San Francisco.-Wanted, 212 prisoners. That's what Col. George McD. Weeks might advertise about his model prison out in San Francisco bay. He hasn't enough prisoners.

For Alcatraz, army disciplinary barracks out on an island within the city limits of San Francisco, is unique for many reasons: Out of its 388 prisoners, only one is there for life, only one prisoner has ever made a really successful getaway, and every man works eight hours a day and four hours on Saturday.

Ranking high in importance in any consideration of the island is the kind of food the prisoners get. A sample menu consists of corn flakes and milk, fried breakfast bacon, hot cakes, sirup, bread, coffee, and butter for breakfast; rice tomato soup and creckfried beefsteak, fried onions mashed potatoes, brown gravy, lettuce salad, french dressing, pickled beets, raisin pudding, bread and coffee for dinner; baked macaroni and cheese, dill pickles, doughnuts, bread, and coffee for supper.

Super Farm Woman

Mrs. Frances Silkey, a widow who lives near Boise, Idaho, is the envy of all the farmers of the state because she gets her crops harvested and to market from 20 to 30 days ahead of her competitors. She has earned the title of "the super farm woman," because she taps the earth to a depth of 1,240 feet and brings up water heated to a temperature of 134 degrees. The use of the warm water in her irrigation ditches aids the growth of her crops. She also uses the warm fluid in heating her home.

FIND MONSTERS OF PREHISTORIC TIMES

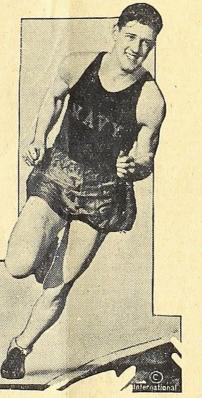

Unearth Bones of Two Species of Dinosaurs.

Washington.-Two hitherto unknown prehistoric monsters, members of the great dinosaur family, who wallowed in the semitropical swamps of northern Montana over 75,000,000 years ago, have just been described from a collection of fossil bones gathered by a Smithsonian institution expedition.

Palaeoscincus rugosidens, the scientific name applied to one of the extinct reptiles, belonged to the armored dinosaur group, and at the tip of its five-foot tail carried a bone-like mass weighing 50 pounds. According to the expedition group, the mass might have been used as a weapon, with which to protect the rear from enemy attack, or perhaps to brush aside the huge mosquitoes of an earlier day. Study of the other bones of the beast shows, according to Dr. Charles W. Gilmore, curator of vertebrate paleontology, that the tail extremity could not have been used for such a purpose. It was so heavy that the animal could hardly have lifted the tail even with an extreme effort. The huge ball must have been dragged

STALKY & CO.

IF MASTER GIGADIBS, the well-known Beetle of "Stalky & Co.," seems discouragingly clever and unreasonably lucky in getting out of scrapes to modern little boys reading this children's classic, they have only to realize that the Beetle grew up to be none other than Rudyard Kipling to understand why. His two classmates in No. 5 Study, however, G. C. Beresford, the McTurk of the story, and Maj. Gen. Lionel C. Dunsterville, Stalky himself, both have testified that Kipling's picture of his youthful school days is a bit overdrawn. Born in India, Kipling was sent to be educated to the United Services college at Westward Ho! in England. Here at the age of twelve the future author of "The Light That Failed" and the "Barrack Room Ballads" showed little of the talent in concocting real-boy escapades with which he later credits himself. Instead, he spent much of his time reading at a prodigious rate. Though the King of "Stalky and Co.," a Mr. Crofts in real life, predicted for this queer little boy an ignominous death "in an attic, a scurrilous pamphleteer," others recognized his genius. Among these were the head master and the padre who gave him the run of their libraries, a very special privilege; McTurk, who describes him as a "sizzling, fizzling literary impulse with a small boy tacked on behind:" and Stalky, who finds promise in the youthful Kipling's contributions to the College Chronicle, of which he was also editor.

PET MARJORIE

DET MARJORIE," Sir Walter Scott called her, little Marjorie Fleming who lived near him in Edinburgh, whose whimsical personality and astonishing literary career begun when she was six and ended by her death just before she was nine, won her unusual friends in her day and a peculiar sort of fame ever since. A statue to Pet Marjoirie was set up just last year in her birthplace, Kircaldy, Scotland, and she is mentioned in the Dictionary of National Biography as one whose "life is probably the shortest to be recorded in these volumes, yet one of the most charming characters."

Marjorie Fileming was born in 1803. When she was just turning six the family moved to Edinburgh and Marjorie took up writing and commenced her famous friendship with Scott. Part of the Waverly novels were written with Pet Marjorie on the author's knee. Sometimes she would amuse him by reciting long passages from Shakespeare; at others they would tramp together across the fields while Scott's dog Maida scampered joyously about them.

Marjorie has left us a number of letters recording her childish observations and philosophy, an epic in erse concerning Mary Queen of Scots, whose royalty she upheld even while she condemned her morals, and a journal written between the ages of six and eight containing more observations on life and a number of poems, all of them recently republished for the modern reader. Pet Marjorie died of measles in 1811.

REBECCA

'H OW do you like your Rebecca?" wrote Sir Walter Scott to Washington Irving in the letter accompanying his gift of one of the first copies of "Ivanhoe" off the press. "Does the Rebecca I have pictured here compare well with the pattern given?" "The pattern" from which Scott fashioned the handsome Jewess who figures so peroically in the familiar novel, was a real woman, Rebecca Gratz, whose lovely person and lovelier deeds were well known to early Philadelphians and whose grave may be seen today in the Mikve Israel cemetery on Spruce street. Hers was a story of star-crossed love. Born of an aristocratic and influential Jewish family, well educated, a beauty, she was the center of one of the most distinguished social groups of the post Revolutionary period. When she fell in love with a man of another faith than her own, she made a costly decision in favor of her family's religion, and devoted her life thereafter to philanthropy and deeds of goodness that doubly endeared her to all who knew her. Thus, it was in the arms of Rebecca Gratz that died Matilda Hoffman, beloved of Washington Irving. On a subsequent visit to Scott in England Irving poured out his sorrow to his friend, relating in connection with Matilda's death the heroic story of Rebecca Gratz. All who know and love the Rebecca of "Ivanhoe" pay unconscious tribute to this heroic girl. (C. 1932, Western Newspaper Union.)

EASTER IN HOLLYWOOD BOWL

Resurrection morning's anniversary is celebrated in southern California by the hegira of hundreds of thousands of worshipers from their homes to the vast natural temples and cathedrals among the hills. Photo shows some of the thousands that gathered at the Hollywood Bowl last year.

Welcome the Easter Morn

HE Easter services at Hollywood, Calif., are held in a large amphitheater called the Hollywood Bowl. Here each year a huge altar is erected and a union service held that is attended by upward of 40,000 persons.

Not many years ago a huge rock altar and a great white cross were erected on the topmost tip of Mount Helix, not far from San Diego.

In the heart of the residential district of San Francisco there rises a conical shaped hill that in the early days of the city was called Lone mountain. It bore this name until the death, some years ago, of Prof. George Davidson, a noted geographer and scientist, when it was renamed Mount Davidson in his honor. When the custom of holding Easter sunrise services spread to San Francisco, this low mountain was selected and on its crest a huge white electrically lighted cross was erected. The original cross stood for several years until it was accidentally burned.

The burned cross has since been replaced by an even larger one, whose white silhouette is one of the points of interest about the city. Standing as it does on its hill unobscured by either trees or buildings, it may be seen from many sections of the city. It stands out in bold relief against the intense blue of the sparkling Cali-

Easter services also are held at Auurn, in northern California. Here another huge cross has been erected on Aeolia heights, overlooking the canyon of the American river, one of the great gorges of the Sierra foothills. Many thousands come to these services from all the surrounding country.

For some years services have been held in Bidwell park at Chico. Here there is no hilltop that may be crowned with a cross and hence the services are held in Bidwell park, just on the outskirts of the city.

One of the impressive services in northern California is held near Marysville, when the devout journey toward the Sutter buttes, where a cross has been erected in the pass near the South butte. A natural amphitheater is provided here for the many who come for miles to be present.

Other services are held on Mount Lowe, at Easter Rock, at Rodondo beach, at Pacific Palisades, at Santa Monica, at the huge white pylon surmounted by a cross at Glendale and at Eagle rock, all in Southern California.

It is estimated that the Easter sunrise services throughout the state are attended by approximately 300,000 persons annually. The services in the southern part of the state, naturally, have the largest attendance, for there it has been an annual event much longer than in the northern section. Also, more such services are held there than in the north. Many of those from nearby who attend these services begin to come as early as midnight. Many who come from a distance are on the road the day and evening before. Roads leading to the top of these "Mounts of the Cross" are usually crowded with machines and with pedestrians during most of the night before Easter morning. Motorists usually leave their cars parked at the foot of the mount. From there they join those who make the remainder of the journey on foot.

While the services vary in some degree at each of the places where they are held, the generally accepted program begins with a chorus of trumpeters exactly at sunrise. This is usually followed by a hymn in which the huge congregation of the devout join. Then comes a variety of sacred orchestral selections, followed by a silent prayer and a prayer led by some noted divine. Usually there also is an address by some orator of note and a short sermon by a minister or priest selected for the occasion.

The singing of selections by children and other orchestral selections usually closes the service.

Easter and New Finery Have Long Association

There is one old custom to which womenfolk cling, and, whether they can afford a new rig-out or not, most of them contrive to wear some scrap of new finery on Easter day.

It is not so foolish or meaningless as at first appears. Even before the institution of Easter as the greatest festival of the Christian church, the Feast of Eostre, goddess of spring, was held. The spring festival, when the whole world of nature becomes reclothed, is a fitting season for new frocks and frills, so good luck became your health and diet habits may also associated with the idea.

In much the same way our "spring cleaning" harks back to early days, when housewives prepared for this great feast by cleaning out the caves, laying down fresh green branches, and beating out the dust from the skins and furs on which the family had slept during winter.

Descent of "Holy Fire" Attracts Greek Devout

The holy fire ceremony, conducted by the Greek Orthodox on the afternoon of Good Friday, is perhaps the most remarkable of all the services held in the church of the Holy Sepulcher at Jerusalem. Under the rotunda of the church the members of the consular, the military and diplomatical parties are seated. Every chapel and corridor, every space and closely together that one cannot purse. budge a fraction of an inch. The courtyard and the roofs of the surrounding houses, even the belfry, are black with people, all looking down upon one of the strangest sights in the world-the holy fire-which is believed to descend from heaven each year upon the tomb of Christ.

Legend of the Poplar

There is a fanciful notion prevailing in some localities, that the Cross upon which Jesus Christ was crucified was made of that variety of poplar known as the aspen, and that ever since that dreadful first Good Friday, the leaves of that tree have always trembled, and never been at rest.

On Mount Roubidoux

In Red Rock canyon, southeast of Bakersfield, Calif .- in the heart of the desert flower area-Easter comes with ceremonies; and the traditional services, conducted annually since 1909, are at Mount Roubidoux, at the edge of Los Angeles.

The First Easter

And the angel said unto the women, Fear not ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified.

He is not here: for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay.

Does Your Skin Shun Light?

IN THE subdued lights of the restaurant she seemed pretty and for a while he thought her lovelier than a year before. But as they emerged into the bright ballroom he was amazed. He lost the thread of their conversation, he wondered what had happened to mar her beauty to such an alarming extent and whether men usually observed complexion imperfections.

Her skin was rough, pores too obviously enlarged, black dots on nose and chin and cheeks. Did she think that layer of dead white powder concealed the blemishes? Why, it only accentuated them.

Ballroom lights have quite the same effect as bright sunlight in "X-raying" the skin that is unkempt and badly groomed. It is easy enough to pass as fairly good looking under the kindly light of dim, softened, diffused lamp shades. But the woman, well-informed in the business of beauty and well groomed can march her skin out into the glaring sunlight or face a thousand-watt bulb with enviable assur-

Examine your skin closely. If you are satisfied that it can stand close scrutiny in the bright light of day you are indeed fortunate for when eyes are drawn to your loveliness you can feel content in the consciousness that it is admiration you are attracting. But if your skin is not clear, flawless and fine of texture do not feel discouraged but see about beautifying it.

For instance-your skin may be sallow, muddy, pasty looking. Many skins are that way. You will have to give thought to your diet, get out in the open more than you have of late, exercise and build up your health in general. And for local treatment you will have to adopt a stimulating, animating regime-one that will bring your skin new life and beauty.

If your skin, like the subject of our story, is spotted with blackheads, if it wears enlarged pores, or is excessively oily-you can be sure that such blemishes will show up glaringly in sunlight or bright artificial lights. People will either pity you or be impatient with your carelessness. Blackheads are often regarded as a sign of uncleanliness either internal or external -generally both. It is comparatively easy to get rid of them. With the right scientific regime you can press out the tiny, offending blackheads and gradually contract the pores. Of course, need correction.

Beauty Accessories

Many women think of beauty accessories as expensive luxuries. Time was when every cleansing cream, skin tonic and nourishing cream were regarded as extravagances. Today they are a necessity in every wellgroomed woman's home.

And even the more luxurious accessories such as exquisite evening compacts are being adopted more and more as vital parts of the ensemble—just as jewelry and kerchiefs and trinkets have long ago been adopted as very necessary accessories to the perfect ensemble in clothes.

But it is not of the luxurious accessories I am going to tell you, but rather of a few inexpensive and effective beauty helps which are really helps corner is jammed with people, pressed and which will not make a dent in any

> I am especially enthusiastic about a rubberized headband. Every woman who has ever creamed her face knows that she can work more smoothly when her hair is tucked under a protective band-be it a towel, piece of gauze or cap. The first step in giving oneself a facial at home is tucking the hair under a towel or cap. In this way you can work up, up to the top of the forehead (which, alas, is often neglected out of fear that the hair will became greasy with cream if a protective band is not secured over the hairline). You can cream the cheeks to the jawbone and over to the ears. And the ears themselves should have a creaming, you know. And when using a bleach you need not fear getting it over the hair. This headband is made of a rubberized material, is thin, easy to slip on and off, and best of all, it is very inexpensive.

Another inexpensive item which I feel that all readers will be interested in is the new type of tissue. These little tissues are daintily assembled with a little hemstitching, to look for all the world like a dainty handkerchief. Physicians have recommended them as being more sanitary in case of a cold than handkerchiefs. Used for that purpose they are an economy. And these little tissues can also be used in various other ways. To remove old makeup, for instance.

Something that has been sorely needed for some time and is at last on the market is a new nail white in the form of a pencil. It is very easy to use and is effective when used dry, or slightly moistened.

STORY FOR BEDTIME

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

TT WAS very hard for Peter Rabbit to believe what Jerry Muskrat had told him about the harmlessness of Plunger the Osprey, better known as Plunger the Fish Hawk. Peter wouldn't have believed it if he hadn't seen for himself how Jerry had no fear whatever of Plunger. You see, it was very, very hard indeed to believe that there could be any member of the Hawk family, at least any large member like Plunger, who was not to be feared by all of the little people of the Green Meadows and the Green Forest. But Peter remembered the mistake that had been made in regard to Ol' Mistah Buzzard, how for a long time he had been needlessly feared, and this made it a little easier to think that possibly Jerry Muskrat might be right in regard to Plunger the Fish Hawk.

Of course, Peter hurried to tell Danny Meadow Mouse and all his other friends what he had learned at the Smiling Pool. Each was as doubtful as Peter had been, but each hoped that it was true. After this they all watched Plunger whenever they had a chance, and not once did anyone see him try to catch any of the little meadow and forest people. In fact, he never seemed to notice them at all. He always flew straight from the Green Forest across the Green Meadows to the Big River and back. Often when he was returning from the Big River they would see something shining in his great claws. It was a fish.

So it came about that after a while no one feared Plunger the Fish Hawk save the fish in the Smiling Pool and the Big River. Presently, from where no one knew, appeared Mrs. Plunger, and it soon became very clear that they had decided to make their home in the Green Forest. They made no secret about it. They didn't seem to care who knew where it was. Peter saw them carrying sticks and once or twice flying from the Big River with water weeds. Peter knew what that meant. It meant that they were building a nest. Right away Peter's curiosity got the best of him. He wanted to see that nest. He wondered If it was like Redtail's. The first chance he got he went over to see. He had watched Plunger and Mrs. Plunger so often that he knew just about where to look for their nest.

He found it quite as easily as he had expected to, for it was only a little way in from the edge of the Green Forest, beside the Laughing Brook as It makes its laughing way to the Smiling Pool. It was in a partly dead tree, a mass of sticks, and weeds and dead rushes, not at all neat. Indeed, Peter thought it was a very clumsy affair. though he didn't say so when Plunger spied him and asked him what he

"I think it is quite an affair," said "It isn't as big as I had thought it might be, but I don't doubt it is very comfortable."

"This is only the beginning," chuckled Plunger. "It is good enough for this year, but next year we will make it bigger, and the year after that we will make it still bigger."

Peter opened his eyes wide. "Oh, you mean that you will use this same nest year after year?" he asked. "Certainly," replied Plunger. "Why shouldn't." confessed Peter. "I've always wondered why most birds seem to prefer a new house every year. I never could see why an old house, repaired if necessary, isn't just as good as a new one."

"It is better when it is treated as we treat it," declared Plunger. "We just make it bigger and more comfortable each year. You see, Mrs. Plunger and I are great lovers cl home. Where do you live?"

"Over in the dear Old Brier Patch," replied Peter.

"Ever intend to move?" asked Plunger

"Certainly not!" replied Peter. "It is the best place in all the Great Plunger chuckled. "You've got the right idea, Peter Rabbit," said he. 'Mrs. Plunger and I feel the same way about our home. We've found a place we like and we have begun housekeeping in a small way. As long as no one bothers us we'll keep right on living here year after year and making our home bigger and better. Can you guess why?"

"Why?" asked Peter. "Because it is home, and in all the Great World there is no place like home," replied Plunger. (©, 1932, by T. W. Burgess.)-WNU Service.

Their second suggestion is corn and cob meal 400 pounds, ground wheat 300 pounds, oats 200 pounds, cottonseed meal 100 pounds, and soy beans 100 pounds. Still another ration consists of 300 pounds of corn and cob meal, 200 pounds of wheat, 100 pounds oats, 100 pounds wheat bran, and 100 pounds cottonseed meal.

It is best to vary the amount of protein in the grain ration with the roughage available. With clover and silage, 50 to 100 pounds of high protein feeds such as cottonseed meal, linseed oil meal, soybean oil meal, gluten, etc., should be added to each of the three suggested rations. Only those high protein feeds furnishing the most per dollar invested should be purchased. With mixed hay, 100 to 150 pounds of high protein feed are best added to the rations, and if timothy hay and silage are fed it is well to use from 150 to 250 pounds of high protein feeds with the rations.

All grains, the specialists believe, should be ground coarsely or finely cracked. Fine grinding is neither necessary nor desirable.

Grass in Early Spring

Not Sufficient for Cow "How nany Wisconsin cow testing association members have given the grass a fair start in spring, before turning their cows out to graze on it?" asks A. J. Cramer, superintendent of the state's testing associations. He points out that the average cow, giving 25 to 30 pounds of milk daily, requires 20 to 25 pounds of dry matter and since grass in the spring is about nine-tenths water, a cow would have to gather 200 to 250 pounds of grass daily, to maintain herself adequately, "Foraging at this rate is impossible: the dairy cow should be fed supplementary grain, along with early pasturage, if she isn't to be underfed, while the pasture grass is still immature," he declares. Cramer recommends sweet clover pasture as one remedy, but even then, some grain should be fed, he says, even as little as three pounds daily often greatly increasing the milk re-

If the pasture is good, he gives as a good grain mix-100 pounds corn moal 100 nounds ground oats and 100 pounds wheat bran; and if the pasture tends to be poor, a mixture of 200 pounds corn meal, 200 pounds ground oats, 100 pounds wheat bran, and 100 pounds oil meal.

Cows and Cold Weather

A subscriber from Nebraska tells as that when cold weather set in his cows dropped from 25 to 30 pounds of milk a day to 10 to 15 pounds a day. He also made some changes in feeding at about the same time cold weather set in. This is quite a drop in milk. Cold weather and changes in feeding are undoubtedly responsible for at least a part of the reduction in milk. Cows that are accustomed to being comfortably housed during the winter months are not in condition to stand stormy, cold outside temperature and conditions that are a normal part of winter. One cannot turn feeds into milk efficiently with cold air and ice water. Cow barns need not be warmer than 45 to 50 degrees Fahrenheit for cows. There is a lot of difference, however, between 45 degrees Fahrenheit and zero temperature. Try it yourself. Don't blame the cow if she objects to too much cold air .- Hoard's Dairyman.

VANDALS NOT SOLE WRECKERS OF ROME

An unanticipated by-product of the wholesale excavations undertaken in Rome by order of Mussolini has been to clear the barbarian invaders of much of the stigma formerly attached to their name. As a result of the discoveries in the vicinity of Trajan's forum, Corado Ricco, director of excavations, has formulated the conclusion that earthquakes, internal strife, sheer carelessness and indifference wrought far more destruction in ancient Rome than did long colonnade of heavy pillars all toppled, leaning against each other like trees bent by a strong wind Their destruction was not due to human vandals, but was traced to an earthquake in 801, when the city was under the papal rule of Pope Leo III. As the excavations have revealed increasing evidence that the barbarians were maligned, the director's work has intensified their study of the old historical records and they have been able to demonstrate that many buildings and temples supposedly destroyed in the "sack" of the city, were standing long after the last bar barian departed.

Much of the bad name of the barbarians may be due to the prejudiced reporting by the early Christians. who, as was amply demonstrated in the reports of persecutions under the empire, never let accuracy stand in the way of giving their enemies a bad name. Even without support from the most unprejudiced records to be found the archeologists in charge of the present work have become convinced by the massive size of the structure uncovered that the destruction of buildings by the invading armies was out of the question .- Washington Star.

Double Purpose Served in Odd Statue Designs

On a nobleman's estate in Silesia there is a collection of some of the most curious statues in the world. The statues are carved in linden wood and are slightly more than life size. They comprise a considerable number of figures, which include the 12 Apostles, a few saints, peasant women and even a figure representing the former lord of the manor, who is seen with his arm linked through that of a soldier comrade.

All of the statues are hollow and each one of them is a beehive, openings in the backs of the figures providing for the entrance and exits of the honey-gathering insects.

The records of the manor show that the first of the wooden statues was put in place in the year 1600 .- Philadelphia Record Sunday Magazine.

CHILD need REGULATING?

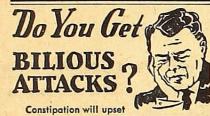

CASTORIA WILL DO ITI

When your child needs regulating, remember this: the organs of babies and children are delicate. Little bowels must be gently urged-never forced. That's why Castoria is used by so many doctors and mothers. It is specially made for children's ailments; contains no harsh, harmful drugs, no narcotics. You can safely give it to young infants for colic pains. Yet it is an equally effective regulator for older children. The next time your child has a little cold or fever, or a digestive upset, give him the help of Castoria, the children's own remedy. Genuine Castoria always has the name:

CHAPTER IX

Portraits by Roberts

(WNU Service.)

In the drawing room Roberts at once locked the door and drew the curtains at the windows. He then opened his bag and took out a quart bottle of whisky. With it he went into the washroom and poured himself a half-glass of the liquor. After drinking it neat he gasped and coughed, but even in his nervousness he remembered to play host. He rinsed the glass and came out to offer it and the bottle to Stanton who shook his head.

"No? . . . All right," said Roberts. We'll have lunch here in the room. We'll have all our meals here. Blair and Ashley are on the train. I'll need all the breaks if I can get away from them. D-n the luck that I had to run into them at old man Darling's. Without that I'd have had a fair chance."

[It might seem that Roberts at this time was overemphasizing the probable consequences of this unfortunate coincidence, however true they proved in the event. Allowance, however, must be made for all the motives animating the Turner will associates. Persons with intimate knowledge of their characters gave more weight to distrust than to desire of money without at all overlooking the strength of the latter. As Maisie later says, it was a panic. Turner undoubtedly knew the men thoroughly. Possibly if Blair and Ashley had not encountered Roberts as they did in Newburgh the temptation to do away with him might have been resistible. This remains conjectural, but it is possible that without the meeting at Mr. Darling's home the murders might have been three and not six.1

"I'll ring for the porter," said Robberts, "Have him send a waiter. Whenever anyone comes I'm going into the washroom."

"I'll go through the train," said Stanton, "and see if they're on."

"What good would that do?" "You'd be able to stop worrying in one case and really begin it in the

"Never mind. I know they're on the train. They may or may not know I know it. Let them guess. I'll need all the breaks."

After lunch Roberts slept on the couch and Stanton read. When Roberts lazily aroused himself he played games of solitaire, and enjoyed his bottle, coaxing the lieutenant to join him in a two-handed game of cards or in drinks.

"You're a dull John Law," he said. "Hunt up your friends," said the lieutenant. "We might invite them in."

"That's an idea, A truce. They'd keep it as long as they wanted to." "What did you fellows do to Turner? You might as well begin clean-

"That seems to be preying on your mind. Nothing was done to Turner. Incidents will happen in a rough life. We haven't lived in the parlor. Sometimes one man would get a little the worst of it and sometimes another. No one would keep account of them. Turner wasn't the fellow to do it." "Just a great big boy."

"That's It."

"And the best two-fisted hater I've ever heard of. Play your cards, or you'll have me knowing I'm simpler

With dark and after dinner Roberts appeared almost at ease in his mind. His bottle explained some of his comfort. The cloister sense-he again had the curtains drawn-in the closed room of the speeding train was another reason for his lifting spirits. He was talkative, and the lieutenant thought something might come of that but very little did.

"They'll pair for it," he said late in the evening in one of his few references to his flight, "but I may handle them yet. They've always been paired, and it's a queer combination at that. I never could understand how they trusted each other. I don't believe they can. I'll never know why I haven't trapped and shot them. Nothing but scruples can keep anyone from murder in New York or Chicago. It can't be detected. You know that,

"You know murder can't be discovered if sensible men hide it. Only mad men and fools are caught. Everything favors concealment and prevents detection. The only thing that keeps a man's enemies alive is his own conscience. You know that. I'll not be so sure of mine, with this conscienceless pursuit of me going on the way you see it.

"Blair is a public nuisance. I have seen enough of his life to hang him a dozen times. Once at Port Said a porter was surly. Blair cracked him on the chin, knocked him overboard. senseless, and leaned on the rail and grinned, watching the spot where he went under.

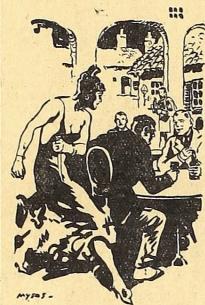

"I saw him in a Tia Juana cantina, not one of the American bars, take the knives away from two Mexicans and carve them. Then he shot a rurale in the leg, took his horse and, with Ashley behind him, get across the line. Ashley was laughing all the time as if it was a musical comedy or Charlie Chaplin, said you fancied Ashley. In one fashion you might be right. Blair's a fool about women, and Ashley isn't. He doesn't get himself tied up, and Blair does. He's crazy. And you'd think he was irresistible. Maybe he is with the only kind of women he ever sees or is ever likely to see. It's a wonder he's come out of some of his

"They are all alike. For a month Blair will be obsessed with a girl. You would be sure it was for eternity. So would she. The great lover. If she's Omphale she thinks he's Hercules at the spinning wheel. Oh, don't grin; I know some music. I was an Anglican vicar once, whatever that has to do with it. He makes them think they are all Delilahs. He likes violent ones. His favorite woman is the tigress. He quits every one in about a month. It's a wonder he's alive. He laughs at them. I know perfectly well he must have killed some of them to keep himself from being killed. "You think I'm romancing. I saw a girl, half Spanish, half Riff, come up behind him in a Marseilles cafe with a half-foot knife blade. I was with some American naval officers off a cruiser, the Nashville I think it was. Blair was sitting with Ashley. Blair's back was to the girl, but Ashley was facing her and he saw her. He knew who she was and why she had the knife, but he gave her a break. The only warning Blair got was a sort of anticipatory grin on Ashley's face and the same sort of look in his eyes. That was sport for Ashley. Blair knew him well enough to be warned that something amusing to Ashley was behind him. He knew that. It might have been danger or just a fellow coming up to slap him on the back or knock his hat down over his ears and buy a bottle of wine. That would be champagne. That's always wine to Blair. He's a pig, but he's an old tusker of a wild boar. And it could be something else behind him and it

"I don't know how he did it, but he seemed to follow the girl by watching Ashley's expression and he whirled just as she struck. She shrieked and fainted. They said afterward he had broken her arm. She was carried away. No one could blame Blair for what they saw, and it was nothing to the police what emotional suffering she might have had. To the Continental police that's hooey. Pulling a knife's something, but you've got to stick it in a heart to have a case for the ce. Over here you could have got a jury to hold Blair while the gal sliced him. It might be a good system at that. I wish to G-d she had been a second quicker or that Ashley had kept his d-n face straight. He could have had his fun later.

"When Blair sat down again he ordered some more drinks and began to cuss Ashley. Ashley just laughed. The madder Blair got and the louder he cussed, the more fun Ashley had. I thought there'd be murder yet, but Ashley had one hand spread out of the table and there was a blue shadow between two of his fingers. He had one of these d-n little single shot .38's covered. Blair saw it. If he had

"He's a devil. So's Ashley. You | made a pass it would have taken him right through the stomach and the spine. So pretty soon he began to laugh, and Ashley took his hand off the table. They knew each other pretty well. They do yet.

"They sat there two hours, and every once in a while Ashley would lean back and laugh. He certainly enjoyed that girl's visit. When they were comfortably drunk they went away arm in arm. That's Blair and

"You said Maisie was Trembly's wife," said Stanton, "Did I?"

"Well, maybe it was Blair said it. Where's she living now? Chicago?" "I don't know."

"There are some things I want you to know tomorrow. You're going over to talk to the state's attorney." "I am, like h-l. And why? What am I charged with?" "Nothing. You're helping us partly in return for helping you, And you're being decent to me. Who do you suppose would believe my story without something to show for it? You're that "I hope you won't, partly for your own sake. I think it will be better for you. Now you can go into the washroom, or you can come with me to the smoking room. I'm going to call the porter to make up the berths. If you stay here tell him what you

"I'll stay here," said Roberts, "and I'll take the upper berth. Ring three times when you come back. Then I'll know who it is."

CHAPTER X

Roberts Bolts for Safety When Stanton awoke the following morning there was no sound from Roberts in the upper berth. The train was an hour and a half's run from the La Salle Street station, and the lieutenant did not disturb his roommate but quietly set about dressing and shaving. Then he considered whether to have his breakfast without awaking and speaking to Roberts or to arouse him. He thought it best to arouse

"Roberts," he called, "are you awake? Want to get up?" There was no answer.

"Say, Roberts," he called again, 'I'm going to breakfast."

There was no sound from the upper berth, and Stanton reached in to shake the sleeper. He could feel nothing but the bedclothes. That astonished him, and he stood up on the couch to look in the berth. Roberts was not

This was so completely beyond Stanton's understanding that he looked in the washroom on impulse although he himself had just stepped out of it. Then he looked for Roberts' bag. It also was gone, and the case was Stanton rang for the porter and opened the door. The porter was at work on a near-by section.

"That was my ring," said the lieutenant. He did not say George. "The man who was traveling with me isn't in his berth. I thought he was asleep. His bag isn't in the room. Do you know anything about him?"

"He got off at Elkhart," said the porter. "Didn't you know that?"

The porter had no plantation idiom which would require an attempt at phonetics in type. He did not say "Captain" or "Boss."

"No, I didn't know it," said the lieutenant.

"Nothing wrong, is there?" the porter asked.

"Nothing at all. If he wanted to get off it was his business. If he didn't want to tell me that also was his affair. He probably made a sudden decision and didn't want to disturb me."

"Have you-" the porter checked himself.

"Have I what?"

"What I started to say might not sound so good," said the porter, smiling. "So I'll not say it. I was thinking that your friend might have left a message with me for you and since he cider, there awhile back, one day at a roadside caravansary, a man asked us what age would we choose to be if we could live for a thousand years.

It was a funny question to ask. Maybe we would not care to live a thousand years more. And yet we sometimes think we would. It might be interesting to see what the world will be like a thousand years from now.

Well, anyway, we said if we could nave the say about it, we would decide to go through the thousand years at the age of fifty. Not twenty-one nor ninety-one, but fifty.

Fifty seems to be the ideal age,

While drinking a bumper of apple | writes John Steven McGroarty, in the Los Angeles Times. A normal man or woman ought to be in ideal shape at fifty. Still virile, not yet senile, all the mistakes and follies of youth left didn't have enough to worry about, and I guess he wouldn't want any of them. I'll go to breakfast."

No doubt others will not agree with us, but, anyway, fifty would be our choice.

"Yes, sir," said the porter. By the time Stanton was seated in the dining car the whole episode had become amusing, his own part in it as much as any other. His ward had absconded. He was returning home with some fantastic stories and nothing else. He knew one of the murder ers and had talked to him but was not able to lay a finger on him. He could not bring him home, and it was a Wisconsin case even if anything ever could be made of it. He had been returning with a possible victim who had run away from him.

He thought he knew why Roberts had bolted. The man was convinced Blair and Ashley were on the train, He also was persuaded that they thought he didn't know it. They would expect him to get off at the La Salle Street station without any suspicion that they were back of him. Therefore it would be easy to deceive them, get off and make a dash by any route he wanted for the Pacific coast and his dive into the obscurities of the Far East.

After breakfast Stanton sat in his room reconciling himself with amusement to his predicament. I never said I was a detective, he thought to himself as an answer to the whole thing. His murderers had flown out of his ken and jurisdiction.

"Is everything all right?" the porter asked when he came to take the bag out of the room.

"Everything," said the lieutenant. As he walked down the train shed toward the gate he decided to stand there a moment and satisfy himself as to Blair and Ashley. If they were on the train Roberts would have to be conceded something more than agitated romancing. The lleutenant was not required to wait. The two had preceded him, and they were waiting at the gate.

Blair's expression was puzzled when he saw only Stanton, but Ashley was grinning. The lieutenant, seeing them, found that he was getting angry and was on the point of showing it. He stepped out of the way of the stream of passengers and stopped beside the "Welcome home, lieutenant," said Ashley. "Hardly expected to be here before you. Didn't Mr. Roberts come with you?"

"I think I'll call the wagon for you," said Stanton.

"Why, . Lieutenant?" said Ashlev. 'We're here to meet my Uncle Hiram Greene, of Oshkosh."

"Then you'd better go to the North Western station." "D-n you, Blair, you had to be so station." "Oh, dry up!" said Blair. "Who is this cheap copper? On your way, flat-cock-sure. Here we are at the wrong foot.' Stanton lost his temper. He drew his pistol. Blair started back, but Ashlev continued to grin, People near by stumbled and pushed back out of the way. A few women cried out. A station policeman hurried up. "I'm Lieutenant Stanton, of East Chicago Avenue. Call a wagon for these men."

"Blair," said Ashley, "sometimes you're certainly an awful d-n fool." "I'll break you for this," said Blair to Stanton.

"In Chicago?" said Stanton, amused again. "Big boy, just now you're one of two vagrants. I may give you a murder charge later. Anyway, Rob erts gets a break." "He'll need it," said Ashley amiably,

He was grinning when Stanton left him and Blair at the detective bureau The man's amusement was not feigned. Blair having made a fool of himself, Ashley, although he was in no better case than the other, was enjoying it.

"He couldn't win," said Ashley, "but a thing like that never stops the big boy. Lieutenant, you'll love him when you know him better, but you'll have to protect him from Roberts. I'll never be able to."

Stanton went directly to the state's attorney's office in the Criminal Court building. Corvaleski had just come in, and Horde, the first assistant, entered the room before they had sat

"Telegram just came for you, Lieutenant," he said, holding out a yellow envelope, "from some one who thought of addressing you here.'

Stanton onened it and read: "Decided best to leave you. Am indebted to you for consideration and kindness. Am playing the game safe and will win. R." The telegram had been sent from Elkhart, Ind.

"That's where he left the train," said the lieutenant, laying the paper in front of the state's attorney. "Who is R? And why did he leave the train?" "R is Roberts. He is one of the three survivors of the Turner will. He left the train while I was sleeping, to get away from Blair and Ashley, the other two survivors. They have him marked for number four. They were on the train. They are over at the bureau now. That's what I came to talk to you about. It will all seen crazy to you, but I'll tell it as it hap pened. First I'd suggest you have Mr.

Horde telephone the bureau to send over exhibits A and B. You might do well to talk to them." "Do that, Horde, will you? Spin your yarn, Lieutenant." For a half-hour Stanton gave a concise narrative. "And there you are," he concluded,

"I've always told you I was no detective. I've got my birds and no cage, I've just let a man slip me. He's dodging his own murder. I've got a murderer, or two of them, and we can't lay a finger on them." (TO BE CONTINUED.)
