EXPLAINS RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE ACT

By Congressman Roy O. Woodruff
Tenth Michigan District

Letters coming to my desk almost daily indicate there is much misinformation and misunderstanding abroad in the land regarding the purposes of its organization and the operations of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. These letters express dissatisfaction with what Congress had done in this connection, it appearing to the writers that this Corporation was set up and funds placed at its disposal solely in the interests of railroads, banks, etc. These opinions not being justified by the facts, it seemed pertinent to discuss this particular subject in this column.

The Act creating the Reconstruction Finance Corporation provided for an appropriation from the Federal Treasury of $500,000,000 and authorized the Corporation to borrow on the credit of the Government when necessary an additional $1,500,000,000, making the capital available $2,000,000,000 in all. The Corporation was further authorized to extend loans to banks, including savings banks, trust companies, insurance companies, building and loan associations, railroad corporations and practically all classes of fiduciary institutions. These include mortgage loan companies, credit unions, Federal Land Banks, Joint Stock Land Banks, Federal Intermediate Credit Banks, agricultural credit corporations, live stock credit corporations and individual farmers for the purchase of seed.

The law provides, of course, that the Corporation shall exact from any applicant for a loan adequate security.

SCHOOL NOTES

Prepared and Edited by a Committee of the Student Council

High School
Our baseball team won its first game of the season Tuesday by defeating the Alabaster high school team, 11-4, at our athletic field. Our boys played good ball, making only one error during the nine inning game. They collected thirteen hits, including three doubles and one triple. Albert Quick pitched excellent ball, allowing the Alabaster team only five scattered hits. He walked six and struck out seventeen of our opponents. The Alabaster team, due to lack of practice, made three errors and were practically unable to hit the offerings of Albert. Even by a change of pitchers they were unable to check the fierce assault made by the Tawas nine. Our next game will be with St. Joe on Friday of this week.

Mother's Day

FOUR YEAR OLD BOY

NEARLY DROWNS

Neil Thornton, four year old son of Mr. and Mrs. P. N. Thornton, was nearly drowned late Friday afternoon when he fell into the Tawas river. He, with a little six year old playmate, Alice Swartz, were playing in the Burley Wilson yard. Neil ran to the edge of the bank and fell in. Alice immediately ran to the house and called her aunt, Mrs. Wilson, and Rev. Jones, who was calling at the time, ran to the river, calling to George Leslie working in the Jas. Leslie yard. George ran along the bank and waded in the river, picking him out of the center of the stream, where he was floating upright. He carried him to the opposite bank and cut off the wet clothes, Rev. Jones getting there shortly after by way of the bridge and in time to revive him with artificial respiration.

Dr. C. F. Smith had been notified and was soon on the scene. Blankets and coats were wrapped around the little fellow and he was carried to Chas. Curry's home, where he was put to bed with hot water bottles and electric pad to get warm. He responded rapidly to the treatment and was soon talking to his parents and friends. He was taken home about 9 o'clock and has shown no ill effects from his wet experience.

ARBOR DAY OBSERVED

AT HALE SCHOOL

Last Friday afternoon Arbor Day was fittingly observed at the Hale school by the planting of 100 trees on the school grounds with a pleasing program by the school pupils. Short addresses were given by R. D. Brown, a former school superintendent, and County School Commissioner Margaret E. Worden. The observance of Arbor Day was under the auspices of the Hale Parent-Teachers Association and Hale Grange. An elm tree was formally planted and dedicated by John H. Johnson, representing the Grange, and one by Mrs. Sarah Brown in the name of the Parent-Teachers Association.

JOAN BENNETT WEARS 22

COSTUMES IN PHOTOPLAY

Feminine fans who take their fashion tips from the screen will have opportunity of seeing the very latest from Paris in the twenty-two costume changes worn by Joan Bennett in the Fox romance, "She Wanted a Millionaire," which comes next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday to the Family Theatre, East Tawas.

The gowns worn by Miss Bennett range from the sleazy dresses and blue denim smocks of her factory days to the special creation worn by her in the coronation ball after her winning of the Atlantic City beauty contest which is a highlight of the picture. These include sport ensembles, sun-tan swim suits, afternoon frocks and gorgeous evening gowns. Another, and perhaps the most daring costume, is the dazzling decollete in which she is crowned Queen at the Quatz Arts Ball in Paris.

"She Wanted a Millionaire" co-features Spencer Tracy with Una Merkel, James Kirkwood and Dorothy Peterson heading the supporting cast.

ANNUAL CITY CLEAN-UP

All citizens are urged to cooperate in a Clean-Up campaign Tuesday and Wednesday. Those having rubbish, tin cans, etc., to be removed, have same placed in containers conspicuously upon curb by Monday night, May 9.

GENESSEE MAN DROWNS AT SPENCER LAKE

Chester L. Colburn, Jr., age 28 years, a mason employed by Joseph Lubaway at the Huron Shore Subdivision, was drowned Sunday evening at Spencer lake, near here. Colburn had been in a small row boat fishing. While trying to land a pike which he had caught the boat capsized. He tried to climb on top of the overturned boat, but being unsuccessful, attempted to swim to the shore sixty feet away. Colburn was a good swimmer but he was burdened with heavy shoes and clothing and sank to the bottom in about 12-feet of water. A companion on shore, realizing that Colburn was going to have trouble, removed his high top shoes and coat expecting to swim to the aid of the struggling man, but Colburn went down before he could reach him.

Attempts were made to find the body but they were unsuccessful until a coast guard crew arrived and dragged the lake. Colburn was unmarried and his home was at Grand Blanc, Genessee county. He had been employed at the Huron Shore Subdivision for about two weeks. The father, Chester L. Colburn, Sr., came Monday to take the remains home. An inquest was held Monday morning by Justice W. H. Price at the W. A. Evans Furniture company store at East Tawas.

LORETTA YOUNG AID

ROBINSON FOR FIRST TIME

For the first time in his career Edward G. Robinson, star of the First National and Vitaphone picture, "The Hatched Man," which comes to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, next Sunday and Monday, is supported by Loretta Young.

Robinson's comments on the lovely Loretta's work in "The Hatched Man" as Toya San, his ward and wife, have been exceptionally favorable. The actor stated that it was the first time in his stage or screen career that he has ever seen a youngster portray the depths of emotional intensity with the ability revealed by Miss Young. This is especially complimentary when it is recalled that Robinson has enjoyed the support of the greatest actresses of the legitimate stage.

The story is essentially dramatic and is played against an authentic oriental background, the scenes being set in San Francisco Chinatown of today and fifteen years ago, and in China. It reveals the similarity between the emotions and instincts of Oriental and Occidental, telling a love story which holds interest to the very end, with the dramatically alive characterizations by Robinson and the supporting cast.

See this good show, with an Our Gaby comedy.

ACHIEVEMENT DAY HELD AT EAST TAWAS

The 4-H club work achievement day for Isco county was held at the Community House, East Tawas, on Tuesday, May 3. The program was opened with a piano solo by Miss Huhtala of the music department of the East Tawas high school. Invocation was given by Reverend Metcalf. The singing was led by Mr. Swanson, superintendent of the East Tawas high school.

While Dr. Johnston and Miss Cowgill of the Children's Fund, Unit No. 2, were judging the exhibitors of fifteen years or older for Isco county's healthiest boy and girl, everyone was given an opportunity to examine the exhibits. Gerald Fournier of Whittemore was chosen as the county's healthiest boy and Ella Ross, last year's state style champion and delegate to the convention in Chicago, was chosen as the healthiest girl.

The lunch hour was much enjoyed by everyone. Hot cocoa was served by the East Tawas Parent-Teachers Association. The Normal students assisted in serving the cocoa and supervised the games which were played after lunch.

The afternoon program was opened at one o'clock with three selections by the East Tawas high school orchestra. The girls of the different sewing clubs wore the garments which they had made. Each club displayed very beautiful work; work which showed that the girls had had excellent training and that a great amount of time and energy had been expended. ## Pilot Sings; Order Comes "Pipe Down"

Plane Broadcasts Entertain Short Wave Radio Owners.

Chicago—Owners of short wave radio sets who have heard amusing things going on in the ether during the early hours of the morning are to have much of their enjoyment curtailed as airline officials have instructed their pilots to confine their broadcasting to routine matters. During the still night lonely air mail pilots, flying high above an almost invisible earth, have no company, but the microphones of their two way radio telephone sets, and they have been wont to drift into song or carry on conversations with other pilots flying miles away.

Heber Miller, who flies between Seattle and Medford, Ore., tried his voice on "Life Is Just a Bowl of Cherries" recently at 2 a. m. one clear night. He got a stack of fan mail the following day that would have been envied by a professional crooner.

Al Gilhousen and Ralph Virden, talking over the "good old days" one early morning while flying miles apart along the west coast, learned later that apparently most of the Pacific coast had been listening to their reminiscences, and so the orders to "pipe down" have gone out. Many interesting stories, however, are told of some of the broadcasts.

One mail pilot, for instance, got

Girl's Head Used as Tee by Golf Player

London.—In a freak golf match at a golf club in Surrey, England, a girl's forehead provided the tee for a young professional, George Ashdown, and a less skillful player, C. Mansell.

One of the conditions of the match was that Ashdown should tee up at every hole on the girl's forehead. Miss Ena Shaw, a young London nurse, agreed to be the "tee." At every hole a tee peg was fastened to her forehead by an elastic band. She reclined on the ground and did not appear to be in the least nervous.

The professional, conceding one stroke at each hole to Mansell, made some remarkable shots from the unusual tee and won the match in seven up and five to play.

Asbestos Has New Use

Wenatchee, Wash.—Asbestos fiber found under fingernails of Ted McClure, twenty-nine years old, led to his arrest on a charge of safe robbery here. The safe of an auto freight depot was robbed of $40 and McClure was suspected. It was lined with asbestos.

Patient's Own Blood Is Used for Transfusion

Pittsburgh, Pa.—One of the rare instances of successful autotransfusion of blood is attracting attention here. The operation was performed at the Homeopathic hospital by Dr. Fred-eric S. Morris.

Russell M. Evans, Jr., a fifteen-year-old high school student, was injured in a coasting accident. X-ray examination showed that he had suffered a ruptured spleen, with an internal hemorrhage resulting. The anesthetic relaxed the lad's muscles, allowing the blood to flow into the abdominal cavity. Even the laity scarcely needs to be reminded that this was the most critical stage. With such a large loss of blood in his weakened condition, the boy's life wavered in the balance.

Doctor Morris quickly transferred the blood from the abdominal cavity, filtered it and placed it in a glass container surrounded by hot-water bottles to restore it to body temperature. Then, with the surgeon working at top speed, the youth's own blood was injected into his body through a vein in his left arm. Next the ruptured spleen was removed.

When the boy left the operating table his pulse and blood pressure were declared normal, and at this writing, veged with threatening weather one early morning and spoke about it in no uncertain terms. Too late he realized that his microphone had been switched on, and his remarks, intended only for a dark cloud bank, had been carried far and wide. He did the only thing he could think of—broadcast a rather profuse apology, and then he lapsed into a silence that he now breaks only for the short cryptical reports the pilots make every 20 minutes to ground stations along their routes.

"Gosh, wouldn't a good stiff drink of whisky be swell on a morning like this?" was the contribution of an early morning pilot to the lore of another morning reflection. As a rule, these remarks are noted for their scarcity.

An interesting phenomenon that arises to disturb the radio reports of the pilots is "skip distance," a peculiarity of short wave sets. The pilot of a night mail plane flying from New York to Chicago recently found that the ground station at Chicago airport could not hear his calls, while the station at Fort Worth, 1,000 miles away, reported fine reception. His message and the answer were relayed through the Fort Worth station.

Another pilot flying over Redding, Calif., was heard at Des Moines, Iowa, while his dispatcher at Oakland, only 300 miles away, could not hear him at all. Provision is made to counteract these unusual conditions by having the reporting pilots covered not only by their home station but by all other stations, which are situated at intervals of 250 miles along the airways. Thus, when a pilot is not heard by his dispatching station, the message is relayed to that station by a distant station that has heard it distinctly. The answer flies back via the relay.

Died "Pauper"; Her Will Bares $30,000 Bequest

Los Angeles, Calif.—The will of Vila Kaufman, seventy, who died an apparent pauper in Memphis, Tenn., a month ago, was admitted to probate here.

Mrs. Kaufman bequeathed $30,000 to the national committee of federal legislation for birth control, and directed that only $100 be spent for her funeral, at which she asked that there be "no music, no flowers and no clergyman."

King Tut-Ankh-Amen Is Now Accused of Thievery

Tomb Treasures Stolen From His Predecessor.

London.—King Tut-Ankh-Amen's splendid golden treasures, which astonished the world when they were discovered by Lord Carnarvon and Howard Carter in 1922, were mostly second hand, according to J. D. S. Pendlebury of the Egyptian Exploration society.

As a result of his investigations, Pendlebury claims that most of the rich jewels and trappings of state in King Tut's tomb were really the property of King Smenkh-ka-Ra, whose tomb King Tut raided, appropriating the treasures for his own funeral palace.

The theory is based on the recent discovery that the mummy thought to have been that of King Akhenaten III, was really the mummy of somebody else. When this was discovered, the Egyptian government called in Pendlebury to solve the mystery. He found that the mummy in question was really that of Akhenaten's son-in-law, Smenkh-ka-Ra.

"What I discovered," declared Pendlebury, "was that after the heretic Akhenaten died the population of Amara rose up and cursed his memory and cursed as well the worship of the sun's disk, which he had founded. They smashed everything possible in the tomb, defaced all the monuments by hacking out the king's name.

several days later, his general progress toward recovery is reported "most satisfactory." The operation is considered a distinct contribution to surgery.

Pussy Proves Help to Electrician in Wiring

Kingston, N. C.—Paul Long, an electrician, recommends that every electrician carry a cat.

Long had to run a cable through a small space between the roof and ceiling of a house for a distance of 80 feet. He tied a string to the cat's tail, shoved it in one end, and closed the opening. He opened the other end, and in a few minutes the cat came out with the string. He pulled the cable through.

Rare Northern Bird Is Found in Oregon State

Portland, Ore.—One of the rarest birds of the north, an emperor, or painted goose, third of its kind ever to be seen as far south as Oregon, drifted ashore dead here recently.

The specimen, an adult in fine plumage, is the most beautiful of wild geese. The head, nape and tail are ivory white, the upper parts are wavy bluish-gray with lavender tinting and sharply defined marks. Its feet are orange-yellow and the bill is a livid flesh color.

Graphic Air View Shows Progress on Hoover Dam

WITH all indications pointing to spring floods on the Colorado river, which will rise to higher levels than the inundation of 1906, when the river overflowed into the Coachella valley and created the now famous Salton sea, 3,200 workmen in 24-hour shifts speed against time to bring operations on Hoover dam, world's largest, in shape so that the minimum setbacks will occur when flood waters pour through Boulder canyon. This remarkable air view was obtained from the first plane to make the flight over the new route between Los Angeles and Salt Lake City, initiating the new air trail which will permit transcontinental passengers to view at first hand the government's operations. Activity at the present time centers on the completion of the four 56-foot diversion tunnels which will carry the river around the actual dam site by means of two coffer dams. The coffer dams must be built between high water seasons. At present Six Companies, Inc., holders of the contract, are one year ahead of the government's schedule, and if this advantage is maintained work on pouring 1,200,000 cubic yards of earth and rock into the upper of the two coffer dams will soon get under way. The face of the coffer dam must be covered with a 6-inch blanket of concrete before the floods, or the work of months will be wiped out. Hoover dam itself will take form in two and one-half years. It will measure 650 feet up and down stream at the base, 45 feet at the top, and about 1,180 feet along the upper rim. The huge structure will require 3,400,000 cubic yards of concrete, and in order to complete this item in the estimated time, the contractors will have to pour 7 1/2 cubic yards of concrete per minute on an eight-hour day basis. The top of the dam will be only 400 feet below the rim of Boulder canyon, and the great barrier will impound 30,500,000 acre feet of water, creating a lake which will extend 110 miles to the Grand canyon, 14 times larger than the present world's biggest artificial lake behind the Assuan dam in Egypt. With the triple purpose of flood control, supplying water to southern California, and development of power, Hoover dam will pay for itself in 50 years. Destined to rise 720 feet high from the bottom of the canyon, it will stand as man's greatest monument in harnessing the forces of nature to his will. Photo shows Boulder canyon from the air above the site of Hoover dam. Two of the four 4,000-foot diversion tunnels, on which the greater part of the 16 tons of dynamite used each day is being used, may be seen on opposite sides of the river.

STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

THAT was a royal quarrel there in the Green Forest on that beautiful morning, and the more dreadful because of that. Quarrels are dreadful, anyway, are between those who are looked up to. Sammy Jay and Chatterer the Red Squirrel are forever quarreling, and it is never nice to see or hear them. But bad as one of their quarrels is, it is nothing compared to this quarrel between Buster Bear and King Eagle. You know, once upon a time, long, long ago, Buster's great-great-ever-so-great-grandfather was king of the forest, and King Eagle's great-great-ever-so-great-grandfather was king of the air. And now here their great-great-ever-so-great-grandchildren quarreling just like the most common of common people. It was shocking.

It would have been bad enough if there had been the least shadow of an excuse, but there wasn't. No, sir, there wasn't the least shadow of an excuse. They were quarreling over a fish which didn't belong to either of them. Plunger the Fish Hawk had caught it, and as he was flying home with it King Eagle, who has a fondness for fish, had made him drop it, and then hadn't been able to catch it before it reached the ground. It was just chance that that fish had fallen right where Buster Bear was sitting, and so he claimed it as his own.

Now King Eagle is not one to easily give up. You see, he has always been used to having his way. That is the way with kings. He had a very wholesome respect for Buster Bear's great strength, and his great paws and claws, but he didn't propose to give up that fish without a struggle.

"Robber!" he hissed as he circled above Buster's head watching for a chance to dart down and tear Buster's coat with his great hooked claws.

"Robber yourself!" roared Buster, turning so as always to face King Eagle. "You're just a great bully and nothing more. You can't catch fish, and so you rob those who can."

This was true, and it didn't improve King Eagle's temper to be told so. He called Buster all the bad names he could think of, and he made fun of him because he was no longer king of the forest. All the time he kept wheeling and turning just out of Buster's reach and pretending to dart down at him. Once he succeeded in striking Buster from behind before Buster could turn, and once Buster pulled out a couple of King Eagle's white tail feathers. Buster's little eyes blazed with anger, and there was a savage gleam in the eyes of King Eagle. And such a screaming and growling as there was! It brought everyone within hearing to watch. It is queer how quickly news of such unpleasant things can travel. In a surprisingly short time there was a ring of little forest and meadow people peeping out from safe hiding places. None of them knew what the quarrel was about, but all took sides as a matter of course. The birds wanted King Eagle to win, and the animals wanted Buster to win, and all the time they wondered what this dreadful quarrel was about.

"Robber!" He Hissed as He Circled Over Buster's Head.

Now as is the way with people who quarrel, it wasn't long before Buster Bear and King Eagle were so intent upon their quarrel that they gave no thought at all to what they were quarreling about, and little by little they got farther away from the fish which had made all this trouble. Suddenly King Eagle remembered. Buster Bear was now so far from where the fish had fallen that if he were quick he might swoop down, snatch it and be away before Buster could get him. Watching his chance, he swooped over Buster's head and down to the place where he had last seen the fish, his great claws outstretched to seize it. There was no fish there!

For the Whole Family

Natty spring designs for the whole family, as shown recently in New York, include a dress specially designed for the short woman, on conservative but flattering lines, a girl's coat very trim with its raglan sleeves and high three button effect, and a girl's dress with a simple embroidered design.—Woman's Home Companion.

A FEW TASTY DISHES

SOME one has discovered that adding a bit of vinegar, about one teaspoonful, to a pea or bean soup that seems too thin, thickens it at once and leaves no taste of vinegar.

Croquettes are so much better if they are soft and creamy when served. By adding a teaspoonful of softened gelatin to the mixture before cooling it stiffens them enough to handle, and when cooked are creamy.

Dutch Sauce for Fish.—Take one cupful of liquid in which boiled fish has been cooked, add one cupful of milk. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, add two tablespoonfuls of flour, the liquid after the flour and butter has been mixed, a teaspoonful of lemon juice, one-half teaspoonful of salt and the lightly beaten yolks of the eggs carefully added. Fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs after taking from the heat. Add a little minced parsley, if desired.

Luncheon Dish.—Remove the sardines from the box neatly and entirely (if possible). Place on a platter and surround with water cress or parsley. Cut radishes into tulips with a sharp knife, rolling back the petals to make them look like the flower. Arrange these in the cress or parsley and serve with the sardines.

The southern custom of serving a demi tasse of strong coffee, accompanied by sugar to guests in the house before they came down for breakfast, is one that is being taken up by hotels and dining car service.

Orange Fruit Cake.—Cream one-fourth cupful of butter, add one-half of a third cupful of sugar, one egg beaten light, the remaining sugar and two-thirds of a cupful of orange marmalade. Sift two cupfuls of flour with one teaspoonful of baking powder, one-eighth teaspoonful of soda and cinnamon, the same of cloves, add one-third cupful each of chopped orange peel and nutmeats. Bake in one loaf about one hour.

REWARD

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WHEN we lie sleeping
In our little plot,
That other hands are keeping
Green or not,
What shall we care for,
If we care at all,
Be hoping, waiting, there for,
Spring and fall?

It won't be roses,
Roses once a year,
Nor not, as man supposes,
Be a tear.
In your tomorrow,
After our today,
We would not have you sorrow,
But be gay.

May man or woman,
Some one passing by,
Seek out the little tomb in
Which we lie,
And say, "He lifted
Loads he never knew,
And, even when I drifted,
Brought me through."

When freed the spirit,
When our work is done,
It will be sweet to hear it,
Even one—
To know forever,
After work and pain,
Not all of our endeavor
Was in vain.

A White Terror of the North Atlantic

ICEBERGS, the white terrors of the North Atlantic ship lanes, are on their annual migration from the Arctic to their doom in the warm waters of the gulf stream. Already North Atlantic traffic lanes have been moved 60 miles southward by order of the ice patrol which reports that some 350 bergs will move southward during the 1932 ice season of April, May and June.

Icebergs have always been the dread of the transatlantic navigator. They drift hither and yon. They give no warning of their presence. They are propelled now by ocean currents, now by tides, and now by winds and waves. Fog is their constant companion.

A vessel speeding through an area infested with moving ice, during night or in fog, plays a game of chance. Even on a starlit night a berg cannot be seen beyond a half mile; but when the position of the ice is known to the navigator, the danger is eliminated; he can alter his course to avoid the menace.

The ice comes down every year, as it has for centuries; but now every berg that follows the eastern edge of the Grand Banks into the steamer lanes is kept under surveillance by the international ice patrol. From this service navigators can learn the answer to the question which each asks: "Where is the ice?" Not a single ship has been lost through collision with an iceberg since the patrol was inaugurated.

Greenland's "icy mountains" alone are the source of the icebergs that come as far south as the steamer lanes, journeying about 1,800 miles—approximately the distance from Washington, D. C., to Denver—before they become "white specters" to shipping.

With the exception of a small strip of coast line, Greenland is completely covered with a vase ice cap. Its estimated thickness is 5,000 feet.

Always the ice mantle is moving down the slope of the land toward the sea, in great glaciers, pushing out through the valleys. As the ice reaches the sea it noses out into the water until buoyancy lifts it up, and then the front of the glacier breaks off at a weak spot.

There is a deafening roar and a tidal splash the glacial fragment plunges heavily into the sea, almost submerging. The water is churned into creamy waves as the newborn berg shakes off the sea, regains its equilibrium, and settles itself comfortably for a long journey southward.

There are eight principal berg-producing glaciers in Greenland. The worst offenders are those of Disko bay, Jakobshaven, and Torsukatak, Karajak, and Umanak on the west coast.

Bergs are discharged in vast numbers from these and other Greenland fjords. Yet few come south of Newfoundland. Many are too small to last long.

Only the fittest survive the buffetings of the sea, to be carried south on the flow of the Labrador current and along the eastern edge of the banks into the gulf stream. This warm current gives them short shrift; but until they have dwindled to the size of an ample library desk they are capable of staying in a vessel's plates.

The Labrador current, although a danger carrier, has its usefulness. It teems with all kinds of marine life, affording breeding and feeding grounds for our best food fish.

The berg danger period coincides with the heavy flow period of the Labrador current each year—that is, from March 1 to July 1. It is during this period that the cutters patrol the ice-endangered areas.

Two cutters are assigned to the ice patrol, with a third cutter held in reserve. The cutter on duty is a busy place every day. To carry out the orders, "to locate the icebergs and ice fields nearest the transatlantic steamship lanes, and to determine the southerly, easterly and westerly limits of the ice as it moves to the southward, and keep track of all ice seen or reported," is not an easy task.

The oceanographer's day begins before the break of dawn, because he must get star sights for position if the fog permits, the first of the series to be made and checked all during the day.

At six o'clock the first ice broadcast goes out to the ships with modern equipment: "Patrol vessel near two bergs—latitude, 42 degrees 30 minutes; longitude, 48 degrees 30 minutes; set and drift, 180 degrees five-tenths of a knot per hour; foggy, smooth sea." Added to this will be the position of perhaps twenty other bergs.

The set and drift data enable the ship navigators to know that the two bergs, which are the two southernmost, are coming south at the speed given.

The oceanographer notices, while plotting the water temperature, reports from ship that their present courses might carry them close to a number of dangerous bergs. An ice warning is immediately dispatched, which the vessels acknowledge with thanks. The vessels alter their courses to clear the ice.

On the great steamer lane between Europe and America liners, cargo carriers, and tramps pass constantly. It is an avenue of the sea just as much as Michigan boulevard or Fifth avenue is a heavy traffic street. On what is known as the "westbound tracks" are the ships coming from Europe, and on the "eastbound tracks," 60 miles south, are the ships going to Europe.

All vessels off the tracks are reported for violation of the rules. A vessel off the track is just as dangerous as an iceberg or a derelict. The ice patrol cutter stands as a traffic officer on this avenue of the sea. If the ice threatens blockage, the cutter sets the stop sign and turns the traffic into a "side street" detour to the south.

Three separate charts are plotted recording the ship's ice and water temperatures. The latter is very important, because by using from 900 to 1,300 messages in 15 days one can locate the "cold wall," the line of demarcation between the gulf stream water and the cold Labrador current water.

The Danger Line.

This line is the danger line, because icebergs that are perils to shipping seldom cross it. The location of it at the beginning of the season is an index to the severity of conditions to be expected.

A berg that crosses the line commits quick suicide, for water at 55 to 60 degrees melts ice very rapidly. A big berg will disappear seven days after it crosses the line.

The cold wall is easy to see. North of it the ocean is a beautiful olive green, south of it the water is indigo blue. The higher content of microscopic marine life gives the Labrador current its olive-green tone.

The prow of a cutter can be in green water of 40 degrees Fahrenheit, the stern in warm blue water, that registers 60 degrees. The crew may swim in tropical temperature water, while half a mile away to the north floats a large iceberg, drifting in cold water.

As a boat approaches a floating ice island a sizzling sound become audible. Close attention shows that this comes from small pieces of ice slipping off into the sea. Unlike ordinary ice lumps, the pieces effervesce. This is a peculiarity of glacial ice, due, in all probability, to the fact that it is compacted of snow.

Thousands of Americans sailed to Europe last year. Few of them were aware, as they retired to their staterooms at night, of what precautions were being taken for their safety. They did not know that in the radio room on the upper deck of their ships, a message from the ice patrol was coming in, telling about fog and icebergs.

Nor did they realize that their liner was reporting a coast guard cutter drifting on the Grand Banks, so that officers on the cutter could check to learn if the liner's course was entirely clear of danger.

The Titanic catastrophe in April, 1912, shocked the entire world, and a universal demand for a patrol gave birth to the International Ice patrol. Immediately after the Titanic disaster the United States navy detailed two cruisers for guard duty until the last bergs disappeared from the steamer lanes in late June. In the spring of 1913 two revenue cutters were detailed to carry out the patrol.

During the fall of the same year the international conference for the safety of life at sea was convened at London, to organize this patrol on an international basis, in recognition of its service to ships of all nations. Representatives of the principal maritime nations of the world signed the agreement on January 20, 1914, creating the International Derelict Destruction, Ice Observation, and Ice Patrol service.

The United States was asked to undertake the management of this service. This country agreed to send two vessels which would patrol the danger area during the iceberg season. Each of the contracting parties consented to bear a share of the cost in proportion to its shipping tonnage. The United States coast guard is charged with the duty of maintaining the patrol. Therefore, when the cutters sail for the Banks' ice guard every March, they go in the name of Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Germany, Great Britain, Italy, Netherlands, Norway, Sweden and the United States, but serve the shipping interests of the entire world.

DAIRY FACTS

REASONS FOR "OFF" FLAVORS IN MILK

Charged to Undue Amount of Chemical Ferment.

Unusual "off" flavors and odors in their milk have been troubling several New Hampshire dairymen recently. According to examination of samples by J. M. Fuller, professor of dairy husbandry, University of New Hampshire, the milk contains an excessive amount of a chemical ferment known as an enzyme.

The remedy is to feed a laxative roughage such as silage or soaked beef pulp and give two or three doses of Epsom salts to the "guilty" cows. Reducing the amount of grain may also help, he says. The enzyme can be destroyed by boiling the milk as soon as possible after milking.

Perhaps the best way to discover which cows are responsible is to take about a half pint of milk from each animal, place it in individual clean jars, and keep it in a warm room at about 70 degrees temperature for a least 24 hours. Examination of each sample at the end of this period should indicate the cows that are producing the troublesome product.

Examination of samples indicates that the abnormal flavor and odor were not due to ordinary souring. As a rule the trouble has occurred in small herds of five or six cows. Certain cows, usually well advanced in lactation and due to calve soon, are to blame.

In some instances a cow may give milk containing an abnormal amount of ash or minerals, with a resulting bitter taste. In most cases, however, the abnormal flavor and odor are due to an excessive amount of the enzyme, lipase, in the milk. A small quantity of this is found in normal milk.—American Agriculturist.

Hard to Explain Reason for Variation in Gains

It has been experimentally demonstrated that dairy heifers liberally fed during the winter, making gains considerably above normal, will make gains considerably below normal the following summer on grass. Why this is so no one seems to have given a satisfactory explanation.

This fact was clearly demonstrated by the results of feeding trials reported recently by the West Virginia station. In four comparisons of three groups of heifers (one group for two pasture seasons) that were self-fed grain, and given free access to roughage, the average winter gain was 316.5 lbs. per head, whereas the same heifers gained only 85.2 lbs. per head on pasture. No grain was fed on pasture.

Similar heifers hand-fed averaged 152.4 lbs. per head for the winter feeding periods and 190 lbs. per head during the pasture season. No grain was fed on pasture.

Beet Pulp for Dairy Cows

Most dairymen think it is necessary or at least desirable to soak beet pulp before feeding it to cows. Investigators at the United States dairy experiment station at Beltsville, Md., found that dry beet pulp gave as good results as the soaked beet pulp. In the experiment the cows were watered twice a day. The beet pulp when fed either wet or dry was mixed with the grain ration. The ration containing the dry beet pulp was fully as palatable as that containing the wet pulp. The cows when fed the dry pulp ate as much hay and gave as much milk as when fed the wet pulp. The gains in weight were a little greater when the cows received the wet pulp than when they were fed dry pulp.

Wheat Excellent Feed

Extensive experience of practical dairymen and careful tests at several of the leading experiment stations indicate that wheat makes a satisfactory substitute for corn in a grain mixture for dairy cows. At present prices the cost of the cow's grain feed can be reduced by making the substitution. Wheat and corn have substantially the same feeding value ton for ton.—Southern Agriculturist.

DAIRY HINTS

If your creamery isn't what it ought to be, investigate yourself first, and see if you are giving it the right support, the kind it deserves.

The winter season calls for good care and feeding of the dairy cows. Careful attention should be given to proper balancing of rations, to the water supply, and the general cow comfort. Profit dollars increase with attention to details.

James Stark's 20-cow herd of Holsteins ranks first in New York state and second in the United States in the Holstein herd test. The herd averaged, under ordinary conditions, 546 pounds of fat to the cow.

The typical New York state cow gives about 5,500 pounds of milk a year. The herds in dairy herd improvement associations averaged 8,047 pounds to the cow last year. Economists say a cow must give at least 7,000 pounds of milk to pay profits.

SORES SABBATH DAY OF REST AND WORSHIP

At the time Moses was given the Ten Commandments the Sabbath day was the seventh day of the week, one of the feast days. After he had received the Commandments, the Sabbath day was observed as a day of rest and worship. It was to this ancient Jewish Sabbath that the Fourth Commandment referred.

The association of Sunday with the dawn of Christianity. From the beginning many Christians commemorated the first day of the week as Resurrection day, or Lord's day. There does not seem to be any evidence that the first day was originally intended as a substitute for the Jewish Sabbath. In fact, most of the early Christians observed both the Sabbath and the Lord's day.

The tendency to observe the first day of the week was confirmed by the Roman emperor Constantine in 321 A. D., when he issued the civil decree that "all the judges and townspeople, and the occupation of all traders," should "rest on the venerable day of the sun." As time passed and the Christian church grew in strength, the majority of them paid less attention to the Sabbath day and more to the Lord's day, until it finally supplanted the Sabbath. Many took the position that the first day of the week had divine sanction and that the Fourth Commandment was applicable to it instead of to the Scriptural Sabbath of the Hebrews.

SQUAW TELLS TALE OF PRIMITIVE LOVE

Remarkable Story Secured by Smithsonian Man.

Washington.—Childhood love and death in a primitive society are pictured in an intensely human document just issued by the Smithsonian institution.

It is the life story of a southern Cheyenne woman, told by herself. The narrative was secured by Dr. Truman Michelson, Smithsonian ethnologist.

There are many common elements in the life of this child of a nomadic prairie people and little girls everywhere, the autobiography bears witness.

"At first," she says, "we girls played what we called 'tiny play.' Our mothers made rag dolls like men, women, boys, girls and babies. We used forked sticks for ponies and placed the tiny people on the fork of the sticks, pretending to move camp. Sometimes a baby would be born or a marriage would take place—in fact, anything we knew about older people. We did not allow any boys to play with us. We had rag dolls to represent boys.

"As I grew a little older, we played what we called 'large play.' This play consisted of real people, namely boys and girls. The boys would go out hunting and bring meat and other food. We girls would pitch our tepees and make ready everything as if it were real camp life. Some of the boys would go on the warpath and always come home victorious. They would relate their war experiences, telling how successful they were. We girls would sing war songs to acknowledge the bravery of our heroes."

As she grew older various young braves tried to force their attentions upon her but, being an exceptionally proper maiden according to the teachings of her people, she repulsed all her suitors.

One evening she came home from a visit to a girl chum to find that a man whom she barely knew by sight had been negotiating with her father for her hand. She was told that her parents were growing old and must make some provision for the future of their children.

So, after she had consented, her relatives escorted her to a point near the camp of her intended husband. "There," she relates, "my future husband's women folks met me, carried me in a blanket the rest of the way, and let me down to the entrance of his tepee. I walked in and sat beside him. He was a stranger. He had never come to see me.

"After some little time the women brought in many shawls, dresses, rings, bracelets, leggings and moccasins. Then they had me change clothes. They braided my hair and painted my face with red dots on my cheeks."

This was her wedding attire. They were married and in the years that followed had eight children. Then, she continues, "my husband's health became broken. We summoned many Indian doctors and gave away much personal wearing apparel and some

Stores and Sales in the Small City and Rural Area

Table with columns for STATE, Population in Small City and Rural Area (Number, Per Cent of Total Population), and Stores in Small City and Rural Area (Number, Per Cent of All Stores, Sales, Per Cent of Total Sales). Includes a Totals row at the bottom.

The above figures tell the story of retail merchandising in the smaller cities—those under ten thousand population—and towns in the United States as determined by the census bureau in the first census of distribution ever taken in this country. The total population of the cities and towns of 10,000 and under and the rural areas was 64,434,969. That is 52 per cent of the population of the United States. The cities and towns of 10,000 and under contained 698,256 stores, including such places as restaurants and others in which food or other merchandise was sold. That represented 45 per cent of the business places of the United States. The total sales of these 698,256 stores or business institutions amounted to the tremendous sum of $15,415,125,000.00 during the year for which the census was taken, 1929. It meant $22,076.00 per year per store, and an average per capita sale for the people living in these cities and towns of $239.00.

clothing. One day he pledged a sacrifice offering, a sacred ritual, which is regarded as a prayer to the spirits for health and strength. But he passed away before we could carry out the pledge.

"I surely loved my husband. His death made me very lonely and was a terrible event in my life. My hair was cut off just below my ears. This was done by an old woman.

"Before cutting off my braids she first raised both her hands toward the sky, touched the earth with the palms of her hands, and made a downward motion, repeated four times. Thus, my braids were cut off in accordance with the belief that the spirits would be pleased and extend blessings and sympathy to the bereaved. The old woman was given a blanket and a dress. His death marked the passing of our tepee. If people do not come and carry away something the whole tepee is destroyed by fire."

SHORT SEA CRUISE BUSINESS BOOMING

Tourists Desert Atlantic Lanes for South Seas.

New York.—Hard times are booming the "short haul" cruise business for the steamship companies these days. New liners, many of them drawn from the once crowded but now all but deserted transatlantic lanes, are joining the teeming fleet between here and Bermuda, Cuba and Central and South American ports almost monthly. New lines are entering the scramble for "chicken feed" profits every season.

It's an ill trade wind that blows no steamship line good in these times of changing business methods and standards.

A survey of the different lines terminating here revealed that the number of tourist passengers making the four to sixteen-day vacation trips between this port and such favorite playgrounds as Nassau, Havana and the Canal Zone during the winter just past will probably double those of the previous winter.

None of the competing companies was willing to furnish exact figures on its business and some of them insisted that they had even suffered a decrease but the consensus of "guesses" was that when the final returns are in a good 50 per cent jump in cruise profits will be disclosed.

Part of the increase is, of course, at the expense of transatlantic travel. The depression has made European junkets too expensive for hundreds of purses formerly able to stand the strain and many of these which have had to take the count are compromising on little flyers to nearby ports. For instance, statistics show that only 624,050 fare-paying passengers made the trip between European and American ports last year against a total of 1,288,630 in 1930 and 1,139,910 the year before. Passport figures "to June 30, 1931," were 89,323 (excluding 17,373 renewals), as compared with 145,966 "to June 30, 1930." In 1929 the total was 196,930 and in 1928 it was 180,308.

But a good share of the "short haul" increase can be traced to the growing popularity of the "ocean vacation" idea with the rank and file. Thousands, literally, who never dreamed of being able to take a trip to Europe in the old days have discovered to their great joy in the last two or three years that a little "run down to the Bermudas" or some other nearby port is well within their reach and that it costs no more in the long run than a vacation spent at some of the more popular playgrounds of this country.

HOUSEHOLD ITEMS

Tie a little bow of bright-colored ribbon on the handles of the scissors and they can be quickly found in the sewing basket.

Coarse salt, such as is used in making ice cream, scattered over the bottom of a garbage can will prevent garbage freezing to the can.

A tablespoonful each of butter and of flour added to each quart of soup is the correct amount of thickening to use when making cream soup.

If dates are too hard to use for cooking cover them with warm water, and after five minutes they will be soft and blend with other ingredients.

Grease the measuring cup before measuring sirup or molasses and the ingredient will not stick to the sides of the cup and there will be no waste.

AS GOOD AS HIS NEIGHBORS

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK Emeritus Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

Goodwin is running a little church up in a country village where, if the truth be told, there are perhaps too many churches striving to put across their own particular dogmas and at the same time to maintain an existence and a semblance of influence.

"How are you getting on?" I inquired of Goodwin when we met at the club in the city. I had known him years before when he was a younger and a more energetic man.

"Oh! moderately," he said, "we don't have the interest or the enthusiasm which I should like. The membership isn't increasing as one would wish it were, and it's pretty difficult to keep our heads above the financial waters, but I suppose I should not complain or be dissatisfied, for we are quite as good as our neighbors."

I didn't tell him that to be as good as one's neighbors is often to be commonplace and ineffective, for the neighbors are not always getting on in any amazing way.

Blake is running a store down town. There is nothing in his show windows to attract attention. If in walking down the street you should pass his place of business, you would not hesitate at his door attracted by anything more than ordinary in the display. Blake's stock is surely as good as that of some of his neighbors; the attention you would receive if you went within would be the ordinary attention of clerks who are a little bored with their jobs and not incited by any business ambitions some day to be the best salesman in town. Possibly they are as good as their neighbors, but that is only faint praise at best.

No Snap for Members of U. S. Marine Band

Anyone who thinks a member of the United States Marine Band has a soft snap of it should take a trip to the Marine barracks and get a glimpse of the musicians at work. There's no chance for temperament in the daily routine of the Marine Band which is heard in the National 4-H club program of the National Farm and Home Hour on the first Saturday of each month.

Rehearsals are serious occasions when every man is tuned up to concert pitch, for every member of the band understands the high expectations of the American public when the United States Marine Band appears in radio broadcasts.

Captain Taylor Branson, renowned leader of the band, wields the baton for the organization, and his able directing and intimate understanding of arrangements play a big part in the splendid performances.

Besides the vigorous rehearsals, there are numerous engagements to be filled by the Marine Band which is in constant demand for diplomatic functions, civic and patriotic parades, White House concerts and the various governmental and social affairs that play a part in the daily life of the Nation's Capital.

And heavyweight Ham Fisher, cartoonist-creator of the comic strip on which the act is based, who sparred in school, hobnobbed with all the fighters and still works out with them. . . . Ted Husing, ring-side commentator at Palooka bouts, who took it on the chin while in the army. . . . Harry von Zell, program announcer, once an amateur lightweight boxer of the Pacific coast. Four rather distinct types of essential oils are secured from the orange tree and its fruit. Orange oil is derived by pressing the rind of either the sweet or bitter orange; bergamot oil, extracted from the rind of a special variety of orange cultivated almost exclusively in Italy and Corsica for its essential oil content; petit-grain oil, produced by distillation of the leaves and twigs of the bitter orange, and orange flower, or neroli oil, distilled or extracted from the fresh flowers of the bitter orange trees. Orange oil is the only one of these products which is made in the United States.

THE STORY

Six bandits board the steamer, Midnight Sun, tied to the bank of the Mackenzie, hold up Father Claverly and other passengers, kill Jimmy Montgomery, formerly of the Mounted, and get away with gold dust and furs. Corp. Bill Hardsock reports the crime to Sgt. Alan Baker at the Mounted Police post at Fort Endurance.

He thought: "I can't blame her for not wanting to live here in the North. Her brother died here; she hasn't any friends; these folks don't understand her. If she wants to live in a city, that's as natural, as much her right, as my wanting to live in this North country. She'd like to have pleasures, clothes, and other things we'll have when I take that Victoria job. Wouldn't any girl want them?"

Bill Hardsock came past the alcove window, hatless, excited. Elizabeth saw him, and realized her talk with Alan was broken. But she did not greatly care. She had given him her ultimatum, she had headed off any antagonism; and what she said about Haskell had galled him as nothing else could have done.

She half-whispered, running her fingers through his hair, "You've been here less than an hour; we've had less than ten minutes together, and now—now something else happens and you'll be gone again." She kissed him quickly and turned away.

As Bill Hardsock stamped into the cabin he burst out: "Oh Lord, Alan, Sammy-hell sure popped down river! The Midnight Sun, bringing up a raft of furs from the Ramparts country, and gold dust, too, a whole wad of it from the Peel and Arctic Red Placers. . . . Down there, mouth of the Big Aloooska, when she was taking on wood, half a dozen men bounced her in broad daylight, and robbed her there, right this close to us—"

"Robbed her? Whaa-t!"
"That's what they did. They came over the side like as if they were ordinary trappers; they got a clean drop on the crowd, and had the run of the boat for better'n half an hour!"
Alan leaped to the all-important question. "They didn't escape, Bill? They didn't get by with a trick like that?"

Scarcely hearing him, Bill kept pouring out his news. "They took more'n three hundred pounds of dust, and sorted out half a dozen packs of the best and lightest furs. Alan, they shot and killed Jimmy Montgomery! He was the only one that drew a gun against 'em, and a rifle bullet got him cold."

Alan's face went pale. The news of the robbery had been dazing enough to him; but now, this crashing shock of Jimmy's death. . . . His lips fashioned silently, "They killed Jimmy. . . . A rifle bullet. . . . He was the only one who drew a gun—" But he could not speak; he could only stare at Bill.
"And if Father Claverly hadn't stepped in and helped stop a rush, Alan, they'd have shot up the whole deck. They slung the dust and furs into their canoes, and. . . . Did they get away? What brought me busting up the river? I hope they did—clean, slicker'n a whistle!"

In the pause then, Alan fought to shake off his daze. He had to make the plans, fling out a patrol, get into action. It was all in his hands—the pursuit, the capture, the whole heavy responsibility.

He demanded: "Who were they? Trappers, did you say?"
"Un't know who, Alan. But strangers. Five whites and one 'breed."
"Strangers? Can't be! Not in this country!"

"But that's what they were. Nobody on the boat had ever seen a single one of 'em."
Alan did not believe this, but for the moment he passed it up.

"Which way did they go? Have motors on their canoes?"
"No. Paddle craft. They whipped up the Big Aloooska."

For a little space Alan stood thinking. Why had those bandits staged their robbery there at the mouth of the Aloooska, instead of farther down north, at some lonely reach along the Mackenzie? In an instant he saw the answer to that question. They had chosen with an eye to a quick escape, an escape to the best hiding place in all Mackenzie territory.

As he imagined them whipping up the Big Aloooska, whipping up that lonely spruce-buried river past MacMillan's trading post, his thoughts leaped to Joyce, and a fear came into his eyes.

Echoing this very fear, Bill said: "They'll have to pass MacMillan's place, Alan. Ten chances to one, Dave's gone out somewhere after spring peltry and Joyce is there all by herself."

"But maybe they won't stop," Alan argued. His words were more a prayer for Joyce. "They'll probably try to sneak past. . . ." He broke off: "Bill, go down to barracks, find Ped, tell him to get the launch in shape to travel. While you're doing that, I'll go tell Haskell."

Halfway down the slope Alan came upon Constable Larry Younge, who was spreading Haskell's bed clothing on the grassy terrace to sun.

An older man, past forty, a native of this Waterways country, Larry had spent his boyhood years living with Crees and Chipewyans; and by easy odds he was the best bush detective in the whole division. But in matters of discipline he was worse than Bill Hardsock, for he was older, more set in his ways, more resentful of personal affront. Months ago Haskell had busted him from a corporal; and by humiliating him with orderly duties, he had been trying to make Larry kneel under. Waiting for another month's pay so he could buy out of the Mounted, Larry was going about his "squaw work" with stoical face, chalking up his personal score against the day when he would be out of service and could settle with Haskell in man-to-man fashion.

Alan stared him: "Larry, drop that. Go and help Bill out. He'll tell you what's up."

It was rare that Inspector Haskell allowed his temper to get the upper hand. He had learned self-control in the hard army school, and he considered that any exhibition of temper was a plebeian thing. But when Alan Baker came into the cabin, Haskell was thoroughly and hotly angered.

A dozen things had happened this morning to irritate him. Constable Whipple, his stool pigeon, a thin clerkish recruit whom he had brought along to Endurance, had repeated several infuriating jokes about him which the men were tossing back and forth in barracks. A few minutes ago Bill Hardsock, plainly carrying important news, had brushed past him as though he had not existed, and had taken the news straight to Alan Baker. And just now through the open door he had seen Baker order Larry Younge to drop work assigned by a superior officer and do something else.

To be so plainly ignored by his own men when any matter of importance came up, made him appear a nobody. To have Baker issuing orders and getting a patrol ready without first consulting him, seemed to him a gross violation of discipline. He had formerly been forced to let Baker have his way in managing the post; but now, shocked at realizing how very little he himself amounted to here, and confident that his six months of experience made him capable of running the detachment himself, he had sworn he was going to come down on these men and come down hard.

But the secret and real source of his anger was a deep smoldering jealousy of Baker because of Elizabeth Spaulding. More clearly at every talk with her, he saw she trusted Baker, liked him, and was going to marry him. Her cool inaccessibility maddened Haskell; and her comparison between him and a ninety-month sergeant cut his pride to the quick.

Pretty, cool, a trifle naughty, she was just the kind of girl who suited him, and was the only person here at Endurance whom he cared to associate with. His admiration had mounted, it had quickened with passion, it had become a fire in his blood—the first and only passionate affection he had ever known. His life, formerly so leisurely and purposeless, had taken on an aim, a goal. That goal was to smash her engagement and wrest her away from Baker.

As Alan now hurried into the cabin, Haskell swung on him:

"Don't you know better than to come bursting into an officer's quarters without knocking and asking permission? Go out and try it again."

His words went past Alan unheeded. Alan's mind was too much a turmoil. . . . Jimmy murdered, Joyce alone there on the lonely savage Aloooska, those six bandit strangers escaping with their loot. . . . There was but one thought in his mind—to overhaul those two canoes before they were lost beyond all pursuit.

Forgetting even his salute, he came across to the desk. As though checked

Grateful and Beautiful Tribute to Loved Wife

Those who report the inscriptions in old burying grounds do so ordinarily to call attention to what is quaint, untutored and bizarre. A different quest in these days might have as its object the discovery of inscriptions which testify, with simple sincerity, to long lives of joint happiness. The present-day world benefits by every reminder that there were such and always are.

Perhaps in all New England there is no more graceful tribute to a grateful devotion than that upon a headstone, placed not so many years ago, in the old Grove Street cemetery in New Haven. It was placed there at the grave of his wife by a physician whose high skill and learning were long in the service of the community and of the Yale Medical school, whose courtesy and graciousness became a tradition and who bore worthily a great name, Francis Bacon. Below her name and the fact that she was his wife, he added: "For forty years the crown of his felicity."—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

by the look on his face, Haskell did not repeat the reprimand. Instead he listened silently while Alan reported the robbery, murder, escape.
"They're heading up the Big Aloooska toward a muskeg country lying back there in the northeast," Alan explained quickly. "It's called the Thal-Azzah, the Land of Many Waters. It's ten thousand square miles of criss-cross waterways—lakes, channels, slow creeks, and soup-thin bog all covered with flags and willows. They're heading for the Thal-Azzah. That's why they staged the robbery at the Aloooska mouth—so they'd have a straight shoot into that muskeg. If they reach it we might never get them. I'm going to take the launch and the five men I've got—"

Haskell stiffened. In sarcastic tones he interrupted: "You've got? Just a second, Baker. It would be a little better form to give your report and possibly make suggestions, and then allow me, as officer commanding here, to issue orders."

Alan stared at him in surprise. After all the long months of the winter past when he had initiated every patrol that went out, he was totally unprepared for this testy reprimand. An anger rose in him at Haskell's choosing to bandy personalities just now when those two canoes were whipping up the Aloooska.

Trying to fight down his impatience, he said: "Maybe it was tactless of me. But all along I've been—"

"Yes, certainly—acting as though you were O. C. around here. You didn't appreciate tolerance when you had it. You can take note from now on you haven't got it! I'll issue the orders about this patrol."

Abruptly he turned away to the wall behind him where a map of the Endurance country was tacked up. A big six-foot-square mosaic, it was the inspector's own handiwork—a synthesis of government reports, explorers' sketches and unreliable Indian accounts. Though a few of the larger details were correct, in Alan's eyes it was a clumsy and ridiculous piece of charting.

As he waited, swearing at this loss of precious minutes, Alan happened to see Constable Whipple over in a corner, making inventory entries at a table. He said:

"Whipple, you'd better knock off on that and get into fatigue clothes. We'll need all the men on this patrol."

Whipple did not obey him, or stir, but waited for the inspector's orders. Alan later remembered, to his heavy cost and sorrow, how Whipple had sat there in the corner, listening, scratching away with a pen, while Bill and Larry and Pedneault were down at the wharf hurriedly making ready.

In helpless exasperation at Haskell, he thought: "Good Lord, aren't you ever going to get through studying that crazy d-d map?" Back of this change in Haskell, this angry decision to run Endurance according to his own notions, Alan sensed an ugly hostility against him personally. He was quite well aware of the cause of that bad blood. He had not been blind these last months; he knew Haskell was madly in love with Elizabeth.

Presently, turning around from his map, Haskell said:
"I see that the Big Aloooska, about a hundred miles northeast from its mouth, divides into two branches."
To hurry this talk up, Alan stepped around behind the desk, and pointed at the map as he spoke.

"Yes, that forks is called Big Leavings. But it's farther east than your map shows; it's nearer two hundred miles. Here's MacMillan's trading post. Here's the Forks. The right branch leads southeast through this. . . . It should be marked timber country. The left branch goes northeast into the big muskeg. About here is where the Thal-Azzah should be marked. They're heading up this left branch for the Thal-Azzah—"

Interrupting, Haskell demanded, "How do you know they're doing that?"

"I don't know, but it's a sensible guess. The Thal-Azzah is a hiding place made to order, and they're surely breaking for it."

Who Was Who?

By Louise M. Comstock

BROTHER JONATHAN

BACK in Revolutionary days it was Brother Jonathan, not Uncle Sam who stood for all the faults and virtues of this country. Even George Washington, when confronted by a knotty problem of state, was wont to say "We will have to see what Brother Jonathan has to say about it."

Brother Jonathan was Jonathan Trumbull, governor of Connecticut at the time of the Revolution, one of our first great patriots. He was also ancestor of an illustrious line of Trumbulls, including John, artist, who in 1786 painted the huge historical pictures in the rotunda of the Capitol, and the modern governor of Connecticut, John H. Trumbull, whose daughter not so long ago married John Coolidge.

Of all colonial governors in office at the outbreak of the Revolution, Jonathan Trumbull alone was loyal to the colonies. Throughout the duration of the war his store at Lebanon, Conn., was a sort of "war office" where supplies were collected and shipped off to the armies, usually under his own supervision; and in his simple home he sheltered Washington and Franklin. Jefferson, Adams, LaFayette. It was he who financed Ethan Allen's successful expedition against Fort Ticonderoga. When courage lagged he made speeches which stirred up patriotism and won volunteer soldiers, and his state furnished more troops than any other except Massachusetts. Jonathan Trumbull died in 1785, at the age of seventy-five.

TOM THUMB

TOM THUMB, so famous a midget that his name has become synonymous, almost, for any of those tiny people at whom the world always wonders, and sometimes laughs, was a real enough person, but even his real life smacked somehow of the theater.

The famous midget was only fourteen years old when, under the expert management of that famous showman, P. T. Barnum, he ceased to be mere Charles Heywood Stratton of Bridgeport, Conn., and became Gen. Tom Thumb, symbol of all the midgets who ever graced a circus side-show and compared heights with the tall man. In 1854 Barnum took his find to England where the handsome dwarf was presented to Queen Victoria, and to Paris. The trip was a huge financial success. After their return to this country Barnum decided a little romance would be good publicity for Tom and imported into his company Lavinia Warren, plump and pretty, who boasted 32 inches to Tom's 36 and weighed 29 pounds. Shortly thereafter, attended by the bride's sister, Minnie Warren and Commodore Nutt whom she later married, Lavinia and Tom were united in holy matrimony in an elaborate church ceremony attended by the best society and the most colorful show people and liberally written up in the papers.

Starting at a salary in keeping with his size, three dollars a week, Tom made a mint of money in the show business, eventually lost most of it at poker and died, of apoplexy, in 1883; after, it is said, 20 years of happy married life. Lavinia Thumb later married an Italian dwarf named Count Primo Magri and continued in the show business.

BLUEBEARD

COMPARED to his prototypes in real life the Bluebeard of our fairy story books was a mild and benevolent man. King Henry VIII ran him a close second in the matter of winning and disposing of wives, forbidden doors and box lids abound in literature, from the myth of Pandora down, and it is quite probable that the arch-villain Bluebeard is merely a compilation of many bad men of legend and folk tale all rolled into one.

If credit for inspiring this famous character, however, is to be given any one man, he was Gilles de Razin, one of Joan of Arc's generals and a marshal of France during the Fifteenth century, whose villainies make Bluebeard appear a meek and home-loving husband. Gilles inherited a large fortune and political prominence; the first he squandered, the second he disgraced. When bankrupt he turned to alchemy, sought the favor, so they say, of the devil through black magic, made human sacrifice of innumerable little boys and girls, and is said to have been the one to betray Joan of Arc to the hands of the English. The church finally convicted him of sorcery, and he was burned at the stake for his atrocious cruelties in 1440. The story-book version of Bluebeard first appeared in the famous French collection of Perrault in 1697.

We Learn by Example

Thus Sully points out, for example: "A child will profit more by daily companionship with an acute observer, be he teacher or playfellow, than by systematic attempts to train the senses." "The deepest spring of action in us is the sight of action in another," James says. "The spectacle of effort is what awakens and sustains our own effort."—Henry C. King in "Rational Loving."

NEURALGIA

THE agonizing aches from neuralgia can be quieted in the same way you would end a headache. Take some Bayer Aspirin. Take enough to bring complete relief. Genuine aspirin can't hurt anybody.

Men and women bent with rheumatism will find the same wonderful comfort in these tablets. They aren't just for headaches or colds! Read the proven directions covering a dozen other uses; neuritis, sciatica; lumbago; muscular pains.

Cold, damp days which penetrate to the very bones have lost their terror for those who carry Bayer Aspirin! All druggists, in the familiar little box:

NO TABLETS ARE GENUINE BAYER ASPIRIN WITHOUT THIS CROSS

Log Finally Vanishes

A spruce log, 28 feet long and 14 feet in diameter, which was the butt of a tree that took 11 flat cars to carry, finally went down to the bay with a tide after being in the Columbia Box and Lumber company's mill pond at South Bend, Wash., for 20 years. The log could not be hauled into the head rig without tearing out part of the mill building. It finally was pushed into the current—a much scarred derelict.

One's pocketbook always sways his opinions.

End "Nagging"

SEE is easy to look at, but hard to get along with. Always faultfinding. . . scolding. . . bothered by "nerves." How unhappy she is! And so is her husband. And yet, the "balance" that comes from good health and steady nerves would make a tremendous difference in their lives.
Fellows' Syrup will help! It will improve the appetite, "tone up" the system, and so increase vitality. It is a wonderful medicine for the "run down." Ask your druggist for genuine.

FELLOWS' SYRUP

Practical Eugenics

The idea of a settlement of men and women of perfect physical and mental specimens occurred to Albert Dachtel and, after preaching his doctrine for a while, he succeeded in arousing an interest in his proposition to the extent that the city of Strasbourg placed a site at his disposal. Up to this time 150 modern houses have been constructed and occupied by couples brought together by this means. Each couple was accepted only after they had undergone an examination and had come up to the physical requirements and had expressed their desire to raise a family about them. The result is that the birth rate is much higher than in Strasbourg and the behavior of the citizens is said to be exemplary.

Acquainted

Mrs. B went to call on Gerald's mother and was telling her about a family that had recently moved into the neighborhood.
"Have they any children?" asked Gerald's mother.
"Two little boys," answered Mrs. B.
"I don't believe Gerald knows them," remarked the mother.
"Oh, yes I do," Gerald piped up. "I know one of 'em well, mother. I knocked out his two front teeth."

Think It Over

Always laugh when you can; it is cheap medicine. Merriment is a philosophy not well understood. It is the sunny side of existence.
If you have the gift of sarcasm, don't be personal.

Judge for Yourself

"Is he generous?"
"He throws his money about like glue."

security to fully protect the Government's interest. While the Government pays only 3 1/2% to 4% on such money as is borrowed for the purpose of the Corporation, the interest charged the borrowers by the Corporation is 5 1/2%, the earnings represented by the difference in these interest rates going to pay the cost of the Corporation, the balance to be turned into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

The War Finance Corporation, organized in April, 1918, when the banking and manufacturing facilities of the country were inadequate to handle the tremendous volume of business incident to the war, is the counterpart of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, except that the latter was created to protect the savings and the interests of the people generally, rather than to expand industry and business to expand. An inspection of the records of the War Finance Corporation shows that the Government lost not one dollar through its operations. As a matter of fact, a profit was shown. A similar profit is expected to be realized from the operations of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, inasmuch as every applicant who secures a loan pays well for that privilege.

The necessity of the establishment of this Corporation is beyond question. Banks were failing everywhere. More than 4600 closed their doors during the years 1930 and 1931. Failures of banks are of interest to the general public for many reasons, not the least of which is that the assets of banks are made up almost entirely of the deposits placed therein by the general public. Bank failures bring to the communities in which they occur suffering and hardships of every description. Anything which contributes to the stability of banks, contributes to the comfort, welfare and peace of mind of all our people.
