WIN 5 TO 3 GAME FROM IOSCO INDIES

Tawas City defeated the Iosco County Independents in a bitter battle at Sand Lake last Sunday by a score of 5 to 3. The contest was well played and was filled with spectacular catches and hits.

Led at bat by Myers, who contributed a triple and single to drive in three of the locals' runs, A. Zollweg with three hits out of four official trips to the plate, and Quick with a perfect day at bat with three hits, the Tawas City boys took revenge over the Ioscos for a beating given them several weeks ago, and hammered C. Frank, the Iosco pitcher, for 11 safeties. Brown, local hurler, went along smoothly, allowing seven hits and striking out seven. Frank whiffed 15 men.

Leo Jordan, Roach and Quick thrilled the crowd with spectacular catches in the field.

Tawas City's schedule for this week end includes Oscoda at Oscoda Sunday, September 4th, and the East Tawas Independents at the local athletic field Labor Day, Monday, September 5th.

OHIO MAN DROWNS AT LONG LAKE

John P. Burgess, 56 years old, of Youngstown, Ohio, and a summer resident at Long Lake, was drowned Wednesday afternoon in Lost Lake, a small lake near Long Lake. The body was recovered at ten o'clock Thursday morning.

Mr. Burgess disappeared Wednesday afternoon. Thursday morning Sheriff Charles Miller was notified by telephone and he immediately ordered Deputy Sheriff M. J. Dyer to institute a search. While a search of the cottages and territory in the vicinity was being made, word came that Reine Barnett and James Dorcy had seen the deceased man's hat hanging to some brush on the bank of Lost Lake. At ten o'clock the body was discovered in about 10 feet of water about 20 feet from the shore.

NAME SELECTED FOR NEW SERVICE STATION "Scenic Super-Service Station," submitted by Mrs. James Ford of East Tawas, was selected as the name for the new Shell service station at East Tawas. "Three in One Service Station" by Leonard Hosbach won second place, and "Hospitality Inn" by Fave Gurley won third place.

"RADIO PATROL" COMING TO STATE THEATRE A revelation of the adventurous night excursions and dangerous clashes with crime and the underworld officers comes to the screen of the State Theatre this week Friday and Saturday when Universal's exciting "Radio Control" will be shown.

This timely picture presents for the first time the story of these intrepid night riders who hunt down criminals while the world sleeps or listens to their signals loud down on the dial. It is a story of the most recent development of police systems, employing the radio to corner the underworld menaces who lurk in the night of a big city.

Lila Lee returns to the screen after two years away in the sympathetic role of the girl who wins the hearts of the rival night riders. Robert Armstrong and Russell Hopton share male lead honors in roles which give them both an opportunity to exhibit to the fullest their unusual screen talents. Other prominent members of the cast of this whirlwind picture include Andy Devine, June Clyde, Onslow Stevens, Sidney Toler, Harry Woods, and others.

NOTICE—FURNITURE FOR SALE We have two extra nice loads of good used furniture for this week. Now is the time to buy when you can furnish that room at a low price. Our new location—in Tait building, opposite East Tawas high school. DAN PHIPPS We Buy, Sell and Exchange

FINAL NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS Only a few more days left. If you would avoid the penalty, your taxes should be paid before September 15th. Chas. Duffy, Treasurer.

WILL HOLD HORSE MEET AND WESTERN RODEO AT FAIR GROUNDS SEPT. 9 to 12

Announcement was made today by M. H. Barnes that a Western Rodeo and Horse Meet will be held Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday, September 9, 10, 11 and 12, at the Iosco County Fair Grounds.

Mr. Barnes said, "Since the Iosco County Fair was temporarily discontinued this year, many have asked me why county horse races could not be put on in its place. After some deliberation and the promise of co-operation of those interested, it was decided to put on a good rodeo and a series of horse events. We have secured the Wm. Rayburn Rodeo, well known to all of our county fair patrons. This rodeo has a complete new equipment, with new acts and new features. There will be a midway and the usual rides and entertainment for the children. I and many other people of the county are interested in having the Iosco County Fair re-established and the patronage given to this Rodeo and Horse Meet will indicate how much the people favor a fair. The Iosco County Fair was organized 58 years ago and was one of the first established in northern Michigan. A county fair has a worthwhile value and we should not dispense with it until every effort to make it a success has met failure. A full announcement of the advertising will appear the first of next week."

Race Program Friday Afternoon—Farmers Horse Race. Purse $75.00; divided 50%, 30% and 20%. Saturday Afternoon—Race. Will be announced later. Sunday Afternoon—Running Race. Purse $75.00; divided 50%, 30% and 20%. Monday—Extra features. Particulars announced later. Those wishing to secure concessions at the fair grounds should see Mr. Barnes at once.

ASKED NOT TO REVEAL CLIMAX OF "DOCTOR X" Even your best friend won't tell you, if the request of Mr. Berube, manager of the Family Theatre, East Tawas, is heeded. During the current run of the First National picture, "Doctor X," at the Family Theatre, next Sunday and Monday, September 4-5, Manager Berube is going against the general rule of exploitation and begging his audiences not to divulge the essential interest of the picture to their friends. The interest lies very cleverly in the laughs and thrills of this contrived mystery which winds melodrama. The denouement of this mystery comes as such a surprise as to provide one of the greatest cinematic thrills of the year. In order that each person who views the picture may get the utmost out of this cleverly woven story, Manager Berube is seeing to it that they come to the theatre without any foreknowledge of its ultimate revelation. "Doctor X," which is in Technicolor, is played by a cast capable of the finest entertainment. Lee Tracy once more gives an outstanding performance as a wise-cracking reporter, while Fay Wray supplies the charming love interest. Lionel Atwill, John Wray, Peston Poster and many others contribute largely to the picture's success.

DISCUSSIONS TO THE VOTERS OF IOSCO COUNTY Just at present there seems to be a lot of criticism and loose talk regarding the actions of the County Road Commissioners. The principal thing that is being criticized is the building of a road along Tawas Bay up the Lake Huron shore, to a point where the new state trunk line road will strike the shore. Now, Mr. Voter, be fair. The resort property along this road is on the 1932 assessment roll for $131,150 and part of it has been assessed for a large amount for the last thirty-five years and has paid a good many thousands of dollars in taxes. Now let us make some comparisons with roads to resort property in the rest of the county. Plainfield township has a road into its Long Lake resort, a gravel road to South Branch leading to Jose and Chain lakes, 1 1/2 miles of gravel on road to Londo Lake, two miles of gravel road leading to Welcome Lake and the AuSable river. Also when the Federal Forest department and State Highway Department proposed to build a road from the east end of the Esmond road to Five Channels, the County Road Commission prevailed upon them to build north out of Hale, thereby giving Plainfield four miles of road through the

SAGINAW HARDWARE TO PLAY HALE SUNDAY AND MONDAY

Smith Saginaw Hardware team will play the Hale Tigers Sunday and Monday afternoons. Hale defeated this team two weeks ago with a score of four to two. This was an exciting game and the two games scheduled for Sunday and Monday are expected to be more so.

A large number of entries have been received for the second annual Tawas Golf Club Tournament which is to start next week. More entries have already been received than the number of contestants last year. The entry fee this year is only fifty cents and entries should be made with Arthur Dillon at East Tawas, Hugo Keiser at Tawas City or Frank Brown at the golf course.

Most of the entrants have completed their 36 holes for qualifying scores which are necessary to fix the individual handicaps. Entrants have until the evening of Labor Day, September 5th, to turn in four nine-hole rounds. These may be played at any time but each qualifying player must be accompanied by his qualifying rounds by another player who is participating in the tournament. The qualifying player should sign his score cards at the top and the accompanying player should sign at the bottom as witness.

First round competitors will be determined by drawing. Two days will be allowed for playing each round of matches. All matches will be 18 holes and may be played all in one day or nine holes each day. First round matches will begin on Wednesday, September 7th. There will be no tournament matches played on Sunday, September 11th, due to the visit of the West Branch golf team to the local course for a team match with the local club members.

All matches will be played under the regulations of the U. S. Golf Association with only such exemptions as may be made by the committee in charge and which exceptions will be posted at the course during the tournament. The committee will furnish a referee for such matches as may require official interpretation of the rules.

Tentative plans are to award a gold medal for the lowest 36-hole score turned in for the qualifying rounds and silver trophies for the first and second place winners of the match play.

SPILES FOR NEW BRIDGE FROM MILO STEVENS FARM The spiles for the new AuSable river bridge were furnished by Mrs. Tillie S. Robinson and were cut on what is known as the Milo Stevens farm. The spiles are exceptionally fine timber.

"WAYWARD" HAS MIDDLING MOTHER-IN-LAW THEME "Wayward," based upon Mateel Howe Farnham's novel "Wild Beauty" co-stars Nancy Carroll, Richard Arlen, and Pauline Frederick, three cinema stars of notable achievement and popularity. "Wayward" presents the theme of a persecuting mother-in-law, the part portrayed by Pauline Frederick, who thinks her son's wife, Nancy Carroll, is quite unworthy of the affections of her darling boy, Richard Arlen, and certainly quite beneath the social prominence and dignity of the Brownest-Frost families, the most aristocratic in Cloughbarrie. Of course, she would be fair to the girl—who was pretty—and try to make her worthy of her new position—but it was all a terrible mistake. This type of dramatic story was very popular in the old days. Audiences would develop a vigorous hatred for the contemptible activities of the mother-in-law and applaud vociferously the sweet young wife when in apt phrases she confounded her persecutor and proved herself to be a devoted wife and perfect lady.

The picture was made in New York by Edward Sloman, who also directed such notable successes as "Caught," "Murder by the Clock," and "His Woman." This picture with an extraordinary cast headed by a tri-star combination of screen favorites is the State Theatre feature for Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

TWO LOVELY WEDDING CEREMONIES

LESLE—MISENER A beautiful wedding was solemnized at 9 o'clock Sunday morning at the Baptist church when Miss Alta Leslie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. H. Leslie, became the bride of Milton Misener, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alva Misener of East Tawas. Rev. Frank Metcalf read the marriage service. The wedding march was played by Miss Marjorie Sage. Mrs. Nyda Leslie sang "Oh Promise Me," with Arthur Johnson, accompanying.

The bride was charming in a pastel blue organdie gown with pink accessories, and carried an arm bouquet of pink rose buds. Miss Delta Leslie, the maid of honor, wore a pastel pink organdie dress with blue accessories, and Miss Helen Misener, the bridesmaid, wore a similar dress in peach organdie with white accessories. They wore corsage bouquets of pink rose buds.

Willard Friz of Lansing served as best man, Stephen Noble of East Lansing assisting.

A wedding breakfast was served at the Leslie home to the wedding party at 11 o'clock, following with a reception that evening for relatives and friends. Garden flowers were used throughout the rooms. The young couple will make their home in Tawas City.

METCALF—SIEFERT At 10:30 Thursday morning, Miss Jean Metcalf, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Frank Metcalf of this city, and Rev. George Siefert of Chicago spoke their marriage vows before the altar of the Baptist church. Rev. Frank Metcalf read the ceremony. Mrs. Nyda Leslie sang "At Dawning," accompanied by Arthur Johnson. The wedding march was played by Mrs. R. Hamilton.

The bride was attired in a pink crepe suit and a turban of pink with white accessories. She carried an arm bouquet of pink rose buds. Miss Bessie Metcalf, as bridesmaid for her sister, was attired in a pastel green suit, with white accessories. Willis Lewis of Jefferson, N. Y., attended the ceremony.

Rev. and Mrs. Siefert left after the wedding dinner for Boston, Mass., where they will visit the former's parents.

Mrs. Siefert graduated from Tawas City high school, class of 1929, and since has attended the Northern Baptist Seminary at Chicago. Rev. Siefert, also a student of the Seminary, is pastor of the Westmont Baptist church in Chicago.

"ORDER OF THE PURPLE HEART" MEDAL AWARDED TO W. A. DEGROW For meritorious service during the World War, W. A. DeGrow this week received from the War Department, a medal of the "Order of the Purple Heart." This award was established by George Washington in 1782, and since has been revived on the occasion of the Bi-Centennial of Washington's birth.

Mr. DeGrow, born in Iosco county, was in Flint when the war broke out. He enlisted as a private in the marines, and served 11 months overseas. He fought at Chateau Thierry, Belleau Woods and Soissons.

At Chateau Thierry, when the Marines met and crushed a ferocious onslaught, "DeGrow carried a load of ammunition in a truck to the front under a heavy barrage," says a yellowed newspaper clipping, which one of the Legionnaires has handed in. He was wounded by shrapnel in the hand and shoulder while thus engaged. Mr. DeGrow declines to discuss the intricacies of these events with a newspaper reporter; but the French government awarded him the Croix de Guerre for his services, and later conferred upon him the "four ragere," for "fine conduct before the enemy." And he admits, laughingly, that General Petain, of the French army, kissed him.

Respecting Mr. DeGrow's modesty, The Gazette reporter refrains from writing further paragraphs; but, with his many friends in expressing our pleasure that this latest citation from a grateful government—"The Order of the Purple Heart"—is given him.—The Iosco County Gazette.

Martin Schlechte, Jr., returned Saturday from Balsam Lake, Wis., where he spent several months. Merle Benson of Flint accompanied him home.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS OPEN TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 6

The Tawas City Public School will open Tuesday morning, September 6, at nine o'clock. A meeting of the faculty will be held Monday morning for the purpose of making organization plans for the ensuing day.

The custodian, Mr. Fahselt, is now busy preparing the building and grounds to receive the pupils and teachers the first of next week. During the summer new floors have been placed in the upper-intermediate rooms and in the front hall leading from this room. Other improvements are the cement foundation placed under the front of the building, and the large room formed in the basement. Pupils, parents, and teachers should appreciate the efforts of the Board of Education to improve the physical conditions of the school. Mention should also be made of the improved appearance of the school plant caused by the splendid lawn which has been developed during the past two years.

The faculty for the ensuing year is composed of Arthur E. Giddings, superintendent; John R. Forsten, principal of the high school; Miss M. Louise Crosby, English-Latin; Miss Helen Brothwell, commercial; Miss Geraldene Gulliford, music-art; Mrs. Lulu Bigelow, seventh-eighth; Mrs. Thelma Brown, fifth-sixth; Miss Hattie Look, third-fourth; Mrs. Emma Anshuetz, first-second.

Miss Brothwell, Miss Look, Miss Brown, and Miss Look are new to the system. Mrs. Bigelow is returning to the system, and Mr. Giddings, Mr. Forsten, Miss Crosby and Mrs. Anshuetz have been in the system for the past several years.

The superintendent, Arthur E. Giddings, holds the degree of Bachelor of Arts from the Michigan State Normal College of Ypsilanti, the degree of Bachelor of Science from the Michigan State College of East Lansing, and has spent the past four summers in the Graduate School of the University of Michigan, taking work leading to the degree of Master of Arts, and specializing in general school administration. Before coming to Tawas City, Mr. Giddings held a similar position in the public schools of Unionville, Michigan.

The principal of the high school, John R. Forsten, holds the degree of bachelor of arts from Hope College of Holland, Michigan, and has completed two summers of work in the Graduate School of the University of Michigan. Previous to his present position, Mr. Forsten was instructor in mathematics and athletic coach in the public schools of Williamston, Michigan.

"AMERICAN MADNESS" MORE THAN A MOTION PICTURE Columbia Pictures has a great smashing, drama in its "American Madness," coming to the Family Theatre, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, September 6-7-8.

Here is the first picture that steps up and seriously considers that little situation known as "The Depression." The action covers twenty-four hours. Sounds dull? Wait until you see it!

Why, the run on the bank is more exciting than an advancing army! And the scene in which the small business men rush to save the bank by depositing their profits will bring tears. This story about money is more poignant than most of the sweetheart hokum of the day!

NOTICE TO CUSTOMERS We will be closed Saturday afternoon on account of the funeral of Chas. Zink. Will be open in the evening. Moeller Bros.

French Exposition of Educational Interest

Shows Interesting Objects From Asia and Africa.

Washington.—Following its famous Colonial exposition of last year Paris this season is flocking to an exposition of the recently discovered geography of two continents, Asia and Africa.

Americans visiting France are going in large numbers to this exposition—that of the Citroen-Haardt expeditions, first to cross the Sahara by motor, first through the heart and length of Africa and that just returned from making the first wheeled span of Asia, through the least-known regions of the giant continent. Americans have a special interest in the new exposition because it includes a photographic survey made by the American representative from the National Geographic society which co-operated with the Trans-Asia expedition.

The spanning of Asia by motor, accounted the outstanding exploration of 1932, entered areas never before traversed by Europeans, covered many stretches not traveled since Marco Polo's time, visited places where wheeled vehicles hitherto were unknown, and photographed many regions, peoples and natural objects which never before had faced a camera.

Interesting Exhibits.
The exposition is housed in the vast Palais des Expositions in the Place de l'Europe. It is set up in 15 "salons" or divisions. One displays a complete Mongolian yurt, the mobile felt home of the nomads of the east Asiatic plateau, with the implements these wandering people carry from place to place, and the richly ornamented costume of a Mongol princess, costume models of Kirghiz women, various other nomad apparel, headgear, and the exotic jewelry of the desert tribes.

Archaeological collections contain many objects first shown in Europe; medical exhibits bear especially upon the curious and ancient practices of Chinese healing; and natural history collections include plants, insects, and animal specimens which add new data to knowledge of life forms of the continent where mankind originated.

Of great interest is the ethnographic salon where is displayed a collection of specimens from Syria, Persia, Afghanistan, India, Burma, Indo-China and Turkestan.

By employing motors for the first time in spanning Asia, the expedition was able to drive its specially built tractor-type cars through unexplored parts of mountain-furrowed Afghanistan; into 14,000-foot passes of the Himalayas higher than many peaks of the Alps, where no wheels ever before had turned on steep, snow-bound yak trails, across the trackless wastes of the Gobi desert and through bandit-infested wild western China. Use of the cars enabled the modern equipment, including color cameras, short-wave radio, sound-recording apparatus and numerous scientific instruments to portray, study and collect specimens of all phases of the long-hidden wonders of the mother continent.

To face extremes of heat and cold—ranging from 25 below zero to 115 above—clothing had to be carried which varied from suits invented by Sir Ernest Shackleton for Antarctic work to khaki safari blouses, shirts and pith helmets for protection against the blazing desert sun. These and other equipment were hauled in trailers and there was a kitchen car where food could be prepared while the motor caravan was on the move, so meals might be served immediately for the halts, which were frequently brief in runs that ran as long as 16 hours a day.

Bullet-Scarred Car.
In the main hall of the exposition is the bullet-scarred car in which the leader, Georges-Marie Haardt, was riding when it was riddled by the fire of Chinese brigands. The "Salon of Honor" is the room devoted to the martyr leader of the expedition, M. Haardt, who, after making the arduous 10,000-mile journey without the loss of a man, himself died of pneumonia, weakened by exhaustion after months of leading his motor caravan through untracked areas.

Portrayed in diorama—a mode of scenic representation devised by Daguerrre—are contrasting scenes in the Gobi desert and the ascent of the formidable Burzil pass, in the Himalaya mountains.

The National Geographic society's exhibit comprises a wide series of noteworthy photographs, in sepia enlargement, constituting a pictorial representation of the expedition's process, taken by the society's representative, Dr. Maynard Owen Williams, who was decorated with the Legion of Honor upon arrival in China. It also includes exhibits of the society's various world explorations, and of its world-wide scientific and educational work. The American exhibit was assembled at the headquarters of the society in Washington, upon invitation of M. Andre Citroen, patron of the African and Asiatic expeditions.

In recognition of the Franco-American co-operation in the explorations the National Geographic society recently elected the president of France an honorary member of the society, an honor accorded fewer than a score of individuals in the history of the society.

Texas Dog Works in U. S. Civil Service

Willis, Texas.—Although he has never been placed on the pay roll, a hound dog here is one of the most faithful of the United States civil service workers.

At three o'clock every morning a bus driver deposits a sack of mail on the sidewalk of this little inland town. As the bus driver leaves, the dog lies down on the sack and allows no one to approach the mail until the postmaster arrives several hours later.

Uncle Sam Makes War on Beetles

Uncle Sam has declared war—but the object of his wrath is a pernicious insect invader who will this year attempt to destroy as much of the nation's food, flowers and shrubbery as possible, just as he has done in past seasons. The pest, known as the Japanese beetle, is being battled by means of traps, which might be called "execution chambers." At the left are shown some of the 600 death chambers in which 200 different kinds of poison are used to determine which is the most fatal to the beetle, at the experimental station at Moorestown, N. J. Miss Gertrude Presscott, at right, is shown examining one of the traps.

Bandit's Fate Arouses Corsica

Case of Last of Robin Hoods Divides Island.

Bastia, Corsica.—The fate of the picturesque and romantic honor bandits of Corsica is swinging in the balance as a court decision decides the case of the last of the Robin Hoods, known as Jean Simon Ettori, who ranged the island brush for 27 years and gave himself up to the authorities in their campaign to cleanse the island.

All of Corsica is divided over the question, which they claim is one of honor, involving the right of native Corsicans to pursue their feuds and live the free and adventurous life of banditry, according to the code in which personal honor with a dash of kindness and gallantry, flavors their ways.

Ettori claims he committed only one crime, and that 27 years ago, which was demanded on the honor of his family. Being thus outlawed, Ettori accepted the life of beautiful and primitive hillside, and for 27 years he carried on in the true Robin Hood style.

Ettori was unsympathetic to the killers and murderers who rob taverns and poor people indiscriminately to the bad repute of the island and the Corsican race.

It is claimed that Ettori's past is not all filled with gallant exchanges of booty from rich to poor, nor are his days and nights idyls of free and romantic beauty in the flower-scented headlands over the Sapphire sea. There is a little item of the killing of Antoine Lenzi at Pila Canale, when three distinguished bandits arrived at his tavern, demanded much wine, asked for the bill and paid it with bullets, killing Lenzi and blinding a customer, Dominique Casablanca.

There is a tale of wounded gendarmes in a scuffle at Sapparellu when a bandit was being sought who had not done his military service, and who let a gun fall in his flight, and this gun bore the name of Simon Ettori. These incidents must be studied by the court, but there is no doubt that Ettori has honorably presented himself to the court, and if it decides he has honorably lived, Ettori, the honor bandit, will go free.

Cigar Boxes Are Used to Build Model Church

Geneva, N. Y.—A three-foot model of a cathedral tower, made of nothing but cigar boxes, has been constructed by Russell R. Isenhour.

Five spires surmount the structure, which is complete with alcoves, porticos and entrances. The exterior is arrayed in numerous metallic colors, including gold, bronze, aluminum and purple.

One of the most remarkable features of the model is its mechanical equipment. The tower contains an old German clock. In a miniature street in front of the building stands a lamp post, surmounted by a little electric clock. As the clock prepares to strike the hour, a tiny mechanical man emerges from the building. He holds an electric light in his hand. Going into the street, he turns about, glances at the face of the clock, and disappears into the doorway.

Civilization Means Toothache to Eskimo

Washington.—To the Eskimo civilization means a toothache. White men started dental trouble among the Alaskan natives, the Smithsonian institution said recently in a report of studies by Henry B. Collins, Jr.

Collins examined many Eskimos. Natives in remote spots who fed mostly on fish, seal and birds had good teeth. But those at Nome and other white settlements were cases for the dentist. Collins concluded, white man's food was bad for teeth.

Modern Contract Bridge

No. 16.

Responding to No Trump Bids

IF THE next opponent passes after your partner has opened with one or two no trump, and you have from 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 honor-tricks, look first for a regulation take-out in a biddable five-card suit. Failing a suit bid, you may raise a one no trump bid once on two honor-tricks plus. Your yardstick measurement tells you that a partnership holding of five honor-tricks is sufficient for a contract of two no trump. Being assured that your partnership has at least 4 1/2 plus, it is good policy, even at a slight risk, to keep the bidding open, rather than to chance a pass which might leave your partner high and dry with a holding far stronger than the minimum.

As a matter of fact, few original no trump bids actually occur on the absolute minimum of 2 1/2 honor-tricks, but are almost always reinforced with extra tricks or plus values.

To raise a partner's original two no trump bid to game requires only about one honor-trick plus. Holding three honor-tricks with no biddable suit, jump your partner's one no trump bid to game. If you have a biddable five-card suit, major or minor, make a forcing take-out of three in the suit. This jump take-out forces your partner to rebid either four in the trump declared or three no trumps if weak in your suit. Even though he has opened on a minimum count he must keep the flag flying after you have signalled him so emphatically that your partnership is in the game zone.

Examples where partner has opened with one no trump which has not been overcalled:

The Forcing Bid of Two
When you find yourself the happy possessor of 5 1/2 honor-tricks, which by the yardstick measurement tell you that there are no more than three defensive tricks outstanding, you are practically assured of game if you can be certain of playing at the best possible contract for your partnership hands.

In other words, to make the most of your valuable hand, you must do three things first, notify your partner that there is a game in sight; second, force him to co-operate in arriving at the best final contract; third, keep the bidding low until you are sure that the most advantageous choice has been made.

To serve all of these purposes an unconditional forcing bid is required, and a forcing bid of two in your best suit is ideal. A two-bid is high enough to serve definite notice on your partner that thereafter he is forced to keep the bidding open until a game contract (or its penalty equivalent) is reached, while it is low enough to leave ample room for as full an exchange of informative bids as may be necessary.

Requirements for forcing two bids are:
With 5 1/2 HONOR-TRICKS in three suits—you may make an opening two-bid in any biddable four-card, or longer, suit.

With 5 HONOR-TRICKS in three suits—you may make an opening two-bid with a powerful five-card suit with additional outside playing-tricks; with a strong six-card suit; with a two-suiter; or with a practically solid five-card suit.

With 4 1/2 HONOR-TRICKS in three suits—you may make an opening two-bid with a long, solid trump suit or a freak two-suiter.

Pain

A lot of trash is talked about pain—chiefly by those who have never had to endure it—smug philosophers and pious folk who have taken good care of their own carcasses and escaped diseases. Pain does one good thing for a man against a lot of bad ones. Pain lowers our usefulness and tends to weaken our hope—bad things both. But the fine thing it should do is to make chronic sufferers big-hearted and sympathetic to the woes of the world. Pain is responsible for much human sympathy—a very valuable possession for any man. Only those jest at scars who never felt a wound.—Eden Phillips.

Finds Gratitude Isn't

Among Elk's Virtues

Yellowstone Park, Wyo.—Elk in Yellowstone park have not been taught that gratitude ranks high among the virtues, according to Marion R. Crowell, park ranger.

Crowell recently found an elk calf floundering in the waters of the Madison river. The calf's mother, frantic in her desire to save her offspring, was standing on the bank, unable to aid the helpless youngster.

Crowell, who was on motorcycle duty, dismounted from his machine when he saw the calf's plight and swam into the icy waters. He managed to save the elk from drowning and took it to shore. As he was laying the calf down on the bank, he heard a bellow and snort behind him, and turned to see the mother elk coming in his direction in no uncertain manner.

The mother's anguish had turned to rage, and she did not seem to realize Crowell had saved her calf's life. Crowell fled.

TROPHY FOR WOMEN

This Aerial trophy and $5,000 in prize money were put up for the 50-mile competition for women pilots at the 1932 National Air races in Cleveland, August 27 to September 5. The trophy was won in 1929 by Phoebe Omlie of Memphis, Tenn.; in 1930 by Mrs. Gladys O'Donnell of Long Beach, Calif., and by Mrs. Maud Tait Morarty of Springfield, Mass., in 1931.

We Are at War!

By GENERAL JOHN J. PERSHING

Article II

LULLED into complacency by prosperity, our citizens passively accepted this poisonous growth with small concern. Now that our complacency is gone, we begin to study this foul phenomenon more carefully. We see it eating more and more deeply into our national life, infecting politics, extorting tribute from business, threatening our very homes. From my own study as an individual, I am convinced that prohibition has largely financed this new postwar underworld of ours. Vast profits have drawn multitudes into the bootlegging business, and, once outside the pale of the law, they do not hesitate to turn to racketeering and other forms of crime. Thus a criminal army has been built up which defies the very government itself.

I do not question the sincerity of the prohibitionists, nor their nobility of purpose. Yet the inability to enforce the law in this respect has resulted in such tragic consequences that I believe the time has come to face this question squarely and to work together toward some other solution which takes more account of the inevitable traits of human nature.

But neither the repeal nor the modification of the prohibition laws will altogether abolish crime. The estimated one million or more men, accustomed to the easy money of the bootleg and speakeasy business and with an utter contempt for law, cannot be thus converted into virtuous, law-abiding citizens overnight. Many will turn to other forms of illegitimate activity. Corrupt officials, deprived of bootleg tribute, will seek new sources of graft.

Our frontier ancestors, when the criminal element got out of control, formed themselves into vigilance committees, rounded up criminals, and strung them up on the nearest tree. Every red-blooded man, when he reads of the criminal activities of our modern racketeers and of their apparent immunity from capture and prosecution, feels a natural impulse to go out and organize a vigilance committee. But action can be taken, under the law, only through the constituted authorities. Any other course would lead to abuses greater than those it might correct.

The ability of the underworld to terrorize society lies in the fact that it is thoroughly organized, while society is not. At present it is more the gang against the individual than otherwise. Why should we not form neighborhood and community committees, so that the gang will find itself confronted with an organized body of men larger and stronger than itself? The more important his position in the community, the greater the obligation of the citizen to join the committee.

Can Force Action.

Such committees, made up of substantial citizens, who regard citizenship as a paramount obligation, could force action. Suppose a neighbor of yours gets a kidnaping threat, or a merchant is visited by a gangster who tries to extort tribute from him, or a section of the town experiences a series of holdups. If the individual citizen goes to the police station or city hall and fails to get satisfaction possibly because of an alliance between officials and the underworld he is powerless.

But if the neighborhood committee stands ready, at the very first threat of gangster activity within its borders, to take common action against the invasion, the picture changes. The threatened man immediately summons all his trusted friends, who advise with the neighborhood committee. Representing the militant citizenship of its community, it could demand positive action by the police and by the city authorities.

Committees of this kind would be vigilance committees, not in the old sense, but in the sense that they would be ever vigilant in the protection of rights and the performance of civic duties. I would consider it an honor to serve on such a committee myself.

These committees would serve many other purposes beyond the suppression of racketeering. They would present a united front against the grafting of officials. They could hold weekly or monthly meetings to discuss the problems of government. Such meetings would serve to bring out and develop, as no institution we now possess does, new leaders, especially among the young citizens, in every community.

One great aid to crime in America is the veil of anonymity which covers the individual. In any army, every man is accounted for. His name, rank, regiment, and whereabouts are known. If he is wanted, we know where to find him. In America we have no identification. Men can move from city to city, changing their names as they would their coats. They can register as they please at any hotel, with no questions asked. It is a pleasant, easy-going custom, but it puts an insuperable barrier in the way of the police in the detection of crime. The time has come when we must abandon the right to anonymity, as enlightened European countries have done.

Every resident of our country should have an identification card, a small passport with photograph attached. Change of permanent residence should be reported to the police. The card should be shown, if necessary, upon registration at any hotel, or on any other occasion when demanded by the police. The penalties for forging a card or disregarding regulations concerning it should be heavy.

I realize that the inconvenience of the card identification system would be burdensome. But it would be considerably less burdensome than the breakdown of our system for apprehending criminals. The cards would not be a cure-all, but they would be a great help. No honest man could object to a plan which would materially aid in rounding up criminals.

Just as the depression has finally opened our eyes to the magnitude of our crime problem, so has it brought home to us the very extravagant activities of unwise politicians during our prosperity orgy. While the citizens have neglected their public duties, the politicians have quietly but enormously increased the cost of government, locally and nationally. Expenditures of the national government in 1913 were approximately $700,000,000, exclusively of interest payments on the public debt. In 1931 they had increased to approximately $2,000,000,000, exclusive of interest payments on the public debt and expenses incident to the World War. The cost of administration of local governments throughout the country increased from $1,844,000,000 in 1913 to $7,126,000,000 in 1929. The budget of one of our cities, New York, for 1932, is greater than the expenditures of the entire national government for 1903. Some of these increases, unquestionably, have been necessary for expansion and for coping with the more complex problems of today. But an alarming portion of them have been with an eye to jobs for the politicians' friends. Unnecessary offices, boards, commissions, have been profligately multiplied.

And now, when our national revenues shrink, there is little done toward applying the logical remedy of reducing expenses. Instead, legislators resort to the vicious policy of increasing taxes, both direct and indirect. Thus the citizen finds himself burdened with the staggering load. But can he, with clear conscience, complain? He cannot. He elected these legislators, he saw them pile up lavish appropriations, and he elected them again. During the boom days the citizen was too busy in speculation himself to worry about the national debt or the local debt.

So with municipal affairs. During prosperity the citizens cheerfully looked on while the politicians multiplied unnecessary offices, gave extravagant contracts to their friends for public improvements, passed laws favoring special interests, and loaded the public with invisible taxes in the form of graft. Now many of our great cities are threatened with insolvency. Their depreciating securities imperil the solvency of banks where the citizen has his money. The citizen again discovers that he is the victim. But is he not the victim of his own neglect of the plainest duties of citizenship?

In the situation that now confronts him, the citizen is groping. What can he do now? What practical action can he take?

He is told to go to the polls and cast his vote, which is an old story to him, but by itself it will not remedy the situation, for too often the candidates of each party are incompetent or corrupt.

There is a great deal more to political duty than going to the polls to vote. A body of uninformed citizens flocking to the polls, prompted only by good intentions, is about as effective as an army made up of untrained men marching to battle.

Year after year, under universal suffrage, there has grown a wider divergence between theory and practice in our political economy.

To perform his civic duties effectively it is no longer enough for the citizen to understand the theory of politics. He must study its practice. That means time, trouble, and hard work. He must study the political forces at work in his own neighborhood, his own ward, his own district. He must go to political meetings, associate with politicians, find out who are the political leaders behind the scenes, drop in

"WHY should we not form neighborhood and community committees, so that the gang will find itself confronted with an organized body of men larger and stronger than itself? . . . Suppose a neighbor of yours gets a kidnaping threat, or a merchant is visited by a gangster who tries to extort tribute from him, or a section of the town experiences a series of holdups. If the individual citizen goes to the police station or city hall and fails to get satisfaction, he is powerless. But if the neighborhood committee stands ready, at the very first threat of gangster activity within its borders, to take common action against the invasion, the picture changes. . . . Representing the militant citizenship of this community, it could demand positive action by the police and by the city authorities.

"Committees of this kind would be vigilance committees, not in the old sense, but in the sense that they would be ever vigilant in the protection of rights and the performance of civic duties.

"I would consider it an honor to serve on such a committee myself!"

at the political clubs, look into the records and alliances of candidates for office.

Even this is not enough, unless there is some organization of non-political citizens to work with united force. Here again the neighborhood committees which I suggested earlier would have their uses. Such committees could compel the respect of the political leader and hold him to an accounting. They could hold meetings and ask candidates to appear before them, address them, and submit to questioning. Moreover, they could and should keep track of the political and financial administration of local and national affairs.

It might be inferred from what I say here that I think there are no good men in politics. On the contrary, we all know many fine men, honest men, able men in politics. But there are not enough of them.

One of our problems is to attract men of higher caliber into public life. Certainly the profession of government is as important as any calling in our nation. Yet it is not even taught in our schools and colleges. We teach political science, yes, but that is a far cry from practical politics. There is no alternative for the aspiring politicians but to learn their high art and profession at the knee of the district leader or ward captain—too often with undesirable results.

Corporations for the conduct of business, education, and charity have multiplied in number and importance in recent years. Service in hundreds of corporations is affording a new discipline for thousands in managing and directing people, and this in turn should be of the highest value toward supporting progress and durability in governmental affairs. But business men too often forget that the government is the most important corporation of all. They passively permit men to occupy public offices to whom they would deny jobs in their own companies. They fail to apply, on election day, the elementary rules they have learned in their business.

No Time for Shirking.

Business men say that politics is "unpleasant." So is service in the trenches unpleasant, but our citizens do not shirk it when duty calls. Carelessness, neglect, and ignorance in the conduct of the affairs of government have exactly the same results as they would have in any army facing the enemy on the field of battle. The obligations of the individual citizen as a part of this government are quite as binding as those of each soldier composing an army. Thorough training and a high sense of duty are as important in one case as in the other. The preparation of an army for service with any hope of success demands something more than writing out the details of organization and the issuance of orders. It requires the training of each individual of the army in the particular part he is to play at the front. It is the same in the successful conduct of the government. Each citizen must be trained in his duties and be inspired by a high sense of obligation in carrying them out.

Constitutions and laws do not of themselves guarantee either the efficiency or the permanence of government. In a government by the people the responsibility of the individual must be conscientiously fulfilled, or failure will be the result.

Make no mistake about it: Our nation is confronted by a crisis as serious as the crisis of the war. We are at war against depression and crime. And, just as to that earlier crisis, we come unprepared. Our unpreparedness in the war cost us untold billions in money and the lives of some of our finest men. Our unpreparedness for this battle of peace has also cost us dear.

But in the war, once we were aroused, we made effort which astonished the world. Just so today the American citizen, once he is aroused to the dangers that menace his country, will, I devoutly hope and believe, gloriously redeem his indifference of the past.

French Penal Code

France does not send all persons who commit crimes to the French penal colony on the Isle de Salut, off the coast of French Guiana. The type of prisoners sent is that, generally speaking, of the undesirable habitual criminal whom the French government does not want to return to France. In sentencing the criminal to the colonies the type of criminal rather than the type of crime committed is stressed, such as undesirable political prisoners, as well as vicious habitual criminals.

Sleepy Motorists

There is much all-night driving on the Connecticut highways, particularly by persons traveling between Boston and New York. Because there have been a number of serious accidents attributable to the operator of a vehicle going to sleep at the wheel, state police have adopted a plan of halting late-night travelers. The policeman asks the driver if he is sleepy and wants to take a nap. If the motorists says he would appreciate a rest period of a half-hour or so, the motor cycle officer tells him to pull well over to the side of the road and go to sleep, assuring the driver he will be called at the time he specifies.

Church Pew Space

The minimum spacing for church pews back to back is 30 inches—32 or even 33 inches to be preferred. A space of 18 inches in the length of the pew is considered a sitting. The actual seating capacity can be determined only by drawing the seats to an accurate scale on the floor plan and then measuring the linear feet of the pews. For approximate values six or seven square feet may be allowed for each seat.

MORTGAGE SALE

By reason of default in the payment and conditions of a mortgage made by Christine Ulrich Holland and her husband, James G. LEGISLATIVE—One candidate for Senator in the State Legislature for the Senatorial district of which said City forms a part; one candidate for Representative in the State Legislature for the Legislative district of which said City forms a part.

COUNTY—Also candidates for the following county offices, viz.: Judge of Probate, Prosecuting Attorney, Sheriff, County Clerk, County Treasurer, Register of Deeds, Circuit Court Commissioner, Drain Commissioner, Coroners, Surveyor, County Road Commissioner.

Delegates to County Convention

There shall also be elected as many DELEGATES to the County Convention of the several political parties as said ward, precinct or district is entitled to under the call of the county committees of said political parties, which number will be indicated by the number of blank lines printed on the official primary ballots used at said election, under the heading "Delegates to County Conventions".

The Board of Primary Election Inspectors shall certify to the County Clerk the names of the electors so elected as delegates, naming the political party upon whose ballots such electors were elected. The County Clerk shall notify by mail each person elected as such delegate, and shall certify to the chairman of the committee of each political party of the county, the delegates elected by such political party as delegates to the fall and succeeding spring county convention.

The name of the candidate for delegate to the county convention shall not be printed upon the official primary election ballot, but one or more such names may be placed on such ballot by printed or written slips pasted thereon by the voter, or the names may be written in by the voter.

Suggestions Relative to Voting

SEPARATE BALLOTS for each political party will be provided. The elector must name the political party of his choice when asking for a ballot and in marking his ballot must make a cross in the square to the left of the name of each candidate for whom he desires to vote, and can vote for only one candidate. After the ballot is prepared it should be folded so that the initials of the inspector below the perforated corner will be on the outside.

ODD THINGS AND NEW—By Lane Bode

Radio Takes High Place in American Industries

Total Investment Is Now Almost Two Billions

New York.—The radio industry, barely fifteen years old, has now a total investment of $1,800,000,000 and contributes more than $500,000,000 annually to the national wealth, according to an analysis of the industry in Dun's Review. It pays out $350,000,000 each year for operating expenses, spends $50,000,000 for entertainers, and provides entertainment and instruction for nearly 17,000,000 homes scattered from Maine to California. Of the invested capital, $150,000,000 represents the investment of radio manufacturers; $25,000,000 the investment in radio broadcasting; $1,600,000,000 in listeners' sets; and $25,000,000 the investment in commercial radio stations. It is the universal acceptance of the radio that is its best guarantee of continued popularity. To millionaire and laborer alike, it brings the vocal and instrumental genius of the world's foremost artists, reports of sporting events, political occurrences and the news of the world. Retains Popularity. The retail sales of radio products have fallen from the record peak in the last two years, yet this is not an indication of waning popularity for the instrument, but rather a sign of intense preparation for a period of great achievement. In fact, the drop in sales in 1931 to $309,270,000, and a decrease of 63 per cent from the $842,548,000 in 1929, which was the record year for the industry, is regarded as the natural sequence of the tumbling prices caused by the hectic activity during 1928 and 1929 when volume and volume alone was the aim of the industry. The major networks have increased revenues over those of last year, they are expanding facilities by acquiring stations in strategic locations. Two of the principal broadcasting companies, both with a basic network of twenty-one stations, charge around $5,000 an hour for night service and $2,500 an hour for day service. Both organizations have hook-ups with fifty or more outside stations which are available at an additional charge. Television, by being carried out experimentally, will, when developed, probably expand the field of radio. 35,000,000 Receivers. Of the 35,000,000 receiving sets installed in homes throughout the world, almost half, or 17,000,000, are operated under licenses. Subscription licenses, part or all of which are allocated to the support of broadcasting, are paid by 13,500,000 owners. The total population of radio-licensing countries is 370,000,000, approximately three times that of the United States. These nations have one-half as many stations as the United States, and one-third of these are operated under extra-monopoly arrangement. There are 73 countries now broadcasting in various parts of the world. Broadcasting is supported in whole or in part from licenses in 31 of these. During the past year there was an increase of nearly 25 per cent in the number of receivers in use. The increase was world-wide. There are now 1,423 radio broadcasting stations in the world, an increase of 33 since July, 1931. Of this number, 806 are foreign stations, operating in 70 countries, and 617 in the United States and its possessions. Of the 607 located in continental United States, New York takes first place with 52 broadcasting stations, and California second place with 43.

THE THINGS YOU HAVEN'T

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Late Dean of Men,
University of Illinois.

"It is the things you haven't," Gore said to me, "that you value most—the things that you have missed that you see in other people and that you realize, if you had had them, would have made a difference in you." He happened to be talking in this instance of education and of the attitude which the illiterate hold toward it. I had supposed until I had time to think the matter over that the illiterate were likely to think well of their illiteracy and somewhat to look down upon those who had given their minds and their time to education, but Gore says that it isn't true. He has had a good deal of experience in attempting to interest citizens in the support of a great public school system and in directing legislation in regard to the State university of his state.

Smart Cut Velvet

The smartness of cut velvet when that velvet is transparent, with the cut work in the form of well spaced huge flowers, needs no further advocacy than this picture.

"Where I was superintendent of schools," he said, mentioning one of the big school systems of the country. "I soon learned that I got far less help in furthering any new project which I might have in mind, from the educated members of the board than from those who without formal education had come up from the ranks. The man who had not himself had high school advantages in his youth wanted his children to have these privileges, and other children as well." I could see how he might. "It was the same way in the state legislature when we were working for an additional appropriation for the colleges of the state. The man who made the most dramatic plea for increased appropriations had scarcely himself been through high school and admitted that not a single man, so far as he knew, from the backwoods district which he represented was at that time in college. What he did not himself have he valued for other people." (©, 1932, Western Newspaper Union.)

Michigan Today

Michigan Makes a Major Part of the World's Air Rifles.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

A GREAT company of Michigan pioneers were recently honored when the Lumbermen's Memorial, overlooking the Au Sable river, was dedicated. Little did Monsieur Jean Nicolet, the first white man to set foot on Michigan in 1634, or the hardy pioneers who later laid a firm foundation upon which the state was built suspect that today their crude camps would be sites of great American cities joined by a splendid network of fine highways and railroads. In its infancy Michigan was a huge lumber camp; today its industries are legion. Detroit industries alone normally employ some 350,000 workers who are massed in units attaining to 55,000 or 65,000 in a single establishment. It is, of course, her automobile industry, which predominates in this mass employment. When the future state was surrendered by the British in 1796, nobody attached undue importance to a village named Detroit with its 500 inhabitants and an area less than a square mile. Skip 136 years and Detroit reappears as the nation's fourth largest city with an area of more than 140 square miles, a population of more than one and a quarter million and an industrial product value of $2,000,000,000 a year. Approaching the city by lake steamer one beholds a striking panorama. The Canadian side shows many miles of green meadows, while the American side reveals a gradually intensifying spectacle of mammoth cranes, towering stacks, vast factories—all of industry's bewildering panoply. Last the motorcar bulk disproportionately on Detroit's skyline, it should be remembered that the city's 3,000 major manufacturing plants include 35 lines that fall into the million-dollar-a-year class of productivity. In fact, ever since the days when Detroit made the first gold pens, ran the first refrigerator cars and built among the earliest of sleeping cars—and, tradition adds, mixed the first ice-cream soda—the Michigan metropolis has been a plexus of diversified manufacturing.

Detroit's Remarkable Growth.
Her growth, measured in terms of population, has increased more than 360 per cent during this century. Indeed, her present roll of industrial operatives surpasses by more than 60,000 her total population of 1900. Within the past ten years the office cloud-toucher has taken its place in Detroit's skyline, and apartment hotels and hotel skyscrapers cannot be reared fast enough to keep pace with her growth. In fact, Detroit's rapid changes in physiognomy justify the English writer who remarked of American cities, "Wrecked buildings spring up like mushrooms." One turns gratefully from Detroit's traffic-choked thoroughfares into that loveliest retreat of all her 3,000 acres of park space—Belle Isle. In trading eight barrels of rum, three rolls of tobacco and six pounds of warpaint for the Indian-owned Belle Isle, the city's forefathers achieved something not to be expressed by its present valuation of many millions of dollars; for Belle Isle park is at once the worker's restful Avalon, treasure-hunting childhood's pirate lair, and every one's enchanted island, with song-birds as Ariels and caged bears as Calibans. What more intriguing than a wooded island park, canalized for canoeing, dotted with picnickers' stoves, and visited by a symphony orchestra—this on the edge of a great industrial city? Pontiac, a town founded in the early boom period, leaped into the general expansion frenzy by taking out the state's first railroad charter in 1830. Six years later work was begun on the Detroit & Pontiac railroad. Presently man a pioneer, upon hearing the first locomotive's distant shriek, was seizing his gun to "git the bar" with the strident voice.

Grand State for Lumber.
The original track of wooden, iron-sheathed rails was soon discharging ripped-off fragments of sheathing through the car bottoms. These "snake-heads," as the flying fragments were called, caused many a casualty among the passengers until the D. & P. came handsomely to the rescue with "a new and elegant car" whose metal flooring smothered the snake-head offensive. Michigan's through-rail connection with the East was established by the completion of the Great Western railroad in 1854. Nowadays the state's transportation is served by steam lines operating 8,700 miles, motor coaches 7,000 miles, and electric lines 1,000 miles. Michigan's every city, it seems, must make something, and her very capital is not content to make only laws. Lansing normally has 15,000 hands engaged in industries, mainly the automotive or auxiliary thereto, producing an annual output valued at $185,000,000. Though Lansing's forests have long since yielded to the spacious avenues radiating from her lawn-surrounded state house, and though the cry for reforesting the state is widespread, the capital and her sister cities rank among the country's most beautifully tree-shaded communities. Sometimes appearing as if buried in greenery, and for the most part displaying regularly spaced maples along foliage-roofed streets, Michigan's towns thus preserve a souvenir of the great logging area of their state. Michigan's "forest primal" lay with pine and softwoods mainly to the north of 43rd parallel of latitude, and with the hardwoods mainly to the south of it. A century ago her area was still 97 per cent timbered. In the expansion period that followed the Civil war the state loomed up as the great pine producer. Eastern farmers turned pioneer and trekked Michiganward for their fractional investment in the 125,000,000,000 feet of timber that rose north of Saginaw. The prairie states were calling for timber, and Michigan's was massed in big stands with easy river access to the Great Lakes. Up sprang 800 camps employing 25,000 loggers. Plank roads were laid through the wilderness. In 1875 there were 30 solid miles of logs in the Au Gres. For more than 30 years men chopped and saws screamed, until in 1890 Michigan's pine lumbering reached its peak with 4,250,000,000 feet.

Transition to Manufacturing.
But the young states transition period from lumbering to manufacturing was not accomplished without growing pains. Her forests shorn, a host of lumber towns—Ludington, Cheboygan, Bay City, Manistee, Alpena, Muskegon, Saginaw—relapsed temporarily into stagnation or ruin. The story of Muskegon is typical. Her glories fled, her people trekked, and grass grew in her streets. Then slowly she rebuilt herself on the deserts left by vanished sawmills. How, the woodworking, automotive and other industries have lifted the once-ruined town to her present prosperity is one of the most striking stories in Michigan annals.

Saginaw, once such a "Sawmill City" that her shore area was materially enlarged by filling in the shallow lagoons with incalculable tons of sawdust, represents a similar rise, fall, and comeback. To-day she normally pays more in freight bills on her automotive and other products than her famed lumber cut was worth 40 years ago. Flint took refuge in carriage building. Many a town started diversified woodworking as a stop-gap. Citizens at Ludington, Manistee, and elsewhere bored the earth, produced brines, and made the steam of lumber mills evaporate the brine into salt. There was a state-wide spectacle of Michigan remaking herself. But not until around the turn of the present century did she set a firm foot on the industrial ladder, up which she has since made so spectacular an ascent.

Where the Mint Grows.
Southwest of Lansing the Indian place-name of Kalamazoo ("beautiful water") still holds true by reason of the cold springs which once refreshed the red man and nowadays refresh a muck-land celery crop valued at upward of $2,000,000. The same muck region puts Michigan topmost, along with northern Indiana, in peppermint. These two sections produce, for pharmaceutical and other purposes, 85 per cent of the United States supply. Kalamazoo's paper factories, which have produced bond and book stock for 50 years, instance how Michigan turned to manufacturing when her lumbering peak had passed. Grand Rapid's furniture market comprises an international aggregation of manufacturers, buyers, and salesmen. From a score of states and from European countries come the displays of furniture and interior decoration. These are disposed on the vast floor spaces of 20 factory show-rooms and ten specially built exhibition buildings. The buyers of whom 3,000 are sometimes present, hail from every state in the Union and from half a dozen foreign countries. Its 75 furniture factories, employing some 14,000 people, represent an annual products value of about $50,000,000. A large preponderance of Hollanders, who still nourish the old craft-spirit tradition, is to be found among the local furniture and cabinet-makers.

State Troopers Catch Quarry Leaving Jail
Watkins Glen, N. Y.—Two state troopers who spent a day and night prying into every possible corner of Schuyler county, where Charles Burke, thirty-four, of New York city, might be hiding, returned wearily to the county jail in the morning—and met Burke emerging cheerily from it. Burke was wanted on a charge of disturbing the peace as the result of an argument with a local citizen. After the alleged argument he asked and obtained lodging in the jail for the night. The troopers, Sergt. Jack Barry and Trooper John P. Norton, took him before a justice of the peace, who imposed a 30-day suspended sentence, and ordered him outside Schuyler county within two hours.

Ted Lyons
Though the Chicago White Sox are far down toward the bottom in the American league pennant race, Ted Lyons, their star pitcher, continues to produce the type of hurling that has made him one of the greatest pitchers in that league. He has completely recovered from an injury that handicapped him during the earlier part of the season.

Expedition Organized to Wrest Treasure From Father Neptune

Seek to Salvage Liner in the Shark-Laden Waters.

Norfolk, Va.—Another fleet is off on the Rainbow Trail to a hitherto unreached pot of gold. The treasure of the Ward liner, Merida, sunk off the Virginia Capes more than twenty years ago. Capt. Harry L. Bowdoin, in his ship Salvor, accompanied by the trawlers Sea Hawk and Sea Rambler, is now at the point, sixty miles off the coast, where the wrecked ship lies forty fathoms deep in shark-infested waters. Pining his hopes chiefly on a diving suit he has spent 16 years in developing, the sixty-year-old seafarer was optimistic on his departure. Captain Bowdoin, however, is not the first to be lured by the treasure of the ship which sank after being rammed by the United States Fruit company steamer Admiral Farragut on May 12, 1911. For the last twenty years romance as well as desire for material reward has beckoned the adventurous to the wreck. All passengers of the Merida were saved, but the cargo and valuables deposited with the purser went down with the ship. There is reason to believe, therefore, that the hulk still holds twenty-two tons of half-refined gold and silver ore; bullion in bars worth at least $1,000,000; 4,000 tons of copper ore and eighty kegs of American $20 gold pieces. Another item of the cargo which some might consider worthy of salvage was 2,000 kegs of fine Jamaica rum. As early as 1916 a syndicate of New York bankers was formed and launched an effort to recover the Merida's treasure, but the wreck was not found and the project was abandoned.

Amputate Eagle's Wing to Save It From Death

Finleyville, Pa.—Two and a half feet of a bald eagle's wing was amputated by a veterinarian to save the bird's life after it was shot down by a farmer. The eagle is to be turned over to the state game protector after its recovery. Dr. F. Z. Matthews, veterinarian, stated that the bird now may live 80 or 90 years. William Caster, farmer, shot the bird as it swooped low over his chicken yard. After Caster fired the shot, the eagle swerved and grasped the muzzle of Caster's rifle in its talons. The eagle has a wing spread of six and a half feet, and it is 2,500 miles from its usual habitat.

With an anxious inquiry in his bloodshot eyes, Bill asked:

"Say, Alan, why can't I go along on this trick? I'd give a leg to. I'm a w. o. l. now. Haskell can't do much worse to me than he intends to do as it is."

After all that Bill had done for them, Alan hadn't the heart to refuse him. He asked Featherof:

"How about it—can we carry a third person?"

"Well, we maybe could. But I wouldn't like . . . It'd cut down our gas load, and this is only a two-place plane."

"Then I'll not go," Bill agreed sturdily. "Don't want to be a drag. I'll sleep off my dry-jag here and then mosey in to Edurance."

Alan went after two more drums. As he reached the plant with them, his ears caught a faint low drone barely audible far out upon En Traverse. Standing up on the cockpit edge, he turned his glasses north.

Six miles out, the powerful scarlet-and-gold launch was heading straight toward them.

"Knock off on that!" he jabbed at Buzzard. "We've got to get gone. They'll ram us, or shoot at us from protection of the launch. You've got enough in the tank to take us to the Alooska. We'll stow these drums aboard, and what we can't take will leave here on this headland. Can get it later."

Under Buzzard's directions they worked frantically. When they were ready, when Bill clambered down into the canoe and held out his hand in good-by, Alan was struck to the heart by the pleading unspoken prayer which Bill stoutly refused to word.

"Buzzard!" He jerked around to his flight partner. "Bill's got to go along! D—d if I can leave him out in the cold! I simply can't do it."

"Then try to wedge him in with you. We'll carry him, if we have to tie him on!"

Alan pulled him up. Bill managed to squeeze into the tiny one-place compartment, and by that act deserted the Mounted Police.

With the big boat only a mile out, Buzzard taxied the plane and headed it parallel to the shore line. It seemed to Alan that the White Speedair, heavily laden with gas and oil and a third man, would never rise from the water. It taxied nearly a half-mile before it began smacking the wavelets. The police boat swerved right and diagonaled in to cut across its course. White puffs of smoke were bursting from a rifle in the prow, from a rifle in the hands of George Haskell.

But when the plane finally did take hold of the air, it left the boat behind in a twinkling. Roaring out of range, it swung away into the northeast, toward its goal on the Big Alooska.

CHAPTER X

The Secret of Many Waters

Two miles down river Buzzard throttled the motor, eased the stick forward and glided expertly down and down into that difficult narrow lane of evergreens.

Alan started to get out the canvas canoe to tow the plane in to the landing; but Joyce, understanding, untied her father's sturdier craft, laid in an extra paddle, and came skirling out toward them.

As Alan clambered down upon a float and waited, he remembered his decision to tell Joyce what had happened within him since he saw her last, and to tell her of that inexorable circumstance which had led to his engagement to Elizabeth. Easy that decision then, but he wavered now. Did he dare tell her that? If it was useless, if she had put him out of her life, did he dare resurrect all the poignant memories and intimacies between them? Today he would find out how she regarded him; today she would surely give him some clear token.

Reaching out, he caught the prow of her canoe. Joyce rose and stepped up. . . . In another instant he was clasping her hand.

"Joyce! Joyce! I was afraid for you—here alone, girl. I can't tell you how glad—when I saw you . . . And glad to be back here."

As their eyes met, as Alan felt her small hand warm in his, he was torn between fear. In that first moment of their meeting, when impressions stood out so sharp and clear, it seemed that all passion had gone out of Joyce's manner toward him. She greeted him warmly, she was friendly, even cordial, but in the same way as she would have met Bill Hardsock or Fedneault or Larry.

Introducing her to Buzzard, he stepped down into the canoe, lapped the painter rope around a strut; and together he and she guided the plane athwart current to the landing. After mooring it securely and getting part of their personal duffie, the four of them, with old Pence appointing himself guard over the machine, went up the path to the trading store.

Alan could fairly feel the dozen eager questions Joyce wanted to ask him: Who was this new-found friend whom he called Buzzard? Where had they got this plane? How did they intend to use it against those bandits? But practical little soul as always, she asked no questions then. The three men, tired and hungry and desperately in need of rest, were her first consideration. Going back to the kitchen, she heated them water to wash and shave, and set about getting a hot substantial meal.

Alan happened to notice that his picture, which for two years had stood on Joyce's dresser, was not there now. It halted him like a blow. Why had she taken it down? Was it some accident, entirely innocent? Or . . .

Back in the kitchen, while Buzzard was outside washing away the grime and oil of five days' flight, he remembered the ceinture fleecie and found it and brought it to Joyce.

"I thought of you, out in Edmontion," he said awkwardly, breaking the string. "I believed you might like what. She's a regular girl. Looks, personality and spunk. . . . Lord, I'd hate to ever quarrel with her!"

He wondered whether to tell Alan about that incident he'd seen. Alan was evidently floundering around in the dark about Miss MacMillan. He was a bit awkward and blundered in such matters. Buzzard thought:

"First chance I get, believe I'll tell him what she did. He ought to know. She either loves him or hates him, to do a thing like that!"

When Alan woke up, late in the evening, Buzzard was still asleep and Bill Hardsock was dead to the world. Hoping to find Joyce, he went out into the trading hall.

Joyce was not there. For a few moments Alan stood looking about. As Bill had told him, she was closing out the post. He hated to think of Joyce's girlhood home being sold to some utter stranger. Thinking of Larry, soon to be invalided out of service and condemned to a life of intolerable idleness, he wondered whether he might not get this post for his crippled patrol partner. It was well located, and Larry's host of friends among the Indians would be sure to bring him their furs.

Still hunting Joyce, he went down to the landing where old Pence, whittling at his story-stick, was guarding the plane against any log floating down and damaging it.

"You riz up early, Alan b'y."

"Yes. Got a couple things to do. They must've been on my mind. Where's Joyce?"

"She went down th' river bank, down thar t' that fust brook comin' out'n th' timber, to snag some trout. We're shy on meat."

Alan stepped into Dave MacMillan's canoe, laid in an extra paddle, and started down stream. Gliding around the first bend, he saw Joyce two hundred yards ahead, standing on a jutting rock beside a brook mouth. When he came alongside and lifted the canoe prow out upon the shelving rock, she greeted him with a quiet friendly smile. They sat down together on the wolf-foot moss.

After his days in the plane, with the swish of hurtling struts and the thunder of a motor dining his ears, it was incredibly quiet on the spruce-buried stream.

Very observant, he covertly stared at Joyce. She was looking past him at the far shore and woods. As he studied her features, it seemed to Alan that something profound had happened to her since he saw her last. She had changed; she was hardly the same girl. There was some new strange spiritual quality about her, as of a person who has gone down into a ravaging sickness and has had the strength to conquer and rise out of it, but at a terrible cost.

To break the silence between them he began telling her of these last weeks—his trip to Edmontion, his providential luck in meeting Buzzard, the prison charges that stood against them, their flight back north, their escape from Haskell's trap, his gladness when he saw her running down the path.

As she listened, thoroughly alive to the danger and hardships he had gone through, Joyce felt a profound gratitude, for she knew Alan had done this largely for her sake. When he mentioned the prison charges facing him, she experienced a moment of panic; and imagined herself testifying in his behalf, fighting for him as he had fought for her.

A little later, after they had discussed plans for closing in upon the bandits, Alan rose up and gave her his hand to rise. He said:

"I've got to go down river a few miles, Joyce. Bill cached some supplies near that saw where you and I got upset that day and had to swim for it. I want to bring them up here this evening."

He waited a moment for some hint that she might wish to go along with him. None came. He suggested:

"It'd take only a couple hours. If you'd care to, I'd like for you to go."

"I'd better stay. Bill and Mr. Featherof will be awake before long. I'll have supper ready when you get back."

"I can help you with that—I'll go."

"It's a pity," he thought, "for them to bust up. A d—d shame, that's

Similarity of Surnames in Old English Village

Northamptonshire can boast of a village in which one-third of the inhabitants possess the same surname. This is Bozeat, which has a population of just over 1,000. Nearly 300 of them have the surname of Drage.

Many villages and small towns can show surprising numbers of a few surnames amongst their inhabitants, but nowhere else is such a large percentage of people with the same name to be found.

It is difficult to discover how it all happened. Surnames are a comparatively modern institution, for in the old days there were none. To distinguish between two Williams, one might be referred to as William, Robert's son, and the other William from Handley. In course of time this was shortened to William Roberston and William Handley. Or, again, a man might be known by his trade, John the smith becoming John Smith.

Where the Drages came from is a mystery, for there is no mention of them in the old records.—London Tit-Bits.

TALES OF THE CHIEFS

By Editha L. Watson

JOSEPH

Chief Joseph of the Nez Perce tribe has been famed as one of the most remarkable Indians in the United States.

Joseph

is always recalled when Joseph's name is spoken.

He was born in Oregon about 1840, and was a hereditary chief of the Nez Perce. His natural gift for oratory was of considerable use in his dealings with the white men, and though it is said that he never spoke in English, his translated speeches are worthy of notice, and have been quoted many times.

His father, Joseph the elder, was careful to teach him not to sign treaties nor to sell the land of his people. This principle was faithfully adhered to by the chief, and it was the cause of the war between his people and the white men. According to Joseph's own story, a Nez Perce called Lawyer assumed rights which he did not possess, and sold the Wallowa country (belonging to Joseph's band), with all the rest of the Nez Perce land outside the Lapwal reservation, to the whites.

The elder Joseph and his son, who did not want to part with the land, had no share in this treaty and felt that they were wronged. Then the old chief died, and was buried in the beautiful valley where he had lived, and this was one more tie binding Joseph to his country: "I love that land more than all the rest of the world. A man who would not love his father's grave is worse than a wild animal."

More and more sternly, the white men demanded that the Nez Perces should leave the valley and go on their reservation. Each time the Indians reiterated that they had not sold the land, and continued to live there, hoping for an adjustment in their favor. The white men moved ever closer, and took more land. The Indians complained, but were told to go on the reservation. Finally, affairs came to a climax. Both sides were guilty of attacks and depredations. War was declared. The whites suffered severe losses at first, as Joseph's generalship and use of tactics were brilliant.

It later became necessary for the Indians to retreat, and this movement is one of the most famous in the history of Indian warfare. With about 300 warriors, their wives and children, the band started for Canada, hoping to join Sitting Bull. Behind them was General Howard and Colonel Sturgis and his Indian scouts were on their flank. Colonel Miles, that adept in the art of Indian warfare, was rapidly marching in to intercept them before they could reach the border.

Almost 2,000 miles through enemy territory, the remarkable leader brought his people. Their few warriors were opposed by nearly seven times as many soldiers. Their conduct was praiseworthy, as they did not commit depredations, fighting only when they encountered troops.

Finally, fresh troops in front compelled a halt, and for four days the Nez Perce battled against the soldiers. General Howard had come up to join Colonel Miles, and the odds were too great to be longer resisted.

Eighty-seven warriors, almost half of whom were wounded, 184 women and almost as many children were the remnant who submitted to the white soldiers. Joseph sent a message of surrender, in which he lamented the woes of his people, and closed by saying, "Hear me, my chiefs, my heart is sick and sad. From where the sun now stands, I will fight no more with the white man."

After their surrender, the Nez Perce were taken to Indian territory, where they longed for their Idaho lands, and about half of them were later allowed to return, but Joseph and the rest were sent to the Colville reservation in Washington. Here he became interested in the advancement of his people under government rule, and bent all his energies to furthering the cause of education and discouraging drunkenness and gambling.

In 1897, worried by encroaching whites, the grand old chief went to Washington, on behalf of his tribe. However, General Miles, the only white man whom he trusted, promised him that his people should remain unmolested, and he returned to the reservation, confident of peace.

Six years later, Joseph made another trip to the Capital. This was a friendly visit, during which he took part in an Indian exhibition. This was to be his last journey, for he died September 22, 1904.

Cyrus Townsend Brady, writing of the famous chief, has described his death as follows: "The other day a gray-haired old chief, nodding by the fire, dreaming perhaps of days of daring and deeds of valor, by which, savage though he was, he had written his name on the pages of history, slipped quietly to the ground and fell into his eternal sleep."

POULTRY

LET PULLETS HAVE FOOD THEY PREFER

Good Policy to Cater to Their Appetites.

By F. E. ANDREWS, New York State College of Agriculture—WNU Service.

Since poultry must be fed in flocks, the pullets should be separated into groups that are fairly uniform as to size and laying condition. The needs of a pullet laying heavily and of one that has not started to lay, are quite different. If they are both in the same flock they cannot be fed efficiently. Many different systems of feeding are used, but the only successful ones are those that make the birds eat enough grain and mash to maintain their weight, and give enough over to lay a satisfactory number of eggs.

Pullets that have been accustomed to eating their grain from hoppers should have their grain in hoppers when they are housed. Later the amount may be reduced in the hoppers and some grain scattered in the litter. But to change abruptly may retard development and cause the pullets to lose weight. At Cornell, records show that 100 hens, weighing about four to four and a half pounds each, must eat 24 to 25 pounds of feed each day to lay at the rate of 50 per cent and maintain body weight. If the amount declines only two or three pounds, they lose weight and egg laying slumps.

Sometimes, for apparently no reason, pullets refuse to eat enough to lay and to keep their weight. If this situation continues many days a slump in laying or a molt, or both, may result. Then the skill of feeding is to get them to eat more food. The mash may be moistened with milk or semi-solid buttermilk. It may be necessary to cater to their appetites, they may eat more corn or more wheat, but give them whatever they prefer.

Whatever the kind or mixture of the feed, allow at least one foot of feeding space for every five birds.

Growth Stimulated by Meat Scraps in Ration

It seems to be the usual practice to feed no other protein supplement when chicks are given liquid milk as the only drink. However, a small amount of meat scraps is sometimes added to the mash. Some experiments have been conducted at Purdue to determine the value of different levels of meat scraps in a ration where chicks have milk only to drink. In these experiments, a ration containing no meat scraps was compared to rations containing 5, 10 and 15 per cent of meat and bone scraps. The chicks in all lots received liquid buttermilk as their only drink.

The rations containing 5 per cent meat and bone scraps gave much more rapid growth than those containing no meat scraps. While 10 per cent meat scraps was somewhat superior to 5 per cent, the increase in the rate of growth was not as great as that produced by 5 per cent meat scraps compared to no meat scraps. In the first experiment in which 15 per cent meat scraps was fed the chicks did not grow satisfactorily. No explanation can be given for this poor growth since no abnormal conditions were observed in the post-mortem examinations of a number of these chicks.—Indiana Farmer's Guide.

Sun Rays for Chicks

Much has been said about the vitalizing effects of ultra-violet rays on growing chicks. There is some necessary effect which these rays exercise upon chick systems, giving them the power to assimilate more of the mineral and bone forming elements in their ration.

While exposure of the young chicks to chilling winds is not wise or practical, the use of material which admits these valuable rays is becoming more general. Ordinary window glass takes the vitalizing rays out of sun rays, but the special products now furnished will admit the rays, to the advantage of the growing flock.—Exchange.

Little Value in Yeast

Two theories which have gained headway among poultrymen have been exploded. One of these is that yeast, as a source of vitamin B, improves a good poultry ration. The other is that crude fiber in the ration would overcome slipped tendon. It is doubtless true that for a poorly fed flock a ration very deficient in vitamin D might be helped by the use of yeast. Yet, with a good normal ration to start with, yeast evidently makes no improvement.—Successful Farming.

Keep Ration to Standard

When eggs are low in price, producers should be sure to feed a good balanced ration, states W. C. Tolly, South Dakota poultryman, who points out that only through economical production can any profit be had.

"With reasonably well-bred hens, experiments have shown that a proper mash ration, supplemented with crushed limestone, grain, green feed and plenty of warm water, will increase the egg production at least 75 eggs per year," he says.

HOLY CITY'S APPEAL TO MEN OF GENIUS

Source of Inspiration in All the Ages.

"There is no city in the world that has inspired musicians to compose music that can be compared with the city of Jerusalem.

I recently read that statement and began to think about it. There were no details given, merely the broad statement. It is a fact, however, that Palestine, as a country, has been the chief source of inspiration to musical composers for at least two thousand years, Henry Graves, musical authority, says, in the Montreal Family Herald.

From the days of King David to the present time, the life of Jerusalem, with its trials, joys, sorrows, and triumphs, has been told in song and story by all Christian nations. The number of oratorios, cantatas, masses and anthems that have been composed to words which have portrayed the life of Christ and his apostles cannot be estimated, because many of them have been forgotten.

Take the last 400 years and consider the works of that period, beginning with Orlando Lassus, 1520-1594; who immortalized himself with his setting of the Seven Penitential Psalms; John Merbecke, 1523-1583, whose setting of the English Liturgy to a plain-song is the most popular today; Palestrina, 1514-1594, who rescued the church music of his time from barbarism; Henry Purcell, 1658-1695, who has been called the greatest English musical genius; J. S. Bach, 1685-1750; Handel, 1685-1759; Joseph Haydn, 1732-1809; Mozart, 1756-1791; Mendelssohn, Gounod, and a host of church musicians too numerous to mention.

As a matter of fact there are very few sacred works of importance that have not been written round the life of Christ and his disciples. Haydn's "Creation" is one of the few. But consider the works of Bach in his immortal oratorios in the Passion, "St. Matthew," "St. John," "The Christmas Oratorio" and numerous others, are all inspired by the life of Christ.

Then, the works of Handel came from the same source: "The Messiah," "Saul," "Judas Maccabeus," "Samson," "Israel in Egypt," and a score of other works. Mendelssohn's "Elijah," "Lauda Sion," Mozart's Masses, and Gounod's "The Redemption," I do not forget the works of Spohr, Dvorak, Elgar, Sullivan, and scores of others, but it appears as if there has been very few composers of any worth who have not applied their talent in enhancing the work and lives of the early Christians.

This, of course, is not to be wondered at when we consider Jerusalem's stirring history. The great antiquity of the city, and its eventful times, are enough in themselves to furnish many facts connected with the lives of those early sufferers for Christianity.

The Old Testament also tells us how the children were taught to sing in the Temple, and the Babylonian captivity is remembered for the longing of the captives for their native land and the songs which they could not sing. So they hung their harps on the willows. Is it any wonder that such a land of romance and adventure should appeal to the creative mind?

The Crucifixion stands out as the greatest tragedy of all time, and it has inspired poet and musician to depict the scene with all its lamentable surroundings and horrors.

Thus we see how music links us with the past through the inspiration of historic Jerusalem, and the great influence it has had on the art of music, and has undoubtedly greatly helped to develop the dramatic instinct of both poet and musician.

Blouse for a Bride

One cotton blouse is the price of a wife in the land of the head-hunting Jivaroos at the Brazilian headwaters of the Amazon, according to Dr. Mathew W. Sterling, just returned from that country. But, he explains, the amorous bridegroom must make the blouse himself, spinning the cotton and weaving it so carefully that one item of apparel sometimes requires many months of work. The women wear a blouse and skirt, and the men wear skirts and nothing else. These, also, they weave themselves, and wash once a day.

farming territory, also touching on Loon Lake. This road the county had to agree to maintain.

Grant township has a gravel road to Sand Lake. The county has also taken over the road from Sand Lake around Round and Indian Lakes to Island Lake and done considerable work on it, and expect to gravel it when funds are available. This road will be in Grant, Plainfield and Wilber townships.

In Oscoda township the county has built one mile of gravel road to connect up the river road to Five Channels, paid $18,000 for the county's share of the Five Channels bridge and fill, took over the road (built by the township) from Oscoda to Jargo Springs.

Now, after looking over the above, is it not fair that Baldwin township should have a road to its resort property with an assessment of $181,150.

The Road Commissioners have no apologies to make for building any of these resort roads, as we figure that Iosco county with its lake front inland lakes and the AuSable river has great resort possibilities, and that this is the only thing in sight that will reduce the taxes for the permanent resident, and that the only way to develop it is to use the people right who come here to spend their money, and at least give them the benefit of a part of the amount they pay in taxes.

So much for resort roads. Now let's see how the county road money has been spent for the past six years. The County Road Commission has about 130 miles of gravel road to maintain, and in the last six years have graveled 6 1/2 miles in Plainfield and built a bridge over the South Branch of the AuSable, 4 1/2 miles in Reno, 6 miles in Burleigh, 4 1/2 miles in Sherman, 2 1/4 miles in Grant, 1 1/4 miles in Tawas, 1 mile in Wilber, 3/4 mile in the City of East Tawas, and 1 mile in Oscoda township. In Oscoda township we also took over about 20 miles of gravel road built by the township and paid $18,000.00 on the Five Channel bridge. In Alabaster township approximately $4,000 has been spent in connection with the new Shore road, which includes the detour, fence and the county's part in securing the right of way.

Now from the above it does not appear that the cities and the east end of the county have been favored. If any one has a right to kick, it is the east end of the county. But we consider it better policy to complete a road and make it of some use, than to build small unconnected pieces that are of no benefit to any one, and later to even things up.

Another complaint is that we hire an engineer who also serves as superintendent. Now, Mr. Voter, what would you want us to do? Would you let any one go out on the road and work at any time and anywhere and do the work in any way, keep their own time and set their own wages? Just how would you handle it with no one in charge? (The law does not allow the Road Commissioners to act as superintendents.)

Now, Mr. Voter, we think that if you will look at it in an unbiased way, you will find that we are trying to work for the county as a whole and are trying to keep the roads under our care in the best possible condition and make further improvements as fast as funds will permit.

Iosco County Road Commissioners.
