THE TIMBERJACKS

SERMONETTE

Yes, it was one of those spooky nights, when the jobbers sun gave that trembling appearance to all objects and the dim shadows shook as troubled with icy breezes from a northern clime. It was on such a night when two new young timberjacks were returning from a nearby town on the hardwood trail to camp. It was their first visit from the camp and their young happy spirits or some other spirits obtained in town caused them to sing as to an audience a mile away. Suddenly on both sides of the trail black animals bounded to their feet and joined in the song with wof, wof, wof-g-h. wof. The youngsters if they had been twin brothers could not have solved the problem of a quick get away more simultaneously and so unanimously. A safety zone was their heart's desire and they started to beat the world's record of time for the human feet. The animals took this for a challenge that a two-footed animal could outstep a

PROPOSED BANK LAW WOULD BE BENEFICIAL

By Congressman Roy O. Woodruff Tenth Michigan District

While, of course, some banks fail because of mismanagement or dishonesty on the part of officials, by far the greater number fail because of unusual and unexpected demands made upon them by the depositors for their money. This situation is brought about usually by the psychology produced by falling prices and unemployment. It is perfectly natural for an individual whose money, perhaps his life's savings, is in some bank, to immediately attempt to protect his funds by withdrawing them and either placing them in the postal savings or keeping them in a place of his own devising.

The cumulative effect of such withdrawals during times of depression has been strikingly demonstrated during the last three years. On December 31, 1929, there were 24,630 banks in the United States with aggregate deposits of $55,289,000,000, while on December 31, 1931, two years later, there were only 19,968 banks with $46,261,000,000 of deposits. The bank failures and this tremendous shrinkage in deposits was brought about almost entirely by the existing lack of confidence in these institutions. This was due to the fact that the depositors have no assurance that they can realize one hundred per cent on their savings, regardless of what happens to the banks.

Congress in the past has provided laws under which it was thought, at the time of adoption, proper safeguards for depositors were incorporated. The daily administration of the Insolvent Bank Division in the Treasury Department is such that every action taken is for the protection of the depositors. Secondary consideration only is given the stockholders. However, recent experience has demonstrated the inadequacy of existing law, and the Banking and Currency Committee of the House, within the last few days has reported the Steagall Bill, H. R. 11362.

This bill is most comprehensive in its provisions and the fund set up thereby, together with the confidence that such a fund will instill in the minds of the people will, in the judgment of those of us interested in the measure, make improbable and perhaps impossible a recurrence of bank failures such as we have seen in the past few years. Already the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, of which I expect to write next week, has through its operations almost entirely stopped bank failures. The Steagall bill provides that all banks belonging to the Federal Reserve System, whether operating under national or state charters, may take advantage of the provisions of this law. It further provides for the creation of a board to consist of the Secretary of the Treasury, the Comptroller of the Currency, and three members to be appointed by the President with the

GLEE CLUBS WILL PRESENT OPERETTA, "DAUGHTERS OF MOHAMMED," WEDNESDAY

On Wednesday evening, May 4th, the Glee Clubs of the Tawas City high school will present the operetta, "Daughters of Mohammed," at the State Theatre.

The operetta is a story of three beautiful princesses, daughters of Mohammed, King of the Moors in Granada. The mother, a Spanish lady, had died soon after the daughters were born and they were cared for by the Spanish nurse, Kadiga. Having been warned by astrologers that his daughters would cause him more grief than joy, Mohammed had ordered them to be very carefully guarded. However, the beautiful princesses meet three gallant cavaliers, and therein lies the story.

Every part of the operetta, including elaborate costumes and proper stage settings, has been carefully planned.

By taking tickets to Keiser's Drug Store, reserved seats can be received with no additional cost from Saturday to Wednesday.

Following is the cast: Kadiga, duenna of the three princesses—Dora Mark; Zayda, Zorayka, Zorahayda, the three princesses—Viola Burtzloff, Elsie Mueller and Leona Ulman, respectively; Hessian Baba, a prison guard—Glen Barnes; Cavalier in Red, Cavalier in Green, Cavalier in Blue, the three cavaliers—Nathan Lincoln, Arthur Wendt and James Mark, respectively; Mohammed, King of Moors—Arnold Hosbach; Attendants to King—Marvin Mallon, Martin Kasischke, Albert Quick, Earl Davis, Louis Frank, Clifford Boomer; Heralds—Jack Mark, Arnold McLean; Slave Girls—Annie Metcalfe, Ila Sims, Sylvia Koskie, Agnes Roach, Lela Howitson, Mildred Quick, Nelda Mueller, Norma Kasischke, Dorothy Ulman, Lucille Krumm, Zadie Bellenger, Rose Watts, Mildred Remmert, Malchis Gray, Beatrice Frel; Special Chorus—Lyle Robinson, Mary Krumm, Rose DePotty, Evelyn Frank, Arlene Leslie, Ernestine Cecil, Nyda Moore, Bessie Rouiller, Geraldine Fox, Jessie King, Blue Birds—Lucille DePotty, Norma Musolf, Betty Davis, Margaret Davis, Joy Smith, Isabelle Desse; Black Dancers—Frank Sims, Myrton Leslie, Herbert Cox, Myrle Bowen, Robert Roach, Charles Cecil; Spanish Dancers—Phyllis Bigelow, Janet Keiser; Veil Dancer—Patricia Braddock; Mrs. A. "THE WET PARADE" HERE DIRECT FROM DETROIT

The Family Theatre brings another big smash hit, "The Wet Parade," to you on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, May 1, 2 and 3.

This film will throw the whole country into violent arguments. Prohibition is the theme of the Upton Sinclair novel adapted with such realism and daring that no angle of the "drink" problem is avoided. The curse of liquor before prohibition is shown as clearly as are the evils arising from the Volstead Act. You will even see every detail of the manufacture of "imported" bootleg.

Yet, all told simply, dramatically. Dorothy Jordan, as the girl, sees Lewis Stone, the father, die of alcoholism, and her brother, Neil Hamilton, inherit the taste. They, along with Walter Huston, Wally Ford and Jimmy Durante, give fine performances. You'll probably think the picture proves your personal opinion—but don't miss it.

Probate Order Sustained by Judge Dehnke

Judge Herman Dehnke, in a decision made Saturday, sustained the probate court order made by Probate Judge David Davison determining the heirs of the late Charles Ballard of Plainfield township and the distribution of the estate.

Florence Haeske of Saginaw, a daughter of Mr. Ballard, questioned the legality of the marriage of her father and her step-mother, Mrs. Rose Ballard. She appealed against the distribution of the estate of Charles Ballard as made in probate court, claiming that Mrs. Rose Ballard was not an heir.

Judge Dehnke decided that the marriage was legal according to both the laws of Canada, where the marriage was made, and the state of Michigan, and that Mrs. Rose Ballard is an heir and entitled as a widow to one-third of the estate of Charles Ballard as determined in probate court.

As a matter of interest, the appellant, Mrs. Haeske, and other heirs, during the three years the case has been pending, have had four different out of county lawyers representing them. Attorney N. C. Harting represented Mrs. Ballard and the estate.

ODD FELLOWS OBSERVE 113TH ANNIVERSARY

The 113th anniversary of the Odd-fellows was celebrated last Wednesday evening by Baldwin Lodge and Irene Rebekah Lodge of East Tawas. A sumptuous banquet was served at 5:30 in the dining hall of the Odd-Fellow Temple. Following the banquet was held the regular session of Irene Rebekah Lodge. The President of the Rebekah Assembly of Michigan, Carrie Blanchard, gave an interesting talk. Past Grand Master Eugene Hanson also gave a short address at this meeting. After the Rebekah lodge session a joint meeting of OddFellows and Rebekahs was held in the lodge hall and an interesting program given. Dr. C. F. Klump had charge of the program, and his ready wit in his speeches introducing speakers and musical numbers kept the audience in good humor throughout.

Visitors from out of the city who figured in the program were, the President of the Rebekah Assembly of Michigan, Carrie Blanchard, who gave a very fine address, Bruce Rogers of Detroit, Grand Treasurer of the Grand Lodge of Michigan, I. O. O. F., who gave an inspiring address, and Conrad Sinney, pianist of American Eagle Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Detroit, who favored the audience with several piano selections and also led in community singing. Mr. Sinney pleased the audience by rendering any favorite numbers called for, popular or secular. Another feature of the program was a vocal trio of the local OddFellow lodge, George Klump, Norman Merschel and Roy DePotty. Many beautiful selections were given by the trio. They finished with an original and very stirring number on OddFellowship composed by George Klump. In the absence of Rev. John Alford, who was to have taken part in the program, his mother, Mrs. Ed. Alford, closed with prayer.

The local Rebekah degree team journeyed to West Branch the following day and was accompanied by the President. The work was put on for West Branch and was very highly commended by the President. In her address at East Tawas she stated that the OddFellow and Rebekah lodges of this city have been unusually active during these trying times and in their increase in membership and their activities they are considered the most active lodges in the state of Michigan.

During their stay in East Tawas, Carrie Blanchard was entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Hanson, and Grand Treasurer Bruce Rogers and Conrad Sinney at the home of Dr. Klump.

Ancestral Estate Bait Is Still Lure to Yanks

Mythical Fortunes in England Tempt Suckers.

London.—The biggest piece of international bait ever dangled before suckers at home or abroad still finds poor fish who swallow the hook, the line, and the sinker. It's that old morsel—the ancestral estate in England.

Wails go up periodically as demands, appeals, threats, and claims come by letter from the United States to officials in London, putting forward arguments based on the front page of the family Bible and the wheedlings of slick confidence men. Thousands of Jennings, Blakes, Hydes, and Drakes, not only in the United States but in Canada, Australia, South Africa, and points both east and west believe they have a right to a castle, horses, dogs, vast acres, and piles of money in the bank, but the clever "estate lawyers" who dupe the ignorant into buying shares in such ventures have found most of their victims in America.

Another warning has just been issued by the American consulate general here. It is a typed, single spaced document seven pages long explaining why attempts to recover such estates are mistakes.

"Large unclaimed estates believed by many to exist in England are in practically every instance entirely mythical," says the consul general's memorandum, which is headed "A Warning," and reports of vast sums awaiting claimants in the bank of England or dormant in the courts of chancery are altogether without foundation.

"The collection of money which, it is claimed, is for the purpose of taking legal proceedings to secure for heirs alleged estates of fabulous value in Great Britain has become almost as established a business as that of selling spurious securities to the uninformed. The consulate general in London receives a number of letters each week, sometimes five or six in one day, with regard to nonexistent estates or estates that have been settled for so many years that no British court will reconsider decisions made, in some cases, more than a century ago."

The statement points out that promoters of these fake schemes for reclaiming supposed estates have sold many "units" for $100 each, and where prospective victims were unable to find that much cash, fractions of units, "Occasionally," it says, "a case is brought before the courts, but the costs are comparatively small and entirely out of proportion to the sums collected as advance fees."

A list enumerating "a few" of the alleged estates about which the consulate is frequently consulted and which actually do not exist was embodied in the statement. They are those of Sir Francis Drake, Hyde, Jennings (Jannigs or Jennens), Patrick Rucker, Hedges, Mosher, Weber (Webber), Duke of Argyle, James Dixon, Helen Sheridan Blake, Lawrence-Townley (Lawrence Townsen), Walmstey, Jacques, Gen. Richard Winn, Bonnet (Bonet), and Page and Green or Greene. The Jennings and the Blake estates are the favorites, and a week seldom passes without receipt of several letters from claimants to these "estates."

"It is a popular error that funds of unclaimed estates are left on deposit in the Bank of England," the memorandum observes. "This institution keeps a record of unclaimed government securities and dividends, and no other kind of unclaimed property."

In general, the consulate general statement advises all persons contemplating such action to consult expert legal opinion first. And it warns that even if unimpeachable evidence of genealogical claims is furnished, the probability is that the estate will prove too small to pay for the suit, even in the event of success.

Norwegians Score as Most Generous Tipsters

London.—Scandinavians are the world's most generous tipsters, hotel servants say.

A poll among waiters, bellhops, chambermaids and other employees of London's leading hostels showed Norwegians to be the most welcome guests. Other northern European visitors tipped almost as well.

Spaniards were a good second and Germans not far behind. The French and Italians, however, are considered "tight."

Americans, it was found, could not be classified. They tip extravagantly or hardly ever.

Inventor 'Cracks Up' Plane in Spite of Cops

Cannes.—French police for months have been trying to keep Albert Sauvent from cracking up his airplane—but he foxed them and succeeded.

Sauvent, an inventor, had been prevented from testing his own "crash-proof" airplane. Police watched him closely. But he escaped their vigilance long enough to stage an intentional crack-up.

Sauvent, who emerged unhurt from the wreck, pronounced the crack-up "perfect."

SEASONABLE GOOD THINGS

SO MANY housewives like to serve a meat loaf, because the man of the home can make no reasonable excuse for not wishing to carve it.

Ham Loaf.—Take two pounds of smoked ham, one and three-fourths pounds of lean fresh pork, one green pepper and one-half an onion, all chopped fine. Mix with one cupful of bread crumbs, two beaten eggs, one cupful of milk and seasoning of salt and pepper. Make a loaf. Place in a pan, cover with cracker crumbs which have been moistened with milk. Bake in a moderate oven one and one-half hours. Serve with a tomato or mushroom sauce.

Chicken Croquettes.—Make one cupful of white sauce using chicken stock and mix, add two cupfuls of chopped chicken, one-half teaspoonful of salt, the same of celery salt and onion salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of paprika. Let it cool and form into cone-shaped croquettes. Roll in slightly beaten egg to which two tablespoonfuls of water has been added. Then roll in bread crumbs. Set away to chill. Fry in hot fat and serve with mushroom sauce.

Perfect Pancakes.—Beat two eggs, yolks and whites separately, add one tablespoonful of sugar, one and one-half cupfuls of rich sour milk, two and one-fourth cupfuls of flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and three-fourths teaspoonful of soda. Beat the egg yolks, add the sugar, beat until dissolved, add sour milk to which the soda has been added. Sift flour with salt and baking powder and add to the sour milk, fold in the stiffly beaten whites and bake on a hot greased griddle. If the milk is not rich add two tablespoonfuls of shortening.

Nowadays there are so many good commercial salad dressings that are about as reasonable in price as the good materials would cost, it is economy for the busy housewife to keep a bottle or two on hand. Add a bit of chopped pickle, capers, onion and a little vinegar or lemon juice and one has a very good fish sauce made very quickly.

CHILDREN'S STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

BUSTER BEAR had had no luck at all in either his fishing or his wishing. He rather felt that this was a contrary day, which means a day in which everything goes just the wrong way. It didn't occur to him that the contrariness was in him, which it was. If he hadn't persisted in keeping on fishing when it was perfectly clear that there were no fish in the little pools of the Laughing Brook, he might have found something else to eat and had a pleasant, comfortable morning instead of one disappointment after another which had neither filled his stomach nor improved his temper. So he had stopped to rest and grumble to his heart's content.

Right into the midst of his grumbling had broken angry screams, and he had looked up to see King Eagle trying to make Plunger the Fish Hawk give up a big, fat fish. Of course, they were up in the air, and they were almost over Buster's head. He forgot his own troubles and disappointments in the excitement of watching Plunger try to get away from King Eagle. At first he had hoped that Plunger would get away from King Eagle. Then as he saw how nearly over him they were he wished that Plunger would drop that fish. If he should drop that fish perhaps, he, Buster, might dine on fish after all. And such a fish as it was! The very sight of it was enough to make Buster's mouth water.

And just then Buster's wish came true. You know wishes do come true once in a while. Buster's did then. He saw King Eagle rush at Plunger and heard him scream something in a very angry sounding voice. And right then Plunger let go of that fish. It surprised Buster so that he just stared open-mouthed at that shining silver thing dropping out of the sky straight toward him. He saw King Eagle suddenly turn in the air and shoot down after the fish. He saw Mrs. Plunger sweep across in front of King Eagle and bother him for just an instant. It was just enough to prevent King Eagle catching that fish before it reached the ground.

Open-eyed and open-mouthed Buster stared up at the strange thing happening right above him. He was so interested that his wits almost forgot to

Hopes to Find "Pig-Headed" Indians

ALONE trek through the hostile jungles of northernmost Brazil's pristine "Half World," in search of new light on the savage tribes infesting the dark recesses of that most inaccessible of territories, has been begun by Desmond Holdridge, twenty-four-year-old leader of the Brooklyn Museum's Brazil expedition, according to a cablegram received by Lee Trenholm, the expedition's New York manager.

"Leaving for Catrimany" was the brief text of the message, dispatched from Manaus, an inland metropolis at the confluence of the Negro and the Amazon 1,000 miles from the Atlantic. It laconically imparted the information that Holdridge, accompanied by a native mechanic and Emerson Smith, expedition motion picture cameraman, had set out from Manaus in their 32-foot cabin cruiser Rio-Mar on a 600-mile water journey up the Negro and Branca rivers to the head of navigation of the Rio Catrimany.

At this point, Holdridge has long planned to plunge westward alone into the enveloping silence of the unexplored and deadly "Melo Mundo" or Half World. Somewhere within the fastness he hopes to locate "pig-headed" Indians and to establish definitely that their porcine ceremonial masks rather than actually misshapen craniums have been responsible for reports of their existence.

It will be about four months before Holdridge is to emerge 300 to 400 miles to the west on the Venezuelan side of the Parima mountains and descends the Orinoco watershed to keep a rendezvous with Smith and the Rio-Mar where the River Turuaca, tributary of the Amazon, meets the Cassiquiare canal, an anomaly of nature connecting the headwaters of South America's two mightiest streams. In June, Smith is to start from Manaus for the meeting place, going via the Negro and Slapa rivers.

Sharing with Col. P. H. Fawcett, lost British explorer, the belief that the fastest progress through the jungle can be made with a small party and light equipment, Holdridge is stripping his outfit and personnel to an irreducible minimum for his arduous journey through the Melo Mundo. Anti-venom, medicines, sidearms, notebooks, a hand movie camera and trinkets to propitiate the natives are the bulk of his impedimenta.

For sustenance, he will depend on the rivers, the forest and friendly Indians. Enlisting two native aides, he intends making his way by dug-out along the waterways whenever feasible or over rough trails hewn from the wilderness by machete when river travel becomes unsafe or impracticable. Among the hidden Indian villages which dot the region days are to be spent taking photographs, assembling data and seeking news of unreported tribes.

On the cruise from Manaus to as far as the Rio-Mar's 3-foot draught permits them to ascend the Catrimany, Holdridge and Smith were to make a detailed motion picture record of the extraordinary native and animal life to be found on every hand, seeking especially a scientifically complete camera study of a rare bird popularly known as the "Cock of the Rocks."

MORE OR LESS

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

MORE truth is written than is ever read,
More thanks are thought of than are ever said,
More fame is lucky than is ever won,
More things are started than are ever done.

More trails are taken than are traveled far,
More gold is gathered than real riches are,
More fortunes builded than a wealth of mind,
More would be powerful than would be kind.

More make acquaintances than make a friend,
More hearts are broken than we ever mend,
More scandal whispered than is ever true,
More kindness needed than we ever do.

More tell their troubles than their pleasures share,
More urge the others than would ever dare,
More preach than practice, criticize than plan—
These are the failings, more or less, of man.

The Olympic Bob

Inspired by the tenth olympiad, to be held this year in Los Angeles, Calif., Carole Lombard, motion picture star, introduces something new to femininity. A light fringe of bangs covers the forehead, while the rest of the hair is combed back severely off the face and curled. The ends are curled with the iron, so they cluster closely to the nape of the neck.

Its Glory Departed

Mosul has a little-known link with western vocabularies, says an article in a Boston paper. When the luxury markets of Europe began to draw on the resources of the East, Mosul quickly earned fame through a special cambric of finest lamb's wool, which the French christened Moussoul laine. It is the modern muslin, and for centuries the town rivaled Bagdad as a great eastern trade depot; but today it is in the doldrums.

King Carol's Escapades Are Cause of Army Discontent

Marshal Rebuked as He Pens Hints of Dethronement.

Geneva.—King Carol's uneasy throne shows new symptoms of shakiness, not the least of which is a growing discontent in the Rumanian army.

Reports percolating from Bukharest weeks ago hinted trouble ahead, but a "history parable" published in Bukharest by the fearless, blunt Marshal Averescu said in so many words that Rumania's army no longer gets its pay regularly and is "discontented."

Averescu even hinted at the dethronement of Carol, with the result that members of parliament felt it necessary to rebuke him and give three rousing cheers for the king.

Among diplomats here, however, the marshal's "history parable" was of particular interest because it seemed to confirm reports via Paris that palace intrigue in Bukharest had developed to the point where Prince Nicholas felt duty bound to warn party leaders to "act quickly" if they wanted to save the dynasty.

Nicholas was quoted as saying that Mme. Magda Lupescu and other intimates of the king "control all his actions, and unless halted will surely drive both him and the dynasty to ruin." He is expected to return to Bukharest within a few days.

Besides the flaming-haired Lupescu the chief intrigues included, according to this report, Dumitrescu, the king's private secretary, and a Mme. Wieder, intimate friend of Lupescu. Queen Helene, Carol's divorced wife, visited him and her son, Prince Michael, and a reconciliation was hinted.

Now Marshal Averescu's parable says not a word directly about King Carol. It is merely a series of extracts from historical volumes, all bearing on the sad fate of Prince Alexander Cuza, first ruler of Rumania, who lost his throne in a popular revolution in February, 1859.

"It was just 66 years ago today," writes the marshal, "that Alexandru Ioan Cuza lost the throne of the Rumanian princes."

The veteran then goes on to cite excerpts from this and that historian—excerpts with pat overtones of modern applicability. For instance:

"He failed to restore the country's economic equilibrium. Such measures as he attempted turned out to be directed against certain classes and groups. In addition there were various scandalous affairs, all-too-numerous in his disordered way of life."

Paris Grooves Streets to Halt Auto Skidding

Paris.—When Paris is fully equipped with its new concrete streets and roadways, covered with odd little grooves and artistic patterns, there will be no skidding.

The new preparation will not require any digging up of old roadways, but simply a re-coating of them with nonskid surfacing. In some cases the top asphalt will be removed and concrete substituted, specially grooved and prepared to retard the progress of vehicles in rainy weather.

Broadcasters to Study Eclipse Effect on Radio

Boston.—How a total eclipse of the sun affects radio broadcasting will be determined by scientists representing station WEEI of Boston during the eclipse to occur in New England August 31. WEEI made preliminary studies along these lines during the eclipse of 1925 and has arranged for an observation site at Norway, Maine, to be in the path of totality for the phenomenon of 1932. The effect on both low and high wave broadcasting will be studied.

1782 Masonic Book Is Valued Relic

Allentown, Pa.—The rites of the Ahimran Reason of Masonry and a sermon dedicated to George Washington are printed in a volume of Masonic ritual published in 1782 and now a valued heirloom held by Mrs. Ethel Reichard, here.

The book, its pages discolored and dried by the years, was the property of Robert Carr Wilson, the owner's great-grandfather, and was presented him when he became a member of Masonic lodge, No. 2, Philadelphia, second oldest in the United States.

Washington was a member of the Alexandria (Va.) lodge No. 1, the oldest.

The sermon, printed after the ritual, was delivered by Rev. Smith in Christ church, Philadelphia, on December 20, 1779, in the presence of Washington.

A scrawl on the flyleaf bears the name of "Benj. Meredith," but there is no explanation of its significance.

work. That fish was dropping right straight at him, yet he made no move to get out of the way. You see, he was so interested in watching King Eagle and wondering if he would be able to catch that fish that until it was too late he didn't once think of what might happen to him if King Eagle didn't catch that fish. He had just taken it for granted that King Eagle would catch it. When he saw that King Eagle wasn't going to he suddenly realized that while he wanted that fish very much indeed he didn't want it in just the way he was likely to get it. He started to jump to one side, but he was not quick enough. Slap! That big, fat fish, dropped from high up in the air, had hit Buster full in the face. In fact, it almost knocked him over. For just one minute he couldn't see anything. He heard the swish and rustle of King Eagle's great wings as he spread them and brought himself up short to keep from striking Buster Bear, for King Eagle knew better than to run the risk of a blow from one of Buster's great paws.

When Buster got his wits together and could see straight he saw that the fish had fallen a little to one side after hitting him, and he also saw that King Eagle was hovering over it and

ST. MALO, old Brittany seaport, is donning party dress for the celebration in May of the four hundredth anniversary of Brittany's annexation to France.

Without "fancy dress" St. Malo is a charming, picture book town of the French north coast. Along the water front, in the shadow of the city's old walls, visitors stumble upon groups of old salts, smoking stubby pipes as they spin yarns of the sea. Nearby their sturdy boats are clustered in the harbor.

Within eyeshot of the yarn-tellers, new St. Malo reveals itself; splendid beaches with modern hotels and gambling casinos in the background. Where fish nets once were dried and repaired, "aliens"—vacationists from England, France, and other parts of Europe—are swinging tennis rackets on smooth courts, tapping croquet balls, building castles of sand and seaweed, flying kites, shivering from dips in the chilly waters of the English channel, and sitting under canvas shades with nothing more to do than to watch their favorite dogs dig holes.

Gone are the days of the corsairs when St. Malo's mariners ranked among the bravest afloat. The grizzled sons of the corsairs who made England hot with rage for lost ships and who carried the name of St. Malo around the world through the half century before 1825, now sail forth to battle with the gally-tinted herring and the peaceful oyster. An annual fishing cruise to the grand banks of Newfoundland is the longest venture.

The stores of merchants who staked fortunes on a single privateering expedition now have other owners, whose modern show windows display bathing suits or high-heeled shoes. St. Malo no longer needs to dare the waves in search of foreign booty. Instead of fleets and armies, excursion boats come with tourists. Syncopated music and the ivory ball tinkle in the casinos until dawn.

The old lure of the sea, and the stout Breton heart persist.

Once Home of Corsairs.

In the years of its greatness, St. Malo flung to the winds of every clime the colors of France and its own corsair flag of blue with the white cross and sleeping ermine. No other city in France was so well known in the Americas and the Indies. One of its sons gave Canada to France, another captured Rio de Janeiro, another blockaded the Ganges, another took Madras. St. Malo's toll of English shipping was set at 382 warships and 4,510 merchantmen.

England and Holland sent fleets and armies to batter down the "scourge of the seas." St. Malo fought back as blithely as it fought with kings of France, dukes of Brittany, or its own triple-headed government. The city of corsairs loved to fight either on the water or on its own rocky isle.

Today, as then, the tide rises and falls twice in each 24 hours—30 feet ordinarily, more than 40 when the sea runs full. Castles of sand and seaweed disappear at the flood, the scars of the day are smoothed and the waves break against the Twelfth century ramparts.

The fortified islands stand out black against the setting sun. Clear above the serried hills of steep roofs the crenelated spire of old St. Vincent's pricks the sky of mottled red and green. Grim structures of steel-gray granite, flecked with mica which sparkles in the sun, slope down to the broad ramparts and the squat towers of the citadel outside. St. Malo of the ages endures.

Blue and white enamel signs immortalize notable personages of St. Malo. In 1839 the names of most of the public squares and of nearly all the streets, except those leading to the principal gates, were changed to honor those who made the town famous.

The list is long. Old names, suggestive of vanished landmarks—Dancing Cat, Broken Drum, Gluttony, Commune, Lancel, Dames of Light Habits, Big Steps, Little Steps, Harp, Break of Day, Old Butter, Soft Grass, Pillory, Street Sweepers, Hangman—have been changed to make a St. Malo who's Who. The best known are: Jacques Cartier, discoverer of the St. Lawrence river; Maupertuis, the mathematician; La Mettrie, exposé of quacks; Porcon de la Barbinais, given a parole by the Algerian pirates and beheaded when he returned; Mahe de La Bourdonnais, captor of Madras and the "governor" in "Paul and Virginia"; Felicité Lamennais, famous agnostic; Archbishop Trublet, whose family antedated Hermit Aaron; De Gournay, France's first industrialist; Admiral Boursaint, wealthy suicide; Count Thevenard, France's first cannon founder, and even Benjamin Franklin, whose thrift struck a responsive Malouin chord.

ST. MALO'S Ferry on Wheels.

In those days St. Malo did not have its inner harbor, where the tides are cheated by locks; its tidal harbor, where 300-ton steamers tie up to the pier and gradually settle down on dry land until the water returns to float them off, or the other works of granite which now make it a port. Tides were the same, and the wooden ships lolled on their sides on the beach while crews made merry within the walls.

Each night at ten, when the great bell rang the "cover fire," the dogs were unleashed on the beach as a menace to thieves and a warning to moist but honest sailors against overstaying shore leave.

Founded by a Welshman.

The modern St. Malo was only three years old when the dogs were purchased, but the city was ancient even then. In the Sixth century, a hermit named Aaron had a hut of stone on the rock opposite, where formerly had stood the Gallo-Roman city of Aleth, now St. Servan. One day a holy man called Malo, Maclow, Maclou, Machut, or Maclovius came over the waves from Wales in a homemade stone dug-out. According to his memory, he had been born in 520. With the hermit Aaron as an audience, the visitor held religious services on the back of a complaisant whale. The taciturn Malouin has neither sagas nor script and may have confused his patron with Jonah. But no carping historian has proved the tale false.

Malo from Wales built a hut of his own and started to perform miracles. By 680, he had been canonized, and his skull and an arm bone were brought back. Charlemagne's warriors destroyed church and city in 811, and Charlemagne restored them. Otherwise, early life in St. Malo was uneventful.

In 1098 was born Jean de Châtillon, better known to Malouins as Jean de la Grille, from the iron latticework put over his tomb to prevent pious souvenir hunters from carrying off his body piecemeal. He was the founder of the St. Malo that stands today. When he became bishop of Aleth, in 1144, most of his flock lived across the bay, on Aaron rock, the site of the present St. Malo. His predecessor had given the rock to the Benedictine monks, and it was only after eight years, during which Jean made four trips to Rome on foot, that the Pope ordered the Benedictines to return the rock.

In 1155 he started the walls that still form the sea face of the ramparts. So well were they built that their withstood enemy cannon fire and the pound of angry waves throughout the centuries. Jean was both temporal and spiritual ruler. In his time immense establishments of the church and holy orders in the little city elbowed merchant corsairs' imposing storehouses and mansions with double floors and two story cellars cut into the rock to hide sea booty from tax collectors. The Rue Jean de Châtillon of the present day leads past narrow stone stairways, dark passages, and vast caves that date from the time of the warlike bishop. Belted by its ramparts, St. Malo had no room to grow. Its gray stone houses were built high and close, and cellars were deep.

The voyages of St. Malo husbands were long. The population increased only 132 a year for 20 years.

Today a rustic policeman stands inside St. Vincent's Gate, stopping automobilists from driving up the crowded main street and advising them to leave their cars outside the walls, as the little city can be crossed in a few steps.

With the hermit Aaron as an audience, the visitor held religious services on the back of a complaisant whale. The taciturn Malouin has neither sagas nor script and may have confused his patron with Jonah. But no carping historian has proved the tale false.

Malo from Wales built a hut of his own and started to perform miracles. By 680, he had been canonized, and his skull and an arm bone were brought back. Charlemagne's warriors destroyed church and city in 811, and Charlemagne restored them. Otherwise, early life in St. Malo was uneventful.

In 1098 was born Jean de Châtillon, better known to Malouins as Jean de la Grille, from the iron latticework put over his tomb to prevent pious souvenir hunters from carrying off his body piecemeal. He was the founder of the St. Malo that stands today. When he became bishop of Aleth, in 1144, most of his flock lived across the bay, on Aaron rock, the site of the present St. Malo. His predecessor had given the rock to the Benedictine monks, and it was only after eight years, during which Jean made four trips to Rome on foot, that the Pope ordered the Benedictines to return the rock.

In 1155 he started the walls that still form the sea face of the ramparts. So well were they built that their withstood enemy cannon fire and the pound of angry waves throughout the centuries. Jean was both temporal and spiritual ruler. In his time immense establishments of the church and holy orders in the little city elbowed merchant corsairs' imposing storehouses and mansions with double floors and two story cellars cut into the rock to hide sea booty from tax collectors. The Rue Jean de Châtillon of the present day leads past narrow stone stairways, dark passages, and vast caves that date from the time of the warlike bishop. Belted by its ramparts, St. Malo had no room to grow. Its gray stone houses were built high and close, and cellars were deep.

The voyages of St. Malo husbands were long. The population increased only 132 a year for 20 years.

Today a rustic policeman stands inside St. Vincent's Gate, stopping automobilists from driving up the crowded main street and advising them to leave their cars outside the walls, as the little city can be crossed in a few steps.

ST. MALO'S Ferry on Wheels.

In those days St. Malo did not have its inner harbor, where the tides are cheated by locks; its tidal harbor, where 300-ton steamers tie up to the pier and gradually settle down on dry land until the water returns to float them off, or the other works of granite which now make it a port. Tides were the same, and the wooden ships lolled on their sides on the beach while crews made merry within the walls.

Each night at ten, when the great bell rang the "cover fire," the dogs were unleashed on the beach as a menace to thieves and a warning to moist but honest sailors against overstaying shore leave.

Founded by a Welshman.

The modern St. Malo was only three years old when the dogs were purchased, but the city was ancient even then. In the Sixth century, a hermit named Aaron had a hut of stone on the rock opposite, where formerly had stood the Gallo-Roman city of Aleth, now St. Servan. One day a holy man called Malo, Maclow, Maclou, Machut, or Maclovius came over the waves from Wales in a homemade stone dug-out. According to his memory, he had been born in 520. With the hermit Aaron as an audience, the visitor held religious services on the back of a complaisant whale. Who Was Who?

By Louise M. Comstock

PARACELSUS

THE real Paracelsus, idealized into a symbol of the impossibility of separating knowledge and life by Robert Browning in the poem of that name, was a Swiss physician, chemist and charlatan, who lived from 1493 to 1541.

Like the character he inspired Paracelsus devoted his life to a search for knowledge and, scoring the information available to him from the students of the past, set out on an independent search for the real character of matter. While professor at the University of Basel, Paracelsus publicly burned the works of Avicenna and Galen, fathers of medical science, and set himself up as "monarch of physic." It was an age when science was still bound up in black magic, when chemistry was as yet alchemy and chemists devoted precious lifetimes to weird searchings for the formulae for the creation of life. Though Paracelsus dealt like the rest in much humbug and played vigorously upon the ignorance and superstition of the time, he stands nevertheless as founder of modern pharmacology.

Browning is not concerned with the real contribution of his hero to the learning of the world, but with the effect of a life devoted exclusively to research upon a man's soul. Written when the poet was only twenty-three years old, "Paracelsus" is astounding in its revelation of the disintegration of character.

THE SISTINE MADONNA

FOR more than four centuries artists and scholars strove to fix the identity of the model who posed for Raphael's famous masterpiece the "Sistine Madonna." It was early established that her features were those also of "La Fornarina," another of Raphael's treasured paintings. And now we are informed that both, the calm sweet mother, and the comely woman of the world, were inspired and posed by Margherita Luti, the daughter of a baker, Raphael's favorite model and some think his one love.

The "Madonna di San Sisto," usually known as the "Sistine Madonna," is one of the last of Raphael's paintings and is peculiar in that no studies or sketches for it are known to exist. It was painted in 1518 for the monastery of Saint Sisto at Piacenza. The painting was done entirely by Raphael, in Rome, where he was leader of a brilliant group including Michelangelo attracted there by the pope's love of art and the great project of adorning the buildings of the Vatican then under way.

Only recently also have identities been established for the models for "Pope Sixtus II" and "St. Barbara" who kneel in adoration of the Madonna in the picture. Dr. Moritz Stuebel of Dresden has produced convincing evidence that Pope Julius II, patron of Raphael and Michelangelo, virtual founder of the papal states and layer of St. Peter's cornerstone, was the model for the figure of the pope. St. Barbara, this authority claims, was the Duchess of Urbino, the ward of Julius II.

HUCKLEBERRY FINN

IF HUCK is a very real little boy to every reader of Mark Twain's "Tom Sawyer" and "Huckleberry Finn," it is because both the author of his story and the artist who illustrated it used real boys for their models.

The Huck Finn Mark Twain wrote about was a childhood acquaintance he portrayed exactly as he was, even to his battered straw hat and the single suspender strap that upheld his patched overalls. "Huckleberry Finn," wrote Mark Twain in his "Autobiography," "was Tom Blankenship. Tom's father was at one time town drunkard, an exceedingly well defined and unofficial office of those days. . . . In Huckleberry Finn I have drawn Tom exactly as he was. He was ignorant, unwashed, insufficiently fed; but he had as good a heart as any bad boy. He was the only really independent person, man or boy, in the community, and by consequence he was tranquilly and continuously happy and was envied by all the rest of us."

The Huck Finn the illustrator F. W. Kemble drew was Courtland P. Morris, now of Audubon, N. J. Mark Twain selected Kemble because he saw a resemblance to Huck in one of Kemble's drawings in Life. Kemble in turn saw Huck in Court Morris, then sixteen years old, whom he found playing in a public schoolyard in the Bronx. For four dollars a week Court posed for every character from Aunt Polly to Tom, and it is Court whom most of us visualize when we think of Huck Finn. Court himself many years later confessed that he spent the weekly four dollars for candy!

Still Many Wild Horses

There are still many thousands of these so-called "wild horses" in some of the western states such as Idaho and New Mexico, though many have been exterminated in recent years. They are the descendants of Spanish horses liberated in the Sixteenth century.

"I DIDN'T get a cent for writing this statement about Target Tobacco . . . but Target has saved me half a buck a week since I started using it, so you might call this a paid testimonial.

"Here's the answer. I switched to Target to save money. But I didn't know I was going to keep on enjoying real cigarette taste. Target is blended cigarette tobacco, just like the ready-mades. And it rolls up easy with those gummed papers you get free.

"So I advise you to spend a dime at your nearest dealer's and see for yourself. Just think, you get thirty or more cigarettes from every package."

AND GET THIS: The U. S. Government tax on 20 cigarettes amounts to 6¢. On 20 cigarettes you roll from Target Tobacco the tax is just about 1¢. No wonder you get such value for a dime!

Mythological King
Crowell's Handbook for Readers and Writers says that "Jamshyd" was the fourth king of the Pishadian dynasty, i. e., the earliest, who is fabled to have reigned for 700 years, and to have had the Deevs, or Genii, as his slaves. He possessed a seven-ringed golden cup, typical of the seven heavens, the seven planets, the seven seas, etc., which was full of the elixir of life; it was hidden by the genii and was said to have been discovered while digging the foundation of Persepolis.—Washington Star.

ESKIMOS ADOPTING WAYS OF WHITE MAN

Tribes of the North Turn to Trapping and Trading.

Washington.—The Eskimo, according to dispatches from the Far North, is slowly changing. Each year more and more of these remote guardians of the last frontier are adopting white man's ways.

In Alaska and western Canada many Eskimos have broken away from hunting and fishing to meet personal food and clothing wants and have become trappers and traders. In Greenland and northern Labrador the Eskimo has clustered around the mission stations, adopting the white man's style of house, rather than sod huts, igloos and skin tents, and bartering skins for the white man's canned foods, firearms, clothing and phonographs.

"The Eskimos were the first people met by Europeans on American shores, but they are still among the least known, and certainly the least seen, of all native American tribes," says a bulletin from the National Geographic society. "Scandinavians came in contact with Eskimos in Greenland and in Labrador in the Tenth and Eleventh centuries. Since that time the Eskimos' main contacts with the white man have been through explorers, missionaries, police officers, and occasional trappers and prospectors.

"The name Eskimo is said to have been given by Biard in 1611 (in the form 'Escommingois'). It means 'eaters of raw fish.'

"Considering their limited numbers, the Eskimos cover a tremendous range. The total Eskimo population of the world has been estimated at only 35,000, but Eskimo villages can be found here and there throughout the coasts of Arctic America from eastern Greenland and northern Labrador to the westernmost parts of Alaska, and even on the tip of Asia across the Bering Strait.

"Throughout this distance, more than 5,000 miles, the Eskimo speaks one language, a strange tongue which requires a vocabulary of 10,000 words. As in Chinese, inflection is very important. Few outsiders learn it, although a 'pidgin English' has sprung up which some explorers and missionaries mistake for the Eskimo language.

"Nearly all Eskimos live on or near the coast because they get most of their food from the sea. They raise no vegetables, supplementing their meat diet in summer with wild berries and roots. In summer they hunt land animals and birds, as a rule, and in the winter they live on sea mammals and fish.

"Where least affected by the white man's civilization—along the Arctic coast of Canada and in the islands north of Hudson bay—the Eskimo is perhaps the healthiest and happiest person on earth. The village is the largest social unit. There are no chiefs or rulers. 'Leading men' have influence but no authority. Large animals caught are shared with others, and personal property is secure, for one tribe never makes war against another. Along many of the inlets of the Northwest territories in Canada the Eskimo still hunts with bows and arrows, and harpoons, in little skin boats, or kayaks.

"While snow houses, or igloos, are always associated with Eskimos, about half the Eskimo world does not know them at all. Igloos are almost never used in Labrador or in Alaska. Where the white man's frame house is not obtainable the native Eskimo lives in a dugout covered with sod, the roof being supported by poles or animal bones. In the summer the skin tent, or tupic, is used, particularly while on hunting forays.

"The igloo, perhaps the most unusual of all dwellings, is made of blocks of snow, with a clear piece of ice for a window. Beds and benches are of ice, with warm furs on top. A shallow pan made of stone or iron, shaped somewhat like a dustpan, is used for a lamp or stove. Along the flat side is a dry moss for a wick. Inside the pan is seal oil. The cooking kettle is suspended above the pan. Iron kettles and pans are of recent use, and are acquired from the white man, because the Eskimo has no iron, and very little wood.

"In Greenland and Labrador Eskimos have known white men for nearly 900 years, but there are still, in some parts of the Arctic, Eskimos who have seen only an occasional explorer. White men's diseases have killed more than two-thirds of all Eskimos since the first contacts with them, but the population is now about stationary.

"Except in Alaska, Eskimos do not live along regular steamship or tourist routes. The Eskimo seldom can be

THE WOMAN HE MARRIES

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Emeritus Dean of Men,
University of Illinois.

Girton was talking to me about what he would do when he got out of college. He is a little uncertain about his future. It is not that he has done his work in differently. Quite the contrary. He has had a really distinguished record as a student, and shows ability in whatever he has undertaken to do. He has thought some of teaching, and if he should choose that profession he realizes that it will be quite necessary for him to go further in his education than a mere bachelor's degree. He has more than ordinary opportunities for entering business, and has given no little thought to doing that.

"You know I came from the farm," he said as we were talking, "and though I have done no specialization in agriculture I have a real interest in farming and a real desire to go back to the country. I like farm life, I enjoy the country and animals, and the open air. I know that there is no chance for a farmer to make a fortune, but farming is a healthy, honorable occupation and I often reach the conclusion that it is the life for me."

I have felt the same way, myself, so often that I could quite appreciate his point of view. There is much in farm life—that I enjoy, and I know well the hard side of farming.

"I suppose I'm young to think about these things," he went on, "but I realize that what I go into and the success I make of it will depend very largely on the sort of woman I marry. You couldn't take every woman to the farm and make her happy or have her make you happy. There must be co-operation and sympathy between a farmer and his wife."

The woman a man marries does make a tremendous difference in what the man accomplishes.

Men everywhere are made or lost through the women they marry.

TURN OF HISTORY AT FORT NIAGARA

Battle That Put an End to French Supremacy.

One of the apparently momentous happenings which have altered the course of history was Samuel Champlain's sailing up past Plymouth and Shawmut in 1604, visiting our Massachusetts shores, but scoring them as unworthy of settlement, and his final definite adoption of the mouth of the St. Lawrence as his scene of operations and the establishment of a French colony there. If Plymouth or Boston had pleased Champlain's fancy New England would doubtless have been French today. The Mayflower's Pilgrims and Winthrop's subsequent comers would have gone to Virginia.

But a more important "if," along the line of nationality was to develop later. Canada, following Champlain's initiative, became a New France. It spread westward and southward. It reached well into what is now western New York and Pennsylvania. It held what is now Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin, and extended its claims to the whole Mississippi valley. If its extension in that all-inclusive direction had not been checked this "universal Yankee nation" of ours would never have been.

The check came at a dingy little trading post on the shores of Lake Erie, where half-breeds kept the fageathering Indians in an uproar with eau de vie. There was war between England and France and the hostilities extended clear to the forest trails around Niagara. Here, where the city of Buffalo now stands, the French had built a quadrangular fort with bastions and called it Fort Niagara. Here, in this French, Indian and British war, in the year 1759, Sir William Johnson attacked the French and Indians, defeated them and drove them out. Then the English settled down at this outpost, which became the gateway and key of the West.

In due time the American settlers poured through the gateway, possessing themselves of the valley of the Ohio. Soon afterward all Canada became British, and ultimately all our Middle West and Northwest; and when, in 1813, the region to the southward of Lake Erie, and to the westward and southward of the Detroit river and of Lake Superior, fell into the possession of the United States, an entirely new empire was raised up where the speech of France survives today only in many place names.

Fort Niagara, indeed, began the end of French empire on the American continent. The English speech possessed itself of a domain larger than all the civilized countries of Europe, and became the language of many millions whose vernacular might otherwise have been French. The battle fought in these forest aisles around Fort Niagara in 1759 was a short time ago very quietly celebrated at Buffalo. It is an impressive thought that but a bare century and a half intervened between the pivotal skirmish in the woods and its extraordinary eventuation in American national greatness.

ANCIENTS MADE TEETH BRUSHING SOLEMN RITE
Indo-Europeans of 1700 B. C., Did a Thorough Job.
Chicago.—There is nothing modern about brushing of teeth, for the ancient Indo-Europeans of 1700 B. C. made a rite of this particular hygienic act, members of the American Oriental society, meeting at the Oriental institute of the University of Chicago were told. According to Dr. George V. Bobrinsky, assistant professor of Sanskrit at the university, the early Indians had no tooth paste, but they did a thorough job nevertheless.
For a toothbrush, the Indo-European user a twig taken from a living tree, a species of fig tree being recommended for the purpose. It was imperative that the bark remain on the twig. Another method was to chew twigs or sticks of certain varieties of trees. The "toothbrush" could be used but once, and then must be disposed of by leaving it in a clean place.
There was a long list of days when the rite must either be omitted or performed in a different manner, and in such cases the cleansing of the mouth by rinsing with twelve mouthfuls of water was substituted. The time of the rite was also prescribed, the teeth being cleaned just before the bath.
The size of the stick was rigidly specified, one authority giving the proper length as twelve angulas long, an angula being slightly less than an inch. Other authorities, however, specified various lengths for the various castes, the brahmanas using the longest, of ten angulas.
Various prayers were addressed to the cleansing stick both before and after its use, and Professor Bobrinsky translated one for the assembled Orientalists, as being: "Oh, Lord of the Forest, grant us long life, strength, glory, progeny, cattle, riches, and knowledge."

All Things Considered

"To be a satisfactory President of the United States," Grenville Kleiser, author, observes to the Pathfinder Magazine, "a man must possess the patience of a Job, the perspicacity of a Plato, the strength of Hercules, the wit of Rabelais, the courage of a lion, the eloquence of a Demosthenes, the wisdom of Solomon, the gentleness of a dove, the universality of a Shakespeare and the silence (at times) of a sphinx."

Church Pew Space

The minimum spacing for church pews back to back is 30 inches—32 or even 33 inches to be preferred. A space of 18 inches in the length of the pew is considered a sitting. The actual seating capacity can be determined only by drawing the seats to an accurate scale on the floor plan and then measuring the linear feet of the pews. For approximate values six or seven square feet may be allowed for each seat.

Warrant for Shakespeare

An order made out two years ago for the arrest of William Shakespeare has been found by Dr. Leslie Holton, of Haverford college. The order was written at the request of William Wayne, who, the paper said, "walked in fear of his death" at the hands of Shakespeare and three of his friends.

One of those, Francis Langley, had sought protection a few months before from William Gardner and Wayne, Doctor Holton learned through papers in the files.

African and Indian Ivory

The tusks of African elephants are somewhat larger than those of Indian animals. An Indian elephant's tusks may be 9 feet long and 100 pounds in weight, while those of a full-grown African elephant are rarely less than 10 feet in length and weigh as much as 220 pounds. These are average figures and individuals may greatly surpass them.

Best Lighting

Artificial light should resemble sunlight as much as possible, ample to see to work by but not too glaring. Electric light is probably best because it does not consume oxygen from the air of the room, nor does it give out to the air any waste products. Light should not fall directly on the eyes, but should come from the side or behind the shoulder.

Too Handy With Can Opener

An Englishman who had been twelve years in the Canadian West sent home to Lancashire for a wife; and this is the reason: "Canadian girls are pretty handy with a can opener, but they don't know how to use a frying pan." Is this why Canadian boys are beginning to capture exhibition prizes for good cooking?—Toronto Globe.

In great part, these habits of living are habits of preference for certain kinds of food, for certain methods of cooking, for proper or improper ventilation, suitable or unsuitable clothing as well as hygienic or unhygienic ways in the care of the body.
