5,000 ATTEND DEDICATION CEREMONIES

In the presence of a crowd of about 5,000 people, gathered Saturday afternoon at the end of the Thompson Trail on the bank of the AuSable river, Wm. B. Mershon of Saginaw unveiled the Lumbermen's Memorial and presented it to the United States Forest Service. The speech of acceptance was made by Major R. Y. Stuart, chief of the United States Forest Service.

Program of Ceremonies
Mr. Mershon, in his presentation address, gave a history of the Memorial project and the committee's work. His talk was filled with reminiscences of the days when pine was king and the woods rang to the lusty voice and sharp axe of the lumberjack.

Governor Wilber M. Brucker, in his address said: "This memorial emphasizes the debt the nation owes the pioneer lumberman. The three figures memorialize the spirit of America's advancement in three ways, exploration, development and transportation. Exploration, of necessity, precedes all things. Then there has been the cruiser's accuracy, and finally the movement made necessary by transportation."

Short addresses were given by Ed. Flack, governor of the Michigan District of Kiwanis clubs, and Elmer Eicher of the Flint Junior Chamber of Commerce. Mrs. Nyda Campbell Leslie of Tawas City and Norman Salsbery of East Tawas gave vocal solos. Miss Hazel Jackson of East Tawas read a poem composed by her for the occasion. "Memories of the Old AuSable," written by Mrs. G. A. Pringle of Tawas City, was sung by the Odd Fellows Trio. "Stalwarts of the Pines," a ballad by James Stevens, distinguished author, was read by Norman Salsbery. Music was furnished by the Mio Military band and Detroit Citizens band. The program was opened by Judge Herman Dehnke, chairman of the local committee.

One of the special features of the day was the lumberjack dinner served at noon to the thousands by the people of Oscoda at "Camp Eight." After being fed in true lumberjack style an exemplification of the arts of the lumberjack was given by some of the surviving woodsmen clad in their staggard trousers and caulked boots and bearing peavies and axes. Indians in full regalia took part in paying tribute to the woodsmen. Rev. Simon Greensky, Chippewa minister, gave an address. Hundreds of old-timers gathered at "Camp Eight" where they greeted old friends and recounted stories of the old days.

Schreck Conceives Idea
Last Saturday's program was the culmination of an idea born to R. G. Schreck back in September of 1926 when the Thompson Trail was dedicated. Mr. Schreck was supervisor of the Huron National Forest at that time. He saw the fitness of a memorial to "The Stalwarts of the Pines" on this historic old tote road. At the time, his conception of the idea was quite modest, perhaps a marker or tablet. He talked with friends and thought much about the matter. While he did not receive much encouragement, he became more enthused with the idea and brought it to the attention of Wm. B. Mershon, prominent Michigan lumberman, of Saginaw. Mr. Mershon became an enthusiastic as Mr. Schreck. Other lumbermen were interviewed and a committee was formed to investigate the possibilities of such a project. The committee consisted of Wm. B. Mershon of Saginaw, Charles T. Mitchell of Cadillac, John W. Blodgett of Grand Rapids, Alfred Richardson of Alpena, J. S. Stearns of Ludington, H. E. Fletcher, Allen M. Fletcher and Robert Rayburn, of Alpena, and H. K. Loud. A meeting was held at East Tawas and after viewing the site of the proposed project a large amount of the funds necessary were subscribed by members of the committee on the grounds that day. The consummation of the project was now assured.

Robert Aitken Receives Commission
Robert Aitken, an internationally famed American sculptor of New York, was commissioned to create the memorial. Sculptor Aitken made a thorough research of the subject. He traveled to Washington and British Columbia where he became very familiar with the lumberjack—even to a knowledge of his thoughts and habits. About a year later the statue was cast and in October, 1931, it was placed in position.

Details Left To Local Men
The details of erecting the monument, landscaping the grounds and the arrangements of the dedication ceremonies was left to the supervision of Mr. Schreck, who had the co-operation of the people of every section of the county and the county at large through the board of supervisors. The following were members of the committee on arrangements: R. G. Schreck, G. K. Fenger, W. A. Evans, John Mielock, E. A. Leaf, L. A. Gardner, Owen Hales, and Nathan Barkman of East Tawas; G. A. Prescott, Jr., H. R. Smith, E. W. Latham, Jas. Robinson, Ed. J. Martin, Burley Wilson and J. A. Murphy of Tawas City; and Peter Dutcher of Oscoda.

Over 6000 Letters Carry Memorial Covers
According to the postoffice record, Postmaster Arthur Dillon stated that there were 6629 letters cancelled at East Tawas on July 16th having the special Lumbermen's Memorial cachet on the face of the letters, consisting of 6006 ordinary letters, 613 air mail letters and ten registered letters, going to all parts of the United States, Canada, Cuba, England, Germany and Switzerland. This special cachet was sponsored by the Audie Johnson Post No. 211, American Legion, of East Tawas, in honor of the dedication of the Pioneer Lumbermen's and Woodsmen's Memorial of Michigan on July 16th. The cachet was designed by Ray Hayden, noted commercial artist, of Saginaw, and is considered one of the outstanding cachets of this season by cover collectors.

Joseph Barkman, who applied the cachet on covers, received over 1800 letters from all sections of this country, each letter having all the way from one to ten letters each. The total value of stamps used for mail received and sent out for this event amounts to over $300.00.

Flower Show Will Be Held August 17th

A larger variety of prizes is being offered this year and the committee hopes that all contestants will have their flowers there at 9 o'clock. The judges will be Mrs. Chas. Conklin, Arthur Dillon and Worthy McDonald, who so ably assisted us last year in the same capacity. Mrs. Conklin, who so kindly brought a display from her green house last year, will add much to our flower show again this year. The committee will appreciate any suggestions which will make our Flower Show a bigger and better success than last year.

A first prize of 60c, second prize of 40c and third prize of 25c will be given on the flowers listed below: Aster, cosmos, dahlias, gladioli, marigolds, zinnias, nasturtiums, larkspur, snapdragons, petunias, phlox, sweet peas, pansies, lilies, snow on the mountain; also for best display of—Floral baskets, house plants in pots, potted ferns, dish gardens, floral centerpiece for table, bouquet of wild flowers, porch bouquet.

Harry VanPatten.

Saturday's program was completed with an exhibition of fireworks in the Tawas City park and a lumbermen's ball at East Tawas. The exhibition was furnished by the businessmen of the two cities. It was estimated a thousand cars, filled with spectators, were parked along the beach in the park. The American Legion Posts of the Tawas sponsored the dance which proved very enjoyable. Governor and Mrs. Brucker were in attendance.

TO THE VOTERS OF IOSCO COUNTY
I wish to announce my candidacy for the office of County Road Commissioner of Iosco County on the Republican ticket at the primaries, Sept. 13. Your support is respectfully solicited.
Wm. Wilkinson.

DISTINGUISHED ACTING SEEN IN DRAMA OF POST-WAR LIFE
Carrying on a tradition for emotional dramatics which reached a new high in "An American Tragedy," Paramount presents a sincere, heart-touching talkie in "Broken Lullaby," which plays at the State Theatre on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

A perfect admixture of every element that makes for sure-fire entertainment, "Broken Lullaby" never once gives evidence of an overabundance of any of them, the story is imaginative but not too imaginative; the acting does not strain itself into a torture for the beholder; the tempo is swift, but not racy; the situations are not so starkly real as to be commonplace.

"Broken Lullaby" brings a number of messages, and any one of them can be chosen by any member of the audience to conform to his mood. To some it is an indictment of warfare as a barbarism that must be rooted out by mankind. To others it is a glamorous love story. To still others it is a shadow-projection of the inner workings of a remorseful man's soul. And there are many more facets, each of them fascinating, for the edification of those who behold this romantic-dramatic gem.

All three of the leading actors, Phillips Holmes, Nancy Carroll and Lionel Barrymore, do splendid characterizations. They are supported with enthusiastic gusto by Lucien Littlefield and ZaSu Pitts in comedy roles; and by Emma Dunn, Frank Sheridan and Tom Douglas.

LOCAL TEAM DRUBBED BY ST. MARY'S

Tawas City was the victim of a severe drubbing last Sunday at the local athletic field when the St. Mary's aggregation of Alpena swamped them by a score of 14 to 4.

The locals had managed, until the fifth inning, to hold a 3-2 lead as the result of timely hitting and good fielding. At this stage of the game the fine support given Boudler, the locals' hurler, ended abruptly and St. Mary's took advantage thereof to secure eight runs in the fifth and sixth frames. Boudler was relieved by Swartz during the sixth, but the latter's offerings, too, were hammered hard by Alpena for eight hits during the remainder of the contest.

Tawas City was extremely erratic, making eight miscues, and thereby ruined an otherwise fine pitching performance by Boudler. Boudler whiffed seven men during the time he was on the mound, Swartz struck out six, while nine locals were retired by the strike out route by the three Alpena pitchers.

Next Sunday the locals will engage the Turner nine at Turner.

"MURDERS IN THE RUE MORGUE" COMING TO STATE
One of the strangest motion pictures ever shown is Edgar Allan Poe's "Murders in the Rue Morgue," the Universal drama which will be shown Friday and Saturday of this week at the State Theatre.

In the gruesome weirdness of its story, and in the exciting events which follow one another in quick succession, this screen play constitutes a contribution to the screen which is nothing short of remarkable. Its power to work on the emotions of an audience is simply terrific, and it will be many a day before its like is seen again. It literally "out-Draculas Dracula," and this comparison is particularly appropriate since Bela Lugosi, who played the title role of "Dracula," is also seen as the menacing Dr. Miracle of "Murders in the Rue Morgue."

Lugosi's characterization is full of sinister power, and stamps him as a past master of roles which call for the ultimate in villainy. The leading feminine role is played by Sidney Fox, a tiny miss whose beauty and ability make her an ideal choice for the part. These two characters are outstanding in the picture, while an important role is also played by Leon Wycoff, who makes his screen debut in "Murders in the Rue Morgue."

"Murders in the Rue Morgue" is a picture you will not want to miss.

HEALTH BOARD Holds Meeting At Tawas City
The District Board of Health met with the staff of Consolidated Health Department No. 2 at the Lakeside Tavern in Tawas City, Tuesday, July 12th. The following members of the board were present: Dr. A. R. Miller, Harrisville; C. L. McLean, Tawas City; Miss M. E. Worden, Tawas City; E. Crego, Hale; H. S. Karcher, Rse City; and H. H. Spellman and R. Scott, staff nurses for the counties of Iosco, Alcona-Oscoda, and Cgemaw, respectively.

Luncheon was served at one o'clock, after which Chairman Karcher called the meeting to order. The medical officer gave a report of the health department's activities for the period of January 1st to June 30th. The staff dentist reviewed the dental program for the first half of 1932.

All board members present commented on the work of the health department and several suggestions were made for bettering the service.

It was moved and seconded that the next board meeting be held at Mio in October.

Delegates discussed the Higgins Lake project and action was taken toward its development. A large tract of land at that lake was decided about ten years ago to the Legion of the Eighth and Tenth Districts.

Peter Mason was re-elected committee man, with Harry Pelton of East Tawas as alternate. Daniel J. Baker of Bay City was elected secretary-treasurer.

A band concert, athletic events for the children, with prizes furnished by Tawas businessmen and a tug of war between East Tawas and the 10th district furnished entertainment for the afternoon. The meeting ended with a parade at the fair grounds and through East Tawas and Tawas City. The Midland Post Drum and Bugle Corps was a special feature of the parade.

While it was a scorching day, the event proved very enjoyable. In addition to about 250 Legionnaires there were at least 1500 people from Tawas and the surrounding country or the grounds.

Department Commander Leslie F. Kefgen, flew from Battle Creek to Bay City and motored here to attend the convention.

The boat driven by Theodore Trudell made first place in the outboard motor race held Sunday afternoon on Tawas bay. The race was three six miles laps. The following entered boats: H. J. Keiser, Theodore Trudell, Waldo Leslie, Roy DePetty and Lloyd Cooper. Friday and Saturday evenings' races were spoiled by thieves stealing motors from the boats belonging to H. J. Keiser, M. H. Barnes and Newton Bowen last Thursday night. M. H. Barnes' boat house was completely stripped of anything of value which could be moved, including life preservers, tools, water pump oil tank and gasoline. About $600.00 worth of property was taken.

It is being planned to have an outboard motor boat race here each week this summer.

DINKELSBUHL CELEBRATES

A Dinkelsbühl Parade.

(Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)—WNU Service.

DINKELSBUHL, quaint Bavarian town, is donning holiday attire. This summer it will celebrate the three hundredth anniversary of the raising of the siege of King Gustavus Adolphus' Swedish army, during the Thirty Years' war. Dinkelsbühl is one of Bavaria's medieval gems. Visitors to Bavaria, however, have heeded the call of its larger sister communities—Nuremberg, Rothenburg and Nordlingen—but have passed Dinkelsbühl by. Approaching Dinkelsbühl from across the lovely valley through which the tiny Wörnitz carries its waters to the rushing Danube, the traveler beholds a living fairy-tale town—a vision from the long-gone Middle Ages. Crossing a bridge over the broad, lily-padded moat which was once the city's first line of defense and entering through one of the tower gates, it would occasion little surprise to be challenged brusquely by some ancient sentinel in helmet and coat of mail. However, once within the town, the traveler finds a fascinating picture of serenity.

Thurges for speed has not reached Dinkelsbühl; streets still echo to the clatter and clump of horses and oxen. People live placidly, farming the fertile fields of the surrounding valley or conducting the same small enterprises which engaged the attention of generations of their forebears. There is no air of dilapidation about the place. Everything is incredibly old but extremely well preserved. Tradition is hallowed and kept alive here, and changes that would alter the medieval characteristics of the city are not tolerated. The council sees to it that when repairs have to be made on the houses they are carried out in such a manner as to preserve the original form, and no shrieking signs may be displayed.

The main streets of the city radiate toward the cardinal points from a central plaza and are lined with shops and with fine old patrician houses. Time-mellowed buildings, gabled and timbered, rest cozily against each other, while occasionally an architectural giant rears its steep-sided roof above the others, proclaiming to all comers its sturdy old age. Branching off from the main thoroughfare are narrow, winding lanes and side streets which abound in treasures of medieval artistry. Exquisite examples of frame and stucco building, intricate, hand-forged iron rails and gratings, and beautiful, secluded courts and gardens await the explorer of these enchanting byways.

Old Trades Survive.

Trades that are dying out in other places still exist in Dinkelsbühl. Coopers make barrels by hand in the open air. Coppersmiths hammer out pots and kettles, baking tins, and other utensils, for copper in the kitchen is still held in high esteem in the small cities and in country districts, and one of the few surviving pewter molders still presses his trade here.

Everywhere, hanging over the doorways, are wonderfully executed wrought-iron signs indicative of the activities carried on within. One might infer that at some time in Dinkelsbühl's history the guild of smiths was a power within the town. At any rate, the signs lead to the streets over which they swing a note of peculiar interest. As in so many South German towns, the houses are for the most part gaily painted. The color combinations are perhaps a bit startling, but they are always effective.

And flowers vie for color supremacy with the brightly tinted houses. No nook or cranny where a plant might grow has been overlooked. Masses of vines cover the garden walls, while nearly every house has its window boxes filled with petunias, geraniums, and other gay blooms. Wells and fountains are ringed about with the same living colors.

Overshadowing the market place, as indeed it overshadows everything else in the city, is the Church of Saint George, built during the latter part of the fifteenth century, when Dinkelsbühl was at the height of its influence. To the 5,000 inhabitants it represents something more than a place of worship. It is an expression of all the civic pride and aspirations of the sturdy old burghers who directed its erection. And right well they succeeded, for Saint George's is perhaps the finest late Gothic church in southern Germany. The design and execution of the structure were placed in the able hands of the master architect Nikolaus Eseler von Alzei. At the same time that he received this commission the city fathers of nearby Nordlingen engaged him to build their cathedral. But Nordlingers had just reason to complain of their bargain, for they saw little of the great artist. His heart was in the work at Dinkelsbühl, and there he spent most of his time. Saint George's was under construction for nearly half a century, and when the time came to build the great tower planned for it, funds were not available. The master's vision was never completely realized, but the stamp of his greatness abides in the interior with its soaring arched ceiling.

Dinkelsbühl was founded long before the Normans conquered England. More than a thousand years ago a group of Franconian peasant warriors had settled on an elevation in the Wörnitz valley. There, when not engaged in fighting for their existence against raiding Franks or Magyars, they raised grain. About the year 928, at the command of Emperor Heinrich the First, walls were erected around the tiny settlement, and there came into being a fortified city destined to withstand the strifes and intrigues of a millennium and to play an important role in the pageant of history which those ten centuries were to unfold.

Origin of City's Name.

There is division of opinion as to the origin of the city's name. Some authorities claim the early Franconian settlement was on a low hill (buhel) belonging to a man named Dinko or Tinko. Thus Dinkelsbühl. Others assert that the chief crop of the locality gave the city its name, and that it means wheat (Dinkel) hill (Buhel). However the city came by its name, it prospered. The location was a favored one, easy of defense, and on a much-frequented route from the old Roman empire into Germany. As a well fortified city, Dinkelsbühl offered safety for travelers and became a popular stopping place for those who traversed the Roman Road.

From the beginning it belonged to the Imperial Family, and its government passed by gift or grant or sale to various South German nobles. The famous Frederick Barbarossa intended at one time to give the city as a wedding present to his son Konrad, Duke of Rothenburg, but his plans miscarried, and nearly two centuries later, in 1351, Emperor Karl IV granted it as an hereditary feudal tenure to the prince of Oettingen. That same year the citizens bought the nobleman's rights from him in perpetuity and Dinkelsbühl began its career as a "free city."

Many of the emperors of the Holy Roman empire visited Dinkelsbühl and whenever one came there was a ceremonious reception on the market square, at which the council presented to the emperor and his entourage the "customary" gifts. What these amounted to is shown by a record in the municipal archives dealing with a visit of Emperor Maximilian II on June 12, 1570.

The Dinkelsbühlers have been known for centuries as "Die Blausieder," "the blue cookers." A favorite method of serving carp, trout, and certain other fish in Germany is "blue cooked"—that is, boiled in water to which a little vinegar has been added. The process is called "blausieden," and those who do the "blue boiling" are "Blausieder."

In the early Middle Ages the authorities of Dinkelsbühl succeeded in catching a robber and murderer who had been carrying on his gruesome occupation for a long time. A special session of the council was called on a hot summer afternoon to decide what punishment to mete out to him. One of the councilmen, who was a trifle deaf, went to sleep during the debate and dreamed that his cook was about to prepare a fine carp for him. When the time came for him to vote on the question before the council, a fellow member poked him in the ribs and asked:

"Hannes, what do you say we shall do with our robber?"

Hannes, rudely awakened from his dream, thought it was his cook, asking about the carp.

"Blausieden!" (Boil him blue), he answered.

The Scale of Raises for Suit Bids of One

THE rule that when in supporting partner's suit bid your hand contains two short suits you should count only one of them, the shorter, and ignore the second, prevents overvaluation.

A short suit takes on increasing value if it has been previously bid by your partner. A short suit also has slightly more value with three trumps if one of these is an ace or a king.

But it must be particularly noted that ruffing tricks are not increased in value by the presence of more than four trumps in the dummy hand.

In raising your partner's bid suit, count the sum total of your playing tricks in trumps, and in long and short side suits with their honor-values. Then subtract three tricks (expected by partner) and give one raise for each trick left over. That is, with four assisting tricks, raise once; with five assisting tricks, raise twice, etc. In raising your partner's bid, always show at once the full value of your support, stopping only at a game contract unless you have reason to look for a slam.

An additional 1/2 trick (3/4 total) is sufficient for the first raise. Also when the next player passes after your partner's opening suit bid of one, it is imperative that you keep the bidding open. So, with no good alternative, you may raise the bid on only the 3 expected assisting tricks. But in this situation you will usually have some take-out which offers a better alternative.

Taking Out Partner's Suit Bid of One

When unable to support your partner's major suit, or wishing to take him out of a minor, look for a biddable suit. Holding any biddable suit, with a total of 1 1/2 honor-tricks in your hand, a regulation take-out of one over one is practically compulsory. When your take-out requires a bid of two, your suit should rarely be a four-carder. If the next player passes after your partner's original suit bid of one, if holding 1 1/2 honor-tricks, remember that you must keep the bid open, whenever possible, if not with a raise or a suit take-out, then with a take-out of one no trump.

A suit take-out of one over one may run as high as 2 1/2 honor-tricks so the original bidder, in his turn, must always be on the alert to keep such a take-out open unless every bit of his strength has already been declared.

Only when you hold 3 honor-tricks may your take-outs be "jumped," otherwise you should declare a bid just sufficient to cover your partner's opening. When you hold the 3 or more honor-tricks, which, in conjunction with the 2 1/2 shown by your partner's original bid, tell you that your partnership is in the game zone, you must be sure that the bidding will not be dropped until the promised game is reached. In taking out with a no trump bid, you would have to contract for the game immediately as there is no forcing take-out in no trumps. But with a suit bid, you may be assured that you will have another chance to declare yourself if you take out with a jump of one more than necessary.

It must be clearly understood that while the forcing take-out always indicates sufficient complementary honor-strength automatically to put your partnership in the game zone, it does not necessarily show a dominating suit.

The message of a forcing take-out reads something like this:

"Partner, this looks like a game hand. It may possibly be a slam. You must keep the bidding open in one of the following ways: (1st) Giving me a raise if you have support for my suit, (2nd) Rebidding your own suit if it is worth 4 tricks, (3rd) Naming a second suit if you have one, (4th) Covering my bid with just the required number of no trumps if you have nothing additional to show, or (5th) Jumping the no trump take-out if you have more strength. Don't worry about the outcome. I have another bid in reserve. Or if we cannot get together on a suit, our honor tricks are sufficient to see us through a game bid at no trumps."

Porpoise Joined Swimmer

While several hundred yards from New Brighton shore, near Christchurch, New Zealand, recently, a swimmer noticed that he had as a companion a seven-foot porpoise, which gambled about as playfully as its bulk would permit. As the man started for shore the porpoise accompanied him and rode the waves with an obvious relish. Schools of porpoises frequently appear near New Brighton, but it is seldom that a solitary visitor is seen, and it is still more uncommon for a porpoise to come near a human being. Usually they flee at first sight of a bather.

STEEL NOW BRIDGES FAMOUS EUPHRATES

Historic River Spanned by Modern Structure.

Washington.—The first steel highway bridge across the Euphrates river in upper Iraq is nearing completion some 40 miles west of Bagdad, according to news dispatches. The structure, which is one of the most important current engineering projects of the Near East, will be a link in the busy overland motor transport route that has grown up since the World War between Bagdad and Damascus.

Roads have been beaten out in the sands along the Euphrates by men and camels, horses and chariots for 50 centuries," says a National Geographic society bulletin. "Rigid bridges have played a minor part in this continuous traffic. Floating bridges have been strung across at half a dozen points; and at other places ferries are operated."

"Only the Nile has so venerable a record as the Euphrates and its companion river, the Tigris," continues the bulletin; "and even the Nile is less rich in historic incident. The Euphrates has been the boundary line of successive empires; along it have surged battles and invasions that have changed world history; besides it have grown some of the greatest cities that ever existed. To its valley can be traced the beginnings of many practices, arts and sciences that civilization cherishes today—sciences and practices as varied as astronomy and the drawing of bank drafts, geometry, calendar calculations, and mortgaging of real estate."

"The Euphrates rises in the Armenian Taurus mountains, little more than a hundred miles southeast of the Black sea. It flows for nearly 600 miles through Turkish territory and more than 200 miles through French controlled Syria before entering Iraq."

"In the vicinity of Bagdad (which is on the Tigris) the Euphrates approaches to within 20 miles of its great companion river. The two streams then gradually diverge, to unite 200 miles farther down. The oval territory inclosed by these watery arms is the famed Sumerian plain, where, so far as written records disclose, the earth's first cities came into being."

"Where the Euphrates and Tigris approach above Bagdad, the former is 16 feet higher than the latter. Irrigation canals taken from the Euphrates can therefore be led across the plain and the drainage allowed to enter the Tigris. The Sumerians and their successors discovered this ideal situation scores of centuries ago and constructed numerous canals, developing the region into a fertile garden. Farther down stream the Euphrates drops to a lower level, and the canal procedure was reversed. Everywhere the country was gridironed with canals.

"As succeeding generations developed skill in hydraulic engineering, huge works were constructed. One canal paralleling the Euphrates from Hit to the Persian gulf was 480 miles long. It was probably the longest canal ever constructed. An ancient canal connecting the Euphrates and Tigris near Bagdad was navigable by steamers 60 years ago, but has since silted. "The highly developed canal system made Mesopotamia (the land between the rivers) prosperous for millenniums under various governments. Even after the Moslems took possession much of the vast system was preserved. But the Mongol invasion in 1256 brought ruin. Head works and embankments were destroyed, and the plains were turned into alternate stretches of desert and swamp. It is in this condition that much of the land along the lower Euphrates is to be found today. Certain areas are well watered and well drained."

"Fifty miles after passing close to Bagdad, the Euphrates river runs beside the ruins of Babylon. Mounds of bricks and broken walls exposed by the work of archeologists cover more than 50 square miles, and mark the place where one of the greatest of the world's ancient cities thrived with life 2,500 years and more ago. At the height of its power and wealth Babylon numbered its inhabitants by the millions. On the southern portion of the site of Babylon is the modern town of Hilla, with busy bazaars among date groves and gardens."

"After the Euphrates and Tigris unite, the combined stream is known as the Shatt-al-Arab, which flows into the Persian gulf. Sixty miles up the Shatt-al-Arab is Basra, the chief port of Iraq. The river harbor has a depth of 17 feet at low tide. From Basra a railway extends to Bagdad and on to Mosul. There are no rails between

TIGERS GET WEBB

Earl Webb, hard-hitting outfielder of the Boston Red Sox, came to the Detroit Tigers in a trade that sent Roy Johnson and Dale Alexander to the Boston team. Webb, whose record of 67 doubles last year broke all records, is expected to bolster the Bengals' attack very materially. He will play in right field.

Mosul and Nisibin, on the Turk-Syrian border, but a motor service closes the gap; and it is now possible to buy a through ticket from Paris to Bagdad or Basra. When Bagdad was at its zenith under the caliphs, Basra was the busiest port of the East and had several hundred thousand inhabitants. The present population is about 85,000.

"The Euphrates and the Tigris have built the fertile Sumerian plain with their silt. The delta advances into the Persian gulf about 60 feet a year. In the past 3,000 years all the land between the present meeting place of the rivers and the sea has been contributed. At the end of the most recent Ice age the Euphrates, according to geological estimates, entered the sea west of the site of Bagdad, more than 400 miles from the Persian gulf."

It Takes $10,000,000 to Make One Dollar Bill

Washington.—It has just taken the government $10,000,000 to make a $1 bill.

Proof of this startling fact may be found at the bureau of printing and engraving where a dollar bill, 12 feet long and 5 1/2 feet wide is nearing completion.

The largest piece of currency ever made by the government, it will be used for exhibition purposes here and at the World's fair in Chicago next year.

About $10,000,000 worth of macerated pulp from old money was used in making the mammoth bill.

Visitors Find Reno Is Much Like Average American City

Reno, Nev.—Although distinctive in many respects, Reno probably is the victim of more misapprehensions than any city of similar size on earth. Divorce seekers, coming here, are invariably surprised. Many have resolved not to do the silly things they think customary here only to learn after arrival that the acts are not customary after all.

The old story of divorcees kissing the pillars of the Washoe county courthouse after receiving a final decree is typical. A long time ago a photographer with need of an unusual picture posed a girl kissing the marble post and since then common belief has had it that the farewell smack on a shaft of cold stone is expected.

As a matter of fact, the courthouse pillar never has been kissed except as a stunt arranged by a photographer. Similar is the tale of divorcees standing on the "Bridge of Sighs," across the rushing Truckee river, which passes through town, and tossing their wedding rings into the clear icy waters. Maybe something like that happened once but most observers in America's "Divorce Capital" doubt it.

A bit of weight was added to the ring story when a group of small boys decided to capitalize on the curiosity of tourists. The lads bought a quantity of cheap rings and then, in front of tourists plunged into the Truckee. After stalling around a bit they came up with an assertedly "discarded wedding ring."

Cat Is Freed After Two Weeks of Imprisonment

Berkeley, Calif.—The mystery of Berkeley's "ghost cat," whose plaintive meows came from everywhere and nowhere, has been solved.

William Sharpe discovered the "ghost," just a shabby cat of no particular ancestry, entombed in an old culvert. Upon investigation Sharpe found street department workmen had sealed up an old culvert at both ends, imprisoning the cat.

Emergency crews broke open the concrete pipe and freed the "ghost" after two weeks' captivity.

The DAIRY

LOWER PRICES IN SURPLUS OF COWS

New York Dairy Official Is Pessimistic.

"If we do not have another drought this summer, the manufacture of dairy products will increase, and thus lower the farmers' return," said H. A. Ross, of the Borden company, at Cornell university's farm and home week. "The farmer has not heeded the trend in the supply of cows and today is facing the situation of having 11.3 per cent more cows than in 1929."

Doctor Ross predicts, however, no material reduction in the number of cows, and perhaps even a slight increase. "I cannot blame the farmer for not cutting his herd," he said, "because of the overhead expenses and the lowered cost of feed. But the situation today is serious. Butter is now going into storage rather than being drawn from storage."

Many people seem to think that with the present lowered prices, demand will increase. Doctor Ross indicated, however, that such might not be the case. He estimates that the buying power of the people is about one-half of that in 1929. This is due to both the unemployment situation and decreased wages of those who are working.

In New York state the farmers are facing the situation of store sales of milk as contrasted with route sales. If more milk is sold in stores, the farmer will receive less for his investment. He said that the basic situation could not be remedied now but that the farmer could help by culling his herd and aiding the control of store sales.

Ration That "Fills Bill" in Variety of Proteins

Since some proteins are particularly rich in some amino acids while others may furnish more of some others, one protein may supplement another. We know that every feed a cow eats, whether roughage or grain, contains some protein and different proteins.

It has been shown that the protein of alfalfa or legume hays supplements those of silage and grains. The protein of the high protein feeds supplement those of the grains. There is little supplementary value between the cereal grains.

From this Iowa experiment concludes that where a cow is getting a ration consisting of plenty of legume hay, silage, and a grain mixture of 10-12 per cent digestible protein, her demand for protein variety is fairly well met. With mixed hay, the grain mixture should contain from 14 to 16 per cent digestible protein, while with non-legume hay it should contain 16 to 20 per cent digestible protein.—Hoard's Dairyman.

Why Milk Tests Vary

Milk tests vary from day to day due to perfectly normal factors, state specialists at New York State college, who have tested samples of Holstein and Jersey milk to determine effects of sampling on fat tests. Some of the factors are: Advancement of the lactation period of the cows, which means more fat in the milk; the amount of exercise the herd receives; completeness of milking; feeding practices; age of the cows; the breed; individual difference of the cows; the seasonal changes with higher tests when the temperatures are low and lower tests when temperatures are high during the heat of summer. In New York state two testers working independently will check within 0.1 per cent in 60 per cent of the samples they test. The Babcock test is not expected to give greater accuracy than this.

Methods of sampling have been held responsible for daily variations, and the recent investigation indicates the reasons why tests may vary even though all sampling is done uniformly.—Prairie Farmer.

Keeping Calves Healthy

Dirty feeding pails are often the contributing cause of an outbreak of common scours in calves. Avoid this by scalding the pails after each feeding. Allow the sun to shine on them during the day. Some dairymen keep a separate pail for each calf. Over-feeding is another frequent cause of scours. Feed around one pound of milk for each ten pounds of live weight, and during the first few days give the calf several feeds per day. The milk fed can be gradually increased with growth until the animal is getting around two to two and one-half gallons of skim milk per day. Begin giving the calf some ground grain or other concentrate as soon as it will eat.—Wallace's Farmer.

Tests for Mastitis

Tests for the presence of mastitis in dairy cows was one of a number of features of an exhibit at a group of dairy meetings held in Syracuse, N. Y., T. L. exhibit was prepared by the experimental station and the college of agriculture, and was of much interest to the various cattle breed associations, as well as to the State Dairy-men's association. Mastitis has long been a baffling malady in dairy herds and much attention is being given to its detection and treatment.—Exchange.

CHILDREN'S STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

The reckless tongue is quite the worst of all the things I know. So watch your tongue and guard your tongue, and let your tongue be slow.

A QUICK tongue is apt to be a reckless tongue, and a reckless tongue is one that says things without stopping to think if they be true or of what harm they may do by being repeated. The tongues of some people seem to be reckless all the time. Gossipy tongues almost always are reckless. Other tongues become reckless when their owners lose their tempers. It was this way with the tongue of Longlegs the Heron that beautiful summer day. Longlegs lost his temper and then he said things which he wouldn't have said if he had stopped to think.

You see Longlegs was very hungry and he waited patiently for a long, long time for his breakfast. You know Longlegs is a fisherman, and he is one of those who wait for their meals to come to them instead of going after them. Little Joe Otter is a fisherman, but he is the other kind. He is such a famous swimmer that he can chase and catch fish. Longlegs isn't a swimmer at all, so he has to wait for the fish to swim near enough to where he is standing for him to catch one by darting his long neck downward like lightning and snapping up the fish in his great spear-like bill.

So on this particular morning when Longlegs had waited and waited so patiently and at last a school of minnows had come swimming in almost within reach it had been more than he could stand to have Rattles the Kingfisher suddenly dart down and seize the biggest minnow Longlegs had counted as surely his, at the same time frightening away all the other minnows.

"You're a thief!" he screamed at Rattles. "You're a robber! That was my fish!"

Rattles the Kingfisher chuckled. It wasn't a pleasant chuckle to hear because Rattles hasn't a pleasant voice. In fact it is a very unpleasant voice. He didn't reply at once because he was too busy swallowing that big, fat minnow. It was so big that it stuck in his throat, and he had to twist and squirm and wriggle and gulp and gasp to get it down. But at last it was down. Then he looked across at longlegs and chuckled again.

"If it was yours why didn't you catch it?" he asked. "I didn't even know you were over there. Not that it would have made any difference," he added with another harsh chuckle, Rattles the Kingfisher Chuckled.

"For fish belong to whoever can catch them, and that fat minnow didn't belong to you because you hadn't caught it."

"It did too!" retorted Longlegs, and his voice was as harsh as Rattles' voice. "I was just going to catch it when you stole it. You're a thief, I tell you. I'm going to tell everybody that you're a thief. You stole my breakfast!"

Rattles chuckled again. You see, having that big fat minnow in his stomach he simply couldn't lose his temper. You know, temper is very largely a matter of an empty stomach. The stomach of Longlegs was empty and so his temper was very, very bad, while the stomach of Rattles was full, and so his temper was very, very good.

"Go, ahead! Go ahead. Longlegs!" said he. "You tell everybody that I'm a thief, and I'll tell everybody that you are a long-necked, long-necked, cross-grained, bad-tempered, lazy do-nothing, who waits for his meals to come to him instead of going after them. Everybody knows that I never stole anything in my life, and everybody knows that you are just what I have said you are. It is true I haven't many friends, but it is because I don't want them. But it is just as true that you haven't either. It is easy enough to call names, and I guess I can do that as well as you can. So go ahead. Calling me a thief doesn't make me one, and you know as well as I do that that minnow didn't belong to anybody until it was caught. Just to pay you for losing your temper, I'm going to stay right here by the Smiling Pool, and you ought to know, if you don't, that I can beat you fishing every time. If you'll take my advice you'll go over to the Big River. You'll fill your stomach sooner there, and then you'll feel better."

Longlegs opened his mouth for an angry retort, then closed it without saying a word. He knew that what Rattles said was true, and to tell the truth he was a wee bit ashamed. Finally he spread his big wings and flapped away in the direction of the Big River. Rattles the Kingfisher chuckled noisily. Then he fixed his bright eyes on the Smiling Pool to watch for minnows.

HALF A DOZEN SAUCES

A WELL made and appropriate sauce will take an ordinary meat dish out of its class, making it a real creation. The following are a few that are different:

Breton Beef Sauce.

Take one tablespoonful each of sugar, horseradish and made mustard, mix with four tablespoonfuls of vinegar.

Lamb Sauce.

Pour one-fourth cupful of boiling water over four tablespoonfuls of chopped mint leaves, let stand until cold, then add two tablespoonfuls of

FIRST-CHOICE cost no more?

GOODYEARS are first-choice G-rated first in quality by a nation-wide vote of more than 2 to 1.

Goodyears are best. The public says so—the public buys so! More people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind—and have for 17 years.

And as to Goodyear prices—they're as low as you'll pay even for an unknown or second-rate tire.

In a year when everyone's careful with money, don't take chances on tires.

You can get the best tires that ever came from the world's largest rubber factory—if you stick to this simple question:

Why buy any second-choice tire when FIRST-CHOICE costs no more?

IMPORTANCE OF BEING IMPORTANT

Matter of Moment, as You Look at It.

"The importance of being important is, it seems to me, too disturbingly impressive to the people who would like to be, or, at any rate, seem to be, important," said Mr. Cato Ninetails. "If course, there are people who are undoubtedly important, but it is not so much the result of their special efforts to be important as of a combination of circumstances and their individual talents. That is to say, they are not important merely because they want to be important, but because of the natural order of things. There are other people who are not important, but who seem to be important. I don't know whether this is merely the result of chance or is brought about by good management. Which ever it is, it seems to require no great effort by them, and they undoubtedly fool a great many people. Sometimes I suspect that they even fool themselves. There are still others of high ambition—or perhaps strong egotism—who notwithstanding their vast expenditure of effort, thought and imagination, are unable to make themselves seem important; and their persistence is a trial to their own nerves, and an irritation or, even worse, a bore to their acquaintances.

"Now, it seems to me that being important must be rather burdensome, and seeming to be important is even more so. On him who is important many things are loaded that, by rights, should be carried by other people, but with his peculiar talents I doubt that he finds oppressive a load that would crush most of the rest of us. Importance is his job in the world, and he is built to endure it. It is not likely that the burden of imitation importance—that is, that carried by the people who seem important—is nearly so heavy; added to the workaday pack of him who is important it is probable that it would hardly be noticed; but for the carriers it is sometimes so great that close observation shows that now and then they stagger under it for all their knack of maintaining misleading appearances. There is a hard life, but they like it because so many people think that they are important.

"My sympathy goes out to those who want to seem important, and can't. They strive so hard, and achieve so little. Nor do they ask much, for while they would undoubtedly like to be important, they would be fairly well content if they could just manage to seem important. Life with them must be a succession of disappointments, of trial and error, with error predominating. It seems to me that somebody whose oral flow and command of expression were equal to it should explain to them that they do not know when they are well off, for not being important is one of the easiest—if not the easiest—of life's assignments. He who is important pays for it with hard work, however equal to the task he may be; he who seems to be important pays for it with worry, whatever the degree of tranquility he may present to the world; he who fails in his efforts to seem important must find a bitter tang in all life's savors; on the other hand, he who is willing to leave the job of being important, or seeming important, to others is relieved of many of life's most arduous requirements. His responsibilities are lighter, for he does not, like the people who are important or who seem important, have to be all things to all men. It is his privilege to get out of the hurly burly for a contemplative period now and then, and thank his lucky stars that he has no aspirations that interfere with a quiet and comfortable life.

"What things do you regard as important nowadays?" I asked Buck. "How would I know?" he responded. "Why shouldn't you know?" "Only the historians of century hence will be able to tell what was important nowadays."—Indianapolis News.

Old Custom Retained

The letters "L. S." on legal documents are the abbreviation of Latin "locus signilli," meaning place for the seal. The Romans used to take off their signet rings and imprint their seals on all documents, and the present legal practice is a survival of that custom.

Slapped by "Her Majesty"

At the age of eighty-six a scientist and electrician won a fresh reputation by delivering one of the wittiest and most entertaining after-dinner speeches ever heard in the Savoy hotel, London, writes Henri Pickard in the Cincinnati Enquirer. This pioneer octogenarian was Col. C. E. Crompton, the Faraday medalist of 1922, who was accorded a complimentary dinner by admirers, friends and colleagues.

In a voice that could easily be heard throughout the large hall, Colonel Crompton acknowledged the compliments paid him by telling some amusing stories of his early scientific days. "I am about the only person who has ever been slapped by such a model of dignity as Queen Victoria," he declared. "That happened in '81 or '82, when I introduced into Windsor castle the type of lighting which you see in this room today. Of course, it is common now, but at that time it was a novelty.

"Her Majesty said she had never seen anything like it before and promptly slapped my face.

"But when other people admired the light she was very fair about it. When someone wanted to introduce me later Queen Victoria waved him aside with the remark: 'This young man had the cheek to have his own way, and his own way happened to be right.'"

THE STORY

Six bandits hold up the steamer, Midnight Sun, on the Mackenzie, kill Jimmy Montgomery, and escape with gold dust and furs. At the Mounted Police post at Fort Endurance, Sgt. Alan Baker disputes with his incompetent superior, Inspector Haskell, regarding plans for the capture of the bandits. Baker starts out in the police launch with five men. At the MacMillan trading post, Joyce MacMillan is thrilled at the arrival of the police launch. She had expected to marry Baker, and had been stunned at the news that he was to marry Elizabeth Spaulding. Stolen furs are found on the MacMillan place and evidence points to Joyce's father. Alan leads his expedition up the big Alouka. Compelled by Haskell's foolish orders to divide the party, Alan falls to capture the bandits, and returns to Fort Endurance. Haskell blames him for the failure and Alan is allowed to buy out of the Mounted on condition that he absolve Haskell from blame. Alan starts out of the country in a motor canoe.

CHAPTER VI—Continued

The exhaustion that had drained her had left her very quiet of mind. She could think clearly, in thoughts precise and rational.

You fought this battle once, Joyce, and you won it; and then you handed the sword back to your enemy and gave him power over you again. When Bill first told you last fall of Alan's engagement—do you remember the heartbreak of those weeks, Joyce? You finally rose above it, you conquered. But then you permitted yourself to hope again. When Alan merely came past here on a patrol, after staying away from you all winter, you went wild with hope.

Last night Bill came to you once again; and after he left, you collapsed there on that rock. Joyce, don't lay yourself open to agony such as that. You must forget Alan Baker. You must, you must! You cannot turn this way or that; you cannot evade it; you must walk that path. You must never again look back. You have been punished for looking back, and your punishment has been terrible. In self-preservation you must forget Alan Baker.

As she lay there gazing up at Alan's picture and seeing her course so clearly, it seemed to Joyce that if she could destroy his image there on the dresser, if only she had the courage to do that, it would be a symbol of destroying his image in her heart.

After a little while she got up from the bed; and going over to the dresser, began taking out of it all of Alan's letters to her. They dated back across six years, addressed to her here, at her college, at Ottawa—all of them carefully treasured. Pack by pack they went into the stove.

There was good augury for Joyce in the firm and unhesitant way she set about burning them.

He had given her more than a few presents: a costly old-fashioned lavalliere which had been his mother's; a miniature hope chest of India-silk kerchiefs which had been the envy of her college friends; a gold-and-ivory hunting knife; a wrist watch for graduation present, and a dozen less expensive gifts. Joyce laid aside the lavalliere to send to Elizabeth; but the other gifts she destroyed by fire.

She took his picture from the dresser, and burned it.

Afterwards she sat by the table writing a long letter to her bureau chief in Ottawa, telling him frankly about her father, her hope to see her father vindicated and then to bring him over to Ottawa with her; and asking him if his former promise of a position whenever she wished to return was still good.

At noon, hours later, when old Pence looked in, he was pleased to find her plunged into a dreamless sleep. The secret worry he had noted on her face this last week seemed to have gone now. Her features were pale, but there was a look of peace on them, of some strange spiritual peace at heart.

CHAPTER VII

By Lone Camp Fires

That gray dawn when he said goodbye to Joyce at Fort Endurance, Baker set off alone on a journey of a thousand miles. Instead of heading northeast toward the Thal-Azza where the bandits were hiding, he turned his canoe prow directly away from them and started south, up the Mackenzie. He did not delude himself about his plan. It was little better than a desperate gamble, and he knew it. But the usual man-hunting methods were useless against those criminals; and his plan was the last thing in the world they would be expecting.

By traveling in his own motor canoe, depending entirely on his own resources, he expected to cut ten days from the fastest time of the fur-company boats.

In those lonely hours, as he stared in reverie at the shimmering pine hills, it was borne in upon Alan that he had forever cut himself off from life here in this North country. He felt as though he had been torn up by the roots. The system he had founded at Fort Endurance had been his own creation. He had been a builder in his own right. From the ground up, Fort Endurance belonged to him. He and Curt and Jimmy had cut the very timber for barracks and cabins. The work had been his particular work in life. "Sergeant Baker of Endurance" stood for something. There was but one such man in the Dominion. Now he was cut off from it, an alien of lost identity, never to be a part of it, the guiding genius of it, again.

On the third day he met a lone-fre Indian, a young Chipewyan wandering aimlessly, with some secret personal tragedy preying on him. Alan took him into the motor canoe, and together they traveled on. Hardly speaking a dozen words a day, they worked on up the Mackenzie, sleeping by turns, spelling each other at the motor. Raising a blanket sail to a northeast wind, they scudded across the island-dotted lake from Resolution, and whipped up the Quatre Fourches delta toward Forst Smith.

Watching the dim clouded stars above him, Alan looked steadily at the two girls who had loomed so large upon his manhood. In this last week a cataclysm had happened in his life, breaking into the old order, blasting the even routine of week and month and season. It had opened his eyes to a deeper way than ever before to the preciousness of his intimacy with Joyce, to the priceless quality of their former comradeship. Now, when it was irrecusable, he was asking himself whether the motive and powerful circumstance which had actuated him were humanly justifiable. Had not he and Joyce had a right to happiness? Had he, in his stern sacrifice, been blind to the needs of the human heart?

Tired out by days of incessant travel, he fell asleep at last, and dreamed that in his cabin it had been Joyce, not Elizabeth, whose arm had been around him and who was waiting for him when this lone adventure should be ended.

At Fort Smith the heavy rains had rendered the sixteen-mile portage impossible to teams and to the motor trucks which plied that stretch. Alan dared not wait; his days were too precious. In his decision to go on, his young Chipewyan friend stuck with him. Shouldering their craft, they plodded stoically across that slippery, red-clay stretch to Fitzgerald.

Among the north-bound crowd waiting there, he spotted the tall, slightly stooped figure of Superintendent Williamson, who was going north to inspect the down-river posts. The superintendent was the last person in the world whom Alan wanted to meet. His first superior officer when he graduated from the "Awkward Squad," Williamson had been good to him and taken a fatherly interest in his brilliant work. What would he say when he learned that his protegee had bought out and deserted the Force?

"Your commission wasn't forthcoming, so you quit! Your loyalty to our work went no deeper than that!" In his eyes a quitter was worse than a gross incompetent.

Passing by, ten feet away, Williamson merely nodded slightly and said, "Good luck, Baker."

Alan understood. He thought: "In civilian clothes, so far away from Endurance. . . . He thinks I'm on some detective detail. Good Lord, when he finds I'm out, bought out—!"

Williamson's esteem was a precious thing to Alan, as precious as a father's. An impulse swept him to talk with the superintendent and tell him the whole sorry story. But there was the matter of that signed affidavit. Alan refused to go back on that; and even if he did he would literally be branding himself a liar. What did his personal feud with Haskell matter now? He was out of the Mounted. And the superintendent would try to stop his venture if he heard, for it was beyond the law.

He allowed Williamson to go past. Setting their boat to water, he and the young Chipewyan hurried on to the great delta-mouth of the Peace, where they caught up with a steamer going on to McMurray. The young Indian wanted to turn west to the Rockies and see the Land of Ice Mountains. Giving him the motor canoe and the outfit, Alan shook hands, said Klahowya, and went aboard the boat.

In his cabin, with the steamer throbbing on toward Steel-End, Alan wondered what Joyce's reaction would be if he should go to her and frankly tell her about that tragic incident in his life which had brought about his engagement to Elizabeth. Joyce would understand his motive. She would no longer think he'd acted of his own free will. Perhaps if she knew this truth, she might allow him to resume their old intimacy. . . . But Elizabeth, what of her? She was waiting, waiting there at Endurance, for him to marry her. In honor and faith he could not break away now. That secret and powerful circumstance still bound him and would bind him to her all his life.

A half-mile up in the fleecy clouds, up above the pretty city of Edmonton, Mr. "Buzzard" Featherof was dropping out toy parachutes carrying free cakes and printed matter of the E-Z Kleen Soap and Washing Powder Company, Ltd.

He was tired, stiff, hungry and indescribably bored.

During the late war Buzzard had knocked an assorted number of Fokkers, Taubers and Albatrosses out of the air; had come down himself a couple of times rather precipitately; and once, commanding a five-plane circus, had brought down a Super-Zeppelin in the Channel after it had dropped its "eggs" in cabbage patches around darkened London.

Since his return to Canada, Buzzard had taken a fling at aerial map-making in British Columbia; had worked a season with the Manitoba Fire Prevention as a "smoke hawk"; had bombed papier-mache French chateaux down amid the flowers and climate of Los Angeles.

Recently, tired of working for other folk, he had raked together some money and brought a machine of his own, which he now was flying.

It was a queer nameless contraption, this monoplane of his—an assemblage of piano wire, canvas, spruce and iron, held together by luck and Buzzard's wizardry at flying. It had originally been a White Speedair with "Jenny" engine, but he had re-doped the fabric and put in a second-hand Whirlwind and equipped it with third-hand under-gear of the float-wheel type, and overhauled it generally till little of the original machine remained. Only his warm friendship with the aviation inspector kept it from being junked. But somehow—and this is the rock-bottom test of any flying machine—it had never yet come down before Buzzard wanted it to. And it did have speed; anything lacking speed would never have satisfied him. Such as it was, it was his very own; and no mother was ever prouder of a cross-eyed, snaggle-toothed child than Buzzard was of his White Speedair.

He was, however, ambitious to get a big new De Havilland, so that he could safely take up a girl down in Kamloops and carry her along with him on his airy path of life. But with no advertising or big company to back him, Buzzard had found this free-lance work to be tough sledding. Had found difficulty keeping up repairs on his old machine, let alone getting a new one. Jobs were sheer accidents. Except for the faint possibility of murdering some more grasshoppers over near High Hat, the work he was finishing this noon was the last thing in sight.

As he heaved onboard the last of the E-Z Kleen Soap and printed matter, and headed back for the landing field, he yawned and swore: "The devil with this peace-time stuff! Oh Lord, I wish they'd bring on another unpleasantness."

It was in some such frame of mind, as he landed and crawled out of the cockpit, that he saw a tall lanky individual, in lace boots, khaki trousers, jacket and gray hat, get out of a waiting taxi and saunter toward him.

The stranger, as he came up, looked at the machine with that peculiar respectful gaze of a person who has never flown in one.

Buzzard thought, "If that fellow asks me to take him for a joy ride, I'll murder him with a monkey-wrench!" A moment later, as he got a closer look at that hard purposive face, he decided: "No, he's not that kind. Looks like some timber duke. Maybe wants me to fly him out to his limit. Thirty-dollar job—damn it!"

The stranger came on, "Hello."

Buzzard answered tartly, "Hello yourself."

The stranger paid no attention to the brusque reply. Instead he reached out his hand. It was a good-looking hand, big, calloused, fingers like iron bars.

"Name's Baker," he introduced himself. "Alan Baker."

Buzzard partly thawed. This fellow Baker looked to be somebody. His slow smile was mighty fetching; his clear intelligent eyes were kindly, warm, friendly.

"Glad to know you, Baker. Mine's Featherof—James Arbutnot Featherof."

"Good gracious! All that? But what do people call you?"

They both grinned. "They call me 'Buzzard.' Wear red helmet; never flop my wings."

Size of Pythons

Pythons have been known, in several parts of the world where they exist, to reach a length of 30 feet, and a Swedish naturalist found that in Borneo the natives believed they sometimes exceeded this. There is good reason to suppose that occasional pythons may become 35 feet long.

POULTRY

INFERIOR EGG NOT SOUGHT BY BUYERS

High Quality Production Is Demanded.

(By H. H. ALP, Poultry Extension Specialist, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois—WNU Service.)

Fertile eggs caused by keeping roosters in the flocks during the warm summer months have been mainly responsible for bad egg losses which in 1930 cost poultrymen of the state an estimated $5,000,000. In addition to eliminating roosters, if farm flock owners would adopt a few practical and simple practices, much of the poor quality of Illinois eggs could be overcome and market demands for eggs from this state improved.

Eggs should be gathered twice daily or, better still, three times daily in hot weather. Frequent gathering helps prevent damage by heat or cold; it saves cracking and breaking of eggs and it reduces the proportion of dirty eggs.

Before being cased, eggs should be cooled, because egg cases, pads and fillers hold in any heat that already is in the eggs. The cases of eggs should be held in a cool place, a temperature of 32 to 60 degrees being best. On most farms the cellar is the best place available. It is satisfactory for short storage periods if it is free from strong odors and not too damp.

Eggs will keep better and will be easier to sell if they are kept clean. Changing the floor litter and nesting material before it is too badly spoiled helps to keep eggs clean. Dropping boards or, better still, wire-covered dropping boards also help. Crowded quarters are a common cause of dirty eggs. There should be 3½ to 4 square feet of floor space for each hen. A shortage of nests also causes broken and dirty eggs and may lead to the habits of egg eating and of laying eggs on the floor. There should be one nest for each five hens.

Feed Mixtures on Which Chickens Will Thrive

A good mash feed for chicks, when milk is the only drink, is mixed as follows: 150 pounds of ground yellow corn, 100 pounds of wheat bran, 100 pounds of oat flour, 75 pounds of wheat shorts or middlings and 50 pounds of high-grade meat scrap.

When the chicks do not have access to green leafy feed, five pounds of alfalfa leaf meal should be added to each 100 pounds of the mash, says the Dakota Farmer. If meat and bone scrap are not used, three pounds of bone meal should be included to each 100 pounds of mash. One pound of sifted table salt and one pint of high-grade cod-liver oil per 100 pounds of the mash should be mixed in. The cod-liver oil should be mixed with the bran first. Chick-size oyster shell, calcite or high-grade limestone should also be kept available.

Successful Pullet Raising

Eighty March pullets laid 1,150 eggs in 90 days from October 18 to November 16 for Anna Corrigan, Dakota county, Minnesota.

During that period she fed 300 pounds of commercial egg mash. Scratch feed was composed of two bushels barley and one and a quarter bushels wheat. With alfalfa leaves, oyster shells and three pints of cod-liver oil, feed cost $9.94 and income was $31.68, an average of 33 cents a dozen, or 3 cents above market price. This left a net return of $21.74 or 27 cents a pullet.—Capper's Farmer.

Mash and Milk

Mixing a part of the dry mash with milk until it is moistened to a crumbly state greatly increases the palatability of the poultry ration. Experiments at Ohio State university with chickens of the same breed kept under exactly the same conditions and fed the same rations, with the exception that a part of the ration was fed wet in one case and in the other case all of the ration was dry, showed an increase in production during the year of 24 eggs per bird.—Prairie Farmer.

Feather Picking

The taste of blood upon freshly-plucked quills is probably what keeps fowls picking at each other after something has started them. Letting them get away from each other by turning the flock out of doors is the most certain method of stopping the practice. Tar may be daubed upon any bleeding point about the comb or head to discourage the attackers. Bleeding follows any injury that breaks the skin, it may be from accident or attacks.—Rural New Yorker.

Let Sun Shine In

On warm days the fronts of poultry houses should be thrown open so that the sunlight may get into the house and on the birds. It will help keep the flock strong and healthy in addition to keeping the house dry. Sunlight not only aids in improving the health of the flock, but also tends to increase laying and to improve the shell strength of eggs, states E. W. Henderson, Iowa State college. Soft-shelled eggs often result from insufficient sunlight.

Iguassu Falls One of Wonders of the World

The Iguassu falls of Brazil are said to be the most wonderful in the world. In the Wide World Magazine R. Halliburton writes: "Half a mile away a vast mass of water seemed to flow forth from the sky. It was a river, which, after wandering quietly through the forests of Brazil, had come at length to the edge of a great plateau. There it girds itself for a grand climax to its career—a climax so spectacular that no one who sees can ever forget that this river surpasses all others in the sublime beauty of its passing, leaving behind one of the wonders of the world. ### WAR CHILDREN SEEK LOST KIN IN FRANCE

Thousands, Ignorant of Their Names, Ask for Help.

Paris.—Thousands of war children separated from parents, brothers and sisters during the world conflict are still seeking members of their families 14 years after the armistice. Their ages range from fourteen to nineteen years. Most of them were too young to remember their names or where they lived when forced out of their homes by raids or bombardments.

Several times a year the Society of Wards of the Nation at Saint Quentin publishes lists of the children in its care.

Lancelin Denise, for instance, born at Cambrai and now twenty years old, can remember that his mother was taken to a hospital just before the Germans entered his home town. He has not seen or heard of her since.

Georges Hammer, who lived at Dessevalle Somain and whose brother died in the war, is seeking his sister, Eva. Georges Wallebrand, now seventeen, was brought up by the Germans as a civil prisoner. He has no idea where his parents are, for he was taken from them when he was three years old.

Marcelhale and his sister Madeleine were picked up as orphans by officials at Laon. They proved they had been in various parts of France searching for their parents, whom they had not seen since the outbreak of the war.

Eugene Henri Cagny, from Chauny, will receive an inheritance if he can be found. Official records show that his father was killed at Verdun in 1916.

There are thousands of similar cases. Twenty parents have been found by their children in recent months, but the percentage of reunions 14 years after the war is pathetically small.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES

Use kerosene to clean white enamel or porcelain bathtubs and bowls.

To save polishing forks and spoons wash them in hot soapy water immediately after use. Dry them with a soft cloth.

To remove grass stains try rubbing lard or butter on the spot and let stand a few hours, then wash in the usual way. If stain does not disappear, repeat.

To keep brass plates and handles untarnished rub a new potato over them after they have been cleaned. This will keep them bright for several days.

When washing greasy dishes add a few drops of ammonia to the water. The work will be more quickly and thoroughly done.

When cleaning your refrigerator use one teaspoonful of sal soda to four quarts of cold water. This will keep the drain pipe clean and free.

Boiling Water

The boiling point of a liquid depends upon the atmospheric pressure of the immediate locality, and is therefore not uniform. At sea level the boiling point for water is 212 degrees F. The atmospheric pressure diminishes the boiling point 1 degree F. with every 550 feet altitude. Thus on Mount Blanc, 16,000 feet above sea level, the boiling point is 185 degrees F.

Dumb Man to Read Lips

Ide, Devonshire, England.—For 24 years Walt Luke was deaf and dumb. Every night he visited the public house drinking cider with his fellow villagers, saying nothing. This became too much for them, so they decided to teach Luke to talk.

Amid smoke and tankards of cider they made syllables with their mouths and passed words written on pieces of paper to him. Watching and studying their lip talk, Luke used to repeat the signs after them. Their endeavors, although tedious, proved successful. Walt Luke could speak. The very first words he said were: "Pint, please," and the next, "Half pint." Lip talk continued and Luke has become very efficient.

DEATH OR SLAVERY FATE OF CHILDREN

"Crusades" That Were Doomed to Misfortune.

There were no less than three movements called "children's crusades," the first in 1212, the second in 1237, and the third in 1458. The first is the one usually referred to as the children's crusade because it far surpassed the others in magnitude and importance.

It consisted of two distinct movements. At about the same time, in the early summer of 1212, two immense armies of children were gathered at Cologne, Germany, and at Vendome, France, in response to the summons of boy prophets who proclaimed themselves inspired by heaven.

The prophet leaders are known to history as Stephen of Cloys and Nicholas of Cologne—each of them about twelve. The crusade they preached was not a crusade of blood against the Saracens, but one of prayer. The children were to march to the sea, which would open for them as it had for the Israelites, to permit them to pass over to Palestine dry shod. There they would convert the leaders of Islam, baptize the heathen and by prayer and faith accomplish what the armored hosts of kings and knights had failed to do.

The excitement aroused by this preaching spread like the plague among children of all classes. There was parental opposition, but the mania spread, and finally the cry of heresy was raised against those who sought to check it. Within short intervals, two unarmed hosts of German children—most of them under twelve and many of them girls—left Cologne to march to the sea. They are believed to have numbered about 40,000. Soon the army of 30,000 French children, under Stephen, left Vendome.

The German children crossed the formidable Alpine passes—which generals had never traversed without great difficulty—and descended into Italy to gain the sea. The losses of their columns were probably 30,000 between Cologne and Italy; while the French army lost 10,000 of its number before it reached Marseilles, heat and hunger strewing the pathway with bodies. Of the 70,000 children who joined the crusade probably less than 20,000 were ever heard of afterward by their parents or friends. The most of those who survived were such as had been unable to keep up with the rest and had dropped out of the ranks in their own countries.

When the army of Nicholas reached Genoa and found that the sea would not open, there was a general breaking up. The Genoese cared for and fed bands of these waifs and assisted some of them in returning home. But the larger number pressed on to Pisa, whence they obtained passage by ship. Others gained Brindisi, and were also "shipped to Palestine." Most of those who did not die on the way were sold as slaves to the Turks and Arabs. Of the French children, 5,000 fared equally ill, for they were induced by merchants of Marseilles to ship with them for the Holy Land, and all who survived the voyage were sold, like the German children, into slavery.

Spot Without Rain

There is no need to go so far afield as Australia and South America to find a really dry place. In Lorea, on the Mediterranean coast of Spain, there has been no rain to speak of for the past seven years, and more than 20,000 people have left for wetter latitudes. Why it should be so dry in this particular district is a puzzle which the weather experts cannot solve.

Australian Competition

A decade ago Australia produced practically no tobacco and cotton, importing the bulk of these products from the United States. Both crops, however, have increased so rapidly under the protection of the commonwealth government that all domestic requirements will be supplied this year and there will be an exportable surplus next year.

CANADA PAYS TRIBUTE TO GEN. WASHINGTON

Neighbors Honor Memory of Our First President.

Washington.—From British Columbia on the Pacific to Newfoundland on the Atlantic, Canada is actively participating in the celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of George Washington's birth, according to official reports received by the United States George Washington Bicentennial commission. Throughout the length and breadth of the land fitting exercises have been held in sincere tribute to the memory of the first President of the United States.

In Toronto the American Women's club, with the co-operation of the Toronto post of the American Legion and the office of the United States consul general, held a Colonial dinner and ball in the Royal York hotel. Dr. George W. Locke, chief librarian of the Toronto public libraries, delivered an address on Washington. Doctor Locke was introduced by Emil Sauer, United States consul general at Ontario. The event attracted wide attention in the Toronto press.

Bear No Grudge.

A service conducted by Rev. H. R. Grant in Saint Andrews church at Fort William was dedicated to George Washington. The editorial column of the Times Journal of that city noted the occasion with approval and said, "Present-day Americans bear no more grudge against George III of England than Englishmen bear against George Washington."

Under the auspices of the American Women's club of Vancouver a birthday luncheon was held in the Hotel Vancouver. Interesting in its spontaneity is the project planned by the Memorial University college in St. John's, Newfoundland. A request from the college for material and information on George Washington has been forwarded to the United States George Washington Bicentennial commission with the explanation that students at the institution wish to prepare essays on the life and career of the first President of the United States. The college also plans to present a drama written around the life of George Washington.

Many prominent officials and citizens of Kingston attended the reception and it was reported an outstanding success.

Lasting Friendship.

The speakers referred to the cordial relations between Canada and the United States and expressed the belief that such occasions as the George Washington bicentennial celebration could result only in a better understanding between these two English-speaking countries of North America.

The Kingston Whig-Standard paid high tribute to George Washington. The article concluded in the following words: "Old antagonisms have been forgotten. Canada and the United States have existed side by side for a century without forts or warships in this Washington bicentennial observance will further cement the friendship that has existed for years between the two countries."

Receptions and programs in honor of George Washington have also been held in Montreal, Winnipeg, Sault Ste. Marie, and other places. Service clubs throughout the Dominion have observed the bicentennial celebration in various ways, and radio talks have eulogized George Washington.

THE STORY OF McMINN

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK Emeritus Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I'd like to tell briefly the story of McMinn with the hope that it might help some other boy or act as a deterrent of some indulgent parent who is tempted to make life too easy for his child. I've just come from talking to McMinn, and I feel pretty low in spirits for there wasn't really very much that one could say to him. He seems to have played most of his cards and lost.

McMinn has never done anything that he found unpleasant or difficult. His father is rather a preoccupied business man who lives in one of the suburbs of a great city and who goes off in the morning usually before the boy is up, and who comes home at night tired and too much taken up with other things to give the boy much attention. Mother has had the direction of the boy, and she is so fond of him that whatever he shows a desire for she gets him immediately, for there has never been any need of economy in the McMinn family and no tendency toward practicing it.

McMinn has never shown any particular interest in study. He was sent to a boys' private school at first, but he did not do well there, and so was transferred to the public school where he finally made the grade to enter high school. His preparatory school record was rather a hectic one. He had all sorts of experience—local high school, two or three high-grade preparatory schools in New England, and then back in high school again to graduate two years later than the average boy does, and even then with only a mediocre record.

SURELY! I BELIEVE THAT, JUDGING BY THE COMPANY HE KEEPS

And then McMinn came to college. He had really never studied any; he found no joy or satisfaction in study. He was warned, but he paid no attention to the warning and, of course, he has failed hopelessly.

What is he to do? he asks me. He has no background, no preparation for college work, no idea of what it is all about. He would make out sadly at manual labor. He would have a hard time to get a job unless he got it through his father's influence, and he has developed habits which it will take him years to break if he ever succeeds in doing so.
