SCOUTS MEET AT WEST BRANCH TUESDAY NIGHT

The Boy Scouts of the northern district held a court of honor at West Branch on Tuesday evening, June 14. 120 Scouts from Rose City, Tawas City, East Tawas, Grayling and West Branch were present with their parents.

E. B. Randall, chairman of the Northern District and vice-president of the Summer Trails Council, with C. L. McLean of Tawas City, Fred R. Welsh of Grayling, A. E. Giddings of Tawas City, E. W. Church of Bay City, and G. F. Landane Scout Executive of the Summer Trails Council, made up the court of honor committee.

G. K. Fenger, supervisor of the Huron National Forest, gave a talk on scouting in Europe and on the conservation plan in Michigan. It is apparent that after listening to Mr. Fenger, the Scouts of this district should be in a position to do a great deal toward assisting the program of the forestry division in preventing fires and conserving game.

Eagle Scouts Arnold McLean, Vernon Davis, Earl Davis and James Mark of Troop 77 of Tawas City were awarded citations by Mr. Church. This citation is awarded only to the Eagle Scout.

Scouts Robert Rea and Carvel Wolfson of Troop 71 of West Branch and Scouts Gordon Huck, M. J. Duggan, Jr., and Francis Detzler of Troop 75 of West Branch were also awarded the Eagle citation, and the mothers of these Scouts pinned the Eagle badge on them.

Scout Robert Rea was not able to be at the court because of the fact that he is at Michigan State College and is in the midst of final examinations at this time. He will return home next week and the West Branch troops will hold a special court of honor to present his Eagle.

The Cub Scouts of West Branch under the direction of Scouts Dallas Chapin and Gordon Huck, were presented to the group and awards were made them also.

"HUDDLE," HIGH TENSION DRAMA OF CAMPUS LIFE

Ramon Novarro demonstrates his ability as a versatile player by attempting the most radically different role of his career in "Huddle," his new starring picture, which plays Sunday and Monday, June 19-20, at the Family Theatre, East Tawas.

The picture, adapted from the widely read story by Francis Wallace, concerns the social adjustment of an Italian laborer who attends Yale University. His troubles and conflicts are worked out to a smashing climax. Thrilling football scenes show leading All-American players in action with Novarro.

A strong cast supports the star, including Madge Evans, Una Merkel, Ralph Graves, John Arledge and Frank Albertson. The picture was directed by Sam Wood, whose previous scoring college pictures include "So This Is College" and "One Minute to Play."

LARGE ATTENDANCE AT BACCALAUREATE SERVICE

Before a large crowd that filled the Zion Lutheran church, Rev. F. A. Sievert opened the services with Scripture reading and the invocation. Rev. W. C. Voss of the Emmanuel Lutheran church addressed the 1932 graduating class of Tawas City high school. The Emmanuel Lutheran choir rendered two selections, "The Lord's Prayer" and "The Benediction."

Rev. Voss gave an inspiring address on the standard of glory, showing whatever line of labor the graduates undertook they needed God to be with them.

EASY VICTORY WON AT ALPENA

Tawas City sailed through to an easy victory over St. Anne's at Alpena last Sunday, leaving the northern aggregation on the small end of a 12-5 score.

Boulder was the local pitcher who set down the St. Anne team. His work in holding the St. Anne boys to a mere six hits was exceptionally praiseworthy. Boulder's performance, combined with his mates' effective hitting, proved too big a hill for St. Anne's to climb and resulted in the one-sided victory. The three pitchers used by Alpena were hit hard by the determined local squad.

The locals started off in a business-like way by tallying twice in the first frame and adding another in the second. Their big inning was the fifth, in which six runs were scored. Two of their remaining runs were made in the sixth and the final tally came in the eighth. St. Anne collected one run in the first and then went scoreless until the ninth, when a last-minute rally added four more runs.

Sieloff was the leading slugger of the day, pounding out a double and three singles in six trips to the plate.

Next Sunday the locals will take on the Mikado nine at the Tawas City Athletic Field. Let's turn out and help the boys avenge a defeat suffered earlier in the season at the hands of Mikado.

HUGHES SHOWS LAST WORD IN GANG FILMS

Howard Hughes has delivered another great contribution to the screen in his United Artists picture, "Scarface," which plays Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at the Family Theatre, East Tawas. It is one of the finest examples of picture making seen here.

From the standpoint of sheer melodrama, it is unsurpassed. Thrills follow thrills in rapid succession. It moves at a tremendous pace, and it builds logically and convincingly to a startling climax without a single false note to mar the tempo and finesse of its deftly constructed and brilliantly photographed plot.

It is a bold, vivid and sensational treatment of a subject which has become one of America's major social problems. Its effect on public sentiment will be overwhelming. And the effect will be towards public betterment. "Scarface" is a credit to the motion picture industry, and a great personal triumph for its courageous young producer. It is a picture which everyone should see at least once, because no one who views this tremendous photodrama will retain any illusions concerning the social and political problem confronting this nation.

"Scarface" will thrill you, will entertain you, will enlighten you, and at times it will amuse you with its human interest and comedy, which is part and parcel of any great melodrama of real life.

Invest in rest. Prices are right. Beds, springs and mattresses. Barkmans.

Stowaway Takes in Sights of London

Very Simple the Way La Raviere Tells It.

London.—Strict as immigration officials and steamship officers are, it is still possible to cross the Atlantic as a stowaway, eat two square meals daily for seven days while mingling with the passengers and crew, and then enter Great Britain without so much as a question from the authorities.

Raymond La Raviere, twenty-eight, who says he lived at 2432 Marquette road, Chicago, did it. Travelers who have experienced the thoroughness of the European investigations of foreigners at ports and frontiers, plus the usual ticket and passport inspections of stewards and others aboard ship, merely go through formalities in no way essential. La Raviere proved it.

He boarded the Olympic in New York 15 hours before the vessel sailed, made himself comfortable, traveled to Southampton, landed, tramped to London, and was going for a walk with two newly found girl friends in Drury Lane some time later before the police called him to account. Then he was fined $10 or given one month in Wormwood Scrubs prison for the offense of entering England illegally.

Afterwards he restored himself to the trust of the officials and spent a month doing the tower, houses of parliament, Westminster abbey, kew gardens, and other points of interest.

La Raviere was even given a police registration card such as all Americans and other foreigners who stay in England any length of time must have.

It all sounds easy as he explains it.

He walked up the Olympic gangplank, stored his luggage in the crew's quarters, and went for a walk. He came back at eight, got his bag, and picked out an unoccupied third-class stateroom. Mattresses and other unused bedding were stored in the room, and out of these he built a screen to shield himself from the door. Then he made his bed behind and turned in for the night. When he woke up next morning he was at sea.

La Raviere stayed in his stateroom until evening, when he grew hungry. So he changed his clothes and went on deck. Then he learned that the night crew was about to be fed, so he dashed back and got into his seaman's clothing in time to follow the crew in to supper. He helped himself and nobody asked any questions.

He made this quick change twice a day for seven days. He ate lunch with the day crew and at night he fed with a different watch. Nobody suspected. The rest of the time he lolled in deck chairs and mingled with the passengers.

La Raviere meant to disembark at Cherbourg, but found this impossible because of the landing card necessary to board the tender. So he went on to Southampton and was unlucky enough to arrive there in mid-afternoon. He saw two gangplanks taken aboard, one for the passengers and the other for the crew, who immediately began unloading laundry. Then he did his quick change for the last time. He left his bag behind to avoid customs officers and walked off the ship with the crew.

He was unable to get out of the dock yards at Southampton because the only exit is through a gate in a high steel wire fence and this is guarded by immigration officers.

But he waited until dark and then jumped the fence, the last hurdle of his crossing taken. Then he walked

Car Breaks Record With No Oil in Crankcase

Elgin, Ill.—A world's motor "dry-run" record is claimed to have been established here recently, when an automobile processed with a new lubricating fluid was driven 318.7 miles in 13 hours, 35 minutes, with absolutely no oil in its crankcase.

Mayor Myron M. Lehman and a group of Elgin business men witnessed mechanics drain all of the oil from the car's crankcase and padlock the motor hood at the start of the test.

City and state officials checked the car in at the end of the test and certified to the mileage covered. Numbers 5 and 6 connecting rod bearings were burned out but otherwise the motor was in perfect condition.

The fluid used in conditioning the car for the test is a concentrated extract, which when introduced into a motor with the regular oil and with the gasoline, penetrates the pores of the metal and then forms a thin film over the outer surface of the bearings. This provides not only a self-lubricating surface on the metal, but a built-in supply underneath which, when released by frictional heat due to an inadequate amount or total absence of oil, furnishes the necessary lubrication until its own reserve has been drawn out of the pores and exhausted.

New Yorker Owns Goose That Lays 11-Inch Egg

Pen Yan, N. Y.—Peggy J., owned by Mrs. J. F. Goundry, is no ordinary goose.

Peggy lays eggs so large that one of them, mixed with two quarts of milk, will make enough custard for the family.

Every spring Peggy goes on an eccentric production schedule. On alternate days she lays a huge double-yoked egg weighing ten ounces. It measures 11 inches around.

When hot weather sets in, she settles down to one normal egg a day.

to London, a fraction less than 80 miles away.

He confessed to a policeman guarding the door of an American organization in London that he entered as a stowaway without a passport. This policeman, La Raviere claims, refused to arrest him then, but when he saw him on the following day strolling with two pretty English girls he put him under arrest and took him to the immigration office in Bow street. He was convicted of entering the country illegally and on the same day they took him to Wormwood Scrubs, a prison on the outskirts of London.

There he says his treatment was of the best.

After his sentence was finished La Raviere was sent automatically to Brixton prison to await deportation. He appealed to the home office for release and to polish off his experiences he was allowed his freedom in the name of Sir Herbert Samuel, home secretary. Throughout his difficulties American consular officials were anxious to help him, but they could do nothing without proof of his American citizenship. This he could not supply without a passport, and it was necessary to write to Chicago for his birth certificate.

U. S. Memorial in France

Old French Defenses Are Discovered by Laborers.

Bar-le-Duc.—As excavations for the construction of an American monument were being made on the peak of Montafuon, in the Argonne, the foundations of an old fortress built there by Godefroy de Bouillon in 1076 were discovered.

The American monument is to commemorate the 1,512 soldiers of the United States army who were killed there in September, 1918, when the position was taken from the Germans. The old fort is said to have been destroyed and reconstructed in the Eleventh, Thirteenth, Fifteenth, Sixteenth and Seventeenth centuries and finally burned with the village during the Thirty Years' war by the Swedes.

Godefroy de Bouillon was a young vassal of Emperor Henry IV, from whom he received the title of Marquisate of Anvers at the death of Godefroy-le-Bossu. The fortress was dismantled when the Duc de Basse Lorraine left with the Crusaders.

Explorations are being made by Baron Renaux, curator of the Verdun museum and library, under the auspices of the ministry of fine arts, in collaboration with Canon Almond, historical savant of the Meuse, and other authorities. Among the finds so far are an entrance stairway, a series of galleries of different sizes, small rooms in one of which was a stone bench, and several piles of burned wheat, indicating the destruction of 1636. These were all discovered at a depth of eight or ten meters.

The American battle monument is to be made of reinforced concrete faced with Burgundy stone. It will be 200 feet high, overlooking the entire battlefield. Dedication ceremonies are scheduled for this summer, unless present excavations postpone the work.

Spain Ignores Death Penalty in New Regime

Madrid, Spain.—Although the constitution of the second Spanish republic is silent on the subject, and the new criminal code has not yet been drawn up, the death penalty has gone out of vogue in this country.

Recently, the minister of Justice, Don Alvaro de Albornoz, announced the commutation of the death penalty to life imprisonment of a man who had killed the wife of a dairy owner, and their twenty-seven-month-old baby.

The Cortes Constituyentes, a few weeks ago, refused to take into consideration a bill proposed by a deputy belonging to the radical party, which would provide the death penalty for all robbers who engaged in holdups. The bill was proposed on the day when a bank in Madrid was held up and robbed of $4,000, but it was promptly hooted down by the Socialists and Radical Socialist deputies.

These two events are symptomatic of the spirit of the times in Spain.

Novel Transportation Plan for Big Cities

RELIEF of traffic congestion in large cities depends on having different levels of travel and continuous movement. Experts have been studying the problem for many years, and now one of them, Norman Wilson Storer, a Westinghouse engineer, has evolved the "Biway system." The illustration shows how it would appear if constructed high above the streets, running from one skyscraper to the next and on glass-covered bridges across the open spaces.

As indicated by the name, it is an arrangement of two parallel, continuous trains or belts of cars running on parallel tracks with a stationary loading platform along its entire course.

Passengers are not required to go to stated stations. They can board the first or local train at any point and it stops every 50 seconds for 10 seconds. The maximum wait is 40 seconds. When a gong sounds, gates close and the local platform starts moving. When it attains a speed of 17 miles an hour, the second or limited train has slowed to exactly that speed.

There is another signal, gates on the express open and the passengers pass into the express for the major portion of their trip. At the end of 10 seconds these gates close, the local starts slowing down for another stop and the express increases its speed to 22 miles an hour until time to slow down for another transfer. The express moves continuously.

All stations are controlled from one central control point and the entire system, starts, stops, signals, gates and speeds are so timed and synchronized that operation is infallible.

With 4,000 seats per mile of train, the express, traveling at an average speed of 20 miles an hour, carries 80,000 seats past any given point every hour. Put three seats on each local car and you increase this number to 91,000 seats an hour.

Asked to explain the motive power, Mr. Storer said: "We don't drive through the wheels at all. Axles carry longitudinal 'T' rails, the flanges of which run between vertical shaft rollers or drive wheels at power stations located every 1,000 feet along the route. These stations are like stationary locomotives and are in pits beneath the tracks. Sets of motors propel the drive wheels which are pressed against the flanges of the 'T' rails. It is purely an adhesion drive."

OUR BEDTIME STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

WHEN Buster Bear got over his first fright after he dropped from the big hemlock tree where Farmer Brown's Boy had surprised him feasting on the honey of Busy Bee he stopped running. By this time he was some distance from the tree, for, big as he is and clumsy as he appears to be, Buster can run very fast and can cover a lot of distance in a very short time. He turned and listened for sounds of some one following him, but heard none. Of course not, for the very good reason that no one was following him.

The Green Forest was very still. Only once did he hear anything to tell him that there was another living thing there. A Merry Little Breeze wandering through the treetops brought him the sound of Sammy Jay's voice. It was very faint, but it was enough to make Buster growl a deep rumbling-growl. Sammy Jay was laughing and Buster knew perfectly well why. Sammy was laughing at him, at the way he had dropped out of that tree and run at the sound of Farmer Brown's Boy's yell. It hurt Buster's pride, for Buster is no more fond of being laughed at than any one else.

The Merry Little Breeze passed on and Buster heard nothing more, though he listened and listened with all his might. He tried to use his nose to find out if there was any man smell in the air. You know Buster has a very wonderful nose, and he depends on it a great deal. But all he could smell was honey. You see it was still smeared all over his face and nose. After a while he felt sure that no one was following him, and then he began to think of other things.

In the first place he ached from the bumps he had received when he dropped out of that tree. He had been too frightened to feel them at the time, but he felt them now. But worse than that there were the stings from the bees. He hadn't minded these while he was filling his stomach with that delicious honey, but he did now. It seemed to him that those bees had found every tender place on his whole body. He ached and he smarted all over, but the smarters were worse than the aches, a great deal worse. It seemed to him that he felt one in a new place every other second.

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear me! I almost wish I had never found that honey," groaned Buster. "It wouldn't be so bad if I had got all of it (Buster is very greedy), but to be cheated out of half of it, and then to have to ache and smart the way I do is dreadful. I can't stand this much longer. I've got to do something. I've got to find some mud, and I've got to find it soon. I'll go crazy if I don't. There's nothing like a good cool mud to take the smart out of bee stings. And I guess I need a bath. I'm a mess."

"Oh, Dear! Oh, Dear Me! I Almost Wish I Had Never Found That Honey," Groaned Buster.

There isn't water enough in the Laughing Brook for a bath. There's just one place for me and that is the pond of Paddy the Beaver. Oh, dear! Oh, dear! I wish I was there this minute."

So Buster set out for the pond of Paddy the Beaver.

Now Farmer Brown's Boy's one thought when he yelled and ran was to get away from those bees as soon as possible. At the moment he quite forgot Buster Bear. He heard the crash of breaking branches as Buster dropped out of the tree, and then he heard Buster crashing his way through the Green Forest as he ran away, but he was too busy fighting angry bees to realize what it all meant then. Later he did and chuckled as he thought of what a fright Buster must have had. The bees did not follow him far, and pretty soon, quite out of breath, Farmer Brown's Boy stopped to rest. But it wasn't for long. The stings from the bees smarted too much. My, how they did smart!

"Mud," said Farmer Brown's Boy. "I've simply got to get some mud. My face will be swelled up like a balloon if I don't. Let me see, this isn't far from the pond of Paddy the Beaver. There will be plenty of mud there. I was going there anyway."

So Farmer Brown's Boy set out for the pond of Paddy the Beaver.

SOME BRAN DISHES

THE value of uncooked bran as a laxative food is so well known that it need not be mentioned here. Uncooked, unsweetened bran may be used in combination with any foods to add roughage to the diet. One must know of course that all people cannot use irritating roughage, but the majority of people need all kinds to cleanse the alimentary canal, aid digestion and further elimination. When one objects to taking a tablespoonful or two of bran in a glass of water, add it to the cereal, or make some of these dishes:

Bran Macaroons.

Beat one egg, add one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, one-half cupful of brown sugar, three tablespoonfuls of melted butter, one and one-half cupfuls of uncooked bran and such flavor-

EVEN LAWYERS

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THE boy's decided law is what he wants to do. Although, of course, his Maw hoped preachin' was his plan.

But, if it's law, O. K., I'll help to put him through.

Yes, I'll be glad to pay, help any way I can.

And when he gets his—well, whatever lawyers git,

Though Maw has had a spell because it ain't to preach,

And when he's home again, then we'll sit down a bit,

And sort of figger then, together, each with each.

A father and a son, a youngster and his dad.

Have got one duty, one they never ought to miss,

A pair of chairs to bring, the gray-beard and the lad,

To talk about one thing, and that one thing is this:

It ain't how much the pay, the cash the boy'll make,

It ain't the hours a day, it even ain't the place,

But whether what he asks is service for men's sake,

For even lawyers' tasks can be works of grace.

Although his Maw is sick because the law he took,

The weeds are mighty thick, the vineyard needin' care;

There's lots of work to do, accordin' to the Book,

And there is labor, too, for even lawyers there.

There's many sorts of needs that need this boy of mine,

And lawyers can pull weeds as well as preachers can.

Whatever trade it is, I know his light will shine,

The chance is always his, if he's an honest man.

TALES OF THE CHIEFS

By Editha L. Watson

SITTING BULL

Probably no Indian is more widely known than Sitting Bull, and certainly no Indian has had as many conflicting stories told about him.

In turn we find him called a hero, a coward, a politician, an old scallawag, and the finest type of Indian. The times in which he lived have given him some of these names, the changed values of a later day, others.

Perhaps he was all of these. One thing is certain, he was colorful.

The year of his birth in South Dakota, 1834, is almost a hundred years ago. South Dakota was a wild country then, inhabited by Sioux, who fought the other plains tribes incessantly. The Shoshoni and the Crows knew the valor of this tribe, and as time went on, young Sitting Bull became noted far and near as a warrior of the Sioux.

Certainly, his youth was not that of a coward. He distinguished himself in hunting buffalo calves at the age of ten, and at fourteen he had gone with his father on the warpath and counted his first coup.

Coups are counted in three ways: killing an enemy, scalping an enemy, or being the first to strike an enemy. Considering the ferocity of Indian warfare, it must be granted that it was a brave lad who counted coup at the age of fourteen.

As he grew older, Sitting Bull was often consulted in the role of peacemaker. He, a leader in war, was also foremost in peace; but this did not extend to the white men. For them, Sitting Bull always had a sense of disdain and hatred. It shows in his pictures, glaring out from his Indian eyes; it showed most—and always—in his life.

His first important engagement against the whites was at Fort Buford in 1866. The next three years found Indians from various tribes flocking to his standard. Then came seven years on the warpath, when the band was never at a loss for a fight; there were frontier posts to swoop upon, Shoshoni to battle with, or Crows to raid.

Then the seven years of joyous warfare came to an end. The government stepped in. This was no longer an Indian land, where the red man might do as he liked. Peace was the word of the day, and peaceful Indians went on reservations and behaved themselves.

Yes, but Sitting Bull was not a peaceful Indian!

The battle on the Little Bighorn, where Custer and his men fell, is of course the most famous engagement in which Sitting Bull is named. Here one may always start an argument about him.

Was he a coward? He is said to have fled with the women and children on that eventful day. Or was he the mighty medicine man who stayed in the hills and prayed for his people, although his heart inclined to the thick of battle? Who can tell? Gall and John Grass fought bravely, trained in the same school which had taught Sitting Bull the lessons of war. Many other Indian warriors fought bravely also. Is it believable that he, who had spent the last ten years on the warpath, had fled from this handful of white men—especially when he had already predicted the Indian victory?

But with General Miles hot on his heels afterwards, no one can blame him for escaping into Canada. General Miles was another sort of enemy, with an uncanny manner of achieving his ends in the face of all sorts of opposition.

The year 1881 saw the return of Sitting Bull to his own country. He had been promised amnesty, and surrendered at Fort Buford, where, 15 years before, he had made his first great fight against the whites.

It is almost impossible, in describing the Sioux leader at this time of his life, to avoid using the expression, "a caged eagle." It so exactly fits him. His fighting heart was not tamed, even if his power was limited. Was this a martyr who urged his people not to yield to the white men, a prophet who foresaw the fall of his race, or an old scallawag with an insatiable desire to make trouble? The truth, no doubt, lies somewhere in between.

There is something a little sad in Sitting Bull's death. The chief was of more than middle age; his eloquent opposition was his only effective weapon against the whites. Two troops of cavalry with two Hotchkiss guns, and 43 trained Indian police, were sent at night to take him. They woke him where he slept, and told him to go with them, and bitter-hearted that he was, he berated them as he made his preparations.

He was shot as he went out with his captors. Fearful that his followers might effect a rescue, the Indian policeman at his side killed him, in front of his people who had crowded around to save him. Killed by men of his own race, Sitting Bull died as he had lived, hating and despising the white men and their ways to the last.

Ideal Dwelling Place for the "Simple Lifer"

The loneliest village in England boasts six names—Wiston, Wissington, Wisson, Wisseen, Wiseton and Whiston—and one motorcycle, one wireless set, one inn and one dart-board.

This village, surrounded by cornfields and towering trees, has hardly changed since the old cottages were built hundreds of years ago. The village was in existence in 1066. It has no electric light, gas or water supply, shop, telephone or meeting hall. There is not even a village green. It shares a policeman with three neighboring villages.

Many of the inhabitants have never been more than ten miles from home, and the majority of the old farmers and laborers have never been inside a cinema or theater, some have never ridden in a train or heard a wireless broadcast.

The villagers work from sunrise till sunset, and take their relaxation in the taproom of old Fox inn, where the youngsters get excited over a "needle game" of darts.

Failing Sight

When a person passes forty he enters a period of failing vision according to the better vision in the eye. Forty-two is the average age at which eyes begin to lose their ability to adjust themselves easily to varying focal ranges. Up to that age most eyes, with or without the aid of glasses, can accommodate themselves to variations in the range of vision, but after that age such accommodations are increasingly difficult to make.

SWAP HUSBANDS AND WIVES; PROVES O. K.

Minot, N. D.—An unusual experiment in eugenics in which two neighboring families in this county swapped wives, husbands, children and homes three years ago has proved so successful in the three-year "try-out" that both women and their husbands are more than pleased and satisfied with the result, while neighbors who prophesied failure for the experiment have agreed they were mistaken. Welfare workers say it is the most unusual case in their experience, being absolutely unique.

The Knights and the Rikensruds are the families involved. Two husbands, two wives, and seven children were included in the mixup and the realignment which followed.

While the Knights had five children before the realignment, and the Rikensruds but two, under the new arrangements the Knights found themselves with but four children, while the Rikensruds had their family increased from two children to three.

The two families were great friends before the experiment was tried and they remain just as good friends today. The children attended the same school, the parents went to the same church, and often the four parents would pile into the same automobile and go to the same "movie" show. They secured their divorces together and had a double marriage the next day. Then they all came back to their new homes.

Neither the Knights nor the Rikensruds were among the "newly weds" when they decided to exchange families. There was no "sudden impulse." The Knights had been married 17 years and the Rikensruds for 11 years when the readjustment was undertaken.

The head of one family is William Knight, Lawrence Rikensrud heads the other. The Knights were from Minnetonka, Minn., originally, while the Rikensruds were married at Bottineau, N. D.

In time, the two families found themselves living on adjacent farms near Minot. Here they were close friends for several years, the children growing up together and the parents being about as intimate as the usual farm families.

Four or five years ago a change was gradually coming over the two families. Instead of husbands and wives pairing off together when the two families came to Minot on a double shopping expedition, or to attend a picture show, Knight and Mrs. Rikensrud often sat together, while Rikensrud and Mrs. Knight coupled seats alongside the other couple. Their friends got to teasing all four. It seemed a good joke.

But there was more to the affair than just a joke. One day in March, 1929, both women filed suits for divorce, alleging cruelty. The same lawyer acted for both. The two husbands were in the courtroom when the decrees were handed down by the judge.

The following morning Rikensrud married Mrs. Knight and Knight married Mrs. Rikensrud, with a double ceremony.

The honeymoons were spent together.

Salmon Jumps Into Boat

Grants Pass, Ore.—A large Chinook salmon actually leaped into the row-boat of J. Schwartz, of Klamath Falls, as he rowed down the Rogue river, near here. Schwartz leaped astride the fish and subdued it after taking a good thumping.

SAFEST OF VAULTS BEING CONSTRUCTED

London.—"I want the new Bank of England made so impregnable that no one could even steal so much as half a sovereign from its vaults. Even the theft of that small sum would ruin our prestige."

That statement, made by Mantagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, is responsible for the mighty barricade of steel and cement being built 60 feet below the streets of London.

Norman's instructions are being carried out to the letter and the new vaults will withstand assault, fire, bombardment, dynamite and flood for the next 500 years. If any intruder even gets inside, he must face the danger of being drowned, shot or captured.

The new safes are costing £500,000 and will be the main feature of the new Bank of England building, now half finished. All work has been carried out behind high barricades.

The outer doors of the safes are described as artillery proof. The outer shells are bronze while the cores are solid blocks of 3-inch steel.

All the "strong room" system rests on a three-foot bed of concrete reinforced with hardened steel rods, and covered with a layer of steel. The sides of the vaults and safes are protected in the same way. Architects are certain that no amount of tunneling would ever permit access from below or from the sides.

The only feasible access to the safes and vaults will be from above, through massive grille gates and steel doors, guarded, if necessary, by machine gunners. Inside these gates and doors is a deep shaft, with elevators, leading down to the level of the vaults.

In emergencies this shaft can be flooded, drowning intruders, with no danger of the water penetrating the strong rooms.

There are more strong grills at the bottom of the shaft and the huge safe door weighs 25 tons. Not even the governor of the bank can open the safe door. The combination code of the lock is divided up, no one person knowing all of it.

Even inside the safe door there are innumerable steel doors to be opened before a single bar of gold could be removed from the rack on which it lies.

Pulpit to Politics

Rev. Harry Oscar Stevens has resigned his Presbyterian pastorate in Phillip, S. D., to run for governor of South Dakota on the ticket of the Liberty party. Mr. Stevens proposes constitutional changes to lodge all legislation with the people through popular vote, with the Supreme court passing on constitutionality before submission to a vote. He proposes to eliminate legislators, with the people enacting laws direct.

Track Sensation

Ralph (Rabbit) Metcalf, a negro sophomore in Marquette university, Milwaukee, is expected by some coaches and track authorities to be a sensational performer in the 1932 Olympic games. He is a 100-yard runner and twice this year has equaled the accepted world's record of 9.5 seconds.

Marshmallow Mint Sauce

1/2 cup sugar, 1/4 cup water, 8 marshmallows, cut in small pieces, 1 egg white, 1/4 tsp. pepper, mint extract, Green coloring.

Cool sugar and water to thin sirup (230 degrees F.), not thick enough to spin a thread. Add marshmallows. Let stand two minutes, or until marshmallows are dissolved, pressing marshmallows under sirup. Pour sirup slowly over egg white, beating constantly until mixture is cool. Add peppermint extract and enough coloring to make sauce a delicate green. Makes one cupful of sauce.

For the Golf Course

A shirtmaker frock in cotton shirting is a cool choice for summer hours on the golf course.

All Around the House

- A pinch of salt added to fruit sherbet will improve the flavor.
- Clean discolored knife handles with a slice of cut lemon dipped in salt.
- To clean and polish patent leather rub well with a cloth dipped in egg white.
- Little molasses cakes and coffee make the delightful lunch to serve to afternoon guests on a cool day.
- Kerosene rubbed over window screens will remove any rust that may have accumulated during the winter.
- Macaroni and rice are best cooked in rapidly boiling water. Cooked in this way they will not stick to the pan.
- When lettuce is being prepared for the table it is always advisable to break off the midrib, as that is likely to be better.
- When sugaring doughnuts or crullers put them in a bag with the sugar and shake well. This is a saving in sugar and covers the doughnuts or crullers evenly.

China's Holy Land

An Example of Shantung Justice.

(Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)—WNU Service.

POLITICAL leaders in Shantung announce that they will again acknowledge the central Chinese government at Nanking in matters of taxation, despite reports to the contrary. Shantung has recently shown independence of Nanking.

Shantung is the Holy Land of China because it was the birthplace and burial place of Confucius. Thousands of Chinese pilgrims visit the province's numerous temples every year. It also is a beehive of business. The Grand canal, the muddy, moody Hwang-ho or Yellow river, Twentieth-century-built railroads, wheelbarrows and strong coolie backs handle large volumes of commerce destined to all parts of the world.

Thirty million people live in Shantung, which is about the size of Iowa. Most of them inhabit villages thickly sprinkled over the landscape, but the province also boasts large cities that have figured prominently in international politics and business.

Tsinan, the capital, is a city of about 350,000 inhabitants situated on the plains of Shantung. Although nearly 200 miles from the sea, Tsinan is an important commercial center. Small native boats navigate canals that connect the city with the Yellow and Hsiao-Ching rivers nearby. Perhaps more important, however, are Tsinan's railroad transportation facilities, for it is here that the railroad which penetrates the Shantung peninsula connects with the trunk line joining Peiping, Tientsin and Shanghai.

Tsinan's Flour and Peanut Oil.

Products from the western grain fields reach Tsinan. Grain is stored in Tsinan warehouses and milled in Tsinan mills, while large quantities of peanuts and tobacco from nearby Shantung plantations are also shipped there for disposal. Flour mills and peanut oil factories are among the city's larger industries. Some of the peanuts are cousins to American tubers that were introduced into Shantung by American missionaries. And the tobacco, some of which was introduced by American tobacco companies, might claim relationship to the leaves that had a part in bringing fame to Sir Walter Raleigh.

In Tsinan homes and factories fine Chinese rugs are woven. When long hair was the crowning glory of the American girl and speedy roadsters undid the patient strokes of the boudoir comb, Tsinan prospered making hairnets. But each American girl who, in recent years, has emerged from a barber shop with shorn locks unwittingly did her bit to cripple this industry.

Tsinan is more than a thousand years older than the Christian era. Guides will tell the traveler that the city was once situated 25 miles from its present site and was moved piece by piece by a continuous line of men stretching from the old to the new site. From remote times, the natives have believed that an imaginary chain from the nearby Pagoda hill keeps Tsinan from blowing away in the wind blasts off the Shantung plain, or being washed away by the frequent floods of the murky Yellow river. That sinister stream is about six miles north of the city.

Two walls surround three sides of the city. The inner wall is an irregular square with many gates. The outer wall flares outward on a zig-zagging course from the northeast and northwest corners of the square wall.

Until 1906, Tsinan was a strange city to foreign traders. Then it voluntarily opened its doors. Most of the foreign trading is done at Shanghai, a small commercial town west of the walls. There the traveler finds wide western-like streets and modern government and business buildings. There are natives there, too, but one is more likely to rub elbows with one of the 300 Americans in Shanghai than inside the walls.

Seeing Tsinan Afoot.

In the quarter of a century that has elapsed since the Tsinan gates were opened, automobiles have traversed the few streets that are wide enough for their passage; a few modern stores have been wedged between native shops; and electric light bulbs glang from corner posts.

But off these wider streets, Tsinan is a "Chinese puzzle" of mere slits between rows of low mud and stone houses. Only rickshaws, wheelbarrows and springless donkey carts traverse these passageways; and when they appear, pedestrians are pressed against flanking walls and into doorways.

Travelers seeing Tsinan afoot stumble upon beggars, dodge rickshaws in the hands of careless noisy boys, and overwhelmed by the accumulation of odors from shops, restaurants and houses. The cries of vendors, the yelling and loud conversation of playing children and gossiping adults, all amid a cloud of dust is uninviting. Dust is unnecessary in Tsinan, for water is no luxury. Springs perpetually bubble at several places within the walls and a lake four miles in circumference occupies about one-third of the inner walled area.

Tsinan is one of the most important Christian educational centers in China. The Shantung Christian university and numerous other mission schools are situated there. Native schools also dot the city, and there is a museum and a library. The museum displays a model of the capitol of the United States.

Chefoo, China, is a city made famous by "Fickle Fashion." The Germans started the Chefoo hairnet industry on a large scale, but the World War in Europe, and cheap hair and cheap labor in Asia, caused the industry to migrate to Shantung with Chefoo as headquarters.

Although American women's money paid the wages of thousands of women and girls in and near Chefoo, when the hairnet industry was flourishing, perhaps few of those American women could locate Chefoo on a map without considerable searching. The city lies on the north shore of the "Cape Cod" of China, which extends into the Yellow sea from the main portion of Shantung province, toward the middle section of Korea. If a line were drawn due west from Cincinnati, Ohio, through Denver, Colo., and continued across the Pacific, Chefoo would be one of the first Chinese cities the line would touch.

Chefoo Is Large and Busy.

Chefoo now ranks third among Shantung cities, with about 100,000 inhabitants. A large foreign settlement, with modern hotels, consular office buildings, and residences bordering wide, electrically-lighted streets, occupies a knob of land on the north. The adjoining quarter is congested. Narrow streets, winding through this portion of the town, are lined with squat buildings, mostly of flimsy construction, but it is here that Chefoo bristles with business activity throughout the day.

Stooped-shouldered coolies from neighborhood farms and villages trudge to the market place under loads nearly as large as those atop mules and donkeys. Other coolies tug at the handles of loaded Shantung wheelbarrows whose wheels are sometimes three feet high. There is little room in the lanlike thoroughfares for anything else, nevertheless the rickshaw boy draws his fares at high speed, often forcing pedestrians to sidestep into children-filled doorways for safety.

Through the Chefoo streets, all the products for export from the Chefoo neighborhood are carried to waiting cargo boats in the harbor. Apples, sweet potatoes, peanuts, wheat, cotton, corn, tobacco, pongee silk and hairnets are transported by vessels lying the flags of many nations. Cargoes for Chinese consumption are loaded on coastwise boats that make Chefoo a port of call. Junks that lazily float about in the harbor pick up short-haul shipping. Pongee silk and peanuts are among the more important Chefoo exports.

Chefoo was classed as one of the unvalued, therefore unimportant, communities of China before 1862 when the port was opened to foreign shipping. Later a large portion of Shantung shipping passed through Chefoo and the city enjoyed a period of prosperity until 1904, when the Shantung railroad was completed and the port was forced to share commerce with ports the railroad touched.

China's Atlantic City.

Another shock came when the Tientsin-Pukow railroad was completed in 1912. Tsinangto, a port on the southern coast of "Cape Cod," succeeded in getting railway connections, while Chefoo got only a promise of a connection. As a result Tsinangto gradually outgrew its northern competitor. The nearest railway station to Chefoo now is 200 miles to the southwest, between which busses frequently run over a government-owned highway.

Tsinangto is the Atlantic City of the China coast. Its climate is excellent, its golf courses are well constructed, and it boasts modern hotels, miles of the finest motor roads, and clean streets.

THE ROMANCE of YOUTH

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK, Emeritus Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I was thirteen when the narrow-gauge railroad between West Lebanon, Ind., and Havana, Ill., was built. I say Havana, Ill., though the construction was never completed farther than Leroy, I believe. It was a project which was to revolutionize agriculture in that part of the state in which I lived, and it gave all us children a thrill.

We traveled very little in those days. When we did go it was afoot or horseback, or in a farm wagon. I had never seen inside a railway coach when I was thirteen, but I had ambitions to do so. Ed Bailey and Taylor Curtis and I used to climb to the roof of the barn and watch the train, a little more than a mile away, creeping along the narrow track, or puffing up the grade which took it over the glacial morain toward the East and out of sight. That train spelled romance to us! We were not going to be farmers dragging our feet behind a plow or a harrow, not we! We were going to be engineers racing our trains along at 15 or 20 miles an hour.

I ran onto Billy a few days ago as I was coming home at noontime. Billy had been our neighbor a few years before and then had passed out of our domestic life for a time. Now here he was again, healthy and rosy and thirteen.

"Where do you live now?" I asked, and he told me.

"Are you going to school?" He was in the seventh grade, as a normal boy of his age should have been, and his chances of flunking or passing his examinations for promotion were about fifty-fifty.

"But I'm not going to college," he confided to me.

"No?" I said in an interrogatory tone of voice.

"I'm going to an aviation school. It isn't any more dangerous flying now than it is running an automobile.

"It's awful good pay, too!"

I remembered that an engineer got one hundred dollars a month when I contemplated taking up that profession. It seemed a lot of money.

I didn't try to dissuade Billy. What is education as compared with the romance and the thrill of sailing through the air at a hundred miles an hour or more? The romance of youth!

Detroit Police Have a Bee Squad

This is the age of specialists, and the Detroit police department is no exception. The "Bee Squad," comprising Patrolmen Louis Oberle and Harold Rowe, is on duty day and night for just such an emergency as arose in a panicky household the other day, when a swarm of bees collected in a garden and threatened to raise bumps on a citizen's countenance. Out went Oberle and Rowe with their trusty weapons, shears, washtub and a piece of cloth to cover the tub. First they located the queen and put her in the tub, then clipped off the twigs on which the bees were clustered and dropped them in with the queen, where they were satisfied to stay as long as "Her Highness" was there. The bees were then presented to a bee-lover. Oberle and Rowe both come from small towns where they kept bees and studied them, and are the only men in the department summoned on such cases.

THE STORY

Six bandits held up the steamer Midnight Sun, on the Mackinac Island, Jimmie Montgomery, and escape with gold dust and furs. At the Mounted Police post at Fort Endurance, Sergt. Alan Baker disputes with his incompetent superior, Inspector Haskell, regarding plans for the capture of the bandits. Baker starts out in the police launch with five men. At the MacMillan trading post, Joyce MacMillan is thrilled at the arrival of the police launch. She had expected to marry Baker, and had been stunned at news that he was to marry Elizabeth Spaulding. Stolen furs are found on the MacMillan place and evidence points to Joyce's father. Joyce defends him. Alan leads his expedition up the Big Alooska and catches sight of the bandits. Compelled by Haskell's foolish orders to divide the party, Alan is at a disadvantage.

They splashed out of the pond and into the flags, in a frantic effort to reach the lake edge. The marsh reeds clutched at them, tripped them, wrapped around their legs. Savagely they tore their way on through to get into the clear in time to help Larry stop those bandits.

As he swung his clubbed rifle, smashing a pathway in front of him, Alan heard a lone gun crack over on the lake, and heard the snarl of half a dozen repeating weapons answering it like an echo. They drowned, they overpowered it. . . . The lone gun did not speak again.

It seemed hours to him that he fought and tore through the dense flags, to reach the open and help a comrade who was standing up against six rifles. Before he broke through to the clear, the uneven battle had ended. As he burst out to the lake edge, he had a glimpse of the police canoe drifting helplessly out in the middle; and across at the far side he saw two long blurred objects just entering the deep-water channel.

Numbed and dazed at those six men escaping, there was a moment when Alan could only realize that his patrol had failed. That those criminals had vanished into the twilight and were lost in this watery wilderness, with pursuit utterly hopeless now.

In the next moment he heard a sound, a sound like a groaning voice calling his name. It drew his eyes to the drifting police craft. What was it doing out there? Like a flash he understood what Larry had done. When the bandits started across the lake to escape, Larry must have seen he could never stop them in the semidarkness except at point-blank range. In the police canoe he must have come fearlessly out at them alone. This first deadly volley had got him. That groaning voice was Larry's.

Bill came bursting through the clear. Alan whirled on him:

"Bill! They got Larry. He's wounded. Hard hit. Here . . ." Tossing Bill his belt-gun and broken rifle, he ran out into breast-deep water and struck out powerfully for the drifting canoe.

By a provident mercy he reached it in time. With half a dozen holes spouting water into it, the craft was filling, tilting, about to overturn.

Larry lay at the bottom of it, writhing in pain.

By heroic struggles, swimming, pushing a dead-weight ahead of him, Alan got the craft into shoal water, put his hand under its keel then, and kept it afloat.

He dragged it to the bank just as Bill came splashing around the lake edge to join him.

"Alan! What happened? Where'd they go?"

"They got away. They're gone—gone. Forget it. Help me, Bill—with Larry—"

Together they bent over their bleeding, stricken comrade, and together they lifted him tenderly ashore.

CHAPTER V

The Broken Sword

By the light of an electric torch Alan cut away Larry's clothing and examined his wounds. Larry had been shot twice, and both wounds were fearsome. One bullet, a ricocheting slug, had struck him squarely in the knee, cruelly shattering the bones. The second had pierced his chest high up, just beneath the shoulder, and had passed entirely through his body. Stealing himself to the ordeal, Alan worked desperately with tourniquet and tiny medicine kit till he had stanching the bleeding. Before he finished, Larry was rousing faintly from the bullet shock.

Half an hour later, when Alan had done all he could and Bill had managed to patch the canoe, they turned their faces toward home, in defeat, in sorrow, in an anguish over Larry.

Alan picked him up in his arms, gently and tenderly, trying to keep that fatal bleeding from starting afresh. With Bill following him, staggering under the weight of canoe, guns and pack, he headed back toward the Alooska branch.

For an hour they stumbled along, plowed through bog and mire, groped through the tall impending flags. It was an hour of darkness, of blind heroic struggle. But they reached the Alooska branch at last and set the canoe to water; and making Larry a soft bed of flags, they began their sorrowful journey.

With no sleep in more than fifty hours, with all that long hard chase behind them, they were on the verge of exhaustion, and could make no time. Their hands were raw with blisters from paddle work; their faces were bleeding from insect bites; their whole bodies ached intolerably. They were muddled, wet, gaunt with hunger, heart-sick from the disgraceful failure of their patrol. But they refused to stop or rest; Larry had to be taken home quickly; the hours were a matter of life or death to him. With dogged courage they drove themselves on.

With his spirits at so low an ebb, the picture of that fur pack in Dave MacMillan's shed rose before Alan's eyes, and he foresaw the inevitable consequences to flow from that discovery. In his exhaustion, with all the buoyancy of hope drained out of him, he no longer could feel that somehow he was going to get Joyce's father off lightly. He must take Dave into Endurance and enter charge; and now, with these bandits escaped, Dave would bear the whole brunt of the law's retribution. He felt that all the rest of his life he would be haunted by the memory of Joyce's pale face, frightened and anguished, in the cold gray dawn of yesterday.

In this whole miserable business—Jimmy Montgomery dead, Larry in the shadow of death, that tragedy hovering over innocent Joyce MacMillan, the bandits escaped and the patrol disgraced—in all this evil-starred affair, only one thought held any comfort for Alan. It was a vengeful thought, born of a savage and vengeful mood. He held a sword now over Inspector Haskell. Haskell had ordered his patrol to be split. Out of his ignorance and jealousy, he had issued that crazy order, and it had wrecked the patrol. His gross incompetence, which heretofore had been only a vague charge hard to prove, now stood out glaringly, in all its inescapable guilt.

Alan swore to wield this sword in his hand.

By mid-afternoon of that interminable day they came to the first straggling trees at the Thal-Azzah edge. At deep twilight they reached the Alooska Forks and the anchored launch.

Pedneault had just returned from his useless trip up the south branch. In a few words he understood all that had happened. With one glance at his spent and staggering partners, he took their heavy burden from their shoulders.

Alan flung himself down beside Bill, driven to the limit of human endurance. His last waking thought was the grim satisfaction of knowing that he held a sword over his guilty arrogant officer and could bring him to account at last.

In his cabin Inspector Haskell sat behind his desk, waiting for Alan Baker to come in and report. He was thinking, thinking hard; and for all his self-control his nerves were jumpy.

Over in a corner Whipple sat at the table, pretending to write but in reality waiting there, as Haskell had bidden him. Something cold had gripped Haskell half an hour ago when he saw the patrol returning without the six bandits and with Constable Younge desperately wounded. He knew the details of that patrol—already; Whipple had come up and privately told him. How the bandits had headed for the Thal-Azzah, as Baker had warned. How Baker had run those six to earth and cornered them. How Pedneault and the other two constables had been a hundred and forty miles away during that crucial hour.

As he knew, this crime was the most spectacular in years along the Three Rivers. The defeat administered to the police was the most stinging in a decade. This incident would have reverberations at headquarters. Superintendent Williamson would investigate. The very first question of that veteran old officer would be:

"Why in h— did you order Baker to divide that patrol? Splitting up his detail that way—didn't you realize that neither party would be able to handle those criminals?"

Not deluding himself, Haskell knew he was caught. He knew he had made a capital mistake in a Force where a man's first mistake is usually his last. In these thirty minutes all his prospects of promotion in service, of smashing Alan Baker, of swinging Elizabeth Spaulding to himself, had come tumbling down like a house of cards, and he was thoroughly frightened.

It would spell fnis to his career if the facts of the patrol became known. The blame of this shameful defeat lay squarely at his door, Baker surely realized that; Baker surely was going to use that sword against him. It was war now, open and avowed war between them.

Step by step, logic led him to the one and only recourse he had. If Williamson ever found out he had ordered that patrol split, he was sunk. Therefore Williamson must not find out. There was a way to keep him from knowing the facts.

Haskell tried to still his conscience by thinking that Baker had wanted the patrol to fall. If that was so, then this measure was exactly what the sergeant had coming to him. He ought to be smashed, and smashed hard. . . . You've got to fight fire with fire. . . .

Still in his muddled and torn uniform, Alan came down the slope toward Haskell's cabin, intending to bludgeon some hard and fast terms out of the guilty inspector or shoot a complaint over his head to Superintendent Williamson. If Haskell did not give in to his demands, he meant to send a half-breed runner to the Royal Signal corps station at Resolution and flash a message to the division commander that would start an avalanche.

Over at Mrs. Drummond's house where Joyce had gone, candles were gleaming in the windows. Across at Father Cleverly's tiny hospital, Larry Younge lay fighting for his life. Up the slope at barracks Dave MacMillan was locked in the police "butter-tub," charged with being accomplice to robbery and murder.

Joyce had reported secretly; "Alan, I talked with him. He isn't guilty! He never had heard a whisper about these bandits, till I told him. He couldn't have deceived me!"

That same impression had been Alan's—"He couldn't have deceived me." There was something behind that pack of furs which hadn't come to light yet and which would explain those damning circumstances.

It was his conviction that Dave MacMillan was not guilty at all.

He meant to put up a fight for Dave. It was easy to resolve that, but the actual job was the hardest thing he had attempted in his whole life. The only way under heaven of clearing Dave was to capture the guilty men and either wring a confession out of them or hold out king's evidence as a lure and get them started talking against each other.

Which way would they try to escape? They'd go east when they left the Thal-Azzah. They'd go across the Great Barrens to Hudson's bay and try to pick up passage on a fishing smack, or go east and south toward the Pas in Manitoba. There was only one route leading east out of the Thal-Azzah, and they'd have to take it. It was an old Tinnah trade route, the Inconnu river.

Alan meant to lead a patrol to the Inconnu.

As he strode into the cabin, he saw Haskell waiting for him, coolly smoking a cigarette. It seemed to Alan that the man actually did not realize that his ignorant orders had wrecked the patrol and that the whole blame and shame of it lay at his door.

Small Stature No Bar to Great Achievement

There have been a great many short men besides "the little corporal," the five-foot-two Napoleon, who have made the world sit up and take notice. Two of our Presidents were among them, Martin Van Buren and John Quincy Adams. Martin Van Buren was often alluded to as "the little magician," because of his shortness of stature and his mastery of political wizardry. And there was Stephen A. Douglas, scarcely more than five feet tall, affectionately nicknamed "the little giant." Gen. George B. McClellan, the Democratic candidate against Abraham Lincoln in 1864, was "Little Mac," and sometimes—paradoxically—"Little Napoleon," a title which he shared with General Beauregard. Admiral Farragut was five feet six and a half inches tall.

Oliver Wendell Holmes, John Paul Jones and Gen. Phil Sheridan were each five feet; Beethoven was scarcely more than five feet four; John Keats a little more than five feet, and Swinburne and Whistler are given as five feet or so in stature. Other men who are described as being short, or under medium height were Chaucer, Michelangelo, Chopin, John Milton, Robespierre, Alexander Pope, Savonarola, Thomas B. Macaulay, Charles Lamb, Ibsen, Thoreau, Thomas Moore, William H. Seward, William Ellery Channing, Andrew Carnegie and Alexander Hamilton.

POULTRY

VENTILATE TO GET COMFORT FOR HENS

Simple Methods of Admitting Fresh Air.

Hens enjoy summer breezes but the cold, raw winds chill poultry as they do persons. Yet the poultryman who tries to make his hens comfortable by closing windows in the poultry house only adds to his and their troubles, for he sooner or later gets a wet pen, says Prof. F. L. Fairbanks of the New York State College of Agriculture.

Ventilation should provide air conditions in the laying house which will be comfortable and healthful. It may not be possible to measure a hen's comfort, but all good poultrymen do know when their flocks are contented, he says. In most poultry houses it is possible, without expert labor, to improve air conditions cheaply.

Most tops of windows or other openings are from one to two feet below the highest point in the ceiling. An opening at the highest point approximately one square foot for each 100 hens seems enough to relieve the moisture conditions. The air intakes should be near the floor, for then the air has the greatest distance to travel before it reaches the opening and more chance to mix with the air in the pen and absorb and remove moisture given off by the birds. The bottom openings should be baffled to prevent drafts.

Systems of this type with the exit at the highest point in the house, and with baffled openings near the floor, have been in use for several years and are giving satisfaction, Professor Fairbanks says.

Pays to Raise Broilers for Special Marketing

Special broiler raising is the latest development in the poultry business. It came mainly as a result of the discovery that chickens can be raised on a quantity basis with special equipment and special feeding. Both battery brooders and continuous hot water brooding systems are employed in raising broilers, as are also the colony brooders.

The broiler raiser is not interested in breeding. He buys his baby chicks from a breeder or a hatcheryman and when the birds have reached one and a quarter pounds or two-pound size, he markets the pullets and cockerels alike. In most cases the broiler raiser has a special market which he has developed. Most of them sell their broilers dressed to a special trade.

There are a few things anybody who contemplates going into the poultry business should always keep in mind, and they can be summed up in the following sentence. Start moderately, work hard, and be sure of a good market.

Poultry House Floor

A cheap and very satisfactory type of poultry house floor can be made by building the poultry house in the usual way with the concrete foundation walls extending up about 12 inches above the ground surface. Then tamp in firmly a layer of clayey soil, then oil this thoroughly with used crank case oil then tamp in another layer of loose soil and again oil thoroughly, and continue this until the floor is at the desired height.

This should then be covered with a thin layer of gravel well tamped in, and in this shape is warm and dry, and has a firm enough crust so that the fowls will not scratch holes in it. Later it can be covered with concrete, the oiled earth insuring warmth and dryness.—Wisconsin Agriculturist.

Poultry Increases

Between 1919 and 1929, average production of eggs on farms in the United States increased 63 per cent, according to a report made by Wallace's Farmer. The north-central states, including Iowa, gained at the rate of 65 per cent. Washington led with a gain of 234 per cent, followed by Utah with 223 per cent and California with 149 per cent. Next in rate of increase were Massachusetts, New Jersey and Delaware.

Poultry Hints

Crippled chicks, malformations and dwarfs have no place under any brooder.

Chicks hatched from hens laying small eggs will not produce eggs that top the market.

Symptoms of bronchitis are coughing, sneezing, and rattling sounds in the throat. This disease runs its course very rapidly, deaths being sudden.

Wheat does not contain as much vitamin A as yellow corn. Therefore, when a larger proportion of wheat is fed poultry, more green feed should be fed to make up the difference. Leafy alfalfa hay is recommended.

Peat moss makes one of the best chicken litters. Many commercial poultrymen use it. It is practically dustless. It absorbs manure and can go directly from the henhouse floor to the compost heap. It is the ideal humus for gardens.

Modern Contract Bridge

No. 5
Distributional Values

WHEN your hand indicates that a suit take-out is the best policy, but the sum of your honor-tricks is below the yardstick measurement for game, you should declare only a sufficient number of tricks to cover your partner's bid. In taking out with a no trump, use the yardstick measurement, bidding one or two no trumps according to the indications of your partnership holding in honor-tricks. In short, whenever you are taking out and it is still uncertain whether your partnership hands will prove congenial at your new bid, you must tread gingerly unless the sum of your honor-tricks spells "GAME."

Often however, when your partner has made an original suit bid of one, there may enter into your response a factor which justifies you in totally disregarding the yardstick measurement of honor-tricks, so important in most responses. This factor is the distribution of your hand. If your hand is so favorably distributed as to show great length in your partner's suit, length in a second suit and complete absence of a third, as for example: S-Q 10 9 8 7 6, H-5, D-none, C-10 9 8 6 5 3, when your partner has bid a spade, you could ignore your lack of honor-tricks and jump immediately into a game bid. Such a proceeding would be justified by the fact that your spade strength would so solidify your partner's trump holding as to promise no losers in that suit; your length in clubs offers the probability of setting up some end cards or giving your partner repeated ruffing opportunities, and most important of all in compensating for your deficit of honor-tricks, your short and missing suits would enable you to trump off your opponent's defensive strength in honor-tricks. It is certain that no more than one honor-trick in hearts could be cashed against you, and none at all in diamonds. So that even though your partnership total of honor-tricks sums up only to the 2½ which your partner's original bid guaranteed, your practical certainty of breaking down the opponent's defense is equivalent to a strong honor-trick holding when reckoned for its assisting value to your partner.

Condition of Pasture Affects Water Supply

The cheapest milk is made from good pasture. If we could have an abundance of good pasture from late spring to early fall it would make a lot of difference in our feed costs. We can have better pasture than we have put up with in the past but we will have to do something about getting it.

Many of our so-called pastures are starved almost to death. Then, too, they are grazed without rhyme or reason concerning the needs of growing plants. It has been repeatedly demonstrated in many sections of the country that pastures will respond profitably to fertilization and controlled grazing. We have many favorable reports on the quality and carrying capacity of sudan grass pasture. It may be used to very good advantage in relieving native pastures of excessive grazing.—Hoard's Dairyman.

Playing Tricks

As a rule the last thing that a contract player learns is the most important thing he should know. That is, how to count the playing tricks in his hand.

Playing tricks are the general tricks your own hand may be expected to take if your declaration or your partner's declaration becomes final. When making an opening bid at no trumps, it is rarely possible to locate playing tricks, other than honor-tricks, because you have no definite long strong suit to establish. (With a biddable suit, you would not declare no trump.) But the count of honor-tricks in the hand will automatically include a proportionate amount of low card tricks.

When shifting into a no trump, or entering a later stage of the bidding with a no trump declaration, it is often possible to count definite playing tricks according to the location of strength shown by others bids or by the fact of a strong minor suit in your own or your partner's hand which can be set up. But for opening no trump bids and no trump raises and rebids, there is no better guide than the wardstick count of honor-tricks.

The direct and simple method of counting honor-tricks, so helpful in valuing no trumps, will not answer for raises and rebids at declared trumps, which must be played under totally different conditions. As a matter of fact, the difference in play of no trump and suit hands creates two almost totally different games; so that a separate system of valuation must necessarily be used for each.

Angling Pro and Con

Lzaak Walton said: "We may say of angling as Doctor Boteler said of strawberries: 'Doubtless God could have made a better berry, but doubtless God never did'; and so. (If I might be judge) God never did make a more calm, quiet, innocent recreation than angling. But Doctor Johnson, a much more erudite man, defined a fishing rod as "a stick with a hook at one end and a fool at the other."

Civilization Built on Coal

Today's civilization requires more work than human labor can perform. The dominant source of brain replacing energy is coal. We are today using 20 times as much coal per capita as we did in 1850. Coal is the most important source of energy in our modern industrial civilization and has made our national life into a complicated network of interdependent groups with duties to each other.

DAIRY FACTS

PROFIT MADE FROM GOOD DAIRY COWS

Day of "Boarder" in Herd Is Rapidly Passing.

Reports from 93 dairymen belonging to the eight active herd improvement associations now active in North Carolina indicate that the dairy cows of today are more efficient producers than they were even one year ago.

John A. Arey, dairy extension specialist, North Carolina State college, says that the dairymen found by their record keeping that 352 cows were boarders and therefore unprofitable. These were culled and sold to the butchers.

Another good indication of the gradual improvement being made in dairy herds was that in 1931 there were 93 herds which averaged 300 pounds or more of butterfat per cow. The actual production of these 93 herds was 7,456 pounds of milk and 330 pounds of fat per cow. In the previous year of 1930 only 22 herds produced as much as 300 pounds of fat per cow. Then, last year, Mr. Arey found two herds where the fat production averaged 400 pounds or over of fat. One of these was a Guernsey herd which produced 8,888 pounds of milk and 448 pounds of fat a cow last year, and the other was a Jersey herd which produced 8,250 pounds of milk and 405 pounds of fat a cow last year. These are the first two herds in the state to go above the 400-pound mark.

Dairying as Business

Dairying is a long-time proposition and should be figured on that basis. Here is something to start with. There is little difference in appearance between a herd averaging 220 pounds of butterfat yearly and a herd averaging 200 pounds of fat. Neither figure is high. But even at the present ridiculously low price of fat that means a difference of $8 per cow per year and $100 per year on a herd of 20 cows. When the writer was a bit younger it was figured that a man should pay for his farm in 20 years. What would this difference in production amount to in 20 years? The gross difference would be $3,200. The difference in feeding costs between the two herds would not be over $1,000 for the 20-year period. The $2,200 would make a pretty substantial payment on a farm.—Exchange.

Skimmilk for Cows

Often times cows which have had some difficulty in calving and heifers which have freshened very young are very weak physically for the first month or two, or longer. This gives them an increased susceptibility to disease as well as limiting the milk flow. John Arnhalt, Harry Herrick, L. F. Kammeyer, and other members of the Chickasaw (Iowa) Herd Improvement association have found that feeding such individuals skimmilk often makes their recovery more rapid and restores them to a healthy condition very quickly. Also, fresh heifers grow more while they are milking if fed skimmilk. This is a remedy which every dairyman has on hand and is usually relied by the cows.—Successful Farming.

DAIRY FACTS

Milking a cow three times a day increases her milk flow, according to the results of experiments.

One inquiring farmer recently put a water meter on his drinking cups and found that the cows used about a gallon of water in producing three pints of milk and the heaviest producers consumed as much as 15 gallons of water a day.

Don't put cows on freshly irrigated pastures, and on pastures that are wet from natural precipitation or heavy dews.

Fences should be repaired to keep the cows on the home farm and not to exclude neighbors' bulls. These should be kept in strongly built bull pens.

After the grass becomes better developed it is possible to do away with grain feeding without any serious effects during the period of time when there is abundance of grass.

New Species of Carrot

The supremacy of the potato as a food plant is challenged in a part of its original ancestral home in the Andes, by an outsider from Eurasia. Farmers in Ecuador are raising a white variety of the common carrot, as a between-rows crop in their corn patches, says Dr. A. Avila, a practitioner in Guayaquil. Doctor Avila has made chemical analyses of the white carrot, and finds that it is richer than the potato in amino acids, the essential building blocks of meat-making proteins. He has also extracted a high-grade edible starch from it, which he believes has distinct commercial possibilities. From the residues left after starch extraction he made a hard, transparent paste, similar to casein glue.

Ancient System Revived

The old craftsmanship of the Middle Ages is being revived by the Greenwich house workshops in New York. Youths are trained there in stone cutting, wood carving, cabinet-making and bronze work, under the five-hundred-year-old apprenticeship system as it was practiced in the days of the old masters of arts and crafts. In this school where, it is hoped, the machine-made art of the present day may be counteracted, there are already 30 or 40 students at work. They are all of foreign parentage, the majority being Italian and most of them from poor families.

"Who's Afraid?"

Women outnumbered men by 15 to 1 at the recent South of England mouse show at St. Albans. They forgot about skirts and crowded about the exhibit pens to see mice from all parts of the country, brought to compete for 20 challenge cups and 44 special prizes. There were mice of almost every "colour," as the British spell it, and only a few were valued at less than $50 while one was priced at $250.

Sound of Bells

The nature of the country has much to do with the sound of bells. In a hilly country a bell will not be heard half so far as if the land were level or nearly so. A bell will be heard farther lengthwise of a valley than over the hills at the sides. Where bellrooms are lower than the surrounding buildings and trees, these obstructions break the sound and prevent a free passage for a distance.
