AMERICAN RED CROSS MEETING TO BE HELD TUESDAY, OCTOBER 25

There will be an American Red Cross meeting at the Court House in Tawas City on Tuesday evening, October 25, at 8 o'clock Eastern time. This is very important, being the annual meeting. Election of officers will take place at this time and many problems are to be discussed. If you want the Red Cross to continue in Josco County, show it by your presence at this meeting.

Frank F. Taylor, Secretary, Josco County American Red Cross.

ROBINSON—WORKMAN

Miss Viola Robinson, daughter of Joseph Robinson of Whittemore, and Donald Wallace Workman, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Workman of Cherry Valley, Ontario, were married Monday noon, October 17, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Barton, 163 Humewood Drive, Toronto. Dr. Workman, a relative of the groom, performed the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, was lovely in her gown of poudre blue crepe, fitted, and ankle length, with a deep yoke and short puffed sleeves of Irish lace, elbow length lace mitts, silver slippers and turban. Her flowers were a shoulder corsage of tulleman roses and baby breath.

Miss Emily Workman, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid and wore a frock of wine tone crepe, trimmed in a matching color of chiffon velvet, with beige accessories. Her flowers were a shoulder corsage of roses and lilies of the valley.

Edison McConnell attended the groom as best man.

A wedding reception followed, after which the young couple left for a motor trip through the East. For traveling the bride wore a dress of dark blue with matching accessories. After November 1st they will make their home at Kirkland Lake, where the groom is assistant manager of General Motors Sales and Service.

GREAT ENTERTAINMENT IN 'MADAME RACKETEER'

"Madame Racketeer," an excellent human interest comedy, is the type of movie that becomes an admirable vehicle for actors who know their character-stuff and know it well.

Alison Skipworth, veteran of the stage, an artist as well as an actress, and a humorist by instinct, demonstrates delightfully just the kind of bluff a "sporting widow" needs, to get her schemes over quickly and with charming finesse.

Richard Bennett, a master of quaint comedy roles for thirty years, and possessing rare skill as an interpreter of character roles, depicts the kind of trusting husband who doesn't know a gouge from a gimlet, or can't tell a harp from a harpie.

Miss Skipworth plays the role of a Countess—a Countess of adventure along the highway of opportunity. All the travelers are prospects—pay dirt, so to speak, for the Countess is an accomplished gold-digger and swindler. What she can't get by finesse—she takes any way.

"Madame Racketeer" is for the whole world to see—to enjoy in its pungent humor—to laugh and laugh again. It is the feature attraction at the State Theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

MAKE GOOD WILL TOUR TO BAY CITY AND SAGINAW

A "Good Will Tour" under the auspices of the East Tawas business men was made Thursday afternoon to Bay City and Saginaw. About 20 cars were in the caravan.

The tour was made over the new Shore road and the object was to advertise this road to the people of Bay City and Saginaw, and the advantages of the Tawas bay region for autumn recreational sports, such as hunting and fishing.

The caravan had a motorcycle escort into Bay City, where it was met by the Bay City Board of Commerce. At Saginaw it was met by the Board of Commerce of that city.

Those who took part in the tour had a very pleasant time and undoubtedly much was accomplished in the way of advertising this section of Michigan.

COUNTY GIVES TOURIST ASSOCIATION $250.00

At the session of the Josco County Board of Supervisors which ended last Friday, an appropriation of $250.00 was made for the East Michigan Tourist Association. An appropriation of $150.00 was made for the Detroit Division of the Salvation Army and $200.00 for the Michigan Children's Aid Society.

Otto Rahl, superintendent of the Plainfield public schools, was elected county school examiner at that meeting. Louis Phelan of this city was elected county poor commissioner. He succeeds Waldo Curry of Tawas township.

LARGE NUMBER ATTEND P. T. A. OCTOBER MEET

The October meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association which was held in the assembly room of the high school last Thursday evening, was exceedingly well attended.

The meeting was opened with group singing, and this was followed by a short business session. One of the features of this session was the presentation of an American flag and standard which is to be kept each month by the grade room whose pupils have the most relatives and friends in attendance at the P. T. A. The fifth and sixth grade room won the flag this month.

The program was in charge of Mrs. Braddock, and consisted of two songs by the high school Girls

A STORY FOR BEDTIME

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

PETER RABBIT MEETS LIGHTFOOT

PETER RABBIT was on his way back from the pond of Paddy the Beaver deep in the Green Forest. He had just seen Mr. and Mrs. Quack and their ten young Quacks start on their long, terrible journey to the far away Southland. Farewells are always rather sad, and this particular farewell had left Peter with a lump in his throat, a queer choky feeling.

"I Hope They Will Get Through All Right," Said He.

to watch out for them. Farmer Brown's Boy used to hunt me with one of them, but he doesn't any more, and he won't let anybody else near the Old Prier Patch, with one or over here in the Green Forest. But even when he did hunt me it wasn't any thing like what the Quacks have to go through. If I kept my eyes open I could tell when a hunter was coming, and could hide in a hole if I wanted to. I never had to worry about my meals. But with the Quacks it is a thousand times worse. They've got to eat while making that long journey, and they can eat only where there is the right kind of food. Hunters with terrible guns know where those places are and hide there until the ducks come, and the ducks have no way of knowing whether the hunters are there or not. That isn't hunting. It's—it's—"

"Well, what is it? What are you talking to yourself about, Peter Rabbit?"

Peter looked up with a start to find the soft beautiful eyes of Lightfoot the Deer gazing down at him over the top of a little hemlock tree.

"It's awful," declared Peter. "It's worse than unfair. It doesn't give them any chance at all."

"I suppose it must be so if you say so," replied Lightfoot, "but suppose you tell me what all this awfulness is about."

Peter grinned. Then he began at the beginning and told Lightfoot all about Mr. and Mrs. Quack and the awful dangers they must face on their long journey to the far away Southland and back again in the spring, all because of the heartless hunters with terrible guns. Lightfoot listened and his great soft eyes were filled with pity for the troubles of the Quack family.

"I hope they will get through all right," said he, "and I hope they will get back in the spring. It is bad enough to be hunted by men at one time of the year, as no one knows better than I do, but to be hunted in the spring as well as in the fall is more than twice as bad. Men are strange creatures. I do not understand them at all. None of the people of the Green Forest would think of doing such terrible things. I suppose it is quite right to hunt others in order to get enough to eat, though I am thankful to say that I have never had to do that, but to hunt others just for the fun of hunting is something I cannot understand at all. And yet that is what men seem to do it for. I guess the trouble is they never have been hunted themselves and don't know how it feels. Some times I think I'll hunt one some day to teach him a lesson. What are you laughing at, Peter?"

"At the idea of you hunting a man," replied Peter. "Your heart is right, Lightfoot, but you are too timid and gentle to frighten any one. Big as you are, I wouldn't fear you."

With a single swift bound Lightfoot sprang out in front of Peter. He stamped his sharp hoofs, lowered his handsome head until the sharp points of his horns pointed straight at Peter, and made a motion as if to plunge at Peter. His eyes, which

It looks like bits of old fur. Have you been tearing somebody's coat, Lightfoot?" Peter's eyes were wide with wonder and suspicion.

GOOD SOUPS

A SOUP is always a part of the meal that we feel should never be omitted. It warms the stomach and prepares it for the heartier foods that follow and is of itself a nourishment when prepared with cream and vegetables.

Squash Soup.

Mix together one cupful of boiled squash that has been mashed and put through a colander, two tablespoonfuls of minced celery, one teaspoonful of salt and sugar, one tablespoonful of onion juice, one-fourth teaspoonful of pepper and a pinch of mace. Pre pare two tablespoonfuls of butter and flour mixed together. Add a little of a quart of milk, stir until well blended, then add the remainder and heat slowly. Beat the squash until light and mix with the other ingredients. Heat very hot and serve at once.

Mock Bisque.

Scald one quart of milk with three-fourths of a cupful of bread crumbs, one small onion stuck with six cloves, a sprig of parsley and a bit of bay leaf. Remove the seasonings and rub through a sieve. Add two teaspoonfuls of sugar, two cupfuls of canned tomatoes and cook fifteen minutes. Re-heat the milk and bring to the boiling point. Add the tomatoes, stirring gently. Add one-third of a cupful of butter, one-half teaspoonful of salt and a few dashes of cayenne. Serve with croutons.

Pea Soup.

This is so simple that a child may prepare it. Take one can each of pea soup and canned milk, or rich sweet milk if at hand. Mix well, heat and serve hot with croutons.

In the making of soups as in any other food preparation much depends upon the cook. All ingredients should be carefully measured, seasoning appropriate should be added. Mace, cloves, nutmeg, thyme, bay leaf all play an important part. The same ingredients blended with lack of care may be flat, stale and insipid, or a royal feast. A teaspoonful of sugar brings out the flavor of many of the vegetables and is an addition to most soups.

For G. A. R. Memorial at Lincoln Tomb

HERE is the artist's drawing of a proposed G. A. R. memorial to be erected on the terrace immediately north of the tomb of Abraham Lincoln in Springfield. The structure would be in the nature of an amphitheater seating approximately 3,000 people, with a building for keeping the records and historical documents of the G. A. R. The cost of the memorial would be about $250,000.

U. S. BUILDING PLANS SUPPLY JOBS

Treasury Department Ready to Begin 142 Structures.

Washington.—Using funds from the $100,000,000 granted by the emergency relief and construction act passed by the last session of congress, a federal public building program that will ultimately give employment to hundreds of thousands of men is under way throughout the country.

That 400,000 persons are at present employed in connection with some phrase of the construction of 41 post offices, custom houses, and other buildings was pointed out in Washington by Ferry K. Heath, assistant secretary of the treasury, who is director of the building program. A total of 100,000 are actually engaged in working on the buildings and 300,000 others in fabricating and material plants, he said.

Meanwhile, plans are being made to launch work on 142 more such construction projects, in 35 states involving an outlay of $20,810,000. This list includes new federal buildings that will cost between $300,000 and $100,000 each. The 41 projects now being erected each will cost more than $300,000.

Workmen in the West have also been encouraged by the act of the Reconstruction Finance corporation in granting a $40,000,000 loan to the Los Angeles metropolitan water district, which covers more than a dozen southern California cities.

This loan is to aid in piping water from the Colorado river above Hoover dam at a final cost of about $220,000,000. The loan will be made through the purchase of $40,000,000 of 5 per cent bonds of the water district.

Huge Sum Not Allocated. In announcing the loan, officials in Washington said that 1,000 men probably would be employed by the end of this year and about 4,500 by next July.

Besides creation of employment directly on construction work, much indirect employment will be created, for a vast amount of materials and supplies will be required. The aqueduct itself will be 239 miles long. Eighty-five miles of 16-foot tunnel must be driven through the mountains and lined with concrete.

Of the $100,000,000 set aside by the last congress through the emergency relief and construction act as a means of providing employment through a public building program, $74,500,000 has thus far been allocated, leaving $25,500,000 yet to be assigned. It is expected that the greater part of this balance will be distributed for the con-

Ancient Indian Guards

Ritual of Ponca Tribe

Ponca City, Okla.—Only one member of the Ponca Indian tribe is left who knows the secret ceremonies of the medicine men of the Poncas.

Little Dance, who does not know the exact date of his birth, but does know he was a small child when the meteor group of 1833 passed over the United States, lives on the reservation south of here, with his sons and daughters, and will not talk to white men.

From historical records, which verify his story of the comets, telling of a meteor shower on November 12 and 13, 1833, the ancient Ponca must be well over one hundred.

Among the secrets of his tribe, which he alone could reveal and which will probably die with him, are the clan secrets of the Poncas. The seven clans of the Poncas—the Medicine band, Buffalo band, Ice band, Deer band, Snake band—all have lost their rituals. They are known only by the medicine man.

Little Dance takes as active a part as possible in the sacred dances, and always helps with the arrangements. Alone, he holds hundreds of secrets, from the mixing of paint to the ceremonies of the forbidden sun dance.

struction of federal buildings that are to cost less than $100,000 each.

This third list of construction jobs will be forthcoming soon, according to announcement made at the time the second list was made public.

In the list of 142 projects costing between $300,000 and $100,000 each, New York state receives the largest number of projects, 24. California is second, with 17. Of the 35 states receiving such buildings, only 12 received but one structure.

Another federal agency, the War department, is also planning to provide work through a vast construction program. This program calls for the expenditure of $41,577,260 on flood control and rivers and harbors projects. By this program War department officials expect 25,000 persons to be removed from the ranks of the jobless.

Work to Begin Now. No delay in getting the program under way is expected by army engineers. Many of the projects already have been started, and plans have been drawn up for the rest.

Under authorization of the last congress, the War department also expects to spend $15,164,000 on construction work at military posts. This is expected to begin soon, and officials believe it will give work to 10,000 persons.

In announcing the fact that 400,000 persons are now at work on federal construction projects under the emergency relief and construction act, Director Heath said that by June 30, 1933, the government will have under contract virtually 90 per cent of the public works necessary for the next 25 years.

It is expected that millions of dollars will be saved the government when the construction of large working post offices is completed. Among the large post offices now under construction are those at New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Cincinnati,

Chicago, Kansas City, Atlanta, and Albany, N. Y.

Through the use of private architects for many of the projects, progress in carrying out the building program has been speeded up more than 100 per cent. Since the program was begun, contracts have been made with 264 architectural firms for plans on buildings representing a cost of more than $200,000,000.

During the last ten months 105 federal buildings have been completed at a total cost of about $310,000,000, according to Mr. Heath.

Nebraska Yields Bones of Camels

Roamed That Section About 3,000,000 Years Ago.

Denver, Colo.—The skeletons of a herd of eleven camels, found in Nebraska, 3,000,000 years old, will soon adorn the halls of the Colorado Museum of Natural History here.

The camels, although built almost the same as the modern camel common to the Sahara desert, are much smaller. The Nebraska prehistoric creature stood only three feet high.

Proof that the camels lived in Nebraska when that country was a desert of fine, blowing sand, comes from the strata of sand in which the fossils were found. They were native of the miocene age, according to Director J. D. Figgins of the museum.

For many years the camels roamed the sands. They did not travel fast. Large herds of them, thousands perhaps, would return for weeks to the same bed of sand at night. They would gather close together for rest and protection from night prowlers.

Ban Bobbed Hair for Choir Singers

Wichita, Kan.—The girls and women who sing in the choir at the annual old-fashioned camp meeting of the Kansas State Holiness association must not have bobbed hair and they must be dressed modestly.

Women were requested not to appear on the platform with bobbed hair. They were asked to dress modestly. The religious services outlined were simple—prayer meeting at 7 p. m., followed by song service and preaching. The afternoon session followed the same routine.

During this period that a herd slept on the same spot, some of them were bound to die. And in such a place were the skeletons found which were brought to Denver for the education of the world.

Archie, the skeleton of archidiskodon meridionalis Nebraskensis, a mammoth elephant, which occupies an exhibition stall adjoining the small camels, also came from Nebraska. But the two animals never met. They could not have lived in the same type of country. Archie is only 20,000 years old, as compared with the 3,000,000 years of his neighbors.

Uses Window in Chest to Study Internal Diseases

Arnold's Park, Iowa.—Use of a window placed in the chest to observe the action of the heart, lungs and diaphragm of animals in the study of internal diseases has been perfected by Dr. Walter L. Mendenhall, former head of the Drake university physics department.

Mendenhall is head of the department of pharmacology at the Boston university school of medicine.

The device is expected to prove valuable in the treatment of tuberculosis, heart disease and lung disorders. The window is made of photographic film and is placed in the chest opening, inserted between the muscles.

Physicians believe it is possible that the window could be used for treatment of disease by ultraviolet light by substituting a quartz window for the photographic film window. Doctor Mendenhall demonstrated his experiment in April before the Federated Societies for Experimental Biology in Philadelphia.

DAIRY FACTS

OUTLOOK NOT GOOD FOR DAIRY FARMER

Unprofitable Conditions in Deficit Feed Areas.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture—WNU Service.

Increased production of dairy products this fall and winter as a result of relatively large numbers of cows on farms, low prices of feed grains in relation to dairy products, increased fall freshening, and prospective increases in feed supplies, is to be expected.

The bureau of agricultural economics says that unless the decrease in consumer incomes is checked, the ratio between prices of feed and prices of dairy products will probably be even less favorable for dairying in deficit feed areas than for the last two seasons. In surplus feed areas, however, the ratio, it is expected, will be more favorable. Prices of fluid milk have declined during the last year at about the same rate as have prices of manufactured dairy products, but the bureau points out that base prices for fluid milk are still relatively higher than wholesale prices of the manufactured products.

The number of milk cows on farms has continued to increase during the first half of 1932 at a more rapid rate than in the same months of 1931, but it is expected that the present rate of increase will not continue because the numbers of heifers being raised has begun to decline. Poor pastures, local feed shortages, a higher percentage of low-producing cows in herds, and a marked shift toward fall freshening are stated as reasons why total milk production the first half of 1932 was somewhat lighter than for the same period in 1931, despite an increased number of cows.

Color Indicator Shows Abnormalities in Cows

Cows that have garget produce milk that is less acid than that from normal, healthy udders. Frequently it is possible to detect the presence of the disease by means of a color indicator. Tests at Ohio State university with bromthymol blue, sometimes called "Thybromol," have showed that abnormalities can be detected. When one cubic centimeter of this indicator solution is added to five cubic centimeters of normal fresh milk, the color obtained will be greenish-yellow or yellowish-green. When milk is too acid, it becomes a distinct yellow; but if milk is too alkaline, as is usually the case in garget, the color will be intensely green, dark green or blue-green. In making the test each quarter is tested separately. After the first four streams are milked into a strip cup or other container, five cubic centimeters of milk are drawn into a test tube and the indicator added directly to it. The color develops at once.

Milk from fresh cows or from cows nearly dry is not suitable for this test.—Prairie Farmer.

Sees Value of Milk Tests

The milk test association idea has never seemed to "take hold" in Canada. Many associations have been organized but few of them have been long lived. The cost of maintaining a tester for each unit of 26 herds seemed to be the great stumbling block. In the United States, on the other hand, such associations are now numbered by the thousand and the number is still increasing. Last year there were 85 such associations in Pennsylvania and 36,694 cows were under test. The average production of milk per cow was 8,081 pounds and 312.8 pounds butterfat. This is the second year that the average milk production has exceeded 8,000 pounds and the fifth consecutive year that the average butterfat has exceeded 300 pounds. No dairy farmer will need to be told that this is an exceptionally good showing. It is results such as this that have made for the improvement associations a secure place in the estimation of United States farmers.—Montreal Family Herald.

DAIRY NOTES

Flies are a serious pest around a stable or a milkhouse. Screened windows and darkened interiors will help to keep them outside.

Thirteen Holstein cows in the United States produced in excess of 30,000 pounds of milk in 1931, bringing the total to 127 cows that have reached this goal. The list is headed by May DeKol Franczy, located in Massachusetts, with a record of 1,120 pounds of butterfat and 34,448 pounds of milk in one year.

A herd of eight brown Swiss cows owned by E. J. Hilser led in the Tazewell No. 2 Dairy Herd improvement association for June with an average of 1,090 pounds of milk and 41 pounds of butterfat.

New York state dairymen in 53 of the 74 dairy herd improvement associations disposed of 361 cows in April. Low production was the main reason for selling 101 cows; 69 cows were sold for use in other herds, 23 died, and 20 had udder trouble.

Shining Stockholm

Scene on Stockholm's Quays.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

STOCKHOLM is celebrating, this year, the one hundredth anniversary of the opening of the Gota canal which connects the Swedish capital with Goteborg on the North sea, 246 miles across the kingdom.

Even without its party adornment, which it has donned for the celebration, Stockholm is a city that fairly shines. Its quays are the city's front doors, with steps always freshly scrubbed. Under brilliant summer sun, even the cargoes of many of the harbor's sailing craft, moored in front of royal palace, town hall, and house of parliament, glisten, for they are laden with countless cords of silver birch, the city's fuel.

Every year, in gorgeous midsummer floral regalia, Stockholm stands faultlessly groomed to receive only a few score American visitors, while other continental capitals, included in customary tourist itineraries, are thronged with thousands from western shores.

The average traveler does not decide casually upon a trip to Stockholm, nor, unless he comes directly from New York by ocean route, does the American always arrive in the most amiable frame of mind. It is a long, hard journey from western or southern Europe to the historic city founded seven centuries ago as a fortress to resist the forays of Baltic pirates.

From Paris, for example, unless one selects the speedy and exhilarating airplane mode of travel, the major part of one day must be spent on the train to Amsterdam; thence there is an all-night journey to Hamburg, then another full day on the train to Copenhagen, and finally, by train, ferry, and train again, a second night is required to reach one's destination.

Stockholm's prosperity, like that of the entire country, is founded in large measure on forests—the city's name, Isle of the Log, suggests it—but there is no evidence of this in external appearances. There was a time when the metropolis was built of wood, and it required six disastrous conflagrations, recurring over a period of two and a half centuries, to convince its citizens that their safest insurance against flames lay beneath their feet.

City Built of and on Granite. Stockholm today is built of granite, upon granite foundations. A landowner blasts his building material from the site of his proposed structure, and by the same operation makes his cellar. The result is a city of somber, unadorned gray-stone apartments and business buildings, conveying the impression of having been erected for eternity.

Architecturally one enters a new world on reaching Stockholm. No slightest suggestion is to be found of that classical Greek influence so conspicuous in most of the capitals and chief cities of southern, central and western Europe.

For twelve years Stockholm labored on its town hall. It was finished, as planned, for formal dedication in 1923, the four hundredth anniversary of the beginning of the reign of Gustavus Vasa, Sweden's first hereditary ruler.

The hall, in contrast to the customary granite, is built of exceptionally large red bricks. Its interior is as impressive as its exterior. On one side of a great inner court is the famous blue room, rising from the ground to the full height of the building. This is used for official banquets and similar civic affairs.

Here, each year on a Sunday in August, a picturesque event is staged, when awards are made to Stockholm's great army of workmen farmers, one of the most interesting groups to be found in Europe.

The Swedes are noted for their love of the soil and all that it produces, and this passion for growing things cannot be stifled by the circumstance of metropolitan existence; so the city has set aside countless acres of suburban territory for conversion into garden plots, and these are rented to workmen for the equivalent of $5 for a summer season.

Here the laborer builds a tiny cottage—one room and porch, usually. He can buy a complete house ready-made for $100 and set it up like a jig-saw puzzle. All summer he and his wife and children live on their "little farm." He continues his work in shipyard or factory, but early in the morning, before he goes to his job in the city, and when he returns in the afternoon, he joins his wife in hoeing the vegetables, training the roses over the doorway, cultivating the dahlias, pansies, violets, and sweet peas.

Garden Prizes Awarded. Toward the end of the summer the housewife is kept busy canning and preserving the produce of her doll-house garden, while the husband concentrates his efforts upon the flowers.

On the appointed Sunday in August each family takes its prize products—blossoms, fresh and canned vegetables, and fruit—to the blue room. Here the women, arrayed in the peasant attire of their native provinces, display the results of their summer recreation and diversion.

These workman gardens were introduced during the pinching years of the World war, when Sweden was more or less isolated and when all food products commanded fabulous prices.

Although the emergency no longer exists, the gardens are continued, not only because they are financially successful—the vegetables raised each year are valued at more than half a million dollars—but because they have promoted the health and happiness of the working classes and have contributed materially to the attractiveness of the capital's environs.

The "little farms" are a special boon to the children of the working classes, who must store up energy for those long, dark hours of fall, winter, and spring schooling. Judged by American standards, the lot of the school-boy or girl in Stockholm is one of the most unenviable in the whole world of education.

School life begins at the age of six. The hours are trying and Saturday is like every other week day. In winter, of course, the pupil must get up and dress by artificial light, and he starts for school while the street lamps are still burning. He begins his day's task at 7:45; at 10:35 he goes home for breakfast, returns to the classroom at noon, and is dismissed at 2:35 or 3:30 according to his age. In mid-winter it is dark at the later hour. After the first snowfall, children living in the environs of Stockholm make their way to school on skis.

Fond of Study and Sports.

Under such circumstances, it is natural that the children of Stockholm should take their studies somewhat more seriously than children in American cities; yet, when the summer vacation season arrives, no youngsters in the world enter upon their outdoor frolics with greater joy. The children of the wealthier classes accompany their parents to summer homes outside the city, many of them situated on the countless islands which dot Sweden's Baltic shore line; yet even here they pursue their studies in natural history with the zest of a sport.

One of the distinguishing characteristics of the Stockholm youth is his fondness for sports, with a special predilection for that most graceful of all exhibitions of skill, javelin-throwing. Association ball (played with a round football), in which the head is used very largely as the propulsive force, is the national sport of the country, while bicycle endurance races, skiing and skating, and boating in summer are also extremely popular.

Social Life in the Winter.

When the long days begin to grow short, when the well-to-do middle class and the aristocracy return from their country estates, when the autumn rains set in, and the lights begin to twinkle in apartment windows in the early afternoon (only the very wealthy can afford to live in private homes in Stockholm), the social life of the city awakens from its summer sleep.

Then comes a long succession of dinners, musicales, theater parties, opera parties, and suppers. At least one feature of this Stockholm social life would meet with the hearty approval of the average American man of affairs: there is no such obligation as a dinner call. Swedes do not visit informally, nor would it ever occur to a Stockholm woman to telephone a friend and say that she expected to call. One goes to a friend's home only when he or she has been especially invited; but, having accepted such an invitation, he obligates himself to reciprocal entertainment. Thus the—to many—weary winter round begins.

The most distinctive feature of a Swedish repast is the smorgas-bord (sandwich table), variously described as a "super-super hors d'oeuvres" a concentrated delicatessen store, and a general assault on all the rules of diet. To count calories while feasting at a smorgas-bord would require the services of an expert accountant equipped with several adding machines.

Take Baby Sperm Whale After a Desperate Battle

Struggle Between Man and Mammal Draws Big Crowd.

Somerset, Bermuda.—A lusty baby sperm whale that had become separated from its mother was captured here after a desperate struggle. It had strayed within the coral reefs surrounding Bermuda and was sighted by three native fishermen who maneuvered it inshore. Following an unsuccessful and inexperienced attempt to harpoon the whale, one of the fishermen jumped upon the whale's back and deftly tied a rope around its tail immediately above the projecting flukes. A titanic struggle ensued. At times the motor boat would tow the whale which suddenly in its struggle for freedom would "sound" and tow the motor fishing boat about the harbor threatening to wreck the boat and imperil the captors. The shores were lined with spectators watching the struggle between man and mammal until the whale, weakened by its efforts, became docile and allowed himself to be towed to a spot suitable for exhibition purposes.

Thousands of visitors flocked to witness the captured mammal. The Bermuda railway ran special excursion trains to the exhibition point.

Lively and heated discussion, sometimes even leading to blows, raged as to the exact species of the captured creature and even after Dr. F. G. Wheeler, D. Sc., director of the Bermuda Biological station for scientific research, had been called in and definitely identified the capture as a young sperm whale, men once engaged in Bermuda's now defunct whaling industry refused to accept his scientific dictum, averring that it was this, that and the other, mostly names such as might have been coined by A. A. Milne or some equally whimsical writer. The whale was turned over to William Beebe, the scientist, who aided by his staff, dissected it.

The people were coming out of the church as I walked down the street—hundreds of people bowed and tearful from having lost a friend—for it was McKelvey's funeral and he had been well thought of and widely known. I had myself never come into close personal relations with McKelvey, but I knew of him, and the thing which surprised me most was that he should go so soon. He was not much past forty and should have had almost half his life ahead of him.

He had had a good business and a profitable one it seemed to one looking on only from the outside, and he had lived well—too well, his friends agreed—for he had spent his income freely as he earned it with little thought of the future, and now it was rumored that his wife and three children would have little more than the house in which they were living when his affairs were closed up. There was little or no insurance, no provision for a rainy day. McKelvey had been a spender thinking that life in the future would be what it was in the present.

He had not been a selfish man. The tearful crowd at his funeral from all strata of society proved that he had spent his energies as freely in

Mother of 7—Still Young

THE woman who gives her organs the right stimulant need not worry about growing old. Her system doesn't stagnate; her face doesn't age. She has the health and "pep" that come from a lively liver and strong, active bowels.

When you're sluggish and the system needs help, don't take a lot of "patent medicines." There's a famous doctor's prescription for just such cases, and every druggist keeps this standard preparation. It is made from fresh laxative herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin. Just ask for Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin. Take a little every day or so, until every organ in your body feels the big improvement.

The next time you have a bilious headache, or feel all bound-up, take this delicious syrup instead of the usual cathartic. You'll be rid of all that poisonous waste, and you haven't weakened the bowels. You'll have a better appetite, and feel better in every way. The constant use of cathartics is often the cause of a sallow complexion and lines in the face. And so unnecessary!

Would you like to break yourself of the cathartic habit? At the same time building health and vigor that protects you from frequent sick spells, headaches, and colds? Get a big bottle of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin today. Use often enough to avoid those attacks of constipation. When you feel weak and run-down or a coated tongue or bad breath warns you the bowels need to be stimulated. Give it to children instead of strong laxatives that sap their strength. It isn't expensive.

HALL-MILLS CASE IS UNSOLVED MYSTERY

Many of Those Involved Still Live Near Scene.

New Brunswick, N. J.—Ten years ago Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall, rector of St. John's Episcopal church here, and Eleanor R. Mills, his choir leader, were murdered under a crab apple tree on the Phillips farm, just off De Russey lane on the outskirts of town.

The mystery which surrounded the crime when the bodies were found two days after the double slaying remains unsolved despite investigations which resulted in the trial and acquittal on murder charges of the clergyman's widow, Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, and her brothers, Henry and "Willie" Stevens.

Henry de la Bruyere Carpender, a cousin of Mrs. Hall, who was indicted with her and her brothers, never was the woman's throat, but it focused attention of the country upon a strangely assorted group of characters whose private lives were exposed to public view and turned topsy-turvy. Some of them are still trying, after ten years, to forget and make others forget the parts they played in the celebrated case.

Mrs. Hall, who is now sixty-six, still lives at 45 Nicholl avenue, New Brunswick, the house from which her husband set forth to keep the tryst from which he never returned alive. She still wears black as though in mourning and devotes most of her time to charitable work. Strangers often stop before the gate and stare at the big house that lies in the sheltering shrubbery.

Mrs. Hall's brother Henry, now sixty-three, lives with his family at Lavallette, the New Jersey coast resort from which he was taken to jail in the fall tried, but the indictment against him was quashed after his kinsmen had been found not guilty of the murder of Mrs. Mills by a Somerset county jury. A second indictment accusing all four with the murder of Mr. Hall also was nollprossed after the trial.

Lives Turned Topsy-Turvy. The investigation failed to reveal who fired the shots which killed Mr. Hall and Mrs. Mills or who slashed of 1926. He spends most of his time fishing and hunting and appears to be in better health than he was at the time of his trial. Her younger brother, the eccentric "Willie," lives with Mrs. Hall in New Brunswick.

Still Visits Firemen. He has not changed much in appearance or habits. He makes frequent visits to Fire House No. 3, where before the murder he spent hours talking with friends among the firemen. At other times he works in the garden of his sister's home or accompanies her on charitable errands wearing a black felt hat, a frock coat, dark trousers.

Mr. Carpender, a retired Wall Street broker, was said to have lost heavily in the market crash of 1929. In that year, too, he was stricken with paralysis which crippled him and made speech difficult. He is fifty-nine years old and lives in Somerville, N. J.

Mills, the husband of the slain choir leader, still lives in his shabby second-floor apartment at 49 Carman street, a few blocks from the more pretentious home of Mrs. Hall. Somewhat grayer and thinner, he is still janitor of the public school across the way and is a regular churchgoer, firm in the conviction that the murder will never be solved.

His daughter Charlotte, now twenty-eight, is a stenographer working and living in New York. Occasionally she visits her father and brother, Danny, a tall, slim youth of twenty-two. Charlotte has not married.

Mrs. Jane Gibson, the "pig woman," who was carried into court on a stretcher to testify that she saw Mrs. Hall and her brother "Willie" near the scene of the murder on the night the minister and his inamorata were killed, died of cancer in Jersey City hospital February 7, 1930. She never recanted the story which the jurors at the trial of Mrs. Hall and her brothers refused to accept. Joseph E. Stricker and Azariah M. Beekman, prosecutors respectively of Middlesex and Somerset counties, who conducted the first investigation which failed to result in any indictments, also have passed away.

Relief From Neuralgia In Few Minutes

Quick Dissolving Property of BAYER ASPIRIN Starts Relief 3 or 4 Minutes After Taking

Think of a headache going in three or four minutes. The pains of neuralgia, neuritis or rheumatism being eased, often, in that little space of time!

Due to important, scientific developments in the famous Bayer Aspirin laboratories, millions of people are enjoying this almost unbelievably quick relief from pain.

That is because Bayer Aspirin dissolves almost instantly in the stomach. And thus almost INSTANTLY starts to ease pain. The average headache, for instance, eases in as little as four or five minutes. Think of what a time saver this is to busy people.

Remember it is Genuine BAYER Aspirin which provides this unique property. So see that you get the real article when you buy. See that these three words "Genuine Bayer Aspirin" are on any box or bottle of aspirin that you buy. And that the name "Bayer" is stamped in the form of a cross on any tablet that you take.

Remember that when you buy. And remember, too, that Genuine Bayer Aspirin cannot harm the heart. Take care you get the genuine.

Neal's Mother Has Right Idea

Within a few months there will be no more feverish, bilious, headachy, constipated, pale and puny children. That prophecy would surely come true if every mother could see for herself how quickly, easily, and harmlessly the bowels of babies and children are cleansed, regulated, given tone and strength by a product which has proved its merit and reliability to do what is claimed for it to millions of mothers in over fifty years of steadily increasing use.

As mothers find out from using it how children respond to the gentle influence of California Fig Syrup by growing stronger, sturdier and more active daily they simply have to tell other mothers about it. That's one of the reasons for its overwhelming sales of over four million bottles a year.

A Western mother, Mrs. Neal M. Todd, 1701 West 27th St., Oklahoma City, Okla., says: "When my son, Neal, was three years old he began having constipation. I decided to give him California Fig Syrup and in a few days he was all right and looked fine again. This pleased me so much that I have used Fig Syrup ever since for all his colds or little upset spells. It always stops his trouble quick, strengthens him, makes him eat."

Always ask for California Fig Syrup by the full name and see that the carton bears the word "California." Then you'll get the genuine.

"You can be—shrewder, Alan! You can make him walk into it. Let him think he's got you beaten and helpless. Hide what you feel. And don't antagonize Superintendent Williamson."

She held his hand a moment in her warm clasp, thinking of her father lying dead at Resolution, of Alan's noble struggle to save him, of Haskell breaking her father's will to live. It was some solace to know she had helped Alan plan a trap for the guilty inspector, a deadly trap if Haskell only walked into it.

As she quietly wished him good luck, in her heart she was fervently saying to him, "God go with you, Alan." And because she had passionately resolved not to see him again before she left, she meant her words not only for the stormy hour ahead of him, but for all the years of his life.

Alan strode into the cabin in a savage fighting mood. He had risen from a sick bed to come to Endurance before Williamson left, and he had sworn he was going to crush Haskell. The inspector had forced him out of the Mounted; had caused Larry to be crippled for life; had refused protection to Joyce in her desperate need; had made a scapegoat of Dave MacMillan to save his face; and more than anyone on earth he was responsible for that sorry tragedy at Resolution.

Almost the only hope Alan had was that trap which he and Joyce had planned—an idea born in Joyce's quick brain and developed between them during the three days she had nursed him.

When he went in, he found Williamson and Haskell sitting at the desk, waiting. Haskell did not move; but Williamson, considerate of his wounds, drew up a chair and invited him to sit down.

"Won't you give us the story of your patrol, Baker?" he requested kindly.

Alan countered: "My story doesn't begin with this patrol. It begins last fall, when this gentleman here came down north. I want to tell it clean, from then till now."

"That's your right," Williamson assented.

Alan hoped that his story, by the sheer blunt truth of it, would carry conviction. But when he finished, the old officer did not comment. The silence was foreboding. Almost in desperation, Alan took up a couple matters that lay very near his heart.

"There's two or three favors I want to ask of you, sir. Since they're not in my own behalf, you may agree to them. One is about Chink Woolley, the man we brought in. I want to put in a word for him. He deserves heavy punishment but he shouldn't be hanged. He gave us some priceless information. We might never have saved Joyce MacMillan if he hadn't. If it's impossible for me to be present at his trial, I want to turn over to you an affidavit in his behalf. Then, about Featherof, my partner in this patrol. He stole some government property and broke some flying regulations. But he made the whole thing possible, he threw in with me without a thought of pay, he risked his life half a dozen times. We're in position to restore that property or else pay for it in full. Will you get Featherof out of this jam?"

"How about yourself, Baker?" "Well, I don't want to be jailed, if I can help it. But I suppose your favors will stretch just so far. I was the instigator, and if anybody has to pay, I'm the one."

Williamson was thoughtful. Few times in his career had he ever allowed motive, however worthy, to be excuse for breaking the law. But as he glanced at Baker, wounded, maimed in one hand, still pale from loss of blood, he thought what a heartless travesty of justice it would be if Baker were imprisoned. Whatever the truth of his trouble with Haskell, the great fact remained that he had gone on a thankless and prodigious patrol and had run those criminals to earth.

"I'll do what I can for you both," he promised, with no reluctance. "When I go back outside I'll talk to the Edmonton officials and try to get those charges non-prossed. But you and Featherof see to restoring that property."

Alan promised: "We won't fall you on that. It's mighty fine and square of you." After a moment, he went on: "Considering all you've agreed to, I hate to ask still another favor. But I've got to. I've got to speak up for Hardsock and Pedneault. They have charges against them, serious and true charges. But there's this to be said, sir. Neither man deserted. They both intended to return here the moment our patrol ended. They rendered a tremendous service to the Force. They were true to duty in the highest sense of the word. Are you going to look at the good they did, or at nothing but the bad?"

Williamson did not answer. He felt the human justice of Alan's appeal. It seemed to him that the matter went deeper than a question of insubordination. Those men had been under Baker's sway, and he knew what a powerful influence Baker had over his men.

Thinking deeply, he gazed through the window, down upon the dark river. In this tangled affair, it was a sore task to judge wisely, to do the right thing. Baker's long patrol, his indomitable courage in going after these men, his relentless drive in hammering his daring plan through to success—the whole thing was a splendid feat. In his forty years the old officer had never seen a more magnificent piece of work. It was like Baker, like the brilliant sergeant whom he once had trusted and fought for.

But the rest of that story, his trouble with Haskell—Williamson did not accept that as true. From start to finish Baker's account was an utter conflict with Haskell's; and to the stern old officer, judging with impartial mind, Haskell's story seemed more credible. Quite plainly Baker harbored a personal hostility which probably had warped and twisted his story out of all semblance to the truth.

One thing Williamson did know beyond any doubting: Baker's account clashed with Haskell's all along the line. One of these two men was an out-and-out liar.

In the tightening silence, waiting for Williamson to start probing, Haskell looked out along the terrace and saw a thing which struck him with chill premonition. The doorway of the mission hospital opened; Pedneault and Bill Hardsock came out, bringing Larry Young with them. Bill on one side, Pedneault on the other, half-leading, half-carrying their crippled partner, they were making straight for the cabin.

When they trod into the room and Williamson heard them, he turned, frowning and demanded: "What do you men want?"

"Sir, we came here to put our paddle in," Bill stated bluntly. "We knew you were thrashing out this trouble between Alan and the inspector."

"Your counsel wasn't asked. This matter is between Baker and Inspector Haskell."

"Bill, don't try to run a buck," Alan interposed, fearful that this unexpected move of his three men might kill any chance to trap Haskell. "If the superintendent doesn't want you here, obey him and go."

Bill stubbornly refused. He said to Williamson: "You've got a name, sir, for giving every buck cop and non-cop in your division a square cut and seeing all sides of an argument. I don't think you'll kick us out without hearing what we've got to say. This is as much our fight as Alan's. We've had to pay, too, for the inspector's acts. Here's one of us crippled for life because the inspector hog-tied us on that patrol with some fool orders. After a thing like that, do we have to shut up and take it and not even be allowed to—?"

One of These Two Men Was an Out-and-Out Liar.

"Sit down!" Williamson bade them. "I'm going to get to the bottom of this. When your time comes I'll hear what you've got to say. Now Baker, I want you to answer some questions. What made you split your detail on that first patrol?"

"Haskell ordered me to, sir. He ordered me to follow both branches. When I objected, he threatened to bust me and keep me here at the post."

"That's a lie!" Haskell challenged. "I allowed him to do as he thought best. He purposely made a failure of that patrol. I don't ask you to take my word. Corporal Whipple was here in the cabin, and heard our talk. And Baker, over his signed statement, admitted to responsibility."

"What proof have you got, Baker?" Williamson demanded. Alan kept silent, deliberately allowing his silence to damn him. Williamson's probe was leading in the right direction, leading toward that deadly trap.

To Alan's consternation Bill Hardsock burst out: "Proof? H—l's blue blazes! Alan was half sick, all the way up the Aloooska, because of them orders. He felt he was being forced to take us men into a terrible danger. We all knew it was crazy to split up—"

Williamson silenced him. "You're merely making an assertion, corporal. You have no proof. Baker, do you admit responsibility for that patrol?" Alan shook his head. "No, I—I don't," he stammered.

Haskell smiled. He had Baker on the run. Williamson reminded: "Baker, you signed a statement of responsibility. Whipple was a witness." Alan pleaded, "Sir, that statement... When we came back—yes, I signed it. But I—I had to."

"You had to?" "Yes, to get out of the Mounted. He wouldn't let me buy out unless I did sign."

"Why under heaven did you want to buy out all that fast and furious?" "I wanted to be free," Alan led on, step by cautious step. "I wanted to go after those men."

"Baker, look here," Williamson said sternly. "You infer you wanted to go after those men so badly that you were willing to buy out, cut off your record and sign a lie. Why then wouldn't you co-operate with Haskell to get them?"

"Well, sir, he—he wouldn't co-operate."

"I can't believe that. He tried to help you even afterward—after you bought out and were on a private venture."

"When was that?" Alan queried.

"At En Traverse lake." "So he was trying to help us. I didn't—ah—have that impression at the time, sir."

"He even shot signals for you to wait."

Bill Hardsock swore luridly. "Of all the fork-tongued lies, that's the beat of 'em all!"

Alan allowed the lie to go unchallenged. If Haskell got by with that one, he would be bold and unwary.

"But sir," he led on, "when I came back from the Aloooska patrol, he wouldn't co-operate with me then. He didn't seem much interested, I don't think, in getting those bandits."

"Not much interested?" Haskell echoed, with a great show of astonishment. "Sir, I wanted him to make a patrol to the Inconnu river. But he was in a temper. He wouldn't even listen to my suggestion."

A wild elation surged through Alan. One more step and Haskell was doomed! He fought down his elation and figured uneasily in his chair.

Williamson bore down on him hard. "Baker, answer that charge! Haskell suggested a patrol to the Inconnu. In my opinion that was a splendid suggestion. It was almost the only hope of capturing those criminals. You wouldn't listen to him. How, then, can you assert you were forced to buy out?"

"He didn't... It wasn't him that made that suggestion," Alan stammered weakly. "I think—I believe I made that suggestion myself. But he wouldn't let me go."

"That's a lie!" Haskell pounced upon him. "I suggested it. I begged him to make that patrol."

Alan looked at Haskell. "You suggested that Inconnu patrol? It was your idea?"

Haskell nodded. "I did. Whipple can witness it." He was smiling openly in triumph.

All Alan's hesitation dropped away from him. There was no longer need to dissimulate. He turned to Williamson. "You heard him. You heard what he said. He told you he suggested that Inconnu trip. He just repeated it and he said Whipple was witness. Don't let him back out of it now."

"I don't have to back out of anything," Haskell snapped. He was staring in sudden uneasiness at Baker. "Yes, I heard him," Williamson answered. "What about it?"

Alan rose slowly to his feet, pulling himself up to his full lanky and powerful height. In that moment when he realized Haskell was caught in the deadly trap, his mind whipped back to Joyce's room where he had lain through weary hours of doubt and pain, and where he and she had carefully plotted this trap. He felt a wordless tender gratitude to Joyce; this stratagem was hers more than his; her quick brain had been the first to see its crushing possibilities.

"Inspector, you say you asked me to lead that Inconnu detail. You say you suggested it. You say it occurred to you that the bandits would escape by that river. I say you are a liar! I propose to prove you're a liar."

He paused a moment, then raised his right hand and pointed at the wall chart behind Haskell's desk.

"The Inconnu river is not shown on that map of yours, inspector. You tried to find out from that Indian, Little Otter, where the river is. You didn't know. You don't know now. How could you suggest sending a patrol to a river when you haven't the slightest knowledge of its location? Step up there to that chart, you, and show us the Inconnu!"

Haskell sprang to his feet, snarling at Alan. "I don't take orders from you!" He was fighting like a trapped wolf. His panic, his livid face, betrayed him.

"Then consider it an order from me!" Williamson commanded. "Show me where the Inconnu is!"

Height of Waves

Waves rarely have a greater height than 50 feet, but they appear to be much higher when seen from a ship in the open ocean. These waves frequently have a greater height, however, in breaking upon a rocky coast. The highest wave reported by the hydrographic office of the United States Navy department was encountered in the North Atlantic ocean, December 22, 1922, by the British steamship Majestic. Its height was estimated at 60 feet.

Modern Contract Bridge

By Lelia Hattersley

Redoubling

WHEN an opponent has doubled your bid or your partner's, it is never advisable to change the declaration unless a really advantageous switch can be made. If your partner is a sound bidder, do not worry about flying to his rescue. More than likely he has no desire to be rescued. He might even be prepared to redouble, in which case he would most bitterly resent your needless attempt to "save" him.

Many players are entirely unaware of the highly advantageous odds in favor of a redouble at contract. These favorable odds are produced by the huge increase of trick values in a successful doubled and redoubled contract.

The following table is computed on the assumption that the declarer will never fail to make his contract by more than one trick. This assumption may be considered arbitrary, but between partners who thoroughly understand each other's bidding only an abnormal distribution should result in the loss of more than one trick when one or the other has redoubled.

BONUS INCREASE ON SUCCESSFUL REDOUBLE

Table with columns: WHEN NOT VULNERABLE, No Trumps Majors Minors, and rows 1-7.

Table with columns: WHEN VULNERABLE, No Trumps Majors Minors, and rows 1-7.

To illustrate how these odds work out, let us assume that a player not vulnerable has bid six hearts and been doubled by the opponents. If he fails to make his contract by one trick he would pay a penalty of 100 points. Had he redoubled his penalty would have been increased only by 100 additional points. Now, assuming that the declaration was successful, doubled and redoubled, the winning player would score 720 below the line and 100 above for his successful contract. In short, the redouble would have increased his score by 410 points. Supposing that the contract would hinge on the failure or success of one finesse or one drop, the odds favoring success in a redouble are 4:1 against 1.

Should the bidding indicate, however, that there might be a wide swing, either above or below contract, it should be borne in mind that the bonus for over tricks is generally only one-half as great as the penalty for additional under tricks. Therefore, if the information has not been more or less exact, it would tend to diminish the advantage of a redouble.

Slams

When contract was a very young game, players new to its strategy and somewhat overawed by the unheard-of necessity of having to bid for a contract to score it, grasped at every straw that might help them in the novel and hazardous enterprise of bidding for a slam. "Slam cues" of every sort and description were invented. Spectacular methods some of these were, by which slams could be arrived at only after an intricate and horribly confusing series of bids, which purported to show the location of all the aces and (in some systems) even kings.

Fortunately, for the good of the game of contract, it was not long before more thoughtful types of players came to recognize the inherent weaknesses of this supposedly technical "slam bidding." It soon became apparent that by the time partners succeeded in locating all the aces in the pack, they had usually managed to push each other up to a slam bid which failed because of the lack of additional honor-cards and distributional values to back up their aces.

Modern contract has discarded all the outworn methods of "slam bidding," and recognized the fact that the only way to arrive at a sound slam contract is just as one arrives at a sound game contract—by partnership information, trick valuation and deduction.

A few basic rules which must always be adhered to for successful slam bidding are:

From your first declaration to your last, concentrate on showing dependable honor-trick values.

Be sure that every bid you make has some sound reason for its existence.

Never give a direct inference for a slam unless you have some slight doubt as to its favorable outcome and wish to invite your partner's cooperation in deciding the matter; he cause the most important rule of all is this: When you are sure of a slam bid it, do not ask your partner to bid it for you.

Fought to the Death

A battle to death between two strange combatants was revealed near Longmont, Colo., when the bodies of a porcupine and a rattlesnake were found in South St. Vrain canyon. The victims were lying only a few feet apart when discovered. Apparently the poison fangs of the snake had sunk into the porcupine just as quills had reached a vital part of the reptile.
