JOHN BARRYMORE FILM

TO BE SHOWN AT STATE 'State's Attorney," RKO's contribution to the lawyer cycle coming next Wednesday and Thursday to the State Theatre, is chiefly graced by the presence of John Barrymore. Without Barrymore's presence the film would be just good entertain-ment, but with him it will rank as one of the most interesting pictures of the year. In support of Barrymore is Helen Twelvetrees in her greatest role since "Millie." She isn't simpering or suffering in th's film as she has been in the past and while it is hard to imag'ne her fitting in well with Barrymore she does so to perfection. Other notables in the cast are, William Boyd, Jill Esmond, Mary Duncan, Oscar Apfel, Ralph Ince. office, East Tawas,

LUBITSCH SCORES WITH

CHEVALIER IN FINE PICTURE Once again, Ernst Lubitsch, the master craftsman of cinematic productions, scores a hit in "One Hour With You."

With Maurice Chevalier and Jeanette MacDonaid teamed together for their best work, assisted by players of excellent past performance, and Ernst Lubitsch's discerning eye and hand at the controls, there's wonder that Paramount's "One Hou With You" scores heavily and that picture fans pack the seats. This picture is a comedy-drama with musical interludes and is similar in type and dramatic action to "The Smiling Lieutenant" and "The Love Parade." These pictures reflected Lubitsch's outstanding directorial genius, in which Maurice Chevalier in the stellar roles de-lighted millions of theatre-goers. "One Hour With You" will be shown Sunday, Monday and Tuesday at the State Theatre.

Chicago.-Thousands of unterrified | stanza-which is more than most Democrats barged into this city by the lake; 945 of them nominated Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York for President; 1,154 of them selected John N. Garner of Texas for second place on the ticket; practically all who were delegates adopted a platform that included a plank declaring for repeal of the Eighteenth amendment and for immediate legalization of beer and wine. Then they uproaringly greeted their Presidential nominee in the Chicago Stadium, and departed for their homes, confident of victory in November.

It took the delegates six full days to do the work of the national convention, and in the doing they put up as pretty a political fight as one could wish for. Several fights in fact enough to make a real battle. That was what the spectators wanted and expected, and what the Democrats always seem willing to supply. They enjoy it themselves as do the participants in the traditional

In the first place the New York governor had obtained a running start by corraling a | making his way to his place in the majority of the delegates, in many instances having had no opposition in encouragement from him, the convenstate preference primaries. Then the anti-Roosevelt groups did not center their efforts on any one man. Finally, after three ballots had failed to bring Roosevelt the required two-thirds, his managers made a deal with the Garner forces that put him over on the fourth ballot with ease. First Session Not Eventful.

Opening their proceedings with dignity that was tinged with buoyancy, the Democrats put on a show the first day that was so uneventful that the spectators might have thought the late Republican convention had reassembled. With considerable difficulty but Infinite patience, Chairman John J. Raskob of the national committee managed to obtain order about one hour late. He then delivered a brief but pithy introductory address in the course of which he spoke satirically of the Republicans and took occasion to give unstinted praise to Jouett Shouse, chairman of the executive committee, later a central figure in the most important test contest between the Roosevelt and anti-Roosevelt forces. Mr. Raskob also paid high tribute to Charles Michaelson, probably the most astute and resourceful director of publicity that any political party in American has ever had.

Evangeline Booth, commander of the Salvation Army in the United States, now came forward and delivered an impressive invocation which had the effect of humbling her hearers, for there was no slurring over of the faults and sins of the people.

Then, in a great glare of flood lights Mme. Rose Zulalian, an Armenian from Boston, sang "The Star-Spangled Banner," in full, rich voice and with dramatic gestures. The audience tried to join in, but as always rather feebly. The first stanza over, the accompanying band stopped and the crowd applauded, but Mme. Zulalian had a surprise. She knew the words of another 1 merged for the time being.

So ended the first day, with no outward evidences of the hot fights that were going on in committee rooms and delegation headquarters. "Tomorrow we will see the battle open," said everyone. Consequently, when Chairman Barkley started proceedings Tuesday noon all seats were filled. The delegates and alternates were anxiously eager for the conflict and the spectators might have been as many men and women of ancient Rome avid for a gladiatorial combat in the Coliseum.

After a pessimistic prayer by Rt. Rev. Mgr. F. G. Ostrowski of Chicago and a sentimental song by Mrs. Howard Austin, the first fireworks were set off, the piece being the contest between Senator Huey P. Long of Louisiana and his delegation, selected by the state central committee, and another bunch of delegates named by a state convention. Here was the first open demonstration of the operations of the Roosevelt steam-roller. The credentials committee, controlled by the Roosevelt forces, reported in favor of seating Long and his crowd, they being counted as for the New York governor. A minority report was read by W. Emery Lancaster of Illinois and ably upheld by him and several oth-

"Kingfish" Didn't Bluster.

The chief debater on the majority side was Long himself, and the "Kingfish" furnished a great surprise. His antics in the senate and in committee rooms since his arrival in Chicago had led to the belief that he would be rampageous. Not so. He was, on the contrary, quite dignified and gave an exposition of his case that was impressive if not entirely convincing. Seemingly, to the unprejudiced hearer, he had the law and the regulations of the Democrats on his side, and whereas, when he stepped to the platform he was greeted by a storm of boos and catcalls, when he finished there was an equally loud salvo of cheers.

The roll call on this matter resulted in the adoption of the majority report, seating the Long delegation, by a vote of 638% to 514%. It was the severest test of the Roosevelt strength during the day and was not unencouraging to his opponents since it showed some defections in delegations counted on to vote for his nomination. This was especially notable in the cases of North Carolina, Iowa and Illinois. On the other hand the Roosevelt forces made gains in Missouri and Connecticut that had not been anticipated.

There was another contest, in Minnesota, the decision in which meant much to the Roosevelt army. It, too, was decided as the credentials committee had ruled, and by a larger majority than in the Louisiana case, after a debate had been, in the wording of Chairman Barkley, "perpe-

Walsh Made Permanent Chairman. For the third time the Roosevelt tactics were now put to the test, the committee on permanent organization reporting the selection of Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana for permanent chairman, and a minority report recommending that the place be given to Jouett Shouse of Kansas, ally of the Raskob-Smith group, who had been picked tentatively last spring by the arrangements committee of the national committee. To the satisfaction of the party leaders, though perhaps not that of the blood-hungry gallery occupants, the debate developed no unpleasant personalities. The nearest to this came in the speech of Mrs. Bernice S. Pyke of Ohio, who participated in the selection of Shouse by the arrangements committee and who declared Franklin Roosevelt had given the choice his approval at that time. Aside from this it seemed the only argument was over the propriety of the sub-committee's action. Those who spoke on behalf of Shouse lavished their praise on Senator Walsh, and the advocates of Walsh were equally laudatory of Shouse's services to the party. The best speech was made by John W. Davis, the party's Presidential nominee eight years ago. He was witty, eloquent and suave, and while he insisted Shouse should be chairman, he had all kinds of nice things to say about the Montana senator, who presided over that New York convention of 1924. Chief orator on the Roosevelt side was Senator Clarence C. Dill of Washington, who was not quite so pleasing to the galleries, receiving once an outburst of

The decision of the states was closer here than before. Senator Walsh was made permanent chairman by a vote of 626 to 528, and everyone stood and cheered as the veteran was escorted to the platform and given the gavel. The organist played "When it's Springtime in the Rockies" and the photographers leaped around like a lot of goats.

Back-Down by Roosevelt.

Throughout Tuesday the Roosevelt forces maintained their claims that the New York governor would be nominated on an early ballot, perhaps the first, but they made two significant surrenders. Even before the convention opened their manager, Farley, announced that they would undertake to have abrogated the century-old rule requiring a two-thirds vote for nomination, and being in control of the committees, he was sure this could be carried through. A storm of disapproval arose at once, and among those protesting were some of Roosevelt's most prominent supporters. To change the rules in the middle of the game would be disgracefully unfair, they argued, and furthermore, would be taken as a confession of weak ess by the Rooseveltians. The governor was notified of the dangerous situation his managers, were creating and promptly wired them not to try to have the rule | that accorded Smith. abrogated. However, he included a suggestion that led his followers on the rules committee to slam through a rule providing for optional abrogation of the two-thirds rule after the sixth ballot. Again revolt broke out in Roosevelt delegations and this plan, also, was abandoned. Farley now informed the press that Roosevelt stood for the traditional procedure and the regular order of business.

The Roosevelt forces also backed down on their scheme to adopt the platform after the nomination of the ticket, the purpose of which was to allow the candidate to shape the platform and perhaps to hasten the nomi-

Wednesday afternoon's session was a washout so far as the transaction of business was concerned, for the committee on resolutions was still wrangling over the prohibition plank. So Chairman Walsh, after a prayer by Rev. Duncan H. Browne, turned the gavel over to Eddie Dowling, a stage comedian, and Eddie put on a very good impromptu vaudeville perfórmance. The delegates and guests showed they enjoyed it immensely.

Came then the evening, full of tu mult and oratory over the prohibition plank. Some 25,000 men and women were packed into the Stadium and many more thousands wailed outside when the doors were ordered closed. Mayor Cermak had been giving out vast quantities of "courtesy cards" and when it was discovered these had been counterfeited no more of them were honored. Many of those excluded from the hall held purchased tickets.

Repeal Versus Resubmission.

After the big guns had made their entries to appropriate tunes from the organ and the delegates had all found their seats, Chairman Walsh called on the tall, handsome former senator from Nebraska, Gilbert Hitchcock, to present the report of the committee on resolutions. Mr. Hitchcock said with pride that he was about to offer the shortest and clearest platform ever produced in a national convention, and it was just that. Though so concise that it scarcely requires summarizing, the main features of it are given in an adjoining column, Nearly every section was heartily applauded, but the throng was saving up its voices for the climax that came as the speaker uttered the portentous

"We advocate the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment."

Then bedlam broke loose. Bands blared, the great organ pealed, cowbells jingled, delegations marched shouting and singing through aisles, state standards waving ahead of them, and in the packed balconies there did not seem to be a single person who wasn't screaming at the top of his lungs, Delaware, Kansas Oklahoma, Texas and Virginia delegates sat fight, keeping their standards in the sockets, but Texas was split and its liberals paraded with a banner of their own. The tumult lasted nearly 15 minutes, and Mr. Hitchcock then had a chance to finish reading the platform.

Cordell Hull, senator from Tennessee, presented, to an accompaniment of boos, a minority report, a prohibition plank that recommends resub mission of the question to the states but does not declare the party in favor of repeal. Also, it omits the recommendation for immediate legalizing of beer and wines, Alfalfa Bill Murray and William G. McAdoo also offered minority reports on other topics, which didn't have a ghost of a

At this point Chairman Walsh an nounced that the proceedings, between 7 and 9 o'clock, had not been broadcast to the country, and asked if the convention were willing to have the platform and proposed amendments read again. This idea was vetoed at once with a mighty roar

Wild Demonstration for Smith.

Two hours of debate on the wet plank followed, most of the speakers avoring the majority report, though the resubmissionists were not badly represented by such men as Senator Hull, T. A. Walters of Idaho and W. C. Fitts of Alabama. For the repealers came forward early in the debate Al Smith, and the demonstration that was made for him was extraordinarily spontaneous and noisy. For 15 minutes Al stood smiling and actually blushing, waiting for it to subside, If all the delegates who were standing and shouting their heads off had voted for Smith later he would have been nominated on the first ballot. His talk was humorous and snappy.

Governor Ritchie later took the platform to urge adoption of the majority plank, and his welcome was only a little less tumultuous than missionists were completely swamped. The repeal plank was adopted by a vote of 934% to 213%.

The other minority reports were still to be acted upon, but it was past midnight and the overwrought delegates wanted to go to bed, so the convention adjourned.

Nominations and Hullabaloo.

Eager to get at the business of nominating, the convention on Thursday speedily adopted the platform as a whole, two minor changes having been made-home rule for Hawaii, and "continuous responsibility of government for human welfare, particularly the protection of children."

Nominations for President now were called for and, following the prearranged plan, Alabama yielded to John E. Mack of New York state, who offered the name of Franklin D. Roosevelt as a starter.

This chronicler has neither the space nor the inclination to quote at length from the speech of Mr. Mack or from any of the other nominating efforts. And a description in detail of each of the demonstrations would be tedious. It is almost enough to say that every candidate, including Governor Roosevelt, was skillfully and persuasively presented to the convention, and that most of them were plentifully seconded. Senator Tom Connally of Texas spoke for Garner and was followed by Gov. J. B. Ely of Massachusetts, whose eloquence in nominating Al Smith surpassed that of all the others. Ely even dared to allude to the religious prejudice that had contributed to Smith's defeat four years ago, and he also gave Roosevelt some shrewd jabs.

Recess until evening, and then the presentation in turn of the names of Harry F. Byrd of Virginia by Carter Glass, Melvin A. Traylor of Illinois by Michael Igoe of Chicago, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland by Senator Tydings, James A. Reed of Missouri by Samuel W. Fordyce, Gov. George White of Ohio by Atlee Pomerene, and Gov. William H. Murray of Oklahoma by Henry S. Johnston.

As for the demonstrations, those for Roosevelt and Garner were long, synthetic and rather tiresome, though the latter was enlivened by the cheer leader, Miss Malvina Passmore of Houston vivacious, with a good singing voice and the prettiest set of arms in the Stadium, When Judge Mack gave forth the name of Al Smith, that doughty leader was accorded an ovation by the delegates, alternates and galleries that was a most extraordinary personal tribute. It/asted about one hour and the yelling and singing and marching were continuous, needing little stimulation by bands and organ. Colorful and enthusiastic, too, was the Ritchie demonstration, with singing girls and waving state figs. The others didn't amount to much until Alfalfa BiH Murray's show came, at the very close. It consisted mainly of about fifty lassies and a kiltie band, all wearing shakos and kilts of the Murray tartan, and of Will Rogers. The comedian had a lot of fun parading in a policeman's cap and trying to steal various state standards.

Three Futile Ballots.

By this time it was nearly 4:30 Friday morning, but the Roosevelt managers were determined to have at least one ballot before adjournment, so the call of the roll of states was begun to the cheers of the delegates and of the spectators, about a third of whom doggedly sat through the entire night. There was trouble over the Iowa vote, and more trouble over Minnesota's. A New York delegate demanded that his delegation be polled, which of course consumed a lot of time. Mayor Jimmy Walker was absent and his alternate voted for Smith, but a little later Walker appeared and asked permission to vote. This granted, he shouted "I vote for Alfred E. Smith," thus telling the world that he was against the governor who was soon to pass on his fitness to hold his office. It was a bold play and evoked loud cheers. District of Columbia's little bunch of six votes caused the chairman a lot of tribulation, but at last the call was finished in one hour and forty minutes and amid great confusion. Missouri made a slight change in favor of Roosevelt. and the governor's managers were evidently hoping for more, for the announcement of the totals was so delayed by the chair that a New Yorker protested. As told earlier in this story, Roosevelt obtained 66614 votes, or al most 104 less than the required twothirds. A second ballot was ordered immediately, also indecisive-although Roosevelt showed a gain of 111/2 votes. There were various shifts that meant nothing especial. For instance, Murray gave his entire 22 to Will Rogers

"Proceed with the third roll call," ordered Senator Walsh wearily, handed the gavel to Senator Barkely and retired for a bit of rest.

Again, on this third call, the available delegates refused to leap into the Roosevelt bandwagon in worthwhile numbers, the governor gaining only about 61/2 votes over the second. His total was now 682.79, so far below the two-thirds that his manager, James A. Farley, admitted his disappointment. The convention adjourend at 9 o'clock until evening, and as the delegates staggered out of the Stadium, Farley and his associated generals hurried to the hotels to attempt some more trading on the basis of the vice presiden-They were plainly astounded by the firmness with which the stop-Roosevelt group had held its strength.

Fourth Ballot Ends the Struggle. "The deal has been made and it's Roosevelt on the fourth ballot" was the word that passed through the press section as the evening session opened. When California was reached on the roll call Mr. McAdoo took the platform and his first words made it plain to all that California and Texas had taken their places on the band wagon. The Roosevelt delegates put on a long and noisy demonstration, but when McAdoo tried to resume his talk trump. Such a contingency calls for the galleries, faithful to Smith, silenced his voice with tremendous and continuous booing. Chairman Walsh couldn't quiet them, nor could Mayor Cermak who was called to the stand, but the tall Californian finally talked them into comparative quietude and completed his explanation of the Garner switch.

Then one after another all the delegations fell into line, except the dogged Smith adherents in Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey, Rhode is made from libi-divi, the bean pods Island and some of those in New York, of a tree which is native to South Pennsylvania, Ohio and Wisconsin. While Jim Reed made a political speech communication with Roosevelt was established and his telegram of thanks was read. In it he asked the convention to remain in session until he could arrive by plane Saturday afternoon as he wished to appear in the Stadium and there receive the formal notification. In consequence completion of the ticket was postponed until next day, when the deal that had been made was consummated and John N. Garner was nominated for vice president by acclamation.

Governor Roosevelt, resting a while after his flight, rode to the Stadium and was assisted to the speaker's rostrum. The crowd that packed the vast hall to its limits gave him a fine ovation and watched with interest the notification ceremony, that usually takes place in the candidate's home. It was a spectacular ending of an interesting national convention.

Modern Contract Bridge By Lelia Hattersley

No. 8. The Factor of Distribution in Rebidding

DLAYING with a reliable partner who can be depended upon to interpret the message of a rebid, never shy at a sound raise because you cannot see game in your own hand. Even though your suit is a minor, when well within the margin of safety of one sound additional trick (a total of 5 playing tricks) a rebid should usually be made after partner has raised once. From an advanced score of 60 points, it is an easy step to game.

As a rule, though having started with a minor suit bid, and received a raise from partner, if your additional rebidding value is in honors, rather than suit length, a shift to another biddable suit or to no trumps will prove more profitable than a re-

This shift to a no trump is also a better alternative than a rebid when you have opened with a four-card major suit in a balanced hand which shows honors in at least three suits.

Having opened with a suit bid, against which the opponents have put up some opposition, even though your partner has passed, you may sometimes be justified in a rebid. The inference from your partner's pass is that he holds not more than three supporting tricks and that he is probably quite deficient in honor-tricks, otherwise he would have raised or made an independent bid.

The Rule of "Two and Three"

At the same time your partner may have some supporting value. As you are really in the dark concerning his holding, it is best to be governed by the safety margin in such a position. In the majority of cases you may gamble: On two supporting tricks if vulnerable; on three supporting tricks f not vulnerable.

Trump Strength Required for an Unassisted Rebid

A rebid of your suit which partner has passed requires powerful trump strength, at least 4 playing-tricks in trumps. As your partner's failure to respond may indicate lack of trumps as well as lack of honortricks, the playing-tricks for endcards which you have previously counted in your trump suit must be discounted one half. For example, assuming that you have opened this hand with one heart:

S-62 H-AKQ2 D-KQ5 C-K743 the next player has bid one spade, and your partner and the second opponent have passed. Discounting original valuation of 4 playing tricks in hearts, you would have left but 31/2 playing-tricks in that suit, and could not possibly rebid it. Your only recourse to show that your hand was stronger than originally indicated would be a take-out double. In short, if your partner refuses to help you, never rebid a four-card suit, or even a five-card suit unless it is headed by exceptionally strong honors. A six-card suit may usually be rebid if it has at least 11/2 honor-tricks at

When not vulnerable, an unassisted rebid shows at least 5 playing-tricks of which 4 are trump tricks. No less than 6 playing tricks, with the same trump strength, is the requirement when vulnerable. Naturally, if your hand is a twosuiter, the better course will almost always lie in showing your second suit. With a hand of uncommon general strength a take-out double is usually advisable, rather than the rebid of a suit which partner has refused to assist.

Instead of assisting your bid or passing, your partner may make a take-out in another suit or at no an entire revaluation of your hand. Rebidding in this situation will be treated in an article to follow the analysis of playing tricks in the assisting hand. For, very often, the re-appraisal of your original bidding hand must be made on its value as an assisting hand to your partner. (©, 1932, by Lelia Hattersley.)-WNU Service

AN EXCITING MINUTE

HE LONGEST lives whose wits work fast,

Nor stop until the danger's past. Everyone of the Little People on the Green Meadows, in the Green Forest, and around the Smiling Pool knows that this is true. It is those with the quickest wits who have the longest lives. Almost every day everyone of them has to depend on his wits to get him out of danger, unexpected danger. There isn't time for thinking. He must act first and do this thinking later. Such times may come to you and to me, but they are not likely to come often. We go days and days and days without meeting any real danger. But with the Little People it is different. Right when they think themselves safest they are likely to have to use their wits and to use them quickly to save their lives. That is one reason why we should do all we can to help them and protect them and never give them reason to

That doesn't seem like much for Farmer Brown's Boy couldn't possibly have hurt Buster Bear If he had wanted to, and he didn't want to do anything of the kind. But when Buster Bear was a very little cub he was taught that man is not to be trusted and is a creature to be feared, the only one, in fact, to be afraid of. Buster never had got over that fear.

So the instant Buster caught the faint smell of Farmer Brown's Boy, his wits said: "Get away from here as quickly as you can! This is no place for you! That is the dreadful man-smell. Get ashore at the nearest place and run!"

Buster didn't stop to think. He turned and made for the shore right where Paddy the Beaver and the Quack family were hiding among the rushes. Now they knew perfectly well that Buster Bear wasn't coming on purpose to hurt them. They knew he didn't know that they were there. But that wouldn't help any if one of his

Real Daughters of the Revolution

Miss Sarah Pool, eighty-six, and Mrs. Mary Newsom, eighty-two, whose father, Henry Pool, served for four years with Georgia troops in the war for American Independence, are shown here at their home in Glascock county, Ga. The Daughters of the American Revolution have established the fact that there are only seven persons now alive whose fathers fought in the revolution, with Georgia claiming two of them. Their father was married three times, and they are the children of his third wife. When the younger, Mrs. Mary Newsom, was born, her father was ninety years old. Both are members of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

PLATINUM INVADING MANY NEW FIELDS

Metal Is Now Worth Twice

as Much as Gold. Washington.-Platinum is invading new fields. Platinum leaf and plating are among the most recent developments of the industry. "Platinum Is one of the aristocrats of metals," says a bulletin from the National Geographic society.

"A pound of platinum is worth more than two pounds of gold, but a little platinum goes a long way. Normally, about six tons is required annually to supply a metal-hungry world. The metal can be rolled and beaten into leaf one two-hundred-thousandth of an inch thick. A cubic inch can be drawn into an almost invisible wire that could be wound twice around the world at the Equator.

"Because it is costly and may be artistically patterned, more than half of the world's supply of platinum is sold over the jewelry counter. The modern jeweler's show cases display platinum rings and rings of other metals with platinum settings for precious stones, platinum and platinum-plated watch cases enclosing works with platinum pivots, rouge and powder boxes, pins, vases, flower and fruit bowls, various ornaments, and tableware.

"Platinum often does its best work beyond the vision of the average layman. As a part of a radio tube, it aids modern entertainment; in telegraph and telephone instruments, it nication. In the electrical apparatus of automobiles, motor trucks, railroad trains, ships and airplanes, it contributes to modern transportation and business.

"Dentists use platinum-plated pins to secure pivot teeth; the metal aids construction engineers in blasting obstructions for new projects; the surgeon uses a gold, platinum-tipped needle to sew wounds; platinum used in connection with X-ray apparatus aids the physician in diagnosing human ills. It helps produce the farmer's fertilizer; it also is a valuable tool of the rayon manufacturer.

"Because platinum has a high melting point and is not affected by contact with most acids, it is one of the mainstays of the chemical laboratory where platinum crucibles, pans, strainers and furnace parts are extensively used. One of its chief laboratory uses, however, is as a sort of 'middle man,' or catalyzer. When placed in certain solutions, platinum makes the solutions change their natures, yet the metal itself is not affected. Manufacturers of ammonia and sulphuric and acetic acids use platinum in this way in their processes.

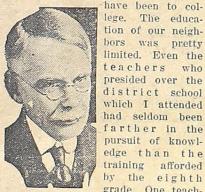

"For the first time, the United States government recently struck off two platinum medals at the Philadelphia mint. They are master copies of the medal designed for the United States George Washington bicentennial commission.

TEXAS BUILDS SHAFT FOR FAMOUS VETERAN

State Honors Man Who Fought for Independence.

Fort Worth, Texas .- A momument to Gen. E. H. Tarrant, famed veteran of the War of 1812 and the Texas war of independence, was recently unveiled here.

To Tarrant is accredited the subduing of the Indians in this region. For this achievement, this county was named for him.

A marble shaft, eight feet high, replaces the tiny bronze military markers which formerly marked the burial site of the former soldier, Texas Ranger, lawyer, and public officer. It was erected by the Daughters of 1812.

On one side of the shaft is inscribed General Tarrant's outstanding accomplishments, on the other this Little is known of his early life although he was a front rank figure in early Texas history. Some authorities maintain he was born in North still others say it was Alabama.

While still a youth, about nineteen, he distinguished himself in two battles against marauding Indians with a southern army under Gen. Andrew Jackson.

Well qualified for frontier life and a natural pioneer, he came to Texas in 1835. Leaving the army in 1836, after independence was won, he joined the Texas Rangers. He became commander of the northwest Texas region, redundant with hostile Indians and vicious outlaws.

In 1838, General Tarrant was elected representative to the congress of the Texas republic. Although a recognized lawyer, he quickly resigned to return to command of the Rangers.

As he grew older and less active physically, he traded the saddle for a legislative chair and served several terms in the Texas legislature after Texas was admitted to the Union. General Tarrant died in 1858 at old Fort Belknap.

BY KILLING MITES

SAVE THE POULTRY

Carolina, others claim Tennessee and Simple Treatments to Get Rid of Lice.

(By O. C. UFFORD, Extension Poultryman, Colorado Agricultural College.— WNU_Service.)

Many Colorado farmers and poultrymen save money and cut costs of production simply by preventing their poultry and poultry houses from becoming infested with lice and mites.

Lice and mite infestations affect the health, growth and production of poultry. These pests can be easily controlled by proper action. Lice, which live on the birds and are known as biting parasites, may be controlled by smearing a small amount of blue ointment mixed with an equal amount of petroleum jelly, lard or vaseline, around the vent. This treatment should never be used on small chicks. Dusting powders such as sodium fluoride may be placed in the feathers on different parts of the body to con-

When large flocks are to be treated for lice, nicotine sulphate may be applied with a brush or oil can to perches before the birds go to roost. Fumes from the nicotine destroy the parasites. This fluid will also kill mites if they come into contact with it. Badly infested flocks should be treated a second time in about ten days.

Mites live around perches and roosting places, gradually spreading over poultry houses and farm buildings when not controlled.

Stock dips, formaldehyde or carbolic acid are some of the common materials used for spraying roosts and houses. An effective home remedy can be made by using one gallon of crude crank case oil, one-half pint of stock dip or crude carbolic acid, and, if necessary, this may be thinned with one to two quarts of kerosene. The easiest time to control mites and lice is in the spring, before they become too numerous.

Flock Will Respond to Well-Balanced Ration

Eggs from chickens fed a ration full of vitamins A and D are better food than eggs from chickens fed rations less rich in these vitamins, according to the results of recent research available to the department of poultry husbandry at the Ohio State university.

Recent experiments indicate, says the department, that the amount of vitamin A and D supplied to the birds is directly reflected in the vitamin content of the eggs produced. Thus, in feeding his hens to maintain their health, the poultryman is feeding for eggs of better quality and more worth. A ration for hens rich in vitamins would contain yellow corn, alfalfa leaf meal, or a high grade cod liver oil. Vitamin D prevents rickets and assists with the building of bone. Vitamin A builds resistance to disease and infections.

Early and Late Chicks

Chicks hatched early have many advantages over those hatched late. As a general rule they are more vigorous; the mortality is less; the cockerels may be sold for better prices, and the pullets will mature in time to lay highpriced eggs next fall.

Just why the early chick is more vigorous is hard to explain. That less mortality is experienced is probably due to the fact that coccidia and parasites, such as worms and mites, are less active before the onset of hot weather. It is true that more trouble from these pests is experienced later in the season.

Poultry for Income Science has placed the rate of mortality among chicken flocks so low that it is now no longer a major risk. As an income source, both from meat and eggs, poultry offers returns measured fairly accurately by the number of chicks to be used. The initial investment in equipment is offered today at most attractive prices and since the life of equipment extends over a long period of years, the annual investment may be considered very low.

Select Vigorous Chicks

Vigorous baby chicks have full bright eyes, downy fluff, are plump and have well rounded shanks. Other points to look for in selecting chicks include the following: Freedom from bacillary white diarrhea, weight of eight pounds per 100 chicks at 24 hours of age, well healed body openings at which yolk was absorbed and richly pigmented shanks and beaks, Chicks from healthy breeding flocks and from birds high in egg production are always preferable.—Nebraska Farmer.

Diarrhoea in Fowls

Diarrhoea may be caused by feeding spoiled food of some kind and garbage should be pretty carefully inspected before being fed. It may easily contain spoiled bits of meat or moldy food of some kind. A dose of epsom salts, one pound dissolved in the drinking water of 100 fowls, or dissolved in a little water and mixed with a wet mash, so distributed that all can get their share, may be given to clean out the digestive organs of the birds.-Rural New-Yorker, EVELYN ACTON glanced quickly around to see whether any of the waiters were watching, then deftly removed two rolls from her gay little red-leather handbag and put them on the table beside her cup of steaming coffee. Coffee in this very glorious place was only 20 cents and it gave her a feeling of prosperity to breakfast with the successful business men and women of the town.

This morning, however, she was rather depressed because for three solid days she had been hunting a position without success and her funds were now reduced to small change and a square meal was only a nagging memory to her. She looked wistfully at a juicy piece of fried ham that a patron had hastily left on his plate at the next table and crinkled her little nose as its fragrance came invitingly to her. It seemed to tease her and make the dry rolls drier in her mouth. Then after she had finished she did a strange thing. As she rose from the table she opened her purse, took out a pencil and piece of paper, then sat down at the ham table. As she scribbled aimless words she noticed that there was a clean spoon beside the plate and the knife had only been used for cutting, so she was afraid of itonly a matter of seconds now and she would be nonchalantly placing bits of the tender meat in her mouth-sensing that some one was at her elbow she looked up into the implacable face of a waiter.

"Pardon, madam, permit me to remove this and you will have more room to write."

The ham was whisked away and the clean spoon and the knife that had only been used for cutting, but quick on the heels of disappointment came a sense of escape; if that waiter had not come at that moment he would have seen her eating the other patron's breakfast.

"Making your way in a big city isn't so bad," she reflected, "until you lose your position, and then-" poignant homesickness rushed over her as she thought of the little home town she had left and of Jack Dalton who had wanted to marry her and whom she had so flatly refused.

"All right," he had said with a shrug. "When you get through with your career you can come to me."

That was four years ago. With a toss of impatience she pulled herself together and walked swiftly along.

"If you want to impress people," she soliloquized, "you have to hold your head up when you wear a $5 dress marked down from $12.98 (on the tag) and want it to look like a $75 French creation." So she walked jauntily down the street, her disappointed stomach already beginning to scream for the ham it didn't get. That was one deceiving thing about a coffee-androlls breakfast; it had a way of playing hide and seek, it was gone and you found yourself all wish washy and

"Now, let's see, where's that address?" she went on. "Yes, 746 Empire building. The Wearever Tire company. They said to call at ten o'clock. Its three blocks down and two across. I'll just about get there on time. Wonder how many others they wrote to call, too. But my letter was a good one if I say it-maybe they'll take me."

And the big building swallowed her up. She left the elevator at the seventh floor and turned the knob of the big door leading to suite 746.

"You wanted a stenographer?" she said to the man at the high desk. "Yes, please step this way, Miss Acton.'

He showed her to the office door marked "private" and returned to his desk. As she entered the man inside turned to face her, then he rose and took both her hands in his.

"Evelyn!" he said gently as the girl started at him, her face suddenly blanched, then she recovered herself and greeted him flippantly enough. "Same old Jack Dalton," she laughed a little forced laugh. "You look like a million dollars," he said surveying her. "Let's get out of here where we can talk." Like an automaton, she followed him out of the office and they went to a little restaurant nearby. "I was so excited waiting I couldn't eat breakfast," he explained. "What'll you have? When I read that letter signed Evelyn Acton in the handwriting I knew so well-" "It was the biggest shock I ever got," she laughed. "You were prepared because you knew I was coming, but I wasn't.' "You've changed," he said, after a pause. "I don't know what it is; there's something-a little wistful about you. What is it? It's entranc-"Wistful! Downright hungry!" thought Evelyn, but she said:

"You've changed too-you're-I don't know-even nicer than before." "Nicer than a career?" he asked.

'Don't fool me, Evelyn. I'm serious.'

"Uh, huh!" she replied, slipping a piece of broiled ham into her mouth. "Come on," he begged. "Let's get out of here before I express myself in public," but Evelyn only crinkled her nose at him, gave his knee a little pat under the table and said: "You're going to eat a good breakfast before you leave this restaurant.' And he did. They did, I mean,

THE STORY

Six bandits hold up the steamer, Midnight Sun, on the Mackenzie, kill Jimmy Montgomery, and escape with gold dust and furs. At the Mounted Police post at Fort Endurance, Sergt. Alan Baker disputes with his incom-petent superior. Inspector Hask-ell, regarding plans for the cap-ture of the bandits. Baker starts out in the police launch with five men. At the MacMillan trading post, Joyce MacMillan is thrilled at the arrival of the police launch. She had expected to marry Baker, and had been stunned at the news that he was to marry Elizabeth Spaulding. Stolen furs are found on the Mac-Millan place and evidence points to Joyce's father. Alan leads his expedition up the big Alooska. Compelled by Haskell's foolish orders to divide the party, Alan fails to capture the bandits and returns to Fort Endurance. Hask-ell blames him for the failure and Alan is allowed to buy out of the Mounted on condition that he absolve Haskell from blame.

CHAPTER VI

The Dark Hour

In his cabin Alan took off his uniform and changed to civilian clothes. It seemed to him he was stripping off his foot-free adventuresome life with that uniform.

What money he had on hand, several hundred dollars, he buttoned carefully in his shirt pocket. His expenses on this trip ahead would be heavy; he would have to borrow. But he was going to take that Victoria job, and he knew Colonel Steele would gladly give him a salary advance.

Then he made up a slender pack-a single blanket, a change of clothes, food for a week or ten days. That was all. No camping outfit, no weapons, no equipment for wilderness travel.

As he was buckling his pack together, Elizabeth unexpectedly came into the cabin. As she stepped into the light, she exclaimed: "Alan! That MacMillan girl told Mrs. Drummond that Haskell demoted you! That you're a constable! That he put all the blame of this patrol on you!"

"That's what he did," Alan answered, straightening up, facing her. "I didn't believe he was capable of it. But I shouldn't have been surprised; he's given me cues enough to his nature.'

"And you're going to stand for that?" Her voice rose, sharp, nagging. "You're going to be his orderly, a constable, disgraced, bossed around? I'd think that any man would-would-'

She checked herself as she saw the government property laid out on the bed and noticed that Alan was in civilian clothes.

He said quietly "You were a blt hasty. I didn't stand for it. I bought out. I'm out of the Mounted. Out for good!"

Elizabeth gasped. For moments she stared at him, incredulous. She did not know just why he had taken this drastic step, but vaguely she guessed he had had some fierce clash with Haskell. It did not matter, the circumstances. He was free of this ninety-a-month rut, this backwoods calling. There had always been a doubt in her mind whether Alan, when the great test came would actually tear himself away from the Mounted. She had expected a fight that would embitter him against her. But now he was out; he would surely take that Victoria offer; next winter she would be living in Victoria! Her heart leaned at the thought, and her whole manner toward Alan changed. She drew near him, slipped an arm about him; and a softness came into

"Dear, you're sorry to be out. I'm sorry to see you so hurt. You didn't want to leave here. Alan. I-I did want you to: but I wouldn't have insisted. I'd have given in to you, dear, before I'd seen you unhappy. In the long run, we'll not regret; it'll be the

Alan watched the candle sheen in her hair, the auburn hair that always brought him poignant memories of her brother Curt. His thoughts, leaping ahead to his lone-handed venture, were scarcely with her at all, yet he was bewildered by her sudden change, her ardent affection. There had been times when affection from her would have cheered and heartened him; but now her lips, inviting him, asking for his own, meant less than the pack lying at his feet.

She asked him: "And now-you're going to take-we'll be down in Victoria, now? Won't Colonel Steele be glad when he hears! You'll write to him right away?"

"I suppose so. Yes, I'm going to take- that job. Not much else to turn to." She noticed how cold, how unmoved he was; and she went on, halfwhispering: "On our way outside, we can be married at Edmonton, and have that trip we planned to the Blackfoot Selkirks. And we'll have-we can afford to have now !- a cabin back in Vancouver island; back in the mountains by ourselves, Alan." He merely said, gesturing at the al-

"I'm leaving Curt's keepsakes here. You'll watch after them, won't you?" And he added, "I'm leaving here tonight, Elizabeth."

"Leaving here? Tonight?" Her eyes went to the pack on the floor, Suddenly startled, she looked up at him again

Feeling that he owed some explanation to the girl he was engaged to, he partly explained: "I'm pitching off on a trip, Elizabeth. By myself. I'm going after those men that shot up two of my friends. Haskell blocked a patrol I wanted to make. To go after them I had to be free. I don't know how long it'll take me. Maybe three weeks, maybe six. I'd like for you to Something in his manner stopped Elizabeth from questioning him. She knew he intended to marry her and take her to Victoria; but something told her that in this present hour it was not well to question or oppose Alan Baker.

She acquiesced: "I'll wait, dear. I'll wait here for you. But, Alan, be-fore you go . . ." She stood on tiptoe, reproaching him, begging, "Aren't you going to tell me good-by?"

Alan bent and kissed her, as she invited. But he did it dispassionately, as a thing expected of him. He felt her breath on his cheek, her arm tightening around him, her body pressed against his. He was subtly but unmistakably aware of a certain willingness about her; she wanted him to linger; she would have stayed with him there in the cabin. . . . It surprised, it shocked him, after all these months when she had been so cold and passionless.

When she had gone, he buckled his pack and caught up his hat. As he started to snuff the two candles in the alcove, he heard a thumping footstep on the threshold and turned to see Bill Hardsock. In a flash he guessed that Bill had been waiting outside, not wanting to come in while Elizabeth was there.

"Alan! H-l's blue blazes!" Bill was all but incoherent as he advanced across the cabin. "Say it isn't so! I heard . . . wasn't meaning to lis-

"That's what I did, Bill. He busted me, blamed me. What's worse, he wouldn't let us make the Inconnu trip. I couldn't stand that. I'm out. Leaving Endurance. Right now."

Bill's face turned gray. His jaw dropped, he stood in stupefied shock, with a look of misery on his blunt, bulldog features.

"You're-leaving-us," he gulped. "You're - pitching away - for good. You always stood up for us men, against Haskell. You and me . . . pretty good partners. . . . Now you won't be here any more, Alan. . . ."

"Bill, shake yourself together and listen. I'm going after those bandits. There's several things you've got to do for me. One is, I want you to cut aside from patrols whenever you can and visit Joyce and see she's safe. Another thing. I'm giving you this cabin and what's in it, except for a little personal stuff that I'll get some time or else send for. Then, there's one last thing. Got any free time coming in the next couple weeks?"

"I don't know. Yes, must have three or four days-way we've been hitting the ball all winter."

"Two days will be enough. I need a little help on my plan; and you, here at Endurance, you can give me a hand. It's not much, but it'll mean a lot to me. I'll tell you what I've got in mind, so you'll understand."

In a few terse sentences that left Bill gasping and swearing at so staggering a scheme, Alan sketched his

"And you'll keep quiet about this. Bill? Don't tell Ped, Elizabeth, Drummond, anybody. If it ever gets out, it'd wreck the whole idea, and I'd probably land in a penitentiary."

"I'll keep quiet as a dead dog. I won't breathe a word. But Alan. why in h-l, way we've hung together, why can't I be in on your trick?" Eagerly he pleaded. "Let me go along, Alan." "It'd mean desertion for you. Haskell would give you the limit. And you've got to watch after Joyce. My work is a one-man job anyway. We'll keep in touch, Bill. You write to me. Lord knows but-what you and I, sometime on ahead, might get together They shook hands.

Alan hurried down the slope to the trading store. Factor Drummond had not gone to bed. The news of the patrol, of his old friend Dave Mac-Millan being arrested and faced with such overwhelming evidence of guilt, had upset him. "What the devil, Alan?-civilian clothes!"

Alan was weary of people's astonishment. He wasted no time with explanations.

"Drummond, where's old Dad Pence? I saw him here when we got back this Drummond pointed behind the counter. Alan walked around, up the narrow aisle, and there found old Pence asleep on a pile of wolf skins.

He had passed his three score and ten, old Dad Pence, at prospecting, trapping, water dogging, whatnot. He had made fortunes and guilelessly had lost them to men sharper than he. He had come down to the twilight of life penniless, homeless, childless. But old Dad Pence could still handle a rifle with the best of the youngsters; and a reputation for magic which he had acquired among the witch-killing Indians, still clung to him and put fear into primitive hearts. Altogether he was the man for Alan's purpose, if only Joyce would not mother him too much and make his existence thereafter too desolate by contrast.

Shaking him wide enough awake to understand what was wanted of him, Alan explained. He was to go back to the Big Alooska with Joyce and watch after her. He was to keep in touch with Bill Hardsock. Under no circumstances was he to wander off into the bush and leave Joyce alone.

Old Pence nodded. "I'll do it, b'y, jist as you say. I'll try not to fergit and wanner off in th' bush. I'll look after Joyce, you don't worry."

Alan thrust a handful of bills into his pocket, and rose up and stepped back around the counter. "I want to buy your motor canoe, Drummond. How much?"

"To buy it? You making a trip? Go ahead, take it and use it, Alan." "But I'm not bringing it back. I'm leaving this country in it. How Drummond was all tangled in Alan's swift words. "That canoe isn't worth a lot. . . . You're leaving this country. . . . The motor cost me a hundred but it's three years old. . . . You're not bringing it back? . . . I guess fifty dollars, Alan. But what in the name of sin-?"

Alan gave him the fifty and strode

Down the terrace at the steamer landing, Joyce was waiting for him, as he had asked her. Laying his pack in Drummond's canoe and untying the painter, Alan stood holding it, hat in hand, for a few last words with Joyce.

He said slowly, lengthening these last moments with her: "Joyce, I'm going away. I'm going after those six men. Bill will tell you something about it. I arranged with him to visit you whenever he can, and old Dad Pence is going back to the Alooska to be company for you."

Though she asked no questions about his trip, her dark eyes were big with wonder. Alan was tempted to tell her all. He could depend on her not to breathe one word of it. A score of times he had confided police secrets to her and she had given him invaluable information gleaned from Indians and 'breeds.

But his plan was a desperate gamble, and Joyce would surely recognize it as such. She might lose faith in so dubious a venture. And he thought: "I'll be entirely out of the country, out of it for weeks and weeks. She mustn't know that; she'd feel too terribly alone; she might even come to believe I've deserted her, as I did last winter. But if she thinks I'm still here on the Waterways, perhaps working secretly, it'll help her keep up without its hunting rallies? Is this sport of centuries, the merry chase of elusive foxes, fated to die out?

It is unlikely that there is any feature of English country life so typical of the customs and traditions of the nation, as fox hunting. This being so, a recent statement of the earl of Rosebery, on accepting the mastership of the Whadden chase, that this sport is in a very critical condition, came rather as a surprise. He declared that five neighboring packs are having difficulty in finding masters, and that sportsmen must rally around now, or see fox hunting go the way of hawking. His lordship ascribed the decline to hard times and high taxation. This might be considered bad news, even for the foxes, for from accounts of this sport that I have read, it would | upon in its entirety.

Would England still be England, | seem that the prey gets as much fun out of eluding the huntsmen, as the latter do in the galloping pursuit. After some of these old wily masters of the craft have learned the business, their chances of becoming a mere brush are comfortably few. Why, there are even some of these old fellows who pay visits to the kennels, if the hunt is not up regularly, to see what is keeping their little playmates! At least that's the story told,-Border Cities Star.

Constitution First

The Constitution was written before the preamble, and voted upon, section by section. It was then submitted to the committee on style, which made the final draft, placing the preamble in its proper place. It was then voted

The Fame of ____Bengal____

What the Well-Dressed Lady Wears in Darjeeling.

(Prepared by National Geographic Society, habited by half-starved, unkempt na-Washington, D. C.)—WNU Service. ENGAL province, India, fearing extinction of its rhinoceroses, due to wholesale shooting, has made killing or injuring of these animals illegal except in cases of self-Bengal, straddling the northernmost point of the Bay of Bengal, and stretching northward to the foothills of the Himalayas, owes much of its fame to an animal-the Bengal tiger which inhabits most large zoos. The province is one of the most thickly inhabited areas of the world It is nearly equal in area to the state of Kansas and as many people live within its borders as inhabit New York state, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio, Texas and Michigan. More than eighty different languages are spoken, not to mention the many dialects.

The narrow northern extremity of Bengal resembles that of Idaho. Like Idaho, the province spreads out as it stretches southward. But after leaving that extremity, no one could charge Idaho with having such deformity of shape, for the border line of Bengal zigzags in all directions.

Bengal's gateway is its most homely feature. The water that surrounds the coast is laden with silt, brought down from the north by the Ganges and a labyrinth of rivers and creeks that pierce the coast line. Waterlogged jungles, infested with tigers and other wild animals, lie between these channels. These wilds and the swampy lowlands immediately north of them are called the Sundarbans.

When the Ganges goes on its annual rampage and overflows its banks for 200 miles from its mouth, the Sundarbans are submerged. The less flooded area is planted in rice and it is an interesting sight to see "row boat farmers" tending their submarine crops. When the water subsides, it leaves a fertile layer of earth that causes jute, rice and many other products to thrive in this region.

Nearly all Bengal is a flat, fertile plain from the Sundarbans to the foot of the Himalayas which is reached after a day and night of rough train riding. A narrow gauge railroad is then taken to reach Bengal's roof, Darjeeling. The snakelike course of the railroad passes thousands of acres of tea plants that, from a distance, resemble fields of boxwood hedge. Some of the plants grow six feet tall in Bengal, and are stripped of their leaves five times a year. Calcutta, the capital of the province, is one of the most progressive cities of the East, with all the modern devices to handle its tremendous commerce and entertain its native and foreign population. In less than 250 years it has become the largest city in India and second only to London in the British empire.

To the traveler who approaches Calcutta by water, its growth is a mystery. At the mouth of the Hooghly, the indigo blue water of the Bay of Bengal turns to a dirty brown. For much of the 80-mile trip mud flats and water-logged forests form the river-side scenery with no evidence of civilization save for the commercial craft plying the river. Only the most skilled pilot can steer a vessel up the shifty channel.

When almost within sight of Calcutta, the smoke stack of a jute mill and here and there groups of nativethatched huts break the monotony of the journey and then, rounding a bend, the great Indian port appears.

Hindus at the Bath. Bathing ghats on both banks now are filled with Hindus. One of the popular ghats is at the botanical gardens, where grows the famous Calcutta banyan tree. It covers nearly two acres and has about 250 trunks. A short distance beyond, perspiring natives loading and unloading ocean-going vessels solve the secret of Calcutta's development-commerce. Small boats resembling the Chinese sampans clustered about the wharves or floating leisurely to and from Howrah, Calcutta's manufacturing district on the other side of the Hooghly, handle much of the local small freight.

Like most large cities, Calcutta has its slums with squalid houses of mud and thatch, and sometimes brick, bordering narrow, dirty streets and in-

Dalhousie square, a few blocks from the Hooghly is an attractive parkway. The post office, which faces its lake bears a tablet designating the vicinity of the famous Calcutta Black Hole episode.

The Maidan, Calcutta's "Mall," with its race track, cricket fields and gardens, is the rendezvous for sport lovers and promenaders. In the evening the "who's who" of Calcutta are there. Colorful Indian rajahs with their servants in native costume, wealthy natives and government officials, both British and Indian, rub elbows on the walks or swiftly pass in their foreign cars with chauffeurs whose costumes and uniforms represent myriad styles and colors of the East and West.

Fort William occupies much of the river side of the Maidan. Nearby are the Eden gardens. In the southeast corner Queen Victoria has been memorialized by a magnificent building in Italian Renaissance. Its central dome of pure white marble came from the same quarries from which the marble for the Taj Mahal was hewn. The white marble palace of the governor of Bengal, overlooking the Maidan from the north, was the residence of the Viceroy before the capital was removed to Delhi in 1912. This and the palatial residences, clubs and public buildings along the Maidan's eastern side, gave to Calcutta the name "The City of Palaces." Darjeeling, nestling among the foothills of the Himalayas, is Bengal's summer resort. Like Simla, 700 miles farther west, and Srinagar in Kashmir, Darjeeling is a godsend to perspiring Europeans who must spend the hot period in India. But it is more than a cool retreat: it is a matchless observation post, when the clouds permit, for the mightiest mountain scenery that the world affords. Forty-five miles to the northward, across deep chasms and beyond tier after tier of rises Kinchinjunga, feet high, buttressed by half a dozen peaks from 20,000 to 24,000 feet in al-

Perched on a Ridge.

Darjeeling stands on a sort of stage before and above which sweep the amphitheater slopes of Himalayan heights. The town is perched on and astride a steep ridge that rises about 7,000 feet from the Bengal plains. On the side toward the mountains the ridge drops away for approximately 6,000 feet, forming what might, in American terminology, be called "the Grand Canyon of the Ranjit;" but whose heavily forested slopes and tropically luxuriant floor earns in India the more poetic name of "Vale of Ranjit."

Darjeeling has characteristics unlike those of most towns. It can hardly be said to have streets. Most of the buildings face on paths or walks which run along the main ridge and out on to its minor spurs, or work their way by serpentine routes to other paths that cling to the steep sides of the slopes. Steps, too, serve in place of roads, connecting terraces that rise one above the other. One of the few carriage roads is a driveway that skirts the lower end of the main ridge and leads below to the suburb Lebong and its barracks for British soldiers. The villas, bungalows, shops, government buildings, hospitals, churches, schools, barracks and native huts that make up Darjeeling and its suburb form pendant communities, like giant saddle-bags thrown over the ridge. Dwellings are scattered down the slopes for a thousand feet, the ground floors of one tier on a level with the roofs of the next tier below. If one must cover much space in Darjeeling he rides on pony back or is carried in a litter by four servants. The center of Darjeeling is Observatory Hill, a knoll on the crest of the ridge. Topping the knoll is a Buddhist monument and surrounding it is a small forest of staffs from which prayer flags flutter their supplications. From the benches near the monument one may sit, when mist and clouds do not interfere, and take advantage of Darjeeling's best view of mighty Kinchinjunga and its fellows. But often the vigil is fruitless. It is only for relatively brief periods during the spring and early winter that one may be sure of long, uninterrupted viewa of the towering granite and ice walls and snowy slopes to the north,

COMPILE ATLAS OF

Important Work Undertaken by Ethnologists.

Under the auspices of the American Council of Learned Societies a monumental work is under way which is supposed to produce at last a "linguistic atlas." This will record the typical words, phrases and idioms of the American continent and the varied stocks that people it. And to indicate the scale and magnitude of the task it is sufficient to say that investigators have collected in eight months more than 10,000 pages reporting the local speech of New England. Scores of illustrations might be given of the differences of words and meanings, according to the place where they are used and the people who use them. The lowly worm with which the fishererman tempts the trout, for example, is widely known as an "angle worm," but is likely to be called a "fish worm" in Massachusetts, a "night crawler" or "night walker" in Connecticut and a "mud worm" or "muck worm" in Essex county, Massachusetts. And what is "bonney-clabber"? Down East it is the name for curdled milk, though in parts of Massachusetts it will be called "loppered milk." And cottage cheese may be "sour milk cheese" or "Dutch cheese," while apple dumpling is variously called "apple dowdy," "pan dowdy" or "apple slump.'

The names in greatest variety, naturally, are those that refer to possessions of the house or farm, or the produce of field and garden. An example is the "gutter" of eastern New England, which is an "eavetroth" or Cape Cod and an "eavespout" in Ver mont. And Connecticut farmers "cart" their hay, but in eastern Massachusetts they "haul" it, while in Vermont it is "drawn" or "drawed." The roots and origins of these dif ferences are of serious interest to so ciologists and ethnologists. Often they record and perpetuate a form of mind and a racial genius; sometimes they can be traced directly to historical events and circumstances. The occasional New England pro nunciation of yolk as "yeld" is derived, no doubt, from similar usage in rural England, whence settlers came long ago to America and brought their habits of thought and speech with them. And one of the most curious examples of the persistence of old forms of speech is said to be found in the Kentucky mountains, where words and pronunciations are in good use which are found nowhere else except in Chaucer. Similarly in western England there persist a few words which are pure Anglo-Saxon, unchanged by a thousand years but totally forgot ten elsewhere.

There is much more in preparation, therefore, than a dictionary of dialect. Through the language of the people it is expected to discover the most persistent element of racial character, the habits of thoughts that have endured through change and decay and the essential history of the new American nation. It is a fascinating study, though the wealth of material discovered in New England shows that it will be a long while before it is finished.-New York World-Telegram.
