Wednesday and Thursday, October 18-19-20, at the Family Theatree. East Tawas, promises to excel al its excellent predecessors in popularity.

The story deals with an American family of great wealth; a great financier, his young and lovely wife and his two grown children; all of whom find themselves so busy with the pleasures and duties imposed upon them by their money and position that no time is left for the enjoy-ent of real family life.

Although the entire program is dominated by the character portrayd by Arliss, the supporting cast is ven more noteworthy than previous seen in Arliss pictures.

OFFICERS HERE FRIDAY, OCT. 28

Tawas City Chapter No. 303, Order of the Eastern Star, was signally honored yesterday when J. F. Mark was elected Worthy Grand Patron of the Grand Chapter of Michigan. His election to the office followed in natural sequence his election as Grand Sentinel at Lansing in 1930, and as Associate Grand Patron at Grand Rapids last year. Grand Chapter was held in Detroit this year

Mrs. Selma A. Brown, of Birmingham, who has visited this locality several times in the past year and is very favorably remembered, was elected to the office of Worthy Grand Matron.

Mr. Mark's election as Worthy Grand Patron places him in the highest office a man can occupy in the Grand Chapter of Michigan and culminates his many years of work in the Masonic and Eastern Star Orders in Tawas City,

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.-WNU Service. RENCH Morocco is becoming oil conscious. Preliminary borings near the town of Mekinex have shown such promise that modern machinery which will drill to great depths has been ordered. French Morocco, though streaked with the rugged heights of both the High Atlas and the Anti-Atlas mountains, and dotted with vast dry plains and deserts which give a large part of its area a forbidding aspect, has several large cities of great commercial and political importance in northern Casablanca and Rabat are the leading coast towns and handle a large part of the colony's sea trade. Casablanca was founded by the Portuguese about a decade before Columbus discovered America, but the newcomers held it only a short time until the natives routed them and set up a Moslem stronghold. Casablanca was occupied by the French in 1907 and began improvements that have made it the show city of Morocco.

From a city with a population equal to that of Elgin, Ill., Casablanca has grown by leaps and bounds until it now has nearly as many inhabitants as Kansas City, Mo. The pedestrian could easily imagine himself in a European city were it not for the Africans of midnight black, chocolate brown and tan complexions. One-half the inhabitants are Moslems; slightly more than a third are French, Spanish and Italian, and other Europeans, and the rest are Jews.

The price of a room in one of Casablanca's hotels not only affords European comforts but also the equivalent of a ring-side circus seat. An automobile rolls by with a prosperous French business man or a fez-bedecked Turkish merchant; wealthy sheiks stroll along in their flowing white garments and tightly wound turbans, holding each others' hands; dignified French officers in medal-bedecked uniforms are ousted from the paths of little grain-laden donkeys with barefoot Moors astride, and now and then, plodding along in awkward fashion, three or four moth-eaten, cud-chewing camels pass by, often followed closely by a small future "ship of the desert."

Thickly sprinkled among this seething mass of humanity of various breeds and blends, are the ever-present noisy street hawkers, darting here and there with their home-made rugs, sweetmeats, hammered brassware, and 'whatnots."

Bad Harbor Was Made Safe.

Why France poured a fortune into Casablanca was a mystery to Europe. It had one of the worst natural harbors on the coast. The low, rocky shore lay open to the strong west winds and the lashing waves of the Atlantic. No river runs through the city to the ocean. But the appropriation was partly used for the construction of breakwaters and harbor improvements that have been dominant factors in the city's development to the second largest city in the protectorate. Ocean-going vessels that anchored perilously off the coast can enter Casablanca's port today.

Casablanca also has electric lights and power and modern water works. Railroads now connect the city with Morocco, (Marrakesh) the capital of the protectorate and North African points. Daily air service is maintained between Casablanca and Toulouse, France, and planes fly every two weeks

Rabat was built almost 800 years ago by the labor of 40,000 Christian slaves. The city is located on the northwestern coast adjacent to the old city of Sale, a former lair of cor-

There are two present-day Rabats, French Rabat and the native town. French Rabat is like a bit of transplanted Europe. It has wide streets and smart little villas like those of the Riviera. In its streets are women wearing Parisian clothes, business men in sack suits and smartly uniformed French officers. There are telephones and electric lights and motor cars. Everything is modern and efficient and over 13,000 Europeans live within its borders.

MUST NOT MARKET BROILER TOO SOON

Error That Is Often Made by Breeders.

Opinions differ as to the best time to send the broiler to market. Circumstances also differ, and isolated cases of good fortune in making sales cannot be taken as a sure guide for all conditions. "Many growers," says a dealer, "have failed to make money on broilers because they sold them too soon. A squab broiler at one and one half pounds is usually too small to show a profit. He has cost too much up to that point. The next half pound often represents the profit. There have been two difficulties in doubling the one and a half pounds broiler into a three-pounder; first, holding them that long; second, a market that will take them. Both difficulties are being overcome."

In New Jersey, a practice is now developing which is to take the broilers out of the batteries or from under the stoves, and place them in outdoor feeding coops with slatted fronts, and slatted bottoms, where they can be grown successfully to twelve or thirteen weeks of age, and to weights of three to three and a half pounds. Some buyers in the East already favor these larger weights, and there is good reason to believe that this attitude will develop further. At the recent "Fact Finding Conference" of the American poultry industries, held in Chicago, W. E. Priebe, one of the largest poultry and egg buyers in the West, said that "a three-pound chicken may be worth as much per pound as a two-pound chicken." Mr. Priebe thereupon warned farmers in the Middle West to keep away from little broilers, saying:

"Our hotels have discovered that the breast of a three-pound chicken gives more satisfaction than a one and a half-pound broiler. One reason is the price; the other is their customers. Now, the larger the bird, the more money you make. You are losing up to certain weight of bird. My advice to you is to have your bird grow to at least three pounds-up to three, four and five pounds, and you will make more money.

Cost of Raising Flock

Must Be Given Thought The four most important factors to be considered if broilers and pullets are to be raised at a low cost are the quality of the chicks, the quality and efficiency of the brooding equipment, the feed used, and the sanita-gers. To use four fingers or two Quality of chicks comes first, befingers is extremely bad manners. cause nothing gives a poorer start toward low production costs than cheap Because of its mild climate, Rabat is a favorite residence of the present chicks from untested stock.

Brooding equipment is next in line, and quality and efficiency rather than who has other palaces in Fez, Mekinez Marrakesh and Fez are the outtory service

Feed, which is approximately 50 per cents of the brooding cost, should be bought in large quantities at cash prices to take advantage of all savings. Store the feed carefully, away from rats and mice. Eliminate waste by using efficient feed hoppers.

A sanitary program will do much to lower brooding and rearing mortality. Follow the up-to-date practices recommended by the poultry department experts at Michigan State college.-Missouri Farmer.

Small Turkeys Sell Best Turkeys have come within the modern trend toward smaller units. Whereas buyers formerly demanded big birds, such as heavy toras, and hens sold at a discount, the demand now is for birds that weigh eight to ten pounds, dressed. This year smaller birds brought a three to four cent premium over the heavy birds, states H. L. Shrader, United States Department of Agriculture poultryman. This same trend has been noted in the demand for lighter cuts of other meats. Smaller family dinners likely accounts for the change in holiday demands .-Prairie Farmer.

Placing Brooder House The brooder house should be placed on a part of the farm land which has been sown with alfalfa and where no poultry was raised for two or three races watch metal workers hammer years. If breeding is done early in the spring, it is a good custom to make a platform in front of the colony, so that the chicks may get the direct rays from the sun. This platform should be surrounded with wire trellis until such time as the chickens are old enough to be allowed a free

Turkey Ration

Turkeys will readily adapt themselves to feeding methods during the winter and the use of a ration of mixed grains, accompanied by mash mixture similar to the ordinary hen egg laying mash, should be supplied to them early enough to induce an early start in production if the desired early hatched poults are to be had. Starting the mash January 1 or soon afterward, should start egg production not later than the latter part of March.

SHOWS HIGH VALUE OF DAIRY FINDINGS

Specialist Summarizes Good Results.

By T. S. SUTTON, Dairy Specialist, College of Agriculture, Ohio State University.— WNU Service.

Summarizing some of the results of agricultural experiment stations in various parts of the country, I find that considerable information of practical value to Ohio dairymen has been uncovered recently.

The Missouri agricultural experiment station has found from a study of proven sires that a sire should have ten or more daughters with yearly records in order to predict the average of future daughters with reasonable

Workers at the Illinois station report that while green feed enriches the color of milk, proteins from different sources fed in concentrates did not affect the color.

The same experiment station also finds that soybeans are best cut for hay when the pods are well filled. This conclusion is based on the fact that the highest total yield per acre was obtained by cutting at this time, 41 per cent of the total weight was leaves and 30 per cent was pods. Other investigators in Indiana discovered that soybean hay cut when the pods were completely formed, the beans well formed, and the lower leaves turning yellow, is superior for both milk and fat production to hays cut in earlier stages of maturity.

Still other workers in Nebraska have reported some important data concerning the influence of the number of milkings on the production of dairy cows. Analysis of their records show that high-producing Holstein, Jersey, Guernsey, and Ayrshire cows of different ages milked three times a day produced from 39 to 52 per cent more fat and 44 to 65 per cent more milk than do cows milked twice daily. Cows milked four times daily produced from 110 to 127 per cent more fat and from 149 to 160 per cent more milk than do cows milked twice a day.

Herd Tests Valuable to

Owners of Dairy Cows The herd test, says Professor Brownell, New York State College of Agriculture, is popular because it is an economical way to get records on all the cows in a herd. It is possible for members of dairy herd improvement associations to have their records accepted and published in the herd book of the national association. These records are preserved and published in a book each year and serve as an invaluable aid in proving herd sires and in building a sound breeding program. Provision is made by the association for the voluntary cancellation of registration papers on the low producing purebreds, and to remove them from the herd books to raise the low price should govern one's choice. general average quality of the breed. Grain Ration

When the pasture grass or green feed is only fair cows will want more grain and to keep them in flesh and producing well they should have more. A good rule to go by at this time is one pound of grain to every four or five pounds of milk produced, depending upon the test and the quantity the cow gives. Most grain rations recommended for use with pasture contain about 15 to 16 per cent protein. There are several good pasture mixtures that will give good re-

For a grain ration to feed when the pasture grass is dry and short and when the green feed has lost most of its succulence, one-half the pasture ration and one-half of a 20 per cent herd ration may be fed during this period.

Clean Utensils

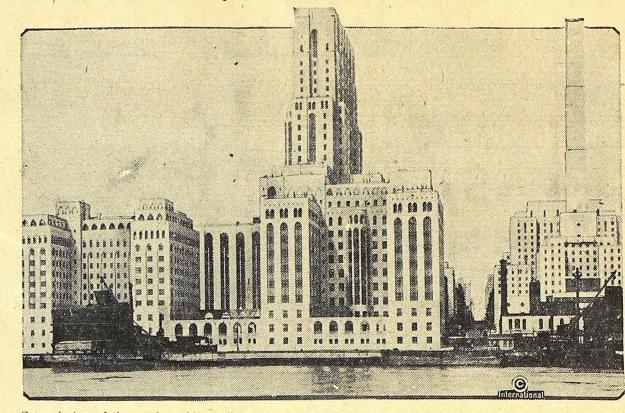

Be sure that milk pails and other utensils used for milk are washed promptly after using. First: Rinse them with luke-warm or cool water. Second: Wash them thoroughly with hot water and washing soda. Third: Scald and let dry without wiping. Fourth: Set utensils on rack so that they will drain thoroughly. Let the sun shine on them as much as pos-

Remember: Protect cream when you take it to market. Place a wet burlap sack over the can to keep it cool. Tuck the ears of the burlap sack under the can lid handle. Fill the lid of the can with water. The wet sack acts like a lamp wick and drains the water down around the sides of the can. Evaporation does the cooling.

Comparing Milk Color

A machine is being developed to compare the color of milk of one cow with others. This will make possible the elimination of cows that produce pale-colored milk and select those that give a rich-colored milk as demanded by consumers. Breeders will now face the problem of meeting color demand in milk just as they now meet demand for proper breed characteristics, production capacity and individual merit of their animals, a writer in the Prairie Farmer comments.

Battle for World Trade Tightens Up

Tried and New Methods in Redoubled Efforts.

Washington.-"The series of trade agreements between Great Britain and her dominions and colonies recently reached at the conference in Ottawa, Canada, probably will bring about farreaching alterations in the existing world 'trade pattern,' says a bulletin from the National Geographic society. "The raising of new barriers is sure to result in redoubled efforts by the great industrial nations outside the British empire to increase their world trade, both by tried methods and new

"Great Britain has always placed chief reliance officially on her army of consuls who are to be found wherever any considerable stream of goods rises to flow into the great currents of world trade. Aside from this official body of agents, a veritable army of salesmen beats its way up and down the world seeking to satisfy whatever need arises with British goods.

"Germany maintains the usual staff of consuls in foreign commercial centers, but places chief reliance, in the struggle for world trade, on her great international exchanges or trade fairs, such as that at Leipzig.

"Sweden, not to be outdone by other nations, pursues a well organized plan to obtain its share of world trade. The great industries of the country have banded together in an exporters' association, which operates under governmental sanction to stimulate Swedish exports, and maintains agents in foreign countries.

"Belgium relies in many cases on honorary consuls. But at home the Belgian government has taken very definite steps to help export trade. An export credit committee has been set up with authority to grant a governmental guarantee, up to a total amount of 600,000,000 francs, for payments for the sale abroad of Belgian goods and goods from Belgium's colonies. In addition there is in Belgium a national industrial credit society which similarly aids in financing sales to foreign countries."

Perrin, Texas.-Far from the roar of his native Paris, the giant hermit of the Jacks county hills sits beside the coffin in which he is to be buried -waiting for death.

ducks flying overhead or a sudden

Just at dusk every evening they flew over to the Big River to feed among the rushes there, Mr. Quack leading. His wing, which had been broken by shot from a terrible gun in the spring, was as sound and strong as ever. In fact, Mr. Quack was quite himself, big, strong and handsome. As for the young Quacks, they were full grown now and eager to try their wings in long flights and to see the Great World. Very early every morning they returned to the pond of Paddy the Beaver deep in the Green Forest to spend the day resting, sleeping and perhaps playing a little. At least, the young Quacks played.

One afternoon Peter slipped away from the dear Old Brier Patch over to the Green Forest and hurried straight to the pond of Paddy the Beaver. Peter had something on his mind. Just by chance he had peeped out of the dear Old Brier Patch in time to see a man passing, and under one arm he carried a terrible gun. There was no doubt about that, Peter knows a terrible gun when he sees it. He watched the man out of sight and he disappeared in the direction of the Big River. Right away Peter thought of the Quack family. Just supposing that hunter should be hiding near where the Quacks usually ate their evening meal! Peter shivered a little at the thought of what might happen. Mr. and Mrs. Quack ought to be warned and there was no one to do it but himself.

Peter started early enough, but as is his way he had to stop ever so many times to look at things which aroused his curiosity. When he had satisfied it he would scamper lipperty-lippertylip as fast as he could until something else stopped him. So it was almost the Quack dinner time when at last

HOW TO COOK RABBIT

THERE are few people who do not like the gamey flavor of wild things. However, the following recipes may be used for the tame rabbit as well. For those fortunate enough to have several rabbits on hand and who wish to keep them for later use, the following is a good recipe:

Pickled Rabbit.

Prepare the rabbit as for roasting. Place in a stone crock or jar and cover with one pint each of vinegar and water, one onion (into which stick three cloves), two bayleaves, half dozen allspice, one dozen pepper corns, one dozen chili peppers cut into halves. Let the rabbit remain in this liquid for three days, turning it occasionally. Drain and stew it, or braise it. To braise it cut one-eighth pound of salt pork into slices to cover the bottom of the baking pan. Place sliced onion, carrot and turnip and celery over the pork. Lay the meat on this and dredge with seasoned flour. Cover and bake one-half hour in a moderate oven. Pour one pine of stock over the meat, dredge again with flour, salt and pepper. Cook very slowly closely covered for two hours or longer. During the last half hour cook uncovered to brown the meat. Serve on a hot platter. Strain a portion of the gravy over the rabbit and the rest; serve in a gravy boat. Keep the pan from the bottom of the oven with a grate or ring all during the cooking.

Belgian Hare.

Clean and split a hare, season with salt and pepper and lard with strips of fat salt pork across the back and the legs. Place in a baking pan with a small amount of brown stock and carrot, onion and celery cooked in a little fat. Baste the hare often with the stock in the pan and bake fortyfive minutes. Add one cupful of cream, the juice of a lemon and one tablespoonful of cornstarch made smooth with cold water. Baste and cook twenty minutes longer, then serve the sauce, strained.

the air, and behind him rose all the other Quacks. There was a shrill sound of whistling wings, which grew fainter and fainter until it could no longer be heard. High in the air twelve black specks grew smaller and smaller and then disappeared. Mr. and Mrs. Quack and their ten children had started on their long, terrible journey to the faraway Southland.

Peter felt a lump in his throat. " do hope nothing will happen to them,' he said in a husky voice.

"If it were not for the hunters with terrible guns, nothing would, for Mr. Quack is smart enough to keep them from all other dangers and he has brought his children up to mind. They're as well trained a lot of young ducks as ever I've seen, and I've seen a great many," replied Paddy. "But dread those terrible guns," he added. (©. 1932, by T. W. Burgess.)—WNU Service.

HALE SCHOOL NOTES

All of the girls of the high school and 16 girls from grades 6-7-8 are taking the course in Child Care is being presented by the State Department of Health with Miss Lemmer as instructor. These classes are given each Friday afternoon from three to four o'clock. Eight classes will be given in all.

Several of our teachers are planning to take extension work in English. Michigan Normal College plans on offering two courses in English at Whittemore.

Our regular examinations were given this week in all subjects. These tests have helped some of the students to discover that good standings require effort.

The high school club members enjoyed a pleasant social hour and linner at Wm. Rahl's grove last Friday afternoon.

Our teachers are planning to attend the state teachers' institute at Saginaw October 20 and 21.

All students of the high schools are having spelling once a week. Our boys have been learning to throw spirals during the last few days. Some of the boys plan to attend a game at Bay City Central stadium some time this fall.

Smithsonian Experts Make Exhaustive Study.

Washington.-Diverse gods keep company in the strange pantheon of the Acoma Indians of New Mexico.

An exhaustive study of the culture, religion, and history of this tribe has just been issued by the bureau of American ethnology of the Smithsonian institution. The Acoma Indians accepted superficially the religion of the Spanish missionaries, but retained their ancient deities and supernatural beings. The result is that somewhere near the foot of the list of divinities, in the order named, are St. Stephen,

Dios, and Christo. At the head, as described by Leslie A. White in the Smithsonian report, stands Ocatc, the sun, greatest of all the supernaturals. Just below him stand his two sons, Masewi and Oyoyewi, the twin war gods, who symbolize courage, strength, and virtue. They are represented in the native mythology as great rain makers. They were the leaders and champions of the Acoma people in the early days when they lived in the North. Rain Makers Next.

Next come the k'atsina, anthropo norphic spirit rain makers who "liv somewhere in the West" and who are of the greatest importance in Acoma ceremonies. There are also the k'obic taly, powerful and beneficent but mysterious spirits who dwell in the sun rise. They are supposed to strength en the weak and sick.

Perhaps most important of all, not even excepting the sun, is Iatik, the great mother. It is impossible, however, to arrange the gods in any definite hierarchy, Mr. White points out. The sun is a symbol of cosmic power, but is not anthropomorphic now in any sense conceived as partaking of the nature of a human being. Iatik seems to be the symbol of human life itself. but is quite remote from the daily activities of her children. After death the individual goes back to her. She is never pictured as human in form. BUILDING REVIVAL IS FOUND ACTUALLY HERE

Almost Two Billions to Be Spent in 12 Months.

New York.-Important good news for all branches of the American building industry is found in a survey and forecast, published by American Architect. The survey indicates that the beginning of the building recovery period is actually here.

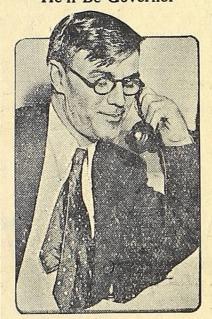

Based on direct individual reports from 1,636 representative architects and from other authoritative sources, the survey shows that building and modernizing projects now in planning and already financed amount to $572,-738,000. Contemplated construction, based on architects' records checked by business conditions in each state, reaches an additional figure of $1,181,-068,000. Of the total of more than $1,-750,000,000, $299,623,000 is in new building projects already financed and under planning for immediate construction.

In these actual new building projects there are 1,145 dwellings below $20,-000, costing $10,171,500, and 203 dwellings from $20,000 up costing $8,-104,000. Of apartment buildings and hotels there are 128 representing a cost of $18,155,500, and 24 hotels costing $4,490,000. In contemplated construction there are 3,429 dwellings below $20,000 which will cost $26,822,-700 and 582 dwellings of more than $20,000 which will cost $21,677,-500. There are 573 contemplated apartment hotels that will cost $136,150,-000; and 130 hotels that will cost $43,-

Factors aside from these actual estimates that support this confidence not been satisfied for several years will call for a considerable volume of products to bring the buildings of this country back to proper condition. 2. Available federal funds promise to turn vast sums of money for the purchase of building materials.

3. The people know that from an economical point of view now when costs of labor, prices of building products are unprecedently low, is a good time to build or modernize.

"The most important deduction from this analysis," says the American Architect, "is that the beginning of the recovery period is here. Building activity begins its steady, though slow upward swing during the fall of 1932.'

BUYING THINGS

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK Late Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

King Eadger in "The King's Henchman" has lost his wife and wants a second. He is a young and beautiful companion He is a busy man, or thinks he is, which really amounts to the same thing, and so is delegating Aethelwold to go in search of a new queen and to plead his cause for him, and says to him as he is leaving on his mission:

'Lord, I am lonesome for a lovely woman

To buy things for!

And weight her down with them, that she might not walk

But leaning on my arm. Ah, Aethelwold

Part of the joy of life for the king was in buying things. I sympathize with him; I have exactly the same sort of feeling. Half the pleasure of living would be gone if I could not buy things, and if there were no one for whom to buy. London to me

I should not want to go to Edinburgh if I could not buy things, but you see I am not like King Eadger, for I have some one to buy things for.

I am not given to the blues; melancholy and mental depression I know little about, but one would scarcely be mortal if he did not at some time or other feel a little low. At such a time of mental or even financial depression nothing heartens me so much as to buy something.

Trees That "Migrated" Millions of Years Ago

If you want to see what the forests of California and Oregon looked like millions of years ago, just take a trip to South America. There, on the slopes of the Venezuelan Andes, you may see living trees that closely resemble species once native to the western coast of North America, a Carnegie Institute of Washington expedition to this South American region has revealed. This discovery made by Prof. Ralph W. Chaney of the University of California and Dr. Erling Dorf of Princeton university was based on a comparison of the foliage of the South American trees with leaf prints of the ancient west coast trees that are found as fossils in the rocks of today. It upholds the theory that the forest. that once existed in North America were pushed south as the climate became increasingly cold and dry.-Detroit Free Press.

Girl at the Top in Health Tests

Millions of boys and girls all over the world, thousands of them right here in the West, are being restored to health and strength by the purely vegetable tonic and laxative known as California Fig Syrup and endorsed by physicians for over 50 years.

Children need no urging to take it They love its rich, fruity flavor. Nothing can compete with it as a gentle, but certain laxative, and it goes further than this. It gives tone and strength to the stomach and bowels so these organs continue to act normally, of their own accord. It stimulates the appetite, helps digestion. A Kansas mother, Mrs. Dana Allgire, 610 Monroe St., Topeka, says: "Bonnie B. is absolutely the picture of health, now, with her ruddy cheeks, bright eyes and plump but graceful little body and she stands at the top in every health test.

Much of the credit for her perfect condition is due to California Fig Syrup. We have used it since babyhood to keep her bowels active during colds or any children's ailments and she has always had an easy time with them. She always responds to its gentle urging and is ouickly back to normal."

Ask your druggist for California Fig Syrup and look for the word "California" on the carton so you'll always get the genuine.

In a hazy way he was conscious that the dreaded Savage was not shooting at him. He was still clear enough of mind to realize there must be some reason, some ominous reason, for that. What was staying that murderous gun?-when he had but a hundred yards to safety. Pausing a second, jerking his head around, he saw the cause. The 'breed had leaped out of covert, like the others; but had raced up along the flags edge and splashed out into knee-deep water. In deadly range, he intended to end the battle

A moment after Alan turned to look, the 'breed crouched, steadied his rifle and drew aim. Alan ducked down, the bullet screamed over his neck. It had been aimed at his head. By the fraction of a second he had saved his life. The next bullet struck him, burned through his shirt sleeve, tore a gaping fearful wound through the muscles of his fore-arm, and passed in front of his body, three inches from his heart. Knowing that the next bullet would surely kill him, Alan flung himself bodily out of the boat to escape that dreaded rifle. Submerging himself, with the craft between him and the breed, he clutched the gunwale with his shattered and bleeding hand. Pushing the clumsy craft, he started to swim, in a last goaded effort to reach the safety of the tiny islet. A dozen yards farther on, in hip-deep water, a spinning slug struck the middle thwart of the canoe squarely and the frail craft caved in. Grabbing the gun and cartridge webs out of it, Alan flashed a glance at the bandits, rose, and dashed for cover. Staggering under his heavy burden, with his feet sinking into the quivering muck underfoot, he splashed frantically through the water, throwing all his exhausted strength of body, all his undying strength of heart and will, to those two-score yards. His little haven of safety became dim-a looming red blur seen through a reddish mist. He was struck in the leg; the shock staggered him, he dropped a web of cartridges; but gripping the others tighter, he lurched on

Nearly blinded, breathing in hoarse gasps, with his great strength ebbing away, he groped and stumbled through those last few yards to the tiny islet, and collapsed there behind the big

For a little time, a minute or two, ne lay quiet, breathing heavily, fight-Ing down a nausea of pain. Dimly he heard those rifles still snarling at him and heard the sing-song of their bullets whanging overhead and plupping into the mud and dry reeds.

In a vague way he realized that the triumph was his now, if his hands had strength to seize it. If only he could rise up, he could stance the Browning behind this nest and splatter every square inch of the bandit's covert. As he lay there, nearly helpless, fighting for one last flicker of strength to rise and use the machine gun, he heard Buzzard shouting at him across those seven hundred yards. He could not distinguish the frantic words; he thought Buzzard must be trying to hearten him to one more effort. But then he heard Joyce's voice, crying to him. Closer, vibrant with fear, the warning came to him clearly:

"Alan! Alan! He's coming for you! Alan! Stop him. . . . Shoot him!"

The panic and terror of her voice roused Alan. He understood that some peril was looming upon him from those bandits. With a great effort he rose to an elbow, drunk with pain, giddy from loss of blood. A few seconds later, he crept on elbows and knees to the water edge and laved his face and managed to tie a kerchief around his forehead wound,

The bandage stopped the blood from running down and blinding him. The cold shock of water drove the nausea away for a little time. Again he heard Joyce crying out to him, but now it was a cry inarticulate, despair-stricken.

He cautiously raised his head, and saw the peril that his two friends had tried to rouse him to meet. The huge red-bearded leader had seen him collapse helplessly, and was coming across to put a bullet through his brain and seize the machine gun. Sinking back unseen, Alan drew bis heavy automatic, slipped the trigger safety, and waited. A few moments later, with his enemy within a dozen paces, he suddenly reared up, up above the shelter, shooting as he rose.

The seven heavy bulleis caught the bandit leader in the breast, knocked him over, killed him instantly.

Crouching down again behind that pile of willow sticks and reeds, Alan turned to the Browning. Methodically he spread the tripod and planted it firmly and clicked it into its mount. Very carefully he fed in a web of cartridges till it was caught. Rising to one knee then, clasping the spade grip, he cautiously raised his eyes above his shelter.

The 'breed with the deadly Savage, who had sent three bullets into his body and had drilled Jimmy Montgomery through the heart, was trying to make it back to the flags. Shouting hoarsely, he kept jerking his head around to see what his enemy was doing. Alan swerved the Browning a few degrees, looked down the sights, and his trigger finger tightened. . . The 'breed stumbled as that hail of death caught him-stumbled and flung up his arms and pitched face-down in the ankle-deep water. Releasing for a moment, Alan trained the Browning on that clump of flags where two rifles were still screaming at him; and when he had determined his concentration, the Browning went into play again. Methodically, the gun drumming out its message of death, he swept the clump from end to end, spraying it with bullets, mowing down the flags, splattering the bandits' hiding with a raking, slow-weaving fire.

There in the flags a figure leaped up and blindly tried to escape. Alan swung upon it, the figure vanished, there was a thrashing for a moment among the reeds. To the right a single rifle still held out, shooting at him. He located the spot and poured a storm of bullets into it. . . With a shrill yell a small wiry man sprang up, flung his gun spasmodically into the air, doubled up limply and sank down in the flags and muck.

Alan stood up then. He thought to swim across and get one of those canoes and go after Joyce. But he had not the strength. The nausea was overpowering him again; his wounds had bled him weak, and the pain of them sickened him. Staggering from the fearful reaction setting in, he sat down on the swan nest, with his world swimming in front of him and all his senses reeling.

It was four days later that those who waited at Fort Endurance learned what had happened northeast in the Land of Many Waters.

One evening at sunset an airplane came swinging around the timbered headland down the Mackenzie. Flying low, just over the water, it veered in toward the steamer landing, touched lightly, skimmed the wavelets, and taxied close in.

As an excited group began gathering at the wharf, the scarlet-and-gold police launch hove in sight around the headland and bore on toward the post. The two craft manifestly had timed themselves to come in together.

Three Indian canoes darted out to tow the plane in to the landing. Father Claverly had come down the terrace and stood a little apart, quietly watching with observant eyes. Haskell and Williamson had come down; and Elizabeth Spaulding, slipping through the crowd, was trying to edge up near the pier-heads, to be the first to greet Alan Baker.

As the launch drew close, the crowd saw it carried four men. When it nosed alongside, they recognized Pedneault and Bill Hardsock, muddled, unshaven; and Alan Baker, a bandage around his head, his left hand wrapped in surgical dressing, his left arm in a sling. The fourth man was some outlandish individual of yellowish complexion and almond eyes, with his right arm carefully splintered and bandaged.

The freightage that the launch carried-a machine gun and clutter of rifles, a half dozen bales of peltry worth a small fortune each bale, shovels and corded packs, and five stout leather pouches sewn with rawhide in the prospector fashion-the mere sight of that cargo drew a gasp from the crowd and brought them Joyce had come with Buzzard in the plane. As she unsnapped her safety belt and stood up, she was remembering her last time here at Endurance, when her father was still alive. It seemed a heartless irony of fate that he had died just when his innocence had been proved. Small comfort to know that his name and memory were cleared of guilt. As she thought of him lying dead at Resolution and of the tragic duty calling her there, she was glad that tonight a steamer was coming past and she would leave this tricks, go cautiously about doubling North.

By the time she and Buzzard had skirled ashore, Alan had stepped out upon the planking. In another moment she saw Elizabeth elbow her way through the group pressing around Alan. A gust of emotion-jealousy, scorn, anger-swept across Joyce's pretty face as she watched Elizabeth's greeting. It was stagey, it was all artificial. Elizabeth's gladness at his the opponents will trump, probably return and her sympathy over his the first round.) wounds were effusive and contemptible. Joyce could not help thinking tive bid. of herself swimming across to Alan at the swan nest, and of the compassion that tore at her when she found him there, wounded, bleeding, half unconscious. She felt she had known more real sympathy in those moments than Elizabeth would feel in her whole life. A fierce jealousy, a jealous proprietorship, surged through her. Alan had got those wounds fighting for her; she had dressed them and taken him to her home, and she had nursed him through those long hours of feverish

Haskell came shoving his way out to the wharf edge. "Hardsock, you and Pedneault are under arrest!"

Bill scarcely glanced up at him. Muddied and haggard from two days of shovel work cutting a channel to refloat the big launch, he and Pedneault continued tossing the pouches and fur bales out upon the planking. "Did you understand, Hardsock?" Haskell repeated. "You're under ar-

Bill looked up. "I heard you," he said in weary scorn. "But haven't time to be arrested just now. Put it off a few minutes, can't you? Here's and gold that'd better get under lock and key before part of it walks off. And a prisoner to take up." Williamson came down to the wharf edge. Joyce saw him hesitate a moment, then hold out his hand to Alan. It was only a, momentary pause, but she saw it distinctly, and understood the reason; and it roused a hot anger She was proud of Alan for the way he reacted. He, too, had noticed the hesitation, and he remarked curtly, refusing his hand: "Don't bother, superintendent. You might lose caste. I've heard I'm a criminal." The division commander was visibly hurt by Alan's words. His eyes were taking in the recovered loot, the tired men, Alan's wounds. "I see you won out against those men. The prisoner, I suppose, is one of them. Where are the others?" "Over in the Thal-Azzah. We did you care to take my word for it." Williamson was silent a few me-ments. Into his eyes came a far-away expression, as though he was thinking of renowned patrols in the history of the Force and realizing that Baker's victory over these six criminals was one of them and one of the best of them. Finally he requested: "Won't you come up to the cabin, Baker? I'd like to hear your report on this."

"I'll come up." Alan sent an ominous glance at Haskell. "I've got several things to say to you, super-Joyce felt some one touching her arm. Turning, she saw it was Father Claverly. As he shook hands he asked her,

"Joyce, if you have time tonight, step over to my study and visit me, won't "Why yes, Father Claverly, if you wish. I'd better come before ten; the steamer may be here any time after "You're leaving tonight?"

"Yes. There'll be no other for two weeks. Bill told you I'm going back to Ottawa?" Father Claverly nodded, and a little afterwards he left her. Joyce was deadly serious in her last words to Alan.

"You'll not forget what we talked over-the Inconnu trap?"

"I'll not forget. But he may not walk into it, Joyce. He's shrewd, he's careful."

Good Reason Found for Giving Youth a Chance

It is hard for a parent to realize that youth can solve some of its problems and make some of its decisions without adult interference. The inability of adults to give a youth a chance to assume responsibility is of old standing. Most of us are unable to note the growing maturity of a boy. We keep on coddling and fathering him far beyond the point when he can make some of his decisions.

Thackeray found the same condition in his day, and out of the accumulation of wisdom gained in his study of mankind, wrote:

"We should pay as much reverence to youth as we should to age, there are points in which you young folks are altogether our superiors; and I can't help constantly crying out to persons of my own years, when busied about their young people-leave them alone; don't be always meddling with their affairs, which they can manage for themselves; don't be always insisting upon managing their boats, and putting your oars in the water with theirs."-Richmond Palladium.

Modern Contract Bridge By Lelia Hattersley

Favorable and Unfavorable Times to Double

N MAKING a penalty double of an I opponent's bid which promises but does not insure you a set of two under the following circumstances:

Unfavorable times to double: If your partner has offered no bid of any kind.

(He may or may not have a defensive trick but you have no right to count on him for anything.) When you have great length in the suit your partner has bid.

(It is obvious in such a case that

If your partner has made a pre-emp-

(Which is a warning not to count on him for any winning tricks unless the hand is played at his suit.) When your opponent has shown a two-suited hand. (He has told you that he has two suits probably of 5 or more cards which leaves him few cards in the remaining suits; if you double him in spite of such a warning do not be surprised when honor-tricks which you had counted on making in these two remaining suits are promptly trumped. And even though you are sure of setting one of two suits which your adversary has bid, do not double unless you are prepared to set the second.) Favorable times to double:

When your partner has bid one, wo or three originally.

When your partner has made any voluntary bid.

When your partner has assisted your bid.

When you can be sure of setting either of two suits your opponents have bid. And best of all, when your double is based on sure trump tricks.

At all times, when doubling a suit a hundred and fifty thousand in furs bid, it is well to have at least one of your setting tricks in the opponent's suit.

> Unless you have a set up suit, which you are sure of running off for a given number of tricks, your double of an opponent's no trump must be based on the count of combined honor-tricks which you can definitely locate in your partner's hand and your own. Using the yard stick measurement, you can figure that a holding of 5 honor-tricks in your partnership hands will, as a rule, defeat an adverse one or two no trump bid by about two tricks. And 4 combined honor-tricks should set a 3 no trump

When Your Partner Doubles for Penalties

If your partner doubles an opponent for a penalty when you have made no bid, it is not necessary for you to become excited and feel that you should take action because your hand take the trouble to give them a decent happens to be a bust. Unless you have made a voluntary bid your partner has no right to count on you in "Yes, dead. It was a fair fight, if any capacity, and his double, if sound should be based not on trick expec tation from your hand but on 2 set ting tricks in his own. Do not consider taking your partner out of his penalty double unless you have some bizarre distribution which strongly indicates that his double will fail.

When your partner doubles after you have made a bid, or assisted him do not interfere unless you have good reason to believe that he is counting on a trick or tricks which your hand will fail to furnish. For example, if you have made a deceptive bid, or if you have previously assisted your partner's suit on distributional values alone and hold five or more of his trumps with no outside honor-tricks In such cases it is usually advisable to take-out your partner's penalty double. But it is not necessary to take your partner out of a double which he has made after you have opened with a pre-emptive bid. If he understands your bid he is already warned of your lack in defensive tricks, and his subsequent double tells you that he is independent of your assistance.

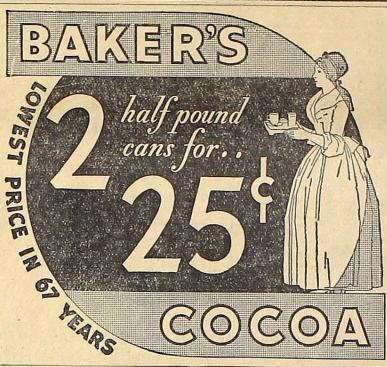

Quite often it happens that you find yourself in the delightful position of having a choice between a safe penalty double and a sure game bid of your own. When each of these alternatives appears to be certain of success, the one which will net you the greater number of points should be chosen.

In 1715 an Englishman named Thomas Doggett instituted boat races among the fishermen on the Thames. The first English regatta took place on the Thames, off Ranelagh gardens, in 1775. This was modeled on the Venetion regatta. The first race in the United States occurred in 1811 between two barges-the Knickerbocker of New York and the Invincible of Long Is land, the former being the winner.

Largest Gold "Nugget" In the Australian gold rush, which led to a tremendous development in the middle of last century, some of the biggest known nuggets came to light. The Welcome Stranger, which weighed 2,315 ounces, was worth $45,000. Ir New South Wales in 1872 men came across a slab 4 inches thick, 4 feet ? inches long, and 2 feet 9 inches wide the largest mass of gold ever found.

Sound Dietary Idea Bacon, in his Regimen of Health says: "Beware of sudden change in any great point of diet, and if necessizy enforce it, fit the rest to it; for it is a secret, both in nature and state, that it is safer to change many things than one." And again: "It is a safer conclusion to say. 'This agreeth not well with me, therefore I will not continue it."

The Parade

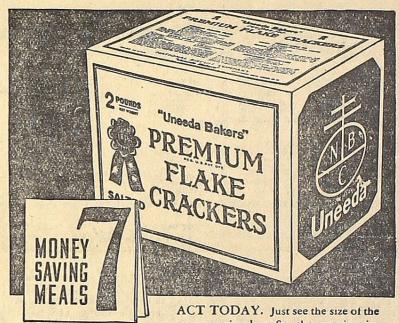

"Do you enjoy a parade?" "Immensely," answered Senator Sorghum. "All that the crowd expects to hear is the band, and nobody would be so silly as to try to heckle the music."
