H. T. SWANSON ASSISTS IN RENO'S 4-H CLUB WORK

The Reno community and their 4-H potato club, Reno's Real Rural Russet Raisers, feel greatly honored by having the privilege and pleasure of having H. T. Swanson, superintendent of the East Tawas high school, with them Tuesday afternoon, June 28th.

Mr. Swanson, being a graduate of Michigan State College and the University of Michigan, and having worked in behalf of Michigan's club work at previous times, has a very complete knowledge along the line of 4-H club and agricultural work.

The club boys present certainly enjoyed and profited by the talk Mr Swanson gave them on the essential purposes and advantages of potate club work, the proper time of planting seed potatoes, a satisfactory four year crop rotation, the fundamental principles of causes resulting in the deterioration and running out of good seed stock, and the tuber unit method of selecting seed for a coming year, which the boys will perform this fall, and many other subjects equally as interesting.

All realize the value of a compression of the subjects advised by the subjects and the subject of the sub petent advisor who is interested and willing to work with and assist us in our 4-H club projects, when our county is without an agricultural agent to push our county club worl-ahead to achieve greater things.

Reno's club boys are looking forward with great interest to the seventh day of July, when G. A Thorpe, assistant state club leader from the Michigan State College will visit the community. He will telephone conversal be ready for a meeting at the Rend District No. 1 school, at 9:30 a. m. et which time Mr. Swanson will also be present if nothing happens prevent his coming. #### Explorer Reveals Secrets of Ancient Near East.

Chicago.-How he has ridden "on a magic carpet with three motors" over the exhumed cities of the ancient Near East, looking down through many centuries and many strata of old civilizations, recording on 12,000 feet of film the most extraordinary motion picture ever attempted, was told by Charles Breasted of the University of Chicago.

As executive secretary of the university's Oriental institute, Mr. Breasted has just completed a 3,500 mile flight over Egypt, Palestine, Syria. Turkey, Iraq and Persia, where twelve archeological expeditions under the direction of his famous father, Dr. James H. Breasted, are digging up ruins of forgotten cities.

"The new past"-"new" because the human race now living has never known the facts before, and "past" because it dates from King Solomon -will be the title of the picture when it is produced, with the voice of Doctor Breasted himself giving meaning to what appears on the screen.

But it was the younger Breasted who described how one old city after another has yielded its secrets to the spades and picks of the expeditions.

"What it means," he said, "is not merely the digging up of buried cities, but actually the reconstruction of life as it was lived in successive periods.

Bryan, grocery store manager, was a clerk in the C. A. Blodgett store, in Spokane, Wash., on March 17, 1912, when his employer marked the 50-cent piece with his initials and the date, to commemorate the birth of a son. Bryan watched the ritual.

Blodgett put the marked coin in the office safe. It nestled alongside a prized dollar, dated 1794.

Six months later the strong box was opened by burglars. They took the two keepsake coins, along with other loot.

Recently, the Bakersfield grocer was counting up the cash at his store. He noted a familiar coin. It was the marked half dollar, with "C. A. B.-March 17, 1912," scratched

Amsterdam.-The Zulder Zee, a fa miliar landmark on all maps of Europe for centuries, has become a thing of the past. Amid the screeching of sirens on hundreds of excursion steamers and tugboats the last gap was closed in the 18-mile dike connecting Wieringen with Friesland. The Zuider Zee thus became an inland lake, as it was before the North sea rolled in over northern Holland 600 years ago.

Hereafter the Zuider Zee will be known as Ijssel Lake, or, in the Dutch, Iisselmeer.

The completion of the dikes will make it possible to reclaim 500,000 acres now under water for Queen Wilhelmina's little kingdom. This work will soon begin on three large areas of reclaimed land, which, when completed, will leave the lake with only one-quarter of the Zuider Zee's present expanse. Another area near the island of Wieringen already has been reclaimed, and the first villages built upon it were visited recently by Princess Juliana.

While all the rest of Holland rejoiced over today's event, the fisherfolk of the Zuider Zee ports were in mourning. The Dutch flag flew at halfmast on the fishing boats huddled beneath the dikes at Volendam and Marken and tragedy brooded over the picturesque villages known to tourists greatest width 34 miles.

London.-Sitting in a fireproof room guarded with a steel door and each window protected by iron bars, Chester Beatty, American collector, showed a number of glass frames containing papyri, said to constitute the oldest biblical manuscript in the world.

Considerable comment was caused in scholastic circles by the recent announcement that Beatty had succeeded in finding a series of papyri relating to the Bible and said to be two hundred years older than anything else of the sort yet discovered.

Whether the translation of the papyri now being prepared by Sir Frederick Kenyon, formerly curator of the British Museum, and other experts, will reveal new versions of biblical subjects or not it is too early to tell, explained Beatty.

"I do know already," he continued, 'that a number of minor differences have been noted, but I doubt whether they will make it necessary to do more than alter words in the Bible. I should be surprised if there were any important alterations."

OUR BEDTIME STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

IT IS queer. It is very queer. It is the queerest thing I've ever known," muttered Paddy the Beaver to himself. "What under the sun are they covering themselves with mud for? That is what beats me. Mud is all right to build houses and dams with but why anyone should want to plaster it all over themselves is more than I can understand. My, but each of them is a sight!"

Of course you know who Paddy meant. He meant Farmer Brown's Boy, half hidden on the farther side of the pond, his face and neck covered with mud, and Buster Bear rolling in mud not very far from where Paddy was hiding with the Quack family in the rushes, only his head out of water. It was more than Paddy could understand, because Paddy never had been stung by Busy Bee, and so never had had a chance to find out that mud is of use in more ways than plastering houses and dams. He didn't know what Farmer Brown's Boy and Buster Bear knew, that it would take the smart out of stings. So he couldn't guess why they had covered themselves with mud, and he just itched

But he didn't do anything of the kind. He didn't even let them know that he knew they were there. He had a feeling that more interesting things might happen, and so he kept perfectly still right where he was. You see, Paddy had more than a suspicion that Buster Bear didn't know that Farmer Brown's Boy was anywhere about.

"Something is bound to happen when he finds it out," chuckled Paddy. You see, he and Buster Bear are old acquaintances, and he knows just how Buster feels toward all mankind. So he remained right where he was so as not to miss anything.

After Buster Bear had rolled and rolled in the mud until he was covered with it, until he was the worst looking bear that ever was seen, he stretc'ed out on the edge of the pond. The cool wet mud drew out the pain of the stings which Busy Bee and her comrades had given him when he robbed their storehouse of honey, and in a little while Buster was fairly comfortable. He even dozed off for a little nap. All the time Farmer Brown's Boy sat perfectly still in his hiding place on the other side of the pond. He had seen Buster Bear cover himself with mud, and he knew why he did it. It was for the same reason that he had covered his own face and neck with mud.

Two-Piece Ensemble

A woven mesh in hand-crocheted effect is the attractive material for this two-piece frock for the young lady's summer wardrobe. The easy drape and fullness in skirt and neckline are enhanced by the soft pliability of the fabric, known as "crochere."

"We've got a fellow feeling," he chuckled, but he took care it should be silent inside chuckle. It was the first chance he ever had had to watch Buster Bear, and he meant to make the most of it. The mud on his face and neck was beginning to dry and felt uncomfortable, but he didn't dare move to wash it off or put more on. He was afraid of frightening Buster Bear.

The Jolly Little Sunbeams were very bright and warm. In fact, they were hot. As Buster Bear dozed they dried the mud on his coat. By and by he awoke, and like Farmer Brown's boy he felt uncomfortable. He looked at his coat and a sheepish grin spread over his mud-covered face.

"My, but I am a sight!" he grumbled. "If this mud dries much more I'll never get it off until it wears off. The thing for me to do is to take a bath. The water will feel good any-

So Buster Bear got to his feet lazily and waded out in to the water. First, he washed his face until he had got off all the mud and the honey as well. Then he waded out until the water became so deep that he was forced to swim. Now Buster Bear likes an occasional swim. He enjoys it just as much as any small boy. He swam out almost to the middle of Paddy's pond. Just then a wandering Little Breeze hen He Waded Out Until the Wate Became So Deep That He Was

danced out from the other shore and tickled Buster's nose. By this time all the honey had been washed away, and Buster's nose was ready to do its duty. Just out of habit he sniffed when that Merry Little Breeze tickled his nose A suspicious look flashed into his eyes He sniffed again. There was no doubt about it, that Merry Little Breeze was bringing him the dreaded man-smell! It was bringing him the smell of Farm er Brown's Boy!

Like a flash Buster turned and start ed for the shore. This was no place for him. He headed for the nearest place, and this happened to be the rushes in which Paddy the Beaver and the Quack family were hiding. Paddy saw him coming and dived to get out of the way. The Quack family couldn't get out of the way so easily. They started to swim but there wasn't time for this.

FRENCH DISHES

Choux a la Creme.

Put a tablespoonful of butter in saucepan with a cupful of water, a teaspoonful of sugar, a piece of lemon peel and a little salt. Boil well together, stir in two tablespoonfuls of flour, and cook until thick. Allow this paste to cool, then work into it two eggs and sufficient milk to make a drop batter. Heat a kettle of lard or use a deep frying pan, drop the paste from a spoon into the hot fat, making lumps about the size of an egg. When slightly brown and well puffed remove and drain them. When cool scoop out a little from the top of each and fill with sweetened and flavored whipped cream. Jelly or preserves may be used in place of the cream if preferred.

Boeuf a la Mode.

Take the under part of a round steak, place in a deep earthen dish and pour over it spiced vinegar. Let the meat remain in this several hours, then lard it with strips of salt pork. Make incisions a few inches apart and stuff with seasoned bread crumbs. Use pepper, onion, thyme and marjoram. Bind the beef into shape and dredge with flour

Cut two onions and one-half of a turnip and a small carrot and fry in a little fat. Brown the meat all over, place on a trivet in a pan and add boiling water, a bag of herbs, vegetables, and simmer until the meat is tender. Take out, remove the strings and herbs, place on a large hot platter, surround with the vegetables and potato balls and onions.

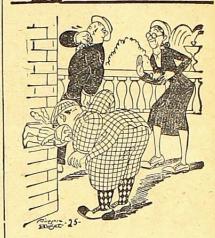

Salad Romaine.

Put crisp leaves of lettuce in a salad bowl that has been rubbed with a cut onion. Make the following dressing: Take one hard-cooked egg, mash it with a fork, adding salt, paprika, half a teaspoonful of mustard, a teaspoonful of hashed chives, the same of fresh tarragon, two tablespoonfuls of olive oil and one of vinegar. Toss well so that the romaine is well covered. (@, 1932, Western Newspaper Union.)

Modern Contract Bridge By Lelia Hattersley

Shifting Values

A N ELEMENT which often upsets your most careful calculations of the trick-taking value of your hand, is a bid from one of your opponents. If you wish to become an absolutely reliable bidder you must develop facility in shifting the value of your hand in relation to the location of adverse bids. This facility is indispensible in making sound over-calls, assists, rebids and doubles, both takeout and penalty.

Speaking generally, if you are over the bidder (that is, if he must play before you do) your position is advantageous, while if you are under the bidder (if he plays after you) you are at a disadvantage.

When you are over an opponent who has made a no trump bid, all of your tenaces and guarded honors take on an added value. Under the opponent, who has made such a declaration the same type of holdings greatly depreciates in value.

The fact of sitting over or under a trump declaration does not cause such a general shift in your values, but a revaluation of guarded honors and tenaces in the opponent's suit is required. Also, a certain appreciation or depreciation in your original estimate of your hand should take place. Honors, other than aces and solid sequences, held in the suit which your opponent has bid, are always worth more than their original value when over the bidder and correspondingly less when the bidder is over you. For example:

Kxx of opponent's suit OVER the bidder=1 trick; UNDER the bidder=

A Q of opponent's suit OVER the bidder=2 tricks; UNDER the bidder =1 trick.

KJX of opponent's suit OVER the bidder=2 tricks; UNDER the bidder =0 tricks

KQX of opponent's suie OVER the bidder=2 tricks; UNDER the bidder

Holdings of the same type are valued in much the same way when over or under no trump bids.

Rebidding a Suit Bid of One

When the issue is one of rebidding an initial declaration which your partner has raised, there are two important considerations; first, how good an assisting hand has your partner shown by his raise, and second, what strength have you in addition to that declared originally? According to the strength of your partner's raise, coupled with the additional strength of your own cards, you may rebid.

If your initial bld has been made on the minimum requirement of four playing-tricks, do not be tempted into a rebid even though partner gives you an enticing double raise. "Bid your cards for all they are worth," yes, but don't bid the same values twice.

When, however, you find you have rebid value, you may follow this rule: Rebid once for every playing-trick over the minimum of four indicated by your original declaration.

In such rebids, your full strength should be shown immediately, stopping, of course, at a game contract unless you are justified by your honortricks in giving a slam indication.

While a full trick, either playing or honor-trick, is your quota for each rebid, after your partner has given a double raise of your major suit, if not vulnerable you are usually justified in a rebid for game on 41/2 playing tricks plus. For example, assuming that you have dealt yourself this

S-K Q 964 H-A J 9 D-42 C-K 105 and opened the bid at one spade which your partner has jumped to three spades. Your exact value is 41/2 playing-tricks, 1/2 trick below a sound re bid, but since the gamble is for the much-prized game and your intermediate cards are very strong, a rebid could be chanced.

On really uncertain strength it is particularly hazardous to bid for a game contract, because here you enter the danger zone of a free double from the opposition. With a contract of less than game, even when quite unsound, you will usually escape a severe penalty, because the opponents fear to double you out. But the attempt to force a game bid on really deficient strength will frequently cost not only a double penalty, but the sacrifice of an advantageous partial score. It must be realized that there is not a game in every hand, and that partial scores at contract prove very valuable.

Surratt House History

During 1925 the famous old Surratt house, which was located on H street, was remodeled into a store and apartment house. It was in this house that the conspiracy to assassinate Lincoln was discussed by John Wilkes Booth and others. The structure had stood intact for nearly 60 years. It was here in the parlor, on the second floor, that some of the conspirators met and held conferences. John Wilkes Booth went to this house on the afternoon preceding the assassinaton. There he arranged for horses and guns to use in his flight. The house was the residence of Mrs. Mary Surratt. She conducted it in Civil war times as a boarding house for theatrical people, one of her patrons being John Wilkes Booth.-Washington Star.

LEAGUE'S NEW PALACE READY IN TWO YEARS

Structural Work at Geneva Is Now Complete.

Geneva.-The League of Nations' new $5,000,000 palace will be completed early in 1934.

The structural work on the secretariat building is completed. Construction on the council hall already has started. The foundations of the assembly hall and the Rockefeller library are being dug.

The project for a permanent league building was advanced in 1926. After many disputes over the site, the foundation stone was laid in September of 1929. Active construction work on the secretariat building did not begin until March of 1931.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., gave added Impetus to the project when he contributed $2,000,000 for the construction of a library. Since the establishment of the league, Americans have donated more than $8,000,000 toward its work.

The present site of the new palace is still a subject of many bitter disputes. The building committee origfinally wanted to construct the palace on the lake, just a short distance from the present secretariat. An original plot of sloping land was obtained from the city, but it was found insufficient.

The committee started negotiations with an aged and wealthy Englishwoman, Mrs. Alexis Barton, who owned the adjoining property. Mrs. Barton, who is known as the empress of Geneva for her autocratic leadership of society here, refused to sell. The original site was one of the most beautiful in the vicinity of Geneva. The palace would have been situated on a small hill on a point overlooking the lake in two directions. It would have been closer to town and the international labor office. But another and less attractive site was chosen.

The offices of the secretariat provide space for between 500 and 600 offices. The secretariat will be balanced on the right end by the council hall. This hall forms a break in the construction, the assembly hall being set back some distance into a terraced patio, which connects with the council hall and the secretariat. The entrance to the assembly hall will be separate.

Across the poio, the Rockefeller library will balance the council hall. All the buildings are connected by covered wings, which will contain committee rooms. In front of the palace is a sloping park, which will be terraced to hide the railroad tracks.

THE URGE OF POVERTY

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK Emeritus Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

The story is told that an admirer of Cervantes, knowing of the poverty against which the talented Spaniard struggled, suggested to the arch bishop of Toledo that he be made n pensioner of the state and taken out of the squalor in which he was working.

"God forbid!" a friend standing by exclaimed: "It is because he is so poor that he writes so well; it is his poverty that drives him to his desk." We thought Porter one of the finest men in college, and one whose prospects of success were the brightest. He had a good physique, and a keen mind, and he was thoroughly interested in the profession which he proposed following. His family were poor but respectable; they could only with sacrifice help him through college and then it was necessary that he help himself in small ways.

After he had taken his bachelor's degree he went East and entered one of the oldest and best professional schools in the country where he won honors for himself. He came back to

Chocolate Fudge Cake

2 cups sifted cake flour 2 tsp. baking powder. 2 tsp. soda 4 tsp. salt 2 cup butter or other shortening. 2 egg whites, stiffly beaten 2 cups sifted cake flow sugar 2 egg yolks, well beaten 3 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted. 14 cups milk 1 tsp. vanilla

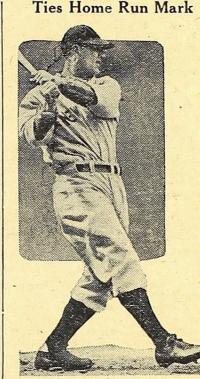

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, soda, and salt, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg yolks and chocolate; then add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth. Add vanilla. Fold in egg whites. Bake in two greased 9-inch layer pans in moderate oven (350°F.) 30 minutes. Put layers together and cover top and sides of cake with fudge frosting. Double recipe to make three 10-inch layers.

LOUISIANA

Pickaninny Jazz Orchestra in New Orleans.

(Prepared by National Geographic Society. OUISIANA has dedicated her new domeless capitol building, a gigantic pile of limestone which rises 33 stories above the streets of Baton Rouge.

Louisiana boasts many modern buildings in her bustling cities, but the fame of the state-is not confined to architecture. It is more widely known for its equitable climate, its tranquil scenic beauty, and a hospitality which makes the manifold claims of her citizens as to the state's point of excellence seem a bare recital of obvious facts.

It is one of America's leading furproducing regions, and the source of staggering quantities of shrimps and strawberries, oysters and oranges, sugar and salt, terrapins and fiery tabasco, rice and red snappers, figs and frog's legs, waterfowl and muskrats, timber and turpentine, cucumbers and cattle, sulphur and Spanish moss. Oil and gas flow from its seemingly inexhaustible subterranean chambers.

It boasts the second largest port in the United States-New Orleansthrough which pass vast cargoes of foreign commodities, including 23,000,-000 bunches of bananas each year, coffee for every third cup consumed in the United States, and mahogany and sisal, to our markets; while all the varied products of farm and factory originating in the lower Mississippi valley begin their sea journey from the city's docks.

Romance of New Orleans. Many writers agree that New Orleans is one of only three great "story cities" of America. And New Orleans is part and parcel of Louisiana. One needs only to go back to the adventurous times of those daring French pioneers, La Salle, Bienville and Iberville; to the days of those picturesque and honored pirates, the Lafitte Brothers and Dominique You; to quadroon balls, voodoo rites, suicide and dueling oaks, or even to the fantastic revels of this year's Mardi Gras, to find romance

Today in Louisiana the visitor encounters romance as readily in any one of the half score 15-to-20-story office buildings of New Orleans as he did formerly in the city's "haunted houses," absinthe bars, or charming patios rich in association with the names of Lafayette, Louis Philippe, Adelina Patti, Jenny Lind, Audubon, Paul Morphy and Lafcadio Hearn.

For decades Louisiana's great sugar mills, set down in the midst of billows of green cane extending to the horizon, had unfailingly ground out wealth to the state's sugar barons. Three hundred thousand tons of sugar was not an unusual year's yield from the fecund black soil. But the major romance of Louisiana is to be found not in its cane fields. The progenitor of those fields, and of the entire state, is the Father of Waters.

With its long, tenuous fingers of silt thrust far out into the Gulf of Mexico, the "bird's-foot" delta of the Mississippi is unlike that of any other major river on the globe. Between its fingers or claws are shallow, open bays, and the banks confining the great streams into which the river divides at Head of Passes, 95 miles below New Orleans, are in some places only a few feet in width.

In colonial times, when 10 or 12 feet of water provided ample depth for all caravels of commerce, navigation of the main passes of the Mississippl presented no difficulties, but with the increase in the tonnage and draft of vessels the shallow finger channels were a bar to progress and prosperity.

Making the Delta Navigable.

Ninety years ago the federal government made the first appropriation for deepening these natural channels, and in the course of the next 40 years it succeeded, by means of crude dredging processes, in increasing the depth to from 12 to 20 feet. But when it is recalled that in time of flood the Mississippi brings down for deposit at its mouth more than 2,-000,000 tons of sand a day, one can realize that this was a costly and disheartening battle.

By 1870 vessels had so increased in size and draft that a deeper channel became a crying necessity. A board of eminent engineers, appointed to find a solution of the problem, made exhaustive studies of many important harbor entrances, including the mouths of the Danube, which had been successfully improved by means of contracting jettles similar to those now in use on the Mississippi river. United States rice acreage.

The board finally reported that the use of jetties would be too costly for the improvement of the mouths of the Mississippi and recommended the construction of a ship canal from Fort St. Philip (opposite Fort Jackson) to the Gulf.

At this juncture there appeared before congress an engineering genius who persuaded that body to defer for the time being the digging of the ship canal and permit him, on a basis of "no cure, no pay," to attempt to provide and maintain a deep-water channel in his own way.

But when congress finally accepted this "can't loose" proposition of James B. Eads, who had just completed the world-famous steel-arch bridge over the Mississippi at St. Louis, the engineer was not permitted to use the Southwest Pass for his experiment, as he had specified. This was the best of the three main passes, and the government was taking no chances with Mr. Eads and his chimerical proposition! If he wanted to lose his own money, he could sink it in South Pass without endangering the then best channel.

The Eads contract called not only for a channel 26 feet deep and 200 feet wide at the bottom, but for maintaining that depth for 20 years.

With tremendous energy and rare organizing ability, the engineer set to work, and in less than five years his jetties and his dredges had done the work. And, furthermore, he maintained the depth for 20 years, that period expiring in 1901. The main responsibility of the engineers today, so far as the mouths of the Mississippi are concerned, is to prevent the river from creating new passes.

Furs From the Marshlands.

It is not only the Mississippi which makes Louisiana "water-minded." The state is threaded and meshed with bayous, lakes and streams, giving it more than 4,790 miles of navlgable waters-a total which exceeds by two for one its nearest competitor in the Union, Arkansas.

Naturally, much of the bordering land in the vast delta region is marsh area; but let no casual observer be deceived into imagining that "marsh" in Louisiana means waste or unproductive land. It is these tens of thousands of grass-covered acres which have given the state the unique distinction of being the largest furproducing commonwealth in the Union. As a matter of fact, not only does Louisiana lead all other states both in the value of its fur crop and in the number of pelts marketed, but last year, and for several years past, it has produced more pelts than the entire Dominion of Canada, generally recognized as one of the world's most important fur-producing countries.

The muskrat is the fur citizen mainstay of the state's pelt wealth. More than 5,000,000 of him were taken during the open season from November 20 to February 5, 1928-29. What with muskrats, opossums, raccoons, minks, skunks, otters, wild cats and foxes, the trappers' sales last year aggregated $8,500,000-exceeding by a third the total value of Alaska's production of gold and silver for the same period.

The Evangeline Country.

stages from New Orleans to Lake Charles, in the southwest corner of the state, one passes through a section of Louisiana which is redolent of romance. Here lies the Evangeline country, with its many pleasing, if seldom substantiated, stories identifying particular spots with various episodes in the Longfellow epic. St. Martinville, one of the oldest towns in Louisiana, is the center of the Evangeline cult, with its Evangeline oak and its grave of the woman from whom the poet is supposed to have drawn his picture of the Acadian At New Iberia are Louisiana's

Its vast galleries are sixty feet in height, half again as wide in some places, and their winding length exceeds two miles. With electric drills, miners bore into the salt rock, set off their charges of dynamite, and blow out great blocks of pure crystal salt, which is scooped up in mechanical shovels and loaded on cars similar to those used in coal mines.

With a production of some 19,000,-000 bushels of rice a year, Louisiana not only produces more of the cereal than any other state in the Union, but it has one-half of the entire

NEW INVENTION HELP TO PLANE TRANSPORT

Automatically Steers Planes in Bad Weather.

New York .- The development of another great aid to air transport, automatic steering with wind drift correction by radio, has been accomplished. The perfection of this new aid to bad weather flying comes at a time when pilots on all air lines are studying instrument flying to qualify under a new ruling of the Department of Commerce.

Air transport has long been regarded as a seasonal means of travel, interrupted by fog, severe storms and other weather disturbances. In winter, flying has been almost completely stopped in certain parts of the country for periods as long as a week. Even in spring and summer, occasional fogs have hindered air transport and sudden weather changes have constituted a constant menace guarded against by an elaborate weather reporting system covering all the air-

Due to these conditions, the develpment of instruments sufficiently accurate to enable pilots to fly safely through all kinds of weather has been under way in engineering laboratories throughout the country. Many improvements have been effected and now pilots of the air lines are required to become proficient at flying by the new instruments before the first of next year and the elimination of weather as an obstacle to continuous air line operation is approached.

The value of the new device which provides automatic steering with wind drift correction by radio is such that it almost obviates the necessity of instrument flying by the pilots. With such a device the pilot would merely the machine when he came upon bad flying weather. He would not have to fly by instruments-a delicate task that is done well only by competent pilots-but would have the entire responsibility removed from his shoulders by a machine guided by radio waves that are impervious to bad weather. The robot pilot, a gyroscopic device that keeps a plane on a set course automatically, is surpassed by the new machine, which not only does all that but also compensates for wind drift automatically. Any increase or decrease in wind velocity operates a steering engine through a radio loop that turns the rudder to keep the plane on its course, no matter in what direction the nose of the plane is pointed due to side winds.

Although the new mechanism has only been perfected to operate over a distance of 150 miles, its range is being extended so that it will cover entire airways. During experiments with the new device it was subjected to severe tests under actual conditions, one of which was thus described:

"The outstanding test flight was conducted by an army pilot from Wright field over the route between Lake George and Schenectady, N. Y.," the report read. "On this day a heavy westerly gale was sweeping down the Mohawk valley and in the section flown over trees were uprooted, power and telephone lines blown down and automobiles damaged.

"In the midst of the-gale Lieut. G. V. Holloman flew the distance with an observer. Flying a straight course almost due south, the plane's nose was held 20 degrees or more west into the strong wind blowing from that direction by the automatic steering and wind drift device. The plane was being piloted by the mechanism as well as compensated for wind drift. The plane traveled the distance of 30 miles and passed directly over the radio tow ers of station WGY, the transmitter that was directing its course."

The mechanism is composed of a magneto compass, turn compensator, radio compass, steering and loop engines, course setter and a radio receiver of the type in use on all transcontinental transport planes.

It gives some a pain to keep still, so they make some kind of a noisy disturbance and give pain to others. I mon stock in the same company.

Six bandits hold up the steamer, Midnight Sun, on the Mac-kenzie, kill Jimmy Montgomery, at Fort Endurance, Sergt. Alan Baker disputes with his incom-petent superior, Inspector Haskell, regarding plans for the cap-ture of the bandits. Baker starts out in the police launch with five men. At the MacMillan trading post, Joyce MacMillan is thrilled at the arrival of the police launch. She had expected to marry Baker, and had been stunned at the news that he was to marry Elizabeth Spaulding. Stolen furs are found on the Mac-Millan place and evidence points to Joyce's father. Joyce defends him. Alan leads his expedition up the big Alooska and catches sight of the bandits. Compelled by Haskell's foolish orders to divided the party, Alan fails to capture the bandits and returns Fort Endurance. Haskell blames him for the failure and Alan is allowed to buy out of the Mounted on condition that he absolve Haskell from blame.

Thinking in hard practical terms, Alan saw that so long as Haskell had power over him, he could not stir a hand. If he was ever to get those criminals, he had to be free. Several paths lay open to him. One by one he studied and rejected them, till only the last remained.

For minutes he weighed that posalble act. Its cost to him was a terrible cost. It would wipe out his brilliant reputation, his whole police record. It would kill his last chance of ever bringing Haskell to account, It would uproot him and take him for good and all out of this North country. Torn by doubt and indecision, he wavered. The price seemed too stag-Presently he heard some one come up the terrace and glide past him and go on toward his cabin. The figure was merely a moving blur in the mist, but Alan recognized that light foot-

He called softly: "Joyce! You wanted to see me?"

"Alan! I've been wondering where you . . . Your cabin was all dark, and I couldn't find you." In eager hope she asked him: "Alan, what did Haskell say about Dad? He's going to release Dad on bail, as you thought?" Alan shook his head, sorry for her, sorry for all the heartache that lay ahead for her now. "Joyce, Haskell can be brutal and inhuman. He wouldn't consent even to letting your dad remain here. He intends to send him outside to Edmonton." It was on his lips to add, "Your father is being sacrificed to Haskell's need of a victim." But he could not bring himself to tell Joyce that. The news had stricken her cruelly enough, If only she could be near her father if only she could visit him, the ordeal might be lightened for her. The lonely waiting weeks of suspense would be agony, if her father was a thousand miles away, among strangers, with no one to lift a hand for him.

He offered gently: "Joyce, if you want to go along and be near him, I'll pay-I'll see to it that you can. It'd be best for you, and for him too, if you would."

Joyce did not answer at once. As he looked down at her, Alan was struck by the sense of how young and innocent a girl Joyce was; and with bitter self-reproach he remembered those long months of the winter past when he had left her alone to her battle, because Elizabeth, protected, sheltered, kept in ease here at Endurance, had demanded it of him. He realized that in her desperate plight she needed his strength and protection far more than Elizabeth did. Except for him Joyce was alone in the world, without friends, relatives, money, and with her father in the shadow of the gallows.

Presently, with the spirited courage he had always loved in her. Joyce asserted:

"Alan, I'm going back home. The Dogribs are bringing in their furs next week. I'll send several of their men en deroulne to the Hares and Loucheux and get their furs, too. I'll sacrifice all our trade goods and raise money for Dad's defense. It'll he a true way of fighting for Dad if I go back home. I don't mind being alone. I can take care of myself. It'll be lonesome, but all the time I'll be knowing that I'm doing the right thing and being a real help to Dad."

Alan acquiesced reluctantly, against his better judgment. A slender girl like her, scarcely out of her 'teens, going back to that isolated post. .

A white girl, winsome, pretty, of lissome body, alone there, with Indians coming and going, with half-breeds coming and going. . . .
Joyce asked him: "What happened between you and Haskell, Alan?" Briefly Alan told her what had taken place down there in the cabin. His account left Joyce speechless, in a silent fury, her little fists clenched, her lips parted in astonish-

"But he can't demote you, Alan!" | she cried. "He can't blame you for his mistake."

Anthropological depression of the contribution of the contribution

"He can't? He's already done it! If I try to fight him, if I make the slightest insubordinate move, he's actually got the power to jail me!" "But the Inconnu patrol-he'll let you go on that, Alan?"

"And capture those men and get the credit? Not Haskell! He's too wise. Getting those bandits comes second with him. So long as he saves his face, he doesn't really care whether he gets them or not. That Inconnu patrol is dead. It was our best hope, but now it can't ever be. I could stir up trouble for him, I could bring on an investigation; but that would take months. It'd be too late then; those bandits'll be gone."

She repeated, brokenly: "Gone, gone-yes, it'll be too late then. Alan, that means-means Dad will be found guilty-and sent to prison-or worse. . . ."

For the second time in the years he had known her, Joyce broke down and cried. It hurt Alan as few things in his life had ever done. As he felt her sobbing against him, as he thought of this tragedy looming over her, his last hesitancy about his plan was swept away. With those bandits safe in the watery wilderness of the Thal-Azzah, Dave MacMillan would be convicted; he would be sent up for life. It would break Joyce, break her spirited courage, her wild-born nature. When he thought of the terrible stigma upon a girl so innocent and brave, he swore silently:

"I'll never see her brought down to that. I'll get those men, I'll bring the truth into court."

He realized fully that he was starting on a long trail, a trail never to be retraced. He was committing himself to a staggering self-sacrifice. But he had to traverse that path; in honor he could do nothing else.

He rose abruptly, brushing away his last trace of hesitancy; and gave Joyce his hand to rise.

"Joyce, there's something I've got to do now. I've got to go. You mustn't stay here. Come." He took her arm, and as they went down the slope, he asked: "I want to see you again before I-some final arrangements with you. . . . Won't you be down at the wharf in half an hour?"

Wondering at his odd tones, his stern purposive manner, Joyce prom-

At Mrs. Drummond's house he left her and started out along the terrace to Haskell's cabin.

Across the desk he demanded, with no preliminaries:

"I want to buy out. Tonight! Here!

Haskell's eyes narrowed in suspicion. He could hardly believe it. He knew how deeply Baker was rooted in his work and friendships and life in this northern country; and he could scarcely conceive of a man deliberately throwing away a long brilliant police record at one irremediable step.

But there was no doubting Baker's words, no doubting his grim manner Baker was demanding to buy outto get out for good. As he studied the sergeant, Haskell drew back warily. Baker might be laying some trap for Haskell debated swiftly. He-was not averse to Baker cutting his own head off; and he saw now there was no trap laid for him. But there were other things to be considered. His sober judgment, casting back over the last nine months, recalled the score of times Baker had corrected bad mistakes of his and kept the post running smoothly. Wisdom whispered to him that he needed the man, needed him desperately. And Elizabeth Spaulding . . . Was she going away with Baker? Was Baker taking her with him?

If she went, his act in busting the sergeant would prove a boomerang against himself. He tried to tem-

"I haven't the authority to let you. You'll have to make out application and wait for permission from headquarters." "That's the rule for close-in detachments. Down north here where a communication would take several months, it's understood that an officer can accept a buy out on his own recognizance."

"But it's not the official rule. Under the circumstances I don't choose to accept your papers."

"You will choose! I'll make you choose! You've busted me, all right: you've saddled the blame and shame of that patrol on me; you've mouthed your lie and you've got a stool pigeon there to back you up. But I can bring on an investigation just the same. There's things happened last winter that you can't lie out of. Williamson is coming down here next month. He hasn't got any too much use for you now. If I'm here when he comes, what I'll tell him won't help your standing much."

Haskell lit a cigarette to hide his nervousness. He asked, "Where are you going if you get out of service?" "That'll not be your affair, thank God! I'm leaving here. Tonight. That all you need to know."

Haskell started a little. Tonightno boat coming past-it meant Baker was going by himself! Meant Elizabeth would not go with him but would stay here at Endurance!

Very thoughtful, he looked away, debating. Baker's motives, his reasons for this precipitate move, were dark and puzzling. But he saw no way in which they could possibly harm him. Hardstock, an experienced northern man, would still be available, a reliable veteran to turn to, especially if baited by the hope of this vacated sergeancy. Hardsock would be easier to manage, too. Since Elizabeth was going to stay here, at least temporarily, why shouldn't he let Baker go? The farther away he was, the better!

The more he studied the situation, the more it seemed too good to be true that Baker was deliberately cutting his head off, buying out, getting out of the country, leaving Elizabeth here alone, killing any possibility of the investigation that he secretly dreaded.

"I'll consent on one condition to your buying out. Otherwise you'll have to wait for official and regular approval."

"What's the condition?"

"There seems," Haskell said steadily, with the ability to look Alan squarely in the eyes, "to be a differresponsibility of this Alooska patrol. If you'll sign a statement to the effect that you had complete charge of the detail and split your party on your own initiative-if you'll do that, you can buy out. Otherwise you can't."

Alan wavered. Signing a brazen lie, taking all the stinging disgrace upon himself, strengthening Haskell's guilty hand . . . But then his thoughts leaped to Jimmy and Larry and Dave MacMillan, and to Joyce, pinning her last hope to him. What did it matter, his signing a lie? Would it change one jot or tittle of God's truth? What did a rag of paper matter on his long free-flung hunt for ners, shielding Joyce?

He said: "I'll sign. Load it as heavy as you like. But don't knock Hardsock or Pedneault or Younge."

Haskell wrote out the declaration of responsibility. Alan read it. As he wrote his name, he sneered:

"If I were you, I'd frame that, inspector, and hang it on the wall. It's a certificate of your dishonor."

Not answering, Haskeli went on looking up the remaining enlistment period and figuring the amount, Whipple brought over the forms and filled in the data. Both Alan and Haskell, with the constable as witness, signed the numerous official sheets of the procedure.

Folding his copy of it, Alan walked out of the door, out of service, out of

blundering to suppose that monarchy is decaying in the modern world. The danger is much more that the future governments will be too despotic than that they will be too democratic.

But if there is one idea more absurd than the idea that we have seen the end of royalism, it is the idea that we have seen the end of ritualism. Pomp and ceremony were always popular with the real populace.

"GODFATHER" OF OUR NAVY

Belated Honor Accorded Great New Englander.

A short time ago the courthouse green of the old town of Edenton, N. C., enjoyed an animation it had not experienced for a century. The occasion was the unveiling of a monument in commemoration of Joseph Hewes, "a godfather of the American navy." Charles Francis Adams, secretary of the navy, was the principal speaker.

Hewes was born at Princeton, N. J., 220 years ago. In 1760 he moved the headquarters of his shipping business to Edenton. The town has changed little since that time, In the Revolutionary era it was said that "within the vicinity of Edenton there was in proportion to its population a greater number of men eminent for ability, virtue and erudition than in any other part of America." Their spirit seems to haunt the place. The whole neighborhood is in effect a monument to the Eden pa-

The Hewes monument is of white marble, designed in the Georgian tradition. The concept of the architects, Robert Perry Rodgers and Alfred Easton Poor, is in tune with the time at which they say the memorial should have been set up-150 years ago. On the front face a frigate has been carved instead of the conventional coat of arms usual in the Eighteenth century. Hewes had among his friends John Paul Jones, and it was to him that Jones applied for a commission in the Revolutionary service. Jones never failed to testify to his gratitude to Hewes, and throughout his career managed to maintain an epistolatory correspondence with the committee secretary, who was his "political angel."

Hewes' name appears among the signers of the Declaration of Independence. Like Washington and Carroll, he staked a fortune as well as his life when he signed.

PROVES FLAG'S BIRTHPLACE

Research Seems Definitely to Settle Disputed Point.

Any doubt in regard to the truth of the story that the house at 239 Arch street, in the heart of the oldest section of Philadelphia, is the birthplace of the American flag, is discredited by William A. Carr, president of the Betsy Ross association, who has collected copies of documentary letters and records that he declares disprove assertions to the contrary made by some noted historians.

Carr, a Philadelphia attorney, said that when the association was founded in 1898, several grandchildren of Betsy Ross were still alive and signed affidavits to the effect that she herthose murderers, avenging his part- self told them, as small children, that the house, now a national shrine, was the one in which the first flag was made, a United Press dispatch records.

Later, when historians began publishing statements that the association was mistaken in the location of the house, Carr decided to do a little investigating himself. From the public library he secured two city directories, both published in 1785, one by a man named MacPherson and the other by a man named White. In White's directory no address was given for the house occupied by Betsy Ross and her third husband, John Claypoole, but the location was stated to be on the north side of Arch street, between Second and Third streets. "That proves," says Carr, "that we have the correct building. Both directories lead us to the same spot in the end."

LIBERTY'S SACRED SHRINE

Independence Hall Still Stands as Patriotic Inspiration.

Scattered along the Atlantic coast region from Boston to St. Augustine are countless nistorie old brick structures invested with the glamor of romance, of stirring, adventure, of neroic sacrifice and earnest, patriotic devotion to country, but nowhere is one instinctively moved to bare his head in a sincere reverence so much as in Independence hall, where some thing more than 150 years ago a handful of patriots dared the wrath of Great Britain and declared for American freedom, Even today one seems to feel the presence of those dauntiess spirits in the very atmosphere of those plain, old-fashioned rooms, hung with memen toes of the days of '76. About it hovers the best traditions of American patriotism. Other walls have rung with patriotic declaration, with impassioned oratory and bold defiance, but nowhere has loyalty to country and earnest devotion to the cause of liberty found such deathless expression as was voiced in that Declaration of Independence announced by the ancient Liberty bell in the cupola overhead on that memor able Fourth of July so many years ago. Here the Declaration of Independence was adopted on July 4, 1776. TALES

POCAHONTAS AND MILLY

Her real name was Mataoka, and Pocahontas to death, and his rescue by the maiden, scarcely in her teens, are told in song and story. But that is only the beginning of the narrative of Pocahontas. John Smith returned to England in 1609. The promises of the English were not fulfilled, and the Indians were kept unhappily busy by the exactions of the white people.

capture, the sentence

There was intrigue among the Indians also. Lured by the false stories of a treacherous chief, Pocahontas went aboard the ship of Captain Argall, in the Potomac river. She was held on board while the boat sailed away from land, and for some time she was kept a prisoner and ransom was asked for her. "Powhatan," as her father was known, had become openly hostile when his favorite daughter was thus kidnaped. He agreed to a kind of peace, however, to effect her return, but was ready for trouble-a dangerous neighbor for the whites.

But Pocahontas had not spent all her time in English hands bewailing her fate. One of the Englishmen had found favor in her eyes, and she saw that her affection was returned. She accepted Christianity, partly, perhaps, because of this personable gentleman, and was baptized as the "Lady Rebecca." Her savagery thus transmuted, John Rolfe no longer delayed, and in April, 1613, the two were married.

This alliance pleased Powhatan. The old chief (he was sixty when he first met the white men) had great ambitions for his beloved daughter.

Three years after the wedding, the Rolfes and several of the Powhatan Indians set sail for England. Pocahontas' story had preceded her, and since her father was a powerful ruler, the daughter was everywhere acclaimed as a princess. Her visit was a triumph; her portrait was painted; people crowded around her in admiration, and her romantic story was on every tongue.

Happy over her reception, yet eager to return to her own people, Pocahontas prepared for the trip back to America. She was aboard the ship, lying at Gravesend, when an unforseen calamity occurred. Smallpox, an enemy which rarely spared Indian victims, attacked her. Everything possible was done in the hope of saving the young "princess," but nothing availed. She was only twenty-two when she succumbed to the scourge, leaving her husband and their son to

While Pocahontas is perhaps the most romantically famous Indian girl in history, there have been other rescues by other Indian maidens. That of McKrimmon by the Seminole Milly is also well-known, and has a happier

In December of 1817, McKrimmon, an American, was captured by the In dians and taken to Mikasuki, Hillis Hadjo's town. This famous chief had been on the British side in the War of 1812, and was still a foe to the Americans. He ordained that the captive he burned to death like any other enemy.

The American, his head shaved, was bound to a stake, and wood was piled around him, ready for the "burnt-offering." Then began a hideous dance. The Seminoles circled round and round their captive, uttering cries of contempt, and of joy at his capture.

We are not told how the American stood the ordeal. However, our national pride in our countrymen, as well as Milly's intercession, speak well for him, for if he had begged for mercy, no doubt the Seminole maiden would have steeled her heart against him.

Just as the fatal spark approached the wood, the young and lovely daughter of Hillis Hadjo rushed to her father. At his feet, she begged for the life of the captive, but the chief was stern and denied her request. Finally she treatened to die with him unless he were liberated. Not until ne was convinced that his daughter meant what she said, did the chief order the captive unbound. Although McKrimmon's life was safe, he was not free. however. The Seminoles held him as a prisoner until he was bought by some Spaniards for seven and a half gallons of rum, and these "owners' released him.

Shortly after these events, the chief was captured by Americans and hanged. His wife and daughters, among whom was Milly, surrendered. The Americans paid marked attention to the brave and beautiful young Indian girl, and McKrimmon offered to marry her. After a long courtship, in which McKrimmon finally persuaded her that he had not made the offer from gratitude, but from love, they were married, and so, as the fairy-tales say, they lived happily ever after.

Old Scottish Term The term money musk is a derived spelling of "mony musk," which is the name of an old Scottish dance known as the Strathspey, which is believed to have originated during the Eighteenth century in the valley or strath of the Spey. "Mony musk" probably came from the town of that name in Scotland. There are many early Scotch tunes called after towns or places. In Scotch "mony" means many and occasionally means great. "Musk" means a confused heap or a term which is synonymous with our modern word for fog. It is very possible that the town is named because of the fogs appearing there. The term "money musk" as now used refers to the old dance, which is similar to the Virginia reel,-Washington Star.

Joke on the Joker

Curious humor was exhibited by a young Egyptian at Cairo, who announced "for a joke" that his father, who was away from home, had died. The youth watched the extensive preparations for the funeral with great amusement. But when the father returned home in the best of health and severely unbraided the young man for his trick, the son was so mortified that he threw himself into the Nile. And the preparations for the father's "funeral" were used for the real funeral of the son.

Do the Bootleggers Want

Prohibition?
One of the best arguments for Prohibition is that the bootleggers, the racketeers, and the liquor manufacturing people don't like it. The wets say that more people are drinking now than ever before. Then why do they want to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment and our state enforcement low? state enforcement law?

Out of their own mouths comes the answer. Al Capone enroute to jail, says, "People say I want prohibition to remain. They're crazy. If it was legitimate I could do bet-ter than I can do this way. I could handle beer without having to pay such big money to do it. There wouldn't have to be any payoff. There wouldn't be any lost trucks, and the stuff would cost lots less."
