

TAWAS CITY

WIN FROM HARRISVILLE; SCORE 12-2

The younger members of the Tawas City team had their day Sunday when the locals squelched the Harrisville nine, 12 to 2, at the athletic field here.

Albert "Lefty" Quick handled the pitching assignment like a veteran, and by receiving good support from his mates, met with little difficulty in performing his task. The feature hit of the game came in the sixth off the bat of Marvin Mallon. "Marv" planted the ball in the lot adjoining left field for a home run. Two men were on base at the time.

The locals secured an early lead in the game by scoring seven runs in the third, followed by another in the fourth. They again went wild in the sixth to score their remaining four runs. Harrisville's two tallies were scored in the seventh.

The Harrisville boys seemed off form in the field. Their miscues, slow fielding at times, and bad throws contributed a great deal toward the locals' final tally. Harrisville used three hurlers during the game.

Tawas City will play the Iosco County Independents at the local athletic field next Sunday. A stiff battle is expected. Come out.

"THE MAN WHO PLAYED GOD" STARS GEORGE ARLISS

George Arliss, whose portrayals of statesmen and laymen were nationally acclaimed, appears in a new guise in "The Man Who Played God," his latest starring vehicle for Warner Bros. Pictures, which comes to the State Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday.

Mr. Arliss turns his genius to the portrayal of genius in "The Man Who Played God." In this picture he plays the role of an internationally famous musician whose wizardry with melody places the world at his feet. He is adored by women, admired by men, numbering even kings among the thousands subject to the wonder of his music. Those intimate with him, however, respect him even more for his human qualities and kindness than for his musicianship.

STATE EXPECTS RECORD

Michigan next November will cast the heaviest vote in its history, according to expectations of state officials. It is predicted the vote may go as high as 1,500,000.

The present record was set in 1928 when Herbert Hoover, Alfred E. Smith and minor candidates divided 1,372,082 ballots, of which Hoover got 70.36 per cent and Smith 28.92 per cent. In 1924, Calvin Coolidge got 75.37 per cent of Michigan's 1,160,419 votes. Michigan went over the million mark for the first time in 1920, when 1,048,411 votes were cast. Warren G. Harding got 72.77 per cent and James M. Cox 22.27 per cent.

A reflection of Michigan's growth during the war period is found in the growth of the vote between 1916 and 1920. In the former year, only 650,973 Michigan residents voted for president. Charles Evans Hughes captured 52.09 per cent of the total, Woodrow Wilson 44.05 per cent. Four years earlier, Theodore Roosevelt won 38.94 per cent, William Howard Taft 27.63 per cent, William Bradford Hufton 27.36 per cent of the 550,976 votes cast in Michigan.

Although the state's population is supposed to have shrunk somewhat since 1928 through the departure of Detroit factory workers to other states and nations, the general interest in political affairs this year is expected to raise the November vote above the 1928 total. Now, as then, there are contests for the presidency, the governorship, the seats in the national house of representatives and in the state legislature and for many local offices. In addition there are several important constitutional amendments to be passed upon.

FOUR PERSONS INJURED IN AUTO COLLISION ON HEMLOCK ROAD SUNDAY

Four persons were injured in an automobile collision at the intersection of the Sand Lake and Hemlock roads Sunday afternoon. The injured people were Misses Margaret Nicholas and Helen Patton of Midland and Mrs. Frank Crimmins and Frank Barr of Wyandotte. Misses Nicholas and Patton received scalp wounds and Mrs. Crimmins' ribs were fractured. The two people from Wyandotte were enroute to Harrisville. A fire, caused by the accident, destroyed their car. Mrs. Crimmins was taken to East Tawas where she was treated by Dr. S. E. Semers.

"While Paris Sleeps," Fox Films action-thriller coming to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, Friday and Saturday, August 12-13, is said to be a veritable trip through the unknown side and by-streets of Paris. Allan Dwan, Fox Films director, and Basil Woon, noted scenarist and authority on the Paris that is not found in the guide books, have made such a journey possible in 75 minutes for all who see the film.

Among the better known places shown are the Champs Elysees, Arc de Triomphe, Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, Eiffel Tower, and many revealing scenes of night life in Montmartre.

Victor McLaglen is featured in a role which presents him as a devoted father willing to sacrifice everything for his daughter's safety and happiness.

GOLF

Dr. C. F. Smith and Arthur Sieloff were declared champions for the day and won the two Reach Eagle golf balls at the two-ball foursome played last Sunday at the Tawas Golf course. Eighteen holes were played. The following is a tabulation of results:

Dr. C. F. Smith and Arthur Sieloff—101; Arthur Dillon and James Ruckman—103; Harold Moeller and Harry Gaul—107; H. Read Smith and Ed. Sieloff—108; M. C. Musolf and Ed. Benson—116; G. K. Fenger and Dr. Chas. Klump—117; Richard Price and Duncan Bell—120; Joe Leedy and Mr. Patterson—122; James Mielock and Philip Swab—122.

Next Sunday, August 7, a two-ball foursome, with man and wife or mixed couples, will be played at the course. The entertainment committee would like each couple to select their own opponents so that each foursome can set their own time for playing.

The last Sunday foursome was very gratifying to the entertainment committee as there were 52 players on the course that day, and with the green fees 25c, it makes very cheap entertainment. Now you wives get busy and show up these men. Let's put a hundred players on the course Sunday.

MRS. C. F. BRANDT

Mrs. C. F. Brandt of Escanaba, Mich., a former resident of Tawas City, died Tuesday morning, August 2, at her home.

STATE MAY EXPAND 1932 ROAD PROGRAM

With the possible expansion of the state highway department's $5,500,000 construction program to approximately $9,000,000, every effort should be made to induce the state to continue the paving on old U. S. 23 north from Omer. This highway leads into one of the most highly developed resort regions of this section and is especially needed in the territory north of Whittemore and Hale where the farmers and stock growers are dependent on this highway to reach their market.

An original schedule of new work to cost about $3,500,000 may be expanded to approximately $9,000,000. Federal advances of $3,750,000 were in sight under recent congressional welfare relief legislation and another $1,500,000 may be "earned" in direct federal aid highway construction. The federal money must be spent by next July 1, making it mandatory to add it to the meagre state funds available for this year's schedule.

To keep pace with the prospective influx of federal aid the administrative board yesterday spread improvement projects throughout the state. Nearly $3,000,000 of new work was authorized. More is to be added from time to time, according to G. C. Dillman, highway commissioner, until the original schedule program is virtually doubled.

MOTOR THIEF SUSPECTS TAKEN AT BAD AXE

Sheriff Charles C. Miller went to Bad Axe Thursday where he questioned two suspects who are thought to have been connected with stealing three outboard motors here July 14. The motors belonged to H. J. Keiser, M. H. Barnes and Newton Bowen.

The two men were taken to Bad Axe from Detroit after having confessed to stealing two outboard motors in Huron county. The description of the two men tallied with the thieves who operated here.

WARNS MOTORISTS NOT TO RUN BY STOP SIGNS

Sheriff Charles C. Miller issued a statement today warning motorists not to fail stopping at stop signs at the intersections of through highways. Violators will be given a ticket and fined. He said a large number of accidents were caused by failing to comply with this highway regulation.

VIVID COURTROOM DRAMA OPENS AT FAMILY THEATRE

With one of the most sensational trial sequences in the history of talking pictures, and with a mystery injected into an ultra-modern romance of the youth of today, "The Ashamed," Bayard Veiller's latest thriller, comes Sunday and Monday to the Family Theatre, East Tawas.

The new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production is a dramatic story of today, in which its heroine, in her quest for thrills and romance, finds herself in the toils of a fate that forces on her the choice of her brother's life or the loss of her own reputation. One of the most elaborate courtroom sequences, played in an ultra-modernistic courtroom, is a vivid detail in the new story by the author of "Within the Law."

Harry Beaumont directed the new production, in which an elaborate cast appears. Among the players are Helen Twelvetrees, in the role of the indiscreet heroine; Robert Young, who last scored in "The Wet Parade"; Lewis Stone, Jean Hersholt, John Miljan, and Monroe Owsley.

Gotham Clergyman Keeps Snakes as His Playmates

New York Preacher Collects Reptiles as Hobby.

New York.—Snakes may typify original sin in the Bible, but to Rev. Dr. Hugo E. Meyer, who expounds the Bible from the pulpit of Christ Lutheran church, Woodhaven, they are just so many little playmates.

In jars in a room on the second floor of his house adjoining the church, Doctor Meyer has more than 1,000 specimens preserved in alcohol. In his back yard he has a live rattlesnake, seven alligators, and a family of turtles.

Yearly the preacher makes a trip to Palm Beach and Miami and comes back with additions to his collection. Last year he motored back with 800 pounds of live snakes in nine boxes and eleven bags, attracting, incidentally, considerable attention from the proprietors of filling stations along his route. Some of his little friends are now in the snakehouse at the Bronx park zoo and Doctor Meyer has not yet undertaken this year's expedition, so that his stock of live specimens is low.

Rare and Valuable Snakes.
The rattler is dangerous and he is carefully penned in a wire cage. The alligators have only a little more freedom. Doctor Meyer keeps also a large police dog, which has to be tied while the snakes are on view. The back yard is a center of interest for the Woodhaven Boy Scout troop.

Doctor Meyer has many rare and valuable specimens. To the expert, the room upstairs would present a wealth of scientific information. Jars line the walls, and each jar is the last resting place of some repulsive looking reptile; cotton mouth or water moccasin, rattler, king snake, black snake or common garter snake. To see a snake, Doctor Meyer says, is for him to want it and want is to get it.

Doctor Meyer, who is sixty-eight years old, has been following his hobby for 58 of them. In Germany, when he was ten, he heard an address by Alfred Brehms, naturalist, and he immediately made his first collection of 40 snakes. On a return trip to Germany a few years ago he had difficulty with a customs inspector, who refused to believe he had live snakes in a case he was carrying.

Doctor Meyer offered to substantiate his contention and lifted the lid of the case. The inspector landed several feet away and did not bother to complete the inspection.

Through his studies at several German universities, Doctor Meyer continued his interest. He attended the University of Berlin, becoming a bachelor and master of arts. He took his degree of doctor of philosophy at Goettingen and did some work also at Oxford. Wherever the preacher went he took his collection. He studied for the ministry in Europe, but was not ordained until coming here in 1893. Since then he has served pastorates in South Jersey, Asbury park and Albany. He has lived in Woodhaven 19 years.

Wife Conquers Fear.
Mrs. Meyer said that she was at first a little nervous regarding her husband's hobby and at times when snakes were likely to be roaming around the house, she used to send the preacher in ahead of her. She got over this early fear, however, and has since been known to permit him to store a healthy rattler in her china cabinet over a period of weeks.

Doctor Meyer's daughter, now away at a university, never had any fear of snakes. When she was five years old she used to wrap the large but harmless specimens around her and carry them to show to people, a practice that distressed the neighbors, her parents said.

Doctor Meyer has numerous white scars on his hands from bites of snakes. Bitten, he explains he has always been lucky enough to have a packet of serum handy. Once, grasping a cotton mouth, he escaped by the width of a thumb. Help was 20 miles away.

Being struck by a snake is more or less dangerous, according to the part of the body bitten and how far the victim is from help, according to Doctor Meyer. Some harmless varieties of snakes closely resemble in their markings some highly dangerous ones, he says.

Amusing to Doctor Meyer are stories of hoop-snakes that ruck their tails in their mouths and roll downhill or of the snakes that scatter into sections at the approach of danger, only to reassemble when all is well again.

The preacher is not quite certain as to the species of serpent that was in the Garden of Eden, but he says it must have been a special reptile because it had ears and none of the snakes with which he is acquainted had ears.

Deposits Increase in German Savings Banks

Berlin.—Economists are deriving some consolation from the fact that the drain on German savings deposits has ceased and that savings again show an upward tendency.

The banking crisis of last year naturally affected the savings banks, although not to the same degree as other banks. In May, 1931, savings deposits in Germany reached their highest post-war level, totaling 11,225,000,000 marks. During the seven following months, deposits amounting to 1,543,000,000 marks, or 13.7 per cent of the total, were withdrawn from the savings banks. The bottom was reached in December. The tendency, however, reverted during the new year. In the first two months of 1932, savings deposits increased by 267,000,000, rising close to the ten billion mark.

To Control Waters of the Nile

Engineers Working on Big Project in Egypt.

Nairobi, East Africa.—Engineers burrowing into the bed of a lake in southern Egypt are searching for rock foundations to support a huge dam. Once erected, this dam will enable man to control the level of the Nile, reclaim swamp areas as large as England, and give Egypt one-third more water than she now receives.

For years men have struggled with these problems. The trackless swamps defied them; the Nile struck its own level whether Egypt parched or not. It was only with the development of aerial survey that the colossal irrigation scheme came within reach of realization. It has now been sanctioned and will be carried out by the Egyptian government when funds are available.

The project will cost $50,000,000 and the dam will be built across Lake Albert at Pakwach. The building of the giant blockade will conserve the waters of the lake, making it possible to provide an even flow and thus control the level of the Nile. It will mean employment for at least 300 Europeans and 1,000 natives.

Elimination of the great Sudd swamp area in the Upper Nile, where an accumulation of vegetable matter, sometimes 20 feet thick, clogs up the river, is one of the objectives. Much precious water is held up today in this section. If the Sudd could be eliminated, all the water flowing from Lake Albert into the White Nile could be used by the people of the Sudan and Egypt.

One portion of the great project, therefore, is to cut a wide and deep channel for miles through the Sudd to allow the full volume of the White Nile to flow into the main river.

The dam wall across Lake Albert must be wide enough to carry road and railway tracks, thus providing a new northern connection between the Congo system on the one hand and the Kenya and Uganda railways on the other, bringing some traffic to the east coast which now goes north via the river route.

Scorns to Don Uniform, Gets 4 Months in Jail

Lille, France.—Despite the Kellogg-Briand antiwar pact, Napoleon's maxim, "The rule of law ends where that of conscience begins," and the Bible quotation of "Thou shalt not kill," Camille Rombauid, former teacher here, was declared guilty of disobedience because he refused to wear a soldier's uniform for conscientious and religious convictions.

His plea that the governments of the world had banned war failed to save him from four months in jail following his refusal to wear the uniform of the Fifteenth artillery camp at Soissons last March. He was eloquently defended by his counsel, clergymen, physicians and civilians, and

CHILDREN'S STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

WHEN Peter Rabbit first heard that Rattles the Kingfisher's house was a hole in the ground he didn't believe it. No, sir, Peter didn't believe it. He knew that some of his feathered friends built their homes on the ground, Mrs. Grouse, for instance, and Bob White and Carol the Meadow Lark, but he just couldn't imagine a real bird living in the ground. Johnny Chuck told him about it. Johnny had heard the feathered folks of the Old Orchard talking about it.

"I'll believe it when I see it," declared Peter.

You know a great many people are like Peter in that they must see a thing in order to believe it. So Peter refused to believe that Rattles the Kingfisher actually makes his home in the ground, but his curiosity was aroused, and once Peter's curiosity is aroused he has no peace and he gives his friends no peace until it has been satisfied. So the first chance Peter got he hurried over to the Smiling Pool. He knew that Rattles spends most of his time there or along the Laughing Brook, or over by the Big River, and he knew that the other people who live there must know something about him. Grandfather Frog was sitting on his big green lily pad watching for foolish green flies. Peter has a great deal of respect for Grandfather Frog, who is accounted very old and very wise. He waited until Grandfather Frog had caught several foolish green flies, for he had learned by experience that Grandfather Frog was a great deal more likely to answer questions when his stomach was full. When he thought that it was wise to do so he ventured a question.

"What Is It You Have Heard?" Demanded Grandfather Frog.

"If you please, Grandfather Frog, where does Rattles the Kingfisher make his home?" asked Peter in his most polite manner.

IT COULD BE WORSE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

HOW dear a roof when days are raining,
How fair a fire when nights are cold!
Why can't we count the joys remaining?
Life always leaves a little gold.
I know we did not know the measure
Of joy when only joy was here,
For we must lose a little treasure
Before the rest is really dear.

We walk unseeing through the clover,
We pass unnoticed flow'r and tree,
And then we find the summer's over,
And autumn here, and then we see,
I'm old, the autumn days surround me.
No clover now, no tree, no flow'r,
But surely something I have found me
To give me comfort in this hour.

We spend our lives like spending money,
For little joys, for new delights,
Who needs a fire when days are sunny,
Or needs a roof on summer nights?
And yet I never knew a brother
Who couldn't say, "It could be worse."
It always seems, somehow or other,
Life leaves a little in the purse.

a hole in a tree, doesn't he? And happy Jack the Gray Squirrel builds a nest in the top of a tree, doesn't he?" asked Grandfather Frog.

"Ye-es" replied Peter slowly, trying to see what Grandfather Frog was driving at.

"Well, they are not birds; they are animals. If they make their homes in the trees, why should not birds make their homes in the ground?" continued Grandfather Frog.

This was too much for Peter. Why shouldn't they? There was no reason why they shouldn't. "Then it is true that Rattles makes his home in a hole in the ground!" cried Peter.

"Of course it is true," replied Grandfather Frog gruffly. "There isn't any reason in the world why it shouldn't be true. Rattles is a bird of sense."

"Where is it?" asked Peter eagerly. "That is none of my business, nor is it any business of yours," declared Grandfather Frog. "I never have asked Rattles where it is, and if I knew I wouldn't tell you. I never pry into other people's secrets, and if you will take my advice you won't either, Peter Rabbit. It is a bad habit. No good comes of it. Now run away and attend to your own affairs, I want to take a nap."

Peter knew he had learned all he could from Grandfather Frog, so he thanked him and started off. But as he hopped along, lipperty-lipperty-lip, he was more curious than ever about the home of Rattles the Kingfisher, and he quite forgot Grandfather Frog's advice to mind his own business. He made up his mind that he would find the home of Rattles.

"Well, you know so much that it amounts to the same thing," declared Peter. "I have heard such a queer thing about Rattles the Kingfisher that I can't believe it. I guess it is just gossip among the other birds who don't seem to like Rattles very well."

"What is it you have heard?" demanded Grandfather Frog.

"That Rattles makes his home in a hole in the ground," replied Peter.

"Well, I don't see anything hard to believe about that," grunted Grandfather Frog. "Why shouldn't he live in a hole in the ground?"

"Why, because he is a bird," replied Peter.

SOME VEGETABLES

WHEN one realizes what a wealth of healthful qualities are grown in our gardens, what a comfort it is to step into them and pull a few fresh radishes or an onion or two for flavor, it would seem that everybody with a 5-foot plot would try to grow some of the fresh green things. Did you ever hear anybody complain of a meal having too many vegetables? One may begin a meal with a vegetable cocktail and end it with a salad dessert. The main dishes may be vegetables, the entree and the drink if so desired.

Scalloped Egg Plant.

Cut a large egg plant into half-inch slices, pare them and place in salt water for a few minutes, then rinse and cut into cubes. Cover with boiling salt water and cook until tender. Drain well, add one small onion chopped and fried in butter, a tablespoonful each of chopped parsley and flour; cook, stirring for a few moments. Pour in a cupful of rich milk, add salt and paprika; when thick add the egg plant and turn into a buttered baking dish. Cover with buttered crumbs or dot with butter and bake to a nice brown.

Minted Carrots.

In every garden, even small ones, a bed of mint is treasured. A small root will live from year to year and it will always be ready for mint sauce or to add to juleps or punches as well as to garnish dishes.

Boil young tender carrots until tender, in very little water. Add butter, sugar, a little vinegar and two sprigs of mint.

According to some historians, George Washington during a hearing on a land dispute in 1784 protested the decision of a justice of the peace and was fined for contempt of court. He, however, succeeded in winning the lawsuit.

North American Waterfall That Beats Niagara

HERE is a view of the Grand falls of the Hamilton river of Labrador, 900 miles northeast of Montreal, photographed for the first time from the air by Sydney O. Bonnicks, who made an aerial survey of hundreds of miles of territory on the bleak coast which still remains blank on our maps. The cataract is said to be twice the height of Niagara falls.

Modern Contract Bridge

No. 12.

No Trump Take-Outs of a Suit Bid of One

WHEN the next player passes after your partner's opening suit bid of one, you must try to keep the bidding open if you have a trick-and-a-half in your hand. With no bid-dable suit, and with your trick-and-a-half divided between two suits, a negative response of one no trump should be given. If he understands the forcing system, your partner will not misinterpret such a take-out for a strength response, but will realize that you are merely paying him the courtesy of keeping the contract open in case he has additional values or another suit which he is eager for a second chance to show. A take-out with one no trump is always a quite definitely weak response.

Holding as many as 2½ honor-tricks with no assistance and no bid-dable suit, using the yardstick measurement, you would take your partner out of his suit bid with a jump to two no trumps.

The jump to two no trumps is not forcing. While it is strong encouragement for him to go on, partner may pass, and should do so unless he holds additional honor strength or values not originally shown. When you find in your own hand the 3 honor-tricks necessary to complete the yardstick measurement for game at no trumps (a total of 5½ honor-tricks) and have decided that a no trump take-out is your best choice, you must have the courage to jump to game yourself, not leaving it to your partner's imagination to do so.

Taking Out When You Hold Trump Support

Whenever your partner opens with a minor suit bid of one, even though you hold strength or length in the suit, do not consider assisting his bid until you are sure you would not be better justified in taking it out with a major suit or a no trump. Even an overall in a second minor is better than an assist because, while not immediately improving the situation, such a take-out may eventually lead to a more favorable bid. The difficulty of stretching a hand to the five-odd tricks necessary for game in a minor must always be kept in mind. Even when holding ample trump support for your partner's minor suit, a raise should be the last, not the first thing to consider.

With a four, three, three, three division, which promises no distributional or ruffing tricks, it is usually advisable to take your partner out of a major suit even when you hold adequate trump support. To illustrate, suppose your partner opened with one spade, and this was your hand:

S-Q 8 6 4 H-A J 4 D-K 10 7 C-K 9 8

Even with your 2½ honor-tricks you could barely count sufficient playing-tricks for a single raise. To show the full strength of your hand your only logical response would be two no trumps.

Such take-outs are not unusual. It often happens that the responding partner, while having more than sufficient honor strength to keep the bidding open, is lacking in sufficient playing tricks to support his partner's bid. In such a case the only recourse is a no trump take-out, either a negative response or a higher bid according to the count of honor-tricks in your hand.

Great English Traveler

Sir Richard Burton was the first Englishman to enter Mecca, the first to explore Somaliland, and the first to find the Great Lakes of Central Africa. He was so skilled in the lore of the desert that he could travel almost anywhere among the natives without detection. Of the many books written by this famous traveler, the most celebrated is his translation of the "Arabian Nights." After his death an unpublished manuscript translation of the "Scented Garden," from the Arabic, was burned by his widow on account of its pornographic content. The destruction of this paper has been counted a great loss to literature. The devoted wife of Burton arranged a unique tomb for him in the form of an Arab tent of stone and marble.

TRACE MODERN HEN BACK TO JUNGLES

Poultry History, According to Expert.

No wonder the rooster crows! In all the centuries of transition from the jungle fowl the hen has had the most of the acclaim because she lays as many as 300 eggs in a year compared to the two clutches of eggs, or about twenty-six in a season for her ancestors. In the meantime, according to the poultry department at Cornell university, the rooster resembles the jungle fowl in plumage and actions, his voice is similar but his only achievement is that his crow is lustier and more prolonged than that of his jungle ancestor.

The earliest actual reference to poultry is said to be that the Chinese emperor, Fu Hsi, who lived from 3341 to 3227 B. C., taught his people to breed fowls. The Chinese encyclopedia thought to have been compiled about 1800 B. C., mentions fowls as "creatures from the West." Later they came to Europe from central China by way of Siberia and Russia.

With the exception of the turkey, all of our farm poultry were imported from Europe. Christopher Columbus, they say, brought chickens, ducks, and geese to the Western hemisphere on his second voyage in 1497. The probable ancestor of the hen was the jungle fowl, which is still to be found in the jungles of Burma, northern India, the Philippine islands, and several other regions. They resemble our brown Leghorns in plumage and actions and the hen is a small bird which usually weighs about three and one-half pounds.

In 1873 prominent poultrymen in Canada and the United States compiled a book called "The American Standard of Perfection," which holds the same place for poultrymen that the herd book holds for breeders of other farm animals. This book now recognizes 16 classes, 65 breeds, and 157 varieties; of these, 12 classes, 45 breeds, and 127 varieties are of chickens, the remainder being turkeys, ducks, geese, and guinea fowls. Leghorns were first introduced into America in 1835, according to the records; barred Plymouth Rocks were first exhibited in 1869; Rhode Island reds were not officially standardized until 1901; and white Wyandottes were first admitted to the standard in 1903.

To Water Desert Land

The great dam at Assouan across the Nile river and 551 miles south of Cairo, is now being heightened for the second time. When completed in 1934, the capacity of the Assouan reservoir will store five billion cubic meters of Nile water, which will be utilized for the year around irrigation of thousands of acres of land in the northern delta.

Don't make the same mistake twice—if you survive the first one.

Merry Christmas

Shortly before the holidays one of those personal tragedies overtook Jack's mother with the result that she had to acquire some artificial teeth. She was sensitive about it, and had told no one outside the family, though, of course, Jack had heard it discussed in the home circle. Imagine his mother's feelings, then, when, the day after Christmas, she heard her son boasting to a neighbor:

"Gee, we had a dandy Christmas this year! We got a new car, and a new radio, and mamma got new teeth!"—Indianapolis News.

Personal "I. Q."
The intelligence quotient or "I. Q." of a person is determined by multiplying the mental age by 100 and dividing by the actual age. Thus the intelligence quotient of a normal person is 100. A person with an "I. Q." below 80 is rated as subnormal, while one with an "I. Q." above 120 is rated as gifted. About five persons in 100 will be found to be 20 below normal and about five 20 above normal.

Upon receipt of such affidavit in the time specified herein, the clerk shall write in the registration book the name of the applicant together with the other information required by this chapter and such applicant shall thereupon be deemed to be duly and properly registered.

Registration of Absentee by Oath
If any person whose name is not registered shall offer and claim the right to vote at any election, or primary election, and shall UNDER CATH, state that he or she is a resident of such precinct and has resided in the CITY TWENTY DAYS next preceding such election, designating particularly the place of his or her residence and that he or she possesses the other qualifications of an elector under the constitution; and that, owing to the sickness or bodily infirmity of himself or herself, or some member of his or her family or owing to his or her absence from the City on public business or his or her own business, and without intent to avoid or delay his or her registration, he or she was unable to make application for registration on the last day provided by law for the registering of electors preceding such election, then the name of such person shall be registered, and he or she shall then be permitted to vote at such election. If such applicant shall in said matter, wilfully make any false statement, he or she shall be deemed guilty of perjury, and upon conviction, be subject to the pains and penalties thereof.

Provided, That any city may provide by its charter or by resolution approved by a majority of the members of its legislative body for the registration of such sick and absent voters on the last Saturday preceding any election or primary election at the places of voting in the several voting districts of such city, instead of on election or primary election day.

In every such case of transfer the City Clerk or the Board of Inspectors issuing such certificates shall cause opposite the name of such elector, to be entered in the column headed "Remarks" in such registration book, the words, "transferred to precinct number _____ (giving the number)", together with the initials of said clerk or some member of the Board of Inspectors of Election, as the case may be, and the date of the transfer.

W. C. Davidson, City Clerk.
Dated July 12, A. D. 1932.

Provision in Case of Removal to Another Precinct

Any registered and qualified voter who has REMOVED from ONE ELECTION PRECINCT of a Ward to another election precinct of the same Ward shall have the right, on any day previous to election day, on application to the City Clerk, to have his or her name transferred from the registration book of the precinct from which he or she HAS REMOVED to the registration book of the precinct in which he or she THEN RESIDES. Such elector shall have the right to have such transfer made ON ELECTION DAY, or Primary election day, by obtaining from the board of inspectors of election of the precinct from which he or she HAS REMOVED a CERTIFICATE OF TRANSFER, and presenting the said certificate to the BOARD OF ELECTION INSPECTORS OF THE PRECINCT IN WHICH HE OR SHE THEN RESIDES.

In every such case of transfer the City Clerk or the Board of Inspectors issuing such certificates shall cause opposite the name of such elector, to be entered in the column headed "Remarks" in such registration book, the words, "transferred to precinct number _____ (giving the number)", together with the initials of said clerk or some member of the Board of Inspectors of Election, as the case may be, and the date of the transfer.

W. C. Davidson, City Clerk.

The telephone is a valuable aid in securing Employment

MANY persons who are "on call" for either temporary or permanent employment find that their telephones give them an advantage. For employers often summon those persons first whom they can reach easily and quickly by telephone.

And in emergencies, such as fire, accident or sudden sickness, your telephone is PRICELESS PROTECTION, enabling you to summon aid immediately day or night.

Few things that you buy offer so much useful service and protection at such low cost as the telephone.

ANNUAL MEETING OF PLAINFIELD TOWNSHIP UNIT SCHOOL DISTRICT JULY 11, 1932

The annual school election of the Unit District of the Township of Plainfield, County of Iosco, State of Michigan, held on Monday, July 11, A. D. 1932 at the Township Hall, Hale, Michigan, was called to order at 10 o'clock A. M. by A. E. Greve, chairman.

A. E. Greve and E. W. McGirr acted as inspectors of election. Sarah Johnson and Mable Allen were clerks of election. The meeting was declared open to receive ballots.

At 3 o'clock P. M. the business meeting was called to order by D. I. Pearsall, president of the school board.

The annual report was read by George Webb, secretary of the school board.

The recommendations of the school board were read.

A motion made by A. E. Greve and seconded by E. O. Putnam that the recommendations be adopted and money raised in accordance with the recommendations, was carried.

A motion by E. O. Putnam, and seconded by Elmer Streeter that the school buildings located at South Branch, and other property of the district be sold by the School Board.

The meeting was then declared open again to receive ballots.

At 4 o'clock the chairman proclaimed that the polls would close in one hour; at four-thirty that the polls would close in one-half hour; at four forty-five that the polls would close in fifteen minutes. At five o'clock P. M. he proclaimed the polls closed.

The ballots were then counted and the results were as follows:

Charles Morgan received thirty-one votes, Ezra Wickert received forty-two votes, and Florence Dooley received seventy-five votes. Florence Dooley was then declared elected school trustee for three years.

George G. Webb received one hundred twenty-seven votes, Florence Dooley received four votes, Alice Glendon received one vote, Mrs. R. D. Johnson received eight votes, Cora D. Johnson received one vote, and Elmer McGirr received one vote. George G. Webb was then declared elected Secretary of the School Board for three years.

Sarah Johnson, Clerk of School Election.

Heart of the North

by William Byron Mowery

THE STORY

Six bandits held up the steamer, Midnight Sun, on the Mackenzie, kill Jimmy Montgomery, and escape with gold dust and furs. At the Mounted Police post at Fort Endurance, Sergt. Alan Baker disputes with his incompetent superior, Inspector Haskell, regarding plans for the capture of the bandits. Baker starts out in the police launch with five men. At the MacMillan trading post, Joyce MacMillan is thrilled at the arrival of the police launch. She had expected to marry Baker, and had been stunned at the news that he was to marry Elizabeth Spaulding. Stolen furs are found on the MacMillan place and evidence points to Joyce's father, Alan leads his expedition up the big Aloska. Compelled by Haskell's foolish orders to divide the party, Alan fails to capture the bandits, and returns to Fort Endurance. Haskell blames him for the failure and Alan is allowed to buy out of the Mounted on condition that he absolve Haskell from blame. Alan starts out of the country in a motor canoe. He meets "Buzzard" Featherfoot, famous aviator, and enlists him in the enterprise.

Buzzard had put in some busy hours. He had filled up on gas and oil; had attended to several repairs and replacements; had acquired a pack-chute, new propeller and half a dozen costly flying instruments.

With a couple of mechanics whom he had awakened at an all-night garage, he was busy putting on the new prop.

Vaguely suspicious, Alan took him aside and asked quietly:

"Say, Buzzard, how did you get all this equipment? You've got more than a thousand dollars' worth here, and you only had two hundred."

"I borrowed that stuff temporarily. There's several government planes here, and they had extra equipment."

"Borrowed it? Temporarily?"

"Well, stole it."

"Stole it? Government property? Good Lord, man! That's a penitentiary offense. The authorities will find sure catch on to who took it."

"Yes, I expect they will. At least the night watchman'll know. I invested five dollars in liquor for him; and he's sleeping it off over behind that hangar. He'll put them next to us."

Buzzard's voice became serious. "But Alan, I couldn't get it any other way. We simply had to have it, or give up our trip."

"Yes, we had to have it," Alan admitted reluctantly. "I guess you did right, Buzzard." But it staggered him to realize that he and his partner were criminals now in the eyes of the law. Their motives would be no excuse. They faced a prison term if caught. And their capture was inevitable: soon or late they would have to show up somewhere.

He could not bring himself to reproach Buzzard. He himself had stolen a machine gun, though he had covered his tracks pretty well; and Buzzard after all had done this for his sake. And he felt that this theft was justified, if ever theft could be. With no chance of personal gain, at heavy cost of their own hard-earned dollars and at risk of their very lives, he and Buzzard were flinging themselves against a pack of murderous criminals.

He said: "We'd better be getting away from Edmonton forthwith. At daylight there'll be people here on the field. It'll be our fins if we're not gone."

They donned their flying togs. Buzzard showed Alan how to put on his pack-chute, how to jump clear in case of disaster and jerk the rip-cord. They climbed in and snapped their safety belts.

Reving up in short order, Buzzard flicked the throttle, jumped over the chocks, taxied down the field, and gave it the gun.

Just as the first rosy fingers of dawn were reaching up into the eastern sky, they hopped off, left the sleeping city behind them, and roared away into the North.

CHAPTER VIII

A Deadly Trap

"Slob-ice" Jensen was glaring around him at the other five faces in the tent.

"Some of you lubbers," he growled, "ain't got the sense you was borned with. You gimme a pain with your whining and growling and always wanting to argue about what I tell you. Now I'm gonna explain just what's ahead of us and what we gotta do."

The six men were as motley a crew as ever the whaling fleets of Bering's sea and the Western Arctic could muster up. With one exception the six of them were deck hands—wharf wolves of gutter speech and alley vices; strange men to be camped in the heart of a wilderness that even the Indians seldom penetrated.

There was John Siebelski, a square-faced Alaskan, a descendant of the Cossack Promyshleniki (fur-hunters) who for generations, when Russia ruled the northwestern shores of America, had held brutal sway over the Aleuts and Kalosh in their lust for peltry.

There was Pete Gonzales, a Sandwich Islander, brown-skinned, his white teeth flashing, his dress gaudy and picturesque.

There was "Lunnon Dick," a wiry stunted limey, with Battersea accent and quick jerky ways.

There was "Chink" Woolley, a quarter-Chinese, an olive-faced, silent nondescript, with his right arm in sling from Bill Hardsock's bullet.

The fifth was a Dogrib met named Andre, a thin small weasel-like man of fifty. He had just returned from a scouting trip down the Big Aloska.

The six of them were talking, or listening rather to Jensen talk, of final plans to escape. Echoing the identical line of reasoning which Alan Baker had sketched in Haskell's cabin, Jensen went on: "Some of you wants go back to the River and git outside thataway. H—i's fire—you'd mebbe git ten miles afore the Yeller-stripes 'ud grab you off. Some of you wants go north to the Arctic coast. Whaffor? No—strips to git away on, and the Yeller-stripes've got patrols there to boot. You say, 'Head south.' Yeah—and run into the nest of p'lice posts down there around Athabascy. We can't go south nor west nor north, but we kin go east—"

Lunnon Dick spoke up: "Clear hover 't' Udsen bay er Manitoba? Two thousand miles haway? That's a bloody long 'ard trot. Slob-Hice."

Jensen turned on him with a fierce anger and withering sarcasm that silenced Lunnon for an hour.

"Sure it's a h—lish long hard trot, you runty bilge rat! Don't I know it? But I'd rather tramp ten thousand miles than do them twenty slow short steps from a hoosegow to a scaffol!"

The others all nodded emphatically, fearful of Jensen's scorching anger. They were sitting there on a hundred and fifty thousand dollars which he had got for them. They owed their very lives to his quick thinking aboard the steamer, when he had pulled their trick out of the fire. And they were leaning on him now to save them from the Mounted and get them out to the oblivion of a big city.

He went on explaining the escape. "Now, here, all of you—look't here." He smoothed a place on the mud floor; and as the others leaned forward to watch, he drew a rude map with his long thumb nail. "We'll follow the Inconnu east a ways and then head south for Manitoba. We'll spend the rest of this summer and fall working down into timber country. Then we'll find some good hiding place and build a couple shacks and lay in meat, and we'll wait there till the break-up. Next spring we'll east on down and out to Winnipeg, and there we'll be with better'n a hundred and fifty thousand in hides and dust!"

His own personal and private plans after they did get out to Winnipeg, Jensen did not see fit to disclose. He knew a party there in the Queen City of the Wheat Plains who would buy the furs at two-thirds of their auction value and say "nudding." The dust, being unstamped, could be sold anywhere. He himself, both business manager and leader of this cruise, would naturally attend to those business matters. Once with the money in his pocket, would he split six ways with these lubbers? Or would he take a train and fade out of their lives and have that hundred and fifty thousand for his own sweet own? You bet your life he would!

With his plans clear and the men completely under his sway, Jensen leaned back against a paqueton of furs and sat, smoking, thinking.

He guessed that for once the police were altogether baffled. They must be pounding their heads to explain

Insignia of Royalty in Ancient Egyptian Tomb

A tomb discovered near Cairo, by Prof. Sellm Hassan, containing a mummy adorned with a gold crown and a complete set of jewelry, is perhaps the only tomb in this area untouched by thieves. The gold crown was 24 inches in circumference. It was kept in position by two gold lotus flowers, joined by a chalcony. Each flower was topped by a bird with a long beak, named in hieroglyphics "Yakhu." In the middle of the crown in front was a disk studded with colored stones set in another lotus flower. The large necklace was composed of 50 pieces of gold in the shape of some insects threaded on a gold string. Gold bracelets having the form of the hieroglyphic letter "N"; a number of silver bracelets—it is believed that this is the first time silver bracelets have been discovered in a tomb of the fourth dynasty—and two pure gold anklets also were found.

Through the tobacco haze Jensen looked back across six years and saw again all the details of a certain incident between himself and Joyce MacMillan. He had relived that incident a thousand times since it happened. The memory of it, the memory of that laughing-eyed girl, had come down across the years like the scent of fresh violets. Two weeks ago when his party passed the MacMillan trading post, the place had seemed deserted. But he had known she lived there; and drawn by some overpowering impulse to see her, to be near her again, he had flung caution and hot haste to the winds, and stopped, and gone shore. The picture of that MacMillan girl asleep, an arm under her head, a great-spurred violet in her hair—that flesh-and-blood reincarnation of her former memory had been a madness in his blood ever since. It had overshadowed his waking thoughts, had fitted across his dreams, had been present with him even during the hot battle with the three Mounties at the edge of Many Waters.

The news which 'breed Andre had brought back—that Joyce was practically alone at the trading post, scarcely two days travel away, that the trading had dwindled and few Indians or metis came now, that the officer commanding at Fort Endurance was giving her no protection whatsoever—this news to Jensen was like a match to a barrel of powder.

His deliberate brain saw danger in his scheme; but he had risked death for the furs and gold, and that hundred and fifty thousand was far less vivid, less tangible, less impassioned to him than the memory of that moment when he stood looking through Joyce's window. He had spent a year on a whaler without getting back to port; a year of exile in Alaskan mountains, among prospectors. . . . There are hungers more powerful than the hunger for food or gold. . . .

It would be ridiculously easy, he reasoned, to knock the old coat on the head and take the defenseless girl. They would land above the station and creep upon it through the bush. Two of his men would go in peacefully, as though to trade, and watch their chance to seize her. His party could swoop, strike, and have the whole thing over in ten minutes.

Knocking the ashes from his pipe, he leaned forward:

"Men, I got an idee. I just showed you lubbers our one chance to 'scape. Now I'm gonna show you how we c'n make out getaway dead sure and certain. How we c'n tie them Yeller-stripes up in a sack and throw away the key. Anybody objecting? Anybody wanting to kick over the traces?"

Glaring around him, he saw emphatic denials. The men were hanging upon his words; he knew they would obey him without a whimper of protest.

He went on, "We're going to make a little satchy down the Aloska to MacMillan's trading post. We're going to it tomorrow. We'll rap that old duffer on the head and take the girl. We'll throw them Yeller-stripes clear off the scent. While they're hunting for her, we'll be making tracks southeast to Manitoba. Y'mind how we saved our skins on the steamer by taking that other skirt? We'll do it again; but we'll carry this'n on along with us. No one'll ever know what happened to her. . . ."

For a few days after Alan Baker bought out of service and left Fort Endurance, Inspector Haskell enjoyed more peace and security than he had felt in many months. But after the first satisfaction wore away, it gradually occurred to Haskell that maybe he ought to make some move to capture those six bandits. To let them escape without raising a hand against them would look bad, very bad, to Superintendent Williamson on his coming visit to the post.

Uses for Platinum

The largest use of platinum is for the manufacture of jewelry. The metal is also employed extensively in the electrical and chemical industries, in dentistry and for a variety of miscellaneous purposes. In the early days it was used in Russia for coinage and subsequently from time to time it has been proposed by bimetalists as a standard of value.

London From a Bus Top

Steam Driven Motor Truck on a London Street.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

LONDON'S latest bridge-inspired song hit might be "Waterloo Bridge Is Falling Down." The "falling," however, is not accidental, it is an engineering job. The bridge will be replaced by a new span.

Many travelers now are seeing London from a bus top, where they enjoy watching perky messenger boys with their tin-can hats cocked on three hairs, the huge policemen, the sand-worn men, and the clattering crowds of men and women on the streets.

In a private car the least snobbish feels himself aloof and superior. On a personally conducted tour one is only the pea tossed in the dishpan of a careless conductor's rhetoric. In a taxicab even the very reckless cannot refrain from watching the meter. But from a bus top one looks down, part and parcel of all he sees, understanding and being thrilled by a thousand activities.

It is true that one sees the centuries without order or sequence; but that is as it should be in London, where today, tomorrow, and 1,800 years elbow each other companionably.

Perhaps one leans over the rail to see a lordling sprawled at the wheel of a great car, all color and silver, on that Watling street which was one of the four thoroughfares by the aid of which the Romans held Britain; or to watch those who are to fly to Paris, stepping into the car that is to carry them to the flying field at Croydon.

Next, the bus passes a porter's lodge in which a duchess lives at the gates of the great house she can no longer afford to occupy. Or the brass triangle near the Marble arch, which marks the site of Tyburn tree, a common gallows away back in 1196. Or that street of pallid houses built by a French architect that Napoleon's officers might have fitting quarters when he had conquered England. Or the horse guards, where massive sentinels in scarlet and buckskin and silver bestride horses of black silk. One marvels at the horses more than at the men. However do they train them to stand so still?

Reminders of the Past.

Yonder is Lansdowne passage, leading from Piccadilly into Curzon street. The street is the citadel of the highest fashion, lined with gloomy houses. A steel bar is still set across the passage, that no highwayman may gallop his horse through it to safety in the fields, as one formed the reprehensible habit of doing a hundred years ago.

Nearby is the Shepherd's market, which is in its essentials what a shopping district was in London in Dick Turpin's time, and a little public house whose customers are almost wholly the Jeames Yellowplushes of today. A wealth of gossip about their masters might be gathered there by one admitted to their intimacy.

Off Whitehall one may see the window through which a king walked on his way to the block. Over the rail of Hyde park one may glimpse the little gravestones of the dogs' cemetery; then hurriedly glance at the new Devonshire house, wherein apartments may be leased for 999 years at an incredible number of pounds the year.

Trafalgar square is the natural center of London for the adventurer. It is true that Charing Cross, a long stone's throw down the Strand, is accepted as the geographical center, if there can be a geographical center of a map, which is messed about as is that of London by the oxbow-bend of the River Thames.

At any rate, the 699 square miles of the greater city include all parishes any part of which may be within 12 miles of the cross, or of which the whole may be within 15 miles.

Going From Nelson's Column.

But Nelson's column, in Trafalgar square is the North pole to the visitor's compass. If he were able to mount to Nelson's eminence, as steep-jacks sometimes do, and there revolve upon his heel, he would discover that each quarter turn would reveal a new aspect.

Down Whitehall is the ancient City of Westminster, with the houses of parliament and the abbey. The Strand opens to Fleet street and the offices of the great newspapers.

Over Covent garden, a bit more to the left, one might sight the Bank of England and the heart of the old Roman city. Another turn left and the markets, the Charterhouse, the British museum.

Left once more and the theater district; Soho, where are the foreign restaurants beloved of novelists, and a fashionable shopping districts. Just a bit more and Chisland and Mayfair and a glance at Buckingham palace.

Then Hyde park and the Admiralty, and the circle is complete. All reached best by busses.

Trafalgar square is a place of perilous delights. Eight streets debouch upon it, each filled with roaring traffic coming from unexpected angles, and made more perilous to an American by the English insistence upon the left-hand turn.

One leaps from safety island to safety island across these streets, as if they were stepping stones in a torrent—omnibuses, steam lorries, donkey carts, limousines, the small, barn-swallowlike cars which taxation has thrust upon English motorists, brewers' vans drawn by elephantine horses, screaming motorcycles with the latest editions.

Once Trafalgar square was the king's mews, where various monarchs stabled their horses. Honest artisans shaped weapons for English gamecocks in Cockspur street. Fronting on the square is the national gallery, crammed with treasures of art. Of all the 1,500-odd churches in London, the visitor is apt to carry away the most vivid memory of St. Martin-in-the-Fields. The gray and white and black pillars of its majestic portico gain added value, of course, when seen across the open square.

In a little house which once stood here, Ben Johnson wrote "Drink to Me Only with Thine Eyes," which some people hold to be one of the finest ballads in the English language, though deprecating the sentiment. Heine and Ben Franklin and Charles Dickens have roomed close by.

The Mall and Buckingham Palace.

From Trafalgar, too, the visitor can peer through the fine Admiralty arch down the Mall, at the farther end of which stands Buckingham palace. Eventually he will discover this to be a large and almost violently ugly stone-fronted building behind a tall wrought-iron fence, and that time is wasted on it except during those stirring moments when the soldier guard is changed.

He may recall that it was down the Mall that Charles I walked to the headman's block, and that it was named after the French game of paille maille that Charles II played upon it.

Across the square is the statue of Charles I, perhaps the finest equestrian figure in London. One bridges centuries of English history by a glance at it. Queen Eleanor's cross first stood upon this site, the twelfth—or was it the thirteenth?—cross erected by the sorrowing King Edward I to mark the places where her casket was set down for the night on the long route from Lincoln to her tomb in Westminster. That was in the Thirteenth century.

Much is to be seen hereabouts in the compass of a short walk before definitely embarking on a cruise through London's streets. A turn to the left leads to Maiden lane, where Voltaire and Turner once lived. One may pause at Rule's oyster house for a snack, not because of hunger, but because this has been the resort of English actors since 1750. Fielding and Pope and Goldsmith used to frequent it when it was "The Bedford Head" and the home of the Reunion club. A vast white-painted door, set with brass like the quarter-deck of a yacht, a populous bar behind which two lively maids are busy, a great fire under a marble mantelpiece.

Lively Covent Garden.

Just around the corner is Covent garden, once the convent garden of the abbey of Westminster. It has been the great market for fruits and vegetables ever since 1634. A lively, sad, industrious place, in which the coster's donkeys furnish the comic relief. Under the great piazza, which was a century ago London's most fashionable walk, old women sit all summer long shelling peas. Something of a comedown from the patches and ruffles, and the small swords and the snuff.

It is to be feared the Covent garden opera has somewhat declined. At all events, when one visits the fine old house two jazz bands may be heard offering interminable tom-tomming for a horde of dancers.

Here is Bow street and its police station, where the scarlet waistcoats of the "Bow street runners" gave the world its idea of a uniformed police force—or so Bow street says. On the Russell street corner is Will's coffee house, where Dryden sat in judgment on plays, and which is just as it used to be, above the street level. Charles Lamb lodged at No. 20 Russell street and the National Sporting club, most aristocratic of boxing clubs, is at 43 King street. At No. 4 York street De Quincy wrote his "Confessions." Half the charm of London is in its history.

The DAIRY

BEST CROPS GROWN ON FERTILE SOIL

Dairy Farmer in Position to Enrich Fields.

By JOHN A. AREY, Dairy Extension Specialist, North Carolina State College. WNU Service.

Dairy farming improves soils instead of depleting them. On every well-handled dairy farm large quantities of legume hays, wheat bran, cottonseed meal and other such feeds are converted into milk through cows, yet there is a considerable residue left in the form of manure which will help to build up the soil.

Careful calculation of the plant food value of these feeds on a basis of ten cents a pound for nitrogen and five cents a pound each for phosphoric acid and potash, shows that alfalfa hay has a plant food value of $6 a ton; soybean hay, $7.85; clover hay, $6.69; wheat bran, $9.69; corn meal, $4.69 and cottonseed meal, $15.92. Only about 20 per cent of this plant food value is lost in the feeding process, which means that there is a gradual accumulation of plant food on every well-managed dairy farm. Further evidence is shown by the good crops usually produced on such a farm.

Not only does dairy farming help to build up the soil, but the cropping system followed prevents much washing.

On account of the organic matter and countless bacteria in cow manure, it has a greater farm value than a chemical analysis would show. The organic matter improved the physical condition of the land and increases its water-holding capacity. This improved condition also makes a favorable situation for the bacteria to liberate plant food in the soil particles.

I do not believe any system of farming can be permanently profitable unless soil fertility is maintained. It makes no difference what the cash return may be from a crop, because if the wealth is secured at the expense of the soil, the farmer will lose in the end.

Shelter for Dairy Cow of Utmost Importance

The dairy cow, because of the fact that she puts the products from her feed into the milk pail instead of in the form of flesh and fat on her body, needs better shelter than the fattening stock. It is not necessary for this shelter to be expensive, but it should be adequate to the needs of the climate, and should insure the cow being warm and dry, and having plenty of light and pure air. The best winter temperature for dairy barns is between 50 and 60 degrees. If the temperature goes much above or below this there will be a decrease in the yield of milk.

There is perhaps no consideration that needs greater attention, especially in the Northwest, than provision of proper ventilation, particularly of dairy barns. There are very few barns that come up to the standard specifications as to light and ventilation. The dairy barn, in order to produce the best results, should provide a cubic foot of air space for each pound of weight of the cows confined to the barn, and good ventilation should insure this air being kept pure without forming drafts. It is as injurious to a cow to breathe impure air, as it is for human beings.—Dakota Farmer.

Old Separators

An Ohio dairyman writes that he can see no object in getting up so early to milk and deliver milk to the station; that he is going to "get out the old separator" and try selling cream for a while. "I may not make any more selling cream, but I'll not have to get up quite so early," he declares.

Quite a few whole-milk dairymen are "getting out the old separator." There's a disturbing thought. Not that they shouldn't separate the milk and sell cream, for that's a splendid thing to do. The disturbing thought is that some of these separators may go into service badly in need of repairs and adjustments.

A separator out of adjustment can cause a tremendous loss. A faulty separator leaves fat in the skim milk. The loss should not get above two-hundredths of one per cent. The cow tester in Finney Association, Kan., says two of twelve separators tested were losing over five-hundredths of one per cent. H. R. Searles reports a loss of 16-hundredths of one per cent—a loss amounting to 16 pounds of fat in every 10,000 pounds of milk.—Farm Journal.

Good and Poor Cows

The conclusion that one good cow is worth ten poor ones was reached by J. W. Ingels after studying records of the farmers' association of which he is the tester.

He found that the average cow in the Lee-Des Moines Cow Testing association paid her owner $35.96 above feed cost last year.

On the other hand the 14 low-producers returned an average of $3.02 profit, or slightly more than one-tenth of the mean production.

Advances Belief That Planets Are Peopled

"I have no doubt that there are many other inhabited worlds, and that on some of them beings exist who are immeasurably beyond our mental level," writes Right Rev. E. W. Barnes, bishop of Birmingham, England, in a contribution to the magazine Nature, London. Bishop Barnes, besides being a churchman, is widely known as a distinguished scientist.

"We should be rash to deny," the writer continues, "that these beings can use radiation so penetrating as to convey messages to the earth. Probably such messages now come. When they are first made intelligible a new era in the history of humanity will begin.

"At the beginning of the era the opposition between those who welcome the new knowledge and those who deem it dangerously subversive will doubtless lead to a world war. But the survivors, when they extricate themselves from the economic consequences of the peace treaty, will begin what we may correctly term a strenuous correspondence course.

"I should like to be living then. We might get a true understanding of the evolution of the universe."

After 4,000 Years

A great cemetery has been discovered by an expedition working at Tepe Hissar, near Damghan, Persia. Scores of graves have been opened, revealing the remains of a people some 4,000 years old. Their racial origin is unknown, but it is possible that they form a connecting link between India and Mesopotamia. "It is an awe-inspiring sight," says Doctor Schmidt, the leader of the expedition, "to look upon the remains of a hundred people, dead ages ago, exposed with their mortuary equipment to the sunlight, in one great necropolis. Thus we found them in the main mound at Tepe Hissar."

Woman Constructs Church

Acting as architect, boss of the work and even as a workman, a woman is given chief credit for the construction of one of the most picturesque churches in South Africa. She is Miss Bertha Everard, the South African artist. She taught herself the craft of prospecting for building stone, and spent many days wandering over the veldt in search of suitable material. The church at Carolina, Transvaal, is 20 by 65 feet.

He Pays With 240 Pennies

C. W. (Paddy) Johnston arrived one minute late at the weighing-in room just before a horse race in the Isle of Man. Told that he would be fined $5, no more or no less, even if he were an hour late, Johnston went to the local bank and within an hour returned and paid his fine with 240 pennies, each equivalent to about 2 cents in American money.

Uncanceled Profits

Sale of Washington bicentennial stamps will more than pay the costs of the celebration, it is said, because so many of them go into the books of collectors instead of through the regular postal arteries. Uncle Sam is the only publisher in the country who profits by poor circulation, according to the Los Angeles Times.

Sleeping on Gunpowder Containers

Sailors of the United States navy are here seen sleeping on gunpowder containers, but they are not so reckless as they seem to be. The containers are empty and are being removed from the U. S. S. California following the recent target practice off the California coast. They are sent to various naval ammunition depots to be refilled and returned to the ships for future firings.

BUILDS ROCKET TO REACH 500,000 FEET

After Many Failures, Experimenter Will Try Again.

Los Angeles.—A persistent watch repairman, whose attempts to escape the earth's gravitational forces by means of self-invented rockets have left a string of failures from Germany to the center of the Mojave desert, is building another machine. He is confident this one will reach an altitude of 500,000 feet.

The inventor, Maurice Poirier, Glendale jeweler's assistant, whose first rocket exploded on its launching in Germany in 1919, believes his newest 9-foot bullet-shaped contrivance will be the forerunner of a larger machine capable of crossing the American continent in five hours.

Poirier, who gained considerable attention in 1930 when he launched a rocket designed to reach the moon from the Mojave desert, said his new rocket would be propelled by a secret gas distilled from weeds grown in a small section of Germany. His 1930 rocket sputtered a short distance into the air and was shattered by an explosion.

Flew Rocket Three Times.
In 1925 he completed a small contrivance, propelled by gunpowder, and successfully flew it for ten miles on three separate occasions. At a public showing the rocket with a great hissing noise left the ground, only to fall back, burying itself with terrific force.

His new rocket, costing about $25,000, is being constructed in a secret machine shop somewhere in Los Angeles. He says it will not carry wings, but will resemble a bullet 9 feet long with "fenders" on both sides.

It will carry oxygen tanks, he said, to permit the gas to explode under normal earth conditions.

To Release Parachute.
The final blast of gas, Poirier said, will release a parachute designed to carry the exhausted rocket back to

Many Persons "Blind" to Touch, Expert Finds

Columbus, Ohio.—If you are color blind, or tone deaf, don't feel badly, because there are some people who are "blind" to the sense of touch, according to Dr. Laurence H. Snyder, professor of zoology and entomology at Ohio State university.

Persons of this last group are unable to distinguish the shape of an object by handling or touching it, Doctor Snyder says, even though the object is perfectly round or square.

The scientist has been able to make experiments by placing a box of blocks of assorted shapes on one side of a screen so that his subject is unable to see them.

ABSENCE AND AFFECTION

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Emeritus Dean of Men,
University of Illinois.

"Absence makes the heart grow fonder," the poet said, and when we repeat the lines we generally have in mind young lovers whom chance or duty or some other influence has for a time kept apart. It is possibly true of those sentimentally drawn to each other, but a poet sees into the inner workings of the emotions more deeply than do ordinary men, and I am sure he had in mind other people and other situations, than mere youth falling in love. Absence gives us time to think out the meaning of scenes and relationships which—before, perhaps, we have never had time to realize the meaning or the importance of. It might be a good thing for all of us if for a time we could get away from the people with whom we are in daily relationship, or the business or the scenes which may have become to us quite commonplace.

Mrs. Gray goes off by herself at least once a year and leaves her husband to look after himself. There is nothing sinister in this, nothing which indicates domestic irregularity or discontent. The Grays are really very devoted to each other, but sitting across the table from each other three times a day for at least twenty-eight days in the month, there develops in time monotony. Mrs. Gray wants a change; she likes, for a week or two, to plan her own affairs, to be by herself, to think her own thoughts. She comes back refreshed, stimulated, more in love with her home and her husband than she has ever been before. She says that husbands and wives and children sometimes see too much of each other and so grow tired of each other. Maybe there is something in it.

One never so fully appreciates his own country until he has visited another and has seen the conditions under which citizens of other lands exist. The man who comes into New York harbor from a trip abroad and does not feel a thrill of happiness and appreciation such as he has never felt before, as he sees the statue of Liberty and the Stars and Stripes flying, is a hopelessly dull and stupid soul. It is good for a man for a time to be absent from his country.

Gem Rush on in Archipelago

Pacific Island Is Famed for Black Pearls.

Washington.—At the apex of prosperity the single article most sought by the world of fashion was the black pearl, of which the finest specimens came from the Paumotu archipelago. Twenty fathoms deep in the South Pacific brown-skinned divers searched amid the coral for the black-lipped shells that house the great prize.

Annually there was a "pearl rush" from Papeete to the hidden atolls where the mother-of-pearl shells for distant button factories offered a certain income, while a chance lucky find of a big black pearl meant fabulous wealth. Millionaire yachtsmen charted their course to the sun-kissed atolls, first familiarized by bride's pendant or black pearl earrings.

Ten years ago one could learn of the Paumotu islands—known also as the Tuamotu archipelago—only from pilots' charts and half-recondite books of South sea lore. Now there are a dozen books, by tired business men, college boys, high seas racketeers, and Gov. Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania, which tell of their palms, pearls, and soft trade breezes.

The Paumotu, or Tuamotu, archipelago is situated about 4,500 miles southwest from Panama. It comprises about 100 island and islets, in total area 330 square miles, scattered over 1,000 miles of ocean expanse. The population is variously estimated from 3,500 to 5,000, chiefly Polynesians, but in the black pearl days including also numerous Europeans, Americans, and Asiatics.

Because of the uniformly low elevation of the Paumotu coral isles, usually only 15 to 45 feet above the sea, they are known to mariners as the "Low" or "Dangerous" archipelago, and countless ships have dashed to pieces on unlighted reefs.

The islands were discovered in 1601 by the Spanish navigator Pedro Fernandez Quiros, and after centuries of indeterminate status were occupied by France in the middle of the Nineteenth

Seeing Red

When we face the sunlight with our eyes closed we do not seem to be in darkness but rather a reddish glow penetrates our vision. This is because the red blood in our eyelids closes out all other colors which go to make up light, allowing only the red to pass through.

Digging Into the Past
The annual Smithsonian exploration reports tell of science's march through jungles, deserts and mountains in an unceasing quest for more knowledge about human beings, bugs, birds and beasts. Important among the fossil-gathering expeditions was that under Dr. Charles W. Gilmore. In Montana and Wyoming it found 600 specimens of fossil animals. The prizes were the partial skeletons of a rhinoceros-like creature and six skulls of ancient crocodiles.

Mercolized Wax Keeps Skin Young

Get an ounce and use as directed. Fine particles of wax skin peel off until all defects such as pimples, liver spots, tan and freckles disappear. Skin is then soft and velvety. Your face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty of your skin. To remove wrinkles use one ounce powdered Benzoin dissolved in one-half pint witch hazel. At drug stores.

BABY "WENT TO ALMOST NOTHING"

Then Eagle Brand saved the day!

"We are sending you a picture of our daughter, Alice Ann," writes Mrs. Joel Buttgerreit, 132 Arch St., Verona, Penn., "to show you what Eagle Brand has done for our baby when three other baby foods failed.

"Our baby weighed 9 pounds at birth and went to almost nothing. Then we tried Eagle Brand, and with her first feeding, she seemed satisfied. She started to pick up right away and at eight months weighed 26 pounds and had 8 teeth.

"Writing could never express our gratitude for what Eagle Brand has done for our baby."

If your baby is not thriving on his present food we suggest that you and your doctor consider Eagle Brand. Send for free booklet. The new and complete edition of "Baby's Welfare" contains practical feeding information and suggestions for supplementary foods—orange juice, cereals, cod-liver oil, etc.—advised by doctors.

Every picture and letter published by The Borden Company is voluntarily sent us by a grateful parent or other relative.

Fresh Air and Warmth

The public health service says that fresh warm air of a proper degree of moisture and free from appreciable draft is now recognized as essential to indoor workers. The old idea that a cold room necessarily contains fresh air and that comfortably warm rooms necessarily contain bad air has been discarded.

Army of Tree Dwellers

When a tree was cut down on a banana plantation it was found to be quite a residential quarter. It was the home of 3 snakes, 4 families of birds, 1 opossum, 2 hives of domestic bees, 1 hive of native bees, myriads of white ants, many wood grubs, and of course, thousands of tiny insects.

Consumers

The intermediate consumer is one who is buying things to be used in making other products. Such a person is consuming goods used in the production of other goods. The ultimate consumer is one that uses the completed product.
