ELECTRIC ENERGY DOOMS BIG CITIES

Redistribution of Industry Seen by Harper Leech.

New York .- Giant cities will grow no larger and will lose their present financial and industrial importance; industry will break up into smaller units and operate in what are now rural districts; the worker will receive a greater share of his employer's profits in order to maintain buying power; and the cost of killing a Chinaman will jump from about fifty dollars, the present level, to approximately $17,500, all in the comparatively near future, and because mankind has discarded human and animal energy based on food cultivation and substituted for it his newly discovered ability to convert solar energy into work, principally in the form of electric power. These are some of the predictions affecting the welfare of humanity made by Harper Leech, writer on economic subjects, in his new book "The Paradox of Plenty."

That "this is not a depression but a mishandling of the greatest era of plenty the world has ever known," is the thesis of Mr. Leech's book. "The plain fact is," he says in his preface, "that after thousands, perhaps millions, of years of living on the energy grudgingly tendered by the sun through annual harvests of crops, man suddenly became aware that the same sun had been storing energy for millions of years. He discovered in coal an energy store with millions of times the energy available from his own muscles. Nearly two hundred years later, he still thinks of 'scarcity' when there is no scarcity. And, failing to adjust his institutions and his financial mechanisms to the conditions of plenty, he has failed to realize the advantages of plenty.

Transformation of the United States.

The transformation of the United States into a new form of industrial society, through the interconnection of electric power and transmission of energy, has already started, according to Mr. Leech, and "is now proceeding as rapidly as the previous political and economic intergration of America by railroad construction.'

Mr. Leech points to recent developments in the Carolinas as typical of what may be expected of the future industrialism of the United States in the wake of its constantly expanding use of electrical energy. "In the Piedmont region of the Carolinas," he writes, "the first quarter of the Twentieth century witnessed a repetition of the industrial revolution of the Eighteenth century in the north of England. There was the same shift from agriculture and cottage industries to factories, but no growth of cities to correspond to the growth of the steamgenerated Babylons like Manchester, Leeds, Pittsburgh or Chicago, which gathered into themselves the great, constructive forces of the Nineteenth

"The new type of industrialism which is seen in most characteristic form in the Carolinas has been subjected to much criticism. But it brought to the inhabitants of those regions a far greater net gain of income and welfare than came to the people who lived through the great transitions from agriculture to factory life in regions of earlier industrial maturity. Whether urban critics like it or not-the Carolinas today are a prototype of the future industrialism of

The mammoth metropolises of the modern world already show signs of overgrowth and overspecialization, which in the organic world foretell the doom of a species.

"Because of the congestion in cities, there has been built up a complex system of distribution. There are brokers, jobbers, wholesalers, and warehouse men, all adding tremendously

"Superficially, the greater per capita consumption of electricity in cities would indicate higher living standards than in small communities with a lower per capita consumption, but much of the urban use of electricity goes merely to level up the city dweller's plane of life to that already enjoyed by the inhabitant of the smaller community without recourse to electrical or mechanical power."

Mr. Leech points out in his book that the vastly increased ability to produce agricultural and other products that electrical energy has placed in the hands of men has destroyed completely the promise that scarcity is a measure of value. With the energy now available, he says, it takes but a small proportion of the population to supply the essential needs of the whole nation.

Therefore, he adds, there can be no scarcity, and scarcity ceases to be a measure of value.

In conclusion Mr. Leech strikes a note of optimism for the future of the United States and its citizens, and for Colorado famous.

western civilization as a whole. "Slowly, he declares, "the force of economic and technical realities has been removing from the throat of western mankind, the dead hand of obsolete economic doctrine. The evidence is unmistakable that humanity can escape from the prison house of want; and, although still rubbing eyes blinded from long confinement in the dungeon, can now see a new world. With famine vanquished and other forms of privation being rapidly diminished, old faiths born of want and fear have been losing force."

The cablegram received by the Chinese consul general is in response to his cabled report of the enlistment offer of the experienced Canadian flyers. It says that the Chinese government's aviation department finds the proposal "interesting" and welcomes the idea of having experienced aviators from the Occident fight under the Chinese Nationalist flag.

It will be necessary, however, the cablegram states, for the Chinese aviation department to give full consideration to the detailed report of the proposals, now in the mails on its way to China, before definite answer can

Whale Tows Smack, Tears Off Anchor

Cape May, N. J.-Capt. Esse Boies, master of the Sea Toy, a fishing smack that sails out of this harbor, returned to port, reporting he had run into a school of whales, and that one of them had yanked the anchor off his According to Captain Boies, who is a teetotaler and a member of the Methodist church, he dropped anchor off Chincoteague, Va., in search of codfish, but his anchor caught in the stomach of a whale, apparently annoying the leviathan intensely.

The big sea mammal dragged his smack back and forth, Captain Boies declares, until he was almost ready to cut the anchor cable. Then the whale jerked the anchor loose and spared him the trouble.

be given., According to the Canadian air force spokesman, who, because of Canadian government opposition to the move cannot reveal his identity, the Canadian proposals should reach Nanking about the middle of March.

"We are planning our organization," he said, "so that we can start immediately upon receipt of favorable definite reply from the Chinese government.'

The Canadians say they are prepared to equip and man two squadrons, one pursuit and one bombing, at a cost to the Chinese government for the first year of nine million dollars, including maintenance and salaries. Each succeeding year would cost but four millions. If necessary the airmen say they can equip two or more squadrons of eighteen machines each. There are about 400 pilots and mechanics affected by the Royal Canadian air force layoff.

Sidewalk Repairs Give Work to Unemployed Men

Chicago.—Fixing up sidewalks seems to be a popular means of providing emergency employment, according to information received from various sections of the country. Cleveland, Ohio, has kept an extra force of from 200 to 500 men at work during the past few months, replacing damaged sections of sidewalk throughout the city.

Other reports of similar projects have come from many other communities.

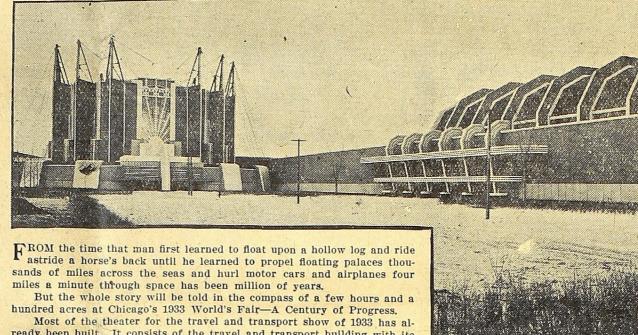

Various means of financing the repairs have been reported. In Macomb, Ill., men repairing walks are paid by the local unemployment bureau, and the only cost to the city is for materials and supervision. Under this plan jobless men "work out" what they get from funds donated for unemployment relief, and the city as a whole receives the benefit.

Construction Bargains Seen in Lowered Costs

Chicago. - That construction bargains abound for people who will take advantage of them and build this year, is indicated by prices on contracts recently awarded. A good example is the concrete wading pool for which a contract has just been let in Oak Park, Ill., at a cost of only $1,000.

Two pools of similar design which Oak Park built in 1929 cost the community $2,400 each. In 1931, the price had dropped to $1,450 each for two more wading pools installed. But the 1932 low bid was more than 30 per cent under the successful bid in 1931.

Where the Story of Transport Will Be Shown ready been built. It consists of the travel and transport building with its

"sky hung" dome and a mile strip of shore along Lake Michigan near the heart of Chicago. Today visitors gaze in wonder at Railroad Dome-a gargantuan structure rising 125 feet high and 200 feet across from its 310-foot base. The dome of the Washington Capitol or of St. Peter's in Rome could be comfortably tucked beneath its hanging roof. Architects explain that the roof is suspended by steel cables hung from a circle of 12 steel towers and anchored on the exterior to slabs of concrete each as big as a house. It is the first application to architecture of the suspension bridge principle.

The dome "breathes"! Expansion joints enable the roof to rise and fall, expand and contract as much as six feet in circumference with changes in temperature, wind velocity, rain and snowfall.

Use of the suspension bridge principle has obviated the use of pillars, arches or other interior supports and given Railroad Dome the largest unobstructed area ever enclosed beneath a roof. Here spectators will see Stephenson's Rocket, the first successful steam locomotive, which has been loaned to the exposition by the British government-and other historic engines and cars. East of the Travel and Transport building visitors will view a pageant of men and women from all lands and ages traveling and hauling goods in the principal ways of which history has knowledge. The procession will move by land, water and air. Ox team and log dugout will give place to stagecoach and sailing vessel, these in turn to primitive railroad train and steamship, these last to ultra-modern electric locomotive, speed boat, racing automobile, monoplane and dirigible-all to the accompaniment of music and drama. Special phases of railroad history will be shown in the dome and the south portion of Transportation Hall, 1,000 feet long and windowless, adjoining it. Marine exhibits will be shown in a section of a modern de-luxe ocean liner complete from B deck to captain's bridge.

The north section and at least two separate exhibit buildings will be used to tell the story of motor transportation. In the building which the General Motors company is erecting, one will see carried on the entire operation of

BILLY MINK and Little Joe Otter | three eggs in that nest over in the do most of their fishing in the Laughing Brook or the Smiling Pool and are content with rather small fish, so long as there are plenty of them. Buster Bear is another fisherman who does all his fishing in the Laughing Brook. This is because Buster does not want to leave the Green Forest. His cousin, Bobby Coon, is also quite content with what he can catch in the Laughing Brooks. Longlegs the Heron often fishes along the edge of the Big River, but he, too, is content with minnows and pollywogs.

But it is not so with Plunger the Fish Hawk. No, indeed. He wastes no time on the little fish of the Laughing Brook or the Smiling Pool. Once in a while he fishes in the Smiling Pool when his keen eyes discover a fish there which is worth catching, but most of his fishing is done in the Big River. Every day he and Mrs. Plunger fly over to the Big River. One goes up the Big River and one goes down. To their broad wings miles are nothing, and so, high in the air above the shining water, they swing back and forth from shore to shore for long distances, their wonderful eyes fixed on the water.

Now, it is a fact which perhaps you do not know that from high in the air. looking straight down into the water, you can see much farther below the surface than you can when close to the water. So the keen eyes of Plunger can look right down into the Big River and see the fish swimming there. When he sees one near enough to the top he closes his wings and drops like a shot, with his great claws spread ready to seize the fish. But he does not always succeed. Oh, my, no! Did you ever know a fisherman who always succeed? I never did. Plunger is just like all fishermen, missing his fish quite as often and perhaps oftener than he catches one. And he is like all good fisehmen in another thing, the possession of patience.

On this particular morning Plunger was having no luck at all. I'erhaps it was because he wasn't as patient as usual. The truth is he was rather impatient. He wanted a fish, a big fish, not for himself, but for Mrs. Plunger. Why didn't he leave it to Mrs. Plunger to catch her own breakfast? I'll tell you why. It was because Mrs. Plunger was very busy with household duties. There were

QUEER FOODS

Cooking Locusts in the Philippines,

(Prepared by National Geographic Society. Washington, D. C.)-WNU Service.

ROG legs, once almost an exclusive tidbit of Gallic peoples, are adorning many American dinner tables. Sixty million frog legs are consumed in New York city annually. Chicago also proves that frogleg eating is becoming "Americanese," for more than thirty-six million were eaten in that city last year. San Francisco palates were "tickled" by more than sixteen million frog legs; New Orleans are slightly more, and Los Angeles slightly less.

In fact, frog logs have become so popular that a new industry-frog ranching-has come into American industrial life. California has no native frogs but ranchers have seen to it that many pairs have been imported from Louisiana to habilitate synthetic frog lakes and marshes.

The frog's entry on American menus recalls many strange foods of the world. In the markets of the United States where frog legs may be purchased, the housewife may buy a fresh "marsh rabbit" which, before trapping and skinning, was none other than a muskrat.

For two centuries a town in Massachusetts has supported a seaweed (Irish moss) industry. Irish moss is torn from New England rocks and is used in making blancmange and many other puddings. There are some 200 edible seaweeds from which are extracted ingredients for American ice creams, jellies, pastries, cereal foods and salads, while in Japan the weeds are boiled with rice and strips of meat and placed in a popular sandwich called sushi. The Japanese cultivate seaweed and in Tokyo bay the "farmers" employ more than 3,000 people.

Raw monkey brains on the half skull, pigskins and bird's nest soup and pickled water beetles are eaten in China. Silkworms are eaten after the cocoon has been unwound. Horses, donkeys and camels, after they have lost their usefulness as beasts of burden, are consumed by some Asiatic tribes. Caterpillars, frogs and snails are relished when obtainable.

Water lily bulbs make delectable oriental desserts. The bulbs are often called water chestnuts. Their nutritive value is compared with that of tapioca.

Old Eggs Liked in China.

Chinese enjoy eggs whose owners have long forgotten their age. The orientals claim they lend a somewhat ovsterlike taste to oriental soups. Jellyfish also are relished along the Asiatic seaboard.

At Japanese inns the traveler is told that "Bombay duck" can be had at a reasonable price. The hungry customer visions a fat fowl but the waiter brings in pieces of smoked fish about two inches long and as thin as a dime. The menu also includes pickled seaweed, seaweed jelly, and chutney, which resembles pickled citron, but is almost as hot as Mexican chile.

More raw than cooked fish is eaten by Japanese. Raw baby octopuses are particularly popular. "Japanese Limburger" is not a cheese but a Japanese pickled diakon, or long white radish.

Koreans, like many orientals live mostly on rice. They cook their seaweed in oil and serve it with slices of red peppers. Kimshee, a kind of sauerkraut, is a favorite Korean dish.

To the north, the natives of Kamchatka relish the tongues and the narrow of the bones of reindeer, but the piece-de-resistance is the meat of unborn fawns. From the stomach of the reindeer the natives obtain their greens-half digested balls of moss. A popular native dish is reindeer sausage which has been surrounded by dough and dropped into boiling water. On the lower end of the peninsula where salmon are plentiful, dishes of boiled fish eyes are considered a delicacy. Some inhabitants of Asia Minor prefer sheep eyes.

New Guinea natives find China a good market for sharks' fins from which the Celestials make a delectable soup, and also for beche de mer, a large sea slug found in south Pacific waters. Eel Is a Popular Dish.

The New Guinea natives are fond of the pith of sago palms, potatoes and bananas; and dog, snake and lizard flesh vie with that of the pig. The womenfolk gather beetles, grubs and larvae from trees to grace the festive board.

OLD CUSTOMS DIE HARD IN GERMANY

Peasants Still Adhere to Ancient Superstitions.

While there are many superstitions in Germany which appear to have a vogue and currency at Silvesternacht (New Year's eve) and other special occasions, there are some that are tenaciously adhered to, particularly among the country people, throughout the year, due to the fact no doubt that the various favors sought are applicable to common and continuous human experience.

Among these irrational and idle customs may be mentioned that of the Bavarian peasant who swings an ax against the trunk of any barren fruit tree on his farm, while his neighbor, standing near, intercedes, and seeks to avert its fate, by assuring the owner that the tree will soon bear fruit. Three times the ax is raised and three times the blow averted, the supposition being that the branches thus granted a new lease of life will repay such clemency with a lavish yield of pears or apples the coming summer.

Another custom, not such a difficut one to understand, is the laying of a pair of crossed hose beside the bed of a sick child. Others believe that while a stuffed owl guards the in Baltimore. In some Japanese cities, door, lightning, that peril of the husbandman, will never strike the barn. Some think that a gold ring, suspended by a string above an egg will, by some species of wizardry, disclose whether it will hatch out a cock or a hen. Then there are dis tricts of Germany wherein it is an accepted hypothesis that one desiring to be cured of certain ailments need but crawl through the spokes leave his sickness between them.

A fantastic notion of the old-time miller beguiled him into expectation of a prosperous year if on New Year's eve he threw some living animal into the mill-race. This prac tice, happily, is well-nigh obsoleted.

Concluding this random miscellany with an instance similar to one or two already cited, it is firmly maintained by country-folk that a pear Every good native Madagascan tree the trunk of which is crossed with bands of straw on Christmas

Most of these beliefs, even the most illogical, are harmless, and when intended only to supplement, by a sort of rite or ceremony a steadfast diligence and patience, can surely do no mischief .- Berliner Tage-

Truffles of France.

The varied bill of fare of the Frenchman includes foie gras-a paste of fatty goose livers. Truffles are rare delicacies. French farmers are frequently seen leading their pig and dog "truffle sniffers" over the fields. Truffles are small, round, blackishgray fungi which usually are found about six inches below the surface of the earth. When the "sniffer" locates a truffle, he tries to uproot it. When near the choice morsel his master strikes him sharply on the nose with a stick and completes the digging. Later the animal is rewarded by the rough trimmings of the truffle with a view to keeping his truffle scent keen.

Europe takes its snail industry seriously. Snail harvesting begins in June of each year when whole families desert their homes to beat the bushes in the alps near the Franco-Swiss frontier. Like oysters, snails should be eaten only in the "R" months of the year, so many of the collected snails are taken to "snail farms" and fed up on vegetables and many varieties of green leaves for marketing.

Paris is one of the world's leading snail consuming cities. Sixty to eighty million snails are handled in the French capital during a single winter.

There are peoples who literally eat dirt. In the Sudan, portions of South America and in the West Indies, many tribes eat certain kinds of clay they find on the river banks. They believe it is a remedy for anemia and for many other maladies.

world's newest proposed state has just been proclaimed from what heretofore has been known as "Manchuria." The announced sponsor for the projected government is the northeastern administrative committee. So far, four names have been bestowed on the new state, in rapid succession: Ankuo, Daido (meaning "Great Union"), Manchoukuo ("Land of Manchuria"), and Tatung ("Great Unity"). Until a name is finally settled upon, the new territorial unit might well be called, descriptively, "Manchuria plus Jehol," says a bulletin from the National Geographic society.

"Although the name of the proposed state seems to shift over night," continues the bulletin, "its territorial make-up is reasonably definite. In it are included the three provinces that heretofore have made up Manchuria: Liaoning (also known as Fengtien and as Mukden province), Kirin, and Heilung (also known as Amur province). To these have been added Jehol, hitherto the adjacent province of Inner Mongolia, to the west. The proposed state thus starts with approximately 443,000 square miles, an area almost as great as that of the Union of South

"The new state is the world's leading grower of soy beans, producing annually nearly a quarter of a billion bushels. Approximately one-half the production is exported. In the months following harvest, long freight trains loaded with beans, roll ceaselessly down to the ports where ships of every nation wait to transport them to all continents. This bean traffic is one of the chief sources of income for the Manchurian railways.

"In addition to beans, there is a heavy production of wheat, millet, maize, and grain sorghum on the rich acres of Manchuria and Jehol. The live stock industry reaches large proportions in some regions. In the north are extensive forests, and farther south are vast coal fields and sizable deposits of iron ore. "In choosing a capital for the new state, the committee passed over Mukden, long the capital of Manchuria, and Harbin, the metropolis, and designated Changchun (also called Kuanchengtzu), the third city in size. This choice may have been dictated by a desire to place the administrative activities in a central location; for with the addition of Jehol, Changchun becomes much nearer the geographic center of the new state than Mukden, and much nearer the population cen-

WALTON'S SPEECH

Walton is a man of standing in the town in which he lives, and he knows it. He dresses a little more formally than does the average citizencutaway coat, stiff hat, wing collarspats - you know the type. He is a dependable citizen with very definite church connections and a satisfactory financial rating, and a social position that is not to be questioned. He likes to sit at the speaker's table, and to be referred to as "Our well-known fellow townsman who needs no introduction," and he is one of those curious individuals who enjoys being called on to speak. I was at dinner the other night where Walton, as usual, was sitting at the head table, behind the bouquet. He was not on the program, the principal speaker being a prominent and clever scientist from out of town. The presiding officer was one of those timid persons who feels under obligations always, no matter how the regular program has been arranged. to introduce every one who sits at the head table. Naturally he could not pass up Walton. Now Walton, at best, is only an indifferent speaker, and he was not expecting the honor of speaking at this time. He arose, however, admitting that he had nothing to say, assuring the guests that it would be far from his purpose at this time to encroach upon the time of the distinguished guest whom they had all come out to hear, and that he would take but a moment to express the thought that was in his mind.

But he kept on talking, trying in vain to corral the idea that he suggested he was about to express. He told a number of stories, old most of them, pointless, with no application or illustrative force in what he was trying to say. He likes to be amusing so that, forgetting for the time being, perhaps, his religious affiliations. he dropped into narrative just a little risque, resulting in repressed and slightly hysterical laughter on the part of the ladies present. Twenty minutes had elapsed before he sat down and we could go on with the regular program.

Walton didn't know how to say that he had nothing to say and then to stick to it.

"Bring them in," said the state's attorney.

Blair and Ashley were handcuffed to each other when they were brought in with a policeman at each side of them. "That isn't necessary," Stanton exclaimed. "Take those cuffs off them, you men, and you can wait outside." "That's a good scout, Lieutenant," said Ashley. "I didn't like the d-n things, not with Blair on the other end: not at all, anyway."

Blair scowled and then forced an expression of boredom and indifference.

"This is the state's attorney, gentlemen. The big boy is Mr. Blair. He took the lanterns away. The smiling lad is Mr. Ashley. Blair, I'm quite convinced, is a murderer. Ashley may be. And here we are and what to do? Their present police status is that of

"We can ask the sheriff up in Vilas county if he cares for Mr. Blair," said the state's attorney. "Horde, go see if you can get him on the wire. Tell him we are holding a suspect with some strong circumstantial evidence."

The state's attorney looked the two men over for a moment of cool silence which was intended to be minatory and which was not. Blair stared at him and then laughed. The laugh was short and derisive. It could be taken in any trade of opinion as an insult. Ashley was cheerily interested.

"What are you fellows doing?" the state's attorney asked. "What's your reason for being in Chicago?"

"Ask the lieutenant," said Ashley. "He's detaining us. We were traveling. He said something about giving Roberts a break. We don't crave Roberts' company, Lieutenant. He isn't very interesting, not for hours at a time. You ought to have found that out last night."

"Why did you send that fat man up to our room in the Palatine?" Stanton asked.

"That's a sensible question," said Ashley. "Not insinuating that your question wasn't, Mr. State's Attorney. But the lieutenant's question is highly reasonable. Why did we send a fat man up to your room? That assumes that we did. Don't you know we went to New York?"

"You started for New York."

"And none of the dicks told you we didn't get there. You'll often find them that way. Sometimes they don't like to admit they were outsmarted, and sometimes they are indifferent to such cases. We decided to travel and got off the train. It wasn't going in the right direction. We wanted to go north and west. It was going south. It was my idea to send the fat man up to your room. Blair didn't think much of it. I don't myself now. I wouldn't have you judge me by it, Lieutenant."

Ashley's smile was intended to be deprecatory.

"I thought it would be fun to flutter Roberts and start him in motion. I knew he must be with you. He changed your room, didn't he? He shouldn't be so fluttery, but sometimes he is. But don't rate him as a coward. He has as good nerve as the next man, but he has his ruthers. Some things he doesn't like. He doesn't like heights. Neither does Blair. They don't bother me at all. Now, scorpions don't bother Roberts and Blair at all, and they panic me. That's a tip for you, Lieutenant. Introduce a scorpion, and I'll climb a wall. I suppose you know we were a bit confused as to your room. I thought you'd make inquiries. Well, no harm done. Just some good-natured fun. Did Roberts say where he was going? We thought maybe he would go to San Francisco and take a boat. We might run into him. We're going out to the

"Does Mr. State's Attorney want to ask any more questions? I may have seemed to cut him off. I didn't intend to."

"Blair, where's Maisie?" the lieutenant asked.

"Now you've got him on a sore spot," said Ashley. "He doesn't want to know. That's why we're traveling. Maisie, you know, was Mrs. Trembly, and her husband was killed in an automobile accident. You knew that. You said something about the lights not being in place at a dangerous piece of bridge construction." Horde came in the room.

"The sheriff thinks it would be useless to hold the man for them to come after," he said. "He says they couldn't make a case. He says the chances are a hundred to one no one would identify him as having been in the county, and if they did, how would that prove he took the lights out? There's the farmer's story that they were taken away and put back. As he sees nection' it, that doesn't make a case, and it isn't worth the expense of trying to make anything of it and then having nothing. They're content to let it go as reckless driving with fatal results unless better evidence turns up."

"That's all right with this office," said the state's attorney. "I think they are right, don't you Stanton?"

"I suppose they are," said the lieutenant. "Blair, of course, did it. He doesn't have to say he did, but outside a courtroom no one would have any doubts."

"And you think they will kill Rob-

"I'm not so sure. They'll try to, but Roberts isn't helpless and he may take them to get rid of his dread of them. A tip you're welcome to." "It would astonish me if he tried to," said Ashley. "He knows we are his friends." "Mr. Blair does not say anything," said the state's attorney. "And why should I? I'll be glad when you are tired of this."

"There's no use keeping them, Stanton. We can't charge them, and it's foolishness to hold them merely to make them get a writ. Turn them loose."

"Gentlemen." said Stanton, "you're loose again. If I were you I'd take care of Roberts' health or allow him to cherish it himself. I've given him the advantage of this little interruption. Take it as a suggestion to let him alone. I'll have you safely conducted to the street. I'd not seek another way of coming in here again, if advice is admissible."

"We welcome it, Lieutenant," said Ashley. "Blair, we have the air again. Adios, gentlemen. We'll give your regards to Roberts. Adios."

CHAPTER XI

Maisie

Two days later Stanton had another telegram from Roberts, sent from Salt Lake City and, as before, through the state's attorney's office.

"So far so good," it read. "Thought you might like to know. I'll wire you before I take the final jump-off."

Stanton wished he could send him a warning. He still reasoned that the situation rationalized itself only for incredulity or the most thoroughgoing skepticism, but nevertheless three killings had to be conceded and the survivors of the group were not of gentler nurture and character than the three who were dead. It might be that the incentive was less, the deaths having doubled the income of the living, and the risks were greater.

With everything reasoned Stanton found he still considered Roberts in danger. He could not warn him to avoid San Francisco. He might warn him to be careful. A telegram sent in care of the telegraph company had an outside chance of reaching him, a small one but a chance,

After writing several drafts, trying not to alarm Roberts too much and yet to put him on guard, the lieutenant accepted as the best he could do and sent a telegram reading: "B. and A. were held a few hours here. They are traveling west. They spoke of San Francisco." A week later the lieutenant had a telegram from Roberts:

"Adios, Amico. Good luck. All set for the big jump. A new life and a merry one. No more from me. Buenos Stanton could not know whether his own telegram had been received or not. Nothing more was heard from Roberts. A week and then another went by, The Turner case evidently had been folded up and filed away. Stanton wrote to Mr. Darling and to the young Mr. Turner. The old gentleman in his reply said he had not received a letter from Roberts and did not as yet know where to send his December check. He pre-

The recurrence came with a telephone call the afternoon of January 7, getting the lieutenant at his desk. It was a woman's voice, and she, finding that she was talking to the lieutenant, gave the impression of being uncertain how best to get to what she wanted to say.

"I am about to ask you to call on me," was what she did say after the instant of hesitation.

"Yes," said the lieutenant. "I am at the Drake," she said. "My room is eight-eighteen."

"Why do you want to see me?" Stanton asked. "I am Mrs, Arthur Trembly," she said. "I am Maisie. It is in that con-

"I see," said the lieutenant, "When do you want me to call?" "Now, if you can."

"I can." He called the captain's chauffeur and was driven to the hotel. A development with its origin in a volunteer appearance of Maisie gave his imagination a lively turn. At his ring of the bell the door was opened by a handsome woman of early middle age.

"Lieutenant Stanton? Come in. Take off your overcoat. That chair by the table is comfortable. There are cigarettes at your side."

She lighted one herself. "As I told you, I am Maisie. That partly explains itself to you, I imagine."

"Partly," said the lieutenant. "Enough to bring me here in a hurry. I've a good many things to ask you. You're a long-overdue person."

"I suppose, but I have some things I want to tell you first."

Stanton, looking at her, thought he saw a woman of good mind and experience. The freshness of her good looks had passed, but she had not tried to reclaim it with cosmetics. Consequently she still was good-look-

"Why did you write that letter to Clayton?" Stanton asked.

"I didn't," said Maisie, "and that's the beginning of my deciding to talk to you. My late husband, Arthur Buck Trembly, wrote that letter. Arthur's only period in the penitentiary was for not writing another person's signature quite well enough. It taught him to do it better when he did it at all. It was too good for poor Dunn, couldn't be sure from reading the newspapers whether you had the pleasure of meeting Buck that night." "I did," said Stanton. "He gave me the narrative of what happened." "Smooth didn't you think?"

"Very. Did he shoot Dunn?" "I never knew," she said. "I think not. He put him there. He had some one to do the rest. What do you "I'll never be certain. I knew Dunn, He didn't need much of a chance, but I guess he wasn't given even that." "No, he wasn't. They used me and Dunn's affection for me to kill him. He was the only square one in the outfit. He was the only one Turner had no business including in the will Dunn and I were on the square. He was square, and I had to be. He would come to me anywhere if he got a note like that and believed it was from me. He probably thought I needed him. When Buck came in Dunn could suspect almost anything, except probably that I had not written the note. I'll not believe he could have thought that I had betrayed him, I'll not believe it. I suppose he sat there quietly awaiting the next move and planning his own. He had no. chance."

"Your husband," said Stanton. "Buck. It wasn't jealousy?" "Not a chance. He was one of two people who knew I hadn't written the letter. I was the other."

"But his trick got a rise." "He knew it would, but he knew Dunn was square, And jealous? Stanton, if I could laugh I would. My tender Buck was not of a jealous nature. I don't know why he didn't tell me to chase myself and get a divorce. And I don't know why I didn't do it without being told. Still we got along. You know. It was what they call respectable. An old hen would rather be in out of the rain. When you're thirty-five you're looking at the sunset. Most women think they are before that. No, it was this will, I'll tell you what it was. It was a panic."

"Is Ashley in town?" the lieutenant "Yes, dear little Howard himself." "And Blair?"

"That I don't know. I'd presume so if Roberts were alive, but with him dead I can't tell. Howard will tell

"They got Roberts!" the lieutenant exclaimed. "I thought he'd get clear, for a time at least."

"I suppose they got him. All I know is that when Ashley telegraphed me to come to Chicago he said that Roberts had died in San Francisco. How could I know? It might have been heart disease, an automobile or something else. It didn't make any noise, did it? No police stuff?"

"Nothing," said the lieutenant.

"You see, this has been a panic from the beginning. You know what I mean. Like people smelling smoke in a theater and sitting there wondering if they can trust one another not to break for the exit. Then all of a sudden they all break because each thinks the other is going to. You understand what I mean? A panic. These fellows could have gone along with what they had. Thirty thousand isn't so bad, but they couldn't trust one another, none except Dunn Clayton. He was the white man. He was also the most dangerous one. That's why he was the first to go when the instinct of self-preservation got to working. A panic, and Blair and Buck got the jump on the others."

"Did your husband talk to you about it?" Stanton asked.

"Not in so many words. He didn't say he was going hunting for them. He harped on what the others were likely to do. Either nervous or alibiing himself. Talked about getting away to some out-of-the-way place in Europe where the mere appearance of any of the other five would make a case of self-defense if you shot him on sight. I could see Buck living in an out-of-the-way place in Europe, And I told him if he was going to kill anyone in that kind of self-defense he'd better do his stuff in the United States, where they understood it. Imagine the gendarme patting a boy on the back who had just popped off an innocent visitor in their midst. Buck decided to be true to his own institu tions."

"You and Buck were not living in Chicago?"

"Oh, my lord, no. In New York, We knew Dunn was here. It was Buck's excuse that he had to see some men here and then we'd go on to Miami. He knew Brown fished and hunted from the Lac Vieux Desert lodge."

"The other three were in Europe?" "They were not. They had been but they had come back to New York That's what started the panic." "In September?"

"Lord, no. Back in mid-August." "I'm too credulous," said the lieu enant. "I'm childlike." "Maybe," said the lady. "Any one who believed any of them, except Dunn, on anything, would be. Buck had me completely deceived in coming out here. You can see plainly afterward, but I didn't know then that the panic was on. Dunn, of course, didn't know that it was, but the others always were afraid of him. I suppose the plot in their minds was this-il Dunn Clayton saw that it was win ners take all and coffins for the losers they were all gone. Blair and Ashley must have had the same idea. They followed us out here. We weren't hard to find. We were registered at the Sherman. What was the night Dung was killed? Saturday, wasn't it?"

"September 29," said the lieutenant, "Well, call it Saturday or Sunday It was about one o'clock when the telephone in my room rang, and it was Blair calling. He asked if he could come up. I said certainly not. He said it was important. I'd better see him at the door anyway. It was about Dunn, he said. Something scared me. You know how a quality gets into the voice. I told him to come up. When I opened the door he stood in the hall and said that Dunn had been killed in the Dutch Mill. He didn't need then to tell me Buck had been there. He said Buck had been held by the police for a while and then had gone away." "That's where I was taking a hand without knowing what I was doing," said the lieutenant. "Well, I guess it didn't make much difference, except mix the sequences a little."

"Blair said that Buck had killed Dunn and wanted to know where he had gone. He'd made a getaway, Blair said, and he wanted to know where I, was to join Buck. Well, he had killed Dunn. I didn't know then that what Dunn thought was a letter from me had brought him there. I guess that wasn't necessary. Blair was looking eagerly at me. I didn't really know if Buck had gone any where, but I thought of Preston Brown at Lac Vieux Desert. Try Lac Vieux Desert, I told him. Brown's there, I said, and Buck may go there.

"That's what I wanted to tell you," she continued. "You may have known something of it, but I sent Blair to Lac Vieux Desert, and I wanted him, if he could, to kill Buck. I didn't know that he would find him. If the panic was on I knew the one I wanted killed after what had happened at the Dutch Mill. You'll ask why I'm telling this now. That's what you're thinking."

Indians Outclassed in Use of Bow and Arrow

Archery 200 or more years ago was a useful accomplishment as well as a competitive sport. Prior to the invention of gunpowder, the bow and arrow had been, for almost 1,000 years, the principal weapon of defense in England. So important was it considered that every Englishman be able to wield a wicked bow that archery practice was long compulsory for all men between the ages of sixteen and sixty. The Mayflower immigrants were armed with blunderbusses, but. are said to have invariably won.

in order to conserve their supply or shot, they frequently hunted with tha bow and arrow, in the use of which they were more skillful than were their savage neighbors. Indian prowess with the bow and arrow seems to have been much overrated by romanticists. They usually shot their quarry at close range after it had been stalked for them, and in friendly shooting competitions between redskins and Englishmen, the white men

I just postpone it!"

"No, I don't have 'nerves." You can't have them, and hold this sort of position. My head used to throb around three o'clock, and certain days, of course, were worse than others.

"Then I learned to rely on Bayer Aspirin."

The sure cure for any headache is rest. But sometimes we must postpone it. That's when Bayer Aspirin saves the day. Two tablets, and the nagging pain is gone until you are home. And once you are comfortable, the pain seldom returns!

Keep Bayer Aspirin handy. Don't put it away, or put off taking it. Fighting a headache to finish the day may be heroic, but it is also a little foolish. So is sacrificing a night's sleep because you've an annoying cold, or irritated throat, or grumbling tooth, neuralgia, neuritis. These tablets of the same relief. neuritis. These tablets always relieve. They don't depress the heart, and may be taken freely. That is medical opinion. It is a fact established by the last twenty years of medical practice.

The only caution to be observed is when you are buying aspirin. Bayer is genuine. Tablets with the Bayer cross are safe.

Precepts of Franklin

Should Be Remembered The proposed $5,000,000 Philadelphia memorial to Benjamin Franklin should have some place in it calling attention to that American's 13 suggested virtues and precepts, on which the club of Washington and Sioux City, Iowa, patterned after the Junket club of Franklin's day, are founded, says the Pathfinder Magazine. They are:

"Eat not to dullness, drink not to elevation. Speak not but what may benefit others or yourself, avoid trifling conversation. Let all your things have their places; let each part of your business have its time. Resolve to perform what you ought, perform without fail what you resolve. Make no expense but to do good to others or yourself, i. e., waste nothing. Lose no time; be always employed in something useful; cut off all unnecessary actions. Use no hurtful deceit, think innocently and justly and, if you speak, speak accordingly, Wrong none by doing injuries, or omitting the benefits that are your duty. Avoid extremes; forbear resenting injuries so much as you think they deserve. Tolerate no uncleanliness in body, clothes or habitation. Be not disturbed at trifles, or at acOffset
