The accident occurred near the Nelson Johnson farm on the Wilber road. Mr. Boyle was knocked unconscious, suffered a compound fracture of the right leg, his scalp was severely lacerated, and he received other injuries. Mr. Duckwitz's scalp was lacerated and received minor injuries. Dr. C. F. Smith was called to the scene. He put splints on the broken leg, stitched up the wounds and rendered first aid. The two men were then taken to Omer hospital.

CLYDE DOUGLAS WESTERVELT

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Westervelt of Rose City mourn the loss of their infant son, Clyde Douglas, who was born Tuesday, May 3, and passed away Thursday, May 5th.

On Saturday, under leaden skies and dripping rain, the little white casket was placed beneath the sod in the family lot of Evergreen cemetery at Hale. Rev. E. A. Flory conducted the funeral service.

THE TIMBERJACKS SERMONETTE

To my mind bore dry should have been studied in regard to its effectiveness as shown by the history made by the law that no liquor should be sold to an Indian, and the rule that no liquor should be brought into the camp of the Timberjacks. Both law and rule proved as serious as the present Eighteenth Amendment in securing obedience. Camp owners who made the rule were often innocent furnishers and payers of gallon jugs labeled "lemon" or "vanilla extract" that were ordered for the cook camp. The choreboy was wise as to the real contents of the jugs. One night he had made for himself a bowl of hot whiskey sling when he heard voices outside the camp. His ailment was not so serious but that he could think quickly, move swiftly, and the hot sling disappeared into the swill pail and was rushed to the pig pen. (Turn to No. 2, Back Page)

BOARD OF REVIEW

The Board of Review for the city of Tawas City will meet at the city hall Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, May 16, 17, 18 and 19.

OPERETTA GIVEN BY GLEE CLUBS PLEASES LARGE AUDIENCE

The people of Tawas City can be proud of the remarkable attainments of the music department of the local school as exemplified in the excellent production of the operetta, "Daughters of Mohammed," which was presented at the State Theatre on Wednesday evening, May 4th.

The personnel of the cast showed much care and thought in its choice. Viola Burtzloff, Elsie Mueller and Leona Ulman, dressed in their beautiful Oriental costumes, seemed truly three beautiful princesses. The character of King Mohammed, with all his pomp and glory, was well portrayed by Arnold Hoshbach. Glen Barnes made an excellent guard in the character of Hussein Baba, who always appeared with the gallant Spanish cavaliers, James Mark, Arthur Wendt, and Nathan Lincoln. The part of Kadiga, the Spanish nurse who cared for the princesses, was aptly played by Dora Mark.

The beauty of the drama was accentuated by the many dances, given by the solo dancer, Patricia Braddock; the two Spanish dancers, Phyllis Bigelow and Betty Holland; the Black Boys; and the special chorus, Evelyn Frank, Nyda Moore, Lula Robinson, Bessie Rouiller, Geraldine Fox, Rose DePotty, Arlene Leslie, Ernestine Cecil, Jessie King, and Mary Krumm.

There were many others who contributed to the success of the operetta in the personation of attendants and slave girls. All felt that their efforts were well rewarded by the large attendance.

Much credit is due Miss Marjorie Sage, who directed the operetta. Mrs. Nyda Campbell Leslie, who acted as accompanist, and Miss Opal Coon, who assisted with the grade pupils.

WILL TAKE CENSUS OF CRIPPLED CHILDREN

A greater effort than ever before will be made this spring by county school commissioners and city superintendents to secure an accurate list of crippled children in the state of Michigan.

"Equal opportunities for all," the slogan of a democracy, can not be carried out if we do not have a complete list of all children who are in need of orthopedic care. It has been discovered that the census information regarding crippled children is inaccurate. This is due to the enumerator's inability to recognize cases having slight orthopedic conditions. (Turn to No. 3, Back Page)

ANNUAL SCHOOL CENSUS

The enumerators for the annual school census begin their work this week. Everyone having children five to twenty years of age please see that their names go on the census for your district. Each name brings a certain amount of money to your district and each district wants all the names that belong on their list. This list also includes those who are under twenty and married. Please see that all such names are reported, too.

The census for crippled children includes all from birth to twenty years of age. A child handicapped in any way should be reported in order that he may receive all the help to which those children are entitled. We ask the help and cooperation of everyone in this work. Margaret E. Worden, County School Commissioner.

JOAN BLONDELL STARRED IN "FAMOUS FERGUSON CASE"

It was a murder that shocked the nation. It was "The Famous Ferguson Case."

The new First National feature picture bearing that title is coming Friday and Saturday, May 20-21, to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, and if advance reports are true the local public is going to have a plentiful supply of chills and thrills. Also it will get a peep into the real world behind the scenes of newspaper-making, such as has never before been granted to the great army of newspaper readers.

Joan Blondell plays the central role in "The Famous Ferguson Case"—that of Maizie Dickson, a "sob sister" or woman reporter for a sensational paper. She is assigned to write "sob stuff" for her sheet about the dreadful affair at Cornwall when the wealthy banker, Mr. Ferguson of New York, is found murdered under circumstances which point the finger of suspicion directly at Mrs. Ferguson and her close friend, Judd Brooks.

"The Famous Ferguson Case" has attracted widespread attention wherever it has been shown. Controversy has been aroused, but the general verdict is that it spreads before our eyes a most significant problem of American life in the twentieth century—that of the power of the press in its monopoly of the public mind when such a case occurs as that with which the picture deals. See this sure, on May 20-21.

COUNTY CHILD HEALTH DAY OBSERVED MONDAY

Child Health Day was observed in Iosco county at the Community Building in East Tawas last Monday. The large exhibit of posters, charts and projects made by the schools, health committees and the health department gave a summary of the health activities in Iosco county during the past year. The splendid results have been due to the united effort of the health department, schools and community.

Miss Margaret Worden, chairman of the county health committee, was in charge of the program. Rev. Metcalf gave the invocation. Hugo Swanson led the singing. The East Tawas orchestra played several selections. A demonstration of re-suscitation was given by F. A. Reagan and Boy Scouts. Dr. T. H. Johnston of Health Unit No. 2 introduced the staff. East Tawas, Whittemore and Oscoda school children contributed health plays and songs. A demonstration of the hot lunch at school was given by the Greenwood school and the Upper Townline school demonstrated a simple, sanitary and rapid method of hand washing before lunch. Miss Osborne, the first nurse to do health work in the Iosco county schools, told of her work some years ago.

Mrs. Osgerby spoke of the health work carried on in the Normal critic room the past year, and Miss Hutzel from the State Department of Health gave a most interesting talk on mental health.

MRS. JOSEPH DUBY

The death of Mrs. Joseph DUBY of Alabaster takes from Iosco county one of the earliest pioneers. Before her marriage to Mr. DUBY, the deceased was Hattie Lucy Wheeler, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Wheeler, whose residence in the county dated back to the early 50's.

Born in Saginaw, May 14, 1860, whether her parents went in Civil War days because the Indians in Iosco county were troublesome, she came to Alabaster when two years of age, Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler returning at that time to their homestead. Her residence in Alabaster was continuous since 1863.

Married to Joseph DUBY in Tawas City when she was 28 years of age, the deceased spent her life among the friends of her childhood, and her death occurred at the farm home—the old Wheeler homestead. Through the years filled with many struggles, she maintained a cheerful and happy view of life, and was ever a kind and loving mother and a faithful wife.

Of the eleven children born to Mr. and Mrs. DUBY, eight survive their mother. They are: Sherman and Wilmer DUBY of Detroit, Mrs. Margaret Dunn of Howell, Edgar DUBY of Alabaster, Miss Edna DUBY of Detroit, Mrs. Ruth Gilbert of East Tawas, Mrs. Harriet Sullivan of Lincoln Park, and Miss Doris DUBY of Detroit. Other surviving relatives are the husband, and 16 grandchildren.

Mrs. DUBY's death occurred last Friday, May 6, from a stroke of paralysis. Her age was 71 years, 11 months and 22 days. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon from the Alabaster church, with Rev. W. L. Jones officiating. Interment was made in the Alabaster cemetery, the plot of ground given to the township years ago by her father, Sherman Wheeler, for God's acre.

All of Mrs. DUBY's children were present at the funeral, as were the following relatives from out of the county: Her daughters-in-law, Mrs. Sherman DUBY and Mrs. Wilmer DUBY of Detroit; her son-in-law, Lambert Sullivan of Lincoln Park, and a grandson, Harold Dunn, of Howell.

Patrons who are receiving mail through that office will have their address changed to East Tawas, Star Route. Those desiring mail service over this route must erect steel boxes on right hand side of line of travel of the carrier. The old wood boxes must be replaced with steel boxes. A limited time will be allowed for this purpose.

BARRYMORES TOGETHER IN "ARSENE LUPIN"

John Barrymore and Lionel Barrymore make their first screen appearance together in "Arsene Lupin," colorful French mystery drama which will be shown at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, next Sunday and Monday, May 15-16.

The picture, based on the Paris stage success by Maurice Le Blanc and Francis de Croisset, depicts the entertaining career of a debonaire master thief who is trailed by an implacable detective through the gay salons of Paris with interesting details of the Apache underworld thrown in for good measure. John Barrymore plays the thief and his brother, Lionel, the detective. Karen Morley, John Miljan and Tully Marshall also have important roles.

Enthusiastic preview reports on "Arsene Lupin" have it that its chief charm other than its finished and entertaining characterizations, lies in the sophisticated love scenes between John Barrymore and Miss Morley and in the clever unwinding of the various mysteries which invariably rise to a dramatic climax but leave a laugh in the wake of every episode.

Singapore— Wonder City

A Singapore "Steam Roller."

(Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)—WNU Service.

THE uncompleted British naval base at Singapore again may swarm with workmen. The base has been a political football in British official circles for more than a decade. Construction began in 1921 but before much progress was made, the project was interrupted by political quarrels until 1928. In that year the base site was the scene of much activity but work again was halted when the Labor party, which opposed the project, came into power.

To the military strategist, Singapore is one of Britain's main links in its chain of defenses that stretch from Gibraltar through Malta, Suez, Aden and Ceylon, but to students of geography and readers of fiction, it is the "Crossroads of the East," and a city where "East meets West."

In all the swift, significant changes wrought by white men in the East, no one event stands out more conspicuously than the rapid rise of Singapore. From a jungle isle, where tigers ate men at night, to a magnificent city, tenth among the ports of the world, in less than a century!

Its place on the map, its strategic position here at the crossroads of the East, forced it to a growth at once unique and astonishing. Last year nearly 10,000 ships cut the cobalt-blue seas of the Malacca strait, tying up the trade of Singapore with Europe, Africa, and India, with Australia, China, Japan, and the Americas.

And how Singapore came to be a city is one of the latter-day romances of the Orient. Away back in history, before even the days of Marco Polo, the Malays had founded their powerful states and set up an empire on their peninsula. Then came the Portuguese and laid waste to the strongholds of the sultans, leaving colonists whose descendants, bearing long, aristocratic names oddly out of place among Malay cognomens, are still found throughout the Indies.

After the Portuguese came the Dutch, sweeping from Malacca to Manila, only to be followed later by the British, who, with their genius for colonization, are here to this day. It was this British adventure, about a hundred years ago, that lured Stamford Raffles, born at sea, into this restless region of the then unknown East. And Fate willed that he should found this great Singapore.

Singapore was not conquered like Hindustan, nor acquired as a ready-made colony, like Hongkong; it was simply bought as New York was, and settled, when Sir Stamford Raffles selected it as an outpost for British traders on the China route and purchased it for the East India company from the Sultan of Johore. It was a jungle-covered island then, peopled by a few score savage Malay fisherfolk.

Now it is a wonder city, with marble bank buildings of singular beauty and great stone law courts and government edifices and Christian churches—all in striking contrast to the ornamental Malay mosques, the carved temples of the Hindus, and the fantastic joss houses of the Chinese.

A Jungle Reclaimed. Through the thick jungle, where once led only the elephant paths, wide, level roads have now been built, and the hoarse squawk of the motor horn has drowned the fierce growls of the lurking tiger.

Forty-five years ago a few Para rubber plants smuggled out of Brazil fruited here. Today, three-fourths of the world's rubber comes from this region. And in this magic development Americans have played a leading role. This Malay peninsula, stretching hundreds of miles from the Siamese frontier down toward the equator, forms a vast humid region of dense forests of jungle, wild elephants, snakes, and naked people, rice fields, rubber plantations, and tin mines. Few American tourists see it.

Singapore, built on a tiny green isle of the same name, which lies just off the end of the peninsula and nearly on the Equator, is the capital of the British crown colony commonly called the Straits Settlements. This colony embraces the Province Wellesley, the Dindings and Malacca on the mainland, and the islands of Penang and Singapore.

More than fifty steamship lines and its cable net and radio stations tie Singapore up with adjacent regions, and British Malaya, the Dutch East Indies, and Siam constitute a unit in commercial geography which centers at the great port.

"The Melting Pot of Asia," they call this prolific, potent peninsula, because of the babel of races, colors, and castes which its wealth of rubber and tin has drawn to it. But in all this industrial army of Europeans, Chinese, Japanese, Tamils, Hindus, and assorted South Sea Islanders, the Chinese are the most numerous and powerful.

The Malay himself is too lazy even to be a good fisherman. He grows a little rice, a few coconuts, and nets the fish he needs, but Nature is so kind that it is said one hour's effort a day will support him and his family.

It is the Chinaman who is the tin miner, the farmer, shopkeeper, artisan, contractor, and financier.

Nature's motion picture, as your ship swings into the narrow, 60-mile-long Singapore roads, is like a vision of some fabled Dream Isles of Delight. Fairy isles they seem, floating on a turquoise sea, wooded, jungle-gowned in brightest green, miraculously broken off and cast adrift from Sumatra and Malaya.

Cruising through these straits, your ship creeps so close to certain isles that you can actually see the natives going about their daily life, and you can clearly make out the intimate details of the tiny palm-leaf shacks, which stand on stilts like piles over the water.

When Not so Charming.

But on certain hot, steamy days in early autumn, when no air stirs and the tide has run very low, these islands, on closer inspection, are not all so charming. Then the receding waters leave vast, flat banks of slimy stinking mud, alive with crawling creatures pursued by long-legged birds; and the myriad mangrove trees that hug the shore are left standing with their naked crooked roots all exposed—an oddly repellent picture, suggesting the wet, slippery coils of a million monster serpents, their bodies all twisted together, seeming to crawl in and out of the foul steaming ooze.

You are glad, then, when your ship has poked her restless nose past these reeking mud flats and you come to the anchorage, tying up amid as strange a fleet as ever the sun shone on.

Swarming about your ship in their bobbing canoes, little Malay boys come to dive for nickels, for do not all American sahibs observe the odd custom of throwing money into the sea as they approach a tropic port?

The white man's life today in Singapore, as in other tropic parts, is easy and comfortable. The British and American trading firms are all staffed, in the higher positions, by men from the home lands. Office hours are fairly short, down in this equatorial clime, for the white man must have more recreation than in the colder countries of the north.

Here, near the Equator, dasy and nights are about equal; toward dark the din of barter and sale subsides and the streets begin to empty. The houseboat folk of the river and the wharf workers quiet down. Chinese shopkeepers shuffle out to put up their shutters. High above, the star pictures of heaven are hung out—the sprawling Scorpion and the majestic Southern Cross. Long before ten o'clock this magic, mongrel city of tin, trade, and turbulence is sound asleep. No speeding joy rider, owl car, or roof-garden jazz breaker, the delicious stupor of its repose.

THE CHILDREN'S STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

WHAT had become of the big, fat fish that Plunger the Fish Hawk had caught in the Big River, that King Eagle had forced him to drop, that Buster Bear had claimed for his, and over which Buster Bear and King Eagle had been quarreling most shamefully? When King Eagle had seen his chance he had swooped down to the place where the fish had fallen, his claws outstretched to seize it. But there was no fish there. No, sir, there wasn't a sign of a fish. King Eagle flew up to the limb of a tree out of reach of Buster Bear just as Buster, snarling and growling all sorts of dreadful things, came rushing over.

When Buster could find no fish King Eagle had somehow got it after all, and this put him into still more of a rage if possible. But as he glared at King Eagle he saw that there was no look of triumph in King Eagle's face, as there surely would have been had he obtained the fish. Instead there was a look which said as plainly as words, "Where has that fish gone?" Buster stared up at King

From Paris to Timbuctoo and Back Again by Air

THE Seabrook-Wauthier Sahara Desert Air expedition which has brought back by airplane from Timbuctoo the authorized memoirs of Pere Yakouba with priceless documents and notes covering the history of "the mysterious city" since its first occupancy by the French. The expedition, organized with the permission of the French government authorities, was piloted and scientifically directed by Capt. Rene Wauthier of the French army in a four-seated plane. Aboard were William Seabrook, American adventure writer, and Marjorie Worthington, American novelist, who collaborated on the Yakouba memoirs. Pere Yakouba came to Timbuctoo about thirty-five years ago as a white father and decided to discard the robe to marry a native girl with whom he has had thirty children. Father Yakouba was born in Chateau-Thierry. He has been devoting a great part of his time to studying languages and the various African dialects. He is very highly considered by the French government. He returned once to France since he established himself in Timbuctoo, but preferred his new home, and quickly returned. He says that he is much happier in Timbuctoo, having no worries brought by modern civilization such as telephone, elevators, newspapers and conventions of all kinds. The last American he had seen before Seabrook was Floyd Gibbons whom he met while making an attempt to cross the desert in 1921 with the aid of donkeys and camels. When Father Yakouba saw Seabrook arriving by air, he said that the Americans, since Gibbons, had made a lot of progress.

GREEN FOODS

FRESH green vegetables that have spent the whole of their growing period drinking in the sun's rays teeming with every vital quality that the body requires, can be had even in a small city lot. A very small plot will grow lettuce, spinach, black seeded mustard and various small vegetables like radishes and onions. The radish tops as well as the beet and turnip tops, provide splendid greens for the early spring. Planting a garden is a fascinating undertaking; with just a little care in weeding and keeping the soil loose about the plants, watering when needed, a small plot will give big returns.

Many people in poor health have found working in the soil and sunshine just the medicine that their bodies needed.

The Retreat From Lexington

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THEY called them "minute men," my son, The minute men of Lexington, And yet I wonder, in their smoke, How many generations spoke? For heroism is not made And taught to youngsters like a trade: The spark must burn, a constant fire, In father's son and father's sire.

Today we need not talk of war, Now through, pray god, forever more. We need not talk of yesterday, But of the present well we may. What generations will it take Their heroism to unmake, What generations like our own To make us soft and bring us prone?

What brought the Roman to his knees? It was not enemies, but ease, It was not poverty, but gold, For hearts grown greedy soon grow cold. The moral letdown of a race Does more than cannon to efface A nation from the crowded earth, Where wealth is honored more than worth.

Our generation, is it then A builder or the bane of men? Not just to honor, but to learn We need the page of time to turn, Our generation to compare With those who now lie sleeping there. Do we march onward, upward, son, Or now retreat from Lexington? (© 1932, Douglas Malloch.)—WNU Service.

"What are we quarrelling about?" asked King Eagle mildly.

"Nothing, for there is nothing to quarrel about," replied Buster Bear quite as mildly. "Did I dream that a big, fat fish fell from the sky and hit me?"

"Not unless I dreamed that I watched Plunger the Fish Hawk catch one and then make him drop it," chuckled King Eagle. "I had set my heart on a fish dinner."

"No more than I had," replied Buster Bear. "What we should have done was to divide that fish instead of quarrelling over it."

"I wonder," said King Eagle slowly, looking this way and that way suspiciously, "if that fish swam away, ran away, or flew away. It's gone, and the question is how did it go? It had to go somehow."

Buster Bear was very busy sniffing where the fish had fallen. Sniff, sniff, sniff! Buster's nose is very keen, and it tells him a great deal. Sniff, sniff, sniff! A frown gathered on Buster's face. Sniff, sniff, sniff! The frown grew heavier and his little eyes began to snap. It was plain that Buster Bear was once more growing angry.

"That fish RAN away," he growled in his deep grumbly-rumbly voice.

"I thought as much," said King Eagle.

"It ran away on four legs," continued Buster Bear.

"Whose legs?" asked King Eagle. "The legs of old Granny Fox," growled Buster Bear. "And that means that she will have the dinner you cheated me out of!"

"You mean that you cheated me out of," retorted King Eagle promptly. And then what did these two, Buster Bear and King Eagle, do but fall to quarrelling again quite as fiercely as before over something which neither of them never had had.

Meanwhile Granny Fox and Reddy Fox were sitting down to the finest fish dinner they had had for many a day. "The way to get on in this world," said Granny, "is to keep your eyes open for the mistakes of others and then just step in and take advantage of them. Of course Buster Bear and King Eagle will say that I stole this fish, but I didn't. It didn't belong to either of them. It belonged to Plunger the Fish Hawk, but he lost it, and so then it belonged to whoever could get it. Remember this, Reddy: Quarrelling is bad business for those engaged in it, but it is likely to be very profitable to some one else. Always try to be that some one else. Keep out of quarrels yourself, but be on hand when others quarrel. Did you ever taste a finer fish?"

"I never did," replied Reddy. (© 1932, by T. W. Burgess.)—WNU Service.

Who Was Who?

By Louise M. Comstock

DEVIL JUDD TOLLIVER

"DEVIL," John Fox, Jr., called him in "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," "Devil" Judd Tolliver, but all up, and down the borderland of Kentucky, from the Big Sandy to the Cumberland and far into the Blue Ridge mountains of Virginia he was known as "Bad," "Bad" John Wright, straight-shooting son of the hills, a bad man to pick a quarrel with. If you doubted that the lanky old man who died just a few years ago at the age of ninety had earned that ominous title, you had only to look at the thirty odd notches on his gun, or at "Wright's cemetery," a little plot so called because "Bad" John had filled more graves in it than any other cause.

It is only fair to give credence to Wright's claim that all of his killings were in the cause of law and order, or at least under circumstances under which, somebody being bound to be killed, justice was with the keenest eye and the straightest aim. But fighting was his second nature. During the Civil war he served first as scout for Morgan's Raiders on the Confederate side, was captured and imprisoned at old Fort Smith and on his release joined up with the Union army and fought with it through to the end of the war. He was quite a family man, too, several times a husband and father of over thirty children whom he kept track of in his own mind by the ingenious device of associating them with their mother's maiden name. Alice Wright, the original of June of the novel, for instance, was a Harmon. When John Fox, Jr., knew Wright, he owned 3,000 acres of land in Lonesome cove. All except the burial ground which held his ancestors back to the days of Daniel Boone Wright later sold out for a ridiculously low price to a coal company.

THE TEDDY BEAR

THE Teddy Bear, essential to every nursery twenty years ago and still a popular toy, was of course named for Teddy Roosevelt, but how a President of the United States became associated with a humble little stuffed bear is just another proof of the so-called "power of the press."

About 1888 in a little village in Germany a crippled dressmaker named Margarete Steiff concocted out of leftover scraps of material a little stuffed bear which she presented to a child of the neighborhood. The bear proved so popular that her brother, Richard Steiff, with an eye to business, had other bears manufactured and put on the market. The first stuffed bears sold in this country were imported in 1902 by Borgfeldt & Co.

That same fall President Roosevelt went hunting in Mississippi. Soon the ever watchful press informed the country that its President had refused to shoot a small bear which had been captured and brought into camp for him to kill. Clifford E. Berryman, cartoonist, proceeded to make the incident subject for a cartoon in which Roosevelt, gun in one hand and the other raised traffic cop fashion as if to prevent such a deed, stood with his back turned to another man leading a tiny bear on a rope. Labeled "Drawing the Line in Mississippi," the cartoon took the country by storm. Berryman subsequently adopted the bear as mascot for all of his Roosevelt cartoons and Margarete Steiff's "stuffed bear" was soon being sold as Teddy's or the Teddy bear.

SAM PATCH

IF THE name of Sam Patch became, several generations ago, a synonym for boasting, cocksure foolhardiness, it was not so much because of what he did as because of the way he did it.

Sam was a brave "stunt" jumper to be sure. From leaping boldly off bridges into the stream below and from the tops of windmills, he advanced in his art to such a point that he leaped successfully from a shelf of rock midway between the highest point on Goat island and the water at Niagara falls. Meantime, of course, he also advanced in fame and fortune, from a humble cotton spinner in Pawtucket, R. I., in which place he was born in 1807, to a public figure, drawing down good compensation and followed by admiring throngs wherever he went.

Sam waxed in confidence and ambition. At length, in November, 1829, he faced an excited audience gathered to see him leap the Genessee falls on the Genessee river near Rochester, N. Y., and said: "Napoleon was a great man and a great general. He conquered armies and nations, but couldn't jump the falls of the Genessee. That was left for me to do, and do it I will." And Sam Patch leaped, to his own death, proving that even famous "stunt" jumpers sometimes must meet their Waterloo.

MAKE RIVER PO TRADE HIGHWAY

Italy to Spend Vast Sum on Ambitious Plan.

Washington.—Recently Italy started work on an ambitious project to turn the unruly Po river into a highway of commerce from Milan to Venice. The project will require several years for completion, and an expenditure of close to 300,000,000 lire. A bulletin from the National Geographic society describes the Po river and the rich country tributary to it.

"The Po is a surprise to many observers, who cannot at first understand how a really large river can flow from east to west for 416 miles in obviously narrow Italy," says the bulletin. "The explanation is that the Po lies just outside the peninsula portion of Italy. The top of the 'Italian boot' flares up into the European mainland among the Alps, and it is in this continental part of Italy that the Po flows. Across this northernmost part of Italy it is approximately 400 miles from French to Yugoslavian territory; and the Po, because of its many meanders, easily runs up its high mileage in the somewhat shorter air-line distance from the French frontier to the Adriatic coast.

"The Po valley is unique among European river basins because of its great extent of almost level land for long distances inland. Viewed on a relief map, this great tongue of lowland is seen to cut upland Italy almost in two. There is a reason for this. Not long ago, geologically, the sea extended into northern Italy along the foot of the alps almost to the present French border. The great Po basin is this old gulf, filled now with alluvial material washed down from the mountains. The relatively large flow of the Po, especially at certain seasons, is owing to the fact that the basin is hemmed in on three sides by mountains (the Alps to north and west, the Apennines to the south) and that the run-off from these heights is at times very rapid. The river flows along virtually the entire stretch of the Italian Alps, and receives water from most of their southern glaciers and lakes.

"Because the 'plain of the Po' is so nearly level, particularly in its seaward half, the river has brought disastrous floods to the residents along its course, throughout historic times. Even during the early days of Rome it was necessary to build dikes and embankments to restrain the rising waters. During the early part of the Dark ages after the fall of Rome, these protective works fell into decay. The river wandered over the plain, each major flood creating new channels. Large areas of the rich valley reverted to marsh.

"Long before the renaissance, the work of restoring the Po's dikes and constructing drainage canals was begun, and by 1500 the valley was again well protected. This region was one of the earliest in Europe to see the development of reclamation engineering as well as the construction of canals for water supply and commerce. In the Twelfth century Milanese engineers constructed their grand ship canal from Milan to the Ticino river, making use of locks.

"In recent centuries the embankment and dike system of the Po has gone on developing, until the protective works rival those of the Netherlands. In many sections the confined river flows at a level much higher than the protected, fertile fields. About three million acres are protected by dikes, and approximately 5,000 square miles of land are under irrigation. This latter area exceeds that of the entire state of Connecticut.

"Since the river has been confined to a narrow course, the silt which formerly was spread over a wide delta, now is washed into the sea. The coast near the principal mouth of the Po is being built outward at a rapid rate. Sand dunes marking the site of the coast of some centuries ago, are now 15 miles inland.

"The level sweep of the Po valley, its natural fertility, and the ease with which it can be cultivated make it an enormously productive region. It has been so from the earliest times. In the days of ancient Rome it was a source of wheat, of cattle pastured on irrigated meadows, and of swine which fed on the mast of the forests that covered the foothills. Today it produces all these products, and besides large quantities of rice. Mulberries are grown to feed silkworms, and vineyards cover wide areas. Milan and Turin, situated in the Po basin, are populous cities and prosperous centers of industry and commerce; and scattered through the valley are numerous thriving local market towns. The region is one of the most populous in Italy.

"Although tremendous amounts of money and time have been spent on the Po through centuries, the works have been primarily protective against floods and for the taking of irrigation water. The new project will supplement this by making the stream navigable for larger boats and longer distances. The plans call for numerous dams and weirs to regulate the depth and for reservoirs to impound surplus water and regulate the flow."

HISTORY RELIC IS USED FOR BULLETS

Plaque Melted by an Illiterate Voodoo Doctor.

New Orleans.—An illiterate voodoo doctor who kept a rattlesnake for a pet found a lead plaque marking the original French claim to Louisiana territory, melted it into bullets and shot it away, according to a story told the Louisiana Historical society.

Worth of the relic today to larger historical societies would have been as much as $1,000,000, Frank H. Waddill, engineer and vice president of the Historical society, said.

This is Waddill's story of the claim, and of the plaque which was destroyed years later when it was found by the voodoo doctor hunter:

"Rene Robert Cavalier de LaSalle with 22 Frenchmen and 51 Indians formally took possession of Louisiana on April 9, 1682, at a point about 70 miles below New Orleans. He claimed the land from the gulf to Canada between the Rockies and the Alleghenies in the name of Louis XVI.

"He erected a column, set up a wooden cross and plaque with the inscription in Latin: 'Louis the Great Reigns, April 9, 1682.'

"Four years later the evidence of the ceremony there had vanished.

"Then about 1895 a hunter known as Vilgere Dinet dug up a leaden plaque from an Indian mound near there. On it were three rows of inscriptions.

"He decided it was Indian writing. Natives there, generally illiterate, could not read it.

"One day I told George Lee Hays, a friend of mine in that district, the story of the missing plaque and I said I would hunt for it if I were younger.

"Why, I know about that plaque! Hays said, and he then told of its discovery and how Dinet had melted it and shot it away.

"The plaque to Dinet was 'just an old Indian relic.'"

Fuse Saves Man's Life

BABY FRETFUL, RESTLESS?

Look to this cause

When your baby fusses, tosses and seems unable to sleep restfully, look for one common cause, doctors say. Constipation. To get rid quickly of the accumulated wastes which cause restlessness and discomfort, give a cleansing dose of Castoria. Castoria, you know, is made specially for children's delicate needs. It is a pure vegetable preparation; contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics. It is so mild and gentle you can give it to a young infant to relieve colic. Yet it is as effective for older children. Castoria's regulative help will bring relaxed comfort and restful sleep to your baby. Keep a bottle on hand. Genuine Castoria always has the name:

If a man hasn't the germ of uprightness in him, praying for guidance gets no response.

Won't Eat There's a Reason

When your child refuses its meals, is irritable, restless or feverish, the chances are worms are the cause. Worms are not always passed in recognizable form, but an improvement in your child's health will show that your judgment was correct. SUCH IS LIFE—Just as Good!

By Charles Sughrue

They've Never Tasted a Tonic!

THESE are not patent medicine children. Their appetite needs no coaxing. Their tongues are never coated, cheeks never pale. And their bowels move just like clockwork, because they have never been given a habit-forming laxative.

You can have children like this—and be as healthy yourself—if you follow the advice of a famous family physician. Stimulate the vital organs. The strongest of them need help at times. If they don't get it, they grow sluggish. Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin is a mild, safe stimulant.

When a youngster doesn't do well at school, it may be the liver that's lazy. Often the bowels hold enough poisonous waste to dull the senses! A spoonful of delicious syrup pepsin once or twice a week will avoid all this. It contains fresh laxative herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin, and does a world of good to any system—young or old. You can always get this fine prescriptive preparation at any drug store. Just ask them for Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin.

Get some syrup pepsin today, and protect your family from those bilious days, frequent sick spells and colds. Keep a bottle in the medicine chest instead of cathartics that so often bring on chronic constipation. Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin can always be employed to give clogged bowels a thorough cleansing, with none of that painful griping, or burning feeling afterward. It isn't expensive.

To try to get joy out of every living moment is too hard work. Wise is he who learns from the experience of others.

Why Worry?

WHEN you lose your appetite—not only for food... but for work and play—don't merely go on worrying. Do something about it!

One of the most famous tonics for weakness, "nerves," and "run down condition," is Fellows' Syrup. It stimulates appetite. Lifts the entire bodily tone to higher levels of vigor and energy. The first few doses will prove that "Fellows" is the medicine for "building up." That is why so many doctors prescribe it. Ask your druggist for genuine

HOARDERS HEAP BUM BILLS ON TREASURY

Called Upon to Redeem Mutilated Currency.

Washington.—The amount of burned, rotted and mutilated money arriving at the treasury for redemption has vaulted to its highest level since World war days.

Treasury officials attribute the increased receipts of mutilated currency to the widespread and unusual hoarding activities which followed last year's record number of bank failures, says the Chicago Tribune.

Beginning shortly after the bank failure rate reached a high peak last year, the amount of burned, rotted and mutilated currency reaching the treasury has increased monthly until today employees in the currency redemption department are forced to work overtime to take care of hoarded currency which came to grief.

Failure of hoarders to remember that their life savings had been placed in the stove for safe-keeping until a fire had been built has proved responsible for much of the money reaching Washington. In many cases money has been hoarded in chimneys to the great detriment of the currency when fall fires were built. In other in-in banks he believed to be insecure. The extremely delicate work of making good this mutilated money is done by several women clerks of long experience, whose word as to the authenticity of the claim is virtually infallible.

The task of ascertaining the validity of the ashes or pulp which is sent in by hoarders as the remains of good money is particularly exacting in the national bank redemption agency, which redeems national and federal reserve bank notes. In this bureau not only must the remains be identified as genuine currency before it can be redeemed, but the expert must also ascertain the member bank which issued it.

In the redemption division of the treasurer's office, where notes of United States issue are redeemed, only the fact that the remains are those of real money is necessary for redemption to be made. In both bureaus, of course, the experts must find out the exact denominations of the destroyed notes. The records of the claims handled by the experts read almost like fiction and most of their work seems all but incredible to the layman.

Here is a case in point:
Not long ago a citizen of Ohio ap-

MAKING MINUTES COUNT

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Emeritus Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I have just been talking with Gordon concerning the qualities of an intimate acquaintance of ours who has made the most outstanding success of the work he has undertaken in my line with whom I am familiar. We were trying, if possible, to analyze the personal qualities in him which made this success possible.

"I used to think," Gordon said to me, "that it was Corson's keen intellect, the unusual character of his mind which brought him success, and I must admit he has these, but as I have come more and more closely into contact with him I believe it is his ability to utilize every minute of time in some effective way which has been his greatest asset."

"We have marveled sometimes at the amount and the variety of work which he turns out. I have been at his house a good deal and it is no marvel to me now. You never see him sitting with his hands in his lap, smoking or doing nothing. He is reading the latest new book, or writing, or making something. No wonder he gets a lot of work done."

I got a good lesson from Martin when I was a young fellow. Martin never wasted time. He lived in a suburban town and had to take an early train into the city. He always ate with his watch on the table beside him—not hastily but deliberately. He gave himself three minutes to get to the station a block away. He always walked along leisurely and without the agitation which so often induces indigestion. It was the way he managed his business affairs—he utilized every minute.

There are few things which a large percentage of the young people with whom I am acquainted have learned more thoroughly than how to waste time, and if a man wants to accomplish much in the world he must make the minutes count.

BUILD WATER TUNNEL FAR UNDER NEW YORK

Job Costing $43,000,000 Is Nearly Finished.

New York.—Some 500 feet beneath the point where Steinway avenue in Queens runs into the East river, at the foot of what is known as shaft 9A, drillers are now putting the finishing touches to their three years' task of excavating the 19 shafts and 20 miles of city tunnel No. 2, the $43,000,000 water conduit being built by the board of water supply. The last section of rock in the tunnel itself, between shafts 2A and 3A under the Bronx river, was "holed through" recently. All that remains of the excavating phase of the work is to round out the system of access tunnels and pumping chambers designed to permit drainage of the entire aqueduct from shaft 9A.

Since March, 1929, gangs of men have been working 24 hours a day, six days a week, slowly linking up from Hill View reservoir in Yonkers to Red Hook in Brooklyn this rock tunnel, longer than any yet constructed by man. More than 1,300,000 drill holes have been "shot" with approximately 7,000,000 pounds of dynamite to dislodge the 1,500,000 cubic yards of rocks that have been removed.

Large enough to hold a subway car with a man standing on top of it, and as long as the run from Van Courtlandt park to Atlantic avenue, Brooklyn—in some places as far beneath the sidewalk as the Metropolitan tower is above it, and in no place less than 520 feet under ground—this mammoth pressure tunnel is destined to supply Brooklyn, Queens and a part of the Bronx with 700,000,000 gallons of water a day. With this flow and that from existing aqueducts, it is estimated the city will be able to meet its requirements as to delivery of water until 1950.

Engineers of the board of water supply report that the tunnel is 90 per cent completed, with the contractor, Patrick McGovern, Inc., working about one year in advance of his schedule. They plan to open the gates to the downtown shaft at the southern end of Hill View reservoir and fill the tunnel with water early in 1933.

Drinks Spray to Find Out What It Is; Dies

South Bend, Ind.—Everett Leek, sixty-four, died after drinking tree spray to find out what it was. Teek met Steve Solnok, the caretaker, at the J. M. Studebaker Jr., estate, who was mixing a preparation of nicotine poison for a spray. "That's bug poison," said Steve. "Well, give me a drink," said Leek with a laugh. One sip and he collapsed. He died as he reached the hospital.

stances money became damaged after being placed in mattresses or other places for safe-keeping.

Hoarding which results in currency mutilation causes losses for the government and in some cases to the individual. About 75 per cent of the mutilated money is redeemed. The government loses because of the expense of financing a division for the purpose of redeeming money.

In recent months, it was stated at the treasury, practically every claim in mutilated currency cases has been accompanied by a statement from the owner of the money telling how he hid his savings in some place he thought secure rather than deposit it appeared at the national bank redemption agency with a box securely bound with adhesive tape, in which he said there reposed the remains of $700. He had drawn the money from the bank, he said, put it in a baking powder can which he put in a still larger metal can, and had hidden it in the soot at the base of a chimney. A fire in an upstairs fireplace caused the soot to get hot and the cans and the $700 were reduced to a mass of metal and ashes. This mass he wanted redeemed for real money.

The sympathetic superintendent of the agency turned the case over to the experts and by noon next day they had identified not $700 but $710, and had authorized payment of the money in full. Whereupon the money in full. Whereupon the citizen of Ohio admitted he had expected to retrieve only about half his $700.

In order to make this restitution the experts were faced with the problem of ascertaining, from hardly more than a handful of ashes, first whether the ashes were those of genuine currency; second, the exact denomination of each note; and third, which of some ten thousand member banks had issued the notes.

THE STORY

Six bandits board the steamer, Midnight Sun, tied to the bank of the Mackenzie, hold up Father Claverly and other passengers, kill Jimmy Montgomery, formerly of the Mounted, and get away with gold dust and furs. Corp. Bill Hardsock reports the crime to Sgt. Alan Baker at the Mounted Police post at Port Endurance. Baker has a dispute with his incompetent superior, Inspector Haskell, over plans for the capture of the bandits.

"Humph! Maybe," Haskell lit a cigarette, and went on studying the map. Turning, he ordered:

"You'll take the launch and the five men, Baker, and go up the Alooska. If you don't overtake those bandits before reaching the Forks, leave the launch there, split your party, three men each, and follow up both those branches—"

Alan objected, "But three men against six, the six who pulled a trick like that robbery—three might be able to handle them. They've got murder charges over them, they've got a fortune in their possession; they're going to put up a fight."

"Three men can handle them. Three men with the law behind them—"

"A city cop may be a squad by himself," Alan interrupted, "but in the bush a man is a man. A legal bullet don't kill any deader than an outlaw bullet. Men who'll hold up a big steamer in broad daylight and who face the galleys if caught, aren't going to be paralyzed by the sight of a uniform. I believe my party shouldn't split. We ought to stick together and whip up that left branch. That's the fork they'll take."

"You're merely guessing," Haskell said coldly. "You don't know which branch they'll take. By my plan you'd be sure to overtake them on one branch or other."

"Yes, and have half my men shot up. I'm responsible for them. I know what that kind of responsibility means. You're hog-tying me with orders I know are dead wrong."

Haskell tapped the table with his penknife. "I've given you my reasons, Baker, and listened to yours. If you refuse to obey orders, you'll stay here at the post, and I'll put Corporal Hardsock in charge of this detail. Take your choice."

Alan was not the fool to believe Haskell was bluffing. The man would keep him here and demote him for refusing to obey a command. He had been waiting months for just such a chance. It was a question of holding out against those ignorant instructions or getting away with the men and making the best of it. Perhaps, after all, he would catch up with the bandits before they reached the Forks.

Beaten, weary of arguing, he gave in. "All right, inspector. I'll follow both branches."

To cut off further delay he whirled abruptly on his heel and strode out.

Burgoon came down from barracks. A little later Whipple came and timidly took his seat in the launch. Alan and Bill and Young were stowing aboard guns, tent, grub and blankets. On the terrace above, with a book in her lap, Elizabeth Spaulding watched casually.

Then Frank Pedneault, demonic driver of the powerful launch, slid into the wheel seat and slipped in the gears; and headed north, down the Mackenzie.

They were at last away on the pursuit. But all Alan's ardor had gone. All his leaping urge to be on the chase had gone. Premonition whispered, and its whisper chilled him. As he glanced around at his men, at the comrades he was leading and was responsible for, he was thinking that tomorrow this time two or three of them might be dead—somewhere up the spruce-buried Alooska.

CHAPTER III

A Call to Vengeance

During that dash down the Mackenzie, Alan's thoughts were not enviable. . . . "They used Margaret Fournier as a means of making their getaway from the steamer. It worked so well then that they might try the idea again. They might try to capture Joyce and use her as a sort of hostage to protect themselves."

But somehow he did not greatly fear they would do this. He remembered the gun she always carried, his own gift to her on her twentieth birthday. A black automatic, a tiny thing like a toy, it nevertheless was blunt and effective as a terrier bulldog. That big red-bearded bandit who had threatened to put a bullet "squar' atween" the eyes of Margaret Fournier, would likely get one between his own if he tried any brutality with Joyce MacMillan.

To Alan it seemed pretty clear that Bill in his haste and excitement had made a mistake about those men being strangers to every one aboard the steamer. It didn't look possible. They knew this country, knew it intimately. It took years to learn the ins and outs of so huge a region. But they knew.

Alan concluded: "They aren't strangers, of course. Bill just made a mistake."

Half-hidden between two blanket packs Constable Whipple sat fingering his rifle, peering ahead anxiously, as though at any moment he expected to meet the outlaw canoes here on the Mackenzie. Alan watched him with something of scorn in his eyes. Whipple was constantly spying upon the other men, listening with long ears, reporting everything that happened and a lot that did not.

Forty miles below Endurance, sweeping near to shore around a great bend, Alan looked ahead and sighted the Midnight Sun out in midstream, plowing steadily up south. At his gesture Pedneault swerved the launch and snubbed its headlong speed, and Bill began unloading one of the canoes. As the two craft drew nearer, Alan rose up and signaled that he wished to come aboard the steamer. The boat stopped, a ladder was let down. Paddling across in the birchbark, he and Bill hurried up on deck.

Margaret Fournier was safely back on board. Several of the men hastily patching one of the smashed canoes, had followed up the Alooska a mile and found her on a willow island where the bandits had set her off.

When Alan came on deck, almost his first sight was of Jimmy Montgomery's little girl, perched upon a pile of cargo, showered with care and attention from every one. As he glanced at the tiny golden-haired tot, Alan thought of her mother dying less than a year ago, of her young father cut down today by an outlaw's bullet; and he had a swift vision of the bleak orphanage, the friendless and homeless life, which lay ahead for her, now that Jimmy was dead. He was not deceived by the attention she was getting now. Every one was all sympathy for her today, but that would cool mighty quick; and then she'd be thrown into some orphanage, maybe along with half-breed and Indian children. Alan thought, "She's Jimmy's child; Jimmy was my partner; it's up to me to do something about her."

With nothing more definite than this in mind, he directed Ashmun, the white-haired skipper "You put her off at Endurance tonight. Give her to Elizabeth. Say I'll be back in two or three days."

Following the old captain, he stepped softly, but in hand, into the one well-fitted cabin of the steamer. He remembered Jimmy as a trail partner and a quiet gentle soul and the most utterly fearless man he had ever known. Stone silent he stood beside the berth looking down for the space of half a minute, sick at heart, his eyes blurring. Why had it been Jimmy who was cut down?—a young man, a young father, the best and bravest of them all.

Then like a small whisper in his loss, a thought came, edged with pride in Jimmy and the manner of his death:

"You were the only one who drew a gun. You knew they'd kill you . . . a belt-gun against six rifles; but you stood up and shot. You were always that kind; and so was Curt. Now you're both gone; now I'm alone, of us three—"

The desolation was unbearable. Bill following, he turned and went out of the cabin into the sunshine of the deck. A grim mood had come over him, a mood shot through with personal and deadly intention. He was no longer merely the stern and efficient representative of the law. Vengeance, a burning and righteous vengeance, had entered his heart.

Spider's Ingenious Web Woven Afresh Nightly

Master of geometrical precision and skillful artisan, the fastidious orange-tan orb spider presents a mystery in her arrival at a certain identical moment every evening when with amazing ingenuity she constructs or weaves a new web over the framework of her permanent dwelling, states an article in Better Homes and Gardens.

Although the framework of the simple structure, which consists of three spokes radiating from a single point, is constantly under repair, the finished web is never repaired no matter how damaged it may be. Guy wires are anchored to leaves, blades of grass, with a crow's foot fastening. Then follow the radial lines which retrace the original spokes of the permanent frame. The dainty tatting wheel in the center serves as a feast hall. The last stroke is biting out the floss constituting the hub, which leaves an aperture for the unwary insect to crawl through and be ensnared. Then follows the fastidiously chosen feast, continues Better Homes and Gardens, after which the web is carefully removed and, if no longer of service, devoured to make more silk and be respun later.

With a dozen men crowding around to listen, he questioned Skipper Ashmun briefly.

"Bill said these men were strangers. That can't be. Didn't you recognize them at all? Haven't you got some idea who they were?"

"Alan, I positively never seen a man of 'em till I looked up and there they stood p'nting their weapons at us. And I see just about everybody that goes up and down the river."

"And they knowed the lay of the land like a book," another man spoke up. "That's the queerest part of 't."

Alan was fairly staggered. Bill had reported accurately. The men were strangers.

How under heaven could six men enter this country unknown, unseen? Then, granting they had, granting them strangers, how did they come to know the lay of the land so perfectly?—where to strike, when to strike, how to escape by a straight shoot to their one superlative refuge, the Thal Azzah.

In all his years of police service he had never met quite so dark a circumstance as this.

As he and Bill went down the ladder, the rail was lined with people wishing them a quick capture, wishing the criminals a swift and speedy justice. Alan did not hear, did not care. But as he stepped into the canoe and with a shove sent it skirling toward the launch, he did hear one voice from some man on the steamer; and it rang in his ears like a croak of evil prophecy:

"Going after men like them, Alan Baker, you'd better take your luck along!"

At the MacMillan trading post Joyce had lighted candles in the kitchen and trading hall. Though she hardly knew just when her father would return from his fur-buying trip, she had kindled a comfortable fire in his bedroom and had prepared a supper of scones and breaded mushrooms and willow ptarmigan which she herself had shot that morning.

As she stood tiptoe at a pantry shelf, away from the crackle and sough of the cook stove, she heard some peculiar noise somewhere out in the night. She went over to the window and there heard it more distinctly—a faint drone that rose and fell with the ground winds drifting out of the spruces.

The puzzling sound grew louder, plainer. Then suddenly Joyce knew. The police launch! Coming up the Big Alooska. Coming slowly because of the treacherous channel, but driving on through the twilight in spite of the danger.

That launch went out only on matters of importance. And this patrol must be very important, to bring the men up a perilous river at this hour.

Throwing a cape about her shoulders, she ran through the trading hall, out into the sharp pine-scented air; down to the canoe landing at the river bank.

As she stood on the mud-filmed plank, with the whispering breeze molding cape and dress closely about her vigorous young body, Joyce tried to pray that Alan was not leading this patrol. Her girlish pride was crying out that she did not want to see Alan Baker. Her rational mind was warning that it would be better for her if she never saw him again at all. But no pride or rationalizing could beat down the secret throbbing expectancy of meeting Alan, of hearing his voice, in a few minutes more.

The DAIRY

SQUARE DEAL FOR HERD SIRE URGED

Safety and Profit Found in Proper Bull Pen.

Dairy bulls are not getting a square deal, figured from the standpoint of the owner's financial welfare. No herd sire should be pampered. Sentiment is wasted on a bull, according to Prof. H. A. Hopper of the New York State College of Agriculture. Neither should a bull be abused and kept under such conditions as thousands of them have to endure. This treatment saps their vitality, makes them useless as breeders, and converts sullen bulls almost certainly into man-killing monsters, he says.

Many bulls are kept through the winter and often throughout the year in close confinement under unsanitary conditions. Others are turned out with the herd in summer for exercise. These practices are bad, he says, because they either shorten the life of the sire and impair his usefulness or they endanger the lives of all persons who care for him. Proper care should provide two things; to keep the health and vigor, and to insure absolute safety.

Any bull worth keeping represents a considerable investment. He should be a good individual, have a record backing much better than that of any cow in the herd, and as an investment he may represent the combined value of two or three cows. Such an investment is worthy of a safe bull pen, to maintain health and vigor, and the safety of the owner. With such a pen a bull may be fed, watered, the stall cleaned, and cows bred without danger to the attendant.

Herd Refused to Drink Water That Was Impure

The water supply of the dairy herd is an often unsuspected source of trouble. The story has been vouched for of a farmer who could not make an apparently good herd of grade Holsteins milk even respectably well and in spite of the fact that he was feeding well. When he turned the cows out to drink at the stock tank the cause was revealed. Although the cows ran for the tank and evidently were very thirsty they would take only a small drink and then turn away. The water looked as clear and nice as water can look, but it tasted terrible. The drainage from the barnyard had polluted the well so seriously that the cows would not drink, although the appearance was not harmed. That man had to drill 200 feet before he got a supply of water, but once the water was good the cows responded normally to good feeding. In other cases that have been reported, trouble was traced to the sediment that had been allowed to accumulate over a long period of time. One cannot be too certain that the water supply is all that it should be.

Soybean Oil Meal

The use of soybean oil meal should appeal as strongly to the dairyman who has to purchase protein feed as to any other producer of live stock. Its palatability and the superior quality of its protein are of equal importance to him as to the producer of beef, lamb, poultry and eggs. All proteins, which are composed of amino acids, do not have the same nutritional value and for that reason a protein concentrate composed of proteins from several different sources has a higher value as a supplement for carbohydrate grains than one carrying protein from a single source. However, where for any reason one supplementary protein carrier must be relied upon for balancing a ration, soybean oil meal ranks very high for that purpose because of the character of its content of amino acids.—Wisconsin Agriculturist.

Color Carries Vitamin

Recent studies made at the University of Porto Rico under the auspices of Columbia university, Rockefeller foundation, indicate that vitamin A in annatto seed is the richest source available. When this is used in coloring butter, it adds to the value of the butter as a food. When an annatto coloring is used, it overcomes objections commonly made, because of the fact that it does increase the vitamin content. Thus, as butter loses color in the summer months, a greater supply of this color can be added and thereby improve the butter.

"If the discovery proves to be true, as no doubt it will, it will add merit to butter throughout the months when cows are on dry feed," says W. F. Jensen, secretary American Association Creamery Butter Manufacturers.—Prairie Farmer.

Bull Pen Important

More than 600 Indiana dairymen have constructed bull pens according to plans furnished by Purdue university. Iron pipe, iron rods, heavy lumber, wooden poles and heavy woven wire have all been used successfully. Wooden posts, concrete posts and iron pipes have all been used as posts. At least 1,000 square feet is recommended as providing enough space for a bull pen. Such a pen is health insurance for the sire and life insurance for the owner.—Prairie Farmer.

RACE DOOMED TO DEATH FROM COLD?

Possibly Yes, but Not for Some Few Years.

The radiation from the sun is at the expense of its mass. No less than 360,000 million tons of matter is destroyed every day in order to maintain the present radiation of the sun. Poor old Sol weighs 360,000 million tons less today than he weighed at this time yesterday!

By our human standards this prodigal expenditure cannot keep up for very long, but our human standards are not astronomical standards. Computation shows that the sun is not very much different today than it was when the planets were born. The weight of the sun is so inconceivably great that in order to show any material change in weight or radiation we must go back, not 2,000 million years, but five million million years. The sun weighed about twice as much then as it does now, and was correspondingly brighter and hotter.

The sun is unquestionably a dying star. It loses some of its weight every year, and this means a loss of gravitational pull and a loss of radiation intensity. In other words, we may expect the earth to draw gradually farther away from the sun, and we may also expect the sun gradually to cool off as millions of years roll around.

This means one thing only—death by cold. Just as sure as we can be of anything, are we sure that life will eventually be frozen off the earth. Temperatures need drop only 100 degrees below where they are now in order to kill a great many of us.

Some probably would survive, and of these some of their ultimate offspring would have characteristics favorable to very cold weather. If time enough elapsed men and women would evolve into Eskimo types. Even this ignores the question of our food supply, which would be affected much earlier. In any case, in the end even these descendants of ours must perish.

This is a gloomy outlook. It has one consolation, and that is that it will be a long time before all this happens. It works out to be something of the order of a million million years. As we have been here only one half of one million, it becomes evident that things have just begun, and that there is a long time ahead in which to build and plan and enjoy.—Hiram Percy Maxim in the Scientific American.

Legacies for Serious Minds

In the will of Sir Alfred Yarrow, the shipbuilder who died not long ago at the age of ninety, women who lead useless lives are criticized and legacies are given to a number of women who, to his way of thinking, have "justified their existence."

After noting the "useless lives led by many ladies of the present day" who are "unprovided with any occupation except the pursuit of amusement," he calls attention to the "hap-

WHY DID A BABY STARVE ON THIS?

WHY DID THE SAME BABY THRIVE ON THIS?

Food elements

in both were the same

CHEMICALLY, two baby foods can be exactly alike. The same percentage of carbohydrate, fat, protein, mineral salts. The same vitamins.

Yet on one, a baby may lose weight, grow thin and weak. And on the other, that same baby can flourish and gain and take on new life. What's the reason? . . . Digestibility.

Digestibility of prime importance!

Doctors know that a baby can starve on what is apparently the most perfectly "balanced" formula if his body cannot use the food elements it contains. Only a food which is easily and completely digested and assimilated can give to your baby the full amount of building material his little body needs.

Countless doctors and mothers have found this out through actual experience. And that is why Eagle Brand, over a period of 75 years, has won a marvelous reputation as an infant food. For Eagle Brand, next to mother's milk, is the easiest form of milk in all the world to digest. In baby's stomach, Eagle Brand forms soft, fine curds, like those formed by mother's milk. Every drop of Eagle Brand is quickly assimilated, goes quickly into the making of bones and teeth, muscle and tissue, energy and strength.

This milk can build 100% babies!
And what a builder Eagle Brand is! Recently, in a world-famous baby clinic, two physicians—specialists in their field —fed a group of 50 average babies on Eagle Brand for several months, to test its exact value in baby building. Bone structure was studied with the X-ray. Tooth development was watched. Weight and height were periodically recorded. Blood tests were made. . . . and those 50 Eagle Brand babies, judged by every known test, proved themselves splendidly nourished.

This simple diet—Eagle Brand with the usual supplementary foods*—had proved equal in every way to the building of 100% babies.

What overwhelming proof that the mother whose own milk fails can put her baby on Eagle Brand with perfect confidence!

Try Eagle Brand. See the simple instructions on the label. And send for the new booklet "Baby's Welfare." It gives feeding schedules, full directions for baby's care, together with pictures and life stories of Eagle Brand babies.

*The usual supplementary foods, of course, are orange or tomato juice, and cod-liver oil or other source of the anti-rachitic vitamin D.

Along about the middle of the full-moon night the pigs had developed a real social celebration. The boys could not sleep for the din of the racket the pigs made in expressing their joyousness. The boys watched and listened at a safe distance and they told me that the pigs would try to stand on their hind feet but had to lean against the fence to remain upright and then would sing a pig song and laugh and cry just about the way human beings do under the same influence. The pigs would put their fore legs around each other's neck, rub their cheeks together, and as far as the boys could translate were slobbering out a request for the next dance.

The Vet could not account for the actions of the pigs and advised the boys to go to bed as perhaps it was something that was catching and it was easier to control if confined to the pig yard. And that is all I know about it for the boys went away.

NORTH TAWAS NEWS

There is room for a few more pupils in my violin class. I have studied five years with Professor Leggett, formerly of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra; also with Professor Milliken of the Baker Conservatory of Flint, Mich., and am now studying with Professor De Remer of Bay City, Mich. I am prepared with the newest methods of Hohmann's conservatory approved course.

British and French Flags
The British flag at the time of the American Revolution was a blue field with the crosses of St. Andrew and St. George; St. George, white cross; St. Andrew, red. The standard of France at this period was white with the fleur de lis, or lily.

Toads Oddly Hatched
The eggs of the swarim toad, of Dutch Guiana, are picked up by the male, one by one, as soon as they are laid, and imbedded in the skin of the back of the female. Here they remain from 75 to 85 days, at the end of which time they are hatched and come forth from their mother's back not in the polywog stage but fully grown toads. From 60 to 70 young toads may be hatched in this way at one time.

Japanese Ingenuity
By crossing barnyard fowl with copper and green pheasants, Japanese fanciers raise roosters with tails more than twelve feet long.

Birds Killed in Flight
Thousands of birds, especially warblers, are killed during migration by flying into telephone wires or buildings, or by similar accidents.
