GEORGE WASHINGTON MOTION PICTURE WILL BE SHOWN

The Tawas City George Washington Bicentennial Commission has secured a motion picture portraying the life of George Washington, and it will be shown at the State Theatre Tuesday evening, April 19, at eight o'clock, E. S. T.

This picture, consisting of four reels, has been planned along strictly educational lines, and consequently should give all a living, lifelong impression of Washington's character and deeds. In devising means that would properly reveal Washington's contribution to civilization, the National George Washington Bicentennial Commission, authorized by Congress, has made possible this picture, and it is the only picture on the life of Washington that has been made with the approval and cooperation of this commission.

In addition to the films, a short program will be furnished by pupils from the Catholic, Lutheran and public schools.

The price for admission for all school pupils is five cents each, and fifteen cents each for other adults. This price is made possible only through the generosity of Mr. Leslie who is furnishing the theatre building without charge for the occasion.

There will be but one show, and it is expected that it will begin promptly at eight o'clock. E. S. T.

TAWAS WINS BASKETBALL CHAMPIONSHIP

After capturing the pennant for the second half of the basketball season last Friday by defeating the Standish Merchants, 29-24, the Tawas cagers ran wild in the first game of the play-off series to crush Standish, winners of the first half, by a 42-18 score. The contest took place Tuesday night at the Standish high school gymnasium. The second game of the series scheduled for Friday (tonight) was forfeited to Tawas by Standish, thereby giving Tawas the championship of the Northeastern Michigan league for the past season.

In Tuesday night's game the locals were slow getting started, but held their hosts on even terms the first quarter, the score being 3 to 3. In the second period they found the going a bit easier and were leading, 15-8, at the end of the half. In the third quarter the locals added a dozen points while holding Standish to a single point for the period. With but five minutes left to play Siglin had the misfortune to break his leg when he collided with the steel supports of one of the baskets.

The entire Tawas squad was causing trouble for the opposition. Robert DeLong led in scoring with seven field goals and a foul shot for a total of 15 points. George Lomas was a close second, being responsible for 13 points. Harris Lixey had six points to his credit along with his good work of guarding. Siglin drew the applause when he crawled up the backboard and shoved one in for a spectacular shot. John Forsten made two free throws but his work in holding the opposition was good. The two reserves, G. Roach and J. Wajahn, played good basketball the short time they were in the game.

Orr was the outstanding player on the Standish team, scoring six points. Standish, stale from a long schedule of games played, looked like anything but a contender for the cup.

"ARE YOU LISTENING?" IS RADIO LIFE COMEDY DRAMA

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has hewed close to J. P. McEvoy's story of "backstage" life in a radio studio and in doing so, succeeds in bringing to the screen a piece of entertainment under the title of "Are You Listening?" which comes to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, next Sunday and Monday, April 17-18.

By virtue of staying on the human side of life throughout, the bulk of the picture rests upon the players rather than the story. The players get beneath their characters. The theme is a mixture of "Sally, Irene and Mary" and a misunderstood husband. The latter is played by William Haines who was thought to have added another mark to his list of achievements. Haines departs from the usual wise cracking American sophisticate, and delivers a more sympathetic and serious portrayal of a young man who made only one mistake in life, that of becoming matrimonially obliged to serve and please a nagging wife played in a very heavy vein by Karen Morley. This brings Haines to Madge Evans for consolation who participates very effectively in a three pointed love affair. All of this is intermingled with a graphic description of the comedy and drama that goes on daily inside any large radio broadcasting station. Jean Herholt and Neil Hamilton were applauded as playboys.

COMPLETE HURON FOREST FIRE ORGANIZATION

The fire organization for the Huron National Forest has been completed, says G. K. Fenger, Forest Supervisor. Equipment has been placed in first class condition and distributed to points conveniently located for use in emergencies. Forest fire lookouts and guards have been engaged. The organization also includes a number of keymen and cooperators who in the past years have performed an important service in the suppression of fires.

While spring seems late this year, it is well known that the sand plains dry out quickly. The season of the year brings a greater number of people into the woods, which in turn creates a larger hazard. The opening date of the fishing season is not far away, and it is hoped that everyone will use care in the use of fire. Be careful of the smokes and the camp fires. Be sure they are out before they are left behind.

A glance at last year's fire record indicates that all of the fires were man-caused. More than fifty percent were caused by smokers and camp fires. All of these fires could have been prevented.

The burning permit laws adopted in 1927, which make it a requirement to secure a permit before burning brush, debris, grass, etc. in the fields or in the woods, has proved to be what is considered to be one of the most important fire prevention measures adopted in the state. The enforcement of this law has resulted in greatly reducing the number of fires caused by brush burning. To facilitate securing permits, every conservation officer and forest officer has been provided with necessary forms. Persons who intend to burn should get in touch with the nearest officer and secure a permit.

EAST TAWAS SCHOOL NEWS

Neil McKay won first place in declamations at the sub-district public speaking contest at Alpena last Friday night. He will next compete in the district contest at Saginaw.

Alfred Gurley won third place in the oratorical division. We congratulate these boys and those who assisted in their success.

At our April P. T. A. meeting held last Monday, April 11, Dr. Wray Congdon of the University of Michigan stressed the importance of education in our cultural, social, civic and economic activities. Education is the solution to our present dilemma. We must run our government for all and wealth must be distributed proportionately. Because of such unbalanced conditions Rome fell. Education is too valuable to hamper with and we must not allow hysteria to overcome us. We must not permit the cheap, less cultured and less educated to dominate and control public opinion. The senior high school orchestra rendered several selections and showed remarkable improvement. Mrs. Warren, president, presided.

New York, most popular city in the world as background for motion pictures, has been filmed and represented more than any other background, but it remained for "The Heart of New York," the Warner Bros. picture showing next Thursday and Friday at the State Theatre, to present the metropolis in an entirely different manner.

"The Heart of New York" presents the "big city," therefore, with all the fidelity possible to the camera eye. In addition to showing New York's streets and homes as they really are, the picture offers a novel treatment in having the dramatic and comedy action transpire in the home and business establishment of the leading players, through the windows of which the life outside can easily be seen.

East Side crowds, tenements, shops, pushcarts, streets and habits are pictured exactly as they are, the constantly shifting background emphasizing the action of the players.

Prominent in the cast are Joe Smith, Charles Dale, George Sidney, Ruth Hall, Anna Appel and Aline MacMahon.

MARCH IN ANOTHER DUAL CHARACTERIZATION AT STATE

His amazing facility for dual characterizations which made the talking version of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" one of the most thrilling of recent screen releases, stands Fredric March in good stead for his latest Paramount appearance, "Strangers in Love," showing at the State Theatre Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

March as himself and a twin brother, in a double personality part, is more genteel than in the spine-chiller, and has a great deal more business of pleasing romantic type.

The story, adapted from the novel, "The Shorn Lamb," relates in fast-moving and sharp-witted manner of the regeneration of a "black sheep," who gives up tramping over the world to come home and claim his rightful inheritance and a no mean share of romance.

Kay Francis, George Barbier, Juliette Compton, Lucien Littlefield, and Stuart Erwin in another of his enjoyable comedy partravels, round out the featured cast.

Settings are of New York and fashionable estates on Long Island.

The cast also includes such names as Ralph Morgan, Allan Dinehart, and the child actor, Dickie Moore.

Washington's Mount Vernon

Mount Vernon, America's Most Hallowed Shrine.

MOUNT VERNON is basking in the spotlight of the two-hundredth anniversary celebration of George Washington's birth. Normally the estate is visited by nearly 400,000 people annually, but 1932 pilgrimages are expected to break all records.

"Mount Vernon is pleasantly situated in a high, dry, healthy country 300 miles by water from the sea on one of the finest rivers in the world," said George Washington, in describing his estate to a friend in 1793.

At the foot of the hill topped by the beautiful colonial mansion of the first President, spreads the broad Potomac. The high, pillared east portico of the mansion offers a splendid view of the river and the wooded beauty of the Maryland hills beyond, though lofty trees which stud the estate's spacious lawns and steel terraces. The west front of the mansion faces the vast farm land once carefully supervised by its illustrious owner.

Uncertainty shrouds the origin of the present mansion. Certain of the records indicate that Lawrence Washington began its construction, while others seem to show that his father built it.

The first white proprietors of the site of Mount Vernon were two old prospectors, who by authority of the royal governor patented it nearly 300 years ago. They made no effort, however, to comply with the provision of the law which required them to place tenants on the property, and in consequence their title to 4,000 acres reverted to the commonwealth.

In 1674 the patent to the land, along with some additional acreage, was re-issued by Lord Culpeper to John Washington and Nicholas Spencer. Three Washingtons held the land before it came into the possession of Augustine, father of Lawrence and George, who purchased it from his sister for $900 and built the first house on it about 1734. This small dwelling was burned five years later, and its owner moved with his family to a farm near Fredricksburg, where he died in 1743.

George Went There in 1747.

Under the provisions of his will, the estate on the Potomac passed to Augustine's son Lawrence, who made his residence there and gave the place its name in honor of Admiral Vernon, of the British navy, under whom he had campaigned against the Spaniards in the West Indies and for whom he entertained a deep respect and affection.

In 1747 George Washington came to Mount Vernon to make his permanent home with his high-minded and cultured half-brother.

During Lawrence Washington's mastership, Mount Vernon began to assume a position of some importance in the colony. The able young proprietor was active in public affairs. He was appointed adjutant of his military district by the royal governor and several times represented his county in the Virginia house of burgesses.

Lawrence Washington died in 1752, and left Mount Vernon to his infant daughter, Sarah, who survived her father by only a few months. On her death the property went to George. Before he had reached his majority, George Washington was the sole proprietor of Mount Vernon, then an estate of 2,700 acres.

The Mount Vernon of 1752 and that of today, which is essentially as George Washington left it, were not much alike. The house was a simple one, without the present mansion's third story, banquet hall, library, or the chambers above these additions. Neither did it have the colonnades or the great portico overlooking the river. The old brick barn, built by Augustine Washington nearly twenty years earlier, had survived the fire that destroyed his house and is still standing, the oldest structure on the estate.

Like most Virginians of his day, the future Father of His Country was possessed of a lively land hunger, and by gradual acquisition he increased his Mount Vernon property from the 2,700 acres which he had inherited to a domain of approximately 8,000 acres.

The management of so great a holding presented large problems of administration, but no man in the colonies was better fitted than George Washington to meet them successfully. He was by natural instinct a farmer, and he found his greatest happiness in his marriage and the care and development of his home.

But Washington was not content to be a country gentleman who farmed in the disastrous manner then generally in vogue in Virginia. He early realized that extensive and unbroken tobacco planting was ruinous to the soil. At Mount Vernon he grew only so much tobacco as was absolutely necessary in an age when the soporific leaf served as a medium of exchange. Wheat, corn, turnips, and hay he raised extensively, pursuing a careful system of crop rotation and fertilizing his fields liberally.

First Experimental Farm.

Mount Vernon was the first real experimental farm on the North American continent. Washington made of his estate an agricultural laboratory, wherein he put to practical application the new theories of soil cultivation and stock breeding that were then being expounded successfully in England.

For years prior to the revolution, he experimented in a comparatively small way, and while the struggle for liberty put an end to these activities for a time, it enabled him frequently to come in contact with the methods of agriculture used in the other colonies. As a result, he accumulated much valuable information which he put to good use in later years.

His return after the war marked the beginning of an era of energetic effort to improve and beautify the place he loved so well. Plants, seeds, and cuttings were imported from Europe, while many more were received from friends, both at home and abroad.

In general Washington's day mules were not commonly used in America and those that were seem to have been of an inferior breed. He made earnest efforts to better the stock and was greatly aided in his experiments along this line by two gifts from abroad. Lafayette sent him two spirited jennies and a jack from the Isle of Malta, while the king of Spain also made him a present of a similar trio of high-bred Spanish stock.

Seed and soil tests were undertaken, as well as stock breeding, and the general engaged in a voluminous correspondence with the leading agricultural experts in Europe. To have achieved the productivity that he did from Mount Vernon's naturally none too fertile acres is a standing tribute to the agricultural genius of Washington, the farmer and, together with the many successful experiments he conducted there, justified the use of that title which pleased him most—"The First Farmer of America."

His Threshing Barn.

General Washington's capacity for the practical application of his advanced agricultural theories was in evidence in the large barn which he built on the Dogue Run farm. It was a 16-sided brick structure, the construction of which he supervised and the plans for which he drew. The bricks for it were baked on the estate, and among its unique features was a circular threshing floor, the boards of which were laid so as to leave regular and frequent interstices, through which the flailed or trodden grain could fall into bins built beneath.

A motive which probably impelled the master of Mount Vernon to include this innovation in his new barn was his abhorrence of wasted time. By providing a good threshing place indoors, he was able to be independent of the weather in preparing his grain and made it unnecessary for his slaves to remain idle because of rain or cold.

For greater convenience, the Mount Vernon estate was divided into five farms, ranging in size from the comparatively small mansion house farm to the river farm of 2,027 acres. On each of these there were slave quarters, an overseer's house, and barns and other outbuildings. On one of them, the Union farm, there was a brick barn, which Washington described in a letter to Arthur Young in December, 1793, as "equal, perhaps, to any in America, and for conveniences of all sorts, particularly for sheltering and feeding horses, cattle, etc., scarcely to be exceeded anywhere." An overseer was in direct charge of each of these farms, but General Washington did not leave the management entirely in their hands.

Just before the Revolution General and Mrs. Washington had come to the conclusion that the demands upon them for entertaining would necessitate an enlargement of their residence. Work actually began in the spring of 1775, but before it was more than well started the master was called away to take command of the army. His kinsman, Lund Washington, took over its active direction, but the interior construction work was not completed until 1786, after the general's return. The mansion, as it stood then and as it stands today, was of Virginia pine sheathing, designed and painted to resemble stone blocks, and built over a framework of oak. The foundations were of brick and real sandstone; the roof of cypress shingles.

Practically all the food consumed was raised on the place. The slaves subsisted largely on corn meal, pork, turnips, and a few other vegetables, all of which were home grown. For the use of the table in the great house, wheat, fruits, sheep, and cattle were raised.

The hospitality at Mount Vernon was bountiful and seldom did the Washington family sit down to dinner alone.

Who Was Who?

LA PERICHOLE

WHEN Thornton Wilder wrote the "Bride of San Luis Rey," he bestowed upon Lima, Peru, its setting, a wholly fictitious bridge, in exchange, perhaps, for the use of the romantic old city's most romantic old legend, that of Camille la Perichole. La Perichole of the book was a spectacular dancer and actress, very beautiful save in repose, when "one was startled to discover that the nose was long and thin, the mouth tired and a little childish, the eyes unsatisfied." Wilder tells us of her love affair with that wornout old grandee Don Andres, viceroy of Peru, and of her retirement to a convent after her beauty was marred by smallpox scars.

The real Perichole lived in the Eighteenth century. Of humble parentage, such was her voice and her gift of mimicry that she was a sensation on the South American stage while still in her early twenties, and the magnificent castle which her rakish lover, Manuel de Amat, Spanish viceroy in Peru in real life, gave her still stands and is used as barracks and prison by the Lima police. A Peruvian biographer describes her as "small of stature and somewhat plump, her movements full of vivacity. Her oval face was pale brunette and even during her most successful days pitted by smallpox marks, which she skillfully concealed with cosmetics. Her small, black eyes were lighted by expressive animation. Her nose, shall we say, snubbed, and a tiny mole on her upper lip gave her large mouth an irresistible charm.

JOHNNY APPLESEED

A BELOVED legend of our days of westward expansion is the story of Jonathan Chapman, known to every settler along the Pennsylvania and Ohio frontier, and in much literature since, as Johnny Appleseed. It was his life mission to plant along the paths newly heven into the wilderness apple trees to give welcome shade and refreshing fruit to the herds to come. He was an eccentric figure surely, with sacks of apple seeds salvaged each autumn from the cider mills, but the small boys of the frontier regarded him too highly to mock at him and even the Indians respected him, allowed him to wander at will unmolested and made it possible for him more than once to give the alarm for an impending attack.

Johnny Appleseed was born in Springfield, Mass., in 1768, son of a Revolutionary veteran and a graduate of Harvard. He traveled for a time in Virginia as a Swedenborgian missionary, and later with his brother joined the tide of migration west of the Alleghanies. One version of the legend has it that he combined in his wanderings his philanthropic purpose with a vain search for a lost sweetheart from whom he had been separated when she and her family joined one of the first expeditions to the west.

However that may be, it was at Pittsburgh, then a mere cluster of log cabins, that Johnny Appleseed was struck by the absence of fruit trees and commenced the life work which gave him his name. He died near Fort Wayne, Ind., in 1847.

THE BUFFALO NICKEL INDIAN

OUT in Glacier National park lives a Blackfoot Indian chief named Two Guns White Calf. For many years innumerable pictures of him have appeared in newspapers all over the country with some such caption as "You've His Portrait in Your Pocket—Perhaps." For popular legend has it that he is the original of the Indian on the buffalo nickel.

But the man who knows, if anyone does, who was the original of that famous likeness says that it isn't Chief Two Guns White Calf. That man is James Earle Frazer, a famous sculptor whose design was accepted by officials of the United States treasury when the new five-cent piece was issued so a 15 years ago.

Mr. Frazer has stated that he "had never seen Two Guns White Calf" which would seem to dispose of the legend of the Blackfoot being his model. More than that he goes on to say that he used the profiles of three Indians for his design. One was Chief Iron Tail of the Ogallala Sioux, another was Chief Two Moons of the Northern Cheyennes and the third was an Indian whose name he had forgotten. So instead of the "buffalo nickel Indian" having one original, it had three and two of them were very famous Indians, indeed—great chiefs among their people and leaders in the Custer battle in 1876 and other famous battles with both white men and red.

Depew's Business Life

Chauncey Depew was so well known as an orator and after-dinner speaker that many people lose sight of the fact that he was a prominent lawyer, bank director and railway executive. He served two terms in the United States senate and attended every Republican national convention from 1888 to 1924. In 1924 he was a delegate, but illness prevented his attendance.

"Cat Nap" Hour in a Modern Preventorium

THIS "cat nap" hour is one of the most important in the daily routine of the children at the modern new preventorium at Grasslands hospital in Valhalla. The institution is operated by Westchester county's department of public welfare as a part of the campaign to eliminate incipient cases of tuberculosis in the children. All of the sleep, work, and play of the little patients is mapped out for them.

STORY FOR BEDTIME

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

Oh, who shall say to the king, "Nay, nay?"
Not I! Not I!
Oh, who shall refuse the king his way?
Not I! Not I!
For the king is great and the king is strong,
And the king, you know, can do no wrong.

AT LEAST that is the way kings themselves seem to think. Too often they think that might makes right. You and I know better. But kings, poor things, never have had the advantages that we have. Too often they never have learned to do things for themselves, because they never have had to do things for themselves. They simply command that things be done for them. And so, because they have this power to command, they too often have come to think that they have a right to command anything that they please. They cannot understand that other people have rights.

It is some times this way with King Eagle. He likes fish, but he never has learned to catch them for himself. So because he likes fish and wants fish and is big enough and strong enough, he feels that he has a perfect right to take them from Plunger the Fish Hawk, and that Plunger should gladly give them up at his demand because he is the king. If he were not the king, I suspect he would be called just a plain robber. But no one thinks of calling the king a robber—that is, no one but Plunger.

When fishing is good and Plunger can catch plenty without half trying, he doesn't much mind giving up a few to King Eagle. He may grumble a little, but that is all. But when, as on this particular morning, he has fished patiently for a long time without catching a single fish, and then when he is almost ready to give up, does catch a fine, big fat fish, he thinks it rather too much to have King Eagle suddenly appear and demand that fish. So Plunger made up his mind that he would not give it up until he absolutely had to, in spite of King Eagle's orders to drop it.

Now, Plunger the Fish Hawk is a wonderful flyer, but, wonderful as he is, King Eagle is a still more wonderful flyer, and Plunger knows it. In spite of this he did his best to out-fly King Eagle. But the fish was big and heavy, and so of course Plunger could not fly his best. He dodged this way and that way, mounted high in the air and dropped suddenly, all the time working toward the Green Forest. But all the time King Eagle kept right with him without half trying, actually flapping his great wings in Plunger's very face, and all the time commanding Plunger to drop that fish. Plunger was about ready to give up when Mrs. Plunger arrived to help him. She flew in King Eagle's way and did her very best to interfere, all the time screaming at King Eagle and calling him a robber and thief and everything bad she could think of. She was trying to make King Eagle so angry that he would leave Plunger alone and try to punish her.

But King Eagle is altogether too smart to be fooled in any such way as that. He knew exactly what she was trying to do, and he paid no attention to her except to threaten her with his great claws when she ventured too near. He wanted that big fat fish and he meant to have it. At first he was simply mildly threatening. He did not want to hurt Plunger. Not that he cared particularly for Plunger. He didn't. His reason for not wanting to hurt Plunger was purely selfish, I suspect. He wanted that particular fish, but he would want more fish in the future, and if he hurt Plunger and disabled him, who would catch those fish for him in the future? So his whole idea was merely to frighten Plunger into dropping that fish.

"Stop Fooling and Drop That Fish!" Hissed King Eagle.

Plunger knew this, for Plunger is no fool, and so he held on and hoped with all his might that King Eagle would lose patience and give up. And at last King Eagle did lose patience, but with no intention of giving up. He began to lose his temper. Plunger saw a sudden change in the fierce eyes

THE MARKET PLACE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

TO THE market place of men Comes a buyer now and then With his purse of yellow gold, Money-wise and money-bold. Bright the money, brisk the trade, And the buyers, rich arrayed, Jingles, jingles ev'rywhere Gold to make the people stare.

"First, a woman. What's the price?"
"Love, and then love's sacrifice."
"Are not some not bought with love?"
"Yes, not worth the buying of."
"I would have a child, a son."
"Do you know the price of one?"
"No." "The price that you must pay,
Leaves you lonely, old and gray."

So he goes from booth to booth,
Finding some things bought with truth,
Some with kindness, oft in vain,
Some with sorrow, some with pain,
Some with patience, some with pray'r—
Not a single treasure there
Bought with anything as cold
And as poor as yellow gold.

Tiered Skirts Popular for the Evening Frock

Back interest still characterizes many of the new evening frocks, although most of them show little talk above the waistline. But the intricate strappings that mark and make the back decolletage and the bows at the waistline are very interesting and almost make the frock.

This season there will be many flounced, ruffled or tiered skirts done in the manner of Worth and much liked by women always. The ruffled skirt gives a soft look that is most attractive, especially for the younger woman, by whom it should be worn.

Printed Crepes

Printed silks and cotton crepes are coming back into vogue, but cautiously. Paris has turned a cold shoulder on prints, but American designers are using them for sleeves on black crepe dresses and for vestees, gilets, or boleros.

He's Gone to Measure Cosmic Rays

PROF. ARTHUR H. COMPTON of the University of Chicago has started on a journey that will take him to the mountain ranges of Panama, Peru, New Zealand, Australia, Hawaii and Alaska and on many peaks he will try to measure the intensity of cosmic rays with the instrument with which he is here seen. The device consists of a steel "ionization chamber" containing argon. Around the chamber are spheres of lead and copper weighing 200 pounds. Through these walls of metal no other but "cosmic rays" can penetrate. The effect of the rays will be to set up an electric current in the argon. This current will be measured with an electrometer.

LURE OF NORTH CALLS YOUTH

Explorers Tell of Riches in Great Bear Country.

Vancouver, B. C.—Almost due west of Stewart which nestles among the mountains at the end of the appendix-like Portland canal that separates Alaska from British Columbia lies the valley of the Ingenika. Immediately south is the country drained by the Omineca. All this area is some 580 miles further north where the Great Bear lake is the most highly mineralized section in the whole world.

For like Nordic St. Johns, crying out in a wilderness of degenerate softness, certain explorers have been wintering in Vancouver, preaching the gospel of pioneering and unfolding marvelous tales of the unrivaled wealth of the North. The result has been a wave of "north consciousness" throughout all British Columbia.

This North country, says these explorers, has been libeled and abused, just as all northerly areas have been since the beginning of time.

It is true that the North has long, cold winters, but its summers, three months of almost continuous sunshine, makes practically hothouse conditions for productive effort. Moreover the cold of the North is dry. Twenty below zero in dry cold is more tolerable than twenty above zero in the damp atmosphere of the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. But these are little things that can be overcome by the aid of science and the application of the pioneer spirit.

The point is that the Canadian North, northern British Columbia to the Northwest Territories, holds more mineral wealth than North America has yet produced. There is gold in the Ominecas that will materially enrich the world's supply. There is silver in the Ingenikas occurring in solid, almost pure blocks. In the Peace river country there is anthracite and wheat production enough for ten Americas.

In the Great Bear country there has been blocked out by hand $25,000,000 worth of pitchblende containing radium. Twenty tons of this ore was brought down in 1931 and it assayed as high as $8,600 a ton. The extent of the total deposit cannot even be guessed.

These are the tales, borne out by authentic facts and indisputable proofs, that these explorers are pouring into the ears of languorous Canadian youths whose romance has hitherto been derived from a synthetic tickling of the nerves with base adventures in stocks and bonds. So now, everywhere in the West, young men are throwing off bond consciousness to assume North consciousness.

Big Subterranean Water Supply Under Nebraska

Lincoln, Neb.—Nebraska has enough underground water in the south central part of the state to form a lake twice as large and twice as deep as the Great Salt Lake of Utah.

This is the estimate of Dr. A. G. Lugin, geologist of the University of Nebraska, who has made a survey.

The water is held in formation of sand and gravel made during the glacial periods, according to the geologist.

Nebraska is traversed by the Platte river from one end to the other. The waters from the Platte seep away underground, he said, to the rivers along the southern border of the state. This accounts for the dryness of the Platte during the summer months.

Tut-Ankh-Amen Shrines Placed in Cairo Museum.

Cairo.—The four magnificent gilt shrines which inclose the sarcophagus of Tut-Ankh-Amen's tomb have been placed in the Antiquities museum here.

The innermost shrine has already been re-erected and is on view. It is constructed of solid wood covered with gesso overlaid with gold leaf, with sacred figures in gold. The outside has been restored to its original brilliance, but it appears that Tut's artificer cheated his royal master by using an inferior quality of gold inside which has now oxidized and lost color. The shrine is 9 feet 6 inches long and 5 feet high.

Another recent addition to the Antiquities museum is a unique caricature of the heretical King Akhenaten. The caricature, showing the king with beard and whiskers, was found at Tell-el-Amara, suggesting that the king possibly became mentally deficient and was allowed to end his days obscurely when the center of religion and government reverted to Thebes.

Bandits Who Dynamite Fish to Be Cleaned Out

Hammerfest, Norway.—Following the example of the French government in cleaning up Corsican bandits, the Norwegian government intends to clean out the fishing bandits, who are raiding the banks off northern Norway with dynamite and destroying thousands of tons of valuable food every season.

War has been declared, and the coast guard and police forces are planning a campaign for protection of the industry, on which more than 90 per cent of the northern folk are dependent.

Since 1911 it has been illegal to kill fish by dynamite, but it always has been carried on.

U. S. Army Air Man Holds Four Flying Ratings

San Antonio, Texas.—Maj. William E. Kepner, World war balloonist and holder of the Distinguished Service cross, has been assigned to duty at Wright field, Dayton, following his graduation from the Air Corps Advanced Flying school at Kelly field here.

Major Kepner will become one of the few air corps officers to hold four flying ratings. Besides being rated an airship pilot, balloon observer, and airplane observer, he has qualified to pilot three types of airships—rigid, semi-rigid, and nonrigid.

Major Kepner has won both the national and international balloon races.

TRAP FISH WITH LIGHT

Electric Bulb Expected to Lure Rare Specimens.

San Francisco, Calif.—An electric light 3,000 feet below the surface of the Pacific ocean is rare enough, San Francisco scientists believe, to capitalize piscatorial curiosity and yield some equally rare marine specimens.

A recently developed device is going to be used by scientists aboard the Templeton Crocker yacht, Zaca, in a six months expedition to the Galapagos, Tres Marias and other island groups off the west coast of Mexico. It is a lighted bulb that can be lowered to a maximum depth of more than half a mile in the water.

The light globe is in the center of a lattice-like box. Curious fish and crustaceans can get through the openings to investigate the light, but they can't get out.

Fish that live too far under water to take an interest in a brilliantly-lit lot by Dr. Barton W. Everman of the California Academy of Sciences.

The light, Doctor Everman believes, will attract rather than repel all free swimming things, including microscopic sea life. He expects the Zaca to return next fall with thousands of new species of underwater life in preservatives, as well as many alive in specially constructed tanks.

The expedition will also devote some time to gathering of insects, birds and mammals native to the seldom visited islands in tropical waters.

Turkey and Persia Make English Legal Tongue

London.—The governments of Turkey and Persia have decided to adopt English as the language for their official communication. French, which has been the language of diplomacy in the east for centuries, is to be replaced.

The Turkish government is now canvassing England for celebrated English orientologists who are needed as teachers. Altogether, from 3,000 to 3,500 professors and instructors are wanted from Great Britain and the United States.

The two countries entered into discussions on the plan following the breakdown of Riza Khan's efforts to introduce the Roman alphabet in Persia two years ago. English will henceforth be taught in the schools of both countries. It is even said that the Koran will be translated and read only in English in Turkish schools.

MAY LIVE IN JUNGLE

Col. P. H. Fawcett, famous British explorer who disappeared into the trackless wilds of the Brazilian jungles seven years ago, may still be alive. The British consul general at Sao Paulo has announced a most definite clew as to the whereabouts of Fawcett and his son John, who accompanied him on the trip in 1925. Stephen Rattin, a jungle trapper, told the consul that he conversed with a man who claimed to be Fawcett, at an Indian camp approximately six weeks' journey from Sao Paulo.

Lloyd George Tries His Hand at Psalm Writing

London.—Solicitor, world-famous politician and statesman, journalist, and now psalm writer.

Such is the versatile record of Lloyd George, British war-time premier. During his recent stay in Cricieth, Wales, the veteran Liberal leader translated six verses of the psalm "Thy Kingdom Come, O God" into Welsh.

The psalm is a beautiful metrical version and will be sung at the Psalmody festivals of the Welsh churches and the Elsteddfodau.

A MESSAGE... TO THE CONSUMER WHO BUYS THE BEST

Unusual interest is being taken in the price of bread at this time in many places. Senseless selling at prices which cannot cover costs has been established by the chain stores. But the Baker who pays a premium for better flour, who uses only the best ingredients that money can buy and won't economize with inferior products, cannot compete with the chain store on price and so the Baker must bid for the bread trade on the basis of quality. If the Bakers were willing to sell bread at a loss to compete with the chain store on the price of bread, day after tomorrow the price of bread in the chain store would be still less, and they could continue until they would be giving bread away. The chain store can do that, but the Baker cannot, because the Baker has to make a profit on his one article or go out of business, while the chain store can make it on something else. As long as the Baker can not compete on price because the chain store will not let him, he must pursue the only advantage he can possibly have, and that is the producing of a higher grade of bread, and thus, incidentally, he is doing a lot more for humanity. Back of our customers' satisfaction lies wholesome, quality merchandise in pleasing variety, even in their every day bread, and it is up to us to supply it. Our customers get our bake goods fresh from the oven the day they are baked and not from a truck the day after. We wish to thank our many patrons for their loyal support to their city in patronizing home industry. Be a home town booster and do likewise.

"What did you do to Turner down in the jungle?" the lieutenant asked. "Double-crossed him," said Ashley. "What do you want details for? Double-crossed him. What else makes a man mad for ever? We were all crazy. What do you think we were doing? Keep on guessing. We were hunting for Inca gold. Beat that! I don't want even to think of it. You've got a general idea of the story. Guess at the rest of it."

"We didn't do much to him, considering who we were and where we were. Just stole his map—he had a map—all these things start with maps—and left him to die. He didn't have a chance: fever. The trouble was the tough old devil didn't die. I'll say for Blair that he did want to shoot Turner or knock him on the head, but that would have been murder, and, Lieutenant, you know how we feel about murder."

"We restrained Blair. He always was too downright. He said we'd go to get help for Turner. His map was no good. No map ever is. We just barely got out alive. And we couldn't have found our way back to him if we had wanted to. We didn't want to. I don't know how Turner ever found his way out. I never asked him, and he never mentioned it. All in a lifetime, both ways. You can always laugh it off or fight it out."

"You say you stole his map? What map?"

"The Inca-gold map; where it was buried. There's always a map with buried gold. That's the whole story. Turner was a man to do extraordinary things, crazy things. He liked them. He wanted his money hard, and he didn't object to making it hard. Generous-fisted devil, but he liked gold. I guess he liked the look and feel of it. He liked to hear the ring of one of his own double eagles on a bar. He liked to feel the weight of a money belt around his waist, and if he was carrying it in a tough gambling town or oil field or mining camp he was happier. A great guy. He was the fellow who was born to hunt the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow and probably find it. Free-handed fellow, and square."

"The square fellow you double-crossed," the lieutenant said. "You make murder seem like a public duty."

"Isn't it the truth? Too bad you can't always pick the fellow for your dirt. You have to take them as they come. Spanish gold, that was what Turner was headed for. Some fellow had sold him a map. He wasn't the only one who ever went for buried treasure. They're at it yet. There are some fools hunting for that Inca gold right now. They'll keep at it. Couldn't you get a little excited by a map showing Spanish gold, Inca gold? Turner picked up a gang and went for it. Most of us were broke. He got Blair and me off a cattle boat at New Orleans. Roberts had been trying to stake himself for another whirl at the gambling joints. Clayton he had found loafing in St. Louis. Clayton wasn't broke. He had been with Turner before, on some Alaskan prospecting that didn't plan out. I think he found Trembley and Brown in Memphis contemplating some way of filling their pockets from some other fellow's pockets. There wasn't much to it. All of us took Spanish gold on the brain. Turner got sick in the jungle. We stole his map because he wouldn't give it up, and left him dying because he was dying and helpless. Clayton had some idea of trying to get help to him when we wouldn't and couldn't carry him out. We wouldn't, because it was no use. The map wasn't any use, either. We were in luck to get out alive, and we weren't much alive. The trouble was Turner didn't die, and he did get out. Well, the boys have been paying for it. Turner got out. That was a break for him. Let's turn around now and look at Mr. Blair. Maisie, about how long did you find Mr. Blair a dependable citizen?"

"Please don't, Howard," the woman said. "Excuse me, Maisie. Sorry, but you'll not mind if I say it was about a month. No reflection on you. It's just Acton. Where is the old devil sitting? Oh, there he is, see, over there. Never mind looking at Acton. We've seen him before. Give his lady a look. Beauty? You don't know the half of it. I do. I introduced Mr. Blair to that lady. When less than a month from now Acton tells that lady he thinks he'll be on his way, he will be but he won't know where. Nemesls, Maisie, Acton is on his way to the coroner. There you are, Lieutenant, murder as plain as day. Poor Acton, no chance. Do you want to take me in charge? Mr. Blair hasn't a chance. He hasn't half the chance of Clayton in the Dutch Mill, of Brown against the hunting knife, of Trembley with the red lights out, or of Roberts with the open window. What he's up against is temperament, his own and the lady's. I know the lady, and he doesn't. The sucker never gets an even break. And why should he? Maybe you think you ought to warn him. Why not? You're a policeman."

Here's a crime shaping up under your nose. He'd laugh at you. I don't know what the lady would do, but I think that just at this moment she'd laugh at you. I think they'd have you sit down and amuse them. She might swear at you in three or four languages. She is adept. Funny thing! The first time I saw that lady she still had the knife in her hand. I don't want to elaborate, but it was red. There was a drop which was slowly growing big enough at the point to fall. Fascinating sort of thing to watch. The gentleman in error was on the floor. That was in Sumatra. The verdict in effect was that the gentleman was not only a d—n scoundrel but a d—n fool. Coming back from Hawaii who was on the boat but this tiger-lily. They're going to dance. Watch them."

"Do you know the lady?" Stanton asked Maisie.

"I never saw her. I've never heard of her."

"Is Ashley kidding us?" the lieutenant asked.

"How should I know? Do you mean did Howard see her with the knife and a drop forming on it? Maybe."

"There's your exhibit, Lieutenant," said Ashley, turning half around. "You're a remarkable detective, don't you know. You're the only one who ever started with the solution of a series of murders before they were committed and knew just what to expect before it happened, and then couldn't do anything about it after it had. There's Delilah for you, out stepping with Samson."

CHAPTER XIV

The Turner Will Is Administered

"It might interest you," was about the last thing Ashley said to Stanton, "to know that I'm going to take care of Maisie. That girl has always fixed her clock so she never had even a good chance at a breach-of-promise suit, and of course she's never been within miles of alimony or a dowry. She's been a fine girl, but prudence hasn't been her partner, and she won't have much she can take to the bank. So Maisie and I will regard ourselves as the surviving veterans of this war. What would you think of us settled down in an Italian garden by an Italian lake, with poplars and cypress? An Italian moon and Maisie playing Chopin. Home from the wars."

April 17 the lieutenant had a letter from Mr. Darling. After greetings, he wrote:

"You may or may not know that Blair and Ashley are dead. If you know that, you have all the information regarding it that I have. A cablegram from Juan les Pines, Alpes Maritimes, France, signed Maisie and received yesterday, tells me that Blair and Ashley have been shot and killed. I recall that you inquired of a woman named Maisie when you met Roberts, Ashley and Blair here with me, and it is my recollection that one of them told you she was Mrs. Arthur Trembley. It must be she who has cabled me. I am inclined to accept it as true. It was expectable. It is credible. I might confirm by inquiry of the Surete General, which would be a reasonable inquiry if there were more reason for it, whatever that may mean, but so far as my function as trustee is concerned I have only to wait until I hear or do not hear from them in proper form and time."

"Nevertheless I am curious, albeit I am also convinced; but here is another thought. I have seen nothing of this in the news. I read the papers with the fidelity of an old man who keeps contact with the world by reading. It seems odd that Blair and Ashley could kill each other or be killed without a paragraph of news escaping to this country. I doubt that they have been inconspicuous with their considerable income and their flashy temperaments."

"Even if our intriguing little story of vengeance is not known abroad I'd think the murder of two Americans of wealth would have produced a line or two on this side. Possibly it was printed and I overlooked it. Possibly you could have some channel of information strictly and wonderfully secret. You see how I am impressed by the potency of the police. That impression is derived from admiration of you. Justify me by letting me know if you have any information as to this liquidation of my old friend Tom Turner's passion for getting even, and believe me your servant to command and your friend."

"Most cordially,
"Asa Darling."

The news was not astonishing to Stanton, but it was news. He found he was sorry that Ashley had not survived, an odd regret, but one which could be evoked. The lieutenant telegraphed Mr. Darling that he had no information, and his inquiries at headquarters found that none had been given the Chicago department by the French police.

The next morning, April 18, he read in the Tribune a short story from Paris, which gave the outlines of the event. The relation of Blair and Ashley to the Turner will had been forgotten or was unknown, and the police intelligence as to the deaths of the two Americans was delayed in reaching the news distributing centers.

Stanton read that an American named Blair had shot a fellow countryman named Ashley in a quarrel over a woman who had shot and killed the murderer. The woman was thought to be an Eurasian. She was hysterical, almost maniacal, in the custody of the police.

An odd reversal of all expectations, Stanton thought—Ashley killed by Blair, Blair killed by the woman. The Turner will had been administered. The outraged gold-hunter had accomplished his full purpose. He could rest easy. The men who had injured him had been extinguished by his purpose arising out of his grave. He had had fun.

April 25 Stanton had a letter from France. It was post-marked Juan les Pines. The envelope was addressed in a feminine-hand, but the letter enclosed was from Ashley, who had written:

"I have a sort of affection for you, Loot. You've been so d—n square in a situation which could drive a copper either nutty or crooked or both. I came to like you, you old fathead. Thank me for nothing, you say. So sav I. But the thing has become so comic that I must tell you about it. I am your boy friend who didn't have any idea how deep the water was. Acton has broken all precedents. He remains infatuated. His gal has had a million names. Let's call her now Marcella. Laugh this off. Acton is faithful, and she is trifling with me. Maisie urges me to get away. I can't. The girl is poison to me, but the plot interests me. The whole thing is going against law, order and predestination. How can anyone live in so crazy a world? You're a nice copper. I want you to get this. Never trust logic or experience or even probability or plausibility. Good crimes always deny everything. But then you know that. You're a good copper or I wouldn't be writing you. Watch your step. What do you think of me as the victim of Marcella's affection? Maisie says go away. So it may be. But not just now. Good old Blair is just a fathead. Once a fathead always a fathead. He hasn't got a chance. He's a nice old brute, but he'll do for himself some way, even if it isn't going just as I expected it to be and as it should have been, and I can't tear myself away until it happens. You know the world's big enough only for one of us."

"Delilah for You, Out Stepping With Samson."

In the following mail a letter came from Maisie herself. She explained that Ashley had written the day he was killed and had laid the letter aside intending to address an envelope later.

Ashley had been genuinely kindly, she said. It was hard to say whether he was the most twisted or the least twisted of the oblique characters involved in the will. On one occasion you took one view, on another occasion another view. But whatever else he might be he had a vein of kindness. She continued:

"I had tried to persuade him to go away. He would agree but delay. Even before we left the United States anyone could see that Blair was out of form. They will all fall once. Acton had his experience coming and long overdue. This girl was something he for once seemed to want to keep. She looked like a reptile to me, and I think Howard was truthful when he said she was poison to him but she was beautiful. That doesn't quite seem the word. And it wouldn't be lovely. It had to be something poisonous, and she did not try much to disguise it. Probably that is why Blair was infatuated. He may have fallen really in love with the little brute because she was vile and dangerous."

"I do not know whether she really was attracted to Howard or just wanted to make trouble. Maybe he was the type of man who could fascinate her, just as Acton was the type of man who could be fascinated by her.

"If he'd been interested in the girl Maisie would have pulled her own fist down and amuse them. She might swear at you in three or four languages. She is adept. Funny thing! The first time I saw that lady she still had the knife in her hand. I don't want to elaborate, but it was red. There was a drop which was slowly growing big enough at the point to fall. Fascinating sort of thing to watch. The gentleman in error was on the floor. That was in Sumatra. The verdict in effect was that the gentleman was not only a d—n scoundrel but a d—n fool. Coming back from Hawaii who was on the boat but this tiger-lily. They're going to dance. Watch them."

An odd reversal of all expectations, Stanton thought—Ashley killed by Blair, Blair killed by the woman. The Turner will had been administered. The outraged gold-hunter had accomplished his full purpose. He could rest easy. The men who had injured him had been extinguished by his purpose arising out of his grave. He had had fun.

April 25 Stanton had a letter from France. It was post-marked Juan les Pines. The envelope was addressed in a feminine-hand, but the letter enclosed was from Ashley, who had written:

The lady was right as to the French police. Commissioner Russell had a cablegram of inquiry which Stanton answered by letter giving an outline of the Turner will crimes and making plain Maisie's lack of complicity. That, he thought, might help her.

Another letter brought young Mr. Turner back to mind, being from him. He inquired if any of the men involved in his father's will had depended upon what he was suffering from what had been caused by it. He wrote:

"You know I would not have interfered. If I could, to prevent my father and these men having it out to his satisfaction, but as to other people, that is an entirely different matter. We are to have so much money that it will be almost disturbing, and I know that if my father thought that in having it out with these men he had hurt a canary bird or kitten belonging to one of them he would have been hurt himself. So let me know, Lieutenant, if you know of any canaries. We think we'll add another half-acre to the garden and maybe buy a Vermont farm. Drop in on us some time. Mr. Darling sends you his regards and expresses his hope to see you again."

Stanton sent the young man the name and story of Maisie and had in return a telegram reading, "Good. Get me her address." Later in the year, in July, the lieutenant was back in the East, on leave from the Chicago department and on a duty which contained more personal distress than he had experienced in any other police case. Young Turner had implored him to come. Mr. Darling and his servant Pompey had been found dead in the Newburgh home.

It was the opinion of Mr. Darling's physician that his patient had died of a heart attack as he sat in his chair. Pompey had fallen in the hall, his head resting on a chair. An injury at the base of his skull could indicate a blow. It could also be explained as a consequence of his fall. It seemed fairly incredible that Mr. Darling and his servant had died hand in hand, as it were, of natural causes, but it would have been accepted as the fact if it had not been found beyond question that the house had been entered. On Mr. Darling's table—and this was the wholly inexplicable thing—was a hunting knife which opened a blade at each end, four-inch blades in a silver-mounted teakwood handle with a silver shield inset and carved in exquisite and minute lettering with the words: "España! a sangre, a carne, a feugo, a saccro"—the cry of the Spanish troops in the Fury of Antwerp. For whatever might be the implications of its being on the table of Mr. Darling's room when he and Pompey were found dead, it was the knife on which Preston Brown had been killed in the hunting lodge of Little Buttes des Morts in northern Wisconsin on the banks of Lac Vieux Desert at the rise of the Wisconsin river.

[THE END.]

Valuable, but Hard to Get
The Indian rhinoceros is now a comparatively rare animal and is found only in the plains region of Assam, in northeastern India. It lives in marshy grass jungles, where it is fond of wallowing in the mud. Its chief foods are canes and shrubs. The reasons for the great expense involved in bringing a specimen to this country for exhibition are its rare occurrence, the fact that it can be hunted only with elephants and the difficulty of capturing and shipping safely so large an animal.

DAIRY

TO END MOISTURE
IN MILK HOUSE

Proper Insulation Will Put Stop to Nuisance.

A subscriber complains that moisture collects on the ceiling of his milkroom, which is built as an addition to his dairy stable and with a self-closing door. He asks how he can plaster the ceiling and walls.

The moisture condensation is due to lack of insulation and lack of ventilation. A layer of good sheet insulation on top of the ceiling joists would take care of the insulation of the ceiling pretty well. Then you should have about a 10 by 10 or 10 by 12 out-take flue starting at the ceiling and going up through the roof and capped with a regular barn ventilator. This should have a valve at the bottom operated by a chain, so that it can be partly or entirely closed, as may be necessary to keep the temperature where you want it.

Also your walls probably need insulating before you plaster. The patent plaster board helps a good deal, but an extra sheet of insulation if the walls are of blocks, or the extra sheet with the studding spaces filled with dry sawdust or shavings if of frame construction, will add a lot to the warmth. But if you insulate the ceiling and put in a ventilator, you probably will have no further trouble.—Wallace Farmer.

To Feed Grain Properly One Must "Know" Herd

Feeding grain economically to cows requires in the first place that we know what each cow in the herd is producing. This, in turn, means that we must weigh the milk from each cow at fairly frequent intervals and have samples of the milk tested for butterfat. Granted that we know the production of each cow, a rough and ready rule is to feed one pound of grain to each four pounds of milk produced by Holstein cows testing around 3.5 per cent fat. Extra good producers—say cows producing 50 to 60 pounds of milk daily—will require a larger proportion of grain than this and cows near the end of lactation period and giving 15 pounds or less will not require as much. There will never be a rule so good that the feeder will not have to rely somewhat on his own judgment. An Ayrshire cow, giving richer milk, might have a pound of grain to three and a half pounds of milk, a Guernsey one to three and a Jersey one to two and three-quarters pounds.

Healthy calves are advocated as a sure source of healthy, producing dairy cattle. Dairymen who add to their herds by purchase frequently increase their troubles, according to Dr. J. P. Iverson, chief of the California division of animal industry, because it rarely happens that healthy, producing cows can be bought cheap. Doctor Iverson stresses that only good calves from cows of known production and good type should be raised. Such calves, he says, when segregated soon after birth and fed milk, pasteurized, or known to be from tuberculosis-free cattle, become desirable dairy cows, free from disease.

Raise Only Good Calves

Iverson, chief of the California division of animal industry, because it rarely happens that healthy, producing cows can be bought cheap. Feed More Grain

A study of market prices gives a lot of food for thought just now, especially for the dairy farmer who buys a lot of his feed. A couple of years ago nutrients could be purchased most cheaply in clover hay, while timothy hay was fourth on the list at $13 per ton. Now, according to computations of a contemporary, timothy is the most expensive of feeds and red clover is a more expensive feed than oats, wheat, alfalfa hay, barley, gluten feed and shalts. The change in price levels means that farmers can profitably cut down on the amount of hay fed and feed grain more liberally.

Watch Profits

A recent test at the Mitchell, Nebraska, experiment station shows that cows on roughage alone produced milk and butterfat cheaper but the total value of the product above feed cost was less than with cows which got grain in addition to the roughage. James A. Holden, who conducted the test, sums it up by saying that the cows receiving grain paid more than the market price for it. He adds that farmers having cows capable of producing over 300 pounds of butterfat for a year on silage and hay alone will find that it pays to add a good grain mixture at present feed prices.—Successful Farming.

Eradicating Tuberculosis

During the year ending December 31, 1931, 8,446 initial tests were conducted upon 121,764 cattle, according to the January 21 report of Dr. E. T. Faulder, director of the bureau of animal industry of the New York department of Agriculture and markets. The report goes on to say that 43,089 reactors were revealed, or 35.3 per cent. 3,632 herds were found infected, or 42.3 per cent. It also states that 4,814 herds revealed no tuberculosis.—American Agriculturist.

The teachers of Isco County enjoyed a treat last Friday at the Community Building in a r'ch program of wide scope. Community singing was hearty, led ably in the morning by F. A. Reagan and in the afternoon by Supt. H. T. Swanson. The East Tawas high school band directed by Miss Helmie Huhtala played several selections which were appreciated by a large audience. Mrs. Nyda Campbell Leslie rendered a group of songs in her artistic manner which always meets genuine response. Health Activity of the Children's Fund of Michigan in Unit 2 was reported by our county nurse, Miss Myrtle Cowgill, and sanitary inspector for the four counties, F. A. Reagan. His report gave Isco county first place in the four counties, which should make us justly proud. Former county school commissioners, J. K. Osgerby and Mr. Campbell, each recalled the hardships of former years in lack of good roads and conveniences. The life long friendships built up during those pioneer days are the basis for many of life's choicest appreciations. They spoke of the struggle which many had to make for an education in those days of 1880-90. Mr. Campbell defined Poverty today as "the necessity of going without what our forefathers never had." Each gentleman was greeted with hearty appreciation. The main part of this intellectual feast was the splendid discussions on The Teaching of Geography by Miss Jessie McLean, assistant superintendent of the Training School at Central State Teachers College. At the Family Theatre we were treated to a comprehensive program of conservation of our forests by U. S. Forest Supervisor Fenger. He stressed the need for thoughtful people if we are to learn to be conservationists. Two exceptional reels were shown which presented the need to build up an appreciation of our beautiful forests. It was a day well spent for the educators of our county. All the rural teachers and nearly all the village and city teachers were present.

Why buy 2 roofs—when one will do?

IF you buy a roof of permanent, fireproof Johns-Manville Asbestos Shingles, it will last as long as your house. It will be as good in 1960 as the day it is put on.

But if you buy a roof that will rot, rust or burn, you may have to buy two or even THREE roofs in the next 30 years.

We will be glad to inspect your roof and give you a free estimate. You will be interested in our deferred payment plan, too.
