their young son. It is one great American heart that grieved with those grief-stricken parents.

A little delicate child, only twenty months of age, had been dragged from the affectionate embrace of his parents, from the tender care with which he had been surrounded, and spirited away into the foul hands of the most detestible type of criminals. There was no more touching incident of the whole dastardly affair than the pathetic appeal of the mother to the kidnapers to feed her sick baby properly. It was addressed by Mrs. Lindbergh to the first activity in trying to run to earth

No crime in recent history so | been struck American motherhood, not one of them but suffered the keenest of all agonies-fear for the safety and life of the child she had borne, and not one of them but said in her heart "What if it had been MY

It is no exaggeration to say that 100,000,000 Americans immediately formed themselves into a searching party, in spirit if not in body, with the sole purpose of restoring the Lindbergh baby in safety as soon as possi ble to his mother's arms. From the highest to the most lowly, news of the Lindbergh kidnaping was the allimportant topic.

It is not often that a President of the United States puts from his mind even for a little while momentous affairs of state because of concern over what has happened to some individ-But that is exactly what happened in this case. Herbert Hoover, in the midst of pondering over the solution of pressing national and international problems, forgot for the moment that he was Chief Executive of a nation and remembered only that he was an American father. So he gave orders that he was to be kept informed of the latest developments in the case no matter at what hour of the night the news should arrive at the White House.

What was true of the President was true of other high government officials, both state and national. The kidnapers of her son and broadcast | through the press of the nation. In it she said

"To the kidnaper of the Lindbergh "Here is a heartbroken appeal direct from the mother of the child you "The baby has been sick and its recovery may depend on the treatment it gets from you. You must be especially careful about the diet. "Mrs. Lindbergh issued to the press today the strict diet she has been following since the baby fell ill. She did this in the hope you might read this story and that there was some spark of humanity even in the heart of a baby thief.

"Here is the diet, accompanied by the fervent prayer of a grieving mother:

"One quart of milk during the day "Three tablespoons of cooked cereal morning and night.

"One yolk of egg daily. "One baked potato or rice once a day.

"Two tablespoons of stewed fruit

"Half a cup of orange juice on wak-

"Half a cup of prune juice after the afternoon nap. "And fourteen drops of medicine called viosterol during the day.

"That's all, kidnaper of the Lindbergh baby. That's what the baby's mother wants you to give the boy. Follow her request and you may in some small part redeem yourself in the eyes of a contemptuous world," The fathers of the nation in spirit tramped with Colonel Lindbergh the woods about the large estate, searching with him for clews that would lead to the recovery of the stolen child. In spirit they repeated his prayers and his curses. To the mothers of the nation the abduction was a real, a personal tragedy. Not one of bergh the devastating blow that had the criminals was, of course, on the part of local police near the Lindbergh home in New Jersey. Through the agency of the teletype the alarm reached the police of New York, Newark, Jersey City, Elizabeth, Camden, and Philadelphia within a few minutes of the receipt of the first news at Trenton. All of them quickly swung into action, as did the New York and Pennsylvania state police.

Orders were flashed to every precinct by the police telegraph system to be on the alert for suspicious cars, while the new police radio station WPEG flashed word to the short wave station of the patrolling detective cars to join in the watch.

Similar steps, though on a smaller scale, were being repeated simultaneously in every city for many miles around the Lindbergh home. Posses of motorcycle and bandit squad policemen from Philadelphia, Pa., and New Jersey state troopers, clamped down a heavy guard on every bridge over the Delaware river.

But the circle of activity soon widened beyond state borders. Within a few hours the news reached Washington, the full co-operation of the federal government in hunting down the kidnapers was offered to the New Jersey state authorities. Attorney-General William D. Mitchell hurried to the White House for a conference with President Hoover and immediately afterwards the Department of Justice announced that every agency of the department would co-operate to the utmost with the state authori-

Following a second conference between the President and his attorneygeneral, it was announced that the government had placed its prohibition enforcement officers as well as all of the other department of justice agents on the case. All agents in the eastern section of the country, acting under direct orders from TA: President, them but felt with Anne Morrow Lind- transmitted through the justice department's bureaus of investigation in

New York and Philadelphia, were instructed to be on the lookout for suspicious characters. Between these two offices the states of New York, Pennsylvania, Delawawe, New Jersey and Connecticut, were immediately covered with a network of investigation by the most skillful sleuths in the service of the United States.

Although kidnaping is a state rather than a federal offense, the United States government officials had justification for entering the case because of the possibility that the kidnapers might have violated some other federal statute. But one immediate result of this abduction was to cause a widespread demand for speeding action on bills then before congress making kidnaping a federal offense.

One of them by Senator Roscoe C. Patterson of Missouri makes the transportation of a kidnaped person across a state boundary an offense punishable by death. Another by Representative John J. Cochran of Missouri makes kidnaping a federal offense if state boundaries are crossed and still a third bill makes use of the mails in kidnaping cases a federal crime punishable by a maximum of 20 years imprisonment. Not only was legislation to curb this crime the chief topic in the national legislative hall, but state legislatures began taking measures to increase the state penalties for abduction.

But more striking than the immediate action taken by the constituted authorities of the law for dealing with the criminals who had stolen away the Lindbergh baby was the instantaneous reaction of private individuals everywhere to the crime. It is doubtful if ever before in the history of America have so many millions of her citizens felt the personal obligation to aid in a gigantic manhunt-in spirit if not in reality.

Aviators, who had been buddies of the famous flying colonel, immediately placed themselves and their planes at his disposal to aid in the search. Thousands of amateur detectives were busily engaged in watching for "clews" which might aid the authorities in catching the malefactors. In New York the clergy of three religious denominations joined in broadcasting a prayer for the safe and speedy return of the Lindbergh baby-a prayer which found an echo in the hearts of millions.

Nor was the excitement over the case confined to the borders of the United States. In far-off China, the kidnaping was told in big headlines alongside the news of the Chinese defeat on the Chapei-Woosung battlefront. The French press, to which Colonel Lindbergh has been a hero since his conquest of the Atlantic in 1926, was filled with the story of the crime. Germany forgot for a moment its heated political atmosphere arising from the presidential election campaign and was swept by a wave of sympathy for the parents of the lost All Berlin newspapers published the kidnaping on their front pages, along with numerous photographs, an extraordinary occurrence in that country, where political issues invariably occupy all available front-page space, even when an election campaign is not in progress.

where the baby's grandfather, the late Dwight Morrow, had been ambassador from the United States. A stream of telegrams was sent to the Lindberghs from their many friends in Mexico President Ortiz Rubio, Foreign Secretary Manuel C. Tellez and J. Reuben Clark, who succeeded the late Senator Dwight Morrow as ambassador, asked to be kept closely informed for the kidnapers. The abduction was brought home to Mexicans all the more vividly because of the fact that it had occurred on the third anniversary of Colonel Lindbergh's arrival in the Mexican capital on the visit before his last trip to Mexico, in the days when he was courting Anne Morrow in the romantic atmosphere of Cuernavaca. Just as the news of the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby circled the globe within a few hours after it had occurred, so had the news of the birth of this baby been an item of worldwide interest. Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., was born June 22, 1930, which also was the anniversary of the birth of his mother, the former Anne Morrow, daughter of the late Senator Dwight W. Morrow of New Jersey. She was twenty-four years old the day her son was born, The baby was born in the Morrow home in New Jersey, in which his parents were married May 27, 1929.

The first "official" announcement of the baby's arrival came from the late ambassador, who, an hour after the child was born, told a friend. "I'm a grandfather, and it's a boy! But don't you tell any one."

His secret could not long be kept however, for many friends had been aware of the preparations made at the Morrow home. One whole wing had been turned into hospital-like quarters, and two nurses from a New York registry, with Miss Marie Cummins, the Morrow family nurse, were in attendance to aid doctors.

And so, within a few moments after Ambassador Morrow had informed his friend, the news was given to the world through press associations.

In Lindbergh's usual taciturn fashion, only the mere fact that his son and heir had arrived was announced. But from more talkative attendants these important facts came on that first day:

He weighed seven and one-half pounds. His hair was blond and curly He looked "just like his father."

In the four days interval between June 22 and the day the birth certificate was filed members of the Morrow and Lindbergh family participated in an amicable discussion as to what the infant would be named.

That question was settled when the birth certificate disclosed he was to be "Junior." 'And it was understood to have been Mrs. Lindberg's choice all along. It was reported, too, that Lindbergh had favored calling his son after his father-in-law, but that for the first time since he hopped the Atlantic three years before he was turned back from his goal.

During his first few months of life. when his parents were making occa sional short jaunts by airplane it fre quently was reported that Charles Jr. was to accompany them. They did not take the infant on any of these trips, however, though the reports were so persistent that they gave rise to the impression that Charles Jr. would be brought up from earliest youth with the idea of making an aviator out of

So widely was this conviction held that his reticent father declared in an interview, which was printed in October, 1930, in the Pictorial Review, that Charles Jr.'s future was in his own nands.

"Our son," Colonel Lindbergh was quoted as saying, "has hardly reached the age to have his future determined for him, and, in any case, it is a question that he can decide for himself when the time comes.

"Personally. I do not want him to be anything or do anything that he himself has no taste or aptitude for. I believe that everybody should have complete freedom in the choice of his life's work."

When word of the birth of Charles A. Lindbergh Jr. went around the world and even before it was announced, gifts began to arrive at the Morrow home for him in such profusion that they soon became an embarrassment. His parents were quoted as saying that the boy would have to remain an infant for ten years at least merely to wear out the baby clothes which had been sent to him. When Charles, Jr., then just past the age of six months, goggled at his first Christmas tree in the home of his parents in Englewood, N. J., the gift most prominent by its frequent duplication was the toy airplane. He divided his time pretty evenly for the first year of his life between the home of his grandparents at North Haven, Maine, and that of his parents in Englewood, near Princeton, N. J. In Maine, as at Englewood, extraordinary precautions were taken to guard the baby. Rumors that special watchmen had been assigned were confirmed when it became known that Colonel Lindbergh, as the result of threats from "cranks," had taken such steps to protect his son. Similar care was taken after the parents returned from the Orient and took their son to their Hopewell, N.

J., home. But all of these precautions apparently could not prevent the perpetration of the dastardly crime that so stirred the world. Early in the case it became apparent that ransom was the motive for the kidnaping for the fortune on which the kidnapers of the Lindbergh baby apparently hoped to lay hands is one of the largest in New Jersey.

UNKNOWN RELIGION IS PUZZLE TO SCIENTISTS

Excavations in Syria Yield Evidences of Strange Cult of Early Ages.

Paris.-Vestiges of an unknown religion which evidently combined the cult of the death with the idea of fecundity are being accumulated by the researches of the French mission in northern Syria, it was declared by Prof. F. A. Claude Schaeffer of the University of Strasbourg lecturing before the Societe Ernest Renan in Paris. Professor Schaeffer described the excavations he has superintended for three seasons at Ras Shamra and Minet el Beida, where he has discovered royal tombs and the remains of a great religious center, dating perhaps from the Nineteenth century before the Christian era. Find Strange Languages.

Further discoveries that are sure to be made in the course of the coming season Professor Schaeffer hopes will do much to clarify the significance of the finds made so far, among which are tablets containing inscriptions in several unidentified languages and comprising perhaps the earliest known efforts at poetry and literature.

"Our conclusions," said Professor Schaeffer, "must await further verifications, but we already know enough

Gold Smuggled Out of

Egypt by Camel Convoys Cairo .- New drama in the form of gold smuggling by camel convoys has come to the Egyptian deserts and caused the camel corps to redouble its vigilance in its new task of helping to enforce the government's gold ban

A considerable quantity of the $74, 000,000 gold in Egypt, mostly hoarded by the peasants, has been smuggled out of the country since the government abandoned the gold standard in September.

The burning sands of the Sinai desert have resounded to the crunch of camel convoys pursued by the camel corps. Large hauls have been made, but many big convoys have gotten through to Palestine and thence to Syria, where the gold is sold to French

Most of the gold left in Egypt is in the possession of the peasants in the form of coins, ingots, and ornaments. Many have felt the lure of the high price for gold now being offered in Europe and have sold their belongings to speculators.

The Arabs in Transjordania and the Hedjaz, who were paid in gold by the British government in reward for their services during the World war, are known to be disposing of their hoard-

Greatest Loss in Meats, Says of low prices the total value of all Commerce Chief.

Washington.-Exports of foodstuffs from the United States dropped to a total value of $374,000,000 in 1931 C. H. Kardell of the Commerce department's foodstuff division, announced. The value of foodstuffs exports in 1930 was $541,000,000, a decline of $167,-000,000 in a year. The 1931 figures, he said, was on an approximate level with pre-war foodstuff exports, but the decline does not represent loss in quantity so much as decrease in prices. Trade in cereals and cereal products, meats and fats and oils showed the greatest loss, according to Mr. Kardell, while shipments of fresh, canned and dried fruits, fresh, salted smoked and cured fish, and feeds and fodders increased considerably. "The foreign market for fresh fruit," the report stated, "particularly apples, oranges, grapefruit, and lemons continued to show the expansion of past years and in this year

London.-The appointment of Paul Poiret, the dress designer and fashion expert, as color designer to the French lunacy authorities has caused a furore in Harley street, a grim foreboding row of early Victorian houses wherein dwell and practice most of Britain's distinguished medical specialists.

It has raised the oft-disputed point as to the effect of color on sufferers of the varying illness of Twentieth century civilization.

Russian Custom of Seed Chewing Is Fading Out

Moscow.-An old Russian custom, famed in song and verse, has about died out-sunflower seed chewing.

No longer do the peasants' jaws champ rhythmically as they sit behind their plodding horses; no longer hawkers sell paper bags of the seeds on the streets.

The causes are twofold: Economic and political. First, there has been such a shortage of fats that all available sunflower seeds have been made into oil. Second, a strenuous campaign fought the habit, saying it was slothful and unclean, because its addicts sat about and littered the ground with shells instead of "building socialism."

(Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D, C.)—WNU Service. N THE Who's Who of former German colonies in Africa, now mandates under the control of the various European nations, Cameroun stands out as one of the most interesting. Wedged in between French and British territory at the inner corner of the Gulf of Guinea on the western coast, it was "Kamerun" to the Ger-Now it has become a French mandate and is governed along with French Equatorial Africa, a sizable

The steamer which carries the traveler to this out-of-the-way objective passes through a 19-mile channel between the huge guardian masses of the island of Fernando Po on one side and Mount Cameroons on the other, and turns eastward into the mouth of a broad estuary. To the south stretches an endless vista of low mangrove swamp. On the left, 60 miles away, is the mountain, its peak rarely visible in so humid a climate.

In midstream, to the annoyance of the captain, is the wreckage of two German ships deliberately sunk at the beginning of the World war to obstruct the passage. After several slow miles upstream Douala, the "big-town," becomes visible. It lies on a flat-topped, not very lofty, promontory and continues behind the promontory along a glaring beach and hilly ridge. The effect, especially after a month of sea, is charming.

Douala Is Attractive.

The big house of the chief of the local administrative division of the mandate appears white, elegant, and richly shaded in the foreground. Behind the mansion, up and down the hill, are other sturdy, pretty stucco residences, mango, palm, and breadfruit trees overhanging them; and, of course, along the water front are the inevitable and inevitably ugly trading "factories," their galvanized iron roofs shimmering in the violence of the sun.

On closer examination Douala proves at once the prettiest and the plainest of West African cities. It is a question of neighborhood. On the palm of the flat Douala promontory the Germans established an exclusive white residential quarter, complete with parks, bandstand, and double or quadruple lines of trees on every street. Alnog the wrist and forearm, to continue the metaphor, they planned a native and trading section which could continue inland upriver as far as it liked, incorporating as it grew the existing villages of Akwa, Deido, New Bell, New Akwa, and New Deido. "In times these town names threaten to become repetitious.)

This arrangement, substantially, has kept up, though the French government has made no effort to enforce it. The section immediately around the park, enlivened by the presence of several cafes, is the best shaded, most serenely quiet and lovely bit of town on the coast.

For the rest-for the miles of deep, hot sand along the river's edge, the innumerable hideous stores and warehouses, the noisy recklessness of dilapidated auto trucks and even more dilapidated native laborers-one can say little that is kind. It is commercially flourishing and trade is growing, at least. It is the one logical outlet for the produce of the entire interior, and the harbor is excellent. In thirty years the population has grown from negligibility to over 25,000, more than 1,000 of whom are Europeans.

Douala will never be proud of its climate. In the dry season it is hot, breathless beyond belief. A temperature of 80 degrees is absolutely chilly. And in the rainy season one sloshes about in high boots and a raincoat through an almost continual downpour, which, mysteriously, does little to modify the temperature. The average annual rainfall here is more than 13 feet, and at one place on the seacoast the precipitation reaches the phenomenal figure of 36 feet.

To the Interior by Rail.

The two Cameroun railways center at Dougla. One runs due north for 100 miles to the terminal town of Nkongsamba. The other, which has no connection with the first, goes east-

Joe's Faith

By CORONA REMINGTON

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
(WNU Service)

SHE was only a little maid in a big hotel and he the chef, but he had generations of chefs behind him and hers was a family of the highest type of maids. One aunt had been in the Delpont family for twenty-five years, and at one time her first cousin had been employed in the White House.

When Joe Porter had first mentioned marriage to Cornelia Allen she had hesitated although she did love him.

"Well, I'll never marry anybody else," he vowed. "You're as pretty as a little picture and your folks are all honest and fine people, and I love you and I believe you love me, too. Isn't that reason enough why we should get married?"

Cornelia said nothing for a moment, she merely permitted him to keep his arm around her, which was a sort of consent, he considered, since she never had done this before. She did love him, she knew she did.

"But, Joe, I wanted to go up in my work-get to be ladies' maid to somebody big in society," she protested, and her dark eyes so close to his looked troubled, almost tragic.

"That don't matter," he answered. They'll never love you like I do, honey, so you'd better take me."

It was a wrench to give up her ambition, but at last she consented and once done she gave herself up entirely to her new plans in life, and as the days sped by she grew happier and

She was in the midst of doing her work on the fifth floor one day when she received a summons to go to the office of Mr. Williams, the manager, at once. Puzzled, she hurried down and found her employer talking to a stranger whom she supposed to be a guest. He seemed disturbed about something and would scarcely let Mr. Williams speak, but with a gesture of the hand the manager silenced him and addressed the maid himself.

"Cornelia, did you clean up 516 this morning," he asked.

"Yes," answered the girl, her face suddenly paling. "Why? What's the matter? "You know what's the matter," broke in the guest. "I don't!" protested the girl on the verge of tears.

"Did you let anyone else in the room while you were cleaning it? I mean, did any of the other maids come in?" continued the manager.

"No, sir, I was the only one in and I locked the door as soon as I had finished.'

"Well, you have my wallet, then, with $116 in it," broke in the guest angrily, "because I left it under my pillow and forgot to take it downtown when I left this morning. As soon as I missed it I rushed back to my room and it was gone. You may both come up and look."

Together the three took the elevator to the fifth floor and hurried down the long, red-carpeted corridor to room 516. After a thorough search they were forced to give it up. The wallet was not under the mattress nor on the floor beneath the bed. In fact, it was apparently nowhere.

"Go on to the servants' quarters," ordered the manager harshly, and Cornelia fled out of the room. But she did not go to the servants' quarters, instead she sought out Joe and told him of her undeserved disgrace.

"Kid, you never did it," he declared, holding her close. "And I'll break anybody's face who comes here saying you did."

"I'm so g-glad you still b-believe in me," Cornelia said, clinging to him. "You're the only one that d-does. I'll be ashamed to look at anybody around here after it gets out because most of 'em'll think I did steal it-going to be married and everything, they'll think I wanted it to buy clothes with. Oh Joe, I'm so wretched." And again she burst into tears. "You'll be disgraced if you marry me because there's lots'll always believe I did it."

"They'll not either. They know you too well."

But Joe was wrong. By noon the news had seeped out and at lunch Cornclia could not eat, for the suspicious glances that were shot in her direction and whispered mumblings that went on among the servants.

The next morning the manager sent for her again and she was horrified to see the same guest sitting there at the side of the desk. This time Mr. Williams let the other man do the talk-

"Here's a twenty for you," he said. "I found my wallet. I'd slipped it inside the inner pillow slip when I thought I was just putting it under my pillow. As soon as I lay down last night I felt it under my head. Sorry it happened."

"I don't want your twenty dollars," saind Cornelia, with the dignity of a princess, "but I'm glad you found your purse. All I want is that you or Mr. Williams tell the servants at dinner today that I did not take it."

"Be glad to," said the manager warmly.

Once out of the office, she shed her dignity like a cloak and rushed out to find the chef. After she had told him she gave him a little sudden hug. "I'll always l-love you a little more for believing in me so hard," she said. "Then it was lucky for me it happened," he laughed, and because she was so happy she had a little glad cry on his shoulder.

This Little Girl Got Well Quick

"Just after her third birthday, my little daughter, Connie, had a serious attack of intestinal flu," says Mrs. H. W. Turnage, 217 Cadwalder St., San Antonio, Texas. "It left her very weak and pale. Her bowels wouldn't act right, she had no appetite and nothing agreed with her.

"Our physician told us to give her some California Fig Syrup. It made her pick up right away, and now she is as robust and happy as any child in our neighborhood. I give California Fig Syrup full credit for her wonderful condition. It is a great thing for children." Children like the rich, fruity taste of California Fig Syrup, and you can give it to them as often as they need it, because it is purely vegetable. For over 50 years leading physicians have recommended it, and its overwhelming sales record of over four million bottles a year shows it gives satisfaction. Nothing compares with it as a gentle but certain laxative, and it goes further than this. It regulates the stomach and bowels and gives tone and strength to these organs so they continue to act normally, of their own accord. There are many imitations of California Fig Syrup, so look for the name "California" on the carton to Le sure you get the genuine.

Haul for Firemen

Every time the San Francisco dremen go out on a fire they come home with a hatful of trout. Fire Chief Brennan says the fish come through the fire mains, sometimes clogging up the lines. The trouble is caused by trout spawn slipping through screens over the intake to the fire hydrant mains and later growing up to be good-sized fish.

CHILDREN'S STORY

WANTED

EARLY this spring there had come in the Green Forest a stranger who had once aroused a great deal of suspicion, not so much because of what he did but on account of his looks. Perhaps some of you will remember the suspicion with which Ol' Mistah

'Just as If We Honest People Haven't Enough Worries as It Is," Grumbled Peter, as He Watched the Stranger Flying Toward the Big River.

Buzzard was regarded when first he came to the Green Forest to live. All the little people of the Green Meadows and the Green Forest, around the Smiling Pool, and along the Laughing Brook shivered with fear every time they looked up and saw him saiilng in circles high up in the blue, blue sky. Why did they shiver with fear? Be cause they mistook him for a member of the Hawk family. Yes, sir, that is what they did. All summer long they had to be everlastingly on the watch for Redtail the Hawk and his cousin Whitetail the Marshhawk. All winter Danny Meadow Mouse and Peter Rabbit and Bob White and other little people who remained on the Green Meadows were obliged to watch out for fierce old Roughleg, another of the Hawk family. So when Ol' Mistah Buzzard first appeared he was mistaken for a member of the Hawk family because he looked so much like one, and it was a long time before his neighbors learned that he wouldn't harm one of them for the world. The very same thing happened when

A NEIGHBOR WHO WASN'T | another big stranger appeared very early in the spring. He was a big fellow, just a wee bit bigger than Redtail the Hawk, and wore a handsome white waistcoat and his head was largely white. Altogether, he was a fine looking fellow. But he was a member of the Hawk family. There could be no doubt about it this time. One good look at his hooked bill and great claws was enough to settle that question in the minds of all who saw him. So there was no welcome for him when he first arrived at the Green Forest. He wasn't wanted there.

> "Just as if we honest people haven't enough worries as it is," grumbled Peter as he watched the stranger flying toward the Big River. "I suppose now we'll have to keep our eyes open for him as well as for Redtail and old

> Danny Meadow Mouse quite agreed with Peter. So did all the birds. Reddy Fox and Old Man Coyote felt much the same way toward the stranger, only for a very different reason. "That fellow will make our hunting all the harder," grumbled Reddy to Granny as they watched the stranger. "The more there are to hunt, the harder the hunting. Somebody ought to send him back where he came from." Granny was watching the stranger sharply, and pretty soon she caught

Traveling in a Wheel in England

VARIOUS types of "cycles" have already been devised to carry man from one point to another. Now comes this new vehicle which might be called the "in-a-cycle." Instead of riding on wheels, the passengers ride inside a wheel. The device, known as the jynbo wheel, was invented by Dr. Pervis and recently tried out on Brean sands, near Weston-Supermare, England. It weighs more than half a ton and carries two passengers, achieving a speed of 25 miles per hour. It is driven by a two and a half horse power gasoline a gleam of white as he turned in the air. Granny gave a little sigh of satisfaction. "Don't worry," said she to Reddy. "I guess we can spare all that fellow can take from us." Then she changed the subject and left Reddy to wonder why she seemed so little concerned about this newcomer. As for the stranger, he paid no attention to anyone. If he noticed that he was given no welcome he apparently didn't care. He just simply went about his business and didn't meddle in the affairs of anyone else. After while his neighbors noticed that his business seemed always to take him in the direction of the Big River. He never visited the Old Orchard. He never hunted in the Green Forest. He never circled about over the Green Meadow, as did Whitetail the Marshhawk. In short, he never bothered anyone. There wasn't a single thing that could be brought against him save that he was a member of the Hawk family. But that was enough, If he was a member of the Hawk family he was an enemy to be feared and hated in the eyes of Peter Rabbit and Danny Meadow Mouse and all the other little people who fear Redtail and Whitetail

It wasn't until Peter saw a surprising thing happen at the Smiling Pond that he learned the truth about the stranger, which was that there wasn't the least thing in the world to fear from him. And until that time the stranger was a neighbor who wasn't wanted. Afterward-well, afterward things were different.

AFTERNOON TEAS

THE cool afternoons in late winter and early spring offer splendid opportunities for afternoon teas and "at homes." Nothing could be more attractive than "four feet on a fender" with a cup of tea to drown all cares.

One of the nice things about an afternoon tea, is that everything but the tea may be prepared beforehand. There is no hurried, worried hostess when entertaining in a simple manner. There is no burned roast or roasted hostess to detract from the pleasure of enjoying one's friends,

These should be five or six kinds of sandwiches, to meet all tastes. Making them in different shapes and the color combinations always appeal to the eye.

Here are two suggestions for sandwiches: Open-Faced Sardine Sandwiches.

Drain twelve medium-sized sardines, remove skin, tails and bones. Pound to a paste with two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice. Cream two tablespoonfuls of butter, add one teaspoonful of minced parsley, salt, pepper and cayenne to taste. Add to the sardine mixture and spread on thin splices of rye bread. Mix three hard-cooked egg yolks with a little mayonnaise and make a border around the edge of each sandwich. A slice of stuffed olive in the center of each makes an attractive touch.

Pink-Face Sandwiches.

Take one-half cupful of cooked beets, put through the food chopper, add one-half teaspoonful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and onehalf cupful of cottage cheese. Mix well and spread on triangles of buttered bread. Make a border of three hard-cooked egg whites. One or more sweet sandwiches should be included. Maple sugar (grated), cream and chopped pecan meats make a delicious filling for white bread sandwiches, Cut into fancy shapes.

Famous Beauty Expert

Be Persistent and Consistent

INBELIEVABLE as it may seem, there are many women who at this day and age still expect magic and miracles. Intelligent women too. A well-written letter from one, a personal visit from another, a telephone call from a third. All in the same vein. The first has used a tissuetightening astringent "for two weeks," with no noticeable improvement in her contour. It was claimed for the astringent that it would, if used faithfully, gradually lift the sagging muscles and drooping contour. Nothing was said about the time limit. To be sure if you go on using a preparation month after month, year in, year out, without a noticeable improvement there is something wrong some place, either with the preparation itself or with your reaction to it.

But "two full weeks," it would be utopian indeed if a double chin and drooping contour (which probably took years to reach the sagging stage) were to be magically lifted in so short a time by the use of an astringent. Plastic surgery could do it in that length of time, but plastic surgery is for the very brave and very rich. And the subject of our discussion is an astringent.

Another instance: "Really, I have exercised faithfully every single night, followed every one of your bending exercises for the waist, but that 'spare tire' has not left me yet."

Perhaps with patience and persistence that "spare" will disappear as gradually as it accumulated and perhaps, too, you will as sud-denly notice that it is no more. Day after day and very likely month after month the fat cells were forming. And I'm willing to wager (something I never do) that you noticed only the lump sum. Your own case may be the stub-born type that hangs on—but exer-cise is sure to win out if it is patience ye have.

Then there's the weak-willed one; "I know I must not eat so and so, the doctor warned me against it, yes, but just this once" (and this once happens ever so often), and the next day there's a case of billiousness and distress. Then the cry "but I do love that dish, and what is a body to do."

Be persistent and consistent in your beauty treatments and health habits; and meticulous in your cleansing meth-

Surround Yourself With Beauty

A N INTERIOR decorator and a beauty specialist were having luncheon together. But-if you don't no hobbies." mind my saying so-speaking from a selfish point of view, I don't think that teminine beauty has been linked sufficiently with interior decoration.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the original little liver pills put up 60 years ago. They regulate liver and bowels.—Adv. You emphasize a hat as part of the picture and fashion is made a co-partner to beauty. But a woman chooses a sofa and hangings for her home with a very impersonal attitude. If her clothes are an important part of the picture she presents, isn't she just as important a part of her home."

She confided that several smart women had sent their sisters or maids to select fabrics for the former's dressing rooms, that personal coloring and temperament was not considered and their own individuality neither expressed nor flattered.

All of which is a rather sad but true state of affairs. "Surround yourself with beauty-and let your surroundings express YOU, en-hance your charm and reflect your individuality."

Haven't you heard a rebellious young one threatening, "Wait until I have my own place, it will be something different, more expressive." And, lo, when opportunity did knock-well, if it wasn't the same, stereotyped, set order of affairs. colors and shades are most becoming to you. It is impossible to give a list of definite suggestions because of the infinite variety of shades and intensity. But a general color knowledge is inherent, I think. Breathes there a red head who didn't know when she was a year old that green is the most enchanting color for her. And aren't our blue-eyed babies told long before they can say da-da, that they should wear blue to bring out all the depth of their eyes. In the matter of colors, let fashion guide you.

Now, just one word of warning with respect to lines. Avoid extremes. Modern, harsh lines may have a definite dash, but only the dashing, exotic type seems to "belong" and be at home with them. The Men on the Dead Man's Chest NEURALGIA

FROM THE BEGINNING

During a "holdup" at the Dutch

Mill, Chicago night club, a pa-tron, Dunn Clayton, is killed. Lieutenant of Police Stanton questions a club visitor, "Buck"
Trembly. In Clayton's pocket
Stanton found a note signed
"Maisle," making an appointment with the dead man at the Dutch Mill. Stanton is inclined to suspect Trembly of the murder. At a Wisconsin winter camp a boisterous crowd includes Preston Brown. An apparent stranger arrives. Later, two men, driving, come on the scene. The stranger leaves in his car, and the two men follow, passing him. A via-duct is out, and one of the two men removes the danger signals. The stranger, in his car, goes over the embankment. He is dead when found. Brown is dead. In his papers Clayton's name is found and Stanton connects the deaths. He goes to Wisconsin, and finds the dead man is Trem-bly. Trembly had caused Brown's death, apparently an accident. A Vermont lawyer, John Whittlesex, reading of the case, recalls the names in connection with an odd will made by a man named Turner, bequeathing the interest on $6,000,000 to six men, Blair, Ashley, Roberts, Brown, Trembly, and Clayton. The income, at the death of each beneficiary, is to be divided among the rest. Turner's son, on the deaths of the six beneficiarles, is to inherit all. Turner dies shortly after making the will. Whittlesex suspects foul play in the three deaths, and writes to the Chicago police. Stanton interviews Asa Darling, one of the executors of the will. Darling tells him he believes Turner wanted and expected the six beneficiaries of the will to kill one another, they having in the past injured him. The will is his method of revenge. Turner's son is contented and happy with his small income. Roberts, one of the three survivors of the six cared for by Turner's will, visits Darling. He reveals the fact that Blair and Ashley, supposed to be abroad, are in this country. Ashley and Blair arrive at Mr. Darling's abode. They manifest uneasiness at their friends' deaths.

-9-"Ashley and I are ready to put our cards on the table," Blair continued, ignoring his companion's remark. 'Give the money to the boy. None of us want it this way. Now, Mr. Darling, here's the three of us. Let's come to an understanding." "Sit down, gentlemen," said Mr. Darling. "Take chairs wherever you like. What kind of an understanding have you in mind?"

"I, for one," said Blair, "would like relief from the general public assumption that we are assassins."

"But," said Mr. Darling, "if you don't assassinate anyone you won't be assassins. That's odd, but it's true." Only Ashley had sat down. Roberts stood on the hearth-rug fingering his chain. Blair did short nervous turns. Stanton noted how large he was physically. He was a man whose muscularity may be draped by clothing but is not concealed. It seemed to bulge through and it seemed to be driven by a quick and nervous vitality.

"What public attention are you getting, Mr. Blair?" Stanton asked. "These murders," said Blair with a sharp turn to face the lieutenant. "The will. Our association with it." "You mentioned a desire to surrender your interest in the estate," said Mr. Darling.

"It may be the ethical thing to do." "Be a little bit yourself," said Ashley. "Give up your right eye! Turner gave me my interest. He was the judge. I'm not yellow. I'll keep mine. I think I'll presently have the whole thing."

Blair confronted him with a sharp turn.

"Yes?" "Yes," said Ashley coolly. "You're giving your share up, and Ron looks as if he'd die of heart disease within a month. Things I haven't done and do not intend to do can't wrong me."

Lieutenant Stanton arose from his chair, walked about the room for a moment, looked out of a window into the October garden and then without being observed stepped into the hall. "Mr. Blair," said Darling, "are you serious in suggesting that you wish to surrender your equity?"

"Excuse my laughter, Mr. Darling," said Ashley. "Don't permit yourself to be kidded."

"We have explained to Mr. Roberts," said Mr. Darling, "that a renunciation would have no effect in one respect. It would not make the death of that beneficiary less profitable to the survivors. I seem to state that indelicately, but such is the fact. On the other hand," Mr. Darling slightly shifted his posture in illustration, "such renouncement would be effective in removing the person from any suspicion of purposeful gain in the death of any of his associates." The lieutenant came back into the

"Why don't you gentlemen keep continents between you if you wish to avoid suspicion, or one another?" he

"Who will stay put?" Roberts asked. "You are just as dead in Bombay as you are in Chicago."

"I'm at a loss to explain your calls on me," said Mr. Darling. "You present nothing I can do."

"I think the gentlemen are merely uncertain," said Stanton, "and nervous, under suspicion."

"Who says we're under suspicion?" Blair asked, whirling around.

"I believe you did," Stanton replied. Pompey came in then with a tray of glasses. They were water glasses filled with Pommard. He bent toward the seated Ashley, who took a glass.

"A break," said Ashley, "and an unexpected break. I didn't expect a drink, even of wine. Good luck, Ron, and you, too, Blair."

Pompey served Blair and Roberts, then Stanton, and then Mr. Darling, who, when he saw the Burgundy offered him in a water glass, exclaimed: "Pompey!"

Stanton had stationed himself close to his host.

"Please, Mr. Darling," he said, "what do we care what we get our wine in? Here's luck, good fellowship and better times under the Turner will!"

Roberts, Ashley and Blair raised their glasses in salute and drank the wine. Pompey gathered the tumblers back again on his tray which he placed on the library table near Blair. Stanton sipped slowly. Mr. Darling looked at his wine and then at Pompey who with an apparently uneasy conscience came and took the glass from his hand. Mr. Darling looked at him as if he must find some explanation in his face for such inexplicable behavior.

"I'd like to join my guests, Pompey," he said, "but what a strange manner. I can't account for it."

Pompey's uneasiness was mute, but his glance flicked an instant toward the lieutenant. Mr. Darling perceived something and motioned for the return of his glass of wine.

"Gentlemen," said Stanton, "you know I am a copper. I'm not a detective. I never could be one, but my bad breaks in the police business occasionally put me in the position you see me in now. I suppose you are interested in what has happened. That, I suppose, is why you have called on Mr. Darling. There's not much to complain of the newspaper accuracy. Clayton was shot in the Dutch Mill by or for Buck Trembly, I think by Trembly. At least that's my guess. Do any of you know a lady named Maisie?"

The three men glanced at one an-

"Maisie," said Ashley. "Lieutenant, don't you know who Maisie is?" He laughed a mirthful chuckle. "Maisie is, or was, Mrs. Arthur Trembly, A

"Did I say I was no detective? I think I mentioned it. That's quite wonderful, and I never even guessed. Well, gentlemen, getting on, let me explain that there was an unusual circumstance attending the death of Trembly when he ran off the road. You'd hardly expect it of the local constabulary. You just couldn't expect it. But the lanterns were examined for finger-prints. It's all unbelievable. These lanterns are next to impossible for prints. You pick them up by the handles, but it's the strange fact that two of them had been handled at the base. They were oily and dusty and consequently the prints were excellent."

Roberts on the hearth-rug, Ashley in his chair and Blair nervously pivoting on his heels or toes, looked at the lieutenant with suspense for his next

"That won't interest you much, if at all," the lieutenant continued, "although of course it has interested me. A little while ago I went out and found Pompey in his pantry. He has offended Mr. Darling by serving wine in these glasses. I asked him to do so. I asked him to take glasses which had been unused for a very long time; if he had any which might convict him of bad housekeeping to use them and to ladle them with a fish knife or some such thing on a tray without touching them. Then to fill them and bring them in.

"You see, gentlemen, if Pompey has

Lieutenant Stanton pointed to the tray on the table which had the three glasses from which Blair, Ashley and Roberts had drunk.

Blair picked up two books from the table, one in each hand, and smashed the three glasses.

"There's your cheap trick," he cried. "You cheap dick! Nobody cares for finger-prints, but your ideas are sour." The lieutenant looked at him, smil-

"I told you I was not a detective," he said, "but I should tell you that no finger-prints were found on the lanterns. No one would have looked for them, and they wouldn't have been there if they had looked."

Blair stepped toward him menacingly. "Then why did you produce this comedy?" he asked.

"Quiet yourself, Mr. Blair," said Stanton. "Your face contains a verdict of justifiable homicide for any John Law who would bump you off at this moment. The comedy was to see what false starts one or all of you would make. I've told you I was a copper and not a detective. I quite astonished myself by doing this fingerprint trick. I'm a great guesser, Mr. Blair. My guess is that you took the lights away. It's probably unreasonable to ask you how you knew that Buck Trembly was at Little Butte des thing more authentically western? How did you know Buck was there, Acton? You won't mind my calling on Acton? I was calling Arthur Trembly, Buck, a half-hour after he shot Dunn Clayton or had him shot." "I haven't any time to waste with you," said Blair.

"You're not wasting it, Acton, if you are as intelligent as I think you are. You're learning that I do not think that just now it would be worth a d-n to hold you on charges and extradite you back to Wisconsin. My guess would be that no one near Little Butte des Morts or along your route could identify you, although my guess is that you knew just what Buck was doing with Brown. I think you had intended to crowd him off the road and wreck him or shoot him as he made his own getaway from the lodge."

"All these defenses," Senator Caraway said, "remind me of Lawyer Isaacs and the hog-stealing case. To defend this case wasn't easy, for the fool who was accused of stealing the hog had told a dozen different stories about the way the hog came into his possession, and of course, the other side showed that this was a very suspicious action on his part.

"Isaacs, a funny little chap, wound up his speech for the defense with the Pugilistic practice or sport of fighting with the fists is first mentioned in literature in the twenty-third book of the "Iliad"; another full description is in Vergil's "Aeneid." Although fistfighting was supposed by the Greeks of the classic period to have been a feature of the mythological games at Olympia, it was not actually introduced into the historic Olympic contests until the Twenty-third Olympiad, after the re-establishment of the famous games in Iphitus, about 880 B. Buck had gone? Do you know, Acton, my mind goes back to the Dutch Mill in Chicago. Dunn Clayton has a note from Maisie. He is waiting for her when who comes in and sits near by? Her husband, Buck Trembly. Interesting, wasn't it? I'm afraid we'll never know anything completely satisfactory about this until we find Maisie. Do you know what I guess, Acton?"

Early Pugilism

"No," said Blair, "and I don't give a d-n. Come on, Ashley, get your coat. Sorry we bothered you, Mr. Darling, but it's this fellow's fault. We couldn't anticipate this scene in vour house."

"No, indeed," said Mr. Darling. "Indeed, who could? But don't apologize. I've been interested."

Ashley arose, smiling, and went to shake hands with Mr. Darling.

"It has been interesting," he said, and I enjoyed the wine. I thought I'd have to wait until I was back in France for anything like it. Sorry Acton is so impulsive and breaks glasses."

The two men walked toward the

"Wait a minute," Roberts cried, starting toward Stanton. "Are you letting that man go? Why aren't you holding him? Haven't you just charged him with murder?"

"What the h-1!" Blair exclaimed, turning around. "Why, you miserable little louse!"

Roberts edged behind Stanton. "Lock him up. It's the only protection I'll have," he cried. "Lock him up. He killed Buck. He'll kill me," slowly began to smile. "You're amusing, Ron," said Ashley. "Better watch yourself or you'll have a delirium."

Ashley broke into a laugh, and Blair

'I don't believe I'll lock you up now, mister," said Stanton, "but keep in touch with us, won't you? Don't go anywhere without letting us know. I'll have a local Dogberry go to the city with you, and then headquarters will be attentive to you."

Blair stared at him and turned toward the door.

"Oh, and another thing, Acton," the lieutenant remarked. "I didn't tell you my last guess. It's that Maisie sent you to Little Butte des Morts."

[Acton Blair seems to have been born at the age of thirty. No one who knew him ever had got into an earlier period. He may have been a seafaring man, although the tattooing on his forearms need or need not indicate that. Presumably he was American born, but again no one know. His education had been mostly that of experience, a university he appears to have entered at thirty without previous existence. It may be that an unhanged murderer disappeared about

Howard Ashley was the son of a New Haven (Conn.) physician. He was not graduated from Yale, being expelled in his junior year for conduct unbecoming an undergraduate. It may have been cheating in examinations, cutting chapel or being indifferent to holding them, Yale. This last is plausible. He was perfect for the crew in strength, weight, rhythm and stamina, but did not try for it. It would be irrational to graduate such a man.l

"Mister," said the lieutenant to Roberts when the door had been closed on Blair and Ashley, departing, "that last remark of yours was an inspiration."

"I know it was bone. H-1! I didn't seem able to hold myself. You produced Trembly's murderer here in the room, and then you let him walk out of the door. I know that pair. They'd smile at you and crack you out. You see who's next, don't you? He's here now with you, Mr. Darling, do you mind if I take a drink? I'm needing one. I have a flask."

"Let me continue to be your host," said Mr. Darling. "Pompey will bring you and Lieutenant Stanton some Scotch. And I'll have some wine, if you please, Pompey. Don't raise the point that I already have had some, You may rul another log or two on the fire. I feel a bit of excitement myself, but I'm reprobate enough to find it pleasurable."

Early dusk had begun to dim the day, and the firelight was ruddier in the room. Roberts drank his whisky straight and, with a look of request and apology at Mr. Darling, poured himself a second.

"I think we've disturbed Mr. Darling enough for the day," said the lieutenant.

"No disturbance, none whatever," said the old gentleman. "I doubt that Pompey agrees with you. We'll get along.'

"I might be told first what Mr. Rob erts expects to do, not that it is prop erly my concern other than to see that he receives his December check." "I don't know what to do," said

Roberts. "You can see my chances. It won't help if I decline to receive any more checks. I'm to be put out of the way unless I can protect myself. By G-d, I'll have them taken for a ride. There are a hundred men in New York who would do it for a thousand dollars. They'd do it for a hundred, for ten." "I'd not announce it in advance." said Stanton, "and particularly not to a police officer."

"You know why I've got to. You know it's self-defense. You know he's already murdered a man. You know they're killing us off." TO BE CONTINUED.)
