ZUIDERZEE IS NOW CALLED IJESSELMEER

Holland's "Old Man Sea" as a Name Is No More.

Washington .- Dutch engineers have divorced Zuiderzee completely from the North sea by an 18-mile dike. Part of the former salt-water gulf will become a fresh-water lake, to be known as Ijessel lake, or, in the Dutch, Ijesselmeer. Most of it, however, will be pumped dry and developed into neat Dutch farmsteads.

"In separating the Zuiderzee from the ocean the Dutch are no more than reclaiming their own," says a bulletin from the Washington (D. C.) headquarters of the National Geographic society. "Six hundred years ago much of the late Zuiderzee was dry land, protected from the North sea by sand dunes. Then the sea rolled in. Today a huge man-made dike will make possible an increase in the total land area of the Netherlands of 7 per cent, and in the arable land of 10 per cent.

Played Important Part.

"The Zuiderzee basin, with an area of more than 550,000 acres, is almost as large as the state of Rhode Island. Situated in the very heart of northern Holland, it has long played an important part in the commerce and social life of the country. While Holland is rejoicing with her engineers in their greatest victory over their ancient foe, the sea, the fishing villages and quaint islands of the Zuiderzee, beloved of tourists, are silent. Most of the sea ports along the shores of the Zuiderzee are destined to become inland farming villages, connected with salt-water only by canals, while islands may be hillocks, only slightly

"Perhaps the most lamented change will be that affecting the Isle of Marken, which is destined to become a part of the southeast polder, or drained section. This island, detached from the mainland in the Thirteenth century, lies out of the ordinary routes of travel. Its inhabitants have kept the quaint costumes and queer ceremonies that prevailed when their land became an island. The ground is barely above the water at high tide, but the houses are built on hillocks of earth obtained by digging drainage canals. On seven of these mounds brick and frame dwellings are grouped, while on the eighth is the silent home of the dead.

Need for More Farms. "Colorful as the ports and islands of the Zuiderzee may be, they have outlived most of their usefulness. Holland's rapidly growing population demands more farm lands. The Zuiderzee, the greater part of which had hardly more than 15 feet of water at low tide, offered a source of new land.

"The land to be reclaimed will be roughly divided into four sections, or polders, by Lake Ijessel, and the mouths of the Amstel and Ijessel rivers. Ijessel lake itself, when drainage operations are completed, will be a long, funnel-shaped body of water running back from the new sea dike to the city of Kampen. It will be a mere shadow of the former Zuiderzee. Most of the new land will be reclaimed from the huge, stomachshaped southwestern end of the Zuiderzee.

"One polder, the Dutch word applied to any area of land protected by an encircling dike and drained by own system of pumps, back of

Chinese Girls Bring

$13 in Flood Area Harbin, Manchuria.-Daughters of the poor were offered for sale for 50 yen ($13) apiece as floods and guerilla fighting with Manchoukuo and Japanese troops reduced millions of Chinese to desperation.

In Harbin, flood waters of the Sungari river rose in the streets, carrying away the small possessions of destitute families. Mobs gathered, clamoring for aid. Acting at the request of local Chinese, Liuetenant General Hirose, of the Japanese forces, assumed command of the district and declared what amounted to martial law.

daries. The first efforts were precautionary, the war with the waters being wholly on the defensive. The holding of the streams in check, keeping them within their proper channels, allowed some of the marshes to become dry. This gain of land whetted the people's appetite for more. Dutch farmers yearned for thousands of acres too shallow for fisheries but ideal for pasture land to produce cheeses for foreign markets. This led to draining of inland lakes and coastal strips by windmills-the most characteristic feature of Holland landscapes.'

THE FEATHERHEADS

A Heady Proposition

Fable of the Hungry Fame-Seeker 88 By GEORGE ADE

(@. Bell Syndicate.)-WNU Service.

NCE there was a Greenie who borrowed some Tackle and went fishing off Catalina Island, hoping that he might get a Nibble from a Tuna. To those who never have seen a Tuna it may be imparted that this Marine Monster is a Minow two sizes smaller than a Submarine. It is fully as long as a Freight Car and if domesticated, could be used for towing Barges. The Yap who rode back and forth across the dancing Waves, trolling an attractive Bait and begging the Fish to give him some Trade, was playing in rare Luck, because he never got a Strike. If he had, the poor Woofus would not have remained in the Boat.

On another Occasion a cheerful Imbecile polished up a dinky Rifle such the Merry-Makers at Coney Island use in shooting at sheet-iron Ducks and other movable Targets. He put on a Boy Scout Uniform and went out into the Hills, hoping that he could scare up a Grizzly Bear. All day he scrambled around, kicking at the Underbrush and making Noises which were meant to insult the Bear and induce him to come out and put up a Battle. The Guardian Angels who fly over Cars driven by Women and protect the Patriot who buys Fireworks must have been on the Job that Day because the dauntless Nimrod never saw Hide or Hair of a Grizzly. That is why he lived to get back home and eat a hearty Supper.

It happened that a Young Man who thought he was, whereas he really wasn't, came into more sweet Currency than you could shovel with a Scoop Shovel in Three Months. One Night, in a select Club, which has since been padlocked no less than three times, he found himself gazing at a hypnotic Brunette even as an English Sparrow might gaze at the beautiful but deadly Cobra.

He never before had seen so much Brunette packed into so few Clothes and he knew that Life would not mean anything to him unless he could be near her, to inhale the 30 or 40 kinds of Perfumery she was using and have all the other Johns chewing their Wrist Watches in Envy.

This one made Pola Negri look like a Clergyman's Daughter. You could hear the Current crackling.

The yearling Child of Fortune tried to semaphore a few Signals to the dusky Queen and get her interested but she had no Line on the Bank Roll and did not like the Soft Shirt he wore with the Dinner Jacket, so she threw him about 1,500 Feet into the Air and rode away into the Night with a big Sausage Man from the West.

For several Days the Sailors on his Yacht had to watch him to keep him from going overboard with the Anchor in his Arms, which would have been his only chance of sinking. He thought that he had been given a Dirty Deal, whereas he should have been singing at the Top of his Voice. for if little Rita Pozeta, the undulating Vamp, had taken a real Fancy to him, it would have cost him over $600,000. Poor Brakes Break Many a Man. Two years ago a prominent Member of the Chamber of Commerce of Oklahoma City, Okla., was in Europe taking his first real Rest since the Syndicate in which he was interested struck the Gusher. He watched the wheel at Monte Carlo and, being quick at Figures and able to see right through any Proposition on the Jump, he felt almost sure that it would be a Cinch to win all the depreciated Currency and close the Dump. He sat up for two Nights and wore out two Pencils doping a System which could not lose. He explained the Modus Operandi to his two Traveling Companions and said it was a Pipe, if backed up by enough Coin, so as to keep on doubling. He wanted Bill and Bud to put in $50,000 apiece and let him go in and shoot up the Place, but they were Leery and said that the Suckers had already put up too many Buildings and laid out more Flower Beds than were needed. They were cold around the Ankles and devoid of Sporting Blood. There was Nothing Stirring and consequently all of the Boys are back home and living in comfortable Circumstances. These Examples have been cited to prove that many a Chump who thinks that the Breaks are against him is really the favored and pampered Child of Destiny. Herbert J. Prangle, of whom we are compelled to write, was not so fortunate. He went fishing and the Tuna got him. While searching for the Grizzly he had the Tough Luck to find one. When he smiled at the Beautiful Female she gave him a quivering Embrace and darn near smothered him. He found a Chance to play his System and after he got into the Game he learned that he couldn't escape all messed up inside of the Dome. He wanted to prove that he (Herb) belonged in the Hall of Fame instead of a Home for Collapsed Mentalities.

Looking the Part. To look at Mr. Prangle, about the time he was eased out of College and began to ramble in the daisy-dotted Field of Literature, it never would have been suspected that he had this lurking Determination to Prove to the whole World that he was a Heller. He was skinny and wore powerful Glasses and had a bulging Head, like the large end of a Gourd. He was bashful in Company. Strangers often asked if he had passed through any Serious Illness when quite Young. If an attractive Cutie gave him a couple of roguish Looks and began to ask him pert Questions, he yammered for a little While and then sank below the Horizon.

Who would have dared to predict that Herbert J. Prangle was planning to write Love Stories so sizzling that he would have to use Asbestos Paper? To look at him he was just as passionate as a Rubber Glove.

Even as the bloody Historical Romances are written by slender Maidens just out of Smith College, and all that Free Verse about Nymphs dancing in the shadowy Wildwood is turned out by hard-faced old Grouches wearing Overshoes, and Advice to the Love-Lorn comes from a Police Reporter, so it was inevitable that this Clam would write about heaving Bosoms and Clinging Kisses.

For a long Time the Immediate Friends and Relatives little suspected his Intentions. He kept on producing Manuscripts that were rejected with Thanks. They put up with his De-lusions and kept him hidden away in a Cheerful Room where they would not have to look at him very often and consoled themselves with the Reflection that there is one Jinx in every large Family.

Then there came a Day when the Book Reviewers all began to gibber and say that a New Light had appeared in the Heavens and it was Some Light. About 2,000 Candle Power.

They agreed that Herbert J. Prangle, author of "Seared Souls," was indecent, audacious and salacious but a Master Analyst of all the Fundamental Emotions and a Genius with a large G.

All at once his apologetic Kin began running up and down the Streets asking everyone, "Have you read Her- at all smart gatherings. bert's new Book?"

Soon after the Volume had been barred from many Libraries and denounced from the Pulpit, and Hollywood was demanding the Picture ing velvet chapeaux which milliners Rights, and the Tremolo Sisters were are now featuring, so as to stamp camped on the Front Porch to interview the daring and devilish Author, it is claimed that Herbert received, in one Day, no less than 100 Requests for Photographs and Autographs.

The Glare of the Limelight.

For a matter of Years he had waited and hoped for this Day to come. All through the toilsome Nights he had been sustained by an intrepid Belief that some Day the World would simply have to recognize him. He felt within himself the Pulsations of True Greatness and he knew that, eventually, the Universe would vibrate in Sympathy.

He found that he could not stir out of Doors without being trailed by a brazen Hussy in shameless Attire and sticky Rouge, known as Publicity. He learned, in a Hurry, that the Laurel Wreath had a lot of Thorns in it. Strangers crawled up the Fire-Escape to get a Look at him in his own Room. The Public Prints were full of veiled References to his Checkered Career and it was whispered about, under Cover, that his tough Novel was really a Story of his Own Life. All of the which are Figures of Speech. The Story is that Mr. Prangle, from the time he was in his Teens, had nursed an aching Desire to be famous, notorious, acclaimed, celebrated and popular.

He wanted his Name on the Scroll, so that his Mother would be proud of him. Uncle Jason had always claimed that Herb had a broken Yolk and was sacred pagoda less Boob who was just as pure as Rainwater.

If a distant Relation, whom he never had seen, got into a Jam anywhere, it always came out in the Dispatches that the accused Party was a Cousin of the well-known Novelist. This is known as Advertising.

Mr. Prangle reecived countless invitations to address the Women and the Rotarians and the Free Thinkers, but he could not generate sufficient Vocal Energy to make Himself heard to Himself. In fact, he couldn't do anything except slt in a Back Room and write on Paper. When the fierce Glare smote him he was scorched to a Cinder.

At present his unmarried sister has him up in the Woods, feeding him Gluten Biscuits and Milk.

Famous Indian City

The city of Rangoon in India contains close to 400,000 people. It has a fine water supply, and many modern houses. It was built alongside the Rangoon river, about 40 miles from the Bay of Bengal. Perhaps the most interesting thing in Rangoon is the great pagoda, which might be compared roughly, to an ice cream cone upside down. The tip of the cone is 321 feet above the ground. NEW-LENGTH JACKET By CHERIE NICHOLAS

SIMPLE IN DESIGN Simplicity is the "keynote speech' of some of the new one-piece knit frocks that are going to be much worn when the election results begin to roll in next November, says an authority, in the Kansas City Star. Monotone for the most part, these slim frocks with either short or long sleeves. One still sees the boucle suit in some of its younger moods. A rum brown boucle, made in three pieces, had a threequarter length coat and a slim skirt, worn with a cream color fagotted (magic word, this fall) blouse. The coat has widened smartly seamed sleeves, tightly buttoned cuff bands. a pull-through scarf with ends of brown galyak and a slightly fitted waistline. The one-piece frock with the detachable high-necked cape is not to be crowded off the smart street scene this autumn. In a rich wine novelty woolen it has matching octagonal buttons tipped with silver metal that fasten the cape, trim the sleeves, and aid a deep side pleat in achieving a wrap-around effect. These coat frocks, by the way, are tremendously important for early fall wear-you really should have one.

New Stockings Proof Against Mosquito Bites

Stockings are smarter than no stockings at all this summer. Mesh stocking are tremendously popular. But what about mosquitoes and their unpleasant little stings?

The newest in hosiery ideas is the chemically treated stocking. It doesn't look any different from the stockings we're used to and you, yourself, can't detect the chemical, but the mosquito can and he makes a hasty retreat.

Three-Quarter Coats This new length between the knees and the ankles is the smartest for summer coats whether they be of wool, silk or linen, or one of the gay new striped cottons.

Perhaps the most outstanding feature of the definitely new suits is the three-quarter length of their jackets. It does not matter if the suit is strictly tailored or designed along soft lines, as in the model pictured, the new length is its claim to last-minute creation. The fact that the suit shown has a slenderizing straightline skirt, also that the jacket buttons up to the neck and that the sleeves are of dolman influence, establish the correctness and chic of this model for fall you'll be glad you said 66 SIX CYLINDERS No more . . No less"

Compare a Chevrolet Six whose speedometer reads over 10,000 miles with any other low-priced car of about the same mileage. Compare bodies. Compare chassis. Compare the way the two cars have stood up. Compare the gas and oil mileage each is getting. You'll be surprised at what a difference there is in favor of Chevrolet.

Chevrolet's wood-and-steel Fisher body remains tight, staunch and trouble-free. Chevrolet's chassis stays rigid and solid-shows none of the ill effects of age or wear. Chevrolet's six-cylinder engine continues to purr along smoothly, quietly and dependably. And it continues to give the same all-around economy as it did when new.

The reason for this difference after 10,000 miles can be summed up in three major facts: First, Chevrolet is such a wonderfully well-built car. Second, Chevrolet has adequate weight, unusual ruggedness and strength to withstand the effects of long, hard usage. Third, the Chevrolet engine has SIX CYLINDERS. And SIX is the fewest number of cylinders you can have in a car, and avoid destructive vibration.

Play safe, in choosing that lowpriced car of yours. Put your good money in a sure thing. Buy the automobile in which the majority of American motor car buyers have placed their faith ever since January, 1931-a new Chevrolet Six.

CON MEN ARE ACTIVE DESPITE DEPRESSION

Swindlers Find Victims in Parisian Cafes.

Paris .- The success with which two unimaginable "confidence men" swindled a visiting Australian millionaire in a popular boulevard cafe recently indicates that the world depression is not universal.

Despite repeated successes of these "con men" in this most well known of Parisian sidewalk cafes, the victims still seem to come from - somewhere and still provide easy money for plausible crooks, who not only go by unpunished, but who return at a later date with a different passport, a different name, and different mustache, perpetuating the some old gag and disappearing before their victim has time to get to the police station.

prevalent gag if for one of the swindlers to take a chair on the terrace of a popular cafe where all the world goes and wait until some particular bird of prey arrives.

The victim selected is either chosen by prearranged tactics on the part of the gang, or a victim is chosen at random because of his apparent or supposed possession of ready wealth. The "con man," so to speak, having an engaging personality, soon makes the acquaintance of the victim and, if the victim is at all susceptible, the worldly arts of a gentleman who has lived both in and out of jails, under every circumstance on all continents, soon makes its insidious effect, and two firm friendships are formed. Drinks follow, confidences about family; home towns, women, men and events.

that he might be allowed to see the organ, and this request being granted, that he might play upon it. The sexton refused this second request, saying that it was quite contrary to his directions to let any stranger touch the instrument which might be injured if not carefully handled. Bach was insistent, however, and persuasive, and finally the sexton yielded.

As he listened to the great musician handling the wonderful instrument the sexton was first astonished and then held spellbound. Finally it dawned upon him who it was to whose music he was listening. There was only one man in the world who had such skill, When the music was ended he came up to the player and grasped him by the hand. "You are Bach," he said, and then remembering his refusal to let the musician touch the organ, "and to think I might have missed the mas

I think I might have missed all the pleasant experiences which have come to me during the last forty years. I had a boy friend who had moved away from our community and whom I had not seen for a half dozen years. I had thought of inviting him to visit me, but had put off the invitation as one will in such cases. Then one day I had the inspiration and acted on it. He came. He had been to college and he persuaded me to go. But for the inspiration which led me to invite him to visit me I doubt very much that I should ever have left the farm. Maybe it would have been just as well. Did you ever wonder what would have happened to you and what you might have missed had you turned down a different road than the one you took one night, or if you hadn't gone to the party where you met the

FINDS BLINDNESS IS NOT A DISADVANTAGE

Lawyer Just Works Harder Than Other Fellow.

Chicago .- Sightless eyes are no disadvantage to Herbert Geisler, lawyer, who considers that he got a "break" when, at the age of seven years, a childish accident at the hands of a rough playmate left him blind.

"I just work harder than the other fellow," said Geisler. "That's the only reason I won honors in school, and the only reason I win cases in courts. I'm not afraid of work, and I do it more cheerfully than the lawyers who can see."

Geisler, who is twenty-eight years old, and has been engaged in a general law practice for three years, was cresident of his class and made a brilliant record in John Marshall high school.

He entered the University of Chicago and made exceptional grades in the three years of pre-law work, and entered the law school, graduating in 1929 with the highest honors of his class.

He also was president of his class in the law school, and was elected to the Order of the Coif, an honorary law scholastic fraternity. Geisler was chairman of the University of Chicago editors of the Illinois Law Review, and won the Wiggin robe prize for scholarship in his second year. "I find the fact that I cannot see no disadvantage to me in the courts. In examination of witnesses it is not their facial expression that reveals whether they are telling the truth, but their words.'

Geisler has a reader, and in addition is proficient in reading the Braille system. He rapidly takes notes for courtroom use on the Braille typewriter, and in the courtroom takes notes in Braille with the stylus.

He swims, dances, bowls, takes long walks and is fond of fishing. Although totally blind, he leads an active, normal life.

He's known among fellows who were his classmates in law school as a good sport, a keen mind and an excellent companion.

Fashionable Ladies of Equatorial Africa.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, UWENZORI, one of the world's queerest mountain masses, has been scaled by a Belgian expedition entirely in Belgian territory, according to reports from the Belgian Congo in which a part of the mountain lies. The feat, not hitherto accomplished, required a climb of more than 16,000 feet of difficult, trailless jungle and rocky slopes.

Ruwenzori is unusual in its very situation. It lies almost immediately under the equator, surrounded by rank, steaming tropical forests and sun-drenched plains covered with tall elephant grass; yet it pushes its peaks up to eternal snows. Nowhere else are there comparable heights under the equator, rising from the heart of a continent. The Andes of Ecuador, relatively close to the coast, and the mountains of the island of New Guinea are the closest competitors.

Weather conditions do their part in contributing to the strangeness of this African mountain mass, and in throwing an almost literal veil of mystery around it. The peaks are hidden to observers from the plains and forests by clouds and fog except at rare intervals. As a result, the definite existence of the mountains was unknown to Europeans until 1864 when Sir Samuel Baker, while exploring Lake Albert, saw "a blue mountain to the south." His observation went unverified until 1887 when Stanley saw the peaks and made known the fact, for the first time, that they were snow-capped. It was not until more than a decade later that the snow line was first reached; and the crests were not attained until 1906 when the duke of the Abruzzi led his expedition to the top. The name, Mountains of the Moon, is believed to have arisen from a mistaken translation from Arabic; but It has fitted well into the atmosphere of mystery that surrounded Ruwenzori for centuries; and it has a figurative justification because of the weird appearance of the mountain slopes. The relatively few white men who have made the arduous climb have all noted the impression that they had blundered into some alien world. The combination of excessive moisture, altitude and equatorial sun snowy peaks, and a few other heights not yet climbed. Each group is given a name as a mountain, and each peak is then separately named. From north to south the snowy mountain groups which have been climbed are Emin, Gessi, Speke, Stanley, Baker and Luigi di Savoia, each named for an explorer of Ruwenzori itself or of neighboring portions of Africa, Mount Luigi di Savoia bears the name of the duke of the Abruzzi. Mount Stanley is the highest of the six snow-capped groups. All four of its peaks-Margherita, Alexandra, Elena and Savoia-are more than 16,000 feet high, and exceed by several hundred feet the peaks of the neighboring groups. Margherita peak forms the crest of Ruwenzori, with an altitude of 16,816 feet above sea level.

tain mass are six explored groups of Numerous small glaciers extend down from the snowy peaks to about 14,000-foot level, and from them trickle many streams. From whichever side the drainage comes, it finds its way into the surrounding lakes and rivers and flows, through Lake Albert, into the Nile. Ruwenzori thus fulfills the ancient tradition: It is the "Mountain of the Moon" on whose white crests Egypt's life-giving river is born.

The portion of Ruwenzori lying north of Mounts Emin and Gessi has never been climbed. In addition to making a survey of the western slopes of the entire range, the Belgian expedition plans to climb the peaks of this northern region and to obtain definite information in regard to their heights.

Odd Facts About the Equator.

While Ruwenzori's snow has been a popular "hard to believe" subject, there are other facts about the world's hot line that are, perhaps, equally as strange.

For example:

The equator crosses no deserts. The equator does not touch continental Asia.

Less than one-fourth of the equator traverses land.

The equator cuts Africa nearly in half, traversing the middle section of Kenya, severing the northern third from the Belgian Congo and bisecting the tongue of French equatorial Africa which, with Angola, nearly squeezes the Belgian Congo off the Atlantic coast. In the 2,300 miles across equatorial Africa there are no deserts but torrid jungles, some parts of which are so canopied by trees interlaced by vines that only pencil-like rays of sunshine penetrate. In this region the traveler meets with naked, black, kinky-haired tribesmen, and such unfriendly beasts as wild elephants, lions and hippopotamuses. Just below Ruwenzori's western slope is the bailiwick of the Bambute pygmies, shy, diminutive folk of the jungles, and beyond is the domain of Bantu tribes, some of whom relish human flesh. The Masai, among the world's fiercest natives, inhabit the regions to the east of the mountain. Between the western coast of Africa and the coast of South America, the equator crosses no land. In the mouth of the Amazon it traverses Mexiana island and then plunges into 2,000 miles of jungle land, almost as Impenetrable in places as the jungles of Africa.

friends cross the frontier and the innocent victim calls shame-facedly on the police.

Unhurt in Car Crash, Nurse Dies of Fright

New York .- Miss Elsie Cob, twentythree years old, a nurse at the Creedmoor State hospital, died in Jamaica hospital following an automobile collision a few hours earlier. Hospital authorities said that as far as they could learn Miss Cob was physically unhurt, but the shock brought on an attack of hysteria which affected her heart. This caused her death.

has produced a unique vegetation that in many ways is utterly fantastic.

Vegetation Is Extraordinary. After emerging from the dense tropical forests of the lower slopes, a climber feels' like a Lilliputian visiting the meadows of Brobdingnag. He walks among parsley plants nine feet high, "bird-seed" three times his height, and heather plants, relatives of the low Scottish shrub, that have expanded into great trees 70 and 80 feet tall. To add to the weirdness, colored mosses-brown, yellow, green, white and red-are all about under and overhead. They grow in huge cushions that encircle the limbs of the heath trees like giant mushrooms impaled on a skewer. The unearthly appearance is heightened usually by fog, through which the strange growths loom dimly; and there is a continual drip of water from limbs and moss clumps. The way often leads through swamps and muck up to one's knees.

Above the heath forests, on less swampy ground, giant lobedias cover large areas, sending their spikes up to twenty feet or more. All about are a variety of weeds, grown almost to the magnitude of trees. Further up are thickets of bamboo through which progress is extremely difficult. The highest slopes, just below the snow line, are covered with a thick growth of everlasting flowers. Except on its lowest slopes Ruwenzori is uninhabited, and above the tropical forests there is not much animal life. The soggy heath forests are almost devoid of animals, birds and insects. On other parts of the slopes, where sparse animal life is found, it forms a queer assortment: a few small mountain antelopes; leopards that prey on them; hyraxes, which are harelike conies; fruit-eating bats with a "wing-spread" of two feet; and a few birds and insects.

The name, Ruwenzori, was selected by Stanley as the most common among a large number of native designations. It has been interpreted as meaning "King of the Clouds" and "Rain-maker."

· Really a Mountain Range. Ruwenzori is not a single mountain, but a "pocket-size" range. With its foothills it is approximately 60 miles long and 30 miles wide. The naming system that has been followed is rather complex. Topping the moun- Kenya, East Africa.

South America's Jungle.

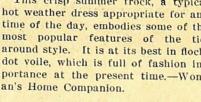

Equatorial South America is the land of Indians of yellowish and reddish hues with straight hair which is cut as though soup bowls had been applied to the natives' heads as guides for barbers' scissors. The largest animal is the tapir, and ant eaters are abundant.

At the eastern base of the Andes, the equatorial traveler meets the Jivaros, natives who are proud of their art in shrinking human heads to the size of an orange, with the hair and skin intact.

From their hot jungle homes, the Jivaros can see the snow-capped Andes of Ecuador and western Brazil. Quito, capital of Ecuador, nestles in the Andean hills, about fifteen miles south of the equator.

The equator begins its trans-Pacific "flight" by crossing the Galapagos islands and then makes a long jump to the East Indies where it traverses Celebes, Dutch Borneo and Sumatra, missing Singapore, the nearest point of continental Asia by only 90 miles. These regions are inhabited by brownskinned natives, some of whom show traces of Mongolian, Hindu and Malayan blood.

From Sumatra westward, the equator touches no land until it strikes

Joyce hesitated. She was aware that Alan deeply wanted her company. After all he'd done for her, it seemed cruelly ungrateful to refuse. And she herself wanted to go. ' But bitter wisdom whispered a warning. Since that morning when she turned his letters and picture and gifts to ashes, there had been no looking back. There must be none now. She had strength and courage to talk with him calmly and to act toward him as though they had never been more than good friends; but she dared not presume too far on that new-born strength. To be alone with him two hours on a twilight river, with their talk inevitably drifting to former times-it would be unbearable.

With gentle firmness she said: "I'd like to go Alan. But I'll have to run back to the post. There's so many things to do." She tried to smile. "I don't want to be a neglectful hostess to Bill and Mr. Featherof."

As she started up the river trail, her thoughts brooded on several things Alan had said in the course of his story, especially on his occasional references to Elizabeth. Not that he had said anything derogatory about Elizabeth. But his tone, his manner. .

Was he becoming a little disillusioned? Was he seeing Elizabeth Spaulding not as the sister of his dead partner Curt, not as a girl to be cherished and shielded, but as a selfish, calculating person? Was he dimly foreseeing what his married life with her was going to be?

Joyce checked herself sharply from hoping or even thinking that Alan might break off his engagement, or from extending him anything more than grateful friendship. She was glad, profoundly glad, that his words had caused no resurrection of hope, no tremor of emotion. The discovery of her strength suffused her with a kind of pride. But for all that, she felt a great sorrow for Alan. He was bitterly unhappy, and she knew it. What was his situation now? Police work, his life in the North, comradeship with his old friends-everything that he had cherished was stripped away from him, and he was going into a marriage reluctantly and forcing himself into a life that was alien to his whole nature. When Joyce thought of all that, her sympathy, tender and compassionate, went out to him wholeheartedly.

Returning at deep twilight with the drums, Alan found Buzzard cleaning fouled spark plugs on the plane engine.

Candles were already lit in the trading store. Alan looked up the path, expecting to see Joyce's figure in the lighted doorway. He hoped to have an hour or two alone with her this evening. But all day the conviction had grown upon him that a talk would be worse than useless. If only God's truth didn't sound so preposterous; if only he could tell Joyce that he had become engaged to Elizabeth, had expected to marry Elizabeth, and yet all the time, in his deepest longing, had wanted not Elizabeth but her. . . .

"If we're going to get away from here first thing in the morning," Buzzard broke into his thoughts, "we ought to put in a couple hours' work after supper on these aileron leads. They're pretty bad frayed around the pulleys."

(WNU Service.) Copyright by William Byron Mowery,

He half-rose. "You say that's what she did? You're sure about that? You didn't make a mistake?"

For a moment, groping about to retrieve his blunder, Buzzard hardly knew what to say or do. There had been no mistake; he had seen that incident with his own eyes when he glanced through the window to find where Alan was. He debated whether to draw back from his statement or to plunge ahead and tell the rest of it-Joyce's momentary battle, the shudder that swept her whole body when she put the scarf into the stove, and the quick blinding tears that she dashed away.

He thought: "Better not get any deeper into this. I'd only blunder again. Better back out entirely."

He stammered: "I might have made a mistake. I might-uh-it might have been the wrapping paper. I just merely saw her put-uh-something into-and I jumped to conclusions. Must have been the wrapper. Why would any person want to burn up a gift like that? Let's forget it." His tones carried no conviction. He realized it himself. Alan disbelieved him; Alan knew Joyce had burned the scarf he gave her.

Cursing himself hotly, Buzzard looked out across the purpling river. He had meant only the best, and he had dealt Alan a savage pitiless blow. After a little time Alan said to him: "You'd better go up, Buzzard; she may be waiting for us.'

"Aren't you going?"

"No-not now; I don't much care. . . I don't want supper."

Something in his voice warned Buzzard not to urge him. As he turned away, Alan said, in the tones of a man who has made some hard and abiding decision:

"When you've had supper, come back down here; I'll help you with that work; we'll do it now, so we can work in the Mounted, his life here in the North, were both gone; and Buzzard's cataclysmic words last evening had showed him that his secret hope towards Joyce had been a fool's hope, a fool's wishful thinking. How low he must have fallen in her esteem, that she should burn his gift to her! At first it had seemed a little cruel of Joyce to do that. But then he looked at the incident with relentless honesty, and he could not blame her. Once he and she had planned to marry. People had spoken of it: it had been generally accepted along the River. She had liked him, loved him. What must her feelings have been as she watched his relations with Elizabeth, and saw him engaged to another girl and coming no more to the Big Alooska? She must have felt shame, burning shame, at being jilted. Month after lonely month of that-it had been an outrage to her girlhood.

Nothing she could do to him could be so heartless as what he had done to her. Through the propeller disk he at last sighted the Indian camp, a cluster of brown leather tents beside a lake where the band was passing the summer near their fish weirs. Buzzard and it was he who, with one other, roared over the camp and banked to alight. Old Mugwa-Etthen, a gnarled nations, and propounded the idea of and wrinkled old savage, stalked up and gravely bade them welcome.

After this flood season of heavy Thal-Azzah where a party of men pretty definite idea where to look.

Very wisely, Joyce had kept from letting the nomad bands know anything about the police defeat. The Shagalasha maintained order in so huge a territory largely through their reputation of never failing, and the news of their stinging defeat would do incalculable harm. Joyce had not even told old Mugwa-Etthen. After pledging the headman to silence, in guttural Tinneh Alan began sketching the story of the robbery and battle. As he told of the bandits escaping up the Alooska, he noticed that the old chief suddenly became all interested.

Alan looked at him keenly. "Something's up," he thought. "I've stumbled onto something." He demanded : "When I wa-wa two three breaths ago you start like hit buck. Why?"

Drawing a crude map of the J'hal-Azzah with his bony forefinger, the old headman sprang his astounding news.

Ten suns ago, he said, Tukeok and another young buck had gone westward into the Land of Many Waters to locate rat colonies for autumn trapping. One evening they heard the boom-boom of fire-sticks far away southwest. Slipping up, timid, cautious, they saw some strange men shooting wavies for food. They saw a tent, a camp on an island. . . .

DEKANAWIDA AND HIAWATHA

Creeping out to a hole in the river ice, the Huron woman thrust her newborn baby into the freezing waters. There was a fear born of supernatnatural things in her heart, for it had been revealed to her that her son would be a source of evil to her people. Hence, it was loyalty to her tribe, and not hatred of her baby, that prompted the awful deed.

Morning came. The mother felt something warm in her arms. Curiosity triumphed over fear, and she dared to look at the little bundle-it was her child !

Twice more, she tried to drown her ill-omened son in the icy waters of the river, and twice more he miraculously reappeared in her arms at dawn. She could no longer bear to attempt his death.

This is a legend, it is true, but the child, who grew into one of the greatest of Indian statesmen, is a historical reality. His name was Dekanawida, formed the first successful league of universal peace.

The Hurons had united four tribes about the year 1500, but this league rains, Alan knew there were a few did not last. Since it was the Iroareas in the watery wilderness of the quois confederation which destroyed that of the Hurons, the prophecy about could camp. He himself had only a Dekanawida would seem to have come hazy idea where those areas lay; but to pass. It is probable, however, that this old headman, Mugwa-Etthen, Who- the young Indian had an unusually Follows-the-Caribou, had lived his life alert mind, which grasped the short along the border of that great marsh comings of the Huron union and laand knew it better than any man ter turned them to account in the oralive, and could probably give him a ganization of the Iroquois confederacy.

> As soon as he had grown to manhood, Dekanawida traveled south. He was equipped with two mighty essentials for his life-work-wisdom in framing laws and establishing the foundation upon which the confederation was based, and astuteness in negotiation.

Among the Mohawk, about the same time, a younger man, who was called Hiawatha, was filled with the same ideas. Légends have grown up around him, too, and in fact we think of Hiawatha as the hero of Longfellow's poem, but the truth is that the poem was written about Manabozho, a Chippewa deity, and does not contain a single fact or fiction relating to the real Hiawatha.

Somehow the two Indians met, and found powerful allies in each other. It was Dekanawida who formulated the laws and principles of the confederation. It was Hiawatha who converted the five tribes to the idea of union. Together they labored to establish reforms which would end all strife and murder.

As modern reformers can testify this was a bitterly hard task, and the two were opposed, not by the general public so much as by men of equal standing with their own. One of these, an Onondaga, among which tribe Hiawatha started his campaign, went so far as to kill Hiawatha's daughters in his efforts to halt him. Even this

rime, however, proved unsuccessful

GOOD QUALITY HAY IMPORTANT TO COW

Animal's Choice Should Be Guide to Dairyman.

By PROF. E. S. SAVAGE, New York State College of Agriculture,-WNU Service. A cow's preference is for the kind of hay that saves dairymen money. Hay is, after all, the basis and foun dation of the ration. Silage and grain are really supplements to the hay and are the expensive parts of the ration, so good quality hay makes more dollars possible from the silage corn and the purchased grain.

Good hay should be soft, have a good taste, not be too coarse, not be musty or mow-burned, not be bleached, have all of its leaves, and should be clean. Early cutting helps meet all of these requirements. Soft hay is easy to eat and is not coarse, hard, and brittle like late cut hay. The early cut hay tastes better, and in addition has more protein. Late cutting may increase the total tonnage but the loss in palatability will be greater than the loss in tonnage.

In ideal haymaking, the hay should be cut one day, handled as little as possible, and be dry enough to put in the barn the next day. When hay is cut, cocked up for several days, and then drawn to the barn, both labor and leaves are wasted and the taste is not improved.

Matter of Rations Not to Be Treated Lightly Whether the dairyman shall mix his own feeds or buy ready-mixed rations is still an important question. Before it is definitely decided the dairyman should ask himself these questions:

1. Are the feeds he can buy as good as are contained in the ready-mixed rations?

2. Is it possible to secure a continuous supply of a large variety of ingredients?

3. Can the ingredients be mixed as thoroughly as they are in the commercial mixtures?

Undoubtedly he may be able to mix a ton at less money than he will have to pay for a similar commercial mixture, but when all things are considered there may not be the advantage that formerly existed. The last few years have witnessed a wonderful change in the quality of mixed feeds offered for sale. This improvement of quality has removed one of the reasons for home mixing. It also means that better feeds are being used in our commercial rations. Low-quality feeds are still on the market and many of these find their way, as separate ingredients, to retail dealers. When a dairyman buys feeds for home mixing, he should be sure of quality or his supposed savings on the ton price may prove a loss at the pail. -Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station.

Responding to Forcing Two-Bids

No. 17

 $T_{\rm proper}^{\rm OBE}$ sure that the reader has the proper reaction to his partner's two-bid and clearly understands the part it plays in the forcing system, he must realize that for its success, the forcing two-bid depends entirely on correct responses. When responding to your partner's two-bid, the most important facts to keep in mind are: First-You cannot pass.

Second-Even though you are trickless you must bid and continue to bid until a game is reached (or its penalty equivalent in a double of an also with the National Biscuit Comopponent which will net as many pany. points as your game would be worth). Third-Unless you have af least one honor-trick, your first response must be a negative two no trump, irrespective of whether or not you hold length in your partner's trumps or a long suit of your own.

Fourth-Any response other than two no trumps is positive, showing at least one honor-trick in your hand. If you respond with two no trumps you show that your hand lacks an honor-trick; with this negative response you may have some distributional support in long trumps and ruffing tricks, or a long suit of your own. Either can be shown on a later round of the bidding, after your negative response has warned your partner against a futile slam try. If you respond with a raise of partner's suit you show definitely one honor-trick and the normal support of four small trumps or three to the queen. When more than one raise can be counted (in additional honor or ruffing-tricks) the bid should be jumped for the full amount of raises. But a jump over the game should be avoided with less than 2 to 21/2 honortricks.

If you respond with a suit take-out you show at least one honor-trick in a hand containing a biddable suit. Unlike your raises, your suit takeouts must never be jumped. They must be bid gradually even though you have all the outstanding honor-tricks missing from your partner's hand. The better reason you have for believing that the hand contains a slam, the better reason for keeping the bidding low and gaining all possible information. As the bidding cannot die after an original two-bid has been opened. there is no reason to become nervous and shut out what might prove valuable further information. If you respond with three no trumps you deny support for partner's suit (unless sometimes when he opens a minor) and also deny another biddable suit, but you show from 11/2 to 2 honor-tricks. The purpose of the three no trump response is to inform your partner immediately that he can count on positive honor-trick sup-six no trumps you show 21/2 or more honor-tricks and a lack of adequate trump support or a biddable suit. Your 21/2 honor-tricks, added 'to the minimum shown by partner's opening two-bid, put you definitely in the slam

Baking Companies

Unify Operations New York .- The National Biscuit Company and the Iten Biscuit Company, will unite their operations throughout the Central West, a joint announcement states. The two companies have been affiliated since 1928, but have continued to operate separately, each maintaining its own complete line of crackers and cookies. The move will take effect shortly, and Otto H. Barmettler, of Omaha, Neb., President of the Iten Biscuit Company, has been elected Vice-President of the National Biscuit Company to have jurisdiction throughout the territory, with headquarters at Omaha. Mr. Barmettler has been a prominent figure in the baking industry for thirty years, having had previous associations with the American Biscuit Company, the Continental Biscuit Company, and

The Iten Bakeries at Clinton, Ia., Omaha, Oklahoma City and Memphis, and the National Biscuit Company bakeries at Des Moines, Kansas City, St. Louis, St. Joseph, Mo., will continue to be operated on the same scale as heretofore. Iten products will be made and distributed by National Biscuit Company under its name and trade-mark. So far as possible, sales and delivery territories will be rearranged to provide work for the employes of both companies. This move will co-ordinate the business interest of the National Biscuit Company in Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma, Arkansas, and Tennessee, and parts of Wyoming, South Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Colorado, New Mexico, Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and Kentucky. The National Biscuit Company was organized in 1898, and is the largest baking company in the world, employing about 25,000 people, and operating fifty bakeries and 260 branch offices. It makes approximately 500

Alan knew that Buzzard was asking him to help with that job. But he did not answer. He wanted this evening with Joyce. Unless he took circumstances into his own hands tonight, he and Joyce would drift across a continent from each other in a few days more. Torn with uncertainty of her affections for him, he was debating about this evening. After the incidents of today-his picture gone, her coldness, her refusal to go with himhe was wavering, undecided.

Hs tossed his cigarette out on the water. "Maybe we'd better go up and help Joyce what we can."

Buzzard did not stir. For several minutes he had been glancing uneasily at Alan. Finally he screwed up courage to speak.

"It's strictly none of my business, Alan, but-but. . . You're engaged to a girl there at Endurance, but you bought Miss MacMillan that rainbow scarf with your last dollar and you talked a lot about getting back here and helping her-"

Alan was loath to speak of Joyce, even with a partner. He tried to say quietly: "We've been good friends for several years. She's one of the sweetest girls I ever knew. You've met her now. You'd naturally want to help her, wouldn't you?"

"Of course. But-but . . . See here, I may be imagining things; you can tell me to shut up if you want to -but it seems to me there's something wrong between you and her."

Alan repeated, rather shortly : "We're good friends. There's nothing more than that."

Buzzard knew different. He had had a vague suspicion of it ever since Alan first mentioned Joyce MacMillan's name at the cafe in Edmonton. As he remembered the incident of this noon, he wondered at the Spartan courage Joyce had shown and at the passion behind such an act. Surely some bitter unhappiness lay between her and Baker.

He said reluctantly: "If that's true, if you're merely friends and nothing more, what made her burn up that scarf you brought her?"

"What !" Alan whirled on him, gasp ing. "Burn up that ceinture flechee?"

get away early. I was thinking-for this evening-something else. But that's out-now. .

At three o'clock the next morning Buzzard lifted the plane out of the Big Alooska. With Alan directing him, he headed due north.

One hundred and thirty miles away, nearly four hundred miles from Fort Endurance, a small tribe of Tinnehs lived along the western fringe of the Thal-Azzah. They were a timid, skulking, inoffensive band, shouldered into a region where other tribes scorned to live. Dave MacMillan had been their friend and they brought him their furs; and Alan, during his years at Endurance, had sent a protective patrol to them twice a year.

Joyce had found out where they were spending this summer; and Alan had a mission with their old headman, Mugwa-Etthen.

When the timbered country began yielding to lakes and semi-muskeg, he got out his glasses and started searchnothing. On the second, nothing. But ing ahead for their camp. The Iroquois confederation was not the first league of nations, as the Hurons had united four tribes about thirty years earlier, but it was the first successful one. The sensible laws

The statewide cow testing association that has been operating in Minnesota the past year provides a private record available to anyone in the state. It was started to keep men who could not keep records in the standard testing groups. Under this plan, the samples are mailed to the laboratory at University farm one day each month in sample boxes provided by the statewide association.

The owner receives by return mail an individual production record on each cow. 'The record is private, simple and cheap, costing only $1.25 per month for herds with up to 10 cows, or $13 per year. One dollar more per year is charged for each cow over 10. It costs only about one-third of a pound of butterfat a month to find out whether the cow is returning $5 or $15 for the month. At the end of the year each man receives a herd book summarizing the record of each cow in the herd.

our county. I want to say to you, the voters are fair. They do not need to be reminded of any unfairness simply because some of them may see fit to criticise their serv-ants. I agree with vou, Mr. County Road Commissioners, that there is much unfair criticism but does not much of the unfair criticism arise from the fact that the taxpayers have not been kept fully informed ir regard to the workings of the commission and the expenditures incident thereto by proper publicity? Is not this a rather late date as well as poor policy (let me even say poor politics) to try to curtail the criti-cisms, or "loose talk" as you choose
